Reserve Police Officers

Volunteers help patrol the city

By Helena Rodriguez

They are referred to as "Special police officers" by the Muleshoe Police Department and they have the same authority to enforce the law as the other six peace officers in Muleshoe. The only difference is they don't get paid for Three men, who have certifications in law enforcement, are currently participating in the MPD Reserve Police Officer Program. MPD began the program about six months ago.

"Reserve officers are not paid, they are volunteers," said Muleshoe Police Chief Julian Dominguez. "But they have the same authority as a regular officer."

Dominguez explained that reserve officers are men who have certifications and licenses in law enforcement but are not at the time employed as one.

The three current reserve officers are Ralph Sanchez,

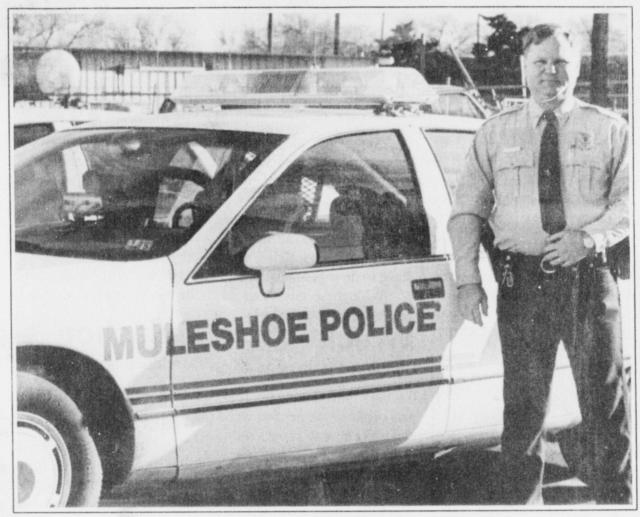

Toby Carpenter and Danny Dickerson. Each of these men have a regular, fulltime job, in addition to serving as "special officers.'

In order to be able to maintain their certification, these men must remain active in law enforcement. They could loose their law enforcement certification if they remain inactive for more than two years.

So to remain active, these men are volunteering their time, taking to the streets and helping to watch over the city.

"It (the program)works out real well for us because it gives us more manpower and it costs almost nothing," Dominguez said.

The reserve officers do get something out of the time they are volunteering. The MPD is carrying their commission for them, which allows them to maintain an active status in law enforcement and keep their certifications. Dominguez said

Another reserve officer,

U.S. Army turns mules green to help save country

By Otto W. Whittington Special to the Journal Mules have been the primary work unit and strength of the U.S. Army from George Washington's Continental Army through World War II. These steady, dependable creatures have carried food, supplies, arms and ammunition through swamps, deserts, jungles and mountains. Never complaining, but occasionally letting a G.I. mule skinner know when a load was too heavy or a path was too dangerous by refusing to move Mule-sense being more advanced than horse-sense or man-sense. Mules never started wars, they only helped man fight them.

World War II brought the U.S. Army into the poisonous world of gasoline and diesel fumes. Leaving behind the fresh smell of manure and alfalfa hay on crisp frosty mornings.

After World War II, the army still recognized the mule as symbolic of the strength and dependability of the U.S. Army. But he was relegated to the role of mascot.

Today, the Army mule's duty is to lead the Black Knights of the Hudson onto the football field in their annual battle with the Middies of Annapolis. No longer does he go with his troops into swamps, deserts, jungles and mountains.

In the late summer of 1940, one of the last shipments of horses for the 26th Cavalry and mules of artillery pack trains in the Philippines was being loaded at the Presidio of San Francisco, on board the Army's livestock boat "US Meigs". In this shipment were two large grey - white Missouri mules who were destined to make Army History. Also, as an example of the smart awareness of the mule, one large Missouri mule refused to board, apparently knowing what was to happen to him in the Philippines after Pearl Harbor. It took four soldiers, two of them sawing a hemp rope under his tail on the tender part of his butt, to get him aboard.

Immediately after Pearl Harbor, the only American force in action was the U.S. Forces and Philippines Army in the Philippines trying to hold the Japanese at bay until Pearl could be rebuilt and functional. Because of the small number of trained American and Filipino troops and shortage of supplies, the combined Philippine Force pulled back Bataan to establish a shorter line of defense. On Bataan, the U.S. Army Veterinary Detachment setup shop in Rodriguez Park under the trees where horse and mule casualties were treated, mostly for sharpnel and bomb frag wounds.

Enter our jungle animal hospital, two gray refugees from Missouri, via San Francisco, who were destined to make U.S. Army history. Both suffering from bomb frag wounds. They were tied in a bamboo thicket where they immediately begin to chew on the tender shoots. They suffered from the same malady as court reports.

Ricardo (Ricky) Alarcon was found guilty on a charge of aggravated robbery. During a trial last week, Alarcon chose to let a jury access his punishment. The punishment carries five years confinement in a state institution. He will be sentenced on Feb. 17.

Also last week, Javier Duran

Moncrief named staff member of the month

January's Support Staff Member of the Month for Muleshoe Schools, Kay Moncrief, is described by coworkers as caring, supportive, enthusiastic, and energetic.

"Everyone - especially the students - love her because she makes them feel special no matter who or what they are. She has a love and concern which gives her special understanding and patience dealing with students," states one of the faculty members who nominated her for the award.

Kay, the youngest of six children, attended high school in Panhandle.

She is married to Jerry Moncrief and they have one son, Tyson, who is a Junior at Muleshoe High School. The Moncriefs moved to Muleshoe 13 years ago when Jerry was transferred to the Tolk Plant with Wheelabrator Coal Services.

Maddox to be honored by Oddfellows, Rebekahs

The Muleshoe Oddfellows and Rebekahs will honor J.W. "Bill" Maddox on Thursday, Feb. 2 at the Muleshoe Lodge Hall at 308 West 2nd Street. A dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m., prior to the presentation of a 50-year pin to Maddox.

Brother Bill was initiated into Odd Fellowship in Muleshoe on Feb. 6, 1945. This took place in the old fire house under the old watertower that has since been taken down.

Bill farmed out northeast of Muleshoe in the Pleasant Valley community until he moved to Muleshoe in Jan. of 1967. He continued to farm for several years and also had five cattle trucks on the road most of the time. In 1979, he got completely out of the cattle trucking business.

In the middle of July of 1950, a new lodge was organized in Earth and Bill, along with several Earth men, moved their memberships to help the new lodge to have a smooth startup.

On Jan. 4, 1964, he transferred his membership back to Muleshoe I.O.O.F. #58.

He has had 50 years of unbroken faith rendered to the order. The Lodge is expecting many friends and relatives of Bills from out of town to attend this special event. Any of Bill's friends are welcome to come eat and help honor him.

Bill is a past noble grand of the Muleshoe Lodge and has served in most of the other chairs of the order during these years.

Cummings is named artist of the month

The Muleshoe Art Association has named Judy Cummings of Friona as Artist of the Month. Judy's artwork can be seen on display at the Muleshoe Public Library now through Feb. 14.

Cummings has been painting with oils for about 20 years and is active in art circles around the Texas Panhandle area.

She serves as president of the Tri-State Art Association based at West Texas A & M University in Canyon and is secretary of the Friona Art Association. She is also a member of the Pintore Art League of Clovis, N.M.

Judy is an active agent with New York Life Insurance in Friona and her husband Doyle Cummings is retired. They are both from pioneer families of the Parmer County area.

The Muleshoe and Bailey County Journals publish birthday announcements free of charge for babies one year old or for people ages 90 and over. A photo may also be included with the announcement. Complete guidelines and forms are available at the Muleshoe Journal office.

MHS to hold strength, conditioning seminar

The Athletic Booster Club, in conjunction with several parents and the coaches, is going to provide a unique opportunity for all students and parents on Saturday, Feb. 25,. Coach Tim Brown of Poplar Bluff, Mo., will conduct a seminar on strength and conditioning.

Coach Brown is a representative of the Bigger Faster Stronger Company of Salt Lake City, Utah. This company has been a strength and conditioning consultant for the past 12 years for colleges and high schools. They have been the strength coaches for the Utah Jazz of the National Basketball Association since 1981. Many of their coaches have been strength coaches at Universities such as Utah, Clemson, Miami, Washington State, just to name a few.

Coach Brown is a specialist in the area of coordinating these types of ideas and philosophies into the junior high and high school boys and girls programs. He is a well-known, dynamic motivational speaker who can teach the entire Bigger Faster Stronger (BFS) program.

Individuals who have come through this dynamic program include, Barry Sanders (Detroit Lions), Chad Henning (Cowboys), Tommy Hodson (Former Louisiana State University (quarterback), Jeroy Robinson (Linebacker, Texas A&M), Chris Zorich (Chicago Bears), and many other current and former NBA, NFL, and world class athletes.

Over the past several years, at the high school level, after starting the BFS Program there have been more than 80 State Champions in every sport.

Last year in football at Midland High (historically a lower division team), after an 0-10 season (93) and starting the program, Midland went 5-5 in 1994. Coach Ron Reeger of Midland felt if he had to point to one thing that was responsible for their improvement it would be the BFS seminar.

Everyone who is remotely interested needs to plan on attending the seminar in the junior high gym on Feb. 25. There is no admission fee. The seminar for students will begin at approximately 10 a.m. and go until approximately 5 p.m. with a lunch break at noon.

Considerations for a strength and conditioning program

The following is an article in a series that will inform all parents, fans, and players as to the who, what, where, and why of conditioning.

The vast majority of information and facts contained within the article were gathered from the National Strength and Conditioning Journal and the Bigger, Faster, Stronger

Journal. Both journals are published by professional practicing strength and conditioning specialists. If any person is interested in further discussion or information in regard to this topic please contact Coach Adair at Muleshoe High School.

Goals and philosophy

Before any organization or company can become effective, there must be an outline or plan for action that includes a philosophy and also a set of goals.

The philosophy of the Muleshoe strength and conditioning program is to develop activities and motivation that will enable each athlete to be more successful as an individual and thus allow each team a better chance for success as well.

Muleshoe High School believes in a total program for all sports. MHS believes in multiple sport athletes. MHS believe that all athletics at the level are to be educational as well as competitive. The philosophy at MHS is very broad and inclusive of many concepts, ideas, and goals. There are many short range and intermediate goals for the strength of the program but the long range goals include the following:

1. To develop the total body concept. This includes a balanced body. Simply, what this means is that MHS wants their athletes to be strengthened in all physical skills both generally and as much as possible sport specifically. Further, MHS wants kids to be developed in a manner that allows their body to develop as an athlete and young person, naturally and safely.

2. To condition the body of MHS athletes in such a manner as to prevent injuries. It is a proven fact that those athletes who lift, run, jump, and condition year round have a greater chance for higher levels of success for a longer period of time and experience fewer injuries. When injuries do occur they are less severe because of quality year round condition-

3. To develop a mentality along with physical development that creates confidence, mental toughness, competitive nature, and allows players to give great effort. The conditioning program must develop enthusiasm, unity, work habits, and all the intangibles that must be in place and ready for use when sport specific practice and play begins.

4. To develop a body consciousness and awareness that will promote a healthy attitude for the rest of their lives. To encourage and foster recreational activity and exercise as a life-style.

There must be a support base for this philosophy that extends beyond the coaches, administrators and school board that cooperatively provides opportunity for such a program on a day to day basis.

The players and parents as well as community as a whole must be united in the belief that strength and conditioning is very important to the success of the athletic department, school and community.

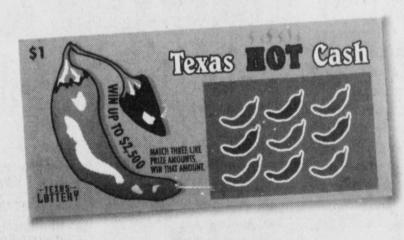

As a partial commitment to this idea, the athletic booster club, parents and coaches are offering to the students the BFS Program seminar.

Bayless to perform Sunday at Hereford High School *

John Bayless, a pianist, will perform Sunday, Feb. 5 at 3 p.m. in Hereford at the High School Auditorium.

Bayless made his recording debut in 1985 with a Pro Arte album entitled "Happy Birthday Back," which was created in honor of the Bach Tricentennial celebration. Two subsequent releases, "Bach Meets the Beatles" and "Bach on Abbey Road" contained his improvisations, on Beatles melodies, and were phenomenally well received, the former selected as one of the top 10 classical crossover recording of the 1980's by Billboard magazine.

In 1988, Mr. Bayless released "Greetings from John Bayless" a remarkable collection of improvisations based on the songs of Bruce Springsteen. As part of his new contract with Angel Records, he has released two CD's, "Bayless Meets Bernstein--West Side Story Concert Variations," based on Leonard Bernstein's timeless score, and "The Puccini Album - Arias for Piano."

Within five weeks of release, the Puccini recording soared to number one on Billboard magazine's classical crossover chart.

Bayless makes his Wigmore Hall debut this December in a performance as featured guest soloist in their annual Christmas concert, appearing on the same program with the Philharmonia Orchestra and Westminster Cathedral Choir. He also makes his concerto debut with the newly composed West Side Story Fantasia for solo piano and orchestra with the Colorado Symphony in the fall of 1994, and preforms forty-five recitals across the United States.

John Bayless' extensive performance background performance background includes appearances at Carnegie Hall, the "Mostly Mozart" festival at Avery Fisher Hall, special programs with the New York Philharmonic and the Cleve-Philharmonic and the Cleveland Orchestra.

In addition, Bayless has made two tours of Japan, performed at the Budapest Spring Festival and was Artist-In-Residence for the London Symphony Orchestra's Leonard Bernstein Festival, performing at gala for Queen Elizabeth.

He has conducted Master Classes in Improvisation at the Juilliard School, Kent State University and The Royal Academy of Music in London.

Proclaimed by The New York Times as "An evocative pianist with a lovely piano sound and considerable personal pizzazz," John Bayless combines versatility, mastery of classical music and extraordinary technical ability. His virtuosity is highlighted by his extraordinary gift in the lost art of improvisation.

Born and raised in Texas, Bayless won a scholarship to the Aspen School of Music at fifteen years of age, and two years later moved to New York to study at the prestigious Juilliard School of Music with Josef Raieff and Adele Marcus.

He has received commissions from the Newport Music Festival, University of Maryland International Piano

Competition, and composed and performed the score for the Metropolitan Museum of Art's television presentation of the Lila Acheson Wallace Exhibition of 20th Century American Art.

the human troops, namely starvation. Also, having discovered that the droning sound of high flying bombers and terrifying shrill whistle and rattle of falling bombs were connected with pain, they become very nervous and edgy when sounds of planes were in placement, containing a twin .50 caliber machine gun on an anti-aircraft mount. The gun placement was manned by three members of the Philippine Air Force, who had lost their planes, and three Marines from the Shanghai Embassy Guard, stranded in the Philippines. The Veterinary Detachment's only entertainment was watching the fight between the Philippine Air Force and Marines over who would fire the gun every time a Zero appeared. Usually by the time the brawl was over and someone was on the gun, the plane was gone.

The Missouri hay-burners destroyed-their bamboo cover with their nervous thrashing about and eating. Leaving them exposed to low flying Zeros returning from other targets and looking for something to empty their guns on before returning across the bay. The Zero pilots, not knowing what was in the woods around the two large unusual locking animals, assumed it was worth shooting at and made damn nuisances of themselves on the way home.

Near the Veterinary base in

Rodriguez Park was a gun

Major Bertz, the Commanding Officer of the Veterinary Detachment, decided that the two flop-eared critters, who were attracting all the attention from above, were causing too much commotion. Between the straffings and the battles between the Marines and Philippine Air Force, he had enough mule trouble, so he sent for the lowest non-com in the detachment, Corporal Whittington, Sweetwater, Texas. The Corporal was always available for any detail the Col. thought was impossible or too difficult. As the man of the hour, I was ordered to "Camouflage those Cod-Damn MULES!"

Being the curious type, I asked, "How?", and was told, "How the Hell do I know How? Camouflage those damn mules, that's an order!" I replied "Yes Sir!, 'Ill need an open requisition for necessary supplies from the Quartermaster." I was given an open requisition for supplies necessary to camouflage hospital items. So I rounded-up my two henchmen, Pfc. Watson and Pfc. DeLapp, who were always dependable and never questioned how ridiculous any assignment sounded. DeLapp was the unofficial driver of the Detachment's only vehicle, a beat-up flat bed Ford truck, that no one seem to know where it come from but was good to hall any rice straw we could forage to feed the animals.

With Watson and I riding shot-gun looking out for staffing Zeros and rear echelon snipers, we headed toward Marvales and the Quartermaster Dump. After the first three weeks of the war, Manila had been declared an open city to try and save it from destruction by Japanese bombers. Prior to the declaration of an open city, the Quarter-master had been busy floating supplies on barges to Bataan for a long siege. They had the foresight to include several cases of oldfashion Putman dye. The kind all farm women used in Texas when used in Texas when I was a kid.

I gave my requisition to the Captain-in-charge of the dump, stating I was medical with the Veterinary Corps and asked what did he have to camouflage material with? He missed the Veterinary Corps par and replied that Medical Corps was using the green Putman dye on mosquito netting for their aid stations and hospital under the trees, and asked what type of material I intended to camouflage?

Seeing he was the nervous administrative type, I knew my mule problem would be a little heavy for him. So, I became evasive and said I needed a case of green dye, letting him think we had lots of netting. As we headed back to Rodriguez Park, I read the instructions on one of the dye packets. The instructions said to bring water to a hard boil, dissolve the dye in the boiling water and using a long stick, stir the material in the boiling dye water for several minutes until the correct color was reached, keeping the water boiling at all times.

Being experienced with mules, I knew they would very definitely resent being boiled and get meaner than hell. Being a resourceful Cpl., the backbone of the Old Army, I knew what I had to do. My henchmen and I screunged up a 55 gallon drum with one end off from an Ordanace outfit stationed in the park. We placed it on some rocks, over a small ditch, where air could circulate underneath, filled it nearly fill with water and built a fire under the drum.

When the Water came to a hard boil, we emptied all 24 packets of dye, stirring it well. We let the water cool to where we could barely stand it on our hands. Not being able to get the mules into the barrel, we obtained some empty gunny sacks from a mess sergeant and dipping the sacks into the hot dye, started to swab down the mules. Not appreciating what we were doing the mules exhibited their well known mulish disposition, so we took turns holding onto an ear with a twitch on their nose, while the other two swabbed with the green dye.

The dye ran down heavy in their flanks and shoulder joints, across their withers and over their croups. The creases and crevices of their bodies caused light and dark green strips with an over-all mottle green color, even on their heads and ears. They were the most God-awful green mules in the history of the U.S. Army. Even the mules were confused over their appearance. Looking at each other, they would perk their ears forward, then lay their ears back and let out a plaintive mulish green bray.

Being proud of a job well done, I sent for Major Bertz. He couldn't believe what he saw and sent word for all West Pointers in the near vicinity to come and see the first and only green mules in the U.S. Army in the past 140 years.

Alas, their moment in Army history was short-lived. Being good Army mules, dedicated to duty, they gave their all by becoming food for the troops.

Another fact about mules was discovered. Mules are like Easter Eggs, regardless of the color outside, the meat is the same inside.

The resourceful Cpl. realized that when a doctor eats all his patients, he puts himself out of work. Also, the Cpl. discovered he didn't like being shot at with out shooting back so he headed to the front line and transferred to company "K", 31st Infantry, to become one of the "Battlin' Bastards of Bataan".
