

LISD Case Rehashed At Dallas

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

DALLAS — Lawyers for the Justice Department and the Lubbock Independent School District duelled before a three-judge federal panel here today in what was basically a rehash of their long-running feud over Lubbock's school system.

At issue was the Justice Department's appeal of U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward's limited desegregation plan ordered in January 1978. The Justice Department contends Woodward's plan does not go far enough and is seeking system-wide integration.

The outcome was still in doubt after today's hearing, however. The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals judges who heard the oral arguments today are not expected to issue a ruling until the Supreme Court rules in a Dayton, Ohio, case.

Lubbock's neighborhood school concept sends a clear message to the Anglo community that the school system will continue to operate racially segregated schools, the Justice Department argued.

And the 13 schools Judge Woodward found to be "unintentionally" segregated are prime examples of this policy, Justice Department lawyer Jessica Silver told the federal panel here today.

However, LISD attorney Tom Johnson told federal judges Irving L. Goldberg, Charles Clark and Paul H. Roney that the 13 schools in question are racially identifiable as minority schools because of the city's shifting population — something beyond the school board's control.

Johnson also argued during today's hearing that the school district's neighborhood school policy has been consistently applied throughout the district and simply mirrors the movement of Lubbock's population.

Miss Silver and Johnson also vigorously argued the merits of the Dayton, Ohio, school desegregation case, which is set to be heard by the Supreme Court April 24.

The Dayton case, Johnson said, changes the approach and method of inquiry which a district court takes in a desegregation case. The case, first heard by the Supreme Court in 1977 and sent back to the lower court, requires that a district judge review the acts of a school board and determine whether they intended to and in fact have had a discriminatory effect.

If the judge rules school board actions have caused discrimination, he must then determine what the difference in the district's racial composition now would be if the school board had not taken such action.

This "leaf versus root and branch" approach, as described by Goldberg, is opposed by the Justice Department, which wants the Fifth Circuit panel to order system-wide desegregation of Lubbock schools.

In a January 27, 1978, ruling, Woodward noted that 22 schools were "racially identifiable," with minority enrollments exceeding 70 percent.

Those schools were the elementaries of Guadalupe, Sanders, Mahon, Harwell. See SCHOOL CASE Page 18

Jailer Gets Suspension After Escape By Trio

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Monday morning escape of three prisoners from the Lubbock County Jail has resulted in a three-day suspension for the jailer responsible for the inmates, who were all back in custody several hours after their breakout.

The prisoners, James Loggins Jr., Steven Craig Finch and Larry Don Perryman, who apparently scaled a 12-foot-high fence inside the jail's recreational building, were discovered missing at 9:20 a.m. By 1:30 p.m. Monday, Finch and Perryman had surrendered to authorities and Loggins had been captured at a 22nd Street apartment.

Jailer Ron Jenkins, who was responsible Monday morning for the 28 inmates playing volleyball in the recreational area, has been placed on a three-day suspension which becomes effective today, Jail Administrator Gary McGrew said.

McGrew said Jenkins, 23, who has been with the jail less than a year, was guilty of "negligence" in allowing all the prisoners to leave the indoor volleyball courts and move into the fenced-in corridor at the same time.

The administrator said Jenkins was

Crime Fighters Eye Fund Bids

By JEFF McCASLIN

Fears of competition for future funding between the Lubbock County Crime Prevention Council and Mayor Dirk West's recently instituted Crime Line, Inc., program dominated discussion at the council's regular meeting today.

The mayor's program, announced Sunday, will pay cash rewards to concerned citizens willing to give information that will lead to the arrest and indictment of criminals. Under this program, informants who call the crime hot line at 741-1000 are guaranteed anonymity and will be paid initially through The Avalanche-Journal's "Fight Crime Now Fund."

The subject came up when several council members expressed concern over public confusion of the two crime prevention programs. The council's hot-line number, which has been set up in the sheriff's office and will be manned daily by an experienced officer, is 763-1133.

Mal Cleland, Better Business Bureau director and chairman of the business crimes committee, said if the council's May 3 crime symposium is successful, a major portion of funding will be taken care of.

Rick Childers, administrative assistant to the city manager, told the council the mayor's program is not a duplication of the council, but added there may be some competition for funds.

"Crime Line, Inc., is not a city program and is a non-profit corporation. I think the two programs will complement each other."

Childers said the mayor's program was designed from other programs in cities such as El Paso, Albuquerque and San Jose, Calif., where the programs have been successful. See COMPETITION Page 18

TERRORISTS GET REVENGE — Tel Aviv police search for bomb fragments in the devastated market place after Arab terrorists set off a bomb that killed one man and injured 35 others today. Israel Blasts PLO Camps In Lebanon

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli warplanes streaked deep into Lebanon and pounded two Palestinian guerrilla bases today just hours after a terrorist bomb blast killed one person and wounded 35 others in an open-air market in Tel Aviv, officials reported.

One of the bases attacked was just six miles south of Beirut. The air raid was Israel's first against Palestinian targets in Lebanon since the signing of the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty March 26.

A Palestinian spokesman in Beirut said the air strike was "an obvious reprisal for our heroic operation in the Carmel market" in Tel Aviv.

The planes, striking after 5 p.m. (9 a.m. CST), hit bases at Damour and Ras el-Ain and all returned safely, an Israeli military spokesman said.

Damour, six miles south of Beirut and 80 miles north of the Israeli border, was the target of an Israeli air force attack last Aug. 21. Ras el-Ain is south of the Lebanese port city of Tyre, 15 miles north of the border.

There were no immediate reports on casualties. A Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman in Beirut said the planes drew heavy anti-aircraft fire from guerrilla gunners.

The raids came as a heated exchange between Israel and Egypt clouded the recently signed peace treaty. Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin filed a formal complaint over a statement by an Egyptian official, Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil, that Egypt would consider a Syrian attempt to recover the Golan Heights as a legitimate war of self-defense that would justify Egyptian assistance.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan sent a letter to U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance asking for clarification of the Egyptian position.

Following the air strikes today, the PLO said the Israeli jets attacked the city of Tyre. But the Israeli spokesman said the targets were camps of Al Fatah, major military arm of the Palestine Liberation Organization, from which attacks had been made against Israel, the army spokesman said.

The Israelis often launch air strikes into southern Lebanon in their eye-for-an-eye war with Palestinian guerrillas who infiltrate across Israeli borders to plant bombs in populated areas.

The Tel Aviv bomb exploded at a fishmonger's stall in the open-air Carmel market, crowded with shoppers preparing for Passover, which begins Wednesday evening.

Authorities said a 27-year-old Israeli man was killed, but they did not release his name. Five of the injured were seriously hurt, and two children were among those who suffered light wounds, they said.

Officials said the blast, latest in a new wave of bombings in apparent retaliation for the Israeli-Egyptian treaty, was almost prevented.

A municipal inspector noticed a suspicious package under the stall and asked whether it belonged to anyone, "but before they checked it out, there was an explosion," said Tel Aviv Mayor Shlomo Lahat, who rushed to the scene.

Police commander Moshe Tjornkin told Israel Radio that about 15 Arabs had been detained — he called it "preventive arrest" to protect them from angry Israelis as well as to investigate them as suspects.

But the PLO in Beirut said the "underground squad" of bombers escaped.

The Tel Aviv bomb went off at about 12:30 p.m. as shoppers preparing for Passover, which begins Wednesday evening, crowded the downtown market. The army radio station reported 10 ambulances rushed to the scene.

"We knew in advance that this would be the price of peace — heartache," Mayor Lahat said. "But in spite of this, war has a heavier price."

The Palestine Liberation Organization has pledged to step up its underground war against Israel in the wake of last month's treaty-signing with Egypt. The Palestinians regard the pact as a sell-out of their cause.

Tornadoes Reported On Plains

A-J News Services

Violent weather erupted over the eastern section of the South Plains early this afternoon, as National Weather Service radar equipment at Lubbock International Airport indicated a possible tornado 12 miles southeast of Crosby at 1:10 p.m. and another twister 15 miles northwest of Dickens at 1:15 p.m.

Both tornadoes were moving toward the northeast at 30 miles per hour.

The NWS issued a tornado warning for Crosby, Dickens and Motley counties until 2:30 p.m.

Earlier, thunderstorms were scattered across the South Plains from southeastern Cottle County southwest into eastern Lynn County. Very heavy thunderstorms were located in Garza County near Post and in Cottle County near Paducah.

Scattered thunderstorms have been forecast for much of West Texas this afternoon and early tonight, as a strong storm system moves down from Colorado into the Texas Panhandle.

Strong gusty winds were reported today in much of West Texas at midday, with El Paso and Midland reporting gusts of 48 mph. Just before noon, winds were gusting to 31 mph at Lubbock. Guadalupe Pass in far West Texas was closed to highway traffic after winds were clocked at 82 mph.

The turbulent weather had been forecast by weathermen watching the development of a strong storm system which dumped heavy snow over the Rockies and triggered travel warnings from Wyoming to New Mexico.

Significant amounts of snow are possible in the Panhandle by Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service, dropping temperatures there into the 20s and to near freezing in much of the South Plains by Thursday morning.

Forecasters expect the mercury to drop only into the upper 30s or low 40s in the Lubbock area, however.

A Pacific cold front moving eastward into the area may trigger scattered thunderstorms, with some possibly becoming severe late this afternoon and evening. The probability of rain ranges from 40

Shaw Criticizes CETA's Method Of Payments

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

South Plains Association of Government directors this morning heard a new concept for reducing chronic unemployment, but among Lubbock County officials, more immediate concern was directed to the controversial method of paying public service employees.

Juanita Forbes, director of the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) program in Lubbock, told the SPAG executive committee that until October 1, 1979, local non-profit agencies and governments participating in the CETA public service employment program would under certain conditions be eligible to have those participant salaries paid directly by federal government funds.

As the program has operated in the past, participating local agencies have been required to pay the public service employee salaries and later receive reimbursement from SPAG.

Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw told Mrs. Forbes that the county would prefer direct payment of county public service employees by CETA.

Infant Shot By Brother

Police investigating a traffic mishap about 12:15 p.m. today at 19th Street and Texas Avenue discovered inside one of the vehicles an infant who had been shot in the head.

Investigating officer D.E. Lewis said the baby apparently had been accidentally shot at her parents' home by a 3-year-old brother who had his father's gun.

The infant, first taken to West Texas Hospital, was transferred to Methodist Hospital, where it was in undetermined condition at 1 p.m. today.

Lewis said the shooting apparently occurred shortly after noon. However, it was not known at 1 p.m. who the infant was or where the mishap occurred.

The victim was shot once in the temple by what possibly was a .22-caliber pistol. The infant's parents were taking their child to the hospital when they were involved in the traffic accident. There were no injuries reported in the traffic mishap.

War Films Capture Top Honors

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It was a fine bit of Hollywood irony — John Wayne and Vietnam. "Duke," the legendary super-patriot, and a war Hollywood had ignored for a decade.

They were the heroes of Monday's 51st Annual Academy Awards presentation, with two Vietnam films winning the big Oscars and Wayne making an emotional first public appearance since cancer surgery Jan. 12.

"Coming Home," a film depicting the physical and emotional wounds of Vietnam, earned best acting Oscars for Jon Voight and Jane Fonda, who portrayed a paraplegic veteran and the officer's wife who falls in love with him. Miss Fonda had won a previous Oscar playing a hooker in the 1971 film "Klute."

"The Deer Hunter," a violent depiction of the war's effects on three young Pennsylvania mill workers, was picked best picture by the Academy's 3,400 voters and won best director honors for Michael Cimino.

Virtually shut out in the competition was Warren Beatty's comedy-fantasy "Heaven Can Wait," which had nine nominations but won only for art direction.

Wayne, 71, thin but tanned and jaunty, received a thunderous ovation from the audience at Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, then presented the makers of "The Deer Hunter" their Oscars. Wayne, the Hollywood personification of the tough-guy patriot, starred in Hollywood's last Vietnam movie prior to 1978, the hawkish "Green Berets" in 1968.

Besides Wayne, another of the academy's living legends appeared to a standing ovation — Sir Laurence Olivier, who was presented a special Oscar by his longtime friend, Cary Grant.

"The Deer Hunter" was the big winner of the night, copping five little statues in all. Besides best picture and director, the picture took awards for supporting actor, Christopher Walken; editing, Peter Zinner, and sound.

"Coming Home" won three Oscars — the top acting awards and a screenwriting Oscar for Waldo Salt and Robert C. Jones.

Maggie Smith was the only winner of a top Oscar not involved in one of the Vietnam films. She was named best supporting actress for her role as an actress who loses her bid for an Oscar in Neil Simon's "California Suite."

The nationally televised Oscar show was not as lively as some in the past, but there was some controversy stirred by "The Deer Hunter" and a bit of backstage warfare between the principals of the two Vietnam films.

Several protesters demonstrated outside the auditorium, carrying signs decrying what they considered racism and a distorted portrayal of Vietnamese in "The Deer Hunter." Thirteen were arrested on a variety of charges.

Miss Fonda said many of the protesters were her friends and that she agreed with their position, although she admitted she had not seen "The Deer Hunter."

"They (the protesters) are people who spent many years of their lives trying to end the war in Vietnam," she said backstage. "They feel that ... 'The Deer Hunter' portrays a racist, stereotyped, Pentagon view of the war."

"Deer Hunter" director Cimino said, "I think this is the proper place to remember we're movie makers, we're not making newsreels ... 'Deer Hunter' is a movie, it is not an attempt to write history."

Wayne's appearance was typical "Duke" — he ambled down the stage stairway, smiled gratefully at the warm reception and announced:

"That's just about the only medicine a fella'd ever really need."

Miss Fonda was ecstatic over her victory. She reportedly used her "Klute" statuette for a bookend, but with her victory for "Coming Home," she bounded to the stage and exclaimed, "I'm so happy!"

"I wanted to win very much," she said, "because I'm so proud of 'Coming Home.' I want many people to see the film." She explained that the film was conceived eight years ago, in the days of the anti-war movement.

Miss Fonda said working on the film made her more aware of the plight of the handicapped, and she gave part of her acceptance speech in sign language, for the benefit of hearing-impaired viewers.

The host for the affair, televised by ABC, was Johnny Carson, who proved prophetic with his opening monologue on the Oscar extravaganza:

"It's two hours of sparkling entertainment spread out over a four-hour show." The scheduled 2½-hour program actually ran 3 hours and 20 minutes, the longest in recent memory and well past 1 a.m. in the East.

Director Marty Pasetta, who was at the helm for the eighth consecutive year, wanted an Oscar pageant without incident, and that's what he got. Unlike last year's ceremony, when actress Vanessa Redgrave used the occasion to denounce protesters of her film, "The Paley-an," there were no unplanned occurrences. Even the accolades for Wayne — near the end of the lengthy program — seemed more subdued than might have been expected.

But Carson kept the show moving nicely, and there were some nice television touches. Comic Steve Martin, presenting the award for special effects, appeared fearless on the screen, compliments of a little television magic. And, for the first time, all the nominated songs were delivered by the performers who sang them in the films — Debby Boone, Barry Manilow, Johnny Mathis, Olivia Newton-John and Donna Summer.

Haley Jr. have been divorced after a year-long separation.

Miss Minnelli, 32, and Haley were married Sept. 14, 1974, and they separated Feb. 1, 1978. Haley's divorce petition citing irreconcilable differences was filed April 18, 1978, and the divorce became final Monday.

The couple had no children, and the divorce involved a property settlement.

Miss Minnelli won an Oscar as best actress for the 1972 film "Cabaret." Haley was producer of Monday night's nationally televised Academy Awards program.

Haley's father, Jack Haley Sr., played the role of the Tin Man in the 1939 movie "Wizard of Oz," which starred Miss Minnelli's mother, Judy Garland.

Jagger Misses Divorce Hearing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rolling Stones' lead singer Mick Jagger did not appear for a divorce hearing, and a judge said he would need to hear further arguments before deciding whether to issue a bench warrant for the singer.

Marvin Mitchelson, an attorney for Jagger's wife Bianca, told Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Marvin A. Freeman on Monday that the singer was served with a subpoena last week in New York.

The judge said he was not certain his jurisdiction extends into New York and deferred his decision on the requested warrant until after another court hearing later this week or early next week.

Freeman postponed until April 23 a hearing on Mrs. Jagger's request for $14,000 monthly support for herself and the couple's 7-year-old daughter Jade.

Mrs. Jagger, a former model from Nicaragua, is also seeking half the couple's community property and a split of the Jagger's assets, which the suit claims amount to $20 million.

Still undecided is whether Mrs. Jagger divorce suit falls under the jurisdiction of courts in California or England.

Jagger's attorney, Arthur Groman, contended the divorce action should not be tried in California, claiming there is no evidence the rock singer owns property in the state.

However, Mitchelson claimed Jagger lives in Los Angeles and has leased a home here until at least May 6.

Henry Fonda In Hospital

FONDA

CHICAGO (AP) — Henry Fonda will remain hospitalized for four or five days for treatment of inflammatory arthritis in his hip.

All of this week's performances of "First Monday in October," starring Fonda at the Blackstone Theater, were canceled. Fonda has been suffering pain in his left hip since the play opened March 29. He entered Michael Reese Medical Center on Sunday.

Political Fund-Racer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — State Sen. Marvin York claims his next campaign is paid for, thanks to a couple of fast horses and an obliging secretary.

When his secretary made a weekend trip to the horse races at Hot Springs, Ark., York gave her $10 to bet on the daily double, asking her to place it on the fourth horse in the first and second races.

Mrs. Mickey Phillips said she looked at the horses in the Friday races and thought, "Boy, they were dogs." So she waited until Saturday, placing bets on Category Three in the first race — a 12-1 shot — and Mrs. Door in the second, running at 7-2. After the second race, she called York to report his $10 had grown to $1,397.

"We've got our next political campaign paid for after my secretary gets her cut," York said Monday. "I haven't decided what that cut will be."

Kate Millett To Continue Campaign

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Feminist Kate Millett has vowed to continue working for women's rights in Iran.

MISS MILLETT

Miss Millett was arrested March 18 and forced to leave Iran the next day. She said Monday that she was "terrified and terrorized, living in a state of panic under armed guard" before leaving the country.

She said she was invited to Iran by feminists organizing a rally for International Women's Day, March 8. She said she was unfairly accused of charging the government with male chauvinism, but said the current government in Iran wants women to "be invisible, be humble and be totally subjected."

Miss Millett said women were leaders in the revolt against the shah "only to have it torn out of their hands."

Rod Stewart, Wife On Honeymoon

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — British rock star Rod Stewart and his new wife Alana are keeping to themselves but staying close to home on their honeymoon, a publicist says.

"They're in the L.A. area, but I don't know where," said Warner Bros. records spokeswoman Annette Terrell. "They'll continue their honeymoon while Rod is on tour."

Stewart, married Alana Collins Hamilton on Friday and is scheduled to begin a concert tour of the U.S. and Canada on Thursday in Edmonton, Alberta. The private ceremony which united the couple was the first marriage for the 34-year-old rock star. The 33-year-old actress is the former wife of actor George Hamilton.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Elvis Presley's father, who celebrates his 63rd birthday today, is in stable condition in the coronary unit of Baptist Hospital after suffering a severe heart attack, officials say.

Vernon Presley was admitted to the hospital Saturday morning after complaining of chest pains.

Maurice Elliott, a hospital vice president, said Presley was brought to the hospital's emergency room by a private automobile and was admitted to a general care unit while undergoing tests.

Elliott said Presley developed a severe irregularity of his heartbeat Sunday.

"After he was stabilized his doctors moved him to the coronary unit shortly after midnight," Elliott said Monday. Presley has a history of heart problems and diabetes. He

'Deer Hunter' Draws Anti-War Protests

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "The Deer Hunter," one of two films about the Vietnam War which received highest honors in the 51st Academy Awards, drew protesters from a group of anti-war demonstrators who tangled with police and were arrested.

Thirteen persons demonstrating against the film — named best picture of 1978 — were booked Monday night for investigation of various offenses, including assault with a deadly weapon on a police officer, incitement to riot and battery, sheriff's deputies said.

Five persons were slightly injured in the clash, including two officers, authorities said.

Some of the protesters, members of Vietnam Veterans Against the War, were clad in fatigues and berets and carried placards decrying "The Deer Hunter" as "slick war propaganda" and a racist apology for the Southeast Asian conflict.

"The Deer Hunter" was a racist movie that depicted the Vietnamese people as barbarous and vicious," said Luu Quoc, a placard-carrying Vietnamese who has lived in the United States for eight years. "The film was a bloody lie."

Meanwhile, inside the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, the film's stars and creators collected five of filmland's most prestigious awards, including Oscars for its director, film editing, sound and supporting actor.

"The Deer Hunter" depicts the grueling experiences of three Pennsylvania steelworkers who fight in Vietnam. It was nominated for a total of nine Oscars.

The other Vietnam film, "Coming Home," more closely reflected the protesters' attitudes and was spared their wrath. The film was guided by the anti-war sentiment of its star, Jane Fonda, and earned three awards: best actor and actress honors for Miss Fonda and costar Jon Voight, and best original screenplay.

About 25 demonstrators, who had a permit to march near the downtown music center, were confronted by Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies when they tried to enter a restricted parking lot, said Deputy Anthony Grace.

"At that time, some deputies were battered and assaulted with placards and things," Grace said. "No arrests were made then. But the group re-formed a short time later and deputies recognized to arrest four people they recognized from the earlier assaults. At that time, a melee started between the group and deputies."

After the arrests of the 10 men and three women during the skirmish, there were no further incidents, Grace said.

Firms Assessed Federal Fines

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPD) — Fines totaling $475,000 have been assessed against four construction firms which pleaded no contest to federal anti-trust charges.

U.S. Attorney R.E. Thompson said Monday the charges against the four firms resulted from alleged rigged bidding procedures to keep prices of pre-stressed concrete products artificially high.

The four firms indicted in the case were Hydro Conduit, Newport Beach, Calif.; Stanley Structures Inc., Denver; Featherlite Corp., Austin; and Crowe-Gulde, Amarillo.

Thompson said Hydro Conduit was fined $250,000, Stanley Structures was fined $125,000; Featherlite was fined $60,000 and Crowe-Gulde was fined $40,000.

Thompson said the no contest pleas are considered by the court to be guilty pleas.

A federal grand jury indicted the four firms in December, alleging they "engaged in combination and conspiracy in restraint of interstate trade and interstate commerce" in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Specifically, the indictment charged the firms "agreed to allocate among themselves the pre-stressed concrete phase of construction on projects in New Mexico" by rigging bids, exchanging bidding information, agreeing not to compete and submitting inflated or complementary bids.

FIRST AWARDS

The first Academy Awards presentation in 1928 named Emil Jennings best actor for "The Way of All Flesh," Janet Gaynor best actress for "Seventh Heaven" and "Wings" as best picture.

Officials To Examine Water, Food Facilities

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — State and federal health officials say they will examine the water system and food facilities at Providence College to determine the cause of an illness that has affected about 1,000 students.

Five new cases were reported Monday. The symptoms are headaches, stomach cramps, diarrhea, fever and nausea. Dr. Gerald A. Faich, of the state Health Department, said laboratory tests have linked the illness to salmonella bacteria, but the source of the contamination remains a mystery.

Brief States Evidence Not Specific

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department says there is "no factual basis" to Bert Lance's charges that prosecutors and grand jurors improperly leaked information to reporters about the secret investigation of his banking practices.

Government lawyers argued in a court brief Monday that Lance failed to show any "specific" evidence of violations by prosecutors or jurors of grand jury secrecy rules.

"With respect to the various statements reported in the press citing Department of Justice sources, there is but one instance in which an individual—the attorney general — is specifically identified," the brief said.

"In all other articles the sources are unnamed. Thus, not only is the accuracy of the statements at issue but the identity of the sources is unknown."

The brief was filed in federal court in Atlanta in response to Lance's sweeping motion asking U.S. District Judge Richard Freeman for criminal sanctions against prosecutors and dismissal of the grand jury in the case.

Sources have said prosecutors will ask the grand jury to indict the former budget director later this month on charges he misapplied bank funds.

The Justice Department argued some leaks in the case have come from persons "close to the Lance side of the investigation."

It said Lance also failed to demonstrate "specific evidence against individual jurors" he accused of violating secrecy requirements.

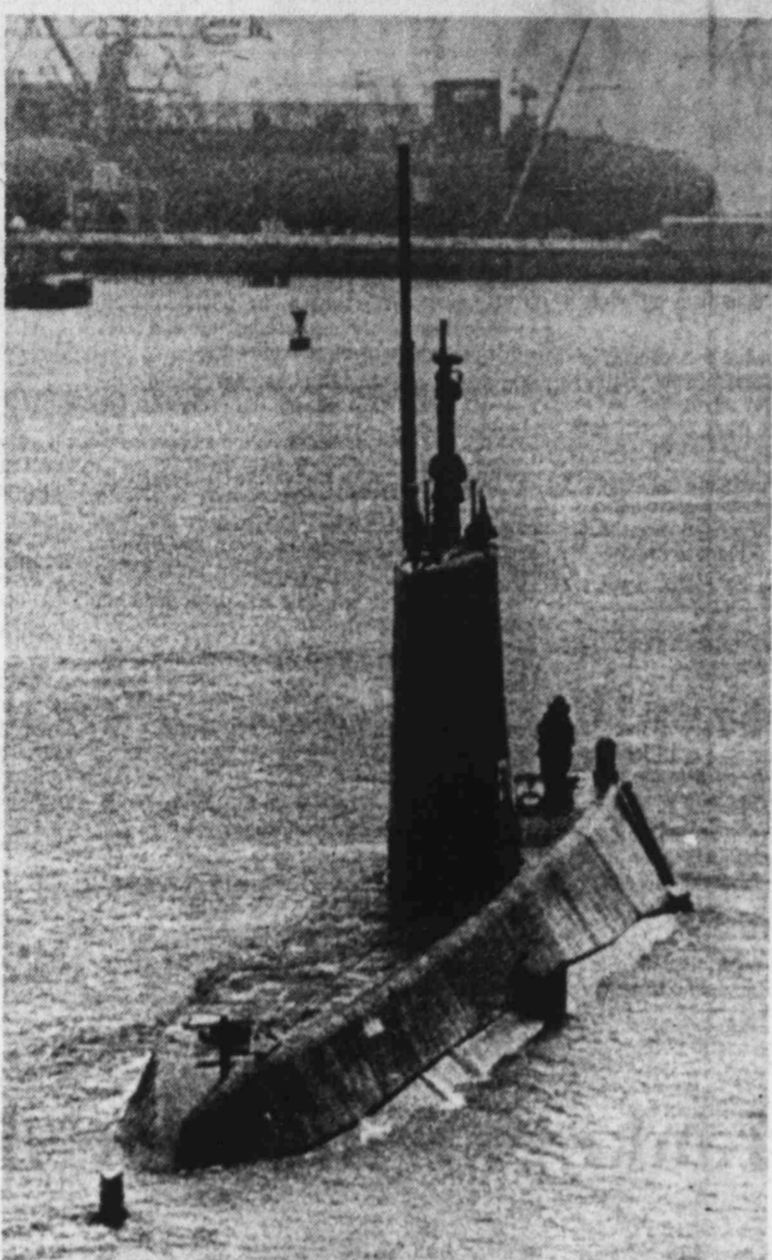

Even if Lance had evidence of juror leaks, the appropriate remedy would have been contempt of court citations against the violators rather than dismissal of the grand jury, the government said.

The brief said exposure of a grand jury to "unfavorable" publicity about the target of an investigation does not invalidate its proceedings. If the grand jury errs in handing up an indictment, the defendant can be cleared by a trial jury, it said.

In addition, the government argued, the grand jury is investigating a number of individuals, and its dismissal not only would immunize Lance, but also would free several other persons from possible prosecution.

The brief said a number of the newspaper stories cited by Lance's lawyers "do not constitute violations of grand jury secrecy requirements" and many were written before Freeman imposed his gag order.

It asked Freeman to dismiss Lance's motion on grounds there is "no factual basis for the charges made."

Coordinating Council Checks City Grants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayors have long complained that federal agencies often work at cross purposes in their cities. Not long ago, for example, the Department of Housing and Urban Development awarded a grant to Charleston, W.Va., to help build a downtown shopping mall designed to revitalize the center city.

Meanwhile, private developers planning a shopping mall outside the city were seeking money from the Department of Transportation to build a ramp from an interstate highway to their project.

Studies showed the area could support only one shopping mall. In the past, that probably would not have prevented the Transportation Department from financing the highway ramp.

But the Carter administration said Monday that "the rules have changed." When the interagency coordinating council President Carter set up to manage his urban policy heard about Charleston's situation, it decided against funding the highway ramp. It took similar action in an almost identical situation in Duluth, Minn.

Presidential assistant Jack Watson, who heads the coordinating council, cited both instances in a progress report Monday on the year-old urban policy.

"We're not against suburban shopping malls, but not where they will eviscerate downtown and where they need federal investments," he said.

As a result, Watson has ordered federal regional officials of departments with major urban programs to set up interagency working groups to be certain that they do not work against each other in urban areas.

This was among a series of administrative actions in urban programs that Watson announced in an effort "to make the government work better."

Watson said he hoped to correct what he called a Washington preoccupation with new legislative proposals that have prevented the federal government from assessing programs once they are passed.

One major urban group commended Watson's actions but complained that the White House also needed to concentrate on getting its major urban spending proposals through Congress.

Tom Cochran of the U.S. Conference of Mayors said, "We applaud any efforts to make these programs work better, but the real action right now is in Congress."

Kahn Hints Mandatory Controls Next Move

WASHINGTON (AP) — What inflation fighter Alfred E. Kahn said — or seemed to say — about alternatives to the nation's voluntary anti-inflation program has caused more than a little hubbub in the capital.

Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, told an AFL-CIO gathering Monday that both he and President Carter are opposed to such non-voluntary anti-inflation measures as mandatory wage and price controls or a tight monetary policy that might result in recession.

But he added, "An honest person has got to admit that if this (voluntary) program doesn't work, we may get one or another of those alternatives, whether we like it or not."

The hint that mandatory controls might be on the way drew a quick denial from the White House, and eventually from the wage-price council.

But the comments came at a critical time for the inflation fighter and the Carter administration.

The voluntary wage and price program, announced by Carter last fall, has not yet begun to make a dent in inflation, which has been going up so far this year at an annual rate of more than 10 percent.

Labor, particularly the striking Teamsters union, has begun challenging the 7 percent ceiling on wage increases. And the owners of many small-and mid-sized businesses appear to be ignoring the price limits altogether, both Kahn and the president have charged.

Meanwhile, the business community has grown increasingly skeptical about the future of the voluntary program.

A January-February "business confidence" survey taken by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and Gallup pollsters indicated 83 percent of some 1,000 corporate executives think "the federal government's voluntary wage-price control program will be mandatory during the next two years."

When the Chamber of Commerce first asked the question in a poll in the fall of 1977 — a full year before the voluntary guidelines were introduced — only 34 percent thought a mandatory program was likely, said James Morris, a senior economist with the business group.

Kahn's statement, made at a kickoff rally for the AFL-CIO's national price monitoring program, did emphasize the government's commitment to its voluntary guidelines.

"My bottom line is simple: Given the rather grim nature of the alternatives available to us, we really have no choice but to pursue our present course, but with increased intensity," Kahn said.

But the sentence about what happens "if this program doesn't work" caused a bit of an uproar.

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell responded first.

Powell said "absolutely not" when asked at a White House news conference if Carter were thinking of asking Congress for authority to impose mandatory controls.

Kahn, Powell said, "in no way meant to imply that this president would under any circumstances impose wage and price controls."

Later in the day, the Council on Wage and Price Stability issued a statement "to clarify" Kahn's remarks.

"There seems to be confusion about what I said at the AFL-CIO's price-monitoring rally," the statement quoted Kahn as saying. "I was only pointing out that the alternatives to the kind of voluntary anti-inflation program we have today are either a recession or mandatory controls. Both of these are unacceptable."

Yet businessmen remain skeptical.

Economist George Hagedorn of the National Association of Manufacturers said the guidelines program has failed. And he added, "Since there are no good options in the short term, the administration is showing signs of desperation, and you can't predict what a desperate person might do."

One group that did not challenge Kahn's remark — or ask for clarification — was the labor group he addressed. The AFL-CIO and its president, George Meany, have long been on record as in favor of mandatory wage and price limits.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has moved to cut off nearly all U.S. assistance to Syria unless that nation can convince President Carter it is not torpedoing his Mideast peace effort.

Prompted by Syria's vocal opposition to the new Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, the House decided by voice vote Monday to cut $45 million for Syria out of a $4.2 billion U.S. economic aid bill.

The House was continuing work on the bill today.

By a relatively narrow 193-177 vote, the House softened the Syria aid cutoff by adding that Carter may restore money if he decides such action would best serve U.S. interests.

Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., urged the House to cut off the aid to show Congress' determination "that the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty not be torpedoed by radical Arab governments."

Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., agreed, Congress should apply the pressure but he urged the House to add the flexibility for Carter to restore the aid.

"We want to draw Syria toward the peace process and not force them to choose against us," Hamilton said. "By cutting off all aid, you're going to force them away from us and into the rejectionist camp."

The House also softened language that would have held up U.S. aid for Jordan until Carter reports that nation is cooperating with peace efforts in the Middle East.

By voice vote the House amended that provision to say only that Congress believes Jordan as well as Syria "should cooperate" with the peace effort.

In other action on the bill Monday, the House rejected 190-180 an amendment that would have allowed Carter to send U.S. observers to monitor Rhodesian elections next week, and then allot $20 million in U.S. aid to that country.

Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., argued that would give a U.S. blessing to restricted elections and antagonize black African nations that want to negotiate a different transition to black rule in Rhodesia.

Draft Opponents Trying To Recruit President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional opponents of reviving military registration or a peacetime draft are starting to mobilize and are trying to recruit President Carter for their side of the battle.

In the first coordinated attack against draft and registration bills in Congress, 39 House members sent Carter a letter Monday asking him to oppose such legislation as well as proposals for a national service program of compulsory work in hospitals, parks and elsewhere.

The congressmen — five Republicans and 34 Democrats — argued that compulsory service during peacetime would be a violation of the constitutional ban on involuntary servitude.

"The return to the draft, in a time when the United States has chosen to actively pursue the cause of world peace and so soon after the trauma of Vietnam, cannot fail to raise grave doubts and create new divisions and alienation among our people," the congressmen said.

Carter said earlier this year he does not foresee going back to registration or a draft — last used more than six years ago. But the nation's top military officers — the Joint Chiefs of Staff — are pressing for a registration system and saying a draft is likely if not inevitable.

The congressmen said a registration program — believed to have the best chance for congressional action this year — would be widely viewed as the first step in a return to the draft.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., said that if a registration bill nears passage on the House floor, he will offer an amendment banning registration of anyone under age 25 but requiring all persons older than that to sign up for possible service.

The congressmen's letter acknowledged the Pentagon is having trouble meeting recruiting goals, but it said the draft is not the answer.

Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, said the Defense Department should increase incentives in order to beef up the reserves, where personnel shortages are greatest.

Senate Tries To Avoid Showdown On Prayer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, apparently unable to defeat the issue of allowing prayers in public schools, has taken the long way around to avoid a showdown on the emotional issue.

The winner, if there was one in the two days of skirmishing, was the proposed new education department. The leaders indicated it stood no chance of passage if the prayer amendment were attached to it.

In one of its last actions before taking a 12-day recess over Easter and Passover, the Senate attached the voluntary prayer amendment to a bill that has little chance of enactment, then eliminated it from the education department bill, which the administration did not want jeopardized by the controversy.

The issue came up suddenly last Thursday when an amendment by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to the education department bill was adopted 47-37. It would have overturned the Supreme Court ruling outlawing all voluntary prayer in public schools and buildings.

The leaders succeeded in setting a reconsideration of the vote and postponing it until Monday. But weekend head counts apparently showed they lacked enough votes to overturn it.

So after a series of procedural votes, Democratic leader Robert Byrd — with Vice President Walter Mondale orchestrating the maneuvers — led the Senate out of a political thicket that threatened to bring one side or the other to its knees.

His solution permitted a "yes" vote on attaching the amendment to a bill dealing with Supreme Court jurisdiction on other matters before deleting it from the education department bill, thus allowing some members the opportunity of voting both ways on the issue.

An irate Helms called it "the surest way to kill the prayer amendment," because Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., of the House Judiciary Committee will bury the court jurisdiction bill "so deep it will take 14 bulldozers just to scratch the surface."

Helms promised to keep trying to overturn the court on the prayer issue.

Bills To Make Congress Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following President Carter's lead, members of the House and Senate have introduced legislation to require lawmakers and their employees to pay for parking spaces.

Carter said last week in his energy speech that other federal employees who park free or at reduced rates will soon have to begin paying commercial-level fees.

The president doesn't control such matters for members of Congress and their staffs, but House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said Monday, "I think they should pay like everyone else."

Attempts to make congressmen and other Capitol workers pay for parking haven't gathered much support in the past.

But Sen. Charles Percy, whose previous attempts have won little backing, said "the free ride is over" as he introduced a bill Monday to begin charging for congressional parking places.

"All federal employees, including members of Congress and their staffs, should pay for parking just like every other citizen," said Percy, an Illinois Republican.

Similar legislation was introduced in the House Monday by Rep. Bob Whitaker, R-Kan. He said Carter's energy-conservation plan "requires sacrifices of all of us."

Punishment Quota?

IF I WERE A black parent in Dallas, I hope that I would be incensed over allegations that schools there discipline black students more frequently and more severely than they do white students.

My ire would not be directed at the schools for doing their job but at the federally funded Dallas Legal Services bureaucracy for attempting to label the report as proof that black children are discriminated against.

I would wonder if the Legal Services lawyers weren't giving black students a handy excuse for disrupting classes and failing to take full advantage of their educational opportunities.

In ASKING JUDGE William M. Taylor to appoint a special master to devise a new system of discipline for the Dallas schools, Legal Services attorney Thomas Ashton cited an 80-page study by two University of Texas-Arlington researchers.

Relative to their proportion of the student population, blacks are punished more often than whites, the study concluded (and) are more likely to get disciplined severely for the same offense.

On the contrary, teachers report that they are sometimes more hesitant to discipline black students because of the fear of being accused of racial discrimination.

Dallas school officials have been quoted in newspapers there as saying the relatively high punishment rates for blacks are because of a relatively small core of persistent offenders.

I'm told of one youngster who has been disciplined 35 times, thus raising the statistics for blacks as a group.

AT SEAGOVILLE, a part of the Dallas system, Assistant Principal Stacy Mosley—in charge of discipline for 9th through 12th graders—reacted vehemently to allegations of racial discrimination.

"How could that be?" he asked. "I'm black myself."

Black parents, who know how important a good education is to their children's future, have to be equally concerned that classroom discipline might be compromised by some sort of quota system for dispensing punishment.

If the Dallas Legal Services gets its way, the schools will be prohibited from suspending black students at a higher rate than whites.

What, then, would be done if the month's "quota" had been filled and a black student attacked his teacher and terrorized his classmates?

Discipline should be in proportion to the offenses committed, not in proportion to the racial make-up of the student body.

SUPT. LINUS WRIGHT, formerly of Lubbock, told Dallas newsmen that the district's disciplinary policies cannot be judged discriminatory on the basis of numbers alone.

"You need to know the situation in each case to make a judgment of that kind," he explained.

Last summer, for example, some elements of the Dallas black community labeled it racism when several black policemen were fired after allegedly calling in sick on their regular jobs and then reporting for work at their second jobs as security officers for the Dallas Housing Authority.

Seven indictments for falsifying time cards recently were returned.

"WHILE EVERYBODY is talking about how many black kids have disciplinary action against them, it seems time to ask also how come these kids are being allowed by their parents and their community to act up in school," Dallas Morning News columnist Ann Melvin wrote.

"The kids have too much free time and too little responsibility," Sheriff's Sgt. Lagene Bayless, who works the juvenile beat, told reporters.

"I guess they're getting an average education but sometimes I'm disturbed by how many of them can't even write complete sentences when we take statements from them," she added.

Discipline is the first prerequisite for learning.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Strain Plain On Hussein

JUDGING FROM the spate of dispatches, King Hussein has taken to talking with American correspondents in wholesale lots since Israel and Egypt committed themselves to going all the way for peace.

The Jordanian monarch makes it clear in terms more vehement than diplomatic that he is very unhappy with the Mideast situation in general and the U.S. in particular.

He accuses Washington of being arrogant and aggressive in seeking to pressure Jordan into participating in the Israeli-Egyptian settlement thru "arm-twisting."

The twist being intimations that American aid to Jordan—$220 million a year in economic assistance and, last year, $150 million worth of arms—might be affected if, at the very least, he does not keep his objections largely to himself.

STRONG STUFF coming from the leader Washington had hoped would run Mideast interference for the treaty and long its most dependable adherent in the region—well, after Iran's currently exiled shah, that is.

Hussein has a legitimate cause for complaint. He has consistently been asked to play a supporting (he says "humiliating") role as a policeman in the Israeli-occupied West Bank. Furthermore, he is in a difficult situation with his Arab neighbors, very few being of the friendly persuasion.

Hussein rules a chunk of largely arid real estate, left over from the post-WW I dismemberment of the Ottoman Empire, that was decreed a country by the British Foreign Office.

More than half the population of today's Jordan is Palestinian in origin and would gladly scuttle the land of their refuge to regain their homeland. Hussein remains in power through the loyalty of the native bedouins, a well-equipped army and an abundance of diplomatic savvy.

HUSSEIN BELIEVES the Egyptian-Israeli deal not only has aggravated tensions but, he told interviewers, could lead to a deterioration in Jordan's relations with the U.S. "for a long time to come."

That would be in the event of a proposed post-treaty Arab summit for excommunicating Egypt from the Arab league, severance of diplomatic relations and possibly an economic boycott. Jordan, which does not live by U.S. aid alone and is counting on some $400 million promised by Iraq this year, will abide by any summit decisions.

Under the circumstances, Hussein is under so much pressure he is paralyzed politically.

It could be that although his grievances are well-founded enough, he is demonstrating himself at this delicate stage of Mideast realignment as the Arab's Arab.

Paul Scott:

U.S. Monkeys With Guerrillas

WASHINGTON—There is increasing evidence that the State Department is following a policy of helping supporters of the pro-Castro Sandinista guerrillas in their efforts to topple the pro-U.S. government of Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza.

In addition to cutting off all U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan government, the State Department has belatedly requested Congressional approval for Venezuela's illegal transfer of 1,000 U.S.-made rifles to Costa Rica, the main base for the Sandinista guerrilla operations against Nicaragua.

The Department's little-noted request came two weeks after the arms were shipped to Costa Rica by the Venezuelan government and at a time of increased arms smuggling to the pro-Castro Sandinista guerrillas in Nicaragua from Costa Rica.

IN LESS THAN one week in March, the Nicaraguan National Guard intercepted two attempted arms smuggling operations on the Costa Rican border.

Both incidents involved the capture of U.S.-made M-1 and M-14 rifles and other U.S. military supplies originally furnished to Venezuela and Panama under U.S. arms sales programs.

Although the new shipment of 1,000 U.S. rifles was turned over to the Costa Rican government for their own forces by Venezuela, Nicaraguan officials are convinced that they are earmarked for the Sandinista terrorists now being trained inside Costa Rica and Panama.

There are good reasons for this concern. Sandinista guerrillas taken prisoners in recent weeks by Nicaraguan military forces have revealed that their units are receiving increasing numbers of U.S. weapons while training in Costa Rica and Panama in addition to Soviet-made weapons coming from Cuba.

THE THREE WAY "Venezuela-Panama-Costa Rica" connection was highlighted when a van crossing the Costa Rican border was seized by Nicaraguan authorities and U.S. weapons found hidden in secret compartments.

Communication equipment, including wire, which the U.S. had earlier supplied to Panama's National Guard was also found in the van indicating the flow of U.S. arms from Panama through Costa Rica to the Sandinista guerrillas.

Most disturbing to lawmakers here is the State Department's lack of interest in determining how the Sandinista guerrillas are obtaining these U.S. military supplies.

Instead of acting to try to stop the flow of these arms, the State Department is making it easier for the guerrillas to obtain U.S. weapons by approving the transfer of U.S. military supplies to Costa Rica from Venezuela and Panama without really knowing when the weapons were shipped or how they were being used.

As noted in a letter sent Secretary of State Cyrus Vance by Rep. Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., the government of Venezuela has "clearly violated the provisions of U.S. Arms Export Control Act, which explicitly provides that no transfer of weapons shall be made without prior Congressional approval of such a request.

"The State Department has apparently decided to ignore Venezuela's violation."

Rep. Rudd, who is seeking a Congressional review of U.S. policy toward Nicaragua, warns that the new weapons will end up in the hands of the Sandinista terrorists unless the U.S. acts to see that the weapons remain under control of Costa Rican officials.

In contrast to this blessing of Venezuela's violation of U.S. Arms Export Control Act, the State Department is now quietly putting pressure on Israel to limit its arms sales to Nicaragua.

Sylvia Porter: Use Photos To Slash Tax Cache In Flash

IN THE NORTHERN Westchester County (N.Y.) suburb in which we have a home, the heavy snows of winter followed by almost torrential rains have flooded cellars and lower living floors, caused widespread damage.

In the Midwest and, in fact, across the entire nation in 1978-79 to date, natural disasters of freezing weather, ice storms, tornado-like winds and lightning—to name merely the obvious calamities—have resulted in property damage that generally will be acceptable to the Internal Revenue Service as casualty losses you can claim on your federal income tax return.

And of course, no area has escaped fires, vandalism, theft, auto accidents, etc.—other losses that can all but destroy your financial nestegg, which you can partially offset only if you are adequately compensated by your insurance company or if you can use the losses to reduce the income taxes you owe.

ON TOP OF all this, in a few weeks, the hurricane season will begin and last through November—with all the awesome potential these storms have for destruction in regions criss-crossing the U.S.

What can you do to help protect yourself before any disaster strikes you?

An extremely simple precaution is to take "before" photos that show your property and possessions in their undamaged condition.

The contrast between these earlier shots and those showing the havoc caused by natural or human forces will add validity to your tax deduction or insurance claim.

You don't need any expensive, sophisticated gadget-loaded unit to do this for you. Any camera will perform the job you want, in preparing an all-inclusive inventory of color pictures. Some hints:

(1) PHOTOGRAPH EVERY room inside your house and also its contents so that each article is clearly identifiable.

(2) Photograph all outdoor improvements to your property—trees, shrubbery, brick or stone walls, fences, patios, pools, driveways, car ports.

(3) While you're outside, take pictures of your car (or cars), motorcycle, moped, power mower, bike, trailer, boat on a trailer and similar vehicles. You'll want several pictures of each, showing the equipment from a variety of angles.

So They Say...

Mark Twain recalled: Don't part with your illusions. When they are gone you may still exist but you have ceased to live.

Passing the buck is not new; but bucks never passed faster than they do these days.

Overheard: A guy who orders a soft drink has no kick coming.

(4) PHOTOGRAPH EVERY room inside your house and also its contents so that each article is clearly identifiable.

(5) When photographing inside, Kodak recommends that you start at a corner and work around the room to your starting place. As you move along the walls, overlap each picture slightly to show the continuity of what you are shooting.

Take closeups of valuable paintings or statuary. Repeat this process in every room, including the basement and attic and garage if there are articles of value there.

Before you leave each room, turn the camera to the interior and register carpeting and furniture not positioned against a wall.

(6) Since fine china, crystal and silver hollow ware are not likely to show up clearly in break-fronts or china closets, these articles should be arranged on a table and photographed in groups. The same is true for sterling table settings.

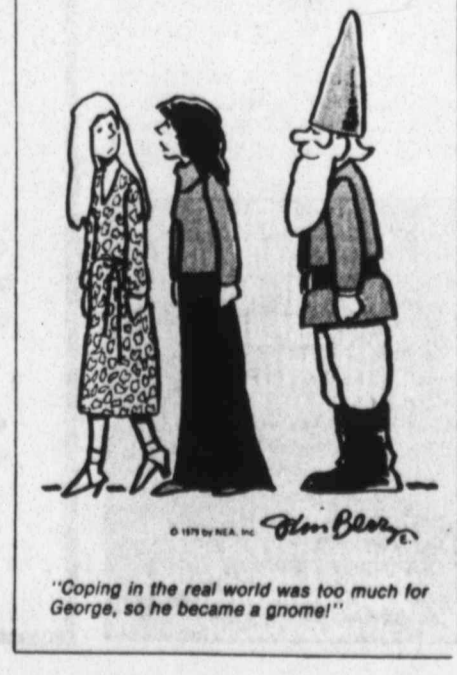

(7) Lay out your jewelry and photograph it the same way. If you have a close-up or portrait lens for your camera, all the better to show details of the pieces.

ONCE YOU HAVE finished the snapshot inventory of your home and possessions (and you won't be able to finish it in a single day), you have the basis for establishing "the condition and value" of your real and personal property prior to a casualty.

Store your negatives off-premises in a fireproof container, preferably in a safe deposit box. Then keep your photo inventory up-to-date by taking pictures of valuable new acquisitions and adding them to the inventory.

An added bonus: the cost of your supporting photos becomes tax-deductible as an expense when they are used to show the extent of the damages in order to arrive at the amount of your loss.

VOICE OF THE PROFIT

John D. Lofton:

The 'Nukes' Of Non-Hazard

WASHINGTON—The main argument of those who oppose the use of nuclear power is that it is simply too dangerous. But this begs the question. Too dangerous compared to what?

I mean, we're going to use some kind of energy, right? So what about the dangers of those forms of energy that will be used if atomic isn't?

In its most recent report on the subject, the Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Research and Development addresses itself to the question of non-nuclear energy accidents.

Noting that nuclear power ranks last behind the oil, coal and hydroelectric industries in terms of frequency of accidents, the EPA study says: "Based on the best available estimate, there are probably a significantly greater number of deaths and injuries associated with the coal resource system per megawatt delivered than with the crude oil or natural gas system."

UNDERGROUND COAL mining is more dangerous than surface mining, with an injury frequency rate four times greater than that of surface coal mining.

While most people would probably identify fires and explosions as the most severe mining disasters, they account for only 10 to 12 percent of the annual fatalities. The majority of fatalities (50 percent) are, in fact, caused by roof, rib, and face falls in underground mines.

The transportation of oil via tankers accounts for a greater number of fatalities and injuries annually than the transportation of oil by pipeline.

Pipeline accidents number about 135 a year, and cause approximately one fatality and one injury per year. Tanker accidents number about 640 annually and cause nearly 75 deaths and 35 injuries per year.

MORE MEMBERS of the public than employees are killed or injured by natural gas pipeline accidents because pipelines run through residential, industrial and commercial areas.

Eight people die every year in these accidents and 220 are injured. In Cleveland, Ohio, in 1944, a large storage tank containing 38,000 barrels of liquid natural gas collapsed.

Although more than a thousand dams supply hydroelectric power, only one failure has occurred.

As far as accidents related to the geothermal, oil shale or solar energy industries are concerned, the EPA study says it is not possible to evaluate these technologies since the data available is insufficient. Quoting 1972 National Safety Council information, the study notes:

"FOR SAMPLED electric utilities, the frequency rate for fatal and permanent total disability was 0.12 injuries per million hours exposure.

"The utilities ranked tenth in the frequency of injuries among all industries. In terms of frequency of injuries (number of disabling work injuries per million employee-hours exposure) the following ranking occurs:

"Oil (13.69); coal (10.8); hydroelectric (4.1) and nuclear (3.0). In terms of the severity of accidents (total days charged for injuries per million employee hours exposure) the following ranking occurs: coal (1950); oil (461); hydroelectric (149); and nuclear (43)." More recent NSC data shows that these rankings still hold true generally.

THE AMERICAN Nuclear Insurers' recently issued Report No. 4, listing some 39 accidents since 1962 which have involved radiation release and exposure and which have given rise to insurance claims. Accident No. 34 happened on Jan. 24, 1978. Its description reads:

"Claimant alleged that he was unable to feed his captive elk because of a road near a reactor being closed several hours during an accident alert at the power reactor.

"As a result, he claimed that the elk died. An autopsy of the elk revealed that the cause of its death was not as alleged. Claim expense: $145.18."

Undoubtedly, the anti-nuclear power crowd will be calling this an example of "another nuclear power-related death."

December 1979 contract reached new life-of-contract highs briefly before declining slightly by the close.

Talk of strong export demand for corn was supported by an Agriculture Department announcement late Friday that 315,000 tons of U.S. corn previously described as sold to unknown destinations had been purchased by the Soviet Union.

The expiring April contract was about unchanged at the close, under some selling pressure from heavier country sales of corn by farmers.

Soybean futures declined in nearby months and rose in more distant deliveries. A report that export officials of the Brazilian central bank have not reduced their assessment of the size of this year's Brazilian soybean crop, as some traders expected them to do, was a bearish influence.

Traders also said they expected the government export report to reflect small soybean exports last week.

At the close, soybeans were 6 cents lower to 2 1/2 cents higher, May $7.61 1/2; wheat was 1/2 to 2 cents lower, May $3.34 1/2; corn was unchanged to 1 cent higher, May $2.54; and oats were 1 to 1 1/2 cents higher, May $1.39 1/4.

Staunch Thomas Faced Prospect Of Jesus' Death

EDITOR'S NOTE: This second installment of a five-part Easter series about the apostles, drawn from the Bible and other ancient writings, focuses on Thomas, James and John.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

A hawk circled far up in the sky and gradually glided lower. Thomas eyed it somberly. It seemed to trace an implacably deadly design, hovering nearer its prey. The strike would come, and Thomas foresaw it. The others evaded it.

He watched James and John, those two ambitious, hot-blooded brothers, as they adjusted the halter on the burro's head and smoothed out the goat-hair riding pad. Jesus swung atop the animal, sitting sideways. His gaze swept his 12 men, a look of quick comradely assurance, and they started out.

The Kidron valley lay below, its floor dotted with pilgrim tents and curling smoke from the cooking fires. Beyond it rose the gleaming spires of Jerusalem. Thomas, thrusting his staff against the rocky downgrade, knew they headed toward the end.

"Let us go, that we may die with him," Thomas had goaded the others as they grumbled and hesitated about the perils of a return trip to the Judean capital. They had feared it, as did not accept its consequences, but did the hard realist, Thomas.

Thomas was once a carpenter like Jesus, and his name meant "the twin," as did the Greek form of it, "Didymus." Curiously, the ancient non-Biblical "Acts of Thomas" regards him as a twin of Jesus, with some scholarly speculation that they were born on the same day of different parents. But Thomas bleak, moody outlook plainly set him apart.

Grimly, he expected the worst, but he did so with unmitigated courage, aware of the crushing blow ahead, yet striding resolutely toward it. The others, though apprehensive, shunned facing the shattering prospect to which Jesus himself repeatedly had sought to alert them.

"Behold, we are going up to Jerusalem, and everything that is written about the Son of Man will be delivered to the Gentiles and he will be mocked and shamefully treated and spit upon. They will scourge him and kill him, and on the third day he will rise."

His men, appalled and incredulous, couldn't conceive of it, refusing to admit such a possibility. They "did not understand," Mark 9:31 notes, feared even to ask about it or consider it, shrinking from it. But not the tough, taciturn woodworker Thomas. Although not grasping its full dimensions, he starkly foresaw death, ready to share it.

Moving doggedly along with the others through the valley shantytown, Thomas noted the swelling fascination around and ahead of them, the crowds gathering on the roadside, waving palm branches, tossing their cloaks before Jesus, spreading their arms in adulation, calling out hosannas.

James and John seemed oddly excited and eager, flushed with anticipation, as if some triumph beckoned. Thomas scowled. He glanced back up at the hawk, low now, it plummeted toward its victim. Compared to Thomas, James and John always had been brash, vehement, steaming with ardor, zip and push.

The two headstrong, fiery brothers came from a prosperous, influential family, the Zebedees, owners of a large fishing industry in Bethsaida on the north coast of the Sea of Galilee, with outlets throughout the land, including Jerusalem.

As sons of Zebedee, they presumably had adhered to Jewish practice of apprenticeship in various aspects of the business, curing, crating and shipping, maintenance of fleet and equipment, scheduling crews, as well as joining in the dragnet fishing expeditions requiring several vessels at once.

Dried or pickled barrels of the catch were transported by camel train to markets throughout Galilee and Judea, including Jerusalem, with its "Zebedee and Sons" distribution center, supplying among others the high priestly household, with which John was acquainted, as indicated in John 18:15.

Comparisons of the different gospel accounts also bring out that Zebedee's wife, Salome, apparently was a sister of Jesus' mother, Mary, and is regarded as one of those well-to-do women, mentioned in Luke 8:3, who had financed Jesus' work "out of their means."

James and John, as younger cousins of Jesus, always had looked up to him admiringly despite their wealthier status, awed by his sureness, independent spirit, insight and purposefulness. At his call, they immediately had joined him, even though it meant giving up a comfortable home and servants and overcoming their father Zebedee's patriarchal expectations for them to assume his profitable trade.

But they had even grander visions of success through being in Jesus' inner circle, with plans to attain exalted position. Their zest for it, their substantial background, the blood ties, impelled them to put it to him bluntly.

Despite their flaring dispositions, Jesus held them in particular affection, tolerating their impatient drive, sure of their fervent devotion, a special bond which Thomas and the other apostles recognized. On several occasions, such as that mystical transfiguration on a mist-shrouded mountaintop about which they heard later, he allowed only James, John and Peter to be with him.

"Grant us," the two brothers blurted simultaneously, fervently, one of them finishing it, "Grant us to sit, one at your right hand and one at your left, in your glory."

He eyed them fondly. "You do not know what you are asking. Are you able to drink the same cup that I drink?" Jesus asked the pair.

"We are able!" they chorused. His expression clouded, and he nodded thoughtfully. "The cup that I drink you will drink." It had a foreboding sound to Thomas, a dark chord of future travail and persecutions facing them.

But Jesus said the kind of passing political power they had in mind was not in his purview, that ultimate relationships would be settled in divine providence. "To sit at my right hand or at my left is not mine to grant, but it is for those for whom it has been prepared."

At the time, they were at Peter's grey basalt house in the lakeside town of Capernaum where they often stayed. The other apostles, silent until then, unleashed their pent-up ire and vexation at the two brothers for currying privilege.

"If any one of you would be first," Jesus interjected, "he must be the last of all and servant of all."

It was a recurring issue, particularly with James and John, and it rankled the dourly fatalistic Thomas. But Jesus, obviously seeing the appetite for power and status as a pervasive human snare, alluded to the authoritarianism of imperial Rome, saying:

"You know that those who are supposed to rule over the Gentiles lord it over them, and their great men exercise authority over them. But it shall not be so among you. Whoever would be great among you must be your servant, and whoever would be first among you must be the slave of all. For the Son of Man also came not to be served but to serve, and to give his life as a ransom for many."

James and John, good-hearted, fervently devoted for all their yen for prestige, took the rebuff gracefully, agreeing unreservedly, although perhaps remaining somewhat vague about it. Whatever, they'd keep up their untrammelled dash and verve.

Thomas, a plain, practical craftsman, skilled with adze and plumb line, took a gloomy view of their future, but he would stick with Jesus, whatever came. The others didn't seem to regard what Jesus said as raw, concrete fact, probably because he often taught in allegories.

"Let these words sink into your ears," Jesus emphasized at one point, "for the Son of Man is to be delivered into the hands of men."

But after earlier visits to Jerusalem had aroused increasing official hostility and they had withdrawn to an isolated refuge, the apostles generally objected to going back, protesting that already Temple henchmen sought to stone Jesus.

"Are there not 12 hours in the day?" Jesus asked, adding that as long as a person's destined day of duty remained, it would be sufficient if he confronted it openly. "If any one walks in the day, he does not stumble." But if he hid from duty, he might survive, but his day was done. "If any one walks in the night, he stumbles, because the light is not in him."

Still, the apostles demurred. But Thomas, the hard-headed, dour realist who looked squarely at the facts, aware that a return to Jerusalem seemed disastrous but valorously unshaken by it, declared stoically:

"Let us also go, that we may die with him." It rallied the others and they went, processing down that mount, across that jumbled valley, through the gate guarded by Roman sentries and into the colliding ferment of Jerusalem. At their last supper before the crucifixion, Thomas again showed his practical, earthy view of the situation.

After Jesus explained he was going away to "prepare a place for you," Thomas, seeking to get it straight, wanting some solid facts, asked for specifics. "Lord, we do not know where you are going. How can we know the way?"

"I am the way," Jesus said, "and the truth, and the life."

To that, Thomas had committed himself, and however unclear and uncharitable, without definite blueprints or measure, he clung loyally to it, even after the crucifixion convinced him that Jesus, unaltered, was destroyed, despite the resurrection claims of the others.

The grave, unflinching, plain-thinking woodworker told them he wouldn't believe it unless he not only saw Jesus, but could touch the wounds of crucifixion. For that, Thomas often is called "doubting," but it wasn't unbelief, only the man's plain, unambiguous grief and sober honesty about his own senses.

Eight days later, in a locked room with the others, Jesus appeared. "Put your finger here ... see my hands ... put out your hand and place it in my side ..." It wasn't necessary, Thomas knew then that a carpenter's reckoning eye didn't measure all reality. "My Lord and my God!"

Olden accounts say Thomas carried the faith to Persia, Parthia and India, where a church still bears his name. As he had imperturbably foreseen, he eventually also died for the cause, run through with soldiers' lances on a hill near Calamina in India.

However, the first of the apostles to meet martyrdom was one of those Zebedee thunderbolts, James. He was beheaded by puppet King Agrippa, as related in Acts 12, in the initial wave of persecution of the followers of Jesus after his death and resurrection.

John, the other flamingly impassioned apostle who, helpless and horrified, had remained nearby through Jesus' trial and crucifixion and to whom Jesus from the cross assigned the care of his mother, later was exiled under the Roman emperor Domitian to the desolate island of Patmos, where he is said to have written the visionary Book of Revelations.

After his escape, swimming on a cork buoy, tradition says he lived to mellow old age in Ephesus in Greece, where adoring disciples took down the distinctively philosophical gospel of John. "Children, love one another," he kept telling them. In his failing days, they carried him about on a litter.

They asked, "Master, why dost thou always say this?" "It is the Lord's command," said the old thunderer, "and if this alone be done, it is enough."

After he was buried, the ancient Bible translator Jerome records a story that on the grave of the volcanic, firebrand apostle, the dust whirled vigorously.

Garwood Wants People To Judge

GREENSBURG, Ind. (AP) — Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, denying he ever abandoned the United States during the Vietnam War, says he will let the American people judge his actions during the nearly 14 years he was in Southeast Asia.

"I never deserted. I never broke any of the rules," Garwood said in an interview Monday. "Can anyone who's ever grown up in America believe I actually volunteered to stay in that God-forsaken country?"

"This thing, I just leave up to the judgment of the American people. I don't worry about it. If anything happens, it can't be worse than what I've been through," Garwood said.

Marine authorities have accused the 33-year-old Garwood of desertion after his capture by the Vietcong in 1965.

"These people had the power of life and death over me. If they sent me back in a box, they wouldn't lose anything," he said. "I lived in fear all those years. Now, I've returned to my own country and live in almost the same fear."

"I've read in the newspapers that the maximum punishment is execution. That's what the Vietnamese told me all those years," said Garwood. "At least I'll be buried on American soil."

"I was a gung-ho Marine. You give me an order and I did it," Garwood, on a 30-day convalescent leave from the Great Lakes Naval training Center in Illinois, said. "I guess I believed too much in the U.S. government, that everything it did was right."

Shaking his head in disappointment, the lanky, chain-smoking Garwood recalled his thoughts when he stepped off the plane in Bangkok, Thailand, and was advised of the allegations against him.

"I was a POW coming home. It was a blow. I didn't believe it. I thought it was some kind of farce," he said. "This was not the America that I knew, the one that I went to fight for. I can't believe that."

After he was advised of his legal rights, Garwood received another shock.

"I asked about my family. They said my mother had passed away. That really tore me up. She died without ever knowing if I was alive or dead," he said. "I was her pride and joy, so to speak. She worshipped me."

A steady diet of rice — "same thing, every day, no change" — and a combination of mental and physical torture pared 40 pounds from his frame, Garwood said.

Garwood claims he was not the only American GI left behind after the prisoners of war were released in 1973.

"I came back alive and not in a box or a body bag," he said. "That's proof to the American people that after the war, there are still Americans living in Vietnam."

When pressed about how many servicemen were involved, Garwood declined to answer, saying only, "I can honestly say there are no Americans living voluntarily in Vietnam."

The Defense Department officially lists 130 Americans missing in action in Vietnam and says there is no evidence any are alive.

Garwood said he managed to arrange his own release by slipping a note to someone who spoke English. "The note said, 'I am an American in Vietnam. Are you interested?' Then it had my name and serial number."

The Vietnamese finally released him because "the U.S. government twisted their arm," Garwood said. "I laid my life on the line. I didn't know if this guy was real or not. I took a chance. It came to the point that we took a lot of chances."

Illinois Attorney General Says Probe Politically Motivated

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott, indicted on five counts of income tax evasion, says the investigation against him is politically motivated, possibly by big business and other companies he has fought in court.

"They are going to try to divert me and try to keep me from being a candidate for the Senate, but I'm not going to let that happen," said Scott, who is seeking the Republican U.S. Senate nomination. "I've complied with every income tax law and every campaign law."

A federal grand jury charged Scott on Monday with "substantially" understating his adjusted gross income on personal income tax returns filed for the 1972 through 1975 tax years.

The indictment was announced by U.S. Attorney Thomas P. Sullivan. The 53-year-old Scott is to be arraigned next Monday before U.S. Magistrate Olga Jurco. Before then, he must surrender himself and post a $4,500 personal recognizance bond.

Sullivan would not comment on the indictment, but said he would prosecute the case personally.

The investigation into Scott's finances began about 18 months ago to determine if nearly $50,000 in campaign contributions, kept by Scott in a safety deposit box, had been used for personal purposes in violation of tax laws.

The maximum penalty on conviction is three years in prison and a $5,000 fine on each of the five counts.

Scott, the only man to be elected Illinois attorney general four times, first won the post in 1968. Under Illinois law, state officials may remain in office while under indictment.

Since 1968, Scott has led several anti-pollution battles in the courts, including the closing of nuclear and chemical waste dumps throughout the state.

His office counts as two of its biggest environmental victories court orders prohibiting the City of Milwaukee and U.S. Steel Corp. from polluting Lake Michigan.

Scott's office also was involved in prosecution of the Equity Fund insurance scandal and initially won a class-action, out-of-court settlement with General Motors after car buyers complained of Chevy engines in higher priced Oldsmobiles and Buicks. That settlement was later overturned on appeal.

Lettuce Firm Files Suit Against Farm Workers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The nation's largest lettuce grower has filed a $275 million damage suit against Cesar Chavez's striking United Farm Workers, charging the union with trying to shut down SunHarvest, Inc., through the use of violence.

Joe Herman, an attorney for Salinas-based lettuce company, said the suit charges "the UFW has abandoned its well-publicized commitment to non-violence in an effort to shut down the company's operations."

Herman said the suit was filed Monday in Superior Court in Kern County because that is where the union is based.

"The incidents involved in the suit occurred in Imperial, Monterey, Contra Costa and Fresno counties and in Arizona," Herman said. "It seems to us there should be a single lawsuit brought instead of separate suits filed in each county."

UFW spokesman Marc Grossman accused the company of "shopping around for a friendly court."

"Kern County is a notoriously anti-union county," Grossman said when reached by phone in Washington D.C. "The union categorically denies each of the allegations."

The UFW began its walkout against 11 major vegetable growers in California and Arizona on Jan. 19. The strike crippled harvesting of 40 percent of the nation's winter lettuce, nearly all of which comes from the Imperial Valley. The UFW has shifted its focus as the harvest season moves to central California.

Chavez, on a speaking tour in New York to seek support for the strike, said in a telephone interview Monday, "The growers charge us with violence, but no grower has been killed or shed any blood. It is our members who have been beaten and one member killed."

The suit seeks $25 million in compensatory damages for alleged damages and crop losses during the 11½-week strike, as well as $250 million in punitive damages.

On Monday, the UFW filed a counter-suit against SunHarvest, Inc., claiming that the company had violated the National Labor Relations Act by firing several workers who had joined the union during the strike.

The UFW also filed a suit against the state of California, claiming that the state had violated the National Labor Relations Act by allowing the growers to file for protection under the state's anti-strike laws.

The UFW also filed a suit against the state of California, claiming that the state had violated the National Labor Relations Act by allowing the growers to file for protection under the state's anti-strike laws.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB Save Cardboard To Make Crafts

By SHARI LEWIS
 It's hard to be a crafty kid nowadays. I mean, until the invention of the drip-dry, wrinkle-free, no-crumple, no-mess permanent press fabrics, men's shirts always came back from the laundry wrapped around a free treasure — a big perfectly perfect piece of stiff cardboard. As you know, lots of craft activities are based on cardboard.

Where's a kid to get cardboard now? Well, your surest bet is to buy posterboard at art supply stores, stationery stores and at some drug or dime stores.

Large cereal and soap boxes have good-size cardboard panels front and back. Inside, these panels are blank and can be drawn or painted upon. The bad news is this: cardboard from these boxes isn't very sturdy or stiff. However, there's good news, too: This stuff is easy to cut.

Sides from grocery cartons are useful but they are very hard to cut.

One small craft warning: Don't throw away used post cards. They are small but mighty and marvelous for making miniatures. And here's a source that my dad just discovered. If you want to make a set of cardboard cards, with, say, numbers or photographs on the face instead of hearts, clubs, spades or diamonds, you don't have to start from scratch. Take an incomplete deck (oh please! don't ruin a good deck), rub a fine steel-wool pad over the face of each card and the ink will come off, leaving you with a clean, smooth white card on which to draw.

Yesterday's Brain Twister: Several shots are heard. A voice says pleadingly, "Don't shoot me, John." When the police get into the room they find a lawyer, a doctor, an Army lieutenant and a milkman. A gun is on the floor. The police immediately arrest the milkman. What could there be about the lawyer, doctor and lieutenant that makes the police so sure that the milkman did the dastardly deed?

Answer: The lawyer, the doctor and the Army lieutenant are women. The only person who could be called John is the milkman.

Today's Brain Twister: Using the numbers 1 through 7 only once each, can you put one number in each circle so that any three circles in a row, connected by a line, add up to 12? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Spy Ship Witnesses Launching

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — As a suspected Soviet spy ship watched, a Trident missile made a submerged launch today from a submarine but was destroyed 30 seconds into the flight because it veered off course.

The spectacular explosion ordered by an Air Force Eastern Test Range safety officer at Cape Canaveral rocked the submarine, the Navy's Range Sentinel observer ship and the other vessel, thought to be Russian.

"It probably was a Russian intelligence collection ship," said Cmdr. Walter B. Davis, head of Navy Operational Test Support on the Range Sentinel.

The Navy said the submarine was shaken by the shock waves, but there was no damage and no injuries.

The Navy and Air Force both said they would have to study the launch before they could determine what went wrong with the first test at sea of the multiple-warhead Trident.

The launch was made 50 miles off Cape Canaveral instead of the usual 30-35 miles.

The launch was made at about 4 a.m. CST, about 10 minutes later than planned.

The Francis Scott Key was first of 12 Poseidon submarines to be converted for use with the Trident missile on patrol duty.

If the sea tests had gone well, the Trident would have become operational aboard the submarine this fall, a Navy spokesman said.

During the past two years the missile has been tested 18 times from land pads at Cape Canaveral on the Air Force Eastern Test Range.

The main advantage of the new Trident is its range.

TWA Cockpit Tape Reportedly Erased

DETROIT (AP) — The leader of a pilots' union says the tape recording of cockpit conversations among the crew of the TWA airliner that barrel-rolled twice and went into a dive has been erased, the Detroit News reported today.

The newspaper quoted John J. O'Donnell, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, as saying the 30-minute recording had been erased. The association represents most commercial airline pilots in the country.

"I do not know if it was erased intentionally or inadvertently during evacuation of the airplane," he said, according to the newspaper.

The News said a crew member had admitted erasing the tape without giving a logical reason for doing so.

Airline and other officials were not available early today to comment on the News report.

Harvey Gibson of Las Vegas, the pilot of the Boeing 727 bound from New York to Minneapolis last Wednesday, managed to bring the plane under control during its five-mile dive over Flint by lowering the landing gear. He made an emergency landing at Detroit's Metropolitan Airport.

Federal investigators said the plane appeared to have exceeded the speed of sound in its dive — apparently the first airliner not designed for it to do so and survive.

The cockpit recorder takes down crew conversation on a 30-minute loop of tape.

Newspapers Join Battle For Paintings

BOSTON (AP) — "Free George and Martha" the Washington Post proclaimed. "Keep the Washingtons in Boston," pleaded the Boston Globe. Compromise, opined The New York Times, declaring that the couple should hang in New York.

Invoking American history, the human-rights issue and regional chauvinism, the three newspapers have joined an intractable battle for Gilbert Stuart's unfinished portraits of George and Martha Washington.

The city of Boston, charging that Washington bureaucrats are "plundering the landscape," went to court Monday to prevent the Boston Athenaeum, a private library, from selling the famous portraits to the National Portrait Gallery.

The New York Times entered the fray today when it suggested what it called a compromise. The newspaper said in an editorial that the portraits, which presently reside at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, should hang midway between Washington and Boston — specifically, in New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

As a precedent for its proposal, The Times cited the compromise northern and southern politicians reached in 1790 to place the nation's capital on the banks of the Potomac River.

On Monday, the Washington Post, in an editorial appearing under a headline saying "Free George and Martha," called the dispute a human-rights issue.

"... this portrait sale is a human-rights issue — a human-replica rights issue, at any rate — and that the Washingtons must be set free," it said. "They do in fact belong here; Martha certainly, but George even more so. For one thing, the portraits are unfinished; and what could be more appropriate for this town than the symbol of eternally unfinished work?"

The International Air Traffic Authority was created in 1944 to regulate world air traffic.

Body Identified In Gacy Case

MORRIS, Ill. (AP) — Authorities have identified the body of a 15-year-old boy whose disappearance touched off an investigation that led to the arrest of John Gacy Jr., a suspect in the sex slayings of 33 young men and boys.

A forensic odontologist Monday night identified through X-rays the corpse of Robert Piest, which had been found earlier in the day at the Dresden Locks along the Illinois River southwest of Chicago.

Authorities said that meanwhile, piecemeal demolition of Gacy's ranch-style home in unincorporated Norwood Park Township northwest of Chicago was slated to proceed today. Twenty-nine bodies had been discovered at the home.

An Illinois Appellate Court cleared the way Monday by denying a request from Gacy's attorney to block a lower court ruling allowing the demolition to continue. The structure already has been partly razed because of extensive excavation in search of bodies.

Piest had been missing since Dec. 11. Gacy, 37, was charged with his murder and six other young men whose remains had been identified. Authorities said that Gacy will remain charged with Piest's murder although cause of death has not been determined.

PROUD ARTISTS — Students at McWhorter Elementary School display pictures they have colored for the Update/Lubbock Arts Festival "color the bird" contest. Thursday is the deadline for entrants. DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I'm 29, married and mixed up. All my life I was a fat girl with a pretty face, but a good man fell in love with me and married me.

Two years ago I took off 55 pounds. I love myself thin, but now I've got problems I never had before.

Men started noticing me. I got involved with a man at work who gave me a line I was dumb enough to fall for. ("Divorce your husband and marry me.") Well, I asked my husband for a divorce — confessed everything, and then the other guy backed off. The rat! I felt like two cents. Thank God, my husband forgave me.

Then I got involved with a married neighbor who had a reputation for fooling around. In the middle of that affair I started up another, with a salesman, younger than myself, who calls on our office.

Abby, I never had these problems when I was fat. I don't want to be fat again, but the "new me" is so weak and trumpy I can't stand to live with myself. Please help me.

Thin and mixed up

Dear Thin: You apparently still think of yourself as the "fat girl no man would want." You need to keep proving to yourself that you're desirable. Get some counseling and become acquainted with the real you. I think you'll like her. (A real "tramp" wouldn't feel guilty.)

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married soon and have found just the place I want to get married. It's a beautiful empty field on the Pacific Coast Highway overlooking the ocean.

Do I have to find out who owns that property and get permission to get married there? Or does it matter?

Loves nature

DEAR ABBY: My 24-year-old daughter has made a decision that is breaking my heart. I honestly wonder if she's in her right mind.

At 16 she was married because she was pregnant, and now she has seven children. The last two are identical twin girls born only five days ago. She and her husband have decided to keep one of the twins, and give the other up for adoption. Abby, can you believe this? Their reason is so terrible that I'm almost ashamed to tell you.

One of the twins was born with a club foot and a cleft palate. The other twin is perfect. Both are beautiful and otherwise healthy. They want to keep the perfect one and give the other away. The thought of separating these twin babies makes me sick.

I've tried to tell my daughter that the club foot and cleft palate can be corrected with surgery, but she says that six children are all they can afford.

I offered to take the defective baby, but she says it would create problems to have her in the family. She's already contacted an adoption agency, and the childless couple is waiting to adopt the twin.

Can you help me? Please hurry.

Clip 'n' Cook

COCONUT FRIED SHRIMPS

1/2 cup frozen grated coconut
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
1 lb. uncooked shrimps, shelled and cleaned
1 egg, slightly beaten
Fat for frying
Lemon wedges (optional)

Mix first four ingredients. Dip shrimps in egg, then roll in coconut mixture. Heat 1 inch fat in skillet to 375 degrees. Add shrimps and fry 3-4 minutes or until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper. Serve with lemon wedges, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Dear Granny: Urge your daughter to see a psychiatrist. She may be suffering from a temporary depression from which she will recover.

However, should your daughter to through with the adoption, it will not be final for a year. But should she reconsider in the meantime, what a cruel ordeal for the adoptive parents!

ORANGE HOT CROSS BUNS

1 1/2 cup orange juice
1/2 cup soft butter or margarine
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. salt
2 pkgs. active dry yeast
3 eggs
1 cup light raisins
1 tsp. grated orange rind
4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour

Glaze:
Heat 3/4 cup orange juice until hot. Pour over softened butter, sugar, cinnamon and salt in a large bowl. Cool to lukewarm.

Warm remaining 1/2 cup orange juice. Dissolve yeast in warm juice. Add to the butter mixture with eggs. Mix well. Add raisins and grated rind.

Gradually beat in enough flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto a floured surface and knead until smooth. Place in a large greased bowl. Cover and let rise in a warm place until double, about 2 hours.

Punch down and turn onto a floured surface. Shape the dough into 18 round balls. Place on 2 greased baking sheets. Cover and let rise until double, about 1 hour. With scissors or a razor blade, cut a cross on the top of each bun.

Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or until golden brown. Remove to a rack and cool slightly. Drizzle glaze over top of each bun. Makes 18 buns.

GLAZE: 1 cup confectioners' sugar, 1 tsp. boiling water. In a small mixing bowl, stir sugar and water until creamy.

QUICHE LORRAINE

1 tbsp. soft butter or margarine
1 9-inch unbaked pastry shell, well chilled
12 bacon slices
4 eggs
2 cups heavy cream
1/4 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. nutmeg
1/2 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. hot pepper sauce
1 cup (4 oz.) grated Swiss cheese

Spread butter over surface of unbaked pastry shell. Cook bacon until lightly browned. Drain on absorbent paper. Crumble into small pieces.

Beat together eggs, cream, salt, nutmeg, sugar and enough pepper sauce just long enough to mix thoroughly. Sprinkle pastry shell with bacon and cheese. Pour in cream mixture.

Bake in 425-degree oven 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 300 degrees and bake 40 minutes or until point of knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serve at once. Makes 6 main-dish or 12 appetizer servings.

FIT FOR A QUEEN — This lovely Easter basket especially created for a special mother and wife accented with a yarn bow and Easter pin, that can later be worn on a coat or blouse. Items in the basket include soap balls, bath beads, a cookie cutter, a box of note papers and two special Easter cards.

Easter Baskets Delight Any Age

NEW YORK (Special) — Baskets are to Easter what trees are to Christmas. They're one of the holiday's most popular customs.

Easter baskets are usually the home of colorful eggs and chocolate bunnies, but a thoughtful touch can be added by including a few small gifts personally selected for a special someone.

Such Easter baskets can be elaborate or simple and can cost anywhere from $5 to $50, says Marie Smith, card designer.

"You begin with the basics — an Easter basket of some sort and Easter grass, which is sold in most card shops or stationery departments of department stores," she says. "what you put in it depends on whose basket it is."

Miss Smith constructed two baskets as examples, one for a child and another for a mother, wife or sweetheart. Following are her suggestions.

CHILD'S BASKET — Take a basic Easter basket and decorate it with a large colorful bow.

Fill the basket with Easter grass and include such small gifts as a finger puppet, a bath mitt in the shape of a bunny's head, cookies made with Easter cookie cutters, an animal-shaped party favor and an Easter coloring book. A felt coin purse shaped like a bunny's head also makes a fun (and useful) gift. Accent the basket with a few colored eggs decorated with pressure-sensitive seals.

Miss Smith notes that these items can be put in a basket before the child goes on an egg hunt, or can be hidden along with the eggs as special surprises.

WOMAN'S BASKET — A variety of baskets can be used to make a woman's gift. "You don't have to stick with the traditional Easter basket, Miss Smith says. "You may want to use large bread baskets, sewing baskets or decorative baskets, all of which can be used for another purpose later and can be a part of the Easter gift."

After a basket is chosen, fill it with Easter grass. Instead of eggs, use pastel-colored soap balls. Other small items to include are a box of note paper, a packet of bath beads and Easter cookie cutters. Tuck in a special Easter card so she'll know who gave the gift.

Miss Smith suggests that the woman's basket be decorated with a lovely pastel bow made from yarn gift tie. A small Easter decorative pin makes a striking center for the bow.

"No matter what gifts are selected to go in the basket," Miss Smith says, "the recipient will appreciate the thoughtfulness behind them."

Program Offers Hope For Sex Offenders

GALVESTON (Special) — To strangers he is known only as John.

Outwardly, John gives no appearance of being a person who has something to hide. He's average height, has short, wavy hair and long sideburns, a thin mustache and a slight paunch that rests comfortably on top of his belt, and he talks with that familiar East Texas drawl — nothing to distinguish him from a million other Texans.

A closer inspection reveals much of the same nondescript appearance. He works as a truck driver, has a wife and two children and enjoys basketball, family outings and chaperoning his daughter's Brownie troop on field trips. He smiles frequently and speaks easily in straightforward sentences, while maintaining continual eye contact.

But John has a very secret side to his life, which separates him from most other men. John is a child molester.

He was the first man to enroll in The University of Texas Medical Branch treatment program for sex offenders when the program was begun approximately two years ago. He still receives weekly 400-milligram doses (maximum dosage) of medroxyprogesterone acetate to lower his sex drive, and he travels monthly to Galveston from his nearby home to receive psychotherapy. He began the program shortly after his parole from the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville, having spent four years at TDC as a convicted child molester.

Now 32 years old, John can't remember how long he had been molesting children before he was arrested. He gives the age of 17 as his official starting date.

"That's when it became a felony," he said.

When John entered the UTMB treatment program, he was molesting children on what seemed like a daily basis during some weeks. He can't recall exactly how often he would pull a child into his car and drive to a secluded area.

"All I remember is that I was doing it pretty often," he said. "If anyone ever needed to be caught, I did."

John said that since entering the UTMB treatment program he has learned more about the reasons for his illegal activities. He said he realizes now that his actions resulted from his inability to cope with stress in other aspects of his life — marital and family stress, work stress, social stress.

"I never learned to express my anger appropriately," he said. "Some people release their anger and frustration by jogging or even yelling at each other, but I released mine by snatching a kid. It was very impulsive. I never thought about what I was doing or the consequences; I just did it. That's one reason the cops couldn't keep up with me. There was no real reason or pattern to my acts."

"At first, I felt a lot of guilt for a day or two after committing an offense, but by the time I was arrested, I was able to repress those feelings. I was obsessed, sick. I had absolutely no control over my actions."

John said he never molested a boy or girl he knew; the victims always were strangers. He would drive to neighborhoods as far as 20 miles from his home, usually to an area of new construction. The areas usually were sparsely populated, and children often played at the construction sites, away from their parents' supervision.

He carried a .45-caliber automatic handgun on the seat beside him. When he had picked out a victim, he would drive beside the child, open the car door and point the gun at the youngster. If John came upon a group of children he would select one from the group and tell the others to keep quiet if they wanted to see their friend alive again.

"Usually I would pick out a younger kid from a group," he said. "The older kids usually felt protective toward the young ones. Besides, they respected that gun. I knew they wouldn't tell anyone what happened."

John would drive to a wooded or secluded area and stay with his victim 20 minutes to an hour. When he was finished, he would push the child out the door and drive off.

As if realizing a contradiction with what he had said earlier, John smiled sheepishly and looked into his coffee cup, sloshing the coffee from side to side.

"That sounds premeditated," he said. "If you ever read about something like that, I didn't do it."

A 12-year-old female victim, who had the presence of mind to note the license plate of John's car, finally led to his arrest. Looking back on his arrest, John said he is thankful for the little girl's memory.

"She not only saved my life, but she probably saved someone else's, too," he said. "I don't think I could have used that gun on a child, but I know I wouldn't have hesitated to use it if I had been confronted by an adult. The only time I did use it was to put two slugs in the engine of someone who was stupid enough to chase me."

Like a reformed alcoholic, John said he realizes he is not cured and may never be cured.

"The urges are still there," he said. "The difference is control. The medication gives me control. It's like insulin for a diabetic: I'll have to take it forever."

"There are still times when I think I can't control myself. Weekends and holidays are really rough: I'm not at work, and they (the children) are not in school. When I feel that kind of an urge, I go somewhere and... (masturbate). I'm not proud of that, but it's a lot better than driving off somewhere and snatching a kid. It's acceptable for an alcoholic to fall off the wagon every once in a while, but if I slip even once, I can go to prison without any chance for parole."

John's wife has remained with him throughout his prison stay and treatment program. She gave birth to their son while John was in prison. He said both of his children know he was in prison, but they don't know why.

"They're at the stage where they're starting to ask a lot of questions," said John. "I know that someday they're going to ask me why I went to prison, and it might be pretty soon. But when they do ask, I'll tell them. I don't know how I feel about that, but I think I have to be honest with them."

John's current employer does not know of his history. But John said he fully expects the employer to learn during a routine reference or credit check. He has to call in sick to make his monthly trips to Galveston.

"When the time comes (for the employer to learn), I'll face it," he said. "If it means going to another job, making a lateral move, then that's what I'll do."

Having two children of his own, John often participates in activities with other children. On these occasions, he makes certain another adult is present.

"Another adult is my security, even if it's my wife," he said. "I feel more in control of myself. I have a very strong liking for children, and I enjoy working with them. But now I'm around kids only in controlled situations, because there still are times when my liking becomes sexual."

"If a kid ever tells someone that I've fondled him, I've had it, even if I didn't do it. I'm on my way to prison for the rest of my life."

Not surprisingly, John is cautious about assessing his future. He is proud of the control he has developed over his actions, but he wonders aloud about his ability to handle the obstacles he must continue to face.

"The treatment program has given me a new outlook on life," he said. "I know I'll never reach the upper echelons of management, but I also know I am capable of doing more than driving a truck. It's going to be a long, hard fight, and there will be some setbacks. Those setbacks will be my crises, and everything will be riding on my ability to handle those situations."

Dear Omar:
Thanks for the good wishes on the occasion of my birthday last month. As I grow older, I discover more and more solace in the memories of yesteryear.

Finding myself in a pensive mood the other day, I dug into my album and unearthed this hand. It was played many years ago in a major championship event, when I was paired with my favorite partner, Helen Sobel.

The bidding was identical at the two tables in our match. Both Norths felt they were too strong to open one

DART TEAM

KINETON, England (WNS) — The darts team of Halfway House used to be low in the league standing when it was run by mere males, but now it is the champion of the Winchcombe League because 55-year-old grandmother Gwen Knapp is its coach and captain. "My men don't dare to let me down," said Mrs. Knapp. "I tend to get weepy when we lose, and that embarrasses everybody, especially my husband Les." Les Knapp has only one complaint about the coach: "I don't get to play regularly any more because Gwen fears she might be accused of favoritism."

no trump, and both leaped to game after South bid one no trump over East's interference.

The opening lead was the same — the jack of spades. Both declarers won in hand and came to the conclusion that the ninth trick had to come from the club suit. In addition, both realized that West had to be kept off lead to prevent another spade from being led through the queen.

Both declarers led a club at trick two. At one table, West followed low and declarer inserted dummy's eight. Now spades could not be attacked, and when clubs broke 3-3 declarer had nine tricks.

At our table, Helen was West and I was East. Helen made no mistake. As soon as declarer put a club on the table, Helen played the ten. Declarer could not afford to duck, so he won the ace in dummy.

It would have been easy for me to be lulled into a false sense of security. Had I played low, declarer would still have made his contract. He would have led a club from the table and, if I put up the queen, I would have been allowed to win the trick; if I followed low, declarer would take the king and then throw me in with the queen. But I killed that quickly by dropping the queen under the ace. Now there was no way for declarer to come to more than eight tricks without first letting Helen gain the lead for the killing spade continuation.

Sincerely,
Charlie

Clip 'n' Cook

BANANA DESSERT SOUFFLE

Butter
Sugar
2 cups sliced bananas
(2 to 3 med. bananas)
6 eggs, separated
2 tbsps all-purpose flour
2 tbsps butter, melted
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. vanilla
¼ tsp. cream of tartar
Rum Sauce

Butter and sugar bottom and sides of 1½-quart souffle dish. Make 4-inch band of triple-thickness aluminum foil long enough to go around dish and overlap 2 inches. Lightly butter 1 side of band and sprinkle with sugar. Wrap around outside of dish with sugared side in. Fasten with paper clip or string. Collar should extend 2 inches above rim of dish. Set aside. Measure bananas into blender container. Cover and blend at high speed until mashed, about 30 seconds. Scrape sides of container with rubber spatula if necessary. Add egg yolks, flour, butter, lemon juice and vanilla. Cover and blend at high speed until thoroughly blended, about 30 seconds. Set aside. In large mixing bowl beat egg whites and cream of tartar at high speed until foamy. Add sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating constantly until sugar is dissolved and whites are glossy and stand in soft peaks. Gently but thoroughly fold yolk-banana mixture into whites. Carefully pour into prepared dish. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven until puffy, delicately browned and souffle shakes slightly when oven rack is gently moved back and forth, 30 to 35 minutes. Carefully remove foil band. Serve immediately with Rum Sauce.

Rum Sauce:
¼ cup sugar
4 tps. cornstarch
½ cup water
2 tbsps. butter

In small saucepan combine sugar and cornstarch. Blend in water and rum. Cook, stirring constantly, over medium heat until bubbly. Remove from heat and stir in butter until melted.

PAPAYAS

Now that papayas are widely available, you may want to serve them at a company brunch. You can offer them as a first-course fruit, pared and cut in wedges, with accompanying wedges of lemon or lime.

Residents Kept From Homes As Crews Clean Up Wreck

CRESTVIEW, Fla. (AP) — About 1,500 Florida Panhandle residents were kept from their homes for a third consecutive day as disaster crews tackled the ticklish chore of uprighting wrecked railroad tankers laden with deadly chemicals.

And Crestview Fire Chief Dalton Brannon said it might be another three or four days before the last of the volatile cars are righted, and it is safe to return.

Some anhydrous ammonia still trickled from one car, the main health hazard was posed in placing fallen tankers in an upright position.

"As long as the chemicals are there, there is always a possibility that something could get out of hand," Brannon said after several crippled tankers had been put back on the tracks.

Twenty-eight tank cars derailed Sunday morning as a 116-car Louisville & Nashville train passed through a sparsely populated area four miles west of this city of 10,000 in the Florida Panhandle.

An estimated 4,500 area residents were evacuated from their homes Sunday, but 3,000 returned by Monday. Brannon said the last 1,500 who live within a 20-square-mile area around the accident scene would not be allowed to go home until the danger has cleared.

Gov. Bob Graham viewed the jumbled wreckage from a helicopter Monday and told reporters, "It's intolerable that a railroad company would operate in the state with trackage that doesn't insure public safety."

Graham said he wants to reverse L&N's record of train accidents in northwestern Florida and promised to investigate what legal alternatives he has to help protect the lives of Panhandle residents.

Last May, a similar derailment on the other side of Crestview prompted a smaller evacuation. And in Youngstown, Fla., about 75 miles away, eight persons died when an Atlanta & St. Andrews Bay train derailed last year.

Sunday's accident occurred two days after a decision was reached by the Federal Railroad Administration and the L&N over the FRA's right to impose strict sanctions on the transport of hazardous cargo by the railroad.

FRA chief counsel Raymond K. James said the federal agency agreed on Friday to an L&N request to lift emergency federal sanctions on the stretch of track in Florida where the mishap occurred. Both the railroad and federal inspectors had examined the track in the past month.

"A number of track defects were corrected. By and large it wasn't one of their worst stretches of track. They try to keep it in pretty good shape," he said.

Asked whether poor inspections might be to blame for the accident, James said, "Of course we're going to look at that, but even so, the emergency order wouldn't prevent all accidents. You have to play the percentages. They just happen to have an accident where they seemed less likely to have one."

Gonzales Murder Trial Opens In District Court

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The murder trial of a 19-year-old Lubbock opened today while the one of a 27-year-old Lubbock woman was drawing to a close.

Ignacio Gonzales Jr. of 308 35th St., No. 8, went on trial in 99th District Court in the May 13, 1978, shooting and multiple stabbing death of 60-year-old Carlos Herrera at New Deal.

Gonzales originally was charged with capital murder in early January after a seven-month investigation by Lubbock County sheriff's officers.

The charge recently was reduced to murder, which means the death penalty will not be considered, and one of three co-defendants charged with aggravated robbery in the incident, Irene Rios Gonzales, 22, was scheduled to testify this afternoon.

Herrera was found dead at his New Deal home with one bullet wound in his chest and more than 20 stab wounds.

Everett Seymour and Jim Darnell are prosecuting, and George Thompson is the court-appointed defense attorney.

In 72nd District Court, the murder charge against Dimples Walker of 3402 E. Cornell St. in the Dec. 17 stabbing death of Charles McGee, 30, at an East Main Street club was expected to go to the jury this afternoon.

A witness to the fatal stabbing testified Monday that McGee thought he merely had been struck, not stabbed, a minute before he died.

Leon Hall, former operator of the club, said McGee and Miss Walker were sitting nearby while Hall was playing pool just before the stabbing.

Hall said McGee got up suddenly and asked, "What did you hit me for?"

McGee then realized he had been stabbed in the chest, Hall said, and staggered into the pool table before collapsing against a wall.

The witness said he saw Miss Walker with a knife in her hand, and he said she left the club immediately after the stabbing.

Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford, prosecuting the case, asked all prospective jurors Monday morning if they "could consider the full range of punishment" for the charge, which is five to 99 years or life in the penitentiary.

Attorney Lane Arthur is defending Miss Walker.

Clements To Tour Roloff Youth Homes

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements gets a chance to see for himself today how controversial evangelist Lester Roloff operates his youth homes.

The governor has scheduled a get-acquainted tour of two facilities in between building dedications at Corpus Christi State University and an evening banquet of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

The two homes are among six Roloff institutions being investigated by the attorney general for possible violation of state licensing regulations.

"He (Clements) decided it wouldn't be a bad idea to take a look at them — see what they looked like; see how they operate," Jon Ford, the governor's press secretary, said Monday in Austin.

He said a group of prominent South Texans would accompany Clements on the afternoon tour of the Rebekah Home for Girls and the Lighthouse School for Boys.

"All they're going to do is go through the schools," Ford said. "They'll be looking over the facilities."

He said Roloff extended the invitation to Clements after learning the Corpus Christi trip was scheduled.

The tour was planned several weeks before the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported in a copyright story that five girls said they tried to stab another girl to death at the Rebekah Home.

Roloff did not report the stabbing to the authorities but administered paddings and solitary confinement as punishment, the newspaper said.

Nueces County District Attorney Bill Mobley said Monday he will ask a grand jury to investigate. Mobley said he was "shocked that something this serious and severe went unreported."

Roloff had introduced five girls March 29 at an Austin rally for legislation to exempt from state licensing child care institutions operated by religious organizations. Clements attended to extend an official welcome to Austin and met the evangelist for the first time.

The governor was on stage when Roloff told the crowd, "They (the five girls) stole a butcher knife. Only the Lord stopped them."

Roloff said he told the girls to "get me the best board you've got ... and I gave them a good thrashing."

The governor declared his support for the legislation the morning after the rally.

"I support what Roloff is doing in his schools and I am going to support the bill to correct this inequity," Clements said.

About 4,000 fundamentalist Christians at the rally heard the evangelist proclaim: "Austin, Texas — especially Capitol Hill — has had a facelifting."

Roloff said he sent out more than 50,000 letters last fall urging Clements' election over former Attorney General John Hill.

Hill won several court decisions that Roloff's homes must be licensed.

Roloff said state licensing of religious facilities violates the constitutional separation of church and state.

Housing Authority To Decide Whether To Allow Plan Study

By RHONA SCHWARTZ

Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Housing Authority will decide Thursday whether to allow two Houston investment firms to study implementation of a proposed mortgage bond program for low and moderate income families here.

Chris Baker, of Underwood, Neuhaus & Company of Houston told some 20 local developers, financiers and lenders at a public meeting Monday that the bond program "would allow low and moderate-income folks who have good credit histories and (who) pay their bills a chance to buy a home."

The loan program would be a "home rule, self-determination program which would be structured and developed by local lenders, building contractors and real estate agencies," he said, adding that the Lubbock Housing Authority would offer these bonds for sale.

Baker's presentation, at times hotly debated by members of the audience, stressed the point that the proposed revenue bond program would be issued under state law and would not affect the credit rating of the City of Lubbock should the bonds default.

"This is not a government welfare giveaway program," Baker explained. "It has nothing to do with the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Washington or the federal government.

"The only magic in the program is that the housing authority would issue tax-exempt bonds at a lower interest rate," Baker said. "Instead of money being available at 9 7/8 percent it will become available at 8 percent or 8 1/4 percent."

Under the proposed program, loans would be available for the purchase of existing housing, new construction or housing rehabilitation.

The program, Baker stressed, is for that "section of society between $12,000 and $25,000 who are systematically eliminated from ever being able to own a home because the interest rates are so high."

"We (the firms Underwood, Neuhaus & Company and Rauscher, Pierce, Refines Inc.) feel issuance of the bonds should be put out on a competitive bidding basis at the local level," he said. "The selection of the trustee and custodian (those who receive the bond proceeds and who will be responsible for them) will be left up to the (local) housing authority, local lenders and the Board of Commissioners."

The two Houston firms, Baker said, will buy the bonds and the housing authority will issue them under a provision of the Texas Housing Act. All mortgage lenders could participate in the program if they qualify.

Banks who participate in servicing the loans will not have that loan money in their banks, Baker said, adding that to do so would create a conflict of interest.

The strength of the program, he said, lies in the reputation and integrity of the mortgagees.

The loan program is not geared to compete with local savings and loan associations, he said, because the bonds would be sold at a tax-exempt rate.

The program, which Baker said has been in existence many years and already is in operation in 41 states, has run into some problems in the past but most of these will be corrected with passage of legislation now in the state House and Senate.

Officials Say Diesel Shortage Does Exist

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Oil and gas executives report a diesel fuel shortage definitely exists, but they apparently don't have any solution to the problem that has idled tractors in west Texas fields.

Meanwhile, a state official reports 6 million gallons of diesel allocated through the state's set-aside program for emergency situations last month were returned to producers because of a distribution problem.

And a Texaco executive contends the shortage is being worsened because farmers are storing up the fuel.

In any case, none of the major oil and gas company executives attending Monday's hearing before the Subcommittee on Diesel Fuel Shortages in Agriculture made any concessions or new recommendations for solving the problem that has critically hampered the planting season in west Texas and the Panhandle.

"I can't speak for the industry, but we are in a very deep crisis," said Bob Heard of Diamond Shamrock Corporation.

Fred Hanson of Southern Union blamed the crude shortage plus inflexibility of government policies as the reason for the diesel shortage.

Nicholas Murphy, of the Governor's Office of Energy Resources, said a distribution problem was the reason 6 million gallons of diesel allocated under the state's set-aside program were returned to producers last month.

He noted under the federal set-aside program where producers set aside 4 percent of their monthly diesel production for emergency diesel allocations, the law requires all unused diesel be returned to the producer for his use.

R. R. Dickenson of Texaco said he believed the problem was created by "the psychology of shortage" and blamed farmers he said were storing excess diesel.

"This is scaring a lot of people in Texas," Dickenson said. "Everyone is trying to keep their tanks full and this is pulling the refineries right down."

But Short denied Dickenson's allegations.

"Nothing has come through my office about that psychology thing of farmers storing up," Short said. "These farmers have to buy with borrowed money and they wouldn't store up while their having to pay interest on this borrowed money."

The oil executives cited shortages of rail cars, inavailability of transport trucks to carry the diesel from areas of adequate diesel to shortage areas and a lack of refineries to refine foreign crude into diesel as additional reasons for the shortage.

Farmers and agriculture representatives met with the subcommittee last month to explain their concerns and offer recommendations to ease the diesel crisis.

Federal Agent Testifies In Cuevas Trial

HOUSTON (AP) — An FBI agent says he saw a gun beside the leg of convict Ignacio Cuevas during an escape attempt at the Texas State Prison in Huntsville in 1974.

FBI Agent Robert E. Wiatt testified Monday in the trial of Cuevas, charged with causing the death of a hostage in the attempted escape from the prison's Walls Unit.

Inmates Fred Carrasco and Rudolph Dominguez and hostages Julia Standley and Elizabeth Beseda were killed when the inmates tried to force their way out of the prison using the hostages as shields in front of moveable shields made of books and chalkboards.

Cuevas was convicted in 1975 of causing the death of Mrs. Standley but the Texas Criminal Court of Appeals granted a new trial claiming the trial judge failed to disqualify a juror.

Wiatt said he attempted to charge the shield and knock it over "but I saw two pinpoints of light that suddenly turned into two bright flashes like the sun. I started falling backwards and realized I had been hit."

Wiatt also testified he heard two muffled shots behind the shield and "when I looked at the scene after the shield had been toppled over, it looked like a slaughterhouse, and I saw gore and saw blood."

"I saw a gun by the leg of Cuevas and a gun in the hand of another convict who had half of his face shot away."

While Wiatt testified, Cuevas' wife and four children listened.

As the day's testimony started, Cuevas reached over the rail and gave his children a handcarved plastic case with pictures of the children encircling what appeared to be a newspaper picture of Cuevas.

Mrs. Cuevas said she lives in Pecos and exists on welfare payments.

"I am only hoping for the best," she said. "It has been a long time he has been in jail. But we get along. You have to live as life is. There is nothing else to do."

EXPENSIVE MACHINERY
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Costs of machinery continue to be one of the most important factors affecting farmers, according to recent surveys by the Agriculture Department. As of mid-March, the price index for tractors and self-propelled machinery was 280 percent of what it averaged in 1967, a year used as a base to compare how prices have changed. Prices of other machinery averaged 284 percent on the same index scale.

Outcome Of Election Remains Undecided

FORT WORTH (AP) — Final determination of who will become mayor of Fort Worth could rest with a handful of voters who had written off both candidates on the ballot.

Write-in votes cast in Saturday's hotly contested mayor's race could reduce Councilman Woodie Woods' apparent winning percentage enough to force a runoff with incumbent Mayor Hugh Parmer.

Unofficial returns indicate Woods won a stunning upset over Parmer by the razor-thin margin of 23 votes.

But Parmer requested a recount Monday and announced he would remain in office until the question is settled.

"It is 24 write-in votes we cast, Mr. Woods did not receive the required half the votes plus one," said Parmer.

Twenty write-in votes for other candidates were found Monday during a review of the vote tally sheets.

"With only a three vote difference in an election where 31,000 votes were cast, I think it's necessary that all the machines are rechecked," said Parmer.

"In the course of the last two days we have discovered write-in votes were not tabulated in many of the precincts. I expect there are as many write-in votes out there in those machines as were counted today at city hall," said Parmer.

Parmer handed a written request for the recount over to City Secretary Jack Green during Monday's city council session.

City Attorney Arthur Petersen said in his opinion the mayor's written request interrupts the vote canvass. And he said state law prohibits declaring the results of an election until the canvass is complete.

Swearing in ceremonies for city officials elected Saturday was scheduled for Monday, but Parmer said they would be postponed until the recount is completed.

"My interest is to find the true outcome of this election," said Parmer.

But Woods called the request "an act of desperation. He panicked when his power structure could not produce the results they thought were there."

"I have no problem with a recount, in fact I encourage it," Woods said. "But why did we have to wait two days? It's beyond human comprehension."

Parmer said the recount request was not based on possible "irregularities" he reported earlier at several key precincts. But Parmer said Monday if the needed write-in votes did not surface in the recount, "I might want to go to court on these irregularities."

Salinas' Bill Faces Vote

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Lubbock bars that discriminate against patrons on the basis of race, religion or national origin may have more to contend with than just a Lubbock city ordinance.

The House Monday gave tentative approval to a bill by Rep. Froy Salinas, Lubbock, empowering the Alcoholic Beverage Commission to suspend or cancel liquor licenses of clubs finally convicted of state, federal or municipal laws prohibiting discrimination and protecting civil rights.

Salinas, who said the bill was priority legislation requested by the city, complained that recent ID checks by some Lubbock clubs indicated clear discrimination against blacks and Mexican-Americans.

"The problem was that the ABC (Alcoholic Beverage Commission) didn't have any authority. The city has an ordinance, but I think this will hit them where it really hurts," said Salinas.

After one more House vote, the bill goes to the Senate, where a companion bill by Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka has already received committee approval.

Tech Students Place First

A team of Texas Tech advertising students has placed first in competition sponsored by the 10th District of the American Advertising Federation.

The competition is designed to challenge student teams from colleges and universities in the 15 districts of the AAF to use the marketing/advertising case study of a national product and develop a marketing plan, advertising campaign and media strategy. Specific challenges and goals must be met.

The students work together as an advertising agency to prepare a 30-minute presentation outlining a marketing program. Students also must submit a 50-page book to document their plans.

The winning team in each district will represent its school before a panel of five national judges at finals in Washington, D.C., in June.

Faculty advisor for the Texas Tech team is Ronald D. Geskey, advertising lecturer in the mass communications department.

Felony Prostitution Charge Filed

A 25-year-old Carlisle woman Monday was charged with aggravated promotion of prostitution as a result of police raids on alleged houses of prostitution in the Carlisle area near Lubbock last week.

The felony charge was filed against Linda Fay Gillman.

Misdemeanor prostitution charges have been filed against a number of other women arrested in the raids.

Slaton Farmer Robbed While Leaving Club

A Slaton farmer and a Lubbock pizza delivery man found themselves victims of robbers in separate incidents early this morning.

Charlie Richard Walker, 29, of Slaton said he was leaving a club in the 1700-block of Fourth Street about 1:45 a.m. when he was confronted by three Mexican-American men, who robbed him of his car keys and wallet containing $50 cash.

Walker told police his troubles were heightened after the holdup when he almost got into a fight with the club's bartender, who allegedly refused to call police for the victim.

Walker said he had gotten to his car, which was parked behind the nightclub, when he was jumped by the three suspects. He said one of the men pulled a switchblade knife and cut his head. However, reports indicate the victim was not hurt seriously.

After taking Walker's wallet and keys, the men reportedly jumped in their 1976-77 white and red Grand Prix and drove north on Avenue R. Walker could describe only one of his attackers — a tall, muscular man wearing a yellow coat and dark pants.

After the assault, Walker reportedly went back into the club and asked the bartender to call police. The employee allegedly refused, saying he did not want any police in his club. Walker said he then went to a pay phone inside the business and notified authorities.

About 1 1/2 hours before that holdup, James Wayne Nelms, 19, a delivery man for a local pizza parlor, called police and said two masked men had just robbed him of $35 at Sixth Street and Avenue S.

Nelms, of 1617 Ave. N, No. 11, said he was taking an order to a apartment near the intersection. But when he could not find the apartment he went back to his car, where he was met by the masked bandits, both wearing blue coats and jeans and white shoes. He described them as short and of medium build.

Reports indicate the suspects, armed with bats, walked up behind Nelms, one of them saying, "We want your money, boy." After the delivery man handed over a money bag containing $35, the bandits walked east down an alley, according to police.

A 17-year-old girl told police a man assaulted her early Monday morning, after the suspect had offered her a ride home and bought her a hamburger.

The Dunbar High School senior said she and a girlfriend had accepted a ride home by the black man from a club about 1:45 a.m. Monday. She said that after letting her friend off, the man asked if she would like to get something to eat.

Reports indicate the couple purchased some hamburgers, and after that, the man began trying to kiss the girl. When the girl resisted, the man allegedly told her she should give him "something" because he had bought her some food.

The student said she told the man to take her home, that she didn't want to eat. She said the man assured her that they could eat at his house, and that she would be safe because his wife was there.

The girl said when they got to his residence, he left the lights off and tried to push her onto the bed and tear off her clothes. She said she fought the man off, and finally convinced him to take her home, where she called police.

A prisoner who escaped from a federal penitentiary near El Paso was last seen either late Sunday or early Monday morning in Lubbock, according to Department of Public Safety officials.

Donald R. Lavash Jr., 28, a New Mexico resident, escaped from the Federal Correction Center at La Tuna on April 2.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who are searching for Lavash, said the escapee is armed and dangerous and possibly wounded from a gun battle with police.

An anonymous call to the Albuquerque FBI office at 12:05 a.m. Monday informed agents that Lavash was seen at the residence of his cousin on the Tahoka highway in Lubbock.

The caller told agents that Lavash was seeking help from his cousin for a gunshot wound he may have received in a gun battle with police. The cousin ref-

Apodaca Blasts Thinking Behind 'Tortilla Curtain'

As long as economic conditions in Mexico remain poor, the illegal flow of Mexican aliens into the U.S. will continue and an "arbitrary border between the two countries will mean very little," former New Mexico Gov. Jerry Apodaca said here Monday.

Apodaca, in Lubbock to deliver the keynote address for United Mexican American Week at Texas Tech University, added, however, that the recent discovery of large oil reserves in Mexico should accelerate the country's economic development.

He labeled the proposed "Tortilla Curtain" — the planned fence along portions of the border between Mexico and the U.S. — as ridiculous.

"These people migrate to the United States in order to survive. An arbitrary border between the two countries will mean very little to them," the former governor said.

Apodaca, New Mexico's first Hispanic governor since 1918, said educational opportunities for Mexican-Americans had only begun to improve in recent years because of improved recruiting practices and additional financial assistance.

"Education is like an evolution, like a process to come. Until one family member receives a university degree it is not considered a possibility. There are more Hispanics in universities now than ever before," Apodaca said.

Apodaca said his future political ambitions may include a try at the New Mexico Senate seat in 1982, but he said it would depend on his family's plans.

A former teacher, Apodaca was New Mexico's first four-year-term governor, serving from 1975 to 1978.

Davis Mistrial To Be Discussed

HOUSTON (UPI) — The judge who presided in the murder solicitation mistrial of T. Cullen Davis said he would meet today with prosecutors and defense lawyers to discuss transfer of the retrial.

"I'm trying to see what they want to do," District Judge Wallace C. Moore said, explaining he planned an informal meeting in chambers this afternoon.

Moore said he would suggest the names of one or two judges who might hear the retrial but said neither had agreed.

"I haven't found one (judge) yet," Moore said. "I'm trying to make some suggestions to see if they (opposing attorneys) can agree on it and if they can't, then I will make some decision. It's not going to stay in Houston."

A jury deadlocked 8-4 for guilty in January on a charge that Davis tried to arrange the murder of the judge in his lengthy divorce trial. Selection of a site for a retrial has been delayed because of the Fort Worth industrialist's divorce trial in Fort Worth, now being heard by its third judge.

Court Backs 52 Pardons By Blanton

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) —

Former Gov. Ray Blanton's 11th-hour grants of clemency to 52 prisoners are valid and cannot be undone by his successor, the Tennessee Court of Criminal Appeals ruled today.

The court acted on the cases of three inmates granted commutations but who didn't reach the prison gates before Blanton was ousted from office Jan. 17 and his successor, Gov. Lamar Alexander, ordered a halt to further releases.

The court, in ruling on the clemency granted to three inmates, said "reducing the sentences in these cases to time served was a valid and binding act, made so by his signing the commutations, having the act attested to by the Secretary of State, and then having them delivered to the records divisions of the Department of Corrections for the purpose of processing," the court said.

The state had said the commutations papers were not valid because they were not delivered to the appropriate prison wardens.

The court also rejected an argument advanced by John J. Hooker Jr., a Nashville lawyer and one-time gubernatorial candidate, who said Blanton had no authority to commute sentences without favorable recommendation for the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

The state has the authority to appeal the decision to the state Supreme Court. The appeals court confirmed Judge Raymond H. Leathers' decisions that two of the inmates, Joseph McKenna and Roland Harris Jr., should be freed.

However, it reversed and remanded Judge John L. Draper's ruling in the case of the third inmate, Fred Smith. Draper had found that Alexander had authority to block Smith's release.

The appeals court said of the state's argument on delivery to the warden: "We reject this rigid view for both practical and legal reasons."

Noting the commutations were sent to Murrell Pitts, director of the records division of the Correction Department, the three-judge panel said, "It would be hyper-technical to the point of absurdity to hold that after the sentences of these convicts... had no right to immediate release only because the warden had not seen the commutations or because the prisoners had not received copies."

Plant Engineer Takes Stand

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) —

The engineers who designed the Kerr-McGee Corp.'s nuclear fuel plant were well aware of the hazards of radioactive material and designed a facility to cope with them, the plant's first manager has testified.

Bill Utnage, of Oklahoma City, testified Monday in the $11.5 million plutonium contamination trial of the late Karen Silkwood. He was Kerr-McGee's second witness.

A suit filed by Miss Silkwood's survivors charges Kerr-McGee with negligence in connection with her contamination and designed a facility to cope with them, the plant's first manager has testified.

The trial was to resume today. Utnage said he was one of the seven engineers who designed the plant. He said most of the members of the concept design team had 10 years or more experience with radioactive materials.

"They were all aware of the fact we were going to be using tried and true methods," he said. "Things that had been done before. We weren't going to be doing any experimenting."

At times using floor plan posters and a model of the building to supplement his testimony, Utnage said protection of the public and contamination control had high priority in the design process.

PANEL APPROVES DAM PROJECT

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Water Commission unanimously approved plans today to build Stacy Dam on the Colorado River near Ballinger in West Texas.

The decision by the three-member panel ended 18-months of hearings on the controversial project planned by the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Cities served by the district include San Angelo, Midland, Stanton, Odessa, Big Spring and Snyder.

Opponents included the city of Austin and the Lower Colorado River authority, which operates the Highland Lakes system of lakes Buchanan, Lyndon B. Johnson, Travis and Austin. Critics fear the dam and reservoir will divert too much water from downstream communities.

Fred Werkenstein, attorney for the LCRA, said he would ask for a rehearing before the commission and if unsuccessful would appeal the decision to the Travis County district court, the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals in Austin and the Texas Supreme Court.

Commission chairman Felix McDonald and commissioners Joe Carroll and Dorsey Hardeman took only five minutes to approve the dam.

"We're about to unburden ourselves," McDonald said before the unanimous vote.

Under a commission order, the water district will be allowed to divert 88,000 acre-feet of water for municipal and domestic purposes and 25,000 acre-feet for power plant operations.

Dow Jones Average Recovers

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned upward today, bidding to revive its early-spring rally after a modest setback Monday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 1.99 Monday, recovered 1.04 to 874.74 by noontime today.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 7-5 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said some traders were impressed by the market's relatively steady showing Monday, when many observers had figured it was due for a setback.

Trading remained halted in the shares of one of the Dow's components, F.W. Woolworth. The stock did not trade on the Big Board Monday after Brascan Ltd. of Canada announced plans to offer $35 a share for Woolworth's stock.

Western Publishing led the active list, up $\frac{1}{4}$ at 27. A 280,000-share block changed hands at that price.

General Public Utilities rose $\frac{1}{2}$ to 13 1/2 in active trading. The stock had fallen 4 1/2 points since the accident late last month at the company's Three Mile Island nuclear power plant near Harrisburg, Pa.

Tubos de Acero de Mexico climbed 1% to 25 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange. On Monday the company proposed a 3-for-1 stock split.

The NYSE's composite index rose .14 to 58.02, and the Amex market value index picked up .17 to 181.27.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 13.84 million shares at noontime, up from 11.96 million at the same point Monday.

NRC Head Seeks Precautions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joseph M. Hendrie, chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, told Congress today the nation's nuclear power program could not survive another accident like the one at the Three Mile Island plant.

"We cannot tolerate accidents of this kind and we must take whatever steps are necessary to prevent them," Hendrie testified at the start of hearings by the Senate nuclear regulation subcommittee on the Three Mile Island accident. The hearing will focus on why the NRC did not take charge at Three Mile Island until three days after the accident.

Hendrie recommended several steps to prevent a recurrence of the accident that nearly forced a mass evacuation in central Pennsylvania:

—More emphasis, when reactors are licensed, on the power company's ability to handle a possible crisis.

—A "substantial upgrading" of training of reactor operators to deal with possible emergencies.

—Greater emphasis on safety measures and regulations.

Hendrie told the panel that "we cannot have an acceptable nuclear power program in this country if there is any appreciable risk of events of the Three Mile Island kind occurring at nuclear power plants."

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., the subcommittee chairman, told Hendrie and other NRC commissioners at the witness table that "this investigation will be neither a witch hunt nor a cover-up."

Hart has proposed having teams of federal nuclear specialists available to rush to nuclear plants at the first sign of a mishap.

The chief of a federal advisory committee said a gauge-reading problem may have played a major role in the accident and could pose a similar hazard at more than 40 other reactors of the same general type.

Raymond Fraley, executive director of the Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards, said Monday night the committee has recommended to Hendrie that the NRC consider requiring additional instruments on the reactors to correct the problem.

Fraley said the NRC staff found that an instrument that was supposed to show the water level in a pressurizer may have given a false reading because of its design, fooling plant operators into shutting down an emergency cooling system which had come on automatically.

Hart has said he will introduce a bill requiring the NRC to monitor continuously all commercial atomic reactors — either by remote control or by having an inspector on the sites.

This monitoring system would be augmented by special "crisis management" teams of atomic scientists and engineers who would take control of nuclear plants at the first signs of trouble, Hart said.

An NRC team eventually took control of the stricken Three Mile Island reactor March 30 — the third day of the accident. At a hearing last week before another Senate panel, Hendrie conceded, "We were not as fast getting to the site with a team as we might have been."

"Congress is also on trial," Hart said in his statement. "The facts revealed at this hearing and future hearings could largely determine the extent of our reliance on nuclear energy in the 21st century."

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger told a House Appropriations subcommittee Monday that the Three Mile Island accident will not diminish the Carter administration's commitment to nuclear power.

However, the energy secretary said, it might lead to changes in the licensing process. He said that in the past too much attention may have been paid to a utility's financial ability to run a nuclear plant and not enough to its technical competency.

Contract Negotiations Stalled Between Airline, Mechanics

WASHINGTON (AP) — No further contract talks are scheduled that could lead to an end to a mechanics' strike that has grounded United Airlines since March 31.

"We have no reason to expect any talks," a union official said Monday. Company officials also indicated they do not expect negotiations to resume for several days.

An attempt at negotiations last week collapsed within hours.

"This isn't going to be a fast one," said a source who has followed the contract dispute. "I don't think the next move is going to come for several days. My suspicion is it probably will come next week."

The source asked not to be identified. Federal mediator Robert O. Harris of the National Mediation Board told a House subcommittee Friday he was hopeful the two sides would be back at the bargaining table within a week.

"I'm still hopeful but I'm not giving any guarantees," he said Monday.

Even after negotiations resume, officials say it could take several days to reach agreement and several more days before a contract is ratified and the planes are ready for flying.

The strike by about 18,600 members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers shut down the nation's largest airline 11 days ago. United normally carries about 130,000 passengers a day.

United already has canceled all operations through the busy Easter travel period and late Friday said it was closing all reservation centers and not accepting reservations for flights through June 7.

Sources close to the contract dispute, all requesting anonymity, say there are several indications the walkout will not end soon.

The company already has laid off about 13,300 pilots and flight attendants and has announced its intention to lay off another 15,000 non-union personnel beginning Wednesday.

—Striking IAM members received a full two-week paycheck last Thursday and are due a check for one week's work on April 12. As a result, they have not yet felt any economic impact from their strike.

—Officially, the company says its decision not to accept reservations for flights through the first week of June is to make sure there is no legal liability to passengers on canceled flights. But one source also said the company was sending a message to the union that "they're serious and the union is going to have to come up with something serious to talk about."

—The union's rank and file has twice rejected tentative settlements, including one that called for increases in wages and fringe benefits of more than 40 percent. As a result, union bargainers apparently are uncertain precisely what terms they must negotiate to win ratification.

When the two sides returned to the bargaining table last Wednesday for the first time since the walkout began, the union presented a long list of new demands. They included higher cost-of-living increases, full company payment for long-term disability insurance, guaranteed cost-of-living adjustments on pensions and several other improvements in fringe benefits.

The talks collapsed swiftly as United rejected the demands and its representatives left town.

Meanwhile, in a contract matter affecting a second airlines, flight attendants will be voting over the next several weeks on a tentative 42-month contract with Pan American World Airways.

Mary Ellen King, president of the Independent Union of Flight Attendants, said Monday that the contract would give stewardesses and stewards immediate pay increases of about 30 percent with additional raises of 6 percent on Jan. 1, 1980, and Jan. 1, 1981.

In addition, she said, the company agreed to retroactive pay increases to cover the last 17 months, a period in which attendants worked without a contract.

Pan Am, the country's largest overseas air carrier, reached agreement with the union early Sunday. Flight attendants had launched a brief walkout when the talks went beyond a Saturday midnight deadline.

The union says the contract covers 4,500 people. The company puts the numbers at slightly more than 3,800.

President Signs Bill Continuing Relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today signed legislation permitting continued commercial and cultural relations between the U.S. government and Taiwan, although diplomatic relations have been severed.

At the same time, Carter said he looked forward to deeper and broader ties with the People's Republic of China. The opening of formal diplomatic relations with the Peking government this year forced the break with Taiwan.

"This legislation will enable the American people and the people on Taiwan to maintain commercial, cultural and other relations without official government representation and without diplomatic relations," the president said in a statement.

Under the legislation, the American Institute in Taiwan, a non-governmental office, is authorized to maintain unofficial relations with the Taiwanese government. Taiwan is setting up a similar agency known as the Coordination Council for North American Affairs.

Carter and his representatives had to steer Congress away from a number of provisions that he said did not fit into arrangements worked out with the People's Republic of China.

He said in his statement that the legislation, as passed, "is consistent with the understandings we reached in normalizing relations with the government of the People's Republic of China."

The Senate completed action on the legislation March 29, a day after the House. The Senate vote was 85-4; the House, 339-50.

Included in the legislation is a message to the Chinese leadership that "the security of the island is of grave concern to the United States."

It declares that the United States will maintain the capacity to resist any use of force by the Chinese to take over Taiwan.

A State Department official who asked not to be identified by name said the Chinese were particularly concerned that the legislation extended too great a recognition of Taiwan as a separate entity. The Chinese have claimed that Taiwan is a province of the mainland.

Referring to this dilemma, Carter said the legislation reflects U.S. recognition of the government in Peking as "the sole legal government of China."

The legislation will allow the U.S. to continue its aid in more than 50 programs with the Taiwanese now that there is no U.S. embassy on the island.

Attorneys Urged To Donate Money

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A group of black Philadelphia lawyers and judges has been urged to make financial contributions to guerrilla movements in southern Africa.

The suggestion was made at the Barristers Association's Workshop on African Affairs by Irv Davis, a representative of the New York-based Pan-African Skills Bank, which supports guerrilla movements in Rhodesia and South Africa.

"For $40 you can support a guerrilla fighter for one year," Davis said Saturday in urging contributions to an organization called Support for Freedom Fighters.

Harrisburg's Expectant Mothers, Children Happy To Be Home

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Joyful women and their young children, told that the nation's worst nuclear "crisis is over," are returning to their homes in the shadow of the disabled Three Mile Island power plant.

Relieved and tearful mothers cheered Monday's announcement by Gov. Dick Thornburgh and Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials, who 11 days earlier had urged pregnant women and preschool children living within a five-mile radius of the plant to leave because of the several days away from completion, officials said the atomic cauldron had been tamed and only traces of radiation were being emitted from the site.

"I consider the crisis over with regard to the status of the core," Harold Denton, the NRC's chief of operations, said at a joint news conference with Thornburgh.

About an hour after the press conference, monitoring teams detected a slight increase in radiation — to about 4 to 5 millirems per hour, less than the dose of an average chest X-ray — at a site east of the plant. Officials said the level rose because there was no wind to disperse the radiation, and repeated assurances that "there is no threat to the public health."

At the height of the crisis, considered the most dangerous nuclear power plant accident ever in the United States, Thornburgh advised the evacuation of pregnant women and young children living within the five-mile area. They are most vulnerable to low-level radioactivity.

"This means it is now considered safe," Thornburgh said.

In addition, the governor said: "All 23 schools within a five-mile radius of the plant, situated 11 miles downstream from Harrisburg on an island in the Susquehanna River, can reopen."

—State offices can resume normal operations.

—Drinking milk or water drawn from the area poses no health hazards.

"This does not mean we will relax our vigil," Thornburgh said. "We will continue to monitor the situation on a 24-hour basis."

The state Department of Environmental Resources Bureau of Radiation said it would begin offering free body radiation detection tests today to residents of the area surrounding the plant.

The tests were being offered "to determine whether the normal radioactive content of the people in the area has changed as a result of the accident," said Margaret Reilly, chief of environmental surveillance.

Mop-up operations continued Monday at a cautious and steady pace. Giant charcoal filters were removing iodine trapped by chemicals from waste water that spilled on the floor of an auxiliary building.

And engineers were bleeding gas pockets from the primary cooling system, which keeps the decayed uranium core from overheating.

"The core is being cooled perfectly adequately the way it is. There is no rush," Denton said, adding that the final course for achieving a cold shutdown — the point at which the temperature of the core is brought below the boiling point of water and pressure is reduced to normal — will be plotted Friday.

Evans' Mother Addresses Justices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mother of a convicted Alabama murderer told the Supreme Court today her son "really did not want to die" even though he has demanded his execution in the electric chair.

Betty Evans of Beaumont told the high court she hesitated in attempting to save the life of her son, John Louis Evans III, "until I had determined in my own mind that (the legal proceedings) were correct both legally and morally."

Evans had demanded that he be executed at midnight last Thursday. She said he preferred death to life imprisonment.

But hours before what would have been only the second execution of a U.S. prisoner since 1967, Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist ordered Alabama authorities to keep Evans alive, at least temporarily.

Now Evans is ready to challenge the constitutionality of Alabama's 1975 death penalty law, says his lawyer, Reggie Stephens, and does not want such a challenge to leave him on death row for a year or more while the courts review the case.

Acting on an emergency request by Mrs. Evans, Rehnquist stayed her son's execution until the full Supreme Court could study the case in its regularly scheduled closed conference this Friday.

Rehnquist also ordered state authorities to respond to Mrs. Evans' request, and ordered Mrs. Evans to explain why she waited so long to mount a legal fight to keep her son alive.

In a three-page affidavit filed with the court today, Mrs. Evans said she learned of her son's impending execution by reading a newspaper story in Texas.

"I wrote to my son and asked him if there was anything that could be done to stop his electrocution," Mrs. Evans said. "He wrote me back and said that there was nothing legally that could be done and further that he wanted to die."

Mrs. Evans in late March visited the state prison at Atmore, Ala., where her son is incarcerated. "After visiting with John for a while, I realized for the first time that he really did not want to die but nonetheless was prepared to do everything he could to insure his own execution," she said.

"I also realized that he really was incapable of deciding whether or not to act to stop his own death. I tried as best I could to convince him to initiate an appeal which would stay his execution but he refused," Mrs. Evans said.

Celeste Recommended For Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Foreign Relations Committee voted today to recommend Senate approval of Richard Celeste's nomination to be director of the Peace Corps.

The action came after a hearing in which Celeste, an unsuccessful candidate for governor of Ohio last fall, testified that both he and President Carter want the Peace Corps to remain within ACTION, the agency which oversees the government's volunteer programs.

"I am very comfortable with the Peace Corps in ACTION if we can have a strong and autonomous and effective Peace Corps," said Celeste, a former lieutenant governor of Ohio. "That is my mandate from the president."

Celeste said moving the Peace Corps to some other agency likely would revive allegations that it serves as "a cloak for spies."

His nomination was reported to the Senate floor with no opposition and with predictions that Celeste will be speedily confirmed.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said the Peace Corps in the recent past has appeared to be suffering from "a serious identity crisis."

The senator noted that attempts are being made in the House to separate the Peace Corps from ACTION and relocate it as part of the State Department's general foreign aid program.

"I have never felt that ACTION as a separate agency was a very useful or viable concept," Church said.

Follow-Up

exposure risks to radiation emanating from it.

"It's like breathing a giant sigh of relief," Yvonne Black said after she and her 18-month-old daughter stepped into the living room of their Middletown home.

"I'm so glad to be home," said a sobbing Justine Stauffer, a mother of two who heard the welcome radio bulletin from a motel room where she had taken shelter.

"My brothers were with me, and I jumped up and screamed at them. 'Oh, my God, I'm going home!'" said Mrs. Stauffer, who like Mrs. Black is not pregnant.

In Washington, meanwhile, a federal advisory committee on reactor safeguards said an instrument reading problem may have contributed heavily to the accident at Three Mile Island and could pose a similar hazard at 43 other reactors.

NRC officials said the instrument may have fooled the plant operators into shutting down an emergency cooling system which had come on automatically, making the accident worse than it otherwise might have been.

The NRC had already noted the problem in bulletins advising reactor operators of this and other problems found in the Three Mile Island accident.

Inside the isolated plant, engineers gingerly worked to bring the simmering reactor to a cold shutdown.

Though the tedious process is at least

Scanning Device Helps Blind To Read

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Students in a program for the visually impaired at DeVeux School are learning to use a machine that lets them read virtually everything a sighted person can read.

The system is based on type ordinarily used and is not related to Braille — a system of raised dots that translate to letters and words.

The machine uses a tiny camera-like device that activates a small bed of rods as it scans printed material. The students read by feeling the rods vibrate. For practice reading purposes the machine projects the letters and words onto a visual screen for the teacher.

The teachers, Judy Mascho and Martha Klingelhafer, say a student should be able to read Braille before starting to learn to use the machine. They said that although the letters were different, the learning techniques would be the same for each approach.

In the case of a totally blind person, they said mastery of the system required that the standard alphabet be learned first.

Mrs. Mascho said the machine could operate at up to 80 words a minute or as slow as six words a minute.

"But if they get to 20 to 30 they'll be doing well," Mrs. Mascho said.

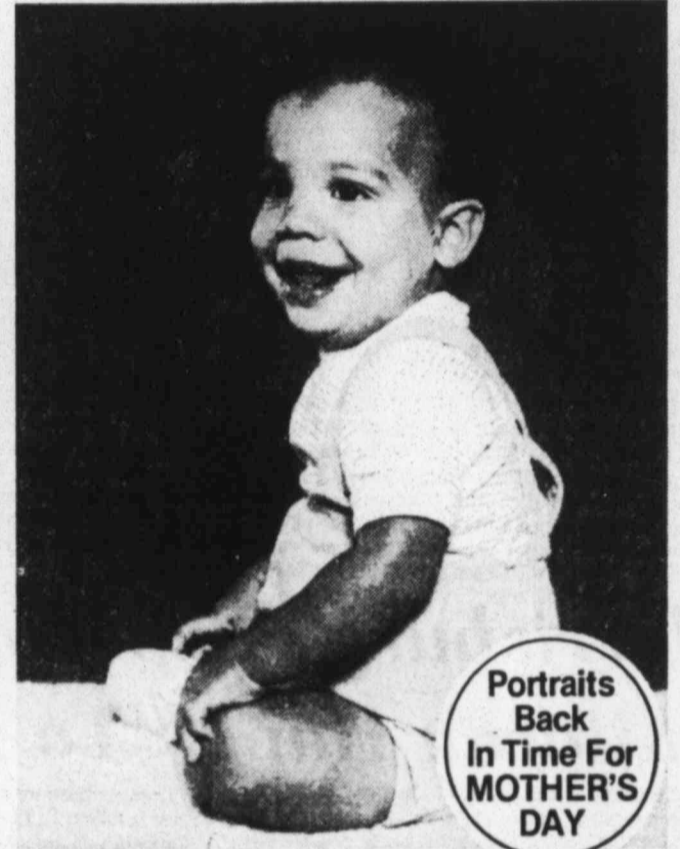

Two students started learning to use the equipment as soon as it was delivered in late October. The teachers say it may take a year of study before they qualify for their own machines, which are valued at about $3,000 apiece.

The two teachers say the Optacon equipment will not replace the Braille system of reading since it would require carrying the machinery around. It is also believed that not all persons can learn the system. Mrs. Mascho said the system could be used as a supplement where Braille is not readily available.

She also said it helped teachers present certain kinds of material, such as mathematical charts and tables that are difficult to use with blind children.

On the average, each American uses between 560 and 575 pounds of paper a year.

DR. LAMB

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm very grateful for your column and appreciate the opportunity to ask you a question that I don't want to ask my doctor. My problem is that I've been on a strict diet for three weeks. I'm about 25 pounds overweight and am really serious about losing it all. I do very well 99 percent of the time but once in a while I slip and when I do, I feel so guilty that I induce myself in any way and is this method effective? Are any calories absorbed in the first few minutes?"

DEAR READER — You won't be the first one to use the method. The Romans used to use it during their ogies. After emptying their stomach they would usually return to the banquet and eat and drink still more.

No, none of the food that you manage to vomit immediately can add to your caloric intake. Food, other than alcohol, is not absorbed from the stomach. Almost all of the absorption occurs in the very first part of the small intestine. There are two dangers. One is that retching that goes with self-induced vomiting could possibly cause a small tear at the bottom of the esophagus. This can bleed and require emergency treatment.

The other difficulty relates to habits and the problem generally recognized today as anorexia nervosa. This is the young woman who has a false body image and is not really fat even though she thinks she is. These individuals often have a pathological reaction to eating. They eat so little that they starve themselves and when they do eat food or are forced to eat food, if they get a chance they'll vomit to get rid of it. You want to be careful not to fall into that psychological trap.

It's dangerous to lose weight too fast. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, which contains a plan you can use to lose weight gradually and safely. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. A pound of actual fat a week is really fast enough.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am in my early 30s and have a big problem with my legs. They are very skinny from the ankle to the calf. My measurements are 34-29-38. I look great in pants and that's what I wear all the time because I'm so ashamed of my legs. What do you advise to help develop my weak, skinny legs?"

DEAR READER — Many women would trade places with you in a minute. Be glad you don't have fat legs you'd like to reduce.

It's exercise against resistance that causes muscles to grow. You can do this by standing flat-footed then raising repeat the exercise 10 times a day.

If you are in shape for it you can stand on one foot, balance yourself and do it with one leg at a time. Take it easy at first or you may have very sore muscles.

Be patient but if your home effort doesn't help, you may want to go to a gym or health club where they have a machine you can use to exercise your leg muscles against resistance.

New State Song May Prove Expensive

ATLANTA (AP) — The Georgia General Assembly's choice of "Georgia on My Mind" as a new state song has hit a few sour notes.

With much fanfare and a performance by Ray Charles, the Legislature adopted Hoagy Carmichael's "old sweet song" as the state ballad earlier this year, replacing a song titled simply "Georgia," which was considered too obscure. No one apparently considered the copyright.

Now, state officials are worried that printing the music and lyrics in state publications may mean royalty payments and inadvertent copyright violations.

Assistant Secretary of State Ann Adamson said Thursday she has received many letters requesting copies of the song, but that she was waiting for assurances that it would not cost the state a bundle.

The secretary of state's office publishes a yearly information book that includes the music and lyrics of the state song.

"Nobody ever paid too much attention to the old song in there," she said, "but I'm not going to let the book go to the printers until this is cleared up."

Gov. George Busbee has not signed the bill to make the song change official, but his counsel, Charles Tidwell, has written the copyright holder, Peer International Inc., requesting permission for state agencies to use the song without restriction. Mario Conti, spokesman for the New York-based music company, said he needs more information about how the state would use the song.

"This is an unusual case. Normally, we would collect a percentage of the selling price of the material. But since the material isn't being sold... we just have never done this before," Conti said.

However, he said he is "99.99 percent sure" the company will be able to "draw up a paper that is definitive and will cover all contingencies."

Prolonged Herb Use Poses Health Risk

CHICAGO (AP) — Prolonged use of the herb ginseng, used by an estimated 5 million to 6 million Americans, poses significant health hazards, according to a new study.

Dr. Ronald K. Siegel, of the department of psychiatry and biobehavioral sciences at the University of California school of medicine in Los Angeles, reports in the April 13 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association on a study of 133 users of ginseng over a period of two years.

Most of the long-term users in his study reported stimulation and arousal, and a number of them experienced hypertension, nervousness, sleeplessness, skin eruptions and morning diarrhea. A few reported swelling, and four women had menstrual problems. Twenty-two had hypertension.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Sol

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Adopt a give-and-take attitude tomorrow and you won't disturb the delicate balance in an association that's important to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Kind words and gentle methods that come so easily for you are what makes co-workers respond tomorrow by doing a job they'd rather not.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Give full vent to your creativity tomorrow. You should be able to transform something that has annoyed you into a thing of beauty.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The personal identity you may be searching for tomorrow can be found by returning to where things began. The answer lies at the core.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Play things lightly tomorrow and you'll be able to flow with your thoughts. You'll have too many fluctuating opinions to take a serious stand on anything.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A chance for material gain has been available for some time, yet you've been unable to capitalize on it. Grab it if it surfaces tomorrow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may want to spend the day alone because you are intensely looking for a new way to go with your momentary problems. Other people could confuse you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You have a guardian angel hovering over you tomorrow, giving you inner resolve to handle most anything that comes your way. Take advantage of it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Again tomorrow you'll be in a rather gregarious mood. Plan something that takes you where there is lots of activity and many people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Tomorrow will be an excellent day to attempt to breathe new life into something you thought was dead. This is especially true in career areas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Place yourself in the other person's position if you have to sit in judgment tomorrow. Chances are you'll wind up making a new friend.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A joint interest whose worth has had you puzzled could show its true colors tomorrow, leaving no doubt as to what to do. Follow your instincts.

Orchestra Plays Music Of 1800s

NEW YORK (AP) — When the serpent appeared in the orchestra, it was no cause for consternation, except perhaps to the ear.

It was just Alan Moore, tooting the antique instrument in the service of the Federal Music Society.

The serpent, a wooden instrument which sounds like a brass instrument in the lower range, "has been said to be suitable only for the rituals of the Druids," Moore said. It sounds like nothing in today's orchestra; indeed, the society's sound itself is alien to the modern ear.

The sound would have been perfectly familiar to Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven, though, and that is the society's reason for being. It specializes in recreating the American music scene between 1790 and 1830, playing the classical masters on antique instruments and dredging up the works of obscure American composers of the period.

"I think this is going to be the next big wave of interest," said John Baldon, the society's music director.

Performances of renaissance and baroque music on original instruments are familiar today, and every self-respecting college music department seems to have a group proficient on the lute, the sackbut, the shawm and the cornetto.

The Federal Music Society, which was formed in 1974 and made its New York debut in 1977, considers itself the only group in the nation which has carried the idea forward into the classical era.

"I am sure Beethoven never heard the size orchestra that plays even his first three symphonies today," Baldon said.

The old sound, as recreated by the society, is much softer.

"You don't have the projection and the edge of modern instrument. You get a reedier, windier sound," he said.

You also get sounds which seem out of tune, for good reason.

"If you took our instruments and showed them to people who know something about music, they would recognize them readily," said Moore, who doubles as the society's executive director. "But the player practically has to learn a new instrument."

Brass instruments of the period had no valves, and flutes, clarinets and oboes had fewer keys than their modern counterparts. The wooden instruments are also temperamental, sometimes giving one note on a dry winter day and something quite different in the muggy summer-time.

Hundreds Trapped In Bucharest Blaze

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Fire swept through Bucharest's Victoria department store early this morning, apparently trapping hundreds of shoppers and employees inside. Witnesses saw people jumping from third-story windows, and there were unconfirmed reports that 200 people were dead or injured. Authorities did not report the extent of the injuries and there was no official word on how many people died in the blaze in the five-story department store, one of the city's largest. But witnesses said they saw scores of ambulances rushing victims from the scene. "It is suspected that several tens of people perished," a correspondent of the Yugoslav new agency reported in a dispatch from Bucharest. He said there was panic following the fire.

The official Romanian news agency Agerpres did not mention the blaze in its midafternoon broadcast.

A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Bucharest said the casualty figure of 200 injured had been mentioned by various sources. But the spokesman, reached by telephone from Vienna, Austria, said it might be some time before Romanian authorities issue a statement.

Witnesses said the blaze may have been caused by welding work on the store's second and third floors. Others reported a malfunction in the motor of an escalator. The fire quickly spread to the upper floors of the Victoria's five stories, witnesses said.

Fire Department headquarters rushed all available engines to the building on one of the city's busiest intersections, across from the Romanian Bank for Foreign Trade.

The fire started about 9:20 a.m. and was extinguished by noon, fire officials said.

Two helicopters hovered over the building, apparently poised to rescue some of the people trapped in the building.

Witnesses said some of those trapped in the store jumped in panic from as high as the third floor to escape the thick, choking smoke which engulfed the inside of the building.

A family of two with one girl said they were rushed to safety through a fire escape propped up against a third floor window.

"I was almost going to faint because of smoke inhalation when they pushed me, my wife and the kid to the window," the man, darkened by smoke, said.

Shortly after the fire started, all traffic was banned in the area and in the nearby streets, which were cordoned off by police to ease access of ambulances and fire engines.

Nicolae Ceausescu, Romanian president and Communist Party chief, was in Gabon on a tour of Africa today. It was not known whether the blaze would affect Ceausescu's travel plans.

The Romanian leader cut short an Africa tour in March, 1977, when a strong earthquake hit Romania, killing more than 1,500 persons.

The blaze was the third serious fire in a major European city in two months. A fire in a savings bank in Warsaw, Poland, on Feb. 15, caused 48 deaths, with 114 injured.

On Feb. 8, Vienna's largest department store, Gerngross, was damaged by fire in a late night blaze when only a few workers and no customers were present. There were no injuries.

Bond Official Inspects City

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A New York bond-rating official toured Lubbock with city officials this morning to get a first-hand view of Lubbock's total economic picture.

Ben Phillips, assistant vice president in charge of ratings of Moody's Investors Service, Inc., of New York City, climbed aboard a Citibus and received a guided tour of the city's business and industrial community, as well as city facilities.

The 2 1/2-hour tour concluded at City Hall, where Phillips was to have lunch and meet with city council members and other city officials concerning the city's upcoming bond sale.

Following the tour, Phillips said, "It is extremely important" to see the economics of the city first-hand.

The reason for Lubbock's AA bond rating is its "very healthy economy" including wholesale business in the city, which Phillips said he didn't realize was so extensive.

The view Phillips got of Lubbock from the tour can't really be gleaned from a bond prospectus, he said, adding he had seen "a real cross section of the city — good and bad."

However, Phillips said, "the bottom line" of the city's financial condition was discussed in a breakfast meeting with city officials, including city bond adviser Joe W. Smith of First Southwest Company in Abilene.

Phillips emphasized he is as much concerned about the city's ability to provide general fund services as he is the city's ability to pay for its bonds.

"That's where most problems lie with cities today," Phillips said. "When push comes to shove," Phillips said he wants to insure the city can meet both its commitments.

"We know police and fire are going to come first," he said, adding, "both (general fund and debt service fund) have got to be protected."

Phillips emphasized he's not in Lubbock to give city officials financial advice, rather to listen and learn about the city's economic conditions.

However, he said his agency is "following very closely" the petition drive to limit city taxes being circulated by the Lubbock Property Owners Association.

"I'm aware it could be potentially a problem," he said. "However, we base our judgments on things that happen.

"We're not jumping to any conclusion, but we want to be kept informed," Phillips said.

City officials know, he said, the tax limitation "could be something detrimental."

Phillips previously said the LPOA petition drive could lower the city's bond rating or mean a suspension of the bond rating.

City officials want to talk to Phillips about a proposed $8.82 million bond sale on May 22 as well as possible future bond sales.

Big Issues Solved By Truckers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters union and trucking industry bargainers apparently resolved their money differences today and then struggled to nail down a final contract agreement to end a 10-day shutdown of the trucking industry, sources said.

One source close to the talks stressed that the agreement on a new wage and fringe benefit package was tentative, pending resolution of several non-economic issues that might require further intense bargaining. The source declined to be identified by name.

It was understood that the tentative money agreement would meet President Carter's anti-inflation wage guideline, which has played a major role in the industry's lockout of striking Teamsters.

The two sides were kept apart Monday as federal mediators met with one side and then the other in an attempt to narrow the differences. When talks resumed today, the two sides met face-to-face.

Before the bargainers met Monday, they were separated on economics by about 25 cents an hour over three years. But the difference was an important one, with the industry claiming the union's demand would boost the total package above Carter's guideline.

As he arrived for today's bargaining, union President Frank Fitzsimmons said he was hopeful the two sides could reach agreement before the end of the day to halt the work stoppage, which has hurt the auto industry severely.

School Case

Southeast, Iles, Wheatley, Posey, Martin, Bozeman, Parkway, Hunt, Tubbs, McWhorter and Jackson; the junior highs of Alderson, Mathews, Struggs and Thompson; and Dunbar and Estacado high schools.

But Woodward said only nine of the schools — Guadalupe, Iles, Martin, Posey, Sanders, Wheatley, Mahon, Struggs and Dunbar — "have their present racial status as a result of past discriminatory acts with segregated intent by (school officials) and their predecessors."

Miss Silver told the judges that Woodward's order disregarded the fact that de jure segregation before 1954 contributed to the minority enrollment status of the 13 schools excluded in his integration order.

She argued that the school system's neighborhood school policy pushed minorities into those schools and pulled Anglos into the southern portion of the city by indicating the district is willing to build new schools in predominantly white neighborhoods.

This policy, Miss Silver said, is simply continued use of a dual school system for whites and minorities.

However, when asked by Roney what the government would propose as a solution to such a problem, Miss Silver said she had no answer.

Johnson, however, said Woodward rightly implemented actions set forth by the Dayton case. The schools' attorney said that Woodward's specific nine-school integration order took into account factors contributing to segregation that were not the fault of the school board.

Johnson also told the panel that the system's integration plan, which requires busing of about 3,000 of the district's 30,500 students, is a remedy "made to be workable and is working."

Shaw Raps CETA

Shaw said most CETA employees are rather transient in their working habits. "Most of them are not going to pan out," he said.

Controversy over the method of paying the public service employees has recently arisen, with several local non-profit agencies complaining that the cost reimbursement contract forces them to borrow money at high interest before repayment by SPAG.

Shaw said the City of Lubbock as well as the county has indicated a preference for direct payment by SPAG.

Mrs. Forbes said the change in regulations, received by her Monday, would provide the option of direct payment of public service employees only if certain conditions are met.

Among these conditions, she said local agencies and governments would have to provide equal fringe benefits to CETA employees as are provided for regular employees. Also the director said grant applications requesting this change in method of payment would have to be re-submitted to the U.S. Department of Labor for approval, with a statement attached explaining the justification for the request.

She told Shaw that general dissatisfaction with the results of the program would not suffice as justification for SPAG payment of county public service employees.

Asked why the Department of Labor had issued regulations providing the option of payment until October 1 but not later, Mrs. Forbes said, "They probably were just reacting to all our (local CETA directors) demands."

Elaborating further on the federal stipulation that public service employees be accorded equal benefits with local employees, she said, "What has happened in some cases is they haven't been treated the same."

A program of a different sort but intended to accomplish the same goals was introduced late this morning by Moses Sanchez, an Albuquerque, N.M. businessman.

Sanchez advised the SPAG directors to investigate forming a Private Industry Council (PIC) comprised of local industry leaders, small businesses and some academic, union and government officials.

Storm Pounds Rockies, Heads For West Texas

percent today and tonight to 20 percent Wednesday. Precipitation is expected to average less than a quarter of an inch in most sections of the South Plains.

The high today should be in the upper 60s, and the low tonight should be in the low 40s.

The cold front expected to hit West Texas tonight, however, will cool temperatures down into the low 60s on Wednesday.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms and patches of dense fog blanketed much of the state before dawn today. The fog occasionally reduced visibility to less than a mile.

Thunderstorm activity that lingered into the late night hours across north central and northeastern sections moved eastward out of Texas by 5 a.m. Only light amounts of rainfall were reported.

Precipitation amounts on the South Plains included .50 of an inch at Silverton, .38 at Friona, .36 at Abernathy and .26 at Matador and Floydada. Only .17 of an inch was reported at Lubbock.

Pre-dawn temperatures ranged from the 40s in northwestern sections to the mid-70s along the lower Texas coast. Extremes ranged from 30 at Marfa to 75 at McAllen.

Considerable cloudiness is forecast across the state for today. Showers and thunderstorms will spread eastward this afternoon and tonight and may become severe in the eastern counties of the Panhandle and South Plains, and southward into the Concho Valley near San Angelo.

The highs this afternoon will range from the mid-50s in the Panhandle to the upper 80s in the extreme southern portions.

The weather should remain windy and rather cool in most sections of West Texas on Thursday, becoming fair and warmer by the end of the week.

The highs Thursday will range from the 40s in the Panhandle to the 70s in the extreme southwest, warming to the 60s in the northern half and the 80s in the southwest regions by Saturday.

Meanwhile, some 200,000 homes in the Detroit area remained without electricity today because of a spring ice storm that dropped ice-coated tree limbs onto power lines and snapped them. And power company officials said it would be the weekend before the last residents got power restored for their lights and refrigerators.

Wintry weather also was ignoring the calendar in other areas — in upstate New York, where up to 9 inches of snow fell, and in Colorado, Wyoming and Kansas, which were warned to expect a new winter storm.

Residents of the South got a taste of spring-like weather and the results were also unpleasant. They were recovering from a string of tornadoes that struck Monday in Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana and Alabama.

The Detroit area still was suffering today.

Seven people have been killed in weather-related traffic accidents, and state officials estimate damage from the storm at $3 million.

And at mid-morning, 200,000 customers still were blacked out, according to Detroit Edison Co. spokesman Mike Maurer — despite the efforts of nearly 2,000 repairmen, some borrowed from other companies.

Officials of Detroit Edison said most customers would have power restored before the weekend, but some would not.

There was some relief, however. Temperatures rose near the 50s today, and many of the remaining icicles were melting.

It was the second storm to clobber Michigan within 72 hours. Gale-to-hurricane-force winds raked the state late last week, leaving four dead and 200,000 homes without electricity.

Jailer Accused Of Negligence stalled on the door which the escapees went through.

County officials also have suggested covering the corridor inside the annexed recreational building to prevent similar breakouts in the future.

All three men were charged today with escape, and each charge was accompanied by a $500,000 bond.

Loggins, who faces a total of 120 years in prison on separate charges of aggravated robbery and burglary in Lubbock, and a theft charge in Potter County, was the last to be taken into custody Monday.

Loggins was captured about 1:30 p.m. inside his sister's apartment in the 5800-block of 22nd Street. The arrest was the result of the apartment manager's reporting a suspicious person in the area to police.

However, the manager said Monday it took two phone calls before convincing police to investigate. She said she was first told by the police that all officers were busy with accidents and could not respond to her call. She said there was no response until she called a second time, saying she saw the man "poking his head out the window" of an apartment, and demanded that officers be dispatched.

But police dispatcher Debbie Howe, who took the manager's call, said she took the first report at 1:05 p.m. and dispatched an officer two minutes later. A police log book backs up her statement, but it does not show what time officers Mike Searfoss and Trey Moody arrived at the scene.

The apartment manager said she entered an apartment to repair a water heater and heard a noise. She said she called police because she knew the tenants were supposed to be gone from the apartment.

Miss Howe said the woman's first report was of a man trying to get a key to get inside the apartment. She said that after she had dispatched Searfoss and Moody she received a second call from the woman, who said the man appeared to be hiding whenever a patrol car would pass the complex.

It was then, Miss Howe said, that she told the manager that the passing police vehicles were en route to another call, but that a unit had been dispatched.

The dispatcher said the manager called police a third time, after Loggins had been identified and arrested, and that she reported a fight between the escapee's sister and her husband in the apartment parking lot.

The manager said Monday that when officers arrived they were hesitant to enter the apartment. "They told me it was probably just a visitor," the woman said.

UNION REJECTS OFFER

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A union of 1,100 Rhode Island state employees unanimously rejected on Monday a contract offer with a 5.5 percent pay raise. Michael Bernstein, president of Local 580 of the Alliance of Social Service Employees, said the state's latest offer was unacceptable. He said the union will set up picket lines Tuesday if a better proposal is not made by then.

been measured in an increase in convictions.

Cleland said he wasn't convinced the two programs could work in harmony unless co-promotion of the logos and telephone numbers are worked out.

"Two sets of advertisements and billboards around town will be confusing. We should get the two programs together so the public does not get confused."

Crime Line, Inc., will employ a double-barreled assault on crime, using the cash reward program and the placement of "Crime Eye" cameras in area stores to take pictures of crimes in progress.

West said he would ask the city council to earmark $28,000 to buy 50 "Crime Eye" cameras for his program, while the council will depend on private donations and the crime symposium to raise money for their projects.

Childers added the mayor is in full support of the council and added that Crime Line, Inc., was not established to usurp the work of the committee.

It was pointed out by several members of the council that their efforts were in the area of crime prevention, while the mayor's program is designed to solve crimes that have already been committed.

In other business, Cleland said he has ordered 50,000 large logos at a cost of $3,300 and 200,000 small logos for $632 so homeowners who have marked their valuables can display the emblems in windows and doors of their homes. He also said tickets for the crime symposium have gone on sale and will be advertised in the Chamber of Commerce newsletter and the Better Business Bureau publication.

Hal Hensley, chief administrator for the Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney's office and chairman of Operation Identification, said the recent Teamsters strike has delayed his group's work. He said his group must have a shipment of markers before they can begin canvassing neighborhoods in an effort to mark valuables with numbers that can be readily identifiable by any law enforcement agency.

He said those areas which will be visited first will remain a secret so as not to tip off criminals.

Neighborhood watch committee chairman Joe Cox, mayor of Shallowater, said his volunteers are ready to go and that they're just waiting for the markers to be issued.

Tanzanian Forces Begin Air, Artillery Attacks

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Tanzania unleashed jet fighters, artillery and rockets on Kampala today in what appeared to be a major and perhaps final effort to capture the capital of President Idi Amin.

Frightened residents of the capital said Tanzanian MIG-21 jets tried unsuccessfully to rocket a major Ugandan ammunition depot in the city, but struck the area of Makerere University instead.

The air attack came near the end of a night of shelling by Tanzanian forces located south and southwest of the city. The shelling was described by several residents as the heaviest in Kampala in the six-month-old war.

Kampalans reported hearing artillery, small-arms and automatic weapons fire during the night and closer to the city than had been heard before.

Other residents in the city said that while Ugandan forces were believed still resisting, there were few signs of troops on the streets and fewer still of officials of the Amin regime.

Advancing on Kampala after defeating some of Amin's last remaining troops in a weekend battle to the south, the invasion force of Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exiles shelled the city from 8 p.m. Monday until a heavy rainstorm began at 6 a.m.

One resident reported "shells in the air with flames coming out of them," apparently rockets, and "noise of artillery, small-arms fire, machine gun fire, everything."

Firing was heaviest for about half an hour at dawn, the residents reported by telephone.

There was no report of casualties or damage, but electric power was knocked out in parts of the city, including the exclusive Kololo Hill district in which many foreign diplomats live. Radio Uganda, still held by Amin's forces in the center of Kampala, went on the air later than usual today, and its early transmissions consisted only of music.

Until the weekend, the invasion force had been marking time south and west of Kampala after capturing Uganda's international airport at Entebbe, 21 miles south of the capital.

An AP correspondent, who flew into Entebbe Airport with Tanzanian troops last week, reported that the airport suffered heavy damage from repeated Tanzanian assaults.

Tanzanian soldiers estimated that perhaps fewer than 1,000 Ugandan soldiers have been killed in the war so far, along with a smaller number of Tanzanian troops. The Tanzanians said as many as 400 Libyan soldiers were killed battling for the airport after Amin's forces fled, the AP correspondent reported in a dispatch reaching Dar es Salaam today.

He said Tanzanian invaders and local Ugandans had looted Amin's official residence in Entebbe and other government buildings, littering the lawn with cartons from television sets, radios and other goods taken from storerooms.

Exile sources said fresh troops of Amin's Rhino Battalion, brought down from northern Tanzania, launched a major attack Saturday with tanks and armored cars to try to retake the airport. The exiles claimed the Rhinos were driven back after suffering the heaviest casualties of the six-month-old war and losing much of their armor.

Amin, who is reported to have set up a headquarters at Jinja, 50 miles east of Kampala, is believed to have started the war in October with total armed forces of 21,000 men. Much of his army disintegrated as the invaders moved up through southwest Uganda toward Kampala, and he is now believed to have only two battalions intact, about 2,000 men.

Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy sent an estimated 2,600 troops to bolster Amin.

Diplomats in Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital, estimate that Tanzania has about 12,000 men, half its army, in Uganda. Exile sources claim there are 20,000 anti-Amin Ugandans fighting alongside the Tanzanians, but other sources estimate there are 10,000 at the most.

Meanwhile, a statement from the Ugandan Foreign Ministry, issued in Kampala, appeared to confirm earlier reports that Amin's police murdered four West European journalists who tried to get to the battle zone by crossing Lake Victoria by boat.

The dead men were believed to be correspondents for two Swedish newspapers, Karl Bergman of Svenska Dagbladet and Arne Lemberg of Expressen, Wolfgang Steins of West Germany's Stern magazine, and another West German, Hans Bollinger of the French photo agency Gamma.

FAMILY TIME — Gen. Iranian Air Commander's Stay With Lubbock Family Recalled

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is based on a private interview conducted in 1978 with Gen. Amir Hossein Rabii, head of the Imperial Iranian Air Force. The interview was given with the understanding that it not be printed. However, with Rabii's execution early Monday before a firing squad in Tehran's Qasr Prison, the contents of the interview were deemed appropriate to release.

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

"They are like children. They have freedoms, choices, for the first time, and they do not know what to do with them, so they riot and demand more."

His eyes, which had been sparkling seconds before in a happy reunion with his American "family," turned dark with sorrow as Gen. Amir Hossein Rabii spoke softly of his country's problems.

It was May 1978 and the commanding general of the Imperial Iranian Air Force was back in Lubbock where he had earned his wings at Reese Air Force Base in 1953 and where, a few weeks later, the crown prince of Iran was to begin his own pilot training.

"The shah is this country's number one friend. Iran is surrounded on three sides by communist countries and he stands with the West."

Sunday, with his shah gone and his country dealing with the new government, Rabii faced the firing squad. Branded "rotten to the core" and one of four "traitors to the Iranian people," who were executed Sunday, Rabii had declined official comment on riots sweeping his homeland during a brief reunion with his Lubbock "family," the Alton Stricklands.

Then, for long seconds he looked intently at the reporter interviewing him, the battle between strict duty as a military man and the duty he felt to tell the world the truth, showing in troubled eyes.

His hand moved slightly, in seeming entreaty mixed with despair. Then he spoke.

"For your information only, because you should know, because the American press does not know the whole story. It has not been told the story."

Apparently forgetting a battery of U.S. Air Force officers and members of the Strickland family nearby, Rabii said, in confidence, what he wanted to tell the entire American press, but could not.

He drew a picture of a people oppressed from antiquity who knew no way but to do as told. Suddenly, they had freedoms to choose and decide but did not know how to handle it.

With education a major necessity for a free people, Iran's young was sent to foreign universities because the number of universities needed were not ready in Iran.

Iran, Rabii noted, sent its students abroad for education and provided jobs when they returned.

College funds, he added, were adequate but were far from enough to pay for plane fares from Lubbock to Washington, D.C., to demonstrate against the visiting Shah of Iran.

Expenses for excessive travel for riot purposes, he said, came from communist sources, the same sources causing unrest and riots inside Iran.

Leading the country toward western ways, Rabii said, was not popular with some religious leaders who have exerted total control in the past.

On one hand, the shah was opposed by religious leaders and on the other by communist-inspired upheaval, his air force chief concluded.

Deep concern and an earnest pleading for understanding of his people and their problems characterized the Iranian general who, according to friends, expressed a firm belief in education as the answer to thwart communist propaganda.

His own education was broadened greatly with his year as a student pilot at Reese in Class 53-F when his adopted Lubbock family showed him the easy Texas way of living.

Rabii, himself, had a few problems understanding the freedom of everyday life in this country.

He "was very thin, with such sad eyes" when he came here, Mrs. Strickland recalled, but after becoming a second son to the Stricklands and an older brother to Bill and Ann, his eyes began to shine.

Many tears were shed when Rabii, with his new wings, left Lubbock in 1953. He had lived with freedoms not found in his land and he was a bit loath to return.

"I will come back," Rabii vowed then. Years passed and only the Strickland's scrapbook and happy memories were left of the "shy and reserved" Rabii they had known.

Then Rabii returned, a commanding general on a mission for his shah and a happy Rabii, recalling life in Texas with the Stricklands.

"I was alone and they were my family," he explained simply. "He was like our son," the Stricklands said.

Like parents, they worried over Iran's problems in the headlines.

Then, the day came when The Avalanche-Journal had Rabii's picture and name on its front page as one of the generals to be tried as traitors to the Iranian people.

Then, Monday, his execution was reported. With the shock of his death over, there only remains the worry for his wife and two sons and prayers for their safety.

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — An Islamic revolutionary court commuted the death sentence of a SAVAK torturer and acquitted 16 supporters of the shah for lack of evidence, but provincial courts today executed three more officials of the old regime.

Police officers Hassan Dinarvand and Ezzatollah Dashtweha were executed before dawn this morning in Borujerd, 244 miles southwest of Tehran on charges of mass murder of anti-shah demonstrators.

Gen. Ali Akbar Ansari, former chief of the industrial city of Ghazvin, 93 miles west of Tehran, was also executed today, bringing to 98 the total number of men sentenced to death and executed since mid-February.

The decision by an Islamic tribunal in Tehran Monday, though coinciding with nine more executions, appeared to be an attempt to placate international criticism of the summary executions of officials and military leaders who served Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Iran also announced Monday it had increased oil production to more than 4 million barrels a day in an effort to help the country's faltering economy.

Oil experts said Iran was exporting 3.3 million barrels of oil to unidentified buyers — domestic consumption is around 700,000 barrels. This would bring Iran an estimated $59.4 million to $66 million a day based on the spot rates of $18 to $20 a barrel.

Tehran radio said the Islamic tribunal reduced the prison sentence handed Mohammad Ilkhani, 34, a member of the feared SAVAK secret police accused of abetting the arrest and terrorizing of people, from three years to 12 months in prison.

The court decided to reduce Ilkhani's sentence because he had a family to support. It also acquitted 16 men for lack of evidence, the radio said.

Foreign observers said the dramatic court decisions indicated the government's willingness to answer charges that some revolutionary courts had been handing out too swift justice to men accused of collaboration with the shah, torture or corruption.

The executions appeared to have sparked sharp differences within the government. Members of Justice Minister Assadollah Mobasher's family said he resigned to protest the kangaroo court justice, but authorities denied the report and Mobasher was not available for comment.

Oil production before the revolution was between 4.5 million and 5.6 million barrels a day. Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan told reporters last week Iran would increase production to meet its monetary needs, but would not return to the old production level.

Somoza Discounts Departure Rumors

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — With a grin, Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza discounted rumors his vacation to the United States was an escape from heavy rebel attacks against his government.

Somoza, who met in a quiet hotel room Monday with a cluster of local reporters, said he had no doubts he would be returning home April 16 after visiting four of his children in the United States.

"Yes! Absolutely, yes!" he said with grin. The president said he maintains contact with his government and is not particularly concerned about heightened guerrilla activity in his absence.

"They will try to utilize my absence for publicity purposes, but the country is under control."

Fresh fighting broke out Monday along Nicaragua's southern border with Costa Rica. Military sources said the national guard suffered new casualties. A government newspaper said 28 Sandinista guerrillas were killed in four different battles Sunday. There also were reports late Monday rebels had captured most of the northern city of Esteli.

But Somoza said he is confident his government will not be overthrown. "I think the people who are trying to overthrow the government of Nicaragua are throwing their last cards now," he said. "They have been at it now for eight months without any success and this is what I think is their last push."

He said he was in the Kansas capital for a two-day unofficial visit with his 26-year-old son, Julio, a student at Washburn University. Somoza indicated it was one of several quiet visits to Topeka in the past two years.

He said he then would fly in his twin-engine jet to Florida to meet with three of his other children.

Somoza discounted rumors he took his vacation because of the recent push by rebel forces and dismissed any parallels with the departure of the shah from Iran before that country fell.

"Let's say that the shah left Iran, taking a vacation to, sort of, not hurt his feelings so much," he said. "But I am the president of Nicaragua and didn't make any deal with anybody and they're not hurting my feelings. I'm coming here to see my son."

"There is no parallel between the Iran situation and the Nicaraguan situation. First, I am an elected president. The shah was a dynasty."

Somoza said although he has promised to conduct an election in 1981, he said the Sandinista rebels — which he estimated at less than one-half percent of the population — are not content to wait.

"First let's look at the nature of whom we're talking about. We're talking about Communist, Marxist, Leninist guerrillas who have no real popular backing in Nicaragua and who would never make a dent in the electorate of Nicaragua. So they insist on overthrowing the government by force and establishing a Marxist, Leninist state in Nicaragua."

Malaysian Navy Fires On Boat Of Refugees

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Malaysian navy opened fire on a rickety Vietnamese refugee boat and later made it suddenly capsized, drowning 104 people, the Asian Wall Street Journal reported today.

In a dispatch from Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, the newspaper said a report by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees and accounts provided by an unidentified Western embassy painted a "grizzly" picture of the incident.

The refugee boat, called the MH-3012, carried 237 refugees, most of them ethnic Chinese. It sank March 31 about 40 miles off Mersing on the southern coast of the Malay Peninsula and 104 drowned.

The newspaper, a Dow Jones publication, said information from the survivors indicated that the Malaysian navy vessel towed the refugee boat toward Indonesia in a "reckless" fashion, with crew laughing and taking pictures.

"When the MH-3012 capsized under tow, they claim, the Malaysian navy crew circled the floundering refugees for half an hour, refusing to let them board their patrol boat," it said. "By the time they dragged survivors from the water, the refugees charge, many who might have been saved had perished."

Before starting out to sea on March 31, the Malaysian seamen asked the Vietnamese to attach a rope to their vessel, which was in "very bad" condition, according to the U.N. report.

"When the Vietnamese refused to tie the rope to their boat, naval officers fired shots and one Vietnamese, Hua Trac Thanh, was hit in his left arm," the newspaper quoted the report.

The report, compiled by the Western embassy, also confirmed that the refugees heard a burst of gunfire and that one man was hit, the newspaper said.

In response to the U.N. charges, the Malaysian government has sharply rebuked Rajagopalamp Sampat Kumar, the local representative for the refugee agency, the newspaper said.

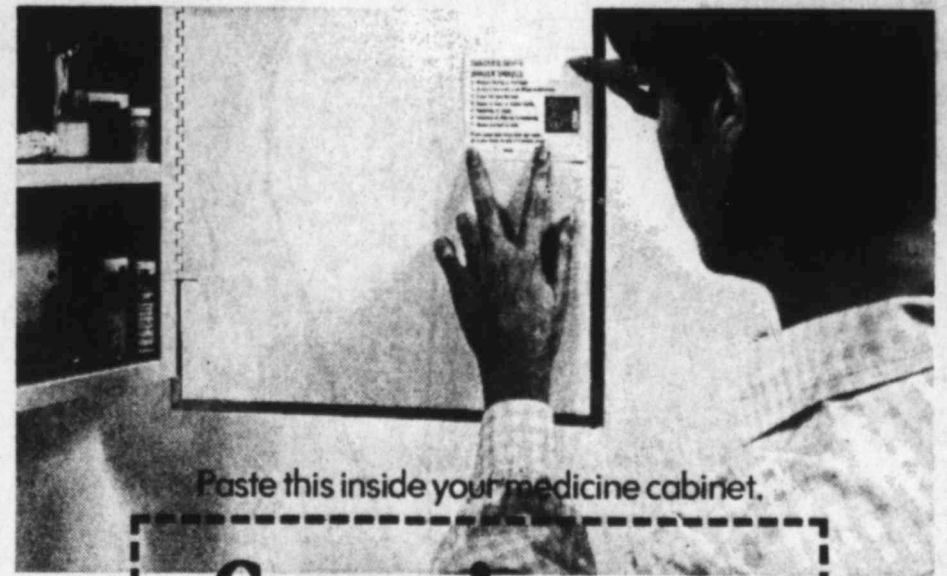

"It isn't our intention that these boat people should perish," Malaysian Home Affairs Minister Tan Sir Ghazali Shafie said. "It is also on humanitarian considerations that we were unable to accommodate them in our overcrowded camps."

Malaysia, like the Philippines, Hong Kong and other Asian nations, has been overwhelmed by the exodus of an estimated half a million Vietnamese — mostly ethnic Chinese — from their country.

In 1610, the astronomer Kepler speculated that Mars had two moons. Both minuscule, they were not discovered until 1877 by Asaph Hall at the U.S. Naval Observatory in Washington, D.C.

Russians Becoming Minority

By SETH MYDANS
 ALMA ATA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — With the Soviet Union's Asiatic population exploding faster than that of any other race, a Central Asian demographer says local Kazakh youths should be encouraged not to intermarry with Russians.
 Edyge Turkebayev, a Kazakh himself, said in an interview that 95 percent of native Kazakhs in the Central Asian republic of Kazakhstan intermarry with each other, rather than with the Russians who make up nearly half the republic's population.
 "This is a good event, and it is necessary to encourage it," said Turkebayev, who is director of Kazakhstan's Institute of Economy.
 "Naturally, if 5 or 6 percent have feelings of love between the races and want to join together, there is nothing bad in it," he said. "We have no prejudices."
 Russian racial policy in this nation of more than 100 ethnic backgrounds is of particular interest now at the close of a census that is expected for the first time to put Russians in the minority in their own land.

 In the last census, in 1970, Russians made up 53.4 percent of the population, and since then the Central Asian peoples have led a non-Russian population explosion with a growth rate about 2 percent faster than that of the country as a whole, according to Turkebayev's figures.
 According to the projections of another demographer, G.A. Bondarskaya, the populations of the four Central Asian nationalities of Uzbekistan, Tadzhikistan, Turkmenia and Kirgizia are expected to triple by the year 2000 to a total of more than 40 million in this nation that now numbers 260 million.
 The Kazakh population of 5.3 million is expected to double.
 Meanwhile, the ethnic Russian population, which stands at about 130 million, has reached close to zero population growth, despite vigorous efforts to ignite a Russian population explosion.
 Turkebayev did not explain his preference for racially unmixing Kazakh marriages, except to say "we consider it an honorable thing."

In fact, he also praised the principle of mixed marriages, saying "I consider this enriches the future genes of people."
 The subject of race is a sensitive one in the U.S.S.R., and Turkebayev made a point of repeating the official Soviet line that "there is no nationality question in the Soviet Union."
 He declined to speculate on the future effects of an exploding Asiatic population, in a country governed mostly by Russians, other than to say Central Asia would grow in economic importance.
 Western observers have suggested that what Turkebayev called the increase in "specific gravity" of Central Asia will raise a series of potential problems.
 These range from natural overpopulation to pressures for relocating industry to a new racial balance in the armed forces to a need for a change in the ethnic makeup of the Kremlin to a possible rise in influence of the Moslem religion, which permeates Central Asia.

The official Soviet position on mixed marriages is that people are free to marry whomever they choose, regardless of ethnic background.
 Turkebayev's view reflects the situation in a republic where according to his statistics the major races remain for the most part distinct.
 Ninety-eight percent of Kazakhs consider Kazakh to be their native tongue, while 99 percent of Russians in the region consider Russian to be their native language, he said.
 About 30 percent of Kazakhs also speak Russian, Turkebayev said. He declined to offer a statistic on the number of Russians who speak Kazakh.
 Almost the only times the U.S. inflation rate dropped significantly in the last 25 years were during recessions — in 1957-58, 1960-61 and 1974-75. This pattern also holds for other industrial nations, according to a Conference Board analysis.

Mychal Thompson, at 6-foot-10 and 225 pounds, is basketball's biggest "small" forward. But the Portland rookie will need more than size when he goes up against Phoenix' Walter Davis tonight as the teams open their first-round National Basketball Association playoff series.

The 6-6 Davis, the NBA's Rookie of the Year in 1978, averaged 23.6 points per game to rank 10th in the league and was seventh in field goal accuracy at 56.1 percent. He is quick, agile and plays with an infectious enthusiasm.

"Walter is one of those players who just loves to play the game," says Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "He goes all out and doesn't hold back. If he makes a great play or if one of his teammates makes a great play, he just lets his emotions fly."

It will be up to Thompson to contain the explosive Davis. Thompson started the year filling in for power forward Maurice Lucas, then spent time on the bench as a backup man at center and forward. Late in the year Portland Coach Jack Ramsay inserted him into the starting lineup at small forward and the Blazers promptly won nine of their next 10 games to clinch a playoff berth.

"Mychal has been a big factor for us," said Ramsay. "He's been doing an outstanding job on the opposing forwards. He's developed into one of the best defensive forwards in the game."

The Western Conference's other best-of-three first-round series also begins tonight, with the Los Angeles Lakers at the Denver Nuggets. The two East series See NBA Page 4

Brock Will Steal No More

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lou Brock, the St. Louis Cardinals' base-stealing king, says he is retiring from baseball at the end of the season whether or not he reaches another milestone, the 3,000-hit mark.

But his boss, Cards owner August A. Busch Jr., told a news conference to announce the retirement plans Monday that records have never been Brock's prime objective.

"Earlier this year, when Lou personally informed me of his decision, he made it very clear that while he would love to get 3,000 hits, he was interested only in helping the team become a winner," Busch said.

Brock is still 100 hits away from the 3,000-Hit Club, but he already has the single-season and all-time major league stolen base records locked up.

He topped Maury Wills' single-season record of 104 in 1974 with 118 and now has a total of 918 for his career, 26 more than Ty Cobb's record total of 892.

Brock, 39, said his decision to retire after 17 years in the major leagues was made last Christmas. He said it was not an easy thing to do.

"It was a tough decision. It was not one made overnight," Brock said. "I wanted to retire at a time that I can still make a contribution to the team. It's a source of pride to me to have played during the championship years of the '60s, the challenging years of the early '70s and with the young club that is bouncing back now."

Although there has been speculation about a permanent place with the Cardinals organization, Brock said "nothing has been firming up."

Busch said he personally will be in charge of a "Lou Brock Day" on Sept. 9.

"Hopefully, it will show adequately our gratitude for his efforts and thrills he's given all of us through the years," Busch said. He also said Brock's uniforms will be retired, joining those of Dizzy Dean, Stan Musial and Bob Gibson.

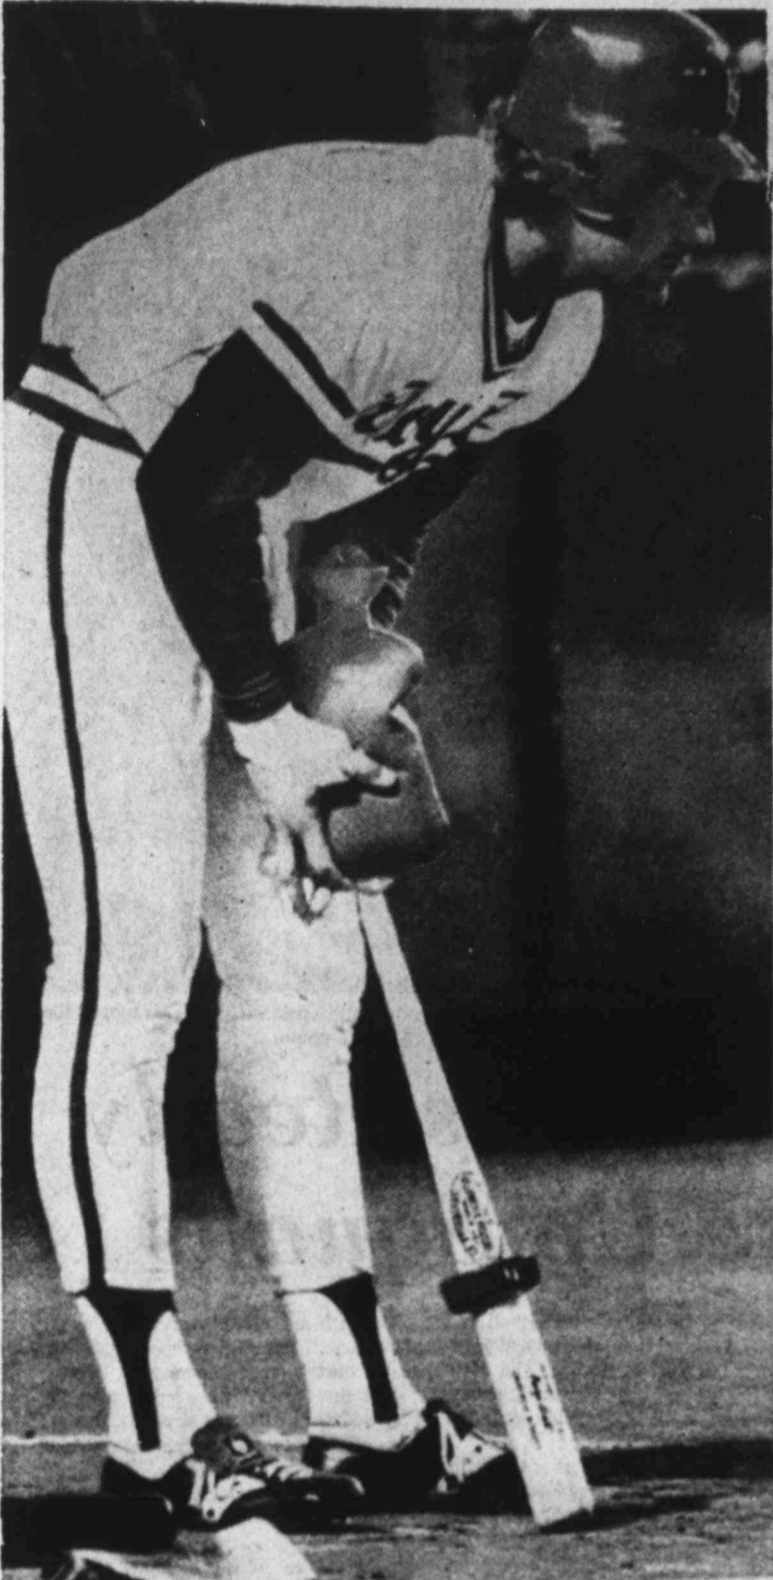

A native of El Dorado, Ark., Brock began his major league career with the Chicago Cubs in 1961 and was traded to the Cardinals in 1964.

He has a 17-year career batting average of .292 and a World Series batting average of .391.

Brock played in the 1964, 1967 and 1968 World Series, which he recalled as his greatest thrills in baseball.

Although he is 9-for-5 at the plate in this young season, Cards Manager Ken Boyer says he believes Brock will garner his 3,000th hit this year.

"On the basis of the spring he's had (a .345 average in Florida), I can't imagine he won't reach it," Boyer said. He noted that the speedster has had seven .300-plus years since joining the team.

New Addition Wastes No Time For Dodgers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Question: What former Pittsburgh left-hander strolled out of the Los Angeles bullpen Monday night and saved a game for the Dodgers?

Hint: It wasn't Terry Forster.

Give up? Would you believe Jerry Reuss?

Surely you remember Reuss, winner of 108 major league games. However, only three of those victories came last year when Reuss was the forgotten man on the Pirates' staff, appearing in only 23 contests.

In case you missed it, Reuss was traded to Los Angeles over the weekend for pitcher Rick Rhoden. And the Dodgers promptly put him to work. The 6-foot-5 southpaw hurled four scoreless innings, allowing just one hit, to preserve Bob Welch's 2-1 triumph over the Houston Astros.

"My attitude has always been just give me the ball and I'll pitch," Reuss said. "Lasorda (Manager Tom Lasorda) told me before the game he might need help in the bullpen and that I'd be first up. I said fine."

"I wanted to stay in Pittsburgh; that's why I signed a no-out contract. But I wasn't going to get the ball in Pittsburgh this year, so I'm glad I came to a team that's a contender where I'll get a chance to pitch."

In the only other National League game, Tom Seaver struck out 10 in eight innings and also hit a home run as the Cincinnati Reds whipped the Atlanta Braves 9-4. The Pittsburgh-Philadelphia and Montreal-New York games were rained out.

In the American League, the Detroit Tigers downed the Kansas City Royals 7-3 and the Seattle Mariners beat the Oakland A's 5-2.

Joe Ferguson's run-scoring single and Bill Russell's solo homer accounted for the Los Angeles runs against Houston's Vern Ruhle as the Dodgers stretched their winning streak to four games and ended the Astros' three-game skid.

Dusty Baker doubled for the Dodgers' first hit in the fifth and scored on Ferguson's single, ending a string of 26 scoreless innings by Houston pitchers. The Astros tied it in the fifth on singles by Enos Cabell and Art Howe, plus Alan Ashby's grounder. Russell homered to lead off the sixth.

Reuss didn't allow a ball out of the infield until Cesar Cedeno led off the ninth with a single and was sacrificed to second. The threat ended when Cabell flied out and Bob Watson grounded out.

Reds 9, Braves 4
Seaver got his 10th career home run in the fourth inning. It was his fourth against the Braves, whom he beat for the 27th time in 35 career decisions. Johnny Bench also homered for Cincinnati, while Gary Matthews and Barry Bonnell connected for Atlanta. Seaver allowed seven hits in eight innings.

Someone asked if Seaver knew the ball was gone when he hit it.

"I most certainly did," he said. "When you give up as many home runs as I do, you know the sound."

But Tom Terrific preferred to talk about his pitching.

"I was pleased," he said. "I figured I was about 90 percent of Tom Seaver. I felt I established my fastball. I was happy to be able to go that long that hard. I'd be

The ethics of tennis are simple: If you don't see the ball go out, then it's in.

At least that's the way many feel the game is supposed to be played. But Monday afternoon at the Lubbock Racquet Club, that cardinal rule fell by the wayside and the Texas Tech-Texas A&M dual match turned into a circus as a result.

But when all the charges and countercharges had been delivered, all the under-the-breath mutterings completed, the Aggies still came out on top to defeat the Raiders 8-1.

The Tech netters now regroup to face Rice today in their third Southwest conference match of the season. With the loss Monday, Tech fell to 0-2 in SWC play and 9-10 on the year.

The troubles began in the first set of the match between Tech's Chow Wah and A&M's Alberto Jimenez in the No. 2 position.

Midway through the set, with the score still close, Wah motioned that a volley from Jimenez had gone long. It seemed like a routine call at the moment but Jimenez didn't think so.

The Aggie netter exploded, screaming for an explanation from Wah — who insisted that his call was correct.

"Show me the skid mark," screamed Jimenez. "Show me the skid mark."

Naturally, there were quite a few skid marks on the court — Wah could have pointed to any of them but he didn't even look for one that would satisfy Jimenez.

But the Aggie netter was unrelenting in his demands, so finally Wah agreed to replay the point.

Wah lost the point the second time, he lost the game and wound up losing the set 6-4. But the fun had only started.

In the second set Wah reacted violently to a call made by Jimenez. The shot by Wah appeared to be inbounds to several spectators in the balcony area and they voiced their opinions.

Chap Outfield In For Remake?

GOODWELL, Okla. (Special) — When Lubbock Christian College takes the field here today against Panhandle State, the Chaparrals could be sporting a new look defensively.

And the changes could involve all-America Tim Leslie.

Coach Larry Hays has been agonizing for weeks about moving Leslie from first to left field. That would leave freshman Scott Wolf and junior Mark Morgan to divide the first-base duties. Hays also is considering installing Dave Hanna in right field.

"Whatever we do, we've got to do it by (today's) Panhandle game," Hays said prior to leaving Lubbock. He was thinking about the previous weekend's series with Texas Wesleyan where the Chaparrals dropped three of four. TWC bombed LCC with six triples and ten doubles in the four games.

"At the start of the year, we felt our outfield was solid. But, then (Tommy) Inman got hurt, we moved (Bobby) Doe from right to short, and we haven't had anyone to take charge in right or left," said Hays.

"Brady Brashear played extremely well in center, but he's been hampered by a severe groin pull the last two weeks and has been slowed."

The losses to TWC dropped the Chaps' record to 26-18 for the year, and they face the prospect of having to win eight of their remaining 12 games to be assured a spot in the NAIA Dist. VIII playoffs at Arlington on May 11-13.

Panhandle split games with the Chaparrals in Lubbock on April 2, winning 4-3 in eight innings and falling 6-3 in the second.

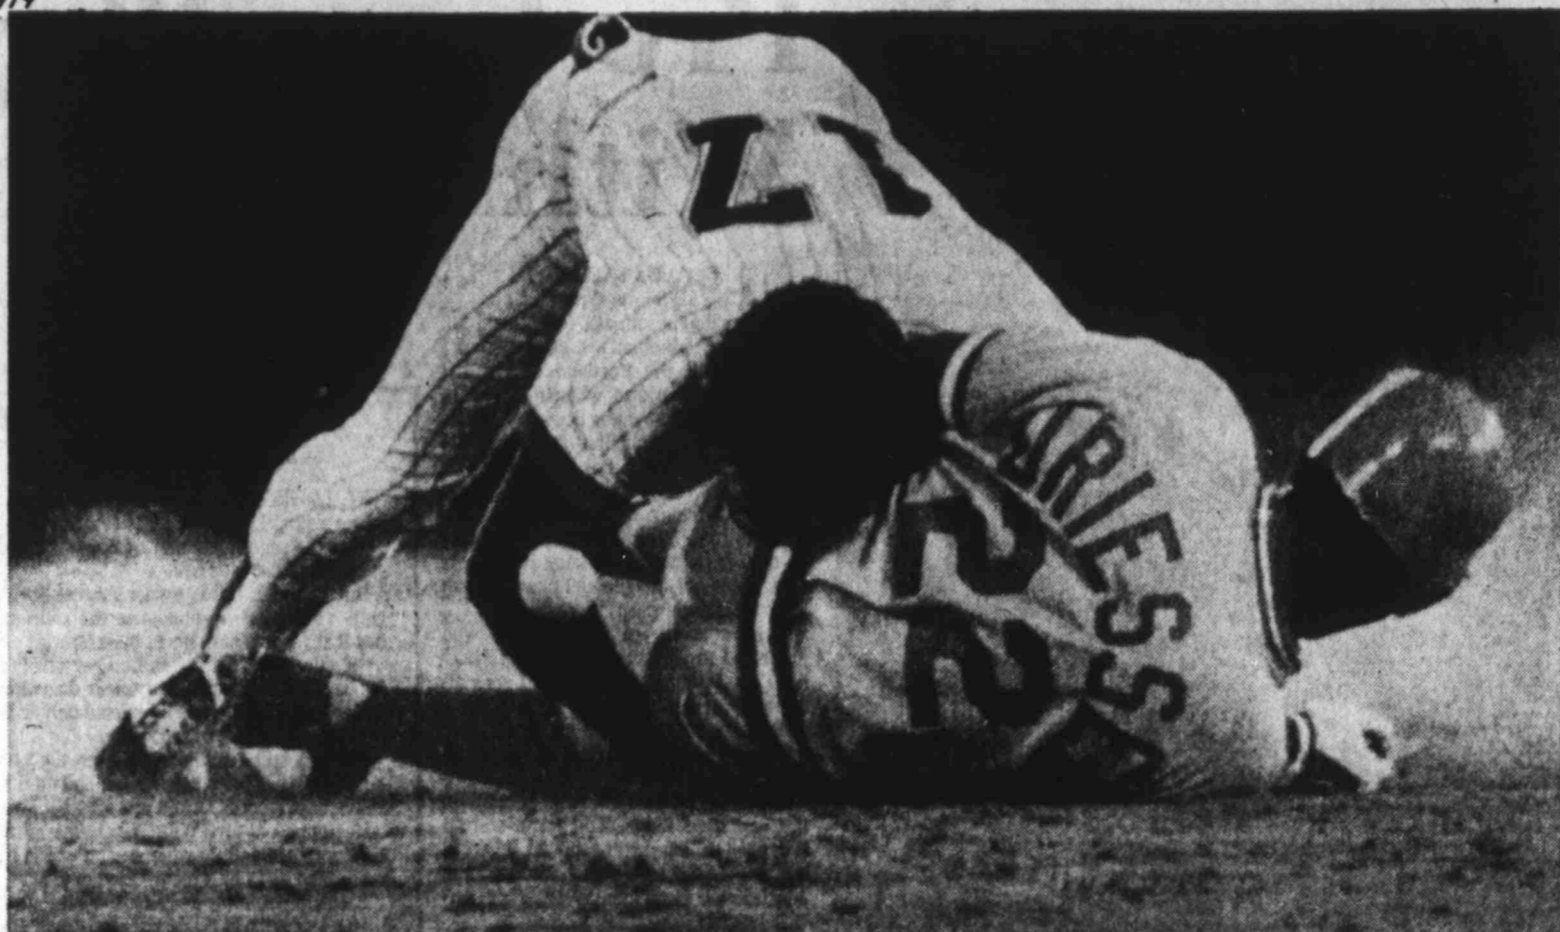

Freshman Kevin Burk (5-0) and Chris Cook (3-1) are expected to start for LCC, but Hays indicated he planned to use "five or six" pitchers during the doubleheader.

After today, LCC will return home and host Midwestern in doubleheaders Friday and Saturday in Texas Athletic Conference games.

After last weekend's series, TWC's Kyle Sanford nipped LCC's Leslie for league player-of-the-week honors.

Sanford went 10-for-16 with six doubles, two homers and 14 RBIs. Leslie went nine-for-22 with a pair of doubles, four homers and 10 RBIs.

Leslie continues to lead the league in seven hitting categories: average (.466), runs (49), hits (62), doubles (18), triples (four), homers (13) and RBIs (57).

Raider Gridders Ready To Choose Up Squads

Showers after workout were almost superfluous Monday. The rains outside took care of that.

For most of the spring, Texas Tech has had good weather, but even the rain Monday failed to slow the Raiders.

"Yes, we did have a good workout, even with the rain," commented head coach Rex Dockery. "It was a teaching day, going over the mistakes from Saturday's scrimmage. We made some mistakes in the scrimmage, and we tried to correct them as soon as possible."

"Now," he said, at end of the workout, "I have to talk to the seniors." And he headed down the hall to the conference room to speak to his team leaders.

This being the last week of spring drills, Dockery is planning both day-by-day workouts, as well as getting ready for Saturday's annual Red-White game in Jones Stadium.

Dockery plans a workout today, another Wednesday, and following the Wednesday drill, he and his senior players will divide the squad for Saturday's game.

It will be at that time, too, he said, that the names of four ticket-purchasers will be drawn and the four invited to serve as honorary coaches for the Saturday game.

Persons buying tickets are asked to write their names on a piece of the ticket which is returned to Tech. Then, from these ticket stubs, the four "coaches" will be selected.

Competing in football, basketball and track at Wheeler High school, Verden excelled at all sports. He won the state Class B shot and discus championships, then played on the basketball team in the summer all-star game.

Last spring, he missed part of the drills but returned in time to play for the White winners. Then, he progressed in playing time last fall as a sophomore.

According to Tech coaches, Verden has good size, quickness and strength. But, Verden commented, "It was my size (6-3, 240 now) that determined my playing football in college. I compete in track now and then, but I don't have the size for basketball."

Coming to Tech was natural for him. "I lived next door to Don Rives (former Raider now with the Chicago Bears), and my dad wanted me to come here. Of all the schools that recruited me, this was really the only place I considered."

Although he played very little as a freshman, "I think I developed most as a player during my freshman year. I completed the things that were needed to play and grew as far as strength, fundamentals, and lateral quickness, which I feel is my major asset."

Playing defensive tackle has been a development, but so has adjusting to the college game.

"There are a lot more quality athletes here than in Class B," Verden commented. "College was a big step. I was used to pushing my way around, but I had to learn technique here, which I didn't need in high school."

"Spring training is something we must go through to get ready for the season," says Verden. "I didn't come into this spring in great shape, because I didn't do a lot of off-season work; so I'll work on getting in shape, becoming a better player, and learning fundamentals."

Tech '9' Faces Busy Weekend

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — After having gotten the professional portion of the season out of the way, Texas Tech will launch a full week of college baseball games, starting with today's doubleheader against St. Mary's University.

After today, the Raiders will play Trinity in a two-night doubleheader starting at 6 p.m. Wednesday, take a day off for travel, then start a three-game Southwest Conference series with Houston.

The first game with UH will be Friday afternoon, followed by a doubleheader on Saturday.

Tech, after dropping two of three to Arkansas in a conference series over the weekend, fell to the Amarillo Gold Sox of the Class AA Texas League 9-6 in an exhibition at Amarillo Sunday night.

With an overworked pitching staff, Tech was unsure of a mound rotation for the series opening today. Raider coach Kal Segrist even had the use of an Amarillo Gold Sox hurler for the final inning of Sunday's exhibition.

The manpower situation was such that Tech had to go with only two hurlers, Mark Johnston and Robert Bryant, in the final two games against Arkansas.

Two of the Raiders' hurlers were shelved with injuries, after James Miller and Steve Ibarquen teamed to whip the Razorbacks on Friday.

"It'll just be a day-by-day thing on pitchers," commented Segrist. "We'll just have to see who is ready, since some of our kids are hurt."

Today's games will be a renewal of a series started earlier this season. Tech, with Gary Moyer pitching, defeated St. Mary's 14-9 in a game at Seguin on Feb. 24, but the next day at San Antonio, the Rattlers prevailed 5-0.

The games dropped the Raiders to 15-15 for the season.

In the nonconference games against Trinity and St. Mary's, Segrist is expected to experiment with his lineup from game to game.

Larry Selby, who plays left field, continues to lead the team in hitting, with a season .364 average. First baseman Craig Noonan is hitting .343, right fielder Randy Newton going .323.

Center fielder John Keller, at .308, is the only other Raider topping the .300 mark.

very happy to have that kind of stuff every game."

Tigers 7, Royals 3

Ron LeFlore drove in four runs with a two-run double in the seventh inning and a two-run single in the ninth as the Tigers banded the Royals their first setback in four games. Kansas City had taken a 2-1 lead off winner Milt Wilcox in the sixth when Pete LaCock doubled a run home and scored on Frank White's sacrifice fly. Wilcox, who was relieved by John Hiller beginning the seventh, had checked the Royals on three hits until Darrell Porter singled ahead of LaCock's double.

"We should be right in the middle of this thing," said Les Moss, savoring his first victory as a big league manager. "If our pitchers keep going like they have, we're going to win lots of games."

Mariners 5, A's 2

Ruppert Jones drove in two runs and scored a third as Seattle handed the winless A's their fourth straight defeat. Jones drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the third. In the seventh, he singled with one out, stole second, went to third on a wild throw by catcher Jeff Newman and scored on center fielder Tony Armas' throwing error. Meanwhile, Seattle left-handers Floyd Bannister and Shane Rawley limited the A's to nine hits and one earned run.

small group. "This is between me and him."

Wah asked to have the point replayed but, this time in a reverse of the previous appeal, the Aggie refused. This was more than Wah could handle.

"Show me the mark," he mimicked. "Show me the mark."

Tech coach Mark Hamilton was on the court by this time trying to calm his player, but the A&M coach, David Kent, took a different approach.

"Let 'em fight," he called down from the balcony. "Let 'em fight — if that's what they want."

Finally, with a line judge on each side of the court, the match got back under way. Wah lost the set 6-2, never appearing the same after the incidents.

But the oral fireworks were not over for the day. Two-thirds through the match between Raider David Chrissy and Aggie Trey Shutz, the Aggie walked off the floor. After splitting the first two sets, amid numerous disputes by both players, Shutz went off to find his coach.

After a 15-minute delay the match was resumed, with an army of judges, to ensure fair play. Chrissy dropped that final set and lost the match also.

In fact, the Raiders only won one point, in No. 1 singles where Doug Davis defeated Reid Freeman 7-6, 6-4.

And even that match had its tension. Davis had played for Aggie coach Kent (when both were at West Texas State) and had quit the team to transfer to Tech.

"It's so competitive out there that sometimes you just don't trust the guy you're playing against," said Tech coach Hamilton. "It's just a problem. I mean, you wouldn't play a basketball or football game without an official — would you?"

The results of those singles matches seemed to have a carryover effect to the doubles events where the Aggies took all three matches. Each doubles match was officiated by a crew of judges.

But not even the judges were entirely satisfactory to the A&M coach who wondered if they were in the right position to call the match.

"We were a little less intense in the doubles matches than we had been in the singles," admitted Hamilton. "It's hard to stay up when you've already lost the match in singles. And David (Chrissy) and Chow (Wah) were a little upset."

"They thought that they should've won."

Today's match with Rice will begin at 2 p.m. on the Tech courts unless more rainy weather forces the Raiders back indoors at the Racquet Club.

The Owls have already lost to A&M three times this year — something that encourages Hamilton.

"It's going to be close," he said. "But we've got a good chance against Rice. I just hope things don't get crazy again."

Singles — Doug Davis, Tech, def. Reid Freeman, 7-6, 6-4; Alberto Jimenez, A&M, def. Chow Wah, 6-4, 6-2; Mike Moss, A&M, def. Harrison Bowers, 7-6, 6-2; Trey Shutz, A&M, def. David Chrissy 6-3, 3-6, 6-2; Heinrich Roter, A&M, def. Randy Clayton 6-1, 2-6, 6-3.

Doubles — Freeman-Jimenez def. Davis-Bowers 4-3, 7-6; Shutz-Moss def. Chrissy-Wah 6-3, 6-4; Roter-Grubert def. Davis-Grey Davis 6-3, 7-6.

An AP Sports Analysis
By WILL GRIMSLEY

Recently, the leaders of the U.S. Olympic Committee were entertaining the Soviet Union's top sports official, Sergei Pavlov, at USOC headquarters in Colorado Springs when the touchy question of government control of sports was broached.

"One question I'd like to ask," said Bob Paul, the USOC director of information. "We've always heard that Russian sports were completely financed by the government. Could you tell us how much your Olympic program cost the USSR?"

"Nothing," the Russian replied succinctly. "But we always have been given to understand that Russian sports teams were virtually professional because of full government support," the fearless Mr. Paul pressed the issue.

"We have no government subsidy," replied Pavlov, the Soviet Minister of Sport. "Our sports programs are supported by the trade union clubs and a national lottery. Our government is no more involved than your own."

Thus, by one simple, forthright question, was slain — if true — one of the oldest canards in sports.

For years, we in the democratic west have accused the Russians of being outright pros while our own athletes were pure amateurs, struggling on the nickles and dimes they could pick up from patronizing friends.

"We have 17 principal labor unions and countless clubs," Pavlov said. "Every club member (most of the USSR 280 million people belong to a labor union) are taxed one percent of their earnings. Every young member of a labor club is assessed kopeks (40 cents a year). "Forty cents a year?" Don Miller, executive director of the USOC, responded facetiously. "Don't you think that's a little exorbitant?"

The anecdote was repeated here Monday when Miller made an Olympic presentation to the National Sports Writers Association at the group's annual awards ceremony.

Miller sought to ease reservations that Western visitors might have about the 1980 Games in Moscow as a result of rumors of endless red tape, bureaucracy and violations of civil rights in the Russian capital.

"I am confident the Russians will make every effort for these Games to be the best organized and most pleasurable ever," Miller said. "They would like to show the world they have the ability to stage a world-wide event."

In other words, the Olympics will serve as a great propaganda vehicle for Russian ideology, but Miller sees no likelihood that the Russians will turn the Games into a political coup.

"It would be counter-productive," the U.S. Olympic official said, "for them to stage scenes such as in the World University Games in 1973 when police and Soviet spectators harassed Jewish athletes."

"The Russians are even welcoming the People's Republic of China. They realize the presence of Mainland China, with its 900 million population, would enhance the Games. They insist, however, there will be no barriers on political, racial and religious considerations."

Miller said he believed Moscow would profit from the preceding Olympics. In 1972 at Munich, the Germans sought to erase all memories of Hitler's 1936 Nazi Games with their goose-stepping legions and Swastika banners. Munich subordinated nationalism, promoted good will and relaxed security. The result was the Arab terrorist raid on the Israelis, resulting in 17 deaths.

Remembering this, Montreal in 1976 invoked a security so tight that athletes and visitors alike felt they were in a strait-jacket.

"I predict the Russians will permit free movement," said Miller, who visited Russia three months ago. "They know obtuse security will spoil the progress of the Games. They will have security but it won't be conspicuous. Their security begins at the borders."

He said the Russians had remarkable facilities which would only need refurbishing before 1980.

"They are building five new hotels in Moscow," he added. "One is complete. The Olympic Village will be a showcase of apartment houses which later will be converted into public housing."

The USOC executive director said he expected an accommodation to be worked out between the People's Republic of China and Nationalist China (Taiwan) with separate teams under one flag and one national song — a procedure followed by East and West Germany before the two teams were divided in 1968.

"The People's Republic of China will be strong in gymnastics, shooting and cycling," he said. "But it will be only a token team. They will not be ready for full representation until 1984 when they should have developed techniques from exchanges with other countries."

"The Russians were sure they would be strong enough to represent their country internationally when they first entered the Games in 1952. I don't think the Chinese will wait until they reach a similar stage."

Masters Key For Jack

By BOB GREEN

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — It is a time of testing for Jack Nicklaus.

It is now, in the Masters, the first of the Big Four events around which he has built his golfing life, that he may determine the direction in which the remainder of his career will go.

That career, of course, is unmatched in its greatness. He has established himself without equal in the history of the game. He has won everything worth winning. His are the standards against which all else is measured.

And the cornerstone of the record he has written into the books is the list of achievements in the majors: a record five Masters titles, four PGA national championships, three victories each in the British and U.S. Opens — a record total of 15 major professional triumphs.

He insists he can continue to play at or near that same quality level for several years.

But his performance so far this season — perhaps the poorest of his career — has given rise to doubts.

His golfing obituary has been written. "Fine," said Nicklaus, with just a hint of annoyance. "It's good for the writers. They write that, then, soon, they'll have something else to write."

He needs proof. He knows he needs proof. And he needs it soon.

Last winter he took a long break from the game he has dominated for almost two decades. Much was made of his announced reduction in his playing schedule. It was not so much a reduction as a concentration, however.

"Actually, I'm playing about the same number of tournaments during the golf season," he said. "It's just that I'm cutting out tournaments not in the golf season, that is in the fall and winter. I will continue to play the majors and the tournaments I feel it's necessary to properly prepare for the majors."

So far, it hasn't worked.

In five starts this year, he hasn't been in the top 10. In his last 14 rounds he's broken par once. In his last two rounds he shot a total of 160. He doesn't rank among the top 70 money-winners. His stroke average is 72.67. He's had scores of 294, 294 and 300 in his last three starts. He finished 20 shots behind Larry Nelson at Inverrary and 15 back of Mark McCumber at Dorcal.

As a pro, he never has come into Augusta with such a record.

Now it is a test of whether he can reverse it.

"Obviously I haven't played as well as I'd like to," he said. "But at times I've hit the ball reasonably well, controlled the ball the way I want. My putting isn't all that bad. I just haven't been able to score, to keep things together."

But that was in some regular-season events. This is the Masters.

His fellow professionals have little doubt he again will be a major factor in the revered event that starts Thursday on the flowered hills of Augusta National, a course he has played with unmatched success.

"He'll get that spring fever," said Ray

Floyd. "It's the Masters. None of us are concerned about Jack's ability to come back."

"Throughout his career, Jack has had a way of answering his critics and detractors with his golf game," said Tom Watson.

"He is burning inside," said old friend Gary Player, the 1978 Masters champion. "Just as always, he'll reach inside himself for something extra at the Masters."

"Don't wake him up," said Lee Trevino. "You don't mess with a sleeping bear. You wake him up and he's grumpy and he's liable to claw you up something awful."

It is the time of testing to determine if Nicklaus again can answer his critics, if he can again reach inside himself for that extra measure of greatness, if the claws still are there.

NBA Playoffs Get Underway

 open Wednesday, with Atlanta at Houston and New Jersey at Philadelphia. While Davis and Thompson go head-to-head, the other forward matchup pairs two of the best power forwards in the business, Lucas of the Blazers and Truck Robinson of the Suns.

Neither is in the best of physical condition, however. Lucas has a sore right hand and Robinson is just playing his way back into top shape after missing 13 games because of a mysterious viral infection.

Another outstanding power forward, George McGinnis of Denver, will be on the sidelines as the Nuggets open their series against Los Angeles. McGinnis suffered torn ligaments in his left ankle on March 30, and although his teammates picked up the slack in his absence and the club finished strong, the Lakers are happy not to have to deal with Big George. "I feel good about Denver, especially with George McGinnis out of the lineup," said Lakers guard Norm Nixon. "They're not as strong inside. George presented a lot of problems for us. Now I think we match up better against them."

That's because the Lakers don't really have an outstanding power forward, relying instead on the center play of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the playmaking of Nixon and the outside shooting of forward Jamaal Wilkes and guard Ron Boone and Lou Hudson.

Lakers Coach Jerry West will start Don Ford at forward instead of Adrian Dantley, who missed three games recently because of an ankle injury and did not play well upon his return to the lineup.

The Lakers were clobbered by Seattle 113-93 Friday night, but closed out their regular season with solid victories over Phoenix and Portland.

"Our guys are very positive now," said West. "I think we'll play well, and we're capable of beating anyone when we play well."

Issel Takes Jabbar In Pivotal Matchup

DENVER (AP) — On paper, the pairing of Los Angeles Laker center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar against Denver's Dan Issel is a mismatch.

The 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar, an imposing figure in the pivot who at times is the most dominating player in the game, has a five-inch height edge on Issel, and his season averages of 23.8 points and 12.8 rebounds are comfortably ahead of Issel's more modest averages of 17.0 and 9.1.

But Issel often gives Abdul-Jabbar fits, using his long jump shot to draw the Laker out from under the basket, or faking the jumper and driving past him. Issel scored 25 points during one meeting this year, and their head-to-head matchups have been close statistically.

"It's not hard to get up for a player like Abdul-Jabbar," said Issel as the Nuggets prepared for tonight's opening game of the best-of-three National Basketball Association playoff series. The series will shift to Los Angeles for Game 2 on Friday, with a third game, if necessary, to be played in Denver on Sunday.

The winner advances to a best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series against Seattle.

Issel, in his eighth pro season, said he plans his usual strategy against Abdul-Jabbar.

"I think I'll try to use my outside jump shot on him," Issel said. "If he comes out to defend me, that will open up the middle. He's going to have to make a decision on how to play me — whether to come out or stay under the basket."

One decision the Lakers won't have to make is how to contain George McGinnis. The burly Denver forward is sidelined with partially torn ligaments in his left ankle. His absence removes the muscle advantage the Nuggets would have had — an advantage they used to win the season series with Los Angeles 3-1.

"We can match up with them (the Lakers)," said Denver Coach Donnie Walsh. "The difference now is we can't overmatch them. We would bring in Tom Boswell with McGinnis and they couldn't match us. We lose that now."

The Nuggets, traditionally a poor playoff team, enter post-season action on a high note, having won 10 of their last 12 games, including three of their last four on the road. David Thompson, who has taken over the scoring burden for Denver, popped in 44 points in the regular-season finale.

The Lakers also appear confident. "Our guys are very positive now," said Coach Jerry West. "I think we'll play well. And we're capable of beating anyone when we play well."

Both teams finished the regular season with 47-35 records, but Denver got the homecourt edge by virtue of winning the season series.

To advance to the next round, the Lakers must win one game in Denver — something they've never done. Los Angeles is 0-6 lifetime at McNichols Arena.

NHL Also Starts

By The Associated Press
 The Philadelphia Flyers came on strong late in the National Hockey League season to finish second in their division, but that's all history to Coach Pat Quinn.

"Certainly it's satisfying to reach that goal," said Quinn, who guided the Flyers to an 18-4 record after replacing Bob McCammon as coach on Feb. 1, "but everything really hinges on the playoffs. That's what we'll be measured by."

The Flyers open their best-of-three first-round series at home tonight against the Vancouver Canucks. In other playoff openers tonight, the Los Angeles Kings are at the New York Rangers, the Toronto Maple Leafs visit the Atlanta Flames and the Pittsburgh Penguins are at the Buffalo Sabres.

Although the Flyers were last in the Patrick Division midway in the season, they finished with a rush to win at least 40 games for the sixth year in a row.

"I think we can be a dark horse," said Quinn, looking to the playoffs. "I think we're going in with some form of momentum. We kind of stormed into second place and I hope it keeps going."

The Flyers lost only three of their last 15 games to overtake the Rangers and Flames and finish second behind the New York Islanders.

"If we'd finished fourth, it wouldn't have mattered how many points we had — we'd still have been last," said Paul Holmgren of the Flyers. "And when a team has won two Stanley Cups, like this one has, that would be pretty hard to swallow."

Instead the Flyers are heading into the playoffs on the upbeat, and Coach Quinn has optimistic words for his players.

"I'm going to tell them we're going to the top," he said. "Sure, we should be able to beat Vancouver and I fully expect to. But after that, who knows?"

Vancouver is also playing well lately, however, having lost only two of its last 11 regular-season games.

On the other hand, the Rangers go into the playoffs having won only two of their last 12 games and having allowed 38 goals in their last six games. The Kings hope to capitalize, particularly with their high-scoring line of Marcel Dionne, Dave Taylor and Charlie Simmer, which produced more than 140 points in less than 40 games together.

Suns Host Blazers

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Suns host the Portland Trail Blazers tonight, but Portland Coach Jack Ramsay thinks the homecourt advantage "really is questionable" in the short, first-round National Basketball Association playoff series.

Last season, the Suns were ousted from the opening round of the playoffs when Milwaukee took the first two games.

"I think they've got to be looking over their shoulder after what happened last year," said Ramsay.

The best-of-three series will find game No. 2 at Portland on Friday night, with the third game back in Phoenix on Sunday if needed.

Meanwhile, both the Suns and Trail Blazers take losing streaks into tonight's contest, which gets underway at 7:30 p.m. MST. Portland lost its last three games of the regular season, although it had won nine of 10 to capture the final Western Conference playoff berth before the slide. Phoenix, on the other hand, dropped its final two games after recording a franchise-high 50 victories. However, Phoenix Coach John MacLeod feels that will have little bearing on the series.

"Our games with Portland are always extremely intense anyway, and now we've added the playoff atmosphere," he said.

The Suns won three of four regular-season games with Portland, including a 106-95 triumph in Phoenix last week.

As for injuries, Portland will be without forward Bob Gross, who has a knee injury. But his replacement, Mychal Thompson, has played well in the Blazers' drive to the playoffs.

For Phoenix, starting forward Len "Truck" Robinson is still not 100 percent after recovering from a viral infection which caused him to miss 13 games late in the season. So, MacLeod said he probably would start veteran Garfield Heard, although he has seen little action the past two weeks while an ankle injury healed.

Coronado In Control Of 4-AAAA Scramble

By BOB BAJACKSON
 Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
 Walking across the parking lot towards the Coronado baseball field Saturday afternoon, coach John Dudley glanced up towards the sky and said, "if it would only rain now to wet down our field, the day would be complete."

In the early part of the 4-AAAA district race, the momentum has been pouring in the Mustangs' favor. After Coronado's doubleheader sweep of Lubbock High, the Mustangs have the 4-AAAA top spot all to them themselves.

"We have to keep winning," said Dudley. "I sure would like to go into the Monterey series only needing a split."

Though Dudley was thinking a little bit ahead, the Mustangs will try to set those circumstances up today when they visit Plainview.

In other 4-AAAA action, Monterey will try to get back into the thick of the district race in Hereford, while Lubbock High enjoys the day off.

In 1-AAA play, Dunbar will open the loop race hosting preseason favorite Levelland, while Estacado will begin loop play in Borger.

"I really don't know that much about Plainview," said Dudley. "But we can't take anything for granted. After all, they beat Monterey one game."

Speaking of Monterey, coach Bobby Moegle's biggest disappointment so far has been the pitching staff.

"We've been scoring a lot of runs," said

Moegle. "But the other teams have been hitting our pitchers just as well. The only consistent pitcher we have is Steve Coleman."

Monterey, which will bring a 2-2 district record into today's games, needs to sweep both ends of the twinbill with Hereford to stay in contention for the first-half championship.

At Estacado, coach Vince Buffamonte also expresses doubts about his pitching rotation.

"We have the potential, but the inexperience forces us to make some mistakes," said the Matador coach. "But there is no question about our ability to hit the ball."

Estacado will bring a 9-8 nondistrict record into the opener compared to Borger's 4-11 mark. However, Borger hasn't been beaten badly by anyone, Buffamonte indicated.

The Lobos will bring a 14-3 nondistrict record into the contest, while the Panthers are at 3-11.

"We've had a lot of problems with making errors in the infield," said Rogers. "But I've been especially proud of the way our kids have played."

'Ice Man' Leads NBA Second Straight Season

NEW YORK (AP) — San Antonio's George Gervin led the National Basketball Association in scoring for the second straight year, finishing with a 29.6 average, according to figures released Monday.

Gervin beat San Diego's Lloyd Free, who averaged 28.8 for the scoring title and became the sixth player in NBA history to win consecutive championships. The others were George Mikan, Neil Johnston, Wilt Chamberlain, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Bob McAdoo.

A year ago, Gervin had an average of 27.2 for the scoring title, winning it on the final day of the season when he hit 63 points to shade Denver's David Thompson. Thompson had 73 points in the final game and finished with a 27.15 average.

This season, Thompson finished sixth with a 24.0 average behind Gervin, Free, Milwaukee's Marques Johnson (25.6), Boston's Bob McAdoo (24.8), and Moses Malone of Houston (24.8).

Kevin Porter of Detroit led the league in assists with an average of 13.4 per game and became the first player in league history to surpass 1,000 assists when he finished with 1,099. The old mark was 910 by Nate Archibald set in 1972-73.

Malone led the league in rebounds with 17.6 per game, almost five per game more than the runners-up, Rich Kelley of New Orleans and Abdul-Jabbar. Malone also broke his own league record for offensive rebounds with 587, breaking his mark of 437 set in 1976-77.

Houston's Rick Barry won his fifth free throw percentage record, finishing at .947 and breaking the mark of .945 set by Ernie DiGregorio in 1976-77.

Boston's Cedric Maxwell was the field goal percentage leader at .584. Abdul-Jabbar led in blocked shots with 3.95 per game.

COACH HIRED
 PETERSBURG, Va. (AP) — W. Floyd Laisure, former coach at Alabama State and Lincoln, was named head basketball coach at Virginia State College. He succeeds Harold Deane, who resigned after the past season. Laisure, 38, was head coach at Alabama State from 1974 to 1978 and guided Lincoln from 1969 to 1974.

Marvins Return To Court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Marvin and Michelle Triola Marvin are returning to court for the final scene in their landmark property rights trial — the attorneys' closing arguments.
In summations expected to last most of today's session, the opposing lawyers will seek to sway Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall in their favor.

The judge, who heard three months of testimony in the Hollywood-style courtroom drama, has said he will issue a written decision within a week after the arguments.
Miss Marvin's lawyer, Marvin Mitchellson, has said his 46-year-old client deserves half of the assets Marvin acquired during the six years the couple lived together as lovers at the actor's Malibu beach house. Specifically, Miss Marvin is seeking $1.8 million.

Marvin's chief attorney, A. David Kagon, has said Marvin, 55, never intended to share any property with his former lover and owes her nothing.
In briefs filed last week, Miss Marvin's lawyers stressed the love and affection she gave Marvin, her efforts to stop his drinking and her role as housekeeper, companion and helpmate.

But Marvin's lawyers said she was well compensated during the relationship and received as much companionship from Marvin as she gave him.
"When (Miss Marvin) cooked a meal or cleaned a house, she was also cooking food for herself or cleaning up after herself," the Marvin brief said.

The trial, which has drawn worldwide attention, provided a backstage peek at love and sex among celebrities.
It also focused attention on the changing morals of American couples who shun marriage and choose to live together without contracts.

A ruling by the California Supreme Court, holding that unmarried cohabitants may sue for property when they separate, made Marvin vs. Marvin a precedent-setting case.
The outcome of the current trial is expected to affect the future of other litigation involving unmarried couples in cases that have been referred to as involving divorce without marriage.

CUMBERLAND, R.I. (AP) — Paul, an avowed homosexual, wants permission to take another boy to the junior prom at Cumberland High School, and school officials are in a quandary over what to do about his request.
Paul's plan, which a homosexual group says may be unique, also pits him against his father, who opposes the son's request.

Homosexual Requests Prom Date

CUMBERLAND, R.I. (AP) — Paul, an avowed homosexual, wants permission to take another boy to the junior prom at Cumberland High School, and school officials are in a quandary over what to do about his request.

Paul's plan, which a homosexual group says may be unique, also pits him against his father, who opposes the son's request.
"Feel I have every right to go, just as any other junior does," Paul, 17, said Monday. "I thought it's about time somebody did it. It's time I stood up for what I believe in."

The school administration has asked the system's lawyer for a legal opinion and planned to have a tentative decision for Paul today, said Robert G. McGinnis, assistant school superintendent for Cumberland, a town of about 30,000 people in northern Rhode Island.

Paul, whose father asked that his last name be withheld to protect the family's privacy, said students are not allowed to go to the prom alone. He said the school's principal refused to let him take another boy, a student at another school, to the May 4 prom, so he asked the school committee to review the case. The principal declined to comment.

"Quite frankly, we're in a quandary," McGinnis said, adding that Paul's father opposes his son's plans.
"There's some complication vis-a-vis individual rights versus parental rights," McGinnis said. "I think the parents obviously have rights. I'm not at all clear which rights prevail."

Car Maker Increases Prices By 2 Percent

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp., saying it was acting within the Carter administration's anti-inflation guidelines, followed the lead of other U.S. auto manufacturers and raised the average price of its cars and Jeeps by 2 percent, or $141.
The increase was necessary to recover "higher costs for material and labor," the automaker said Monday.
