LAUGHING OFF THE YEARS

Advancing years hold no terrors for Justice Owen J. Roberts, youngest member of the United States Supreme Court. The smile that wreathes his whole face tells of his 62nd birthday hope to spend many more years on the high bench, no matter what Congress does in the way of limiting the ages of justices.

STAMEY HEADS SCORE, PIPPEN NEXT IN LOW

Twenty-two had posted qualifying scores for the Golf tournament to begin Monday, with three players still out, at a late hour Saturday night. A further time was granted players to qualify by allowing the time limit to expire tonight instead of Saturday night. Several had to work Saturday and could not play was given as the reason for the extension of time.

WORK TO COST $13,000 WITH 70 MEN USED

Seventy men are being drafted to sign up for work on the $13,000 football stadium project to begin in Cisco Monday morning when WPA workers are to begin clearing away rubbish, preparatory to starting work on the steel and concrete structure to take the place of the wooden tiers that have seen service during the past ten years or more.

The first bleachers were built by the Lions club when ten members of that body signed a note for $1,000 to construct seats on the field leased for football use at that time. As fame of the Big Dam Fighting Lobos spread through spectacular action and victories won over the district, seating capacity was enlarged to accommodate immense throngs that crowded their way into the field to see those big Lobos swamp their opponents.

Plans call for 2 sections of seats to take the place of those to be removed. They will be 9 seats high with the lower tiers of seats high enough from the ground for spectators to see over a tall man's head. The capacity of the two sections will be about the same as the entire four sides now seated. Ten thousand people have found seating and standing room in the bigger contests held on this field.

A press box will be constructed on the north side section, enclosed and with glass windows to protect sports writers from the jam and inclement weather. The newsmen will be placed on the home side of the sections as is the custom in most modern stadiums. As it has been, newsmen have been seated on the side of the enemy.

About 90 men are requested in the official orders but it is thought that about 70 will be secured. It is significant that, according to the statement of local engineer, Wesley Harrell, a great number of WPA labor has been absorbed in private enterprises and available men are hard to secure for this project.

The field will be ploughed, filled and drained.

NAVAL BOARD INVESTIGATES ZEP BURNING

LAKEHURST, N. J., May 8 (U.P.)—A naval board today began its own inquiry into the burning of the German dirigible Hindenburg, as the death toll of the disaster increased to 35.

The navy Department's investigation preceded two other official studies of the crash. The Department of Commerce will open hearings Monday and a group of German aviation experts headed by Dr. Hugo Eckener will investigate later.

All will make a thorough study of every possible cause, including the suggestion of sabotage.

William Speck, chief radio operator of the Hindenburg and Erik Knoecher of Germanwag, a passenger, died today, bringing the total dead to 35. At least two others were near death.

Sailors under Commander Charles Rosenthal of the Lakehurst base guarded the wreckage of the ship to preserve it for investigations.

While crew members mourned the...

Junior Carnival is Voted Big Success

Considerable money was added to the Junior class treasure as a result of the carnival held at and near city hall last night, while the high school classmates enjoyed the duckings of their beloved teachers received through the straight throwing of schoolboys who were able to hit the target that tripped the trigger that ducked Supt. Cluck Principal Stamey and Coach Cooper.

A womanless stie show by local business men who lended their charming forms to styling garments of the latest vogue for the merriment of youngsters and parents who were the audience at the city hall functions, were perhaps along with the Colton Pickers orchestra, the two most popular numbers of the program. At least they brought the most applause. Musical numbers of songs, instrumental and dancing numbers were enjoyed at the inside events.

The ducking stool, country store, and other merchandising events were held on the vacant lot adjacent to Sixth street. Large numbers attended all features of the carnival which was staged by the juniors to augment the junior banquet fund for the seniors event May 21.

Two buildings finished with rock veneering, one in the making, and the "big unit" being constructed by Haskell church with the foundation already laid for solid rock walls represent the work of the Presbyterians preparation for the encampment at Lake Cisco to date, said Rev. Entries in the various special events are the largest in history and advance reservations point toward the heaviest attendance in recent years. Two hundred West Texas towns have nominated directors for 1937-38. Thirty bands are entered in the music contest, and 70 speakers have entered the "My

Today is Mother's Day

The second Sunday in May each year is observed, by common consent in most states, in honor of Motherhood. The day was first suggested by Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia, Pa., and in 1911 the president authorized the display of the flag on all government buildings on this day. The wearing of a white carnation is the visible manifestation of the event, which is further celebrated by sermons in churches, program by school children, and family reunions.

There is no relationship in life that carries such responsibility as Motherhood. Not one that bears with it such love and ecstasy, such grief and suffering. In her cup are mingled pain and joy, anguish and delight, bitter despair and buoyant hope. "Children bear the wounds, but the mother bears the scars."

There is no word that touches the human heart like the word "mother" and no theme has ever brought forth such tribute from writers and artists. "Raphael's Madonnas are but the shadows of a mother's love fixed in permanent outline forever."

The race moves forward on the feet of little children. Mother "walks along the heights with God" and, for her children's sake, sanctifies herself, that they may strive to do and be their very best. She tries to allure and win them to the "Highway of Life." She prays for them through all the days—whether those days be flooded with brilliant sunshine or saddened by darkened shadows. She glows over their triumphs, smiles bravely over the heartaches caused by their failures. She urges and inspires them to build such "stately mansions for their souls" that regret will not stalk beside them through life, like some hideous skeleton of the closet whose gruesome shadow will be with them always. Mother's breast nestles her child, her hand leads him gently, her arm shields him bravely, her lap rests him peacefully, while her smile in the morning and her kiss at night, veil the tears she sheds or color the tones of her song. No matter what the day brings forth she prays and prays and prays.

She may chide, but she is unstinted in her praise. Has she not given him his body, his bone and sinew, his heart and brain? She keeps a tender vigil over him and ministers unto him tirelessly. So proudly she gazes at him and clasps her hands in rapture because he is growing and developing into manhood's estate. Such a short time ago she carried him under her heart, then in her arms, but now he is growing tall and she has tried to "open for him the eastern windows that look toward the sun." All his inspirations come in on the wings of the morning, his hopes, his aspirations! He so confident, so sure of himself now. She knows the pitfalls of life are ahead; she realizes the danger, and fear clutches at her heart strings! May the plaint of Judah never be hers and force her to say "How can I go up to the Father and the lad not be with me?"

She knows that it is not the "philosophies, the theories, nor the codes of ethics that a man acquires in his later years that really influence him." It is the things she is teaching him at her knee, the principles that she instills into him, the tastes and habits that she formed, the strength and courage that she breathes into him.

The wonderful things that men build in the days of their strength are but the reproduction of the beautiful thoughts that were whispered in their ears in the days of youth.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The Wagner-Stegall housing bill is one of the major legislative measures most seriously threatened by the administration's new emphasis on federal economy.

The cost of the bill and the size of the program which it contemplates will almost certainly be reduced. Supporters are hopeful, however, that the framework and policies of the bill will be preserved to the end that the government will embark on a national housing program. In this program, housing for low income groups will be recognized as a national responsibility.

Roosevelt's frequent references to that one-third of the population which, he says, is "ill housed," have been accompanied by assurances that he really wanted a worthwhile federal housing program in which decent housing could be provided for families whose incomes are so low that private enterprise cannot afford to build for them.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau criticized the Wagner program from the beginning on the ground that it was too expensive. Now Roosevelt himself has become disturbed by failure of tax revenues to come up to anticipation, and over the size of next year's deficit. He also has declared a policy of selective spending in which there will be less emphasis on durable goods of the type which go into construction. Neither the White House nor the Treasury, however, has yet suggested a substitute for the Wagner-Stegall bill. The best bet seems to be that Congress will create a United States Housing Authority and give to it a certain amount of money with which to make a start.

The bill, as it is expected to be reported out in the Senate floor, would lend a billion dollars to local housing authorities in the next four years. Subsidies amounting to about 3 1/2 per cent could be paid annually for 60 years and, if paid at the allowable maximum, would more than cover the carrying charges of the loan. Sponsors say this would provide adequate new housing for families in the $1000 income class and below. The sums provided in the bill would mean beginning of construction of 275,000 dwelling units in the next four years.

JUDGE JOHN PATRICK DEVANEY of Minneapolis, president of the National Lawyers Guild, which recently was organized in revolt against conservative policies of the American Bar Association, is a good friend, neighbor and golfing champion of Frederick H. Stinchfield of Minneapolis, president of the American Bar Association.

When Stinchfield returned to Minneapolis following his election as head of the A. B. A., Devaney was toastmaster at a banquet given for him by the lawyers of the state. And after Devaney's election as president of the N. L. G., Stinchfield wrote him a letter of congratulation.

Devaney, who was chief justice in Minnesota under the late Gov. Floyd Olson, predicts he will have 5000 members in his new guild by June. Stinchfield has about 29,000 in his. There are about 175,000 lawyers in the country and Devaney estimates about 20 per cent are liberal.

OUT OUR WAY

"In the shadow of every great man's fame walks his mother," some one has said. How content she is to walk "in the shadow!" How thankful she is that she has had a part in forming character, shaping his destiny, inspiring and helping him to better things.

A man can best express his love for his mother by living the right kind of life thereby honoring her and making her feel that her labor and care have not been for naught. It is not given to many mothers to be what the world calls great; only to be reflectors that their sons may shine the brighter. Many are unknown—millions of them—and, while a nation sings the praises of the unknown soldier may it not forget that back of him is the unknown mother.

A day for mother? Ah yes, no matter what the anniversary is that we celebrate, back of it is mother. All days are hers! On this day then, from pulpit and hall, around the fireside or in the busy marts of trade wear a flower, that shall say to the world, "I remember and honor the best mother in the world—my mother."

Eastland County Oil Development

EASTLAND, May 8.—Completed recently as a gasser testing 3,750,000 feet daily with 500 pounds rock pressure, the L. L. Weiburn No. 1 W. U. Fox, lot 49 leagues 3 and 4, McLennan county school land, six miles southeast of Eastland, is being drilled to 1,420 feet for possible oil production.

The test, drilled by Price and Thompson, was recently sold to Wellborn of Senatobia, Miss., and whose No. 2 W. U. Fox was plugged when dry at total depth of 1,419 feet. Gas in the No. 1 Fox was topped and dry sand at 1,036 feet and was bottomed at 1,102 feet. A late report placed the drill at 1,300 feet in the No. 1 Fox.

SYBIL HENDRY, sociable, Joan Hendry's niece and Joan's rival in love.
PHILIP HENDRY, Sybil's brother.
DOROTHY STARRKE, Joan's childhood friend.
CHARLES NORTON, California mining promoter.

Yesterday, John Hendry tells Bob that he has provided for Joan in his will; later the two discuss old mining days in California and the murder of Jeremiah Jordan.

CHAPTER XVI

NORTON was in the office again on Wednesday. Joan shuddered now every time she saw the man. Bob was right; he was a horrible person. But his presence was even more terrifying to her. He was another link to the past, and she could not breathe easily again until he was on his way back to California.

Shortly before noon, Mr. Hendry brought the man over to her desk. "Mr. Norton wants to make a few changes in some of the terms of that agreement," he said to Joan. "Think you can go over it with him?"

"Of course. I've a luncheon appointment with my lawyer, Charles, so I'll have to run along. Miss Barrett will take good care of you."

Norton looked down at Joan, a slight smile twisting his lip. His eyes were expressionless. "I'm sure she will," he said.

He drew up a chair alongside of her desk and took out his copy of the Bella Terra sales agreement. Mr. Hendry went back for his hat and coat. A moment later, he stopped on his way out.

"By the way," he said to Joan. "I don't expect to be back this afternoon. If you want a few hours to go shopping..."

Joan smiled. "Thank you, Mr. Hendry. I do."

Norton smiled again. For some inexplicable reason, Joan wished that Mr. Hendry had not left her alone with him. He looked like Dracula, she told herself, and half expected him to stand up, spread out his long arms, and turn into a vampire bat. For the first time in all the years she had been working, she felt uncomfortable for being alone with a man. She hoped his work would not take long.

HE went through the agreement, slowly, thoughtfully. Occasionally he dictated a paragraph to be added, or changed. As she took down the notes, she could feel his eyes burning into her.

After ten or fifteen minutes, he laid the papers aside, deliberately. He noticed that the tiny clock on her desk marked the hour of noon.

"It's twelve o'clock," he remarked. "I'm keeping you from your lunch."

"That's quite all right," Joan assured him, her tone crisp and businesslike.

"I think it would be very much nicer," he suggested, "if I took you to lunch. We could return later and finish this."

Joan started, uneasily. "I'm very sorry," she stammered. "I can't—not today."

Norton smiled again. "I distinctly heard Mr. Hendry tell you to take the afternoon off. Why can't we spend it together?"

"I—I have an engagement," "Don't tell me that!" He laughed at her, waving aside her excuses. "How can you have an engagement when you just learned a moment ago that you would be free?"

He rose carelessly, walked over to the window and pointed outdoors.

"It's too perfect an afternoon to waste in an office," he commented. "And I'm a stranger in your city. Surely you could show me a little hospitality..."

HE returned to his chair, and as he passed in back of Joan, he too dropped his hand to pat her shoulder. But in his manner of doing it there was none of the fatherly kindness which Mr. Hendry's similar action had denoted. Norton's touch on her shoulder was deliberate, purposeful, and unpleasant. Joan writhed under it.

"I do have a luncheon engagement," she insisted. "Do you mind if we finish this as quickly as possible? I should not like to be late."

"You can break the appointment."

"It's quite impossible," she retorted sharply. "There is no way in which I can reach the friend I am to meet..."

desk, where the sunlight picked up the brilliant sparkle of the diamond in her ring. The gesture was not lost on Norton. He laughed, brazenly.

"So that's the reason!" he remarked. "The boy friend's jealousy, eh?"

"No—not exactly—" Still laughing, he patted the hand that wore the ring. Joan pulled it away quickly.

"Don't be so old-fashioned, my dear!" Norton advised. "What the boy friend doesn't know will never matter. While he's working hard this lovely afternoon, you and I can steal a march..."

"Please understand, Mr. Norton. It's quite impossible. I'm engaged to marry Mr. Andrews, of this office. You know him, of course. I don't think Mr. Hendry would like..."

NORTON looked up in surprise. "Young Andrews, eh? Well, that does complicate matters. John Hendry would never have me cutting in on Andrews' territory... the lucky devil!"

He leaned closer, and once again his dark eyes looked into her very soul.

"You know you are quite the loveliest girl?" he murmured. "Your face has haunted me, ever since I met you."

Joan squirmed. "There's something about you that reminds me of someone..." Norton persisted. "Someone I knew... did you ever live in California?"

"No!" Joan almost shouted the denial, drawing away from his nearness. Quickly, however, she gathered her wits. "That is," she amended, less violently, "not since I was a baby. I was born in Sacramento, but my family left California when I was still an infant." Dorothy's spirit hovered over, prompting, strengthening.

Norton smiled. "But you did come from California! I knew it. You can always tell a Sunshine girl... Who was your father? I might have known him. I lived in Sacramento for years..."

Joan's nerves were quivering. She couldn't fool this man. His eyes saw too much. Even now they were probing, seeking, wondering what caused her hesitation. Was he tormenting her, knowing full well who her father was? With all the strength of will she possessed, she forced herself to smile, and to answer lightly: "I imagine my father stayed in Sacramento just long enough for me to join his family... I really come from a long line of gypsies. California was just one more stopping-off place."

British Marriages Rise; Divorces Drop

LONDON (U.P.)—The popular belief that the marriage and birth rates of Great Britain are falling off and that the population is declining is disproved by the latest statistics issued by the Registrar-General.

The figures show that there were in 1935, the last period of calculation, more marriages, more babies and fewer divorces.

The marriage rate was 17.2 persons per 1,000 population, compared with 16.9 in 1934 and 15.3 in 1932. There were 598,756 births, an increase on the 1933 total. The population of England and Wales is now estimated at 46,645,000. At the 1931 census it was 39,952,337.

The number of decrees nisi made absolute in respect of dissolution or annulment of marriage was 4,069—a decrease of 218 from the high record of 1934.

AGED PENSIONS EFFECTIVE IN FIVE YEARS

By REED S. DUNHAM
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, May 8 (U.P.)—The Social Security act represents the American government's broadest effort to minimize the hazards of poverty due to old age or loss of jobs.

It is designed, furthermore, to assist needy children, the blind and to safeguard the public health. It comprises four general sections:

1. Contributory old age pensions becoming fully effective in 1942.
2. Unemployment insurance, generally becoming effective within two years of enactment of state co-operative legislation.
3. Federal grants to states for aid to dependent children, the blind and aid to the U. S. public health service, the federal vocational rehabilitation service and to develop maternal and child-welfare programs.
4. Temporary grants to states to provide pensions to the aged before the national old age pension plan becomes fully operative.

Two Taxes Provided
To finance this huge endeavor, two new taxes are provided.

The first, levied jointly upon employers and employees, is designed to provide funds for old age pensions. It started Jan. 1, 1937, at a rate of 1 per cent for employers and 1 per cent for employees. The rate increases gradually to a maximum of 3 per cent upon each employer and employee in 1949.

The second tax is levied for unemployment compensation. It falls solely upon employers so far as the Federal government is concerned but its operation is somewhat complex due to the Federal-State co-operative nature of the legislation.

Enacted Aug. 14, 1935, the Social Security act went into operation Jan. 1, in its most important phases—old age benefits for retired employes and compensation for unemployed workers. Some 27,000,000 persons have become eligible for future benefits. That figure ultimately is expected to reach 40,000,000.

Few States Have No Laws
Only a few states have not taken advantage of at least one form of supplementary assistance. About 1,500,000 persons are receiving cash grants. The most extensive present social security benefit is the old age program, entailing registration and eventual benefits to all employes except those in agriculture, private domestic service, government, maritime occupations and a few other types of employment.

When contributory old age pensions become effective, in 1942 workers who reach the age of 65 and retire receive monthly benefits until death, ranging from $10 to $26 depending on the amount of money they have earned.

Before annuity payments begin a worker receives lump-sum payments at 55 or later, upon retiring, equal to 3 1/2 per cent of his earnings from Jan. 1, 1937. The state of an employee who dies before he is 65 receives a lump-sum payment on the same basis both now and after 1942.

Unemployment insurance requires co-operation of the state laws to provide payments to workers who become jobless have been enacted by all but five states and approved by the Social Security Board.

18,500,000 Now Protected
Thus about 18,500,000 workers already have been given protection under the act against hazards of future unemployment.

Although the act does not require participation on the part of employers of fewer than eight persons, some state laws require that employers of more than one participate. The cost of administering state laws is paid by the government.

Generally, one week's benefits will be paid for each four weeks of employment in the preceding two years, with a limit of 13 or 16 weeks on compensation and a waiting period of several weeks without payments following the loss of job. Such payments may not be made until two years after first payments to state unemployment funds are made. Most states do not require contributions to these funds by employees.

One or more of the three forms of public assistance already in operation in all states but Nevada, Kansas, Tennessee, Georgia, South Carolina and Virginia. All of these but South Carolina and Virginia have enacted laws to start all three forms—aid to the needy aged, children and blind—but the state statutes have not yet been approved by the board. Virginia has a law for child assistance. South Carolina has no laws at all.

Under provisions for the aged the Social Security board may make grants to states to aid in payments up to $30 a month to persons past 65. The program now covers 1,250,000 persons in 42 states. Blind assistance is given 32,000 persons in 29 states.

In 28 states with approved laws, 331,000 dependent children are receiving assistance in their own homes under Social Security. For their care, the act provides that the Federal Government shall pay one-third of the cost, up to a total of $18 for the first child and $12 for each additional child.

Congressional appropriations provide federal funds for the programs except for age benefits and unemployment compensation.

TRAILER LAWS URGED SPEEDILY

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., May 8 (U.P.)—Solution of the "trailer problem" lies in immediate enactment of stringent state laws regulating auto trailers, according to A. T. McLaughlin, cottage camp operator of the Pike's Peak region.

McLaughlin, who has returned from a 7,000-mile trip on which he visited 150 trailer cities, declared conditions developed by the so-called trailer problem are "terrible."

"Fifty per cent of those making use of trailer houses," he said, "are persons, largely with home-made trailers, who are gypsying about, finding work that in many instances should go to local residents."

Camp on Private Property

"They camp along the road on vacant property and at camp grounds not equipped for such camping."

Municipal campgrounds for trailers will not solve the problem, McLaughlin said. It would cost a city of the size of Colorado Springs $5,000 a year to maintain such a camp ground, he said, and then results would not be profitable to the community.

"The other 50 per cent of the persons using trailer houses," McLaughlin said, "are out for a good time. Many of them have deluxe vehicles. They are not running away from taxes or trying to side-step expenses. They are willing and able to pay for the conveniences they have."

Two Types of Tourists

"But you can depend on it, travelers of this class are not going to camp at the same campground with a lot of families, possibly more or less on relief, whose trailers are filled with children, dogs and even goats, and which families, in many instances, have no pride either in neatness or sanitation."

McLaughlin said he encountered many vacationers on his trip who were endeavoring to sell their trailers, some at a great loss, because of the "unpleasant conditions."

"It is astonishing," he said, "to what confusion and unsatisfactory condition this trailer house travel has gone. And it can all be regulated so that it would work perfectly if only the state, the forest service and the municipalities would cooperate."

"But regulations must be made at once if this mode of travel is to turn out satisfactorily."

considerable movement and it is also hoped that this number will enable the listeners to hear the King's voice as the service progresses.

Service May Be Heard

The description of the actual ceremony will be made as well as of the entry and exit of the procession to and from the Abbey. It will be the first time that a radio audience has heard the service.

The return from the Abbey to Buckingham Palace will be broadcast in a similar manner as the trip to the Coronation. The final part of the broadcast will be between 3:30 and 4 p. m., when the appearance of Their Majesties on the balcony of the Palace will be described.

To insure against a possible breakdown, a large number of the many circuits will be duplicated. The installation and maintenance of this equipment is being accomplished by a corps of BBC engineers who also are responsible for the loudspeakers which will be along the route to keep the millions of spectators informed as to happening on other parts of the route.

Rebel Battleship Sunk by Loyalist Airplane

When Spanish government planes bombed and sank the rebel warship Espana, above, in the Bay of Biscay, off Santander, it was the first time in world history that a big battleship had succumbed to air attack under war conditions. The battle was dramatic. A little British freighter tried to break the Bilbao blockade. The 13,452-ton Espana moved to and the freighter ran for Santander. The freighter opened fire and the battleship flashed radio calls for aid. Thirty-two Loyalist planes then took to the air, circled over the Espana and began dropping bombs. There was a direct hit on the poopdeck. The Espana sank.

RADIO TO LINK WORLD WITH CORONATION

LONDON, May 8 (U.P.)—Five hundred million people, it is unofficially estimated, in every country of the world will listen in to the Coronation on May 12.

Commentators from 15 countries will describe the happenings in 14 languages through 58 microphones which necessitate 472 miles of wire connections and 12 tons of other special equipment. Some Eskimos in the Arctic wastes will hear the same things as the natives in Central Africa. The Africans' radios are switched on automatically, leaving them the alternatives of listening or putting a spear through the offending "magic box."

The broadcast will be available to those at sea, in the air and even to a group of cave explorers who will listen to a radio 400 feet below the ground. All these audiences have been made possible by the plans of the British Broadcasting Corporation, which is preparing for the most complicated and extensive broadcast yet undertaken by the corporation.

Post Set Up At Palace

The descriptive part of the Coronation Day broadcast will start at 10:15 a. m. (4:15 a. m. E. S. T.), at which time an announcer in a specially constructed observation post overlooking Buckingham Palace will describe the activities there as the procession moves down the Mall. The arrival of peers, commoners, Dominion representatives, foreign royalty and other important personages at Westminster Abbey will be described before King George VI and Queen Elizabeth make their appearance in the palace courtyard at 10:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m. E. S. T.).

An observer inside the precincts of the Palace will announce the entrance of Their Majesties into the ancient, gilded state coach and their departure for the Abbey. Other commentators will pick up the royal party as it passes along the crowded route, while special "effects" microphones will record noises of the streets to add a realistic touch to the narrations.

To relay these descriptions, two separate control rooms are being established—one, for the home and empire programs, in a room on the southwest side of the nave of the Abbey, and the other, for foreign commentaries, at the Middlesex Guildhall nearby.

Changes Will Be Possible

Installation of equipment was carried out in such a way that last-minute changes in the observers' positions and requirements could be met without serious dislocation. In these two control rooms are panels on which will terminate all lines from the Abbey itself and along the route of the procession.

Amplifiers will magnify the weak currents from the microphones to make it suitable or feeding to the connecting stations. The program will also be fed to each observation post so as to assist the announcers in maintaining continuity.

The foreign panel will be connected with telephone and cable lines, linking them to their respective countries. In addition to the descriptions in English for American stations, the program will be announced in Czech, Danish, Dutch, Finnish, Flemish, French, German, Hungarian, Japanese, Norwegian, Spanish, Swedish and Yugoslavian.

Of the 58 microphones, 20 will be in the Abbey. This large number is necessitated as there will be

Music is Medical Aid in Nerve Cases

BOSTON, (U.P.)—If Arthur Flagler Fultz' experiment is successful, physicians will be carrying around portable phonographs along with pills and stethoscope and hospitals might become "concert halls."

Fultz, a Boston University graduate student, is studying musical co-therapy, the application of music to cases to personality disorders.

"Any personality or nervous disorder responds to music," he says. "Music can make the whole personality smile. It a person listens occasionally to the type of music his personality requires, it will help him to get a new grip on life."

Too much music, however, is harmful as it prevents concentration, he says.

TO MOTHER DEAR

If you can mother your children when all about you
The day's happenings are full of household duties, too.
If you can bravely smile when children doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting, too.
If you can teach your child and not tire of teaching,
Or not seeing results, don't do less.
Or being criticized, don't give way to criticizing.
For other Mothers have battles, too.—I guess.

If you can chastise, and not make punishment your master;
If you can praise, and not cause your child to be vain.
If you can build up reputation and character,
And look upon these good traits and be sane;
If you can hear praise and glory for your children given,
And knowing in your own heart 'tis true,
Or watch the little ones while showily you have striven,
To lead always uprightly to the God our parents knew.

If you can guide them by the life you are living
And watch their companions from day to day;
If you can watch them and through kindly tact be giving
Help them with life's problems, no matter what they say;
If you can chum with them and yet be Mother,
To not fail them when a friend is their great need,
You will find your place can't be filled by another.
You're one to whom all their life they've given heed.

If you can walk with them and aid through conversation,
Or advise with them when they need just such.
If neither Sin nor Greed of people of this nation,
Can influence your children, so very much;
If they can't be with you, or you with them always,
Then no matter where they roam, have no fear,
You have taught lasting lessons along life's way,
And which is more—You are their Mother, Dear!

—Written by Mrs. John H. Kleiner and dedicated to her Mother, Mrs. J. A. Jensen.
