Child Slayer Prays For Death As Penalty

BEGS TO SEE LITTLE JIMMY, WHO SURVIVES

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., May 19. (U.P.) Mrs. Helen Tiernan, 25-year-old widow prayed today that death would be the penalty for killing her blue-eyed seven-year-old daughter, Helen. B-tween sobs she begged for just one "peep" at her son, Jimmy, who survived her murderous attacks.

NEIGHBORS OF FRED PARKER TESTIFY TODAY

BRADY, May 19. (U.P.)—Fred Parker, 26, showed no emotion on the night last January when his wife's body laid in their farm home near Milburn, the skull crushed, neighbors testified today at Parker's murder trial.

CISCO SEEKS CONSERVATION OF SOIL CAMP

Following a report of secretary J. E. Spencer concerning a recent visit to the soil conservation camp at Dublin, the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce last night authorized Mr. Spencer to make application for the location of a camp on the headwaters of the Leon somewhere south of Cisco with headquarters here.

BEARMAN TEST NEAR WEALTH OR FAILURE

The Bearman townsite R. L. Poe No. 1 was drilling at 3,350 feet today at 2:30 p. m. still in the Cad-do line with no showing thus far, only about 50 feet remaining to touch the pay sand if the contour runs true.

Big Surprise in Store

Can you guess what sort of building this bit of highly ornamented architecture is? Don't feel chagrined if you don't know right away that it is a department store. The special decorations to commemorate the coronation of King George VI coat Selfridge's in London $125,000 and nearby concerned the structure with a profusion of statuary and murals.

SOFT BALL SEASON STARTS IN CISCO AT LIGHTED FIELD WITH LEACH STORE VS. MAN'S STORE

The Cisco soft ball league opened the season at the lighted field Tuesday night when teams sponsored by the Leach Store and Miller's Man's Store met in a hot clash that ended in a 17-11 victory for the Leach boys.

R. L. MADDOX THANKS LIONS FOR BAND TRIP

GRAM GRADS NAMES WILL BE POSTED MAY 27

Some misunderstanding regarding Grammar school graduation announcements have arisen, which the following statement may clarify: The exercises will be held at the high school auditorium Friday night, 8 o'clock, May 28. The class roll as announced does not mean that the entire 86 have passed their graduation examinations. A list of those graduating will be posted and announced Thursday, May 27, the day preceding the graduation exercises.

DUKE AND WALLIS MAKE MANY RESERVATIONS IN CONTRACT WHICH SEALS MARRIAGE VOWS

The marriage contract signed by the duke and Mrs. Warfield provides for a "separation of goods" not in accordance with the usual French community law. Mrs. Warfield will not have to promise to obey the duke, it was understood, and he will not have to promise to support her.

'Yanks' Attired to King's Taste

James W. Gerard, left, in formal coat and court breeches that make his legs look a bit on the order of Babe Ruth's in uniform, and General John J. Pershing, in a much-branded dress uniform with "fore-and-aft" hat, really had some place to go when they were thus dressed up—to reserved seats in Westminster Abbey, for the coronation of King George. They were America's official representatives at the event.

RANDOLPH TO END 1937 TERM NEXT TUESDAY

WORK STOPPED TODAY

SOUTH BEND, May 19. (U.P.)—Virtually all work in the Studebaker automobile plant employing 7,000 persons, was halted today by refusal of union members to work beside non-union employees.

TWO FURTHER RETIREMENTS MEAN DEFEAT

WASHINGTON, May 19. (U.P.)—An angry senate rebellion and the possibility of further supreme court retirement moved President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan to the brink of defeat today. Mr. Roosevelt stood pat against compromise. But the possibility of further vacancies on the high bench either by retirement or death tended to bolster the courage of those democrats who would welcome almost any escape from a showdown vote on expansion of the court. Their strategy was delay.

College Education is Aid

A college diploma gives its owner a sixteen times better chance of getting a well-paid job, and reduces his chances of landing on relief rolls to less than one per cent.

These estimates of the cash value of a college education were revealed by a survey of employment statistics prepared for Life Insurance Week, which is being observed throughout the country from May 17 to May 22.

Proof that college education is the best unemployment insurance was offered by a survey of unemployed families made by the American Federation of Teachers. Only one per cent of the 3,980 heads of families on relief studied had had so much as one year of college training; 12.4 per cent of the family heads had had one or more years of high school, and, in 86.6 per cent of the cases studied, the education of the father was within common school limitations.

Based on an exhaustive analysis of available employment statistics, the American Management Association reports that the seven per cent of the young men of 22 years of age who comprised the college graduating classes of 1930 will take over about 57 per cent of the available openings in the business world of 1940. Of the available positions paying $4,000 or more a year which will become available between 1930 and 1940, 51.9 per cent will be given to college graduates.

One father out of five does not live to see his child through college, and out of the children under 18 years of age left fatherless, less than one in 40 ever matriculates, the Life Insurance Week survey shows. A twenty per cent increase in the number of families insuring their children's education by educational insurance policies was reported.

Housewives have doubled their participation in educational and endowment insurance, according to estimates by life insurance companies. The fact that women now spend 85 cents of the family dollar and are beneficiaries of 80 per cent of the life insurance policies was cited as the underlying cause of this large increase in women's personal participation in insurance to guarantee educational opportunities for their children.

We Prepare for War

The other day an army plane winged southward from Washington, bearing a document that finally reached the president at sea, was quickly signed by him. This was the new neutrality act, hurried through House and Senate by congressmen with an anxious eye on the turbid European war situation.

The act is a compromise between the advocates of mandatory neutrality and discretionary neutrality—that is, a law which forces the president to forbid trade with belligerent nations, and one which permits him to use his judgment in the light of circumstances.

The new act is not perfect—but it is regarded as being about as good as could be had, and great hopes for keeping America out of war are bound up in it. It places an embargo on arms shipments to fighting nations. And, in the event of war, it gives the president discretionary power to list goods that cannot be exported to belligerents; to deny belligerents use of our ports, etc. Important provision extends this authority to civil as well as international wars. "War in Europe this summer, perhaps; this fall sure," is being talked by some. But there has been much talk of that kind for several years, and no general war has broken out yet. It looks as if the powers are uncertain of their relative strengths, are doing a considerable amount of bluster and bluffing.

Fifth Sulphur Dome In Brazoria County

ANGLETON, Tex., May 19 (AP)—The fifth commercially-productive sulphur dome in Texas has been placed in operation in Southern Brazoria county.

The new area known as Clemens Dome was discovered last November by Jefferson Lake Oil Company which drilled three wells to tap the huge supply.

Clemens replaced the famous Bryan Mound which was abandoned in 1935 by the Freeport Gulf Sulphur Company after producing between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 tons of sulphur.

Other sulphur domes in the state are Hoskins Mound in Brazoria county; Boiling Dome, largest known sulphur deposit in the world in Wharton county and Long Point in Fort Bend county.

AFRAID TO LOVE

by MARION WHITE C. S. NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOAN BARRETT, heroine, secretary to John Hendry.
JOHN HENDRY, mining investor.
BOB ANDREWS, Hendry's junior partner and Joan's fiancé.
SYBIL HENDRY, socialite, Joan Hendry's niece and Joan's rival in love.
PHILIP HENDRY, Sybil's brother.
DOTHY STARKE, Joan's childhood friend.
CHARLES NORTON, California mining promoter.

Yesterday, Sybil visits her uncle's home. And he has been murdered. Horrified-stricken she looks toward the door, trips and picks up Joan Barrett's glove.

CHAPTER XXV
BACK at the Duval's house, Dorothy paced the floor with ever increasing anxiety. What was keeping Joan? Surely it had not taken her more than two hours to tell her story to Mr. Hendry.

"I'll wait another ten minutes," she decided. "I'll wait until twenty, and then I'll phone and see if she's still there."

She continued to pace up and down the room, stopping every once in a while to peer out into the street for some sign of Joan's return. At two-thirty, she went to the phone in her aunt's room and called the Hendry house.

She waited, listening to the steady ring at the other end. There was no answer. She called the operator again, to make sure that she was ringing the right number. She listened again to the buzzing call signal.

Something had happened. In frantic haste, she changed her pajamas for a dress, slipped on shoes and stockings and a heavy coat, and ran from the house. She too, sped in the direction of Mr. Hendry's little white cottage.

At every bend in the road, she stared ahead for some sign of Joan, but she saw none. Green Hills still slept in quiet contentment.

Then, in the next instant, the air was suddenly split with the shrill cry of police sirens, and as Dorothy turned into Mr. Hendry's street, a car sped by her, then another, and from the opposite direction, two more appeared.

She stopped in her tracks, and a terrible fear chilled her to the very marrow of her bones. For each one of the police cars was drawing up in front of the Hendry cottage, and from within there came the frantic, hysterical cries of a woman. She recognized the voice of Sybil Hendry.

SEVEN miles north of Green Hills lies another suburb—Burlington. A small mill town it is, lacking the charm and dignity of its neighboring community. No main highway connects it with Green Hills, but one who knows the community might find a narrow dirt road, lonely and deserted, heading due north out of Green Hills and crossing the interlocking truck farms to the village of Burlington. Farmers use the road, and domestic workers from Green Hills.

And this night, in blind terror, Joan Barrett stumbled onto the Burlington road. Where it led to, she neither knew nor cared. She followed it—the full seven miles—half running, half walking, but keeping everlastingly on.

She huddled now, like a terrified lost kitten, outside the dark railroad station in Burlington. Her hair flew around her face in wild disorder, for the wind had come up strong. In the light of the street lamp, her dark eyes loomed large with fear, and her lips quivered. With one hand, she drew her coat tightly around her, and the other hand—the one for which she had lost the glove—she tucked inside, to keep it warm.

Her black slippers were scratched and soiled, and there was a long run in her left stocking. There were dirty marks upon her coat, too, for twice she had stumbled in the dark and fallen.

It had been wrong to run away. She knew that. She was a coward. Every step of the seven miles she had traveled, the words rang in her ears: "You're a coward! You're afraid!" Yet she could not stop, for the fear drove her on.

Even now, she trembled more because she was no longer running. She must keep on, hurrying before the fate which pursued her.

Mr. Hendry had been murdered. It was impossible, it was inconceivable, but it had happened nevertheless. A man can't put a knife into his own back. But who could have done it? Who could have hated a man so gentle, so trusting, so kindly, as to do a thing like that?

Someone who had wanted the money. There are men who would kill another for 40 thousand dollars. But they are clever men. The police never find them. They would never know who killed Mr. Hendry. They would look for her, instead.

She could see the headlines in the morning papers; she could hear a thousand tongues convicting her.

"Her father was a murderer! It's in her blood, to kill!"

SYBIL would tell them, of course. Sybil would have no need to bargain with her now.

And Bob! He would be dragged into the whole sordid affair, whether she wanted it or not. His picture would be in every paper; in bold-face type they would refer to him as "the killer's fiancée."

She must hurry on.

A green bus, empty save for the driver and one lone passenger, passed in front of her. She looked after it, reading the sign: "Burlington-New York."

She had better go to New York, too. It would be easier to hide in the city than out here, running along lonely roads. Sooner or later, each lonely road led into a main street, and she would be conspicuous in a small suburban town. Above all, she must not be conspicuous. She must go to New York, to mingle in the crowds. She had ten dollars.

She waited more than an hour for the next bus. Getting on, she breathed a sigh of relief. It was not completely empty. There were several couples—gay and silly and a little intoxicated—returning from a party. They scarcely noticed her. She found a seat and crouched down low in it, holding her coat collar up. In back of her, eight young voices harmonized the chorus of "A Fine Romance," and she remembered the Spring Frolic.

It was nearly five o'clock when she reached the city. In a lunch wagon near the bus terminal she had coffee. Two cups. It stopped the quivering inside of her. Then, in the ladies' room, she combed her hair and brushed off her shoes and coat. She must appear reasonably presentable before she went to look for a room. For the first time, she wished her hair were not so conspicuously blond.

She walked across town to the Grand Central Station. If she lingered in the bus terminal too long, she might attract attention. She bought a newspaper and turned immediately to the classified columns.

One after one she read the advertisements of rooms to rent. She checked off only those which specifically quoted the price. At ten o'clock, she visited the first one on her list. It was in an untidy house on a poor side street, and it looked out over a dreary vista of roof tops. Mrs. Griggs, the landlady, showed her the room. Here might be refuge, at least until she had thought this whole terrible thing through, and planned her next move. Without a moment's hesitation, Joan handed Mrs. Griggs six dollars for the first week's rent.

Class Prophecy

Route 1
Cushing, Texas
May 25, 1937

Dearest Eloise:

Does it seem possible that it has been ten years since we graduated from dear old "Randy"? Indeed, the years have sped by on fleet wings.

I wonder if you've heard anything about our old classmates? Were they nice? Sometimes, though, I think that we didn't quite appreciate them as we should. I've heard from or about everyone of them recently and I thought I'd tell you—but all this is just between friends, you know. They might not like for me to repeat all I've heard.

Do you remember the habit Marcus had of winking at the girls? Well, that proved rather unfortunate for I hear that one time while he was in Hollywood, he thoughtlessly winked at a chorus girl and that was the end of his career as a bachelor. Poor boy! Now, she's suing him for failure to pay alimony, and he's vainly trying to support Mrs. Lee the second who is none other than the famous aviator, Mabel Halbert. I hear that she's on a circle-the-globe tour at present, leaving Marcus at home to have things bright and cheery on her return. Well, you really can't blame her. It's all his fault. He shouldn't have made such boasts before her in public school art class. From all accounts, they aren't living in a dugout, as Marcus said he intended to do, either. Mabel says if she has to make the living, she intends to have only the best, so Marcus meekly submits.

I was glad to read in the paper the brilliant speech Senator Willard Sutton made the other day. From all that is implied by the statesman, he is well on his way to the presidency. I'm so glad. He deserved it, for he has worked long and faithfully for his reward.

Uh huh, also you said you'd probably be an old maid from necessity rather than from choice which leads me to wonder who asked the age-old question after all? Anyway, good luck to you, Eloise. You deserve the best that life holds in store for you.

Level is coming in from plowing so I guess I'll have to quit and go

Senior Class Poem

SENIORS OF '37

When our Ward school days were done,
We embarked in small canoes,
We were content to drift along;
To know our numbers, ones and twos,
We drifted on, for months and months
And on through Grammar school,
We used our days to have our fun,
Gained knowledge for a tool.

We worked and played for four long years,
Preparing ourselves to live;
Each for each and all for all,
Waiting for service to give,
On to a star we hitched our boats,
And placed our trust in this one goal,
Some way the sand bars we will miss,
And glide along the shoal.

We're now sailing in deep waters,
Our compass set to right;
The helmsman in his place
Is watching day and night.
We've made few foes to conquer,
None difficult or none big,
The few that could be stumbling blocks,
We've locked them in the brig.

Oh Mates, we're independent,
We've walked the decks of life;
We've often dodged the breakers wide,
That would swallow us in strife,
We've gathered shells from many lands,
And are going back for more;
We'll make how many backward trips
Before we reach the shore?

We'll chug along at greater speed,
We'll hold our banner high,
In great regard and straight devotion
Until the sought-for-goal is nigh,
Seniors, when our oar's in hand,
We'll pull together, each and all;
We'll reach the goal we're striving for—
There we'll let our anchor fall.

Bumper Pecan Crop Predicted This Year

GONZALES, Tex., May 19.—C. Pape, pecan orchardist of Monthalia, has predicted a bumper crop in Texas this year.

He based the forecast on the small crop harvest last year, plenty of moisture last year, early blooming and the fact that trees are loaded with small pecans.

"The wet year last year gave the trees an opportunity for strong growth, especially for the improved varieties," he said. "Last year there were comparatively few blossoms."

223,800 Applicants For Old Age Help

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., May 19.—During the first quarter of 1937, 223,800 applications had been filed in Texas for old age assistance.

More than half—139,969—had been approved for grant of pension funds. During March, 121,771 aged persons in the state were aided by grant averaging $14.12.

Scouts to Publish Jamboree Daily

JAMBOREE JOURNAL

THE JAMBOREE WELCOMES YOU

Nearly every American community has its own newspaper and the 25-acre National Jamboree Camp of 25,000 Boy Scouts at Washington, D. C., this summer will be no exception.

Boy Scouts editors, photographers and cartoonists will publish a 16-page illustrated tabloid-sized newspaper every morning from June 29 to July 9, to record in permanent form the many events of what will be the largest gathering of youth ever held in the western hemisphere. Because the newspaper will be mailed daily to subscribers throughout the world, as well as distributed each morning at the 29 or more sectional camps along the historic Potomac River, this unique publication is expected to have a daily circulation of more than 50,000 copies. Scouts of this community who have journalistic ambitions have been invited to serve on the staff. In addition, many Scouts will report their Jamboree for their home town newspapers.

Seamen Prosperity Causing Much Worry

HOUSTON, May 19 (U.P.)—Prosperity of American seamen is causing operators of waterfront hotels and hotels much worry these days.

Easily available jobs on almost every ship up in the ship channel are keeping the sailors on the water and are depriving the hotels and eating places of revenue.

Also, the sailors have moved to better quarters in other sections of the city while they are in port.

J. T. Taylor, manager of the Seamen's Church Institute, reported that his place is almost empty for the first time since the depression began.

"We have only 15 men here and they are all deck boys, officers and ordinary seamen," he said.

"We have calls for able-bodied seamen every day and can't supply them. Several foreign ships have taken on men, too."

When the sailors arrive from a voyage, they go to the uptown business district, buy clothes and spend their money. They return to the Turning Basin "broke" and ready to take the first ships out.

Tulsa is Site for Gasoline Convention

TULSA, Okla., May 19 (U.P.)—Col. E. O. Thompson, member of the Texas Railroad Commission, will deliver the opening address at the 19th annual convention of the National Gasoline Association of America, which will meet here May 19-21.

Col. Thompson will speak on Texas' contribution to the natural gasoline industry.

Two other Texans, E. A. Giraud, chairman of the manufacturing committee of the Humble Oil and Refining Co., Houston, and W. F. Fulton, chief chemist, United Gas Public Service Co., Houston, will appear on the program.

Giraud will present "The Refiner's Viewpoint," a paper outlining the peculiar position of natural gasoline with respect to its market among refiners.

Fulton will present a technical paper entitled "Precision Gas Analysis."

ADVICE TO WOMEN

Mrs. Maggie Hamilton, Box 101, Cleburne, Texas, said: "Early in life when about 22, I was troubled with painful periods and headaches associated with them. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a tonic and I was greatly relieved. It also kept the 'Prescription' during pregnancy and it increased my appetite and tone and I had more strength." Buy only registered druggist. New size bottles 50¢ and $1.25.
