THREE MEN WERE POSING AS RANGERS

SPAFFORD, Tex., May 29. (U.P.)—Three bandits, posing as Texas Rangers, held a bookie shop crowd at bay for half an hour today, shot R. E. Rutledge, 45, cashier, to death and escaped with more than $1,000. Rutledge was killed at the head of a stairway leading into the second story bookie shop. With him was C. F. Hall, 43, who was carrying the money. Rutledge was shot before he had a chance to raise his arms, witnesses said. Harris and Galveston county officers and Houston police organized searches for the killer. A plane which had been dusting cotton in Fort Bend county where the killing occurred was dispatched to patrol highways leading to Galveston. More than a score of customers were in the bookie shop when the bandits entered. The trio drew pistols and awaited the arrival of Rutledge and Hall from Houston with the money. Only one shot was fired. Rutledge fell with a bullet in his heart.

Records are Given On Texas Pioneer

HOUSTON, May 29. (U.P.)—A query from the Seneca county clerk at Waterloo, N. Y., to the Harris county clerk concerning John R. Harris, Texas pioneer, brought out dusty records. The old records, some written in faded Spanish, revealed many sidelights on acquisition of old Spanish land grants. The New York clerk wanted information about "a man named John R. Harris and his wife, Jane, who left this county to settle in Texas in 1837." Harris was a member of a prominent family which founded Harrisburg, Pa., the query said. Records showed that the New York clerk's dates were mixed. John R. Harris who came to Texas in 1837 was the son of the couple mentioned. The original Harris, John and Jane, received a Spanish land grant in 1824 as members of Stephen F. Austin's colony. The elder Harris' settling in Texas caused Harris county and the city of Harrisburg, once the state capital, to be named for him. Harris obtained a grant of "one sitio" or league on the south bank of Buffalo Bayou, now famous as Houston's ship channel. It was witnessed by Baron de Bastrop and Empresario Estevan F. Austin. The grant was described in age-worn Spanish script. Harris died in New Orleans in 1829, according to his great-granddaughter, Miss Annie Hume.

Soviets Blaze New Trail to Pole

Eleven daring Russian aviators, latest conquerors of the North Pole, have added their names to the illustrious few who have successfully dared exploration in the Arctic region. The late Admiral Robert E. Peary reached the pole after a hazardous trip by ship and dog-sled. Lincoln Ellsworth, American explorer, and Roald Amundsen of Norway crossed the pole aboard the Italian dirigible. Norge Admiral Richard E. Byrd accomplished the feat by plane. The Russian explorers made their base at Rudolph Island. Four of the men expected to remain on an ice floe near the pole for a year.

STEEL CORP. DROPS FOOD FROM PLANE

By United Press. The Republic Steel Corporation used airplanes today to drop food supplies to non-striking workers isolated in plants surrounded by thousands of union pickets striking for a signed working contract.

Use of airplanes was necessary after strikers halted mail trucks carrying food sent to the plant by parcel post. Plants were closed throughout north-eastern Ohio, Indiana and in the Chicago area. In Chicago, police held three strikers on conspiracy charges, following a street battle between 110 policemen and 1,000 strikers. At least 13 strikers were injured. Efforts of the United Automobile Workers, CIO affiliate, who unionized 140,000 Ford company employees centered in Detroit and Richmond, California.

In Detroit, Ford officials said 60,000 workers had signed "loyalty pleas." Union officials insisted they were signing new members at the rate of one a minute. In California, maritime unions pledged their support to Ford strikers and applied an embargo against automobiles for shipment abroad. In Wilsonville, Ill., 450 miners voluntarily evacuated the Superior Coal company's mine and sought negotiations on the demand that the company relinquish a clause in its contract giving it 30 days in which to distribute work among all its employees when some are unemployed through a shutdown.

UNION COMPANY AND STRIKERS ASKED TO CONFER

Guests for 'Wedding of Century'

Certain to be among the small but distinguished group which will go down in history as guests at the wedding of Mrs. Wallis Warfield and Britain's abdicated King, Duke Edward of Windsor, at Castle Candé, Monts. France, on June 3, are the above persons. Oddly enough, six of them are Americans. The seventh is an Austrian. Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers, both native New Yorkers, were hosts to Mrs. Warfield when she fled England to their villa at Cannes before the abdication. They continued with her when she went from Cannes to the Chateau Candé, where all three were guests of Charles Bedaux, New York industrial engineer, and his wife Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman is Mrs. Warfield's "Aunt Bessie," of Baltimore. Baron Eugene de Rothschild, scion of the famous banking family owns the villa at Enzefeld, the Duke's first retreat after his abdication. The baroness Rothschild is a former Philadelphia girl, daughter of an expatriated Austrian. Last year she was listed as one of the world's 20 best-dressed women.

KING GEORGE VI FIGHTS FOR 'HRH' LETTERS FOR WALLIS WARFIELD

LONDON, May 29. (U.P.)—The United Press was informed tonight that King George VI fought a bitter battle against former Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin to obtain the title "her royal highness" for Mrs. Wallis Warfield.

The king pleaded before his brother Edward VIII abdicated that he would intervene personally to obtain the coveted HRH letters before her name.

It was only after members of the royal family, high dignitaries of the church, and a powerful group in parliament had joined Baldwin that the king was forced to yield.

BEARMAN TEST WILL RESUME WORK MONDAY

Work on the Bearman test in south Cisco is due to resume Monday, when the plug will be drilled out and the hole tested for water. If the water has been successfully cased off at the 3,520-foot depth where the well was cased with the 6-inch, underreamed and cemented, drilling will be resumed toward the Marble Falls or Ranger sand.

The 72 hours allowed for the cement to set after being placed, expired this morning but owing to the fact that it was Sunday and Memorial Day, work will not begin until Monday morning, said R. A. Bearman Saturday afternoon. It is not contemplated to pull the large casings until further drilling is done, said Mr. Bearman. A slight show of gas was encountered at 3,479, but water encountered two feet in the sand drowned out further showing. The well was then drilled slightly below 3,500 feet, where the six-inch casing was set. Mudding the hole failed to stop the water flow at 3,520, and underreaming was found necessary. The casing was then set at that depth and cemented.

This is Memorial Day

All over the nation today heads will be bowed in silent memory as we gather to do honor to those who gave their lives that civilization might live—that peace might shelter—that liberty might endure, all bought by death that came in a strange land, amidst carnage and bloodshed that was more terrible than in any war ever fought by nations of the earth.

Mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters, wives, sweethearts and buddies will pause to hearken back to those terrible years when young lives were blotted out and messages came and then stopped, to come no more.

Flowers will be laid on the graves of the known and the unknown soldiers who lie buried here and in a foreign land. Memory will fly back to those faces we will see no more; buddies will see them in fancy and know their bravery and companionship as they knew it in the now long ago, because 20 long years have passed and those buddies have gone to their eternal rewards beyond.

In the peaceful silence of the French countryside, out where grass is growing, where death was in the making and restful cemeteries recall infernal battlefields, poppies and flags are waving over 30,000 American graves like a gentle beck flung forth in the wind by those who have not failed in their rendezvous with death.

The story has been often told of how, when hope had almost fled, when resources were exhausted, suddenly the whole face of the situation was altered, and in the place of France's war-worn troops, the youthful soldiers of a youthful nation appeared to fight for this strange land as if it were their own.

But they did not die in vain. Stories of their bravery will be inspirations of youth for time to come. The horror will make nations slow to begin a struggle that wastes the flower of youth and brings financial ruin to its living. Gentle memory of loved ones gone will sweeten the soul of those who remain and bring us nearer to the meeting of the boys in the land beyond the skies where wars ne'er come and peace will reign.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The industrial administration group which has waged a preventive war against price inflation continues, off the record, to prophesy trouble.

These viewers-with-alarm are encouraged by what they consider the healthy effect of several presidential gestures and measures to discourage price increases. They believe that these and other factors have checked speculation buying and kept down or lowered commodity prices. The price of copper, for instance, has declined and it is widely believed here that what was to have been another steel price increase has been headed off.

Various White House advisers, however, will continue to urge further action. It is likely that Roosevelt before long will move toward a reduction of certain tariff duties which would affect prices of protected products considered by economists here to be "out of line." In this connection, watch for news of the future of the copper import tax which will expire in June unless something is done about it.

AN easing of European war tension, liquidation of foreign-owned securities here and talk of gold price reduction are believed to have had an effect on the commodity markets, as well as administration efforts.

BUT there is alarm over a big increase in installment selling, which reached $9,000,000,000 in 1936 as compared with only

$5,000,000,000 in 1929. This is a huge pledge of future wages.

Higher retail prices are anti-posed by fall and the viewers-with-alarm assert that the country is getting to the point where there will be a deficit in purchasing power. Then, they say, there will be more unemployment piled on top of the present large unemployment—in the face of a $35,000,- 000,000 national debt.

"The only answer is to get prices down and wages up," says this group. "Now is the time to tax and balance the budget at a high level of spending."

THIS advice may be bad. It comes, however, from persons from whom F. D. R. has been accepting advice for several months.

DISTILLATION of recent confidential advices re Spain, as received and interpreted by the War and State departments.

Mussolini and Hitler have agreed that they shouldn't let

General Franco lose, and eventually they will see to it that he doesn't. Meanwhile, preferring not to repudiate the non-intervention agreement openly, they have urged Franco to get together all the troops he can now round up in Spain and try to take Madrid without heavy foreign reinforcements.

A stiffening of the British and French attitudes toward the rebels has been noted. But our diplomats have been given to understand that England plans to wait and if she feels adequately prepared, to "take up the Mediterranean situation all at once."

ALMOST anything may happen in Spain, and not all the officials who have read regularly the confidential advices of our diplomatic and military agents in Europe are impressed by their profundity.

Bootleggers Change To Marijuana Game

SAN ANTONIO, May 29 (UP)—Many old-time bootleggers have gone into the marijuana racket according to Police Chief Owen Kilday who announced that his force intended to do something about it. Kilday said that the "hip-pocket peddlers" of the weed were becoming more numerous daily and that he had instructed his officers to be on the lookout for them.

The chief's declaration came after two men had been arrested with more than 40 of the cigarettes in their possession. The men said that they had grown the weed in their homes and manufactured the cigarettes themselves.

A new state law here governing the growth of the weed has cut down possession here, Kilday said, and the manufacturers were turning to other sources. One of the sources of distribution here was growing larger all the time," Kilday added, and was the "number of school children who have come to know the weed."

Because of diligence on the part of the police, Kilday said, backyard growing of the plant "has just about been stamped out." He added that most of the marijuana cigarettes now available in this city had been "imported."

CAST OF CHARACTERS
PATRICIA WARREN, heroine, secretary to Don Monteray, actor-playwright.
TRISSY WARREN, Pat's cousin and roommate in New York.
JOHN MONTERAY, Patricia's ex-employer.
ROSAWAND AKEEN, Patricia's rival.

CHAPTER III

IN almost no time Pat's Warren became the shield which stood between Don Monteray and his adoring public. The fact that the improvised office soon was a place of efficiency and order proved that she had successfully become the capable Miss Warren. All day the top of Don's typewriter sounded behind locked doors while Pat's tactfully handled beautifully dressed girls, sleek, perfumed women, reporters, autograph seekers, thrill hunters. She had expected to be lonely for Trissy but instead she had only time for fleeting thoughts and momentary gratifications that the beloved cousin and her John were happy.

At five o'clock on her fourth day as Don's secretary, Pat went in to him with her letters. He looked up with a nod and asked if loud voices in the outer office had been an indication of trouble.

"A woman who wanted to paint your portrait," Pat told him in the flat colorless tone so foreign to her own. "She was a bit determined."

Don laughed. When he laughed it always did something to Pat's senses. What would happen if he smiled at her she could only imagine. But he never looked at her, never seemed aware of her as an individual. It was what she had wanted, yet it was so disturbing at times. As he rapidly signed his letters, she stood beside him, allowing her shoulders to sag, breaking the line of her lovely figure by an awkward posture. Bitterly, she reflected, "I'm as necessary to him as his tooth brush—and as uninteresting."

"Miss—er—," he began, blotting his signature.

"Warren," patiently.

"Warren—Thank you—how long have you been here?"

"This is my fourth day."

"I have accomplished more in these four days than in the previous six months." His words were casually impersonal. Leaning back in his chair, he stretched luxuriously. Men had always scrambled to their feet when Pat's put in an appearance, she had become accustomed to masculine attentions. But Don stretched luxuriously. To him she was nothing more than a smoothly running cog in the machinery of his life. She gathered up the letters.

"How much did the agent say I was to pay you?" he inquired, settling back and lighting a cigarette.

"Fifty dollars a week," Pat answered evenly, although she was still delightfully impressed with the sum.

"We'll make it $75," he said casually.

IN spite of herself, Pat took a little skipping step as she left the office. Seventy-five dollars a week! That was more than $300

Lounging picturesquely on the couch, she waited for dinner to be sent up from the house cafe. But it would be a lonesome dinner—lonesome without Don Monteray.

a month. It meant that she could leave her tiny apartment and find a modern uptown place within walking distance of the Avalon. Pat's beauty loving soul responded to pleasant surroundings and she wriggled with delight as she started the long homeward trip.

And two days later she had an opportunity to prove to her employer that she was worth the stupendous amount of $75 a week.

Upon returning from lunch she found Don, who had evidently opened the barricading door for some reason, surrounded by a bevy of school girls, excited and giggling. His face was scarlet; he was angry and confused. One teasing, beautiful girl held him by both coat lapels. She had just aimed a kiss at his lips and landed it squarely on his chin. She was laughing hilariously while her friends shrieked with sheer excitement.

"I won the bet," she caroled. "Five pounds of candy. You girls bet I couldn't kiss Don Monteray and I did it—I did it—"

Don looked as if he could gladly slay her. He straightened his tie and smoothed his hair. Obviously the wager had not been without a struggle. He saw Pat's and his expression was a shout for help.

"Mr. Monteray," one of the sweet young things gushed, "we are forming a club—it's the Don Monteray club—" Pat's got an idea.

"I am Mr. Monteray's secretary," she said firmly and there was an instant hush as they turned to look at her. "I have his appointment book in my desk. Perhaps we can arrange a meeting for your club." She tried to herd his tormentors into the office, but warily they hung back. "And you will want one of his pictures," throwing out fresh bait. "Come and look them over and take your choice."

This proved too much. Photographs of the club's sponsor. There was a concerted rush for the office. Pat threw a pile of pictures on her desk, dodged quickly behind the intruders and the door swung shut with a comforting click of the lock.

"Oh, Mr. Monteray," shrieked the one who had kissed him, "may I have this gorgeous picture?" She stopped. Her eyes had found the solid panels of the door. Making a rush for it she bumped her nose, screamed Don's name and pounded with her fists. The other girls, as one person, turned their accusing eyes on Pat.

"I'm sorry," she said graciously. One thing she had learned. She must not antagonize Mr. Monteray's public. His box office receipts depended upon just such silly adoration as this. "Mr. Monteray is late for an appointment."

"Maybe we can catch him," suggested one of the avid little admirers. Snatching a photograph from the desk she ran and breathlessly her friends did likewise. "If his car is outside we'll crowd in."

WHEN all was quiet the door behind Pat's stealthily opened. The famous Don Monteray peeked dubiously through the crack.

"Is there no justice?" he demanded furiously of Pat's.

"No, sir."

Suddenly his eyes twinkled and he laughed. The storm was over. "Thank Heaven you don't admire me," he said.

Pat's wondered about this. Was it admiration she felt. Whatever it was it hurt unbearably.

"If that is all, Mr. Monteray—" She felt so unutterably foolish saying things like that. So flat when she longed to meet him half way.

"That is all. What day is this?"

"Saturday."

"Pay day." Rummaging in his desk he brought out a check book and scribbled with a fine hand. "Fill in your name, do you mind?" he asked. "I'm dreadfully stupid about names."

AS she complied, Pat thought, "I think of him every minute of the night and day and he doesn't even know my name." She dared not look at him but his picture was engraved on her heart; the restrained wave in his hair, his boyish, shame-faced grin, the fine, strong lines of his profile.

That afternoon Pat found a small, very charming apartment. When her belongings had been arranged, the room put in order and rosily lighted, she bathed in the shining tub and donned her most alluring pajamas. Her hair curled her cheeks bloomed, her lips relaxed in their own sweet curve. Lounging picturesquely on the couch she waited for dinner to be sent up from the house cafe. But it would be a lonesome dinner—lonesome without Don Monteray.

Quickly she changed her train of thought. "Watch your step," she heard herself saying. "He hates women—he doesn't know you exist. Don't be a softy, Miss—er—Warren." But despite these warnings a thrilled excitement gripped her.

Gov. Allred and State Senator Weaver Moore of Houston, had lunch together recently. They have been on opposite sides of nearly every topic before the Fifty-fifth Legislature. They are distantly related. Each proceeded to banter the other. Sen. Moore began with the announcement that he now was the governor's friend. "I'll prove it to you," he said. "Someone in the senate suggested that the Governor ought to be subject to Senate confirmation once a day. I told them I did not think so—that once a week would be often enough."

There is one good thing about you, Weaver," the Governor replied. "If you search far enough something good always can be found. I've found it in you. When a new legislator come to me for advice I tell him: 'Just watch Weaver Moore and vote opposite to the way he does and you will make a good legislative record.'"

Lt. Gov. Walter Woodul last week added another to the collection of gavelts that he has gathered while presiding officer of the Texas senate. The latest is made of Texas black walnut. It was turned in the carpenter shop at John Tarleton Agricultural College and presented by the students through Sen. Manley Head, Stephenville.

Few of the individual members would tell their ages. Mrs. R. J. Turrentine, president of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, advised the Senate, but they are proud to announce the age of the Federation. It was 40 years old May 14. Mrs. Turrentine addressed the Senate extending an invitation to visit the club's state building. Incidentally, she reminded them the Texas Women's Federation is the

Plans Being Made To Annex Canada

PENBINA, N. D. (AP)—A plan to annex the Canadian northwest to the United States in which a Minnesota governor allegedly figured in 1869 is revealed in an old account found here.

The article, based on reminiscences related by Hyacinthe Villeneuve, a pioneer North Dakota farmer, records that a party led by Governor William R. Marshall made a trip from St. Paul to Winnipeg, Man., then to Fort Garry, while the Manitoba rebellion instigated by the mixed blood Louis Riel, was in progress.

The Minnesota governor sought to have Riel "give himself up to the United States" in a plan whereby this country would annex the northwest territory and establish Riel as "governor of Manitoba," according to Villeneuve, who drove Marshall into Canada.

Indian Massacre Data Being Sought

GRAND FORKS, N. D. (AP)—Information concerning a family murdered by Indians here in frontier days is being sought in England in connection with North Dakota PWA compilations of history for the American Guide.

Fragmentary records show an English family, named Tilly, was traveling from Pembina, N. D., to Fort Snelling, Minn. The Tillys were ambushed by Indians a short distance from Grand Forks at a small stream since known as English coulee and the entire family, with exception of two young boys, was massacred.

It is recorded the two boys were taken captive, but later rescued by a scouting party from Fort Snelling.

Believes Dueling Never be Popular

FORT WORTH, May 29 (UP)—Jose Villardell, Spanish-born fencing master who now lives in Fort Worth, believes America will never popularize blood dueling.

In spite the flurry of comment over a recent duel between two youths at Los Angeles Junior College, Villardell thinks this country will not accept such matches generally.

"In this country fencing is purely a sport, and exercise," he said. "It should remain that way. You can kill easily with the sharpened sword. And if that should happen in this country, the reaction would be harmful to fencing as a sport."

Villardell, judge and seconded many duels in his native Spain while he was a student. Once he saw a blade accidentally slip cut-ture through the chest of one adversary in a "friendly match." This Fort Worth man, organizer of more than a score of Southwest fencing clubs, is one of the section's premier fencers.

The duties of your county workers are: To keep accurate and up-to-date reports on all persons receiving assistance, to take applications from boys for CCC camps, to take applications from youths for their program, to accept applications where eligible for all persons for WPA work. RACING DRIVERS FORECAST 113 M.P.H. RECORD MONDAY ON INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY

By JOHN L. CUTLER
United Press Staff Correspondent
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 29 (AP)—An average of 113 miles an hour will be necessary to win the 500-mile race at Indianapolis Motor Speedway this year, drivers and mechanics predicted today.

With a good break on weather they anticipate the most favorable speed conditions in the 25-year history of the annual Memorial Day event. The race will be held May 31 this year.

The track has been smoothed, turns made safer and there is no limit on the amount of gasoline used. Last year there was a limit of 37 1-2 gallons for the 500 miles. Only restriction this year is that standard gasoline obtainable at any public filling station be used.

Meyer Holds Record
Present record for the 500 miles is 109.069 miles an hour set by Louis Meyer, Huntington Park, Cal., last year when he became the only three-time winner of the race.

It represented an increase of three miles an hour over the old record despite the fuel limit and an accident which slowed down the race for about 35 miles.

"Wild Bill" Cummings, Indianapolis winner of the 1934 race with an average of 104.865, won pole position with a new record of 123.445 miles an hour for the 25-mile qualifying run.

Drives Fastest Lap
At the same time he qualified for pole position, Cummings set a new record of 125.139 miles an hour for a single lap of the two and one-half mile brick oval.

Jimmy Snyder, Chicago, a former middle car driver, averaged 126.570 miles an hour a few days later on an unofficial run in a new six-cylinder racer specially built for the Indianapolis race.

Sparks, designer of the car, thinks it will average 130 for a single lap. Gradually the speed of the race has increased since Fred Frame, Los Angeles, won with an average of 104.14 in 1932. Meyer followed him in 1933 with an average of 104.16. Then came Bill Cummings with his record of 104.86 and Kelly Pettillo, Los Angeles, in 1935 with an average of 106.86. Meyer shot the record up to 109.06.

First Race in 1911
The slowest average ever to win the Indianapolis race was the 74.59 miles an hour made by Ray Harroun in the first race back in 1911.

All but one of the 10 money winners last year averaged better than 100 miles an hour. Zeke Meyer, 46, oldest driver on the track, took ninth place with 101.331 miles an hour. George Connor, San Bernardino, Cal., finished tenth with an average of 98.931.

Fifty-five cars were entered for the race this year, but only the fastest 33 in qualifying trials will be permitted to start.

To qualify a car must make 10 laps at an average of 110 miles an hour or better. Last year the qualifying limit was 100 miles an hour and the starting field was comprised wholly of cars which had exceeded 110.

Crack Field to Start
In addition to Cummings and Snyder, this year's field includes several others who have proved themselves able to stand the terrific pace for the 500-mile grind.

Meyer is back looking for his fourth victory. He qualified at 119.619 miles an hour. Kelly Pettillo also is back again.

Others include Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis, who qualified at 122-751 miles an hour, Herb Ardinger, Glassport, Pa., who averaged 121-983; Billy Winn, Detroit; Ralph Hepburn, Los Angeles, driving the car in which Meyer won last year; Tony Gulotta, Kansas City; Mauri Rose, Dayton, O.; Chet Gardner, Long Beach, Cal.; Babe Stapp, Dallas, Tex.; Rex Mays, Glendale, Cal.; twice holder of pole position; Floyd Roberts, Van Nuys, Cal.; and George Connor.

Doing Something About High Prices

Nearly everybody has been wondering why someone didn't do something about rising prices.

One major manufacturer has done something about it and one class of consumers—car owners—are reaping the benefit.

"Announcement of the new Goodyear R-1 tire was welcome news to motorists in Cisco, as well as in every other section of the country," declared J. W. McKinney, local dealer for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company.

Week after week headlines have been emphasizing the fact that prices are steadily going up. Increasing cost of goods to the consumer constituted a challenge Goodyear couldn't overlook, and several months' development engineers were assigned the task of producing a quality tire at a price millions of motorists had been accustomed to pay.

Result was welcome news to automobile owners—the new Goodyear R-1, Mr. McKinney continued.

"Low price is not the only advantage of the new product. Embodied in the R-1 are the quality features that made the Goodyear G-3 All-Weather the world's most popular tire—wider, flatter tread, higher shoulders, 12 per cent more rubber in the tread, Supertwist Cord carcass, center traction to give maximum protection against skidding, and handsome, streamlined sidewalls for smart appearance.

"In putting the R-1 on the market at a time when labor and material costs are rising and costs to the buyer are generally on the increase, Goodyear is again more than living up to its policy of serving the public welfare to the best of its ability. With the heavy summer driving season at hand, announcement of the R-1 will enable car owners the country over to replace worn-out, dangerous rubber with new, safe, sturdy tires.

"The R-1 gives real meaning to the slogan 'First Class Travel at Reduced Rates'." Mr. McKinney concluded.

Outruns Telegram, Is Late for Trial

Few was summoned as a witness in the trial of nine men charged with violation of the Connally "hot oil" act.

The accused men pleaded guilty two days before their trial was called. Few had been here several hours before he was notified.
