URGE TO STEAL—The magnitude of the lock is plenty of evidence that man to steal.

are persons who will steal any provocation, and with long chance on getting. There are those who will only if they are sure they will not get caught. There are those who will steal only when they are sure, if caught, they can be reached by the law; those who will take the risk of one in a business deal; those who will take the risk of their careers if the conduct of them; and who if given much change will pocket it; those who will say nothing about an error in an account in their favor.

there are persons who would steal, but who would take if they thought that someone would take it. An umbrella is left on a bench in a park. Persons who consider the soul of virtue would pick up such an umbrella and take it home, because, they would

PRESBYTERIANS BEGIN SECOND ENCAMPMENT MONDAY, JULY 12

Everything is ready for the Senior Presbyterian encampment to begin at Lake Cisco grounds next Monday, July 12, said Rev. M. H. Applewhite today. The program and schedule will be similar as that of the Pioneers, except that the ages will be more mature.

The recent encampment ending July 3, was the most successful ever held by the Fort Worth Presbytery from many points of view. The new buildings, just completed and equipped by pastor and members of the local church and circles, added much to the enjoyment of the affair. The natural beauty of the location and the well-arranged schedule carried out under the direction of the Director-General, Rev. M. H.

CHIEF HUGHES IS MASTER OF TACTICS GAME

WASHINGTON, July 8 (AP)—Senator Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania carried forward today the administration's attack on the supreme court, with charges on the senate floor that Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes is campaigning "politically" against President Roosevelt's judiciary program.

"The supreme court is playing politics and everyone knows it," Guffey said. Hughes, he said, is "the real master of tactics behind the scenes."

"The judiciary bill divided attention today with the major league all-star baseball game. After senate debate opened in a series of blistering exchanges between democrats, senate leaders believed a filibuster is about to develop."

"It is accurate to state," Guffey said, "that the present period of the supreme court will go down in history as a time in which partisan politics played a role of great magnitude."

He charged that President Harding also "sounded and solidly packed" the court.

July 11 Observed As 4-H Sunday

Members of the Kokomo boys' and girls' clubs will observe July 11 as "4-H Sunday" in their community. Assistant County Agent Hugh F. Barnhart has been advised.

Rev. Robert Skaggs will be the speaker at a 4-H recognition service in the church during the event. The 4-H Sunday will be similar to the county observance held Sunday at Eastland.

Friday, July 16 a "42" tournament will be staged to raise money for members of the clubs to attend the annual farmer's short course during August at College Station.

Poison is Placed For Grasshoppers

Poisoning of grasshoppers in Eastland county is now in progress under the supervision of Extension agent Elmo V. Cook.

Cook has urged all the grasshoppers in numerous quantities on or near crop land to receive an allotment of bran and sodium arsenate to prevent a heavy infestation next year.

In Cisco distribution of bran and arsenate is through the cooperation of T. G. Caudle, vocational agricultural teacher. Farmers living near Eastland and points other than Cisco should contact the county agent's office for their allotment.

Officials emphasize the recipient of the material must furnish half of the bran, given the county by the federal government.

HONOLULU, July 7 (AP)—The battleship Colorado, carrying three swift airplanes, steamed at top speed toward the Phoenix Islands to search in a new area for Amelia Earhart and Frederick Noonan.

The Colorado was scheduled to reach Winslow Bank on the north edge of the Phoenix group of small coral reefs and volcanic deposits late today. The Colorado's commander planned to launch three planes and begin search immediately. Winslow Bank is 230 miles southeast of Howland Island, where Miss Earhart planned to land last Friday.

Also converging on the area were the coast guard cutter Itasca and the navy minesweeper Swan. They were expected to reach the islands later today.

Additional reports were received on the mainland today from amateur radio operators purporting to give information from or about the lost fliers.

Charles Miguel, Oakland amateur who reportedly heard signals Saturday and yesterday on Miss Earhart's wave length, said he picked up another message today. The message was, "KHAGG calling. On coral reef southwest of unknown island. Do not know how long. We are O. K." The message faded, Miguel said.

Navy and coast guard officials were skeptical.

Another message which officials said read like a fortune-teller's prediction was received at Oakland airport from George Huxford of Washington, D. C.

Five radio amateurs reported they heard signals this morning on the wave length assigned to Miss Earhart's plane.

Children in Court

These editorials by Judge Malcolm Hatfield are being published over the United States in the interest of the youth of our land to the end that they may show the path that inevitably leads to one end—the jail—later perhaps to death.

A young man who recently returned from visiting in a city where a labor dispute was in progress today learned in court that the world did not owe him a living.

When apprehended in the act of burglarizing a gasoline station, he sullenly informed officers that it was no sin to rob a large oil company. In this particular instance, years of splendid home training were cast aside after an adolescent boy had witnessed the violence and hatreds that accompanied the labor dispute.

The price of a half fare bus ticket proved the means of landing a thirteen-year-old girl in the juvenile court today.

Twenty-four hours before her apprehension by juvenile authorities for stealing from a ten cent store, this child had heard her mother tell a bus driver that she was eleven years of age. While the mother saved a small amount of money by misrepresenting her daughter's actual age, this proved to be the most expensive ticket she ever purchased for an example of dishonesty was set which the child was not slow in adopting.

A grocer's son was taken into custody yesterday in a nearby town by an inspector of the Bureau of Weights and Measures. The young man frankly admitted that he conceived the idea of short weighing orders after having once heard his father boast of a fraudulent practice by which a slight advantage was gained over a customer.

It was also discovered that the young man had deliberately failed over a period of six months of ringing up on the cash register all money taken in. The court was not impressed with the father's indignation and frankly informed him that he had no complaint to make so long as he himself cheated his customers in his son's presence.

The tragedy of a boy with too much idle time on his hands was revealed in court today when a college freshman was convicted of a reckless driving charge in which several persons were injured.

Some ten or twelve years ago the son of the late Calvin Coolidge was approached at his work in a tobacco shed by a young man who casually remarked "Believe me, if I had a car and my father was President of the United States you wouldn't catch me doing this kind of work."

Young Coolidge is reported to have looked up and replied, "You would if Calvin Coolidge was your father."

If there were more parents like the late President we

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The evidence is purely circumstantial, but you can build up a pretty good case to support the conclusion that C. I. O. strikes against the independent steel companies might be a case of co-operation between John L. Lewis and the U. S. Steel Corporation. The deduction is made like this:

"Big Steel" is not suffering while the plants of its competitors are closed and their customers require steel. Lewis isn't suffering either. "Big Steel" signed a collective bargaining agreement with the C. I. O. after conferences between Lewis and its chairman, Myron Taylor. So "Big Steel" isn't having any strike and is producing—and profiting—full blast.

Taylor, in his position, obviously appreciated the large difference between having the U. S. Steel plants tied up in this production year and having the independent plants tied up.

Taylor and J. P. Morgan decided to let the independents take the rap if they desired. Up to that time the independents had been dead certain U. S. Steel would take the rap. They received the surprise of their lives, and men like Tom Girdler of Republic Steel, Eugene Grace of Bethlehem, and Ernest Weir of National, are reported to have been hornet-mad ever since.

There were many considerations, but one in Taylor's mind was the fact that independent companies had been taking tonnage away from U. S. Steel in recent years. It was Taylor's job to build up the business of his corporation and its subsidiaries. Lewis could be useful in keeping up a rigid wage scale among U. S. Steel competitors in case he organized them. And he could be much more useful tying up their plants than tying up those of Taylor's corporation. At any rate, Lewis convinced Taylor that he was all set to tackle U. S. Steel first and alone, and that he could put a large crimp in its production.

Whether he promised that in case U. S. Steel signed a collective bargaining agreement he would then demand contracts from the independents and call strikes if refused, can only be a matter of conjecture for the rest of us. But it was understood here that Lewis would do exactly that.

So what would you have done in Taylor's place? An explanation of why Girdler and Grace wouldn't sign with Lewis would be more complex.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM GREEN of the American Federation of Labor has invited a test to determine how influential he and his organization are in Congress in these days when John Lewis is arrogating most of the abuse, praise and other publicity.

Green, on behalf of the A. F. of L. and its membership, has registered a strong and vehement protest at the inexcusable delay in the enactment of the Wagner-Steagall low-rent housing bill. He reiterates that this is "Number One Bill" on the federation's legislative program for this session. Furthermore:

"Labor stands united with every other organization representative of the public interest on a program and one demand: The enactment of the Wagner-Steagall bill as is."

would have fewer boys with high powered automobiles and large expense accounts seeking excitement and thrills on heavily congested highways.

Two socially prominent and well-to-do parents were severely lectured in court yesterday afternoon when their only son was implicated in an arson charge.

When the parents attempted to shift the responsibility for their son's conduct to his play-mate, the judge turned to the couple and said, "Both of you are so busy with your club, lodge and social obligations that you have no time left to train your child. If I again hear of you employing a high school girl at ten cents an hour to supervise this nine-year-old boy I will be forced to remove him from your custody."

BILLS DRAFTED TO CO-ORDINATE U. S. AIR POWER

By MACK JOHNSON United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 7. (UP)—Congressional leaders urge swift enactment of a triple-point program designed to bolster the nation's military air defenses through increasing potential reserve officer strength, available planes and safety devices.

The program was offered by Chairman James M. Mead, D. N. Y., of the house post office committee, after several investigations over the past four years growing out of alleged irregularities in handling of air mail, flying of the mail by army pilots, and cancellation of former air mail contracts with private operators by the post office department.

"We have all the data we need," Mead said. "I have introduced a series of bills that would carry out the aims. Commercial companies and government departments look with favor upon them. I intend to press them to quick action in Congress."

Pilot Training Urged One of the bills, it was learned, would provide for two months annual training for 750 air mail pilots at a special air base to be selected by the war department so they could be held in readiness on the active reserve.

Mead said. "Until now, I have refrained purposely from urging this bill's consideration. For military reasons, the war department did not wish to speak about it publicly. I do not believe it has any objections to it and I intend to press it for quick action."

Mead asserted that he had conferred with scores of air mail pilots about the extra training and a "vast preponderance" is in favor of it. He said that commercial air industries also favored it as a step toward developing general aviation.

Pay to Remain Stable Under terms of the measure, the pilots would be given a two months' leave of absence by employers' with the Federal government making up the difference between army and their regular pay.

Mead has another measure pending before his committee which would authorize an initial $100,000 appropriation next year for the post office department to experiment with stratosphere flights, pick-up service and "feeder" lines for air mail.

"This is purely experimental and the amount can be increased later," Mead said. "This bill would permit also development of the latest type of scientific equipment. The advantages in safety and speed for commercial purposes, of course, would accrue to the army in time of warfare."

Mead asserted that the present air mail service embraces 500 of the "fastest and most modern" planes available which could be "converted into bombers" by installing special racks if an emergency defense situation arises.

Wants Commanding Authority "All we would have to do is to pass an act authorizing the commanding of these planes and within a few hours we would have, if the whole program is adopted, an almost impregnable air defense," Mead said.

Mead pointed out that the first stratosphere, high speed tests under his bill would be made between New York and San Francisco on irregular schedules.

They would be used for mail purposes. Until their safety and feasibility is proved, they would carry no passengers, Mead explained.

Mead said that his proposal to train air mail pilots would apply only to domestic lines, which would not include Pan-American Airways service to South America and the Clipper ships in the Pacific.

About Our Friends—

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) argue. "If I don't get it somebody else will." Perhaps when the finder takes the umbrella he thinks he will advertise it. But have you ever noticed the tremendous gap that often exists between the good intention and the good action?

A family moves away from a community leaving valuable plants in the yard with no one to guard them. What happens? Nice folks in big limousines, and in little floggers, and without little flippers, dig up those plants and cart them away. "Because," they argue "they will die if somebody doesn't take care of them." But if that family should decide to move back to that house again would those plants be returned?

In nearly every human being there is strongly fixed the trait of acquisitiveness. That is a good trait. It is the trait that makes people accumulate things. But like almost any good trait it can become a bad trait. Stealing is the characteristic of acquisitiveness gone wrong.

M. M. BOWMAN, husband VANCE ROMINGER, son.

Carolee wanted to go, but then elected to stay and comfort her mother. After all, six men could do all that would be possible, and conceivably a girl would be superfluous with so many men, to say the least. The sheriff discouraged her.

She watched them for nearly a mile. They made a picturesque cavalcade, their horses straining over steep climbs, up and up, twisting, circling, turning, getting smaller and smaller as the vastness of the mountain absorbed them.

Finally they moved single file over a silhouetted skyline and were gone.

SUPERSTITION MOUNTAIN

By Owen Arnold Copyright, 1937, NEA Service, Inc.

CAST OF CHARACTERS CAROLEE COLTER, heroine, prospector's daughter. STUART BLAKE, eastern "buck" hunter, Carolee's lover. HENRY COLTER, prospector. PAUL AND SILAS COLTER, prospector's sons. NINA BLAKE, Stuart's sister.

Yesterday Stuart visits the sheriff to tell him of his strange experience on Superstition. While he is there a wild contest in the mountains.

CHAPTER XI

THE Pinal county sheriff immediately called Carolee on the telephone at Apache Junction filling station and got detailed information. It irked him some to have another case come up in Superstition. That made three people lost up there this year, he growled to his office deputy, but the others had gotten out safely enough.

"Seems like this might be a tough one," he remarked. "She talked right sensible. I'll go, I better get a dog, too, and pick up a couple of boys from the Circle Z."

He borrowed the dog, a mournful hound, from the state penitentiary which was located conveniently in the Pinal county seat, Florence. The hound was trained at trailing men. Then the sheriff conscripted horses and equipment and two cowboys from the Circle Z Ranch, finally adding one more man, a prospector and veteran outdoorsman, as a sort of extra guide. All these men were skilled at trailing, rich in their knowledge of mountain lore. The men and the horses all rode in a truck to Superstition Lodge which was the end of the motor road. There Stuart Blake begged to join them, he had hastened back from Phoenix, arriving only shortly before. Sheriff Watson didn't mind.

Stuart entered an initial motor service, in fact, by guiding them to the Colters' mountain trail, which led winding upward to the shack on the cliff. Many foot trails are confusing in that region, and thus some time was saved.

CAROLEE saw them coming well before they arrived. When they were still several hundred yards away she recognized Stuart's paint horse, and at once mounted Chieftain to go and meet them. They talked with her briefly, then started on to talk with Mr. Colter and Silas at the home.

"Stuart, will you wait a minute for me?" she requested. He reined his horse with hers and they lingered down trail.

"I'm awfully glad you came," she began, "but I'd rather you wouldn't go any farther."

He could tell that she was disturbed, and his curiosity was intense. But he didn't want to hurt her. He was silent for quite a while.

"I know," she spoke eventually, "what you are thinking. You are wondering if I am ashamed to have you see my home, my mother and people and the way we live. Well—I am, a little. But, it isn't that. In fact I'd rather you called and had dinner with us, maybe, and then you could decide if you still liked me. You've been awfully nice. Nicer than any other boy friend I've ever had, Stuart. Honest, it really isn't shame this time, and if you decided we weren't good enough for you I wouldn't care. I would—"

"Carolee!" "I would understand. Really, I would, Stuart. I would care, I mean, but I wouldn't blame you. That's not what I'm most worried about now, though. It's—it's because I do think you are nice that I don't want you to come any farther. You know I called the officers? About Paul?"

"Yes. And I came to help. I want to. I'm not a snob, Carolee. At least I never mean to be. Can I help it if I'm from a city?"

"No! No, Stuart. I like you. And I'm proud of you. It's because I like you that I don't want to come. Oh, I guess I'll have to tell you. Perhaps I should. The truth is, papa and Silas think you have done something to Paul!"

LOCAL "makin's" smokers know their "makin's" tobacco. It's Prince Albert for them! They say the "crimp cut" is easier to handle—lays right—no spilling or bunching—rolls fast, firm.

GRADUATES HEW TO NEW LINES

PAINESVILLE, O., July 7 (UP)—Apparent evidence that the 1937 graduates are imbued with modern concepts and tempered with optimism and faith, was indicated clearly in answers received to seven questions asked a group of selected Lake Erie College students by a local newspaper. The institution is for women only.

The seven questions included queries on timely topics and current problems that are being met by everyone. They were answered by a group of college seniors selected at random by Dean Mary Hewett Hilbreth. It was felt that those selected to answer the questions would have representative views corresponding to those held by the college graduate of today.

Life Viewed Seriously

The results were illuminating and it was found that the young woman of today is not prone to let life flow past her.

It was found that today's graduate believes that there are so many if not more opportunities for success now, and that opportunities are better than when her parents were graduated or left school.

The graduate feels that present-day morals are just as good as those of her mother's and father's generation, although she sees a more healthy attitude current today.

Her code of life is the Golden Rule.

Her religion is "within herself," the answers showed. All have some definite view on religion and all are conscious of a need for guidance.

Success Not Material

Success was defined by the group as attainment of a goal, and a few indicated that material wealth is the goal to be reached. The majority, however, indicated "happiness" as the ultimate aim.

Regarding politics, the individuals in the group seemed to realize the changes going on about her. It was found. All indicated that a "labor party" is a group to be reckoned with in future political struggles.

U.S. INCREASES SAFETY AREAS FOR BIG GAME

By FRED O. BAILEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, July 7. (U.P.)—The government is spending millions of dollars to protect and propagate big game which pioneers of the west almost wiped out in the last century.

Scores of big game preserves have been established and many tons of feed are shipped to them each year. State and national laws have been passed for protection of the relatively small number of big game left.

This campaign to prevent the extinction of big game from the United States was begun on a large scale only a few years ago. Already it has more than doubled the number of many animals and birds. Relief workers under the Works Progress Administration are improving five Federal big-game preserves in North Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana and Oklahoma. The work is being supervised by the U. S. Biological Survey.

Eastern Waterfowl Protected

Hundreds of other projects for improving wildlife habitat already have been completed or are under construction or are planned. These include 17 waterfowl refuges along the Atlantic Coast from Canada to the Gulf where ducks may stop on their southward and northward flight without fear of guns.

Virtually every state has from two to ten wildlife refuges which protect animals and birds native to that region. The total of these is in excess of 5,000,000 acres. The new western preserves however, are the most extensive projects for preserving big game which cover the great plains in large numbers. The five preserves comprise more than 120,000 acres.

The smallest is Sully's Hill Game Preserve, near Devil's Lake, N. D., containing approximately 1,000 acres, where buffalo, elk, white-tailed deer, as well as ring-necked pheasants, wild geese and ducks and other species of birds, find sanctuary.

Elk Refuge in Wyoming

The Federal Elk Refuge, at Jackson, Wyo., contains 18,737 acres originally established for winter feeding of elk. It also provides sanctuary for deer, as well as for sage grouse, wild ducks and geese.

Near Valentine, Neb., is 20,000-acre Fort Niobrara Game Preserve, where buffalo, elk, deer, beaver, as well as sharp-tailed grouse and prairie chickens are protected. The project now is 90 per cent completed.

The largest of the five preserves is the Wichita Mountains Wildlife Refuge, comprising 161,480 acres devoted to the perpetuation of buffalo, elk, deer, Texas Longhorn steers, as well as turkey, quail, prairie chickens, wild ducks and geese. Another Federal big-game refuge is being established near Moiese, Mont. Known as the National Bison Range, it comprises 18,521 acres devoted primarily to bison, although it also offers sanctuary for elk, deer, mountain sheep, beaver, blue grouse and wild ducks.

Scranton Downs Nance by 26 to 4

Setting an all-time high scoring mark for the city softball league Scranton took Nance to a cleaning by a score of 26 to 4.

The game was one of wild confusion, many errors, hits, runs and a lot of fun. Elliott lead the Nance hitters by getting two out of three times up. M. Bailey for Scranton got 3 hits out of 5 times up, and scored 2 runs. Every other batter on the Scranton team got at least one hit and most of them got two.

The game was never in doubt from the first inning, when Scranton batted around and scored several runs. Scranton played air-tight ball in the field, making only one error. Nance Motors made 12 errors.

Scranton had a greatly improved team on the field last night, and they assured everyone concerned that they are not out of the running for the city league title. Their team last night looked capable of beating any team in the league.

Yesterday a sheriff's posse is organized and moves up into the mountains to find Paul Colter. Carolee confesses to Stuart that her father thinks he is connected with Paul's disappearance.

CHAPTER XII
ON the day that the sheriff's posse went into the mountain, a correspondent from a Phoenix daily learned of the disappearance of Paul Colter. Then the journalistic wheels began to spin.

Headlines on Superstition are as recurrent as the seasons in Arizona, and most of them have to do with missing men. Each time someone gets lost then the whole legend of the Lost Dutchman Mine is reshaped and embellished, and the public thrills to it again and again. Love of gold is second only to love of women, and nobody knows that better than a newspaper editor.

Reporters came to Superstition Lodge and wanted to join a searching party. That suited Stuart Blake. It meant action, and this energetic young man was anxious to be doing something. The papers said that more than 100 persons gathered to join the second party, but officers stepped in at that point and canceled the plans. Too many untrained men scrambling over Superstition, they declared, could do more harm than good, especially in blotting out possible trails of the missing Paul. A few experienced outdoorsmen and a dog, also possibly some good observers in an airplane, were more useful. The crowds went on back home to read the papers. Stuart felt an urge to be near Carolee and watched constantly for her cliff signal.

SHE met him on the second day, 24 hours after the sheriff had gone in, but they talked only a little while. "Mother is worrying constantly," she explained, "and I mustn't leave her long. She hoped the men would be back with news last night."

"No sign of them?" asked Stuart. "No. Nothing." "Your dad will know about where Paul would be, because of the map your men were using. That ought to help the sheriff, and with the dog they'll surely find something today." He gave her several copies of the newspapers about the affair, and rode a mile or two with her along the lower reaches of the mountain. They were careful this time, however, to note landmarks and stick to a more open route, in order not to lose themselves again.

When they had finally separated to return to their homes, Carolee felt an inward glow of satisfaction; just being with Stuart Blake had comforted her, eased the worry over her missing brother. She had confidence in Paul's ability to take care of himself anyway. She hummed songs and talked sweet talk to Chieftain, whom she petted more than in any horse's due, but that's the way she felt. Thus was the musing day-dreaming, when her reverie was interrupted by a distinct groan.

The sound frightened her. SHE did not immediately see its source. It could have been an animal. But then it was repeated, and unquestionably it was human. Someone seemed trying to attract attention, with odd moans and noises of suffering.

Heart pounding, Carolee called out, "What is it?" and went in the direction of the sound. Some 50 feet away she found a woman on the ground, an Indian squaw obviously suffering. "Ho-o-oh!" cried Carolee, dismounting at once.

The woman looked pleadingly and mumbled something. Carolee couldn't understand, but she began a hurried examination. Water from her saddle canteen was gulped and the woman's gratitude was obvious if unspoken. The Indian indicated that her pain was in her leg, and Carolee soon discovered that the leg was broken.

The squaw could speak but little English. "When did you get hurt? Did you fall?" "Sick," the Indian mumbled. "Sick." It was her only way of saying she needed assistance.

Carolee took off her light sweater and made a pillow on the rocky ground for the red woman's head. As easily as she could, she straightened the broken limb; it appeared to be in a terribly painful position. Moving it must have been almost unbearable, but beyond her increasing panting the woman gave no sign. Carolee was afraid she had fainted when her eyes closed, and so she bathed her forehead gently to revive her. Carolee thought of trying to splint the leg, but realized she didn't quite know how. Superstition Lodge wasn't more than half an hour's ride away; it was best that she go for help. She tried to make this decision clear with words and signs, and she left the canteen at the squaw's side.

REPORTERS at the Lodge were almost glad that the Indian woman had suffered a fall. It gave them something to report while waiting for news of the man hunt. Jerry Lynch, a writer on a Phoenix daily, and his somewhat envious competitor from the opposition, "Kid" Jones, each carried cameras and each promptly took candid snaps of Carolee after she had explained the need for help, and they rode back to the injured squaw with an improvised stretcher.

Carolee stayed with the Indian woman until she was taken in hand by her own Red friends, the Apache basket weavers and potters who stayed near the Lodge. They refused offers of white medical aid.

"She say she hunt clay with her burro," one Indian translated, "and break leg in fall. Burro go off. She die there, but white girl come. She never forget."

The reporter laid missed none of this. Jerry Lynch especially "interviewed" Carolee, took no pains to conceal his admiration. Stuart Blake, himself solicitous, noted that salient fact, and Carolee saw that he noted it. Something inside her—the same dependable something that Nature puts deep in every girl—told her that this was a healthy situation, inasmuch as Mr. Stuart Blake had shown definite romantic interest in her. She did nothing, therefore, to discourage Jerry Lynch.

Later, when Stuart rode back part way with her up the trail toward her home, he was especially attentive. In spite of the impending tragedy in her family she was made happy by this. "I think he almost wanted to propose," she told herself when he had turned back. "And he wouldn't because Paul is missing."

It occurred to her that the two brothers seemed always coming between her and Stuart, even when they were away. (To Be Continued)

Farm Mapping in County Continues

A total of 396 farms in the county under work sheets in the current agriculture conservation program have been mapped by the plane table method, according to a report made public Wednesday by Extension Agent Elmo V. Cook.

The report also showed that 28,102 crop acreage has been mapped and 7,418 acres of pasture mapped. Cost of mapping, paid by the federal government, was at an average slightly exceeding nine cents.

Under the direction of C. S. Surles of Cisco mapping will continue on 220 farms not included in the report.

Acreage on the farms is calculated from the maps made in the field by a planimeter. Tracing of the maps are sent to Agriculture and Mechanical college at College Station. Three blueprints are to be made of each map. One will be given to the landowner.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wrightman of Houston are in the city, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. P. Fee.
