

Bani Sadr Purging Enemies

By United Press International
Tens of thousands of Iranians today marched silently past the Tehran hospital where Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is undergoing heart treatment to mark the first anniversary of his return from exile.

Television, radio and newspaper announcements urged Iranians to go to the heart clinic but to tread softly because Khomeini, who was reported steadily improving, could not withstand noise. Western news reports said.

A medical bulletin today said Khomeini, who went to the hospital over a week ago, was expected to be released in a few days.

Millions of Iranians swarmed the streets from the airport to Tehran's downtown to celebrate Khomeini's return after his 15-year exile.

It was also reported that Iran's president-elect, Abolmoussad Bani Sadr, won one of his first tests of power by apparently bringing about a purge of his opponents in the powerful state radio and television network once run by his chief rival, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh.

At the same time, Bani Sadr's incoming government faced new unrest among Iran's minorities. The town of Pavch in Kurdistan province was reported under siege and its residents appealed to a nearby town for help.

Tehran radio reported 11 deaths and 22 people wounded in the fighting between Kurdish rebels and revolutionary guards.

Bani Sadr, who in a landslide victory beat Ghotbzadeh and six other main candidates in last week's presidential election, lost the job of foreign minister to Ghotbzadeh last November, apparently because he took a more moderate line on the 50 American hostages held for the 90th day today at the beleaguered U.S. Embassy.

This week, Bani Sadr is used underlined people in the Ayatollah and Proclamation of the Islamic Republic, the state-run broadcasting system of trying to sabotage his campaign by broadcasting 40 hours of propaganda against him and of refusing to run his speeches when scheduled.

He urged a purge of the system. A committee from the broadcasters denied the charges and reminded Bani Sadr that Iran's president could not make policy unilaterally.

Robnett To Run For Re-Election

State Rep. Nolan "Buzz" Robnett announced for reelection from District 75-A today, defending himself against claims that he is a "do-nothing" legislator.

Glancing at a prepared text, Robnett, 58, told reporters this morning that he would continue giving his district, which encompasses most of West Lubbock, effective, conservative management of state business with a minimum of fanfare and show business frivolity.

He spoke of the need for state government to "tighten its belt" in budget prop-

Teaching Hospital Gets Grim Report

By KIM COBB
Avalanche Journal Staff
Health Sciences Center Hospital got a bombshell in the mail last week in the guise of a report from a consultant hired by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, now the Department of Health and Human Services.

Verlon Seifert of Social Inquiry Associates, Inc., was hired by HEW to review the past, present and potential status of the teaching hospital. His prognosis is rather bleak — in fact, a prediction that the hospital may be bankrupt by the end of the year.

But the cover letter, which accompanies the financial analysis, states that Seifert's report does not necessarily represent the opinion of HEW. Spokesmen in the Washington and Dallas HEW offices said that the report is only one of many factors which will be considered in determining whether the government agency will favorably act on the hospital's proposal for an extension of loan payments.

Hospital officials have been trying for months to convince HEW that the Lubbock County Hospital District deserves an extension on payments toward an $8 million loan used for the hospital's construction. The hospital district missed its July 1, 1979, payment while struggling to make ends meet financially and is not expected to make the payment due this month.

The first full financial report issued since administrator Jack Henry Jr. and trustee-director Charles Trumble Jr. began their duties indicates the hospital is "losing its money." The hospital district is currently reorganizing its three patient care units, and it passed the $10 million mark on the way out.

District officials hope to collect about half of the $10 million through a collection agency and in-house billing follow-up.

HEW officials have made several visits to Lubbock to discuss the loan problem with the hospital district's legal counsel and board of managers. In mid-October they sent Seifert, who spent two days at the hospital, to bring back an analysis of the institution's financial viability.

Seifert's report describes the hospital's initial planning and organization as haphazard and criticizes the way the hospital district's board members are chosen. He writes that the hospital had started making financial progress during the time Brookwood Management Services was running the hospital and criticizes the board for deciding to "go it alone."

At this present moment, with the unexpected action taken by the Board to go it alone, the consultant's opinion is that the program will fail and at least be in Chapter 11 (financial reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws) by the end of this coming year, if not before, the report states.

But Seifert then turns around and says that while saving the program would be an extremely high risk venture, the program should be saved. He cites the needs of the community and the money already invested in the hospital as reasons why it should continue.

Seifert lists recommendations which he claims should be instituted to avoid ultimate financial collapse.

Unless short term positive action can be achieved on the majority of the recommendations, Seifert warns, there is very little likelihood that this program will be able to avoid short term

Japan, China Join Boycott Of Olympics

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan said today it will boycott the Moscow Olympics in retaliation against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Masayoshi Itoh, chief spokesman for the government of Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira, told a news conference the government has formally advised the Japan Olympic Committee to take the appropriate steps to implement the government's decision.

Itoh said the decision was reached unanimously in a meeting attended by Foreign Minister Saburo Okita and Education Minister Senchi Tanigaki.

In advising the Japanese Olympic Committee about the government boycott, Itoh said the government cannot but be concerned about the sharp international opinion against the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Ohira has accepted the recommendation made by the ministers, Itoh said.

The Japanese Olympic team has yet to make an official decision, but after the government's announcement, Katsuharu Shibata, JOC chairman, told reporters that the Olympic Games must be held in a peaceful environment.

He said the JOC would make a strong appeal to the International Olympic Committee, meeting next week at Lake Placid, N.Y., to find another site before the games are allowed to take place.

The Japanese decision followed that of China earlier in the day.

China said it would boycott the games unless they are moved out of Moscow.

While the Soviet Union continues to occupy Afghanistan in disregard of the resolution of the United Nations General Assembly, it is clearly inappropriate to hold the 22nd Summer Games in Moscow, the Chinese announcement said.

In Washington, President Carter said today his decision to seek a U.S. pullout of the Moscow summer Olympics was based on the right of people to live in peace, not on politics.

Carter reiterated his policy, which has been endorsed by Congress, that unless Soviet troops are withdrawn from Afghanistan, the Olympic Games should be moved from Moscow, canceled or postponed.

It was not an easy decision for me, or Congress, or the Olympic Committee. Carter said in an address to the national conference of the President's Council on Physical Fitness. He said his words were carefully drafted.

The committee stood up for freedom, the right that is fundamental to all people and all nations — the right to live in peace, Carter said.

Carter noted that many people have said that politics should not be allowed to interfere with the Olympics.

I agree completely, Carter said.

But the issue now before our country and the world is not a question of politics, Carter said.

He said the issue is not the governmental organization, the internal politics, the political and economic system, or even the human rights of a nation.

It is not politics when one nation sends 100,000 of its heavily armed troops across a border and subjugates its peace-loving, deeply religious neighbor.

It is not politics when one nation invades a nation's capital, installs a puppet regime and participates in the assassination or death of a leader it does not like.

It is not politics when the invaders go throughout the countryside killing.

It is aggression, pure and simple.

Arguments Heard In Stone Case

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche Journal Staff
PLAINVIEW — Attorneys in the murder trial of Loy Stone this morning began their final arguments after two full weeks of testimony.

The five-man, seven-woman jury was expected to begin deliberations early this afternoon.

Stone, a member of the Church of World, a sect which refers to its members as witches, is accused of the Halloween 1977 shotgun slaying of 15-year-old Roxanne Casas, a Dimmitt High School sophomore who died that night after being struck in the head by a shotgun blast while riding in a pickup in rural Castro County.

In the first part of his final remarks, prosecutor Jimmy Davis covered the string of events leading up to Miss Casas' death, and emphasized the evidence, including a shotgun alleged to be the murder weapon. Davis, who inherited this case when he became Castro County attorney and district attorney after the shooting, asked the jury for a verdict of guilty with no apologies or hesitation.

The prosecutor also spoke at length about whether the use of deadly force, in this case a shotgun, was necessary for Stone to protect himself and his property from harm that night. "Is a pickup parked in a driveway for a minute adequate cause for the use of the deadly force of a firearm?" Davis asked.

Making a 75-minute presentation, defense attorney Travis Shelton told the jury the Stones are an ordinary couple with nothing unusual in their background. As he had throughout the two weeks of testimony, Shelton focused his

Jobless Rate Rise Signals Business Slump

WASHINGTON (AP) — A large rise in worker layoffs pushed the nation's unemployment rate to an 18-month high of 6.2 percent in January, a signal that a long-expected recession may have arrived, the government reported today.

Adult men bore the brunt of the higher unemployment, as their jobless rate jumped from 4.2 percent to 4.7 percent, the highest since November 1977. President Carter predicted this week that the economy would enter a mild recession during the first half of 1980, sending unemployment rising to 7.5 percent by the fall.

Today's monthly report, issued by the Labor Department, bolstered that forecast, although government economists cautioned that it was premature to say with certainty that a recession had begun.

The January figures marked the first time that unemployment has hit 6 percent since July 1978, when the rate was 6.2 percent. The Labor Department revealed that the January unemployment rate in Texas was only 4.8 percent, up from 3.9 percent in December. Lubbock's jobless rate has consistently been below state and national figures.

Nationally, unemployment stood at 5.9 percent of the work force in December, and had fluctuated between 5.7 percent and 5.9 percent during the prior 16 months.

The large rise in unemployment among men who were laid off reflected downturns in the auto, steel and housing industries, which traditionally are the first to feel the effects of a recession.

The number of unemployed persons increased by 340,000 in January to 6.4 million. The Labor Department said 260,000 of the jobless had been laid off, as opposed to those who might have returned to the status of job-seekers.

The total employment in January was 97.8 million persons, down from the record 97.9 million in December. The number of men with jobs declined by 200,000, while employment among adult women rose by 170,000.

As a result, while the jobless rate for men rose sharply, the rate for women advanced only modestly from 5.7 percent in December to 5.8 percent last month.

During the past year, the jobless total in the country has risen by 610,000. Em-

Local Grocery Shoppers Find Price Tags Higher

By DEBB STALTER
Avalanche Journal Staff
Don't be surprised if the grumbles in the grocery store lines about the high cost of food sound like leftovers from last month — they probably are.

to January, the return of the regular price has significantly contributed to a total price increase this month.

The cost of a one-pound can of coffee fluctuated in price 36 cents over the past two months, with the cost decreasing by that amount in January and rising back to the old level in February. The can now costs the consumer $3.45, the same price coffee has been since September of last year, excluding the January special.

With the coffee boost, the total cost of the items this month came to $21.98, compared to the January price of $21.76. This month's cost is the highest ever since the A-J began its monthly survey in 1975, with December's total running a close second at $21.94.

Good news is in store, though, for breakfast eaters. After suffering notable price jumps in bacon and eggs when 1980 rolled around, those who prepare morning meals have been given some relief from higher costs with a decrease in the price of the two foods this month.

The one-pound package of bacon, which in January cost $1.69, now costs $1.53, while eggs came down in price 20 cents, from 87 cents for a dozen of the medium size to 67 cents.

Supermarket shoppers will notice, however, that the price of milk has risen on their cash register tapes. The gallon that last month cost $2.53 now runs $2.59.

Also showing sizable gains in price this month were lettuce and potatoes, although lettuce was, like coffee, on special last month at a local store, meaning the higher price in February is actually only a return to the original price.

Lettuce this month sells for 39 cents a head, up from the 25-cent special in January, while a 10-pound bag of potatoes is up 10 cents from last month's cost of $1.39.

Another price rise, although not as

Roy Rogers Selling Horses

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Roy Rogers, who rode the palomino Trigger in dozens of television adventures, is getting out of the thoroughbred horse business — but he's not giving up racing entirely.

ROY ROGERS

Rogers sold 16 thoroughbreds — about half his horses — at auction earlier this week. They fetched $48,000.

I live a long way from the track. I own 265 restaurants. I travel for Here's Life of the Campus Crusade for Christ. The thrill of raising a horse is going to watch him race and win, and I missed about 50 to 60 percent of the races.

The 68-year-old King of the Cowboys said Thursday adding good help at the stables was hard to come by.

Meanwhile, he said, he has 15 horses at his Oro Grande ranch outside Victorville, and a horse at the track right now.

None of them are descendants of Trigger. That horse now stabled and on exhibit at the Roy Rogers Museum, was never bred.

Burt Lancaster 'Doing Well'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Burt Lancaster is "really doing well" following the removal of his gallbladder and should be back at home sometime next week, his secretary says.

Lancaster, who won an Academy Award for his role as a fiery preacher in "Elmer Gantry," was taken to the critical list Tuesday about a week after the operation at Cedars Sinai Medical Center.

His secretary, Sandy Wiesenthal, said Thursday that Lancaster's operation was elective and the surgery was not the result of an emergency.

A hospital official described the operation as "successful and very intricate."

Graham To Continue Despite Injury

OXFORD, England (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham, despite painful rib fractures suffered in a bathtub fall, is carrying on with evening appearances in this university town.

His doctor is a bit concerned, but you can't keep him down," said a spokesman for the organizers of Graham's week-long program of speaking and preaching here. "He looks strong at the podium. I don't know how he does it."

The doctor has ordered a cutback in Graham's daytime schedule, and from his hotel bed the 61-year-old American evangelist told a reporter by telephone Thursday how his injury took place at an airport hotel after arriving in London last week.

I had just finished taking a bath and was washing my hair in the shower when I slipped and fell forward, and cracked either one or three of my ribs. I thankfully didn't hurt my head very much, although I have some bruises in other parts.

When you get cracked ribs, it's usually followed by pneumonia — a draining of fluid from the lungs, which is what I'm having now. It's extremely painful — they say about second only to having a kidney stone.

Johnny Paycheck Owes $73,607
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Johnny Paycheck is liable for $73,607 in agent's fees, but Loretta Lynn doesn't have to shell out $5 million to her former management company, judges have ruled in separate cases.

In Miss Lynn's case, Chancellor Ben Cantrell ruled that she and her former management company, the Wil-Helm Agency, are financially even with each other.

The agency filed suit in 1971 asking for $5 million from Miss Lynn, saying she broke her contract by leaving the firm and striking out on her own. Miss Lynn filed a countersuit saying she had been poorly managed.

Meanwhile, Circuit Judge James M. Swiggart ruled in a decision released Wednesday that Paycheck is responsible for paying the Lavender Blake Agency Inc. fees that date back to 1978.

Paycheck, best known for "Take This Job and Shove It," argued his former manager, Glenn Ferguson, drew money from an escrow account for the agency and he should help pay what is owed.

'Linda Lovelace' Withdraws Request

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Linda Marchiano — better known to fans of X-rated movies as Linda Lovelace — no longer feels unable to handle her financial affairs, according to her attorney.

Jeffrey Waller, attorney for the star of the pornographic film "Deep Throat," appeared in state Supreme Court here Thursday to withdraw the former actress' request for a court-appointed conservator to help her manage her business affairs.

In petitioning for a guardian two months ago, attorneys said the former actress had a difficult time reading, doing mathematics and dealing with complex money problems. Since then she has co-authored a book called "An Untold Memoir of Ms. Lovelace" and has given a number of interviews.

Waller told Justice Robert Meade that the 30-year-old Mrs. Marchiano now has confidence in her ability to handle her affairs. Meade agreed to drop the proceedings.

Mrs. Marchiano is married to an installer for a cable television firm. They have a 3-year-old son.

Hollywood Greats Bid Farewell To Jimmy Durante

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Jimmy Durante, an absolute delight to be with, said Bob Hope. His pixieish humor made you feel good. When Jimmy was around, everybody started each day with a song, and more importantly, with a smile.

A rare turnout of Hollywood greats heard those words Thursday night in memory of the Schmozzola, Jimmy Durante.

The sweetest, gentlest, most generous and talented man I've ever known has left us, an emotional Hope said at the funeral for the 86-year-old entertainer.

The stellar group of mourners gave testimony to the endearment of Durante to his fellow performers. Even Marlon Brando, whose public appearances have been exceedingly rare, walked quietly and sadly into the Church of the Good Shepherd.

Others included fellow comedians Red Buttons, Don Rickles, Marty Allen and Jack Carter, as well as Desi Arnaz Sr., Robert Mitchum, Peter Lawford, Cesar Romero, Margaret O'Brien, Doris Day, Frank Parker, Ernest Borgnine, director Frank Capra, composer Meredith Willson, singer Phil Hogan, Angie Dickinson and Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles.

Arriving in a wheelchair was Eddie Jackson, solemn-faced and grieving the surviving member of the classic comedy team of Clayton Jackson and Durante.

Durante died Tuesday in a Santa Monica hospital after a long and debilitating illness.

Among Hope's remarks: "For his old pals who needed a few bucks or a favor, Jimmy was always a soft touch. When he had it, so did they."

He quoted Clayton: "In a bad world he stayed good."

Thomas added his own tribute: "He had no envy, but then why should he? He was the great Durante, with all the magic that the name implied."

As Durante's widow, Margie, and her daughter Cece followed the casket out of the church, the choir sang "Young at Heart" and "Climb Every Mountain." Then the organ softly played the Durante anthem, "Inka Dinka Doo."

Mormon Women Will Not Discuss ERA At Meeting

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Sonia Johnson put Mormon women in the news recently, but neither she nor her cause is being discussed publicly at the 5th annual Mormon Women's Conference here.

Mrs. Johnson, a feminist and supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment, was excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in December after a widely publicized trial before her local Sterling Va. church leaders.

Leaders of the church are opposed to the ERA, but Mrs. Johnson was excommunicated for reasons other than her support of the proposed amendment.

The ERA is not on the agenda at the five-day conference, which ends Saturday at the church-owned Brigham Young University. Scheduled speeches and workshops emphasize femininity, not feminism.

The ERA, "I hope they don't discuss it here," said Viola Johnson, a Mormon woman from Salt Lake City. This isn't the place.

BYU spokeswoman Jan Hemming said the issue isn't being ignored because it's controversial. "We're happy to discuss anything — that's why we're here."

She said conference planners hoped to address broader issues in a women's life.

The ERA and Mrs. Johnson's excommunication were discussed in an interview and at a news conference Thursday afternoon with the church's highest ranking woman, Relief Society President Barbara B. Young.

She said that although the church officially opposes the ERA, individual members are free to form their own opinions.

Family Drugstore Rivalry Nears End

ROME, N.Y. (AP) — The drugstore business in upstate New York has been a family rivalry for more than 20 years. But the rivalry is coming to an end.

Carl Panaso's owns the Carl's drugstore group, which has grown into a multimillion-dollar business since he opened his first store here 43 years ago. His brother, Henry Panaso Sr., and nephew, Henry Jr., are his major competitors with their chain of Fays Drugstores.

Next month, Carl's 34 stores will become the property of the Pneumo Corp. of Boston. He will continue as chief executive of the drugstore group for a year under the new ownership before ending a career he started nearly 60 years ago as a clerk in a Buffalo drugstore.

The business, he says, has changed. Now you compete with everybody, not just other drugstores, he said in a recent interview. "The customer likes that concept. And manufacturers have created markets that didn't exist 20 years ago."

"We always do teach people correct principles then let them decide how to use them," she said.

Echoing church officials, she said Mrs. Johnson was excommunicated for challenging the authority of church leaders and hurting the church's missionary effort.

Mrs. Johnson will be in Salt Lake City — headquarters for the Mormon Church — Tuesday for the first time since her excommunication. She will speak to ERA supporters in a speech Tuesday night.

Mrs. Smith said the church favors equal rights for women, but also believes that there are times when a woman needs almost preferential treatment. She said the ERA would wipe away laws that give women such preferential treatment.

The ERA also would require women to serve in the Armed Forces on equal terms with men, Mrs. Smith said. She opposes that, saying that women should not be registered for the draft or forced into military combat because of its brutalizing effect.

"We've always taken the position that men should be the protectors," she said.

Afghans Return To Routine

KABUL, Afghanistan (UPI) — "Business is bad, very bad," said the man in the carpet shop near the Spinzar Hotel in downtown Kabul.

"It's always worse at this time of year. But for the past three weeks — ever since the Russians came — it's been terrible."

Across the street from his tiny store, a large poster for the Soviet state airline, Aeroflot, bore the smiling image of Mishka the bear, the cuddly mascot of the Moscow Olympics. "Aeroflot — the official carrier of the 1980 Olympic Games," it announced in English to disinterested Afghan passers-by, swathed in grubby turbans and brown prayer shawls against the sub-freezing temperatures of this mile-high city.

Across the street, a squalid Afghan eating place described itself as a "Rooshan Restaurant" with a hastily-painted wooden sign above the doorway.

Despite the growing Soviet presence in this Texas-sized, land-locked country, the predominant mood among the Afghan capital's estimated 700,000 inhabitants appears to be that life must go on.

Each morning, men shovel snow — 18 inches have fallen in the past two weeks — off the flat roofs of their squat, broop houses. The nine movie houses in town, which show Indian and Iranian adventure films with subtitles in the local Pashto language, are well attended.

They close early, though, as an 11 p.m. curfew still is in force and few people are on the streets after dark, which comes at 5:30.

During the day, Kabul's market areas bustle with traders and beggars and haggard, turbaned peasants hauling wooden carts loaded down with sacks of corn.

There is a mood of depression, however, in the rambling rabbit warren of narrow streets in the old town bazaar. The tramp of poorly shod feet has turned the snow to ankle-deep mud.

White faces are not welcome. At least 30 Russians have been reported murdered in Kabul since the Dec. 7 coup and no Westerner wants to be mistaken for a Russian.

Elsewhere, the curious Westerner can still stumble unannounced into one of the many darkened workshops, where teams of three 8-year-old boys sit at gigantic looms, painstakingly weaving carpets of red, blue and gold with long pointed awls.

"It takes these boys six months to finish a carpet," the owner of one workshop explained. "They don't need to go to school. They are more use here."

Their six months of monotonous labor yields a traditional work of art that sells for $1,000, or would if there were buyers around.

"The Russians have ruined our business," the workshop owner says. "There used to be lots of tourists, especially in summer. Now there are hardly any."

Despite an estimated 18,000 Soviet troops entrenched around the perimeter of the city, Western residents say the scene is roughly typical of the past 21 months — since Nur Mohammed Taraki deposed President Mohammed Daoud in the first of two pro-Moscow coups.

"It has taken the Russian invasion to draw the world's attention to what has been going on here for close to two years now," said a long-time Western resident of Kabul.

"Ever since Taraki, there has been plenty of army about and even before the latest coup you would frequently hear gunfire at night."

Another Kabul resident thinks the Soviet movement of an estimated 85,000 men into Afghanistan may even have been a good thing.

It goes completely counter to international law, of course, but at least the Russians appear to be stabilizing the situation, which was very precarious before," he said.

"Perhaps the Soviet Union will do something to help this country, which has always ranked among the 25 poorest nations in the world." No firing has been heard in the capital for almost a week now and the Soviet military presence inside Kabul has been greatly reduced.

Russians still guard the former Royal Palace, now dubbed the People's House, however, and Soviet armored personnel carriers take up key positions throughout the city during the curfew hours.

The frequent drone over the town of Antonov air transports, bringing supplies and equipment in at the rate of 12 to 15 a day, is another reminder that the Red army is here, although you have to travel out of Kabul to see it in any force.

Russian civilians, who venture forth in buses from their tank-guarded residential districts on the fringe of town, occasionally can be seen among the traders by the Kabul River, inspecting furs, carpets and inexpensive jewelry. The merchants say they are choosy buyers, however, and appear to have little money.

"Things appear to be back to normal — the way they were before the coup," said a Western diplomat based in Kabul. "One sign is that the rumors are flying. People already are saying this government won't last long. That's what they've been saying ever since April 1978, and so far they've always been right."

One factor which has helped restore some semblance of serenity to the capital was the expulsion of the American press

The 45 reporters, photographers and TV crewmen who remain in the padded security of the Intercontinental Hotel, perched on a snowy hillside above Kabul's Shahrinaw district, have become more discreet in their operations and fear possible arrest or expulsion for failing to have a valid presscard.

The government has stopped issuing press cards to Western reporters and the word in Kabul is that Afghan embassies abroad no longer are issuing visas to journalists.

With fewer television crews scrambling in buses from their tank-guarded residential districts on the fringe of town, occasionally can be seen among the traders by the Kabul River, inspecting furs, carpets and inexpensive jewelry. The merchants say they are choosy buyers, however, and appear to have little money.

Girl Refuses To Sing Song

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — A suit has been filed on behalf of a 7-year-old girl who was struck by her teacher because the child refused to sing a song about Santa Claus.

The U.S. District Court suit said the youngster felt the song was in violation of her Muslim religion.

The Arizona Civil Liberties Union filed suit this week on behalf of Kimberly Carol Hameed, who was hit last Nov. 16 by a substitute teacher in the Pedergast School District.

The ACLU suit explained that Muslims refrain from accepting idols or images in any form, including that of a gift-bearing Santa Claus.

The ACLU claimed that after the incident, at least one school administrator refused to investigate the case and continued to harass the girl about the matter.

CREEK PLANTATION, S.C.—When John Connally stepped from the helicopter onto this Texas-sized spread Tuesday, he looked a little like a man who, well, like a man who had just been whipped at the starting gate in Iowa.

possible odds by simply continuing to plow a straight furrow. In a final informal summation over a sandwich lunch, he made an eloquent case for his belief that he is best qualified of all the candidates to be President.

If he can get their attention, Connally is convinced he can get their votes.

A PRESIDENT, Connally said in summation, "has to have a global vision of geopolitics (and) of military strength and might."

"He has to understand the economic system—the functions of federal, state and local governments—what the private sector contributes to the well-being of this country...."

"He articulates the goals and aspirations of America to the American people and to the world at large. He is the negotiator for the United States (in) monetary and state affairs and anything else that comes up."

Then he asked rhetorically, "Now who's best qualified?"

He, President Carter and Reagan were governors, the best training ground for the Presidency, but neither of the other two ever had any experience in foreign affairs.

"I'VE KNOWN EVERY leader of both parties for 40 years in both Houses of Congress," he said, "I supervised a $16 billion budget as Secretary of the Navy...was chief economic spokesman for this country...."

"I've been in over 60 countries. I've dealt with most of the world's leaders...I'm a farmer. I'm a rancher. I've been on the boards of various numbers of companies...There's hardly a facet of American life that I haven't had a close personal relationship with...."

Can Connally get that message across, convincingly, to the voters? Keep your eye on South Carolina and Georgia to find out.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL: The Name Of The Games

IT IS FORTUNATE there is no Olympic competition in hypocrisy. Otherwise, virtually all of the participating nations would be in a dead heat for first place.

But who is to blame, or to be most blamed, for the injection of politics into the Games via the Afghan crisis is not so easily determined.

The United States certainly has gone political. By setting a deadline for withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan to assure an American presence in Moscow, the White House very likely guaranteed that the Kremlin will do no such thing. Now it is a question of face that the Soviets cannot afford to lose.

THE SENATE this week approved 88-4 a resolution urging all Americans, not just athletes, to boycott the Summer Olympics. Unlike a similar measure adopted 386-12 last week by the House, the Senate did not set a timetable for a pullout of Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

The House set a Feb. 20 deadline for Soviet withdrawal. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said it would be "unrealistic" to believe the Soviets will pull out by that date. He noted that the U.S. Olympic Committee has until May 24 to enter.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., the only member of the present Congress to have won an Olympic gold medal, characterized competition in many cases as resembling "actual war games" between national teams.

The Kremlin is in no position to criticize since for it the Games always have been first and foremost a political event.

THE SOVIETS' own pre-game publicity attributes the selection of Moscow to world recognition of Soviet contributions to the "struggle for peace," not to the suitability of facilities or the renown of Soviet athletes.

In not going along with the American threat to pull out, the French and West Germans are behaving every bit as politically. Margaret Thatcher's grand gesture to pull out of Moscow and bring the Games to the United Kingdom is nothing but political.

The 1936 Games in Berlin, which were almost more Nazi pageant than sports event, have been the high point to date in blatant Olympics politicization. But all of the post-war Games have had their own leitmotif in the intense competition between the U.S. and Soviet Union for "first."

There is no avoiding it. Politics is a part of the Games. In fact, every four years it's closer to becoming their name.

GOOD NIGHT JIMMY, WHEREVER YOU ARE...

John D. Lofton:

Sears Magic Tricky For Reagan

WASHINGTON—In late November, after spending five days on the road with Ronald Reagan during his first official week of campaigning for the GOP presidential nomination, my favorite columnist—me—wrote:

Reagan (campaign manager John) Sears' strategy this time, contrary to what he is saying publicly, is for Reagan to lie low and make no waves, since the GOP nomination is locked up, or so Sears believes.

Thus, the thing to point for is the general election. John Sears is out of touch with reality. His play-safe, run-out-the-clock strategy poses a threat to Reagan's candidacy.

The accuracy of this observation has been borne out in Iowa.

Reagan, following Sears' advice, didn't work as hard as he might have, and he lost. George Bush did work hard and he won.

BUSH SPENT 31 days in Iowa; Reagan spent only 41 hours, and not once did he spend the night. Reagan's chief surrogate speaker, the articulate and dynamic Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., spent only 2 1/2 days in Iowa, making no appearances at all during the final 10 days of the GOP caucus campaign.

At the urging of Sears, Reagan refused to appear in Des Moines at a highly publicized "debate" featuring his six Republican opponents.

This lent credence to the widely reported charge that the former California governor was taking his fellow Republicans for granted.

This damaging perception was enhanced by an incredible public statement by Sears that "It wouldn't do any good to have him (Reagan) going to coffeees and shaking hands like the others. People will get the idea he's an ordinary man, like the rest of us.

One Reagan gaffe, which further demonstrated his aloofness from Iowans, occurred when he was scheduled to be interviewed on radio station WHO in Des Moines, the 50,000-watt, clear-channel station where Reagan used to work as a sports announcer.

THE INTERVIEW WITH Reagan, who was in New York, was delayed 15 minutes because the candidate was on another line talking privately with CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite.

Commenting on Reagan's refusal to appear with his six GOP opponents in Des Moines, a Republican senator who is a staunch longtime supporter of the governor told me:

"Here you have a guy who's without peer on the tube and who handles panel discussions as well as anybody in the country, and they bench the guy! What sense does this make? Of course Reagan was not in Iowa long enough!"

"He forgot that the most important thing in politics is to ask people for their votes. Reagan must come to grips with the fact that his act has to be cleaned up, and in a hell of a hurry!"

WELL, OF COURSE, it made no sense to bench Reagan and keep him out of the Des Moines candidates' forum. But, then, very little of what John Sears says and does makes sense.

The problem with John Sears is that he doesn't

SOUTH CAROLINA may be critical to the former Texas governor's Presidential hopes.

A win over Ronald Reagan and George Bush in this state's Republican primary on March 8 would put Connally up among the leaders going into the final turn.

With a strong showing in neighboring Georgia three days later, Connally's southern strategy would begin to mark him as a winner going into the May primary in Texas.

That's assuming, of course, that his campaign doesn't come up lame in New Hampshire in the meantime.

As he headed question after question here Tuesday, Connally came across as a man who knows from experience that he can beat seemingly im-

JOSEPH SOBRAN:

Slander Dressed Up As Candor

WASHINGTON—Henry Kissinger has been warning us against what he calls the current American mood of "self-flagellation." He has a point. Since the late '60s America's favorite subject has been the sins of America.

But if you look closer, you often find that the self a man flagellates isn't always his own.

Blaming America is a reflex many people picked up during the Vietnam years. The idea spread, as the war dragged on, that the only reason there was a war was that "we" were fighting.

The aftermath of our withdrawal doesn't seem to have had much effect on the impulse to see America as, if not the matrix, then at least the efficient cause, of the world's suffering.

NO DOUBT PEOPLE who have read Aristotle and Sophocles are attracted, for esthetic reasons, to the notion that we bring our troubles on ourselves. But that idea can be carried too far.

Lately our embassy in Iran was seized, along with 50 hostages. A clear-cut case in our favor? No, we had brought it on ourselves! And soon the letters to the editor were arguing that it never would have happened if only we hadn't supported the shah.

The Rev. William Sloane Coffin, in a fit of what Meg Greenfield has described as "both-side-ism," began exhorting us to approach the Iranian captors with "humility." To Coffin's mind, neither side was in the right—especially ours.

IN A PERCEPTIVE essay on "Dangers of National Repentance," C. S. Lewis observes that people who talk about "our" national sins usually don't think, in their hearts, that they are personally guilty.

The advantage of the first-person pronoun is that it helps disguise as contrition what is really a nasty accusation. The anti-patriot may fool us, and even himself, into supposing he means to include himself in his charges.

But he is actually talking about other people, to whom he feels morally superior. Men like Coffin aren't flagellating themselves.

Jimmy Carter has achieved partial mastery of this style of moralism. He ran for office without standing for anything identifiable except the reputation of "our" national sins: Vietnam, Watergate, official deceit. Carter ran on his record—a sinless blank.

Once in the White House, he appointed a militant anti-patriot, Andrew Young, to represent us before the world. Young proceeded to charge us" with everything from congenital racism to holding political prisoners; slander passing for candor.

In 1977 Carter spoke of "our" inordinate fear of communism. By now it is clear he didn't mean to include himself; far from being inordinate, his own fear of communism had never even been ordinate. He was repenting strictly on behalf of the rest of us.

The great convenience of blaming America for everything is that it makes the intricate problems of foreign policy so simple: all you have to do is nothing.

The Carter administration's deluded posture of national humility has actually been a form of self-justification for its refusal to treat the Soviet Union as the autonomous force it is.

Carter, who pretended to a sophistication he didn't possess, is now taking a beginner's course in the international facts of life. And he is desperately drawing on reserves of patriotism his administration has done much to deplete.

Sylvia Porter:

Can You Be Forced To Retire At 65, Or 70?

WASHINGTON—Under the 1978 amendments to the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the maximum age for mandatory retirement was raised from 65 to 70.

But you still may be among those forced to retire at age 65—if you're in the classification of executives, high policymakers, tenured employees at teaching institutions.

There are vital exemptions to the ADEA amendments, however. Below are the highlights of those exemptions.

First, the overall ADEA amendments permit the forced retirement at age 65 of "bona fide executives" and "high policymaking" employees whose retirement benefits would equal at least $27,000 from the current employer.

Q BUT WHO IS a bona fide executive?

A The very few top-level employees who exercise substantial executive authority over a significant number of employees and a large volume of business are "executives" within the meaning of this exemption.

But if you are a middle-management employee, no matter how great your retirement income, reports Prentice-Hall in its privately circulated "Executive Action Report," you are not a bona fide executive and may not be forced to retire under these amendments.

Q Who's a high policymaker?

A Certain top-level employees who aren't bona fide executives and have little or no line authority fall within this exemption.

The position and responsibility of these individuals mean they play a significant role in developing corporate policy and putting it into effect.

Q CAN THESE EMPLOYEES be offered other jobs?

A Yes. Although the amendments are written in terms of "compulsory retirement," the rules are that bona fide executives or high policymakers cannot be compelled to retire completely at age 65.

You, as one of these employees, could be offered lower status jobs, part-time jobs, or any other job short of forced retirement.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) says that once you are in a job that is not a high policymaking or bona fide executive post, you cannot be forced to retire.

Q HOW IS THE $27,000 benefit figured?

A The retirement benefit provided by employers must equal, in total, at least $27,000 a year. Amounts attributable to Social Security, employee contributions, rollover contributions and contributions of prior employers cannot be used in the calculations.

If benefits are due to you, the employee, from a deferred compensation plan, you can count the following amount toward the $27,000: the total value of your employer's contributions, as of the date of your retirement, with respect to those installment payments which are scheduled to be made within the expected lifetime of you, the employee.

The $27,000 requirement also is met, says Prentice-Hall, where you, the employee, have the option of receiving, upon retirement, a lump-sum payment with which it's possible for you to buy a single life annuity (with no auxiliary benefits) giving you at least $27,000 a year.

If you have no choice but to have certain benefits paid after your death, these benefits cannot be included in the $27,000.

Q BUT WHAT IF you don't want to retire at 65?

A You can, if you are an executive or high policymaker who does not want to retire, avoid the retirement. Your escape hatch depends on whether a plan's terms allow employees to withdraw employer's contributions.

You, the employee, can then unilaterally withdraw your employer contributions to avoid receiving a $27,000 annual retirement benefit.

I do not know how many arguments you have had about whether you can be forced to retire or as an employer, can force an employee to retire. I have had many. Above are the answers.

Imports Hurt U.S. Employment

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sentiment for tariffs and quotas will continue to grow in the United States if Japanese car makers do not voluntarily step up construction of automobile plants in this country, warns the head of American Motors Corp.

W. Paul Tippett, in an interview in New York, charged that Japanese car makers are not only "exporting unemployment" to the United States. One-third of the U.S. trade deficit "is caused by Japanese-American automobile imbalance."

Sales of Japanese cars in this country registered a 31.4 percent increase in 1979 over 1978 to a record 1,755,766 units, apparently reflecting a rising demand for fuel-efficient small cars caused by a series of gasoline price hikes.

At the same time 1979 sales of U.S.-built automobiles declined 10.4 percent from 1978, totaling 8,328,055 units. The market share of U.S.-built cars also decreased to 78 percent from 82.3 percent the year before.

AMC unit sales declined 5.4 percent last year, but the No. 4 U.S. automaker, which was ahead in the small-car race, registered the smallest percentage decrease of the U.S. manufacturers. AMC projects a 20 percent increase in sales in 1980, helped by its new fast-selling Eagle.

Tippett said the surging import figure is more than enough to "justify" local production by Japanese car makers. He attributed the surge in sales to "extremely attractive pricing" on Japanese cars.

But he said because the rise in imports comes at the expense of U.S. automobiles, it is increasing unemployment in the United States.

"I hope the Japanese car makers won't create a problem for the whole country of Japan," he said.

Tippett's solution is for Japanese manufacturers to build more production facilities in the United States, but he predicted they will not do so unless they are forced to.

"If they are forced to build plants here, some of their price advantages they have been enjoying will disappear. They will have to compete with U.S. manufacturers on an equal basis," he said.

Tippett said he will try to enlist the public support in favor of the local production. If that doesn't work, "I think the U.S. government will be forced to take some action, such as imposition of import duties or quotas, raising tariffs and setting up local content requirements," he said.

Tippett said the decision by Honda Motor Co. of Japan earlier this month to construct Japan's first passenger car assembly plant in the United States (in Marysville, Ohio, near Columbus) was a step in the right direction.

But he added he suspects it may be a minimal move designed chiefly to defuse criticism against a roaring Japanese car "explosion."

Honda ranked third in sales of Japanese cars in the United States last year after Japan's "big two" auto makers — Toyota Motor Co. and Nissan Motor Co.

Tippett also said:

—AMC is not planning a tie-up with a Japanese car maker in the immediate future. It has an arrangement with France's Renault, under which AMC markets the French auto maker's "Le Car" in North America.

—Chrysler Corp.'s new marketing program, including a 30-day or 1,000-mile money-back program, is an innovative one.

Riders Get Lesson On Commuting

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — While commuter service around the nation is withering on the rail, New Hampshire has taken a bold step to bring the trains back to the state for the first time since 1968.

The riders, inexperienced in commuter etiquette, admitted this week that they have much to learn about making their treks to bring home the bacon a bit more bearable.

In Lowell, the first stop in Massachusetts on the Concord-to-Boston run, seasoned commuters boarded the train, and one, Anthony Santani from Andover, Mass., gave several neophyte New Hampshire riders a quick course on how to commute and enjoy it.

When a man from Manchester said he almost missed the train while waiting for his wife to get dressed to drive him to the station, Santani roared with laughter.

"Your wife better get used to wearing a housecoat under her parka or you'll never make the train," Santani said.

The train, using equipment from the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority on tracks owned by the Boston & Maine Railroad, is a two-year experiment promoted by Gov. Hugh Gallen and financed by $3 million from the federal Department of Transportation.

Most New Hampshire travelers sat with hands in lap, while the seasoned commuters occupied themselves with paperback books, playing cards and crossword puzzles.

"After you've been riding for a few weeks we'll show you how to fold a newspaper into quarters so you can read it without elbowing the person sitting next to you," Santani said.

Of the more than 125 riders who boarded the five-car train in Concord, about 100 said they were heading to work or school. Most of the rest, including one man who had taken the bus from Albany, N.Y., identified themselves as "railroad nuts."

"I would have walked 50 miles just to get on the first train to Boston," said Arnold Upman, 41. "After years of watching railroads die all across the country, I wanted to be part of what is the first sign of new life."

As conductor Ernest Coutermarsh, a state legislator from Nashua, worked his way up the aisles, he answered questions about tickets and schedules.

"Most of these people want to buy tickets by the month and that's a great sign," said Coutermarsh, a longtime Boston & Maine employee.

Janet Brice boarded the train in Nashua, plopped down in a blue-covered seat and told a stranger across the aisle, "I've never been on a train before and I love it already."

Miss Brice, a senior at Boston University, said the 1 hour and 17 minute run from Nashua "will make me study because there's nothing else to do."

Shipping Recommendation Eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A rural transportation task force recommends that shippers be allowed to negotiate contracts with railroads for guaranteed service, rates and delivery times.

The recommendation, which would require legislation, would be a departure from the complicated, long standing regulatory system under which the government sets rates and terms for rail services.

The proposal was not adopted unanimously.

The 15-member task force was formed by Congress to recommend a national agricultural transportation policy and to study such problems as branch line abandonments, railcar shortages and deteriorating rail service.

Agriculture depends on railroads to move commodities to domestic locations and to ports for export. The task force also looked at ways to improve truck and barge transportation and to stem deterioration of rural roads and highways.

It rejected proposals to nationalize railroad rights-of-way.

The task force was co-chaired by Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland and Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt, although they did not participate in day-to-day proceedings.

The task force said negotiated railroad contracts would not be advantageous to everyone. If shippers were unable to negotiate acceptable terms with railroads, the Interstate Commerce Commission would specify contract terms, the task force report said.

It said that rail carriers would continue to have common-carrier obligations to provide equal service to parties.

The task force said there were several ways the proposal could be carried out equitably. Under one alternative, a carrier could commit no more than half of equipment to contracted service, unless the ICC granted special relief.

The government should give technical assistance to small shippers negotiating contracts with railroads, the task force said.

Harold Breimyer of the University of Missouri strongly disagreed with the contract proposal.

He said it would be asking too much to give priority to railroad freight contracts while retaining common carrier protection for other shippers.

"So long as any appreciable shortage of cars prevails, the two principles are incompatible," he said. "If shippers armed with contracts get preference, some others will be left without service."

Breimyer said the recommendation would help industrial shippers at the expense of agriculture. Agricultural shipments are unpredictable because of weather and volatile demand, he said.

Smaller shippers would disappear or be forced to merge because protections for smaller shippers would be difficult to enforce, Breimyer said.

In other recommendations, the task force called for:

— Joint railroad ownership of a demonstration fleet of 500 covered hopper cars and 500 wide-door boxcars to augment existing fleets and help alleviate boxcar shortages affecting the agricultural sector.

— Expedited branch line abandonments — but only for lines that cannot yield a profit with improvements — and more federal aid for branch line rehabilitation.

— A pilot project under which shippers and other members of communities set up a cooperative to operate branch lines.

— Continued government monitoring of the progress of exempting fresh fruits and vegetables from regulation.

— More federal aid to interstate and major highways to free up state funds for improvement of rural roads and bridges.

Family Brewery Still Going

By CHRIS ROBERTS

POTTSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — The glass eyes in the stuffed elk's head survey the room — the old rolltop desk cluttered with papers and beer bottles, the faded walls with the brown and white photographs of stern men with handlebar mustaches and little boys in sailor suits.

The late John O'Hara, who lived a block down the street and wrote about this town when coal was king, would have felt at home.

So does Richard L. Yuengling, president of D.G. Yuengling & Son, Inc., touted as America's oldest brewery. It's his office.

"I'm afraid if I vacuum him, all his hair will come out," he says of the elk. "So I just let it be."

Richard Yuengling is 64, the great-grandson of David G. Yuengling, an immigrant brewer from Wurttemberg, Germany, who in 1828 sailed to America, and a year later settled on Pottsville as the perfect place to make beer.

He built his brewery on the breast of Sharp Mountain, tunneling natural refrigeration cellars out of the clammy rock. The malt was hauled by mule-drawn barge from Philadelphia at the other end of the Schuylkill Canal.

While other small U.S. breweries are being gulped up by the few big ones — between 1935 and 1979 the number shrank from 750 to 41 — Yuengling & Son remains healthy, going it alone.

Like with the old elk, the family has pretty much just let be.

"No, we haven't made a lot of changes," says Yuengling, sitting at the desk next to a cast-iron, steam-heat radiator, cases of beer piled on the planked floor. "We used coal up to 1976."

"We've had a very good year. The men are working time-and-a-half right now. They just don't want to work any more. The secret of success? Well, you just can't make too many mistakes."

Yuengling & Son employs about 60 workers. It brewed a little over 100,000 barrels of beer, ale and porter in 1979, its 150th year. That's about two-thousandths of 1 percent of Anheuser-Busch's annual production of 42 million barrels.

Yuengling — it rhymes with tingling — is listed as "the oldest U.S. brewery in continuous operation and the oldest under the same family ownership" by the United States Brewers Association.

Its porter and Lord Chesterfield ale have achieved cult status in some drinking circles.

Yuengling markets its products in Pennsylvania and parts of New York, New Jersey, Maryland and the District of Columbia. It also is sold on the West Coast under a private label by a Seattle-based distributor who periodically drives a truck across the country for a load of porter.

Every day, Richard Yuengling walks down the office steps with the brass handrail, across a cobblestone-guttered alley to the plant, and samples a bottle of beer, just to make sure it's up to snuff.

And on Thursday mornings, he and the brewmaster have a taste together, sampling not only their own brew, but that from other breweries, too.

The competitors' bottled beer is kept in a bathroom off Yuengling's office, the door shut to keep out damaging light. Unlike wine and whiskey, beer does not improve with age. "It should be drunk young," says Yuengling, a graduate of the U.S. Brewers Academy.

The Yuengling brewery is housed in a red brick building that backs up on the mountain, the old refrigeration tunnels empty now. The brewery's centerpiece is the 320-gallon copper brew kettle where the wort is boiled and the hops added.

Across Mahantongo Street, where the coal barons once lived, is the Yuengling Ice Cream plant, started during Prohibition to help the family weather America's dry years. It's now run by Dick Yuengling's brother, Fred, and a nephew, Fritz.

"Of course we made near beer then, too," Dick Yuengling says. "That's one-half of 1 percent alcohol. You can get a bigger kick out of hair tonic."

Yuengling and a brother, Dohrman — he's dead now — took over the brewery when their father, Frank D. Yuengling, died in 1963.

And there's a good chance yet another Yuengling, a fifth generation beerman, may some day share the room with the musty old elk.

Richard Yuengling Jr. is a beer distributor in nearby Tamaqua. His father expects to preserve tradition by giving him the option of buying the business when he's gone.

Cuban Supply Firm Bombed

UNION CITY, N.J. (UPI) — An explosion Wednesday night slightly damaged the building of a company that supplies clothing and medicine to Cuba. No injuries were immediately reported.

Police Sgt. Vic Sismondo said "some sort of small explosive device" was taped to the front door of the building housing the company, Almacen El Espanol, about 11:15 p.m.

"Somebody put it there and it went off," Sismondo said. "That's all we know."

The blast blew out the glass in the door, but did not seriously damage the multi-story building.

Sismondo said about six families live in the building. None of the residents was injured.

Union City has been the scene of frequent violence between pro-and anti-Castro Cuban emigrants.

In November, Emiliano Nigron, a Cuban exile who had worked for the release of political prisoners in Cuba, was shot to death as he walked to his car.

A man with a Hispanic accent telephoned United Press International in New York shortly before midnight to claim responsibility for the bombing, but the caller did not identify himself as a member of any organization.

Indians To Charge Toll Fee On River

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — Companies using the Arkansas River between Muskogee and Fort Smith, Ark., will have to pay tolls, the Cherokee Indian Nation has announced.

Principal Chief Ross Swimmer said impatience with the federal government over settling claims by the tribe led to the decision. In 1970, the U.S. Supreme Court said the Cherokees, Choctaws and Chickasaws owned the riverbed because the government had failed to buy it when Oklahoma became a state.

Book Gives Information On Careers, Education

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
United Press International Writer

Want to be a foot doctor or a specialist in animal husbandry — or maybe a mortician?

Where do you go for information and how much will it cost to get the education that leads to the job?

The question's the same regardless of the career goal — from agronomist and archaeology to banking, dentistry, hospital administration, jewelry design, optometry, paperhanging, Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard or welding.

You go to a book, that's where you go. To be specific, you reach for the latest edition of "Need a Lift?" (educational opportunities, careers, loans, scholarships, employment).

It's put out by The American Legion in Indianapolis, Ind. The latest edition, the 29th, should be somewhere around your high school. Try the guidance counselor's office.

Copies were distributed in the fall by local units of The American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary.

For your personal copy, write to "Need a Lift?", P.O. Box 1055, Indianapolis, Ind. 46206. Enclose $1 to cover postage and handling.

"Need a Lift" has been described by student financial aid coordinators as the most comprehensive source of information about educational opportunities, careers, loans, scholarships, grants and employment available to high school and college age youths and their parents.

Samples from the booklet:

— Career Information and Scholarships: Lists sources of information about many careers, including fields such as refrigeration, data processing, dental assistants. There are the usuals, too, such as doctor, lawyer, minister.

— A postcard sent to the address of the careers that appeal to you will bring helpful information about where to study, courses to select, job opportunities, pay.

There are nine pages of listings and a student can get the straight information on many fields, with a small investment in paper and postage. After you have selected your course of study and the school you wish to attend, write to the Admissions Officer to determine the scholastic standards required and the possibility of qualifying for a scholarship offered through the school.

The U.S. Office of Education has estimated that this school year the Basic Education Opportunity Grant program will provide $2.43 billion for about 5.2 million undergraduate students. Total sources of scholarships, loans and part-time jobs to help students each year are estimated by the Legion's Education Program to be in excess of $4 billion.

— Plan Your Future: "Know yourself. Achievement, abilities, interests and ambitions are important factors to be evaluated in setting your goals. Initiative, responsibility, and personality will determine your degree of success."

— Plan as early as possible. "Start planning your future upon entering high school. Get some experiences in the various occupations which interest you. Find out all you can about these occupations. Talk to people actually doing the work in which you're interested."

— Make good grades. Grades of "B" or better are called recommended grades. You must have recommended grades to be eligible for most scholarships. Good grades are important.

— If you are not getting recommended grades, talk to your teacher about your difficulty. Make frequent visits to your public library.

— Become a Well-Rounded Individual: "Develop hobbies and participate in school, community, and church activities. Broaden your fields of interest through reading and contacts with people."

— One section of the book contains sources of educational assistance for veterans and their dependents.

A sampling of headings:
— Financial assistance available to children of deceased or disabled veterans of World War I, World War II, Korean War and the Vietnam Era.

— Scholarships for children of naval personnel.

— Purolator Courier Corp. Scholarship for POW-MIA children.

— Vietnam GI Bill.

— The Retired Officers Association Scholarship Program.

— The Navy Relief Society.

— The Women Marines Association.

— Society, Daughters, the United States Army.

— United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Why go on for more schooling?
"Your educational level when you enter the labor force will be important in determining your future income, personal satisfaction and ability to contribute to your family, community, state and nation," it is stated in "Need a Lift?"

Challenger Edward Kennedy Hoping To Rebound

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — Once the favorite, the White House challenger was reeling in defeat.

Campaign money was short; there were pay cuts and payless paydays. Time and again, he had to assure people that no, he wasn't going to quit the race, even though it was an uphill effort to wrest the nomination from a president of his own party.

Something was missing. A political philosophy that once had been clear and unmistakable was becoming blurred.

And so he abruptly canceled active campaigning and went home to work on what would amount to a make-or-break speech.

All of that happened in January to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. All of it happened to former California Gov. Ronald Reagan four years ago.

Candidates Avoid Attacks

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — One noteworthy development of the Iowa caucuses was the failure of the negative or "attack" campaign.

After the 1978 elections, number of political professionals speculated that the negative campaign, in which a candidate

It worked for Republican Reagan in 1976: The speech helped replenish his campaign treasury, after an unexpected primary victory in North Carolina. He had suffered five primary election losses to then-President Gerald R. Ford, and scored his upset victory even before his nationally televised address.

That second wind propelled him into contests in the South and Southwest, the regions where he was strongest. He started winning there, and narrowly lost the 1976 Republican presidential nomination to Ford.

Reagan is running again and, once again, is trying to overcome a leadoff defeat, this time by former U.N. Ambassador George Bush.

Reagan suffered that loss in Iowa, the same place where Kennedy was trounced by President Carter in the first matchup of 1980.

That defeat, and the widespread impression that he was a floundering candidate in search of a theme, led to Kennedy's address, delivered Monday in Washington and then televised to voters in three New England states. In the televised version, he added an appeal that he be judged fairly, "not on the basis of gossip or speculation," about Chappaquiddick, and said his account of the fatal accident a decade ago is the true one.

The three states — Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts — are next up in the Democratic presidential contest.

That is Kennedy country. The Massachusetts senator has said he has to win the Maine Democratic caucuses on Feb. 10, and the New Hampshire primary on Feb. 26, to come back from the Iowa caucus defeat.

The fact is that if he can't win there, he probably can't win at all. He has staked his campaign on it, and on a renewed commitment to his liberal political philosophy, which wasn't coming through in his standard campaign speeches.

Reagan's comeback address, on March 31, 1976, did not break new ground. Instead it spelled out, at one sitting, his conservative viewpoint and his differences with Ford.

Reagan wasn't nearly as hard on Ford as Kennedy was on Carter. Nor did he take on the risk Kennedy did by adopting positions that run counter to the prevailing political mood, particularly on foreign policy. "Sometimes a party must sail against the wind," Kennedy said.

Assessing the Iowa caucus returns, Kennedy's managers said the vote there had become a virtual referendum on the hostage crisis in Iran and the Soviet intervention of Afghanistan. Carter said the returns were a vote of confidence in his policies.

Kennedy broke sharply with those policies, and with the entire presidential campaign field. He said he opposes economic sanctions against Iran, favors a more measured response than Carter's to the potential Soviet threat in the Persian Gulf, and opposes a sharp boost in defense spending.

In a season of hawks, he spoke for the doves. Heading into oil-hungry New England, he advocated immediate gasoline rationing to "cure our addiction" to OPEC imports.

He proposed a wage-price freeze, then mandatory controls, to curb inflation. He opposed nuclear power, said he wants to be the president who "closes tax loopholes and tames monopoly," and institutes national health insurance.

It is not clear how all of that will play with the voters. But it is clear that Kennedy has reasserted his leadership of the Democratic Party's liberal wing.

The vehemence of his break with Carter may echo for the rest of the campaign year. For if the president does gain renomination, it will be difficult for a defeated Kennedy to play the unifier.

It's hard to see how Kennedy could rally liberal Democrats behind a president he accuses of failing at home and blundering toward the risk of war

Year Of Decision

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — One noteworthy development of the Iowa caucuses was the failure of the negative or "attack" campaign.

After the 1978 elections, number of political professionals speculated that the negative campaign, in which a candidate focuses on the bad things about his opponent rather than on the good things about himself, was the wave of the future.

That may have had an influence, for example, on the decision of Republican Louie Nunn to attack Democrat John Y. Brown in the 1979 governor race. Brown's taste for high living in New York and Las Vegas were spread all over the state in the obvious hope that Kentuckians would reject the Democrat.

It didn't work. Brown won a big victory.

In Iowa, most candidates carefully avoided the attack campaign. Both George Bush and Howard Baker, for example, repeatedly refused to zap their Republican opposition, stressing instead their own credentials.

In what little Iowa campaigning he did, Ronald Reagan also observed what he called the Republican 11th Commandment: say no evil of other Republicans. Reagan, in fact, claimed that was why he would not debate with the other GOP candidates; others said the real reason was that he was trying to "sit" on the lead the polls indicated he was enjoying.

There was some negative campaigning in Iowa. By the very nature of his candidacy — challenging an incumbent of his own party — Sen. Edward Kennedy had to attack President Carter.

He chose much the same kind of theme his brother, John, used in 1960 — the opposition's failure to provide the kind of leadership that moves the public. That is why the hostage crisis in Iran did so much damage to the Massachusetts senator's effort. Carter was getting public support at the very time Kennedy was saying he was incapable of doing so.

The main attack campaign, however, was the indirect effort on behalf of John Connally. It appeared in the form of what he called "independent" political advertisements — messages written and paid for by individuals who are operating on their own, without the permission or knowledge of the candidate.

There were several large newspaper advertisements purchased by Texans supporting Connally that ripped into other Republicans.

One, addressed to Iowa's activist anti-abortion movement, claimed Reagan, who had pro-life support, had signed legislation when he was governor of California that had permitted more than 400,000 abortions, while Connally had vetoed pro-abortion legislation when he was governor of Texas.

Another reproduced an editorial from the conservative Manchester, N.H., Union-Leader attacking the candidacy of Bush as the favorite of "liberal-leftists."

That ad did not mention Connally, but a similar layout on the next page of the paper entitled "the Iowa Debate," reproduced the Texan's statements on a number of questions raised at the Jan. 5 candidate forum and below each had Reagan's name and about an inch of blank space.

The proof of the pudding about negative campaigning was in the eating Jan. 21 Carter walloped Kennedy in the Democratic contest; Bush and Reagan finished one-two in the GOP, with Connally a distant fourth.

Retired Judges Play Big Role In Texas Justice

AUSTIN (AP) — Retired judges play an important part in administering justice in Texas, both criminal and civil.

When a district judge or a justice of one of the appeals courts is ill or on vacation, chances are good his bench may be filled temporarily by a retired judge.

According to statistics of the Texas Judicial Council, many of the 141 judges drawing a pension from the state are still working in the courts at least part time.

During 1978, the last year for which figures are available, a total of 648 assignments were given retired judges for temporary duty, compared to 429 assignments for active judges.

Retired judges worked 2,544 days during the year on temporary assignments, compared to 923 days of temporary assignments given active judges.

"These retired judges are most cooperative and a great asset to our system," said Chief Justice Joe Greenhill of the Texas Supreme Court, who is head of court administration in Texas.

The retired judges include 105 former district court judges, 24 former judges of the courts of civil appeals, three former judges from Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and nine former members of the state Supreme Court.

"It is strictly up to a retiring judge if he wants to continue working," says Greenhill. "He must signify that he wants to continue when he goes on retirement."

State law says a judge may take voluntary retirement at half pay after 10 years service if he is incapacitated or 65 years of age. He gets another 10 percent if he waits until 70. He must retire at 75.

If a retiring judge makes himself available for court assignments, he becomes available to one of the nine judges that head up the nine administrative judicial districts. These judges can assign either active or retired judges to cover any vacancies that occur in their districts.

"Formerly, most district courts would be idle while a judge was ill or on vacation, but now the press of the dockets makes it necessary to operate year around, particularly in the Dallas and Houston areas," says Jim Hutcheson, chief counsel of the Texas Judicial Council.

When a judge — retired or active — is on a temporary assignment, he gets paid an amount equal to the salary drawn by the regular judge of the court. State district judges get paid $35,700 from state funds, with many of them getting $600 to $17,000 supplements from county funds. This means the state will pay a retired judge the difference between his pension fund and the $35,700 while the county will pay the supplement portion.

A retired judge can be assigned to handle a specific case or to sit for a certain period of time.

If it is necessary for a judge to be assigned from one administrative district to another, that task belongs to Greenhill.

During 1978, retired judges worked 787 days on 208 assignments in the First Administrative Judicial District, which includes Dallas and Northeast Texas. Retired judges worked 773 days on 119 assignments in the 2nd District, which includes, Houston, Beaumont and Southeast Texas. The 4th District which stretches from Laredo on the Rio Grande to Corpus Christi used retired judges for 416 days on 106 assignments. In the 8th District, which includes Fort Worth and Wichita Falls, retired judges were used for 278 days on 23 assignments.

In the Rio Grande Valley, retired judges were used for 173 days; 3rd District in Central Texas, 27 days; 6th District, far West Texas, three days; 7th District, West Texas including Abilene, Midland, Ector, Odessa and San Angelo, 70 days, and 9th District, the Panhandle, 17 days.

Federal courts in Texas have a similar, but different, system.

Cases are assigned to federal judges when they are filed in the divisional clerk's offices, and that judge follows them throughout the court procedure. When a federal judge retires or goes on "senior status" he indicates which, if any of the cases he has handled he wants to retain jurisdiction.

In the San Antonio division of the federal court system, there are only two judges on senior status and there are none in the Austin division.

In any case or court matter where a federal judge has not taken jurisdiction, then it is assigned to a judge by the chief administrative judge of the division.

Death Rate High For Alcoholics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alcoholics suffer from a death rate 2½ times higher than the rest of the population, but those who quit can recover sufficiently to live as long as non-drinkers, a new study says.

The report also suggests that younger alcoholics who are less dependent on alcohol when they go into treatment can probably resume social drinking without becoming alcoholics again.

The Rand Corp. study, done for the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, traced the lives over a four-year period of 922 men who sought help at alcohol treatment centers sponsored by the agency. At the time the study started, the men involved were averaging the equivalent of 17 drinks per day.

The analysis showed that among alcoholics who were over 40 and who had high levels of alcohol dependence at admission, those who abstained (from drinking again) had lower relapse rates than those who engaged in non-problem (moderate) drinking, the study said.

"On the other hand, among alcoholics who were under 40 and who had low levels of dependence at admission, those who engaged in non-problem drinking had lower relapse rates than those who abstained.

"These results suggest that for some alcoholics, particularly those in the younger and less dependent groups, both abstinence and non-problem drinking should be regarded as forms of remission," it said.

The study said the results suggest the degree of dependence on alcohol before treatment begins is "of central importance in the process of relapse."

It also said that although remissions were "frequent" among the men in the study, "all types of remissions were subject to a high probability of relapse."

At the end of the four-year study, 113 men in the group died — a 14.5 percent mortality rate that is 2½ times higher than would be expected in the general population of the same age and race.

The study said the deaths were caused in a disproportionate manner by such things as liver disease, accidents, suicide and chronic alcoholism.

"The elevated mortality is particularly great among the youngest members of the (group), although the distribution of causes appears constant across age groups, including both injury and chronic alcoholic diseases," it added.

Registration Workshop Aims At Attracting Minority Voters

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

An organized effort to politically awaken local minority residents will get underway here Saturday with a special voter registration workshop sponsored by the Conference of Organizations.

The day-long workshop, which begins at 9 a.m., will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, 14th Street and Avenue O.

Plans for the workshop were announced at a mid-morning news conference by Conference of Organizations co-chairman Eliseo Solis. According to Solis, Saturday's workshop will be the first of several planned events designed to encourage minority participation in local elections.

People in the minority community often think their vote doesn't mean anything," observed Imam Shakir H. Muhyee, a local Muslim leader and Solis' co-chairman in the conference.

"We want to shake them out of that apathy," Muhyee added.

Leaders of the conference predict there will be about six minority candidates running in city, council, county commissioner and school board races this year. And they said they hoped this greater participation by minority candidates will draw more black and Mexican-American voters to the polls.

"Minorities do vote," Solis said, "but not as a block." He said the desire for the future is to encourage block voting by the local minority community so that the opinions of both blacks and Mexican-

Americans will be heard by local public officials.

Solis cited the recent request made by minorities to the city council to change the name of Quirt Avenue to honor the late civil rights leader, Dr. Martin Luther King.

"As far as we were concerned," Solis said, "we received a non-response from the city council. Basically, they ignored the request."

According to Muhyee, one session in the Saturday workshop will focus on what an individual should look for in a political candidate. He said voters should not strictly make a decision about a candidate from what the candidate says. Voters also should examine what a candidate really stands for, Muhyee said.

The morning sessions of the workshop will deal with voter registration and voter outreach, the politics of organizational partnerships and the role of religious leaders in politics.

Guest speakers in the afternoon session will be Ruben Bonilla, national director of the League of United Latin American Citizens; Ernest McGowan, a black member of the Houston City Council; Jose Angel Gutierrez, founder of the Raaza Unida Party and county judge in Zavala County; and Imam Ibrahim Kamaludin-D, a regional Muslim leader from Houston.

There will be no fee charged for the workshop, which is open to the public.

The Conference on Organizations first began working about two years ago, Solis said. In the beginning, it was made up chiefly of Mexican-Americans, he noted, but developed last summer as a coalition of blacks, Mexican-Americans and others interested in the minority community.

In the future, Solis said that the group plans to stage a major voter registration drive, hold community affairs forums and work in minority neighborhoods to encourage residents to vote.

Authorities Investigate Report Of Kidnapping

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Authorities were investigating a report that a man was kidnapped near Aspermont Thursday afternoon, forced to get through Abilene and then stranded in his car just south of Lubbock about 9:45 p.m.

The victim, identified as Charles Ray Furgerson of Hamlin, was taken to Methodist Hospital, where he was treated and released. The nature of his injuries was not immediately known.

Furgerson told Texas Rangers and Lubbock County sheriff deputy Jess Aguilar he was about 10 miles out of Aspermont and heading toward Hamlin when he saw a man lying across the highway and another man attempting to flag him down.

Furgerson, who was located by Lubbock authorities about a half mile east of Southeast Drive on FM 3020, said he stopped and the man waving him down asked that he take them to an Abilene hospital.

When the motorist refused, the man pulled a knife and made Furgerson move over to the passenger's side of his car, according to Aguilar's report. The knife-wielding man got behind the steering wheel and the man lying on the pavement got up and got into the back seat, authorities were told.

With the abductor in the back seat holding a knife on Furgerson, the trio drove through Hamlin, Abilene and then up U.S. 84 towards Lubbock, reports indicate. Furgerson

Poll Shows Majority Favors Draft, Registration

NEW YORK (AP)—Americans are solidly in favor of resuming the draft, but they are split on whether women should be subject to conscription, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

On both issues, those most directly affected by the changes being discussed are the most opposed to such changes.

Young people between age 18 and 24—who would be the first to go—are the most significant group to oppose a new draft. And women oppose being drafted, while men favor conscripting women.

Talk about reviving the draft has been triggered by the turbulent crises in Iran, Afghanistan and in other world hot spots. President Carter announced in his State of the Union message earlier this month that he wants to register young people in case a draft is needed.

Among other findings, the AP-NBC News poll taken Tuesday and Wednesday found overwhelming backing for such a registration proposal. Seventy-eight percent favored registration and 17 percent opposed it. One percent said they would favor registration if women were not included and four percent were not sure.

On the question of actually resuming the draft—and not just registration—62 percent favored a new conscription program. Twenty-nine percent opposed one and 9 percent of the 1,600 adults interviewed nationwide by telephone were not sure.

Almost a year ago, in February 1979, public opinion was much more closely divided on the subject of the draft. In the AP-NBC News poll that month, 49 percent favored resumption of the draft and 43 percent were opposed. Eight percent were not sure.

Support for resuming the draft is broad, running through almost every group of Americans. The only significant exception is young people, those 18 to 24 years of age.

Those young people opposed the draft by a 40-55 margin. By contrast, those 25 and over backed the draft by a 66-25 edge.

No Americans have been drafted since Dec. 31, 1972. On Jan. 27, 1976, then-President Gerald Ford mothballed the Selective Service System and stopped requiring all young men to register with their draft boards.

Carter indirectly raised the question of drafting women when he used the term "young people" in his State of the Union message in referring to those who will be asked to register.

An even 50 percent of the public favors drafting women. Forty-four percent agreed overall with drafting women, while 6 percent volunteered that they favored drafting women only for non-combat roles.

Forty-five percent opposed drafting women and 5 percent were not sure. While women overall favor resuming the draft by a 56-33 edge, they oppose being drafted. Thirty-nine percent of the women favor drafting women, but fifty percent opposed it.

Men, on the other hand, narrowly favored having women join them in the armed services. They favor drafting women by a 49-41 edge.

As with every sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary from the opinions of all those with telephones across the country because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with a 600 interviews, the results should vary no more than 3 percentage points either way simply because of sample error. That is, if one could talk to all adults in the country, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results would vary from the findings of this poll by more than 3 percentage points.

Arctic Winds, Snow Numb Most Of U.S.

A-J News Services

A powerful winter storm system blamed for at least 22 deaths from New Mexico to the East Coast moved well out into the Atlantic Ocean today, but winter put the freeze on a large part of the country.

Earlier this week, torrential rains in Southern California claimed 10 lives.

Rain and snow covered the Pacific Northwest, while the Rocky Mountains and northern Great Plains, digging out from under heavy snows, suffered bitterly cold temperatures.

Temperatures dropped to the teens east of Oregon's Cascades and light snowfall continued in the Columbia Basin. Heavier snow hit Colville, Wash., which recorded 9 inches of snow.

Eastward, sub-zero temperatures were common in much of the northern Midwest and as far south as Kansas City, Mo.

Some of the lowest readings early today included 21 below zero in Warroad, Minn., and 4 below in Des Moines. It was zero at Kansas City and the mercury still was dropping in the pre-dawn hours.

The cold front even invaded the South, bringing freezing temperatures and drizzle to southern Texas and New Mexico.

On the South Plains, Lubbock has one more bone-chilling night to suffer through before enjoying warmer weather Saturday.

The forecast calls for temperatures in the upper 30s today, mid-20s tonight and near 50 Saturday.

There is a 20-percent probability of rain, drizzle or freezing drizzle tonight.

Winds will be southerly at 5 to 10 mph today and tonight.

The extended forecast for the West Texas region calls for mostly fair skies and warmer weather Sunday and Monday and cooler weather again Tuesday.

Temperatures will be in the 50s and 60s Sunday and 60s and 70s Monday, weathermen said, and will drop back into the 50s and 60s Tuesday.

Lubbock's overnight low was 21 degrees after a Thursday afternoon high of 32.

For those who haven't been too happy with the National Weather Service forecasts, there's another option available Saturday. It's Groundhog Day, and if the little rodent sees his shadow when he emerges from his hole, it means another six weeks of winter.

Skies had cleared over the Panhandle, eastward along the Red River and into Northeast Texas before sunrise today, but other parts of the state remained under clouds as a stubborn high-pressure ridge continued to dominate.

Some freezing drizzle was reported before midnight from the Trans-Pecos region southeastward into the Hill Country. Precipitation was light, but did prompt the National Weather Service to issue travelers advisories for Southwest and West Central Texas because of icy roads and bridges. The freezing drizzle generally had played out by dawn.

Overnight temperatures were on the cold side, ranging in the 20s and 30s across the state.

Cloudiness was to continue over most areas today, except northern sections where fair weather was expected. Temperatures were to warm to the 40s in the Panhandle and to the 50s and 60s elsewhere.

Light snow fell across the eastern Ohio Valley and the lower Great Lakes.

Garwood Faces Court-Martial

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (UPI)—A military judge today recommended a court-martial for Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, charged with desertion and collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam. He said the death penalty should be considered if Garwood is convicted.

Major Thomas B. Hamilton made his recommendations at the conclusion of an Article 32 hearing, the military equivalent of a grand jury proceeding.

Hamilton heard two weeks of testimony from former POWs who claimed Garwood served as a Viet Cong soldier, interpreter, informer, interrogator, and stood guard over other American POWs at prison camps in Vietnam.

Hamilton recommended dismissal of charges against Garwood of unauthorized absence and attempting to cause insubordination among American POWs.

In addition to recommending the court-martial on desertion and collaboration charges, Hamilton also recommended that Garwood stand trial on charges of soliciting American troops to refuse to fight and mistreating two American POWs.

Hamilton said POWs held in the jungle prison camps faced fates ranging from death to release, and said Garwood should be "placed at the same risk as those from whom he so freely disassociated himself."

He specifically recommended that the courts-martial consider the death penalty in the case.

Hamilton's recommendations will be forwarded to Brig. Gen. David Barker, Camp Lejeune commander, who has the final authority in convening the court-martial.

Garwood sat solemnly while Hamilton read out recommendations and later refused to comment. His civilian defense lawyer, Dermot Foley, indicated he was pleased that two of the charges were dismissed, but declined further comment.

Garwood, 33, of Adams, Ind., disappeared Sept. 28, 1965, near Da Nang and spent 14 years with the Vietnamese. He returned to the United States last March after he passed a note to a foreigner in Hanoi saying he wanted to go home.

On his return he was charged with six violations of the military code of justice, ranging from desertion in time of war to misbehavior as a POW.

The Marines' case was based primarily on the testimony of former POWs who encountered Garwood in a series of jungle prison camps, and said he had chosen to side with the enemy. One by one, the POWs accused Garwood of living as a comrade among the communist troops, carrying a weapon, dressing as a North Vietnamese officer, and standing guard over American POWs.

The defense countered by contending Garwood was coerced into his actions.

"No one had any free will. There was no free choice. The Viet Cong had control over the lives of everyone in the camp," defense attorney Capt. Joseph Composto argued.

Survey Shows Rise In Grocery Prices

The price of chicken in January, however, is just a fraction of a cent under the average price of chicken over the past year.

Four buyers will also get a break this month, as the price of a five-pound bag has dropped from 99 cents to 94 cents.

Items remaining at the same price in the second month of 1980 were a loaf of bread at 75 cents, a pound of stick butter at 81 cents, five pounds of sugar at $1.33, a pound of all-beef wieners at $1.98, a 12-ounce jar of peanut butter at 94 cents and a 49-ounce box of laundry detergent at $1.85.

None of these items has gone up in price in the past three months, and the cost of a loaf of bread has not risen since August of last year.

Arguments Heard In Stone Case

final remarks on the actions and investigation of Castro County Sheriff Granville Martin the night of the shooting.

"This tragedy couldn't have happened if Sheriff Martin had stopped at the Stones and made his presence known the first time he got a call to go to their residence that night," Shelton said.

One of the cases, biggest controversies is that surrounding Martin's search of the Stones' residence and subsequent confiscation of a shotgun. In his statement, Shelton maintained that the search and ensuing seizure were unlawful because Martin "withheld information and did not advise the defendant of his constitutional rights."

Neither side spent much time talking about the Stones' affiliation with the Church of Wicca, though both lawyers admitted that the streams of area youths that began appearing "in droves" around their residence in the weeks before Halloween 1977 had gone there because they had heard the Stones were witches.

The highly publicized and much-delayed trial was moved from Dismitt to Plainview after a state district judge ruled the Stones would not receive a fair trial in their hometown because of their religious background and racial tension stirred up by the incident.

Stone and his wife both are charged with first-degree murder in the case, but Mrs. Stone's trial was separated from her husband's in a pre-trial motion. No date for her trial has been set.

Jury selection in the controversial case took two full weeks as the attorneys whittled a panel of 12 jurors from more than 200 Hale County residents subpoenaed. The lawyers individually interviewed some 72 potential jurors before finally narrowing the group down to a dozen.

financial collapse with some possibility of reorganization.

Some of Seifert's recommendations are:

—Appoint a competent management firm in the immediate future. (The hospital has recently signed to two-year contracts a new administrator and financial director.)

—An immediate contractual and financial analysis should be made of the indigent care experience of this program.

—If legally and politically possible, the district should be redrawn as a multi-county district.

—The method of selecting members of the District board should be changed. (Seifert criticizes the board appointments as being political and ill-advised.)

Seifert advises HEW that the hospital district board should be asked to immediately prepare a response to his recommendations. He also advises HEW that should the hospital district prove it is committed to taking the steps he thinks are essential to saving the program, HEW should consider granting a two-year interest and principal moratorium extending up to June 30, 1981, on the $8 million.

Henry and Trimble were surprised when the Seifert report arrived in the mail last week. Since they did not start their employment with the hospital until the first of the year, they were not aware the report was forthcoming.

"We do think competent management has been appointed," Henry said in response to Seifert's recommendation that the hospital hire a management firm. Since HEW has not yet asked for any kind of response to the Seifert report, Henry anticipates the board and le-

SURVIVOR, FAMILY REUNITED — Coast Guardsman Larry Clutter, 21, one of 27 crewmen who survived the collision of the Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn and an oil tanker in Tampa Bay

Coast Guardsman Tells Panel Of Tragic Event

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—When the ill-fated Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn started home after four months in dry-dock, a Russian ocean liner was right behind.

The Blackthorn's crew soon heard several impatient whistle blasts and moved aside to let the liner pass. Less than a half hour later, the Coast Guard crewmen were scrambling for their lives after colliding with an American oil tanker.

Seaman Apprentice M.C. Gatz, the Blackthorn's lookout Monday night, made the ironic revelation Thursday as he opened testimony at a formal investigation of the accident, in which only 27 of the cutter's 50 crewmen are known to have survived.

Gatz was to continue on the stand today. Lt. D.B. Crawford, Ensign J.R. Ryan and the cutter's skipper, Lt. Cmdr. G.J. Sepel, were to be called after Gatz.

Rear Adm. Norman Venzke is heading the board, comprised of four other Coast Guard officials and a National Transportation Safety Board member. The board rejected motions Thursday by attorneys for the tanker Capricorn and for Tampa pilot Harry E. Knight challenging the use of a Coast Guard panel to investigate an accident involving one of the service's own vessels.

Kieron Quinn, attorney for tanker owner Kingsport Shipping of New York, said that although Venzke insists the board is meeting only for "fact-finding and not assignment of liability," the board's recommendations "will ultimately alter the outcome of the civil action."

Owners and operators of the Capricorn filed a federal lawsuit late Thursday alleging that the Blackthorn was responsible for the accident. The $15 million damage suit claims the buoy tender was on the wrong side of the channel when the ships collided.

The suit also alleges that the cutter ignored whistle signals and failed to respond on the radio to calls from the tanker.

Gatz, a baby-faced 23-year-old from St. Louis, spent a nervous three hours recounting the night of the collision. He said visibility was clear and that he had seen several other ships near the channel prior to the collision.

"The Russian ocean liner passed us," he said, noting that the crew heard several blasts first. "We moved to starboard, out of the channel to allow the other ship to pass safely by...You couldn't miss it. It was lit up like a Christmas tree. You could see the lights outside and in the porthole," Gatz said.

However, Gatz said he didn't see the huge tanker until it was nearly on top of the Blackthorn.

Gatz said he was standing on the flying bridge, the highest deck surface in the middle of the ship, and was looking behind the ship at a shipper when someone below asked him to turn to the front and see if he could make out another ship.

"I said, 'Yes, I do see a ship.' The first thing I saw was one of the white lights. I can't say which one. Prior to the collision, I heard a 'prepare for collision'..."

Under questioning, Gatz said the Blackthorn was turning to starboard — away from the tanker — but the tanker appeared to be turning to port — into the Blackthorn.

Gatz, a blush creeping up his neck and across his cheeks, said he radioed the bridge below on his headphones, but received no answer as the Blackthorn began to go over.

Suddenly, he said, he found himself in water with the cords of his headset tangled around his neck.

"Fortunately I had my knife with me and cut myself loose," Gatz said.

He said he struggled to the surface and found a drifting piece of wood to clutch until he was rescued.

Senator Hints Probe Of Textron, Miller

WASHINGTON (AP)— Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said today the Senate Banking Committee will decide soon whether to conduct a new inquiry into what he called a "cover-up" and "a pattern of bribery" by Textron Corp. while Treasury Secretary G. William Miller was its chairman.

Proxmire, the committee chairman, said a complaint Thursday by the Securities and Exchange Commission against Textron regarding $5.4 million in payments to foreign officials to obtain military contracts was "an extremely serious matter."

Miller was chairman of Textron during the time that many of the payments were allegedly made.

The SEC complaint also made a new charge that Textron spent $600,000 to entertain Pentagon officials during Miller's tenure without informing stockholders, as required by federal law.

Proxmire cast the committee's lone vote against Miller's nomination to be Federal Reserve Board chairman in 1978. The senator said the SEC complaint "certainly confirms my opposition to Mr. Miller."

"Whether he knew about those bribes, we don't know, but he should have known," Proxmire told reporters following an appearance by Miller before the Joint Economic Committee, of which Proxmire is a member.

Proxmire confined his questioning of Miller today to economic matters, and did not bring up the Textron controversy.

"In this case it appears there was a cover-up by Textron when Mr. Miller was chairman, of a pattern of bribery, the SEC has now disclosed," Proxmire said.

Asked if he thought Miller ought to resign as Treasury secretary, Proxmire said, "No, no, that's entirely up to the president." But he said Americans "should insist on integrity in the highest levels of government."

Miller refused to answer reporters' questions about the SEC suit as he entered the Senate Caucus Room for the economic hearing.

The SEC says Miller knew when he headed Textron that the firm failed to disclose spending $600,000 to entertain Defense Department officials between 1971 and 1978. Most of the money was spent on meals, the complaint said.

Although such expenditures were not illegal in themselves, Pentagon officials operate under regulations prohibiting them from being on the receiving end of such entertainment from potential defense contractors.

Moreover, federal law requires that such expenditures by publicly-held corporations be disclosed to stockholders.

It was the alleged failure to make that disclosure that prompted the SEC suit, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court.

A Justice Department official, who asked not to be named, said the department's criminal division has been reviewing the Textron matter since it was referred by the Senate Banking Committee at the time of Miller's confirmation hearings in 1978 on his nomination to be chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Soviet Grain Embargo Shakes Ag Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Criticism may develop over other items in President Carter's proposed budget for the Agriculture Department, but for now most attention is focused on how it deals with the embargo on grain shipments to the Soviet Union.

Department experts say Carter's abrupt decision to halt grain shipments to the Soviets, announced Jan. 4, caught everybody flat-footed and threw the 1981 budget process "all out of whack."

But Carter's proposal includes "enough money to do about anything" necessary to help protect farmers from the suspension of grain sales to the Soviets, says Stephen B. Dewhurst, USDA's budget director.

Spending by USDA next fiscal year is expected to be $20.1 billion, down 15 percent from the current year's projected outlays of $23.6 billion.

Dewhurst and others say it now looks like it will cost around $2.8 billion in various efforts to help farmers regroup in the wake of Carter's grain embargo.

About $2 billion of that will be used in the current fiscal year and the remainder in the 1981 fiscal year, starting Oct. 1. But Dewhurst and others caution that those figures are only estimates and the final tab could differ appreciably.

Part of the money is being used to buy some of the 17 million metric tons of grain that was destined for the Soviet Union, with the remainder going into higher price supports, farm storage benefits and other programs announced by the administration.

Congress is digging into the grain embargo situation and some farm belt members are calling for even greater help to protect farmers. Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, has urged immediate action to pay farmers for idling some of their cropland this year, for example.

And Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., wants Carter and Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland to offer further assurances to other foreign customers that embargoes are not part of a new emerging U.S. policy.

Farm organizations have supported Carter's embargo, ordered in retaliation to the Soviet Union's military move into Afghanistan, but also have been adamant in their opposition to embargoes as a general or recurrent policy.

If it can be said the $2.8 billion earmarked to help farmers was unavoidable as a result of U.S. foreign policy, another big item in Carter's agriculture budget also might be called unavoidable for a different reason: soaring food costs.

A number of federal programs aimed at improving the nutrition of millions of Americans are involved, including the two major ones — food stamps and school feeding programs.

For example, assuming Congress goes along with USDA requests for supplemental appropriations, this year's government package of food programs is expected to cost taxpayers about $13.1 billion, up from $10.5 billion in 1978-79.

Next year, according to the Carter budget, those programs will cost $14.3 billion and will comprise more than 70 percent of Agriculture's total projected spending in the coming fiscal year.

Food stamp operations alone, computed at around $9.62 billion, will jump from an estimated $8.7 billion this year and $6.82 billion in 1978-79.

Part of the reason for the increases is congressional action in 1978 that liberalized food stamp rules, resulting in more and more people getting benefits. The budget estimates that about 20.4 million people will be in the program next year, up from about 20.2 million this year.

Since food stamp benefits are based on retail costs of groceries, the soaring price of food hits the federal food stamp budget just as it does an individual family's pocketbook. Other federal food aid also is costing more for the same reason.

"All those programs have been zapped by higher food costs and other kinds of inflation," said Dewhurst.

Yet, the Carter budget does call for some tinkering with food programs that could save some money. Among them: tightening up on federal subsidies to states for school lunches and breakfasts, and a proposal — which would require legislation — to boost the cost of "special" milk servings to those children who could afford it.

Carter's Proposals Encounter Resistance On Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's 1981 budget is running into more criticism on Capitol Hill than was originally expected.

Members of the House Budget Committee attacked the $616 billion package Thursday, claiming the administration has understated its projected $16 billion deficit.

Senate Budget Committee members had criticized the president a day earlier for failing to keep his 1976 campaign pledge to balance the federal budget in his first term.

The cool reception given the spending package by congressional budget writers could mean Carter's proposals will be substantially rewritten by Congress.

Budget committee members have expressed particular interest in wiping out the deficit or providing room for an election-year tax cut of up to $20 billion. The budget's emphasis on defense spending, however, has generally won praise.

In response to criticism of the continued deficit, Charles Schultz, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, noted that if unemployment fails to rise as much as is projected, the budget could end up in balance.

"That $16 billion figure is not a reality," Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., a member of the House Budget Committee, charged Thursday. "The deficit is significantly higher than that."

Wirth claimed costs for energy, unemployment and the Soviet grain embargo were understated and that the deficit actually could hit $30 billion.

Other committee members charged the administration was slipping extra spending into the 1980 budget to create the impression the 1981 deficit was well below the 1980 figure.

"I have concern that this is a political document," said Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio. "I suspect what you're doing is shoving the deficit into 1980."

However, Treasury Secretary G. William Miller denied any such efforts were made. "I know of no deliberate shifting among years," he said.

Although Congress has set a $54.6 billion spending ceiling and projected a $29.8 billion deficit for fiscal 1980, the administration now says 1980 spending will hit $56.3 billion with a $39.8 billion deficit.

Congress Takes Action On Newsroom Searches

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty months after the Supreme Court knocked down the barriers to unannounced police searches of newsrooms, Congress is beginning to take action to put them up again.

The Constitution subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee approved a bill Thursday that would require police to at least get a subpoena, which can be challenged in court, before rummaging through a writer's files.

It was the first action by any congressional panel on the controversy touched off when the high court ruled May 31, 1978, that police were within their rights in staging a surprise raid on the offices of a student newspaper at Stanford University.

Extensive hearings have been held in both houses, with journalists testifying that the ruling endangers their confidential news sources and prosecutors arguing that such a rule is needed so they can get vital evidence.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the subcommittee, said more hearings are planned when the bill reaches the full Judiciary Committee. He said representatives of the National District Attorneys Association would be invited to testify against the measure.

In an unusual procedure, the subcommittee agreed to consider amendments to the bill next week even though the bill has already been approved.

The amendments, being offered by Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, would delay the change in law for two years and provide, among other things, that evidence obtained in violation of it could still be used in court.

Bayh, on the other hand, said he would try to broaden the bill to apply not only to writers and photographers, but also to other people whom police wish to search even though they are not suspected of any crime.

"I don't know if we have the votes or not," Bayh said.

The civil liberties subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee has scheduled a Feb. 7 session on similar legislation.

The Supreme Court ruled in the Stanford Daily case that police who have a warrant may constitutionally conduct a surprise search of a place where they do not suspect anyone of having committed a crime.

Rh Negative Mothers

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — Two years ago when I had only been married a matter of weeks, I became pregnant. For financial and personal reasons my husband and I decided to terminate the pregnancy.
 At that time I discovered I had a rare blood type Rh negative group O. I was given an injection of Rh immune globulin.
 I would appreciate it greatly if you could explain why I received the above mentioned injection. Will I have to have these shots each time I have a child? When I do become pregnant again will I have to tell my doctor that I have undergone an abortion and have received an Rh immune injection?
DEAR READER — Your doctor will do his best job for you if he knows all of your medical history. You were given the Rh immune globulin to keep you from developing an Rh problem with your subsequent pregnancies. An Rh positive person has a substance in his blood cells that Rh negative people do not have. When an Rh negative woman is pregnant, if her baby happens to be Rh positive she will gradually develop an allergic reaction to the Rh-positive blood in the baby. The interaction that results can damage the baby.

 Now, if you give birth to an Rh negative child then there will not be any need for you to take Rh immune globulin. But after every pregnancy, if the child is Rh positive, you should receive such protective measures.
 I am glad that you received the protection you needed after your abortion. It will give you a better opportunity to have a normal healthy family for the future. To give you more information on the Rh factor and blood types I am sending you The Health Letter number 64, Blood Type Rh Factor and Transfusions. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York NY 10019.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I wonder if anything can be done for my husband. For the last year he has yet to finish his evening meal. Each night he starts to hiccup at the table and leaves it for the bathroom where he vomits what he has eaten. He returns but he is no longer able to finish his meal.

He's lost a few pounds already.
 He is 73 years of age and every afternoon he goes for a walk and before he returns he usually drinks two bottles of beer. I have supper ready when he gets back and the problem begins all over again. What do you suppose can be done?
DEAR READER — Hiccups are apparently related to reflex actions. This can be associated with a trigger mechanism in the back of the throat or it's often associated with irritation of the diaphragm. The latter can occur with excessive distension of the stomach.
 You husband should see a doctor to make sure he's not having some problem with swallowing or in food passing through the esophagus (food tube) into the stomach.
 If these things are normal I would suggest a change in his habits. He might discontinue the two bottles of beer that apparently precede his evening meal. It could be that the beer is irritating his stomach and contributing to his problem.

Small Deadly Spider Increasing Range To South, Southwest

By JAMES J. DOYLE
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A small spider whose bite kills human tissue and can be fatal has increased its range from the midwestern states to the south and southwest.
 The bite of the Loxocles genus of spiders — about 15 closely related species of spiders frequently called the brown spider or recluse or violin spider — kills, or necrotizes, tissue in humans and animals.
 In a recent article in the Western Journal of Medicine, Dr. Barbara Stochosky who then was working at the San Bernardino Medical Center, noted that the first case of a bite by one of these spiders recorded in the South was in Mississippi in 1962.
 By 1971 a total of 31 necrotic spider bites had been recorded there.
 And by 1966, the spiders — which are about three-tenths to three-quarters of an inch in size — had been found as far west as the eastern part of Los Angeles, as far north as Indiana and as far south as Baja California.
 Dr. Findlay Russell of the University of Southern California's Department of Neurological Research, has recorded about 10 cases of such bites in Southern California.
 "The spider has not been found in the Los Angeles Basin," Russell said in an interview. "But it has been found in parts of Southern California and up into Northern California and extensively in Arizona and eastward."

Of the 15 species of the genus Loxocles, he said some are imported from South America but eight or nine native species are probably native to the United States.
 Dr. Stochosky described in her article a case history of a young man who was bitten on the ankle. The bite immediately caused pain and dizziness. Within hours there was widespread muscle and joint pain, nausea, tremor in the arms, fever, swelling and redness in the area of the bite.
 Within two days, the pain had spread to the hip and shoulder joints and was as severe as the pain at the site of a growing lesion where the bite occurred.
 Ultimately doctors had to cut away the dead tissue where a lesion had formed and even after several days continued to spread.

Extensive skin grafting was necessary.
 "This spider causes unusual, almost an immediate reaction," Russell said. "The bite area becomes very red, blisters form and break and a pustule forms. This pustule becomes necrotic."
 "I have seen lesions in Chile six or seven inches across."
 When the tissue dies as a result of ischemia, or lack of blood supply to the tissue, the skin and tissue down to muscle and nerves has to be cut away, he said.
 Although the bite can be fatal if untreated, Russell said this seldom happens. "There are very few deaths, maybe one or two a year in the southeastern states," he said.

Consultant Believes Easy Living Days Gone

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Learning to live with spiraling inflation isn't easy, but it can be done, according to one Lubbock financial planning consultant.

Fourth In A Series

Lee D. Pennington of Associated Financial Planners, Inc., says Americans must learn to plan their spending priorities in the days ahead.

"In the past, we have been able to drive inexpensively, clothe ourselves inexpensively, warm and cool our homes inexpensively and grow obese inexpensively," Pennington said.

But he believes those easy living days are gone, and it's time for Americans to "readjust their thinking."

Pennington sees a need for Americans to become better shoppers when they visit the grocery store. "We'll need to become much more health conscious about what we eat," he said. "We really need to think hard about what are the right food products for our families to eat — at the least expensive price."

In his opinion, more Americans will be planting gardens in their backyards. He also predicts that more people will be dusting off their old sewing machines and using them to make their own clothes.

The use of credit is another area that Pennington believes Americans must take a long look at. "Too many people think the cost is not as important as the monthly payment," he said.

Pennington said that he's not against credit cards but believes most credit should be set up on a 30-day basis. "Any sort of credit that is utilized in excess of a 30-day basis for the purpose of buying depreciating items is not good," he said.

The financial planner said that cars and homes are the only items one should be paying for over an extended period of time. He noted that most credit charge cards provide for a 1½ percent interest rate on any unpaid balance, which is costing Americans millions of dollars for finance charges each year.

When buying a car, one might consider selecting a good used model, Pennington said. However, he cautioned any would-be buyer to thoroughly check out any used car he plans to buy — including a check on what that model of car should sell for.

Before buying a car, Pennington advised consumers to save enough money to cover the first year's depreciation on the vehicle. Then, use the money that has been saved as the down payment on the car, he said.

If at all possible, he said, borrow the remainder of the money needed to purchase the car from a bank and request a six-month note that can be renewed. During the first year of the loan, the borrower should reduce the amount owed on the car to match the depreciated value of the vehicle, Pennington said.

This method of buying a car provides the owner a form of "savings through debt," Pennington explained. The car owner has accumulated an equity in his car, which is a form of savings, he said.

Owning a home is another way of accumulating equity, Pennington said. "Everyone ought to try to own a home as quickly as possible," he advised, noting that a house increases more rapidly in value than any other form of property today.

Pennington also advised individuals to establish some form of semi-forced savings, which can be accomplished through a payroll deduction plan. When the money is out of sight, it's out of mind, and an individual can save without even thinking about it, he said.

The only other advice Pennington offered Americans today was to exercise their voting powers to help put a stop to inflation. He said that excessive government spending and excessive government printing of dollars must be stopped before inflation can be controlled.

"Every time you go to the polls to vote, check the voting records of each candidate," he said. "Has the candidate wanted to increase government spending, and if he has, in what areas. Ask yourself if you agree with that increase."

Pennington said that it is time for the American people to demand that government be "reasonably frugal."

Officials Point Out Need For Radar In Valley

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Think about this the next time you hop aboard a flight to the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Although three airports are served by four airlines, the area along the Mexican border has no radar system to aid pilots and flight controllers.

Local airport officials say it's safe to fly to Brownsville, Harlingen or McAllen — all within 60 miles of each other.

But airport managers agree it would help to have a valley-wide tracking system.

"There's no question it would be very advantageous thing to have from an air navigation standpoint," said Harlingen airport manager Eugene Snavely. "And there's always a safety factor cranked in there, too."

Currently, aircraft are followed on radar by Houston until they are north of Brownsville.

Local officials have tried for eight years to convince the Federal Aviation Administration to put radar in the valley.

When a Texas International Airlines pilot almost landed by mistake earlier this week in Harlingen instead of Brownsville, 25 miles away, Brownsville airport manager Art Wendt said it pointed out again the need for radar.

The TIA pilot realized he was approaching the wrong airport and regained altitude without posing a safety hazard. The incident is under FAA investigation.

The FAA requires airports to have 30,000 takeoffs and landings a year, 10,000 of which must be commercial, before it will install radar.

Brownsville, served by Braniff and Texas International, had 89,000 flight operations last year, of which 7,500 were commercial.

Neither Harlingen, served by Southwest Airlines and Mexicana, nor McAllen, with Texas International, qualify for radar. But all three airports together claim more than 230,000 touchdowns and departures a year.

The FAA has refused to waive its rule or allow the area to be considered together, Wendt said.

RAFB Pilots Line Up To View F-16 Fighter

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

One by one the beautiful birds of the U.S. Air Force began touching down on the Reese Air Force Base runway and settling in a place of honor for today's career day for student pilots.

By 3:30 p.m. Thursday, a double handful of planes, from the tiny O-2 Sky-master to the regal F-15 Eagle already were ready for career day and viewing by the public.

Then, all eyes were caught by the newest bird, the F-16, as it seemed to slide in and slither to its spot with no effort but with a mighty roaring of thunder.

By the time the pilot shut off the engine and long minutes before he raised the canopy of the nation's best air to ground fighter, pilots from Reese were lining up to look it over.

The frigid overcast day was reminiscent of the sub-freezing weather in which Reese pilots stood long hours for a glimpse into the cockpit of the first F-15 to land at the base.

Crowds continued to grow as word of the fighter's arrival spread throughout Reese.

The public will be able to view planes from the Tactical Air Command, Strategic Air Command and Military Airlift Command, including the C-5 Galaxy, at a special display today.

"We're here to show the young troops our fighters and why we love to fly fighters," Capt. Michael Shelton, who brought the F-16 from Hill AFB, Utah, said.

Shelton — who grew up in Lubbock, attended Texas Tech and won his wings at Reese — was met at planeside by Capt. Charlie Yates, a Lubbockite with the same background, who flew an F-15 in from Holloman AFB, N.M.

Both praising their own craft with bouquets for the other fighter, the pilots

'Pioneer' Fabrics Gain Popularity

NEW YORK (AP) — With thermostats being set lower this winter, today's fashions are incorporating yesterday's fabrics to provide energy-saving warmth.

Denims, corduroys and cotton flannels, the fabrics that served the pioneers of a century ago, are gaining popularity in men's, women's and children's weird, industry sources report.

A variety of styles for a variety of tastes are available in all three materials, and are machine-washable.

"It is the comfort qualities of these fabrics that make them particularly suited to the lower temperatures we'll be encountering in offices, schools and homes," says Cone Mills consumer information spokeswoman Glorinda Veeder.

"All three are constructed primarily of cotton, a versatile fiber that breathes with the body and feels comfortable on the skin in just about any climate."

Especially comfortable, she adds are layered fashions in those fabrics, since air trapped between the layers of material improves their insulation properties.

She gives as an example of successful layering wearing a cotton T-shirt next to the body for absorbency, adding a cotton flannel shirt for warmth and softness and topping them off with a corduroy blazer.

"Dressing in layers also gives round-the-clock flexibility," Miss Veeder adds. "It lets you add clothing when you feel chilly and wear less when you want to be cooler. Tighter-fitting fashions also help by containing the warm air generated by the body. Cuffed shirts, long sleeves and closed collars are other good ideas."

Both corduroy and denim have interesting, romantic pasts, Miss Veeder notes.

Columbus is said to have used denim for the sails of his ships when he discovered the New World. This tough cotton fabric was originally loomed in Nimes, France, where it was called serge de nimes, she relates. The name was eventually shortened to denim.

"In the United States, denim was adopted by the working man and became almost a uniform for the cowboys, lumberjacks and farmers who helped to make this country great," Miss Veeder says. "Today the fabric's durability, comfort, practicality — and its sexiness — have made it the universal symbol of fashion savvy."

As the 1980s near, denim's popularity shows no signs of waning. In fact, she adds, many leading designers have added signature jeans to their collections for the ultimate in contemporary chic.

The origins of corduroy are not as clearly documented. It is known, however, to have been introduced into France from Genoa during the Middle Ages and was used in Britain during Chaucer's time.

The French, seeking to give added cachet to a cloth that was primarily associated with the working population, dubbed it "corde du roi" — the king's cord. The name was later anglicized to the present corduroy. The fabric's unusual combination of ruggedness and luxury has made it a family favorite ever since its inception, Miss Veeder says.

She offers these tips for selecting fashions designed in corduroy, denim and cotton flannel: — Read labels carefully for fiber content. Most denims and flannels are woven of 100 percent cotton. Most of the better corduroys have a little polyester added to help garments stay neat and to cut down on ironing. Some of the newer denims have polyester added for the same reason. Jeans designed in these blends are particularly rugged and recommended for active children.

— Be sure to wash fashions according to the manufacturers' recommendations. Federal law requires this information to be sewn on a label found inside the garment. If it is missing, ask a salesperson.

DEAR ABBY: I know how GOING BALD feels. I was 38 when my hair started coming out by the handfuls. I went to my doctor and he asked, 'How is your sex life?' I told him I hadn't had any lately. (I had been married 20 years and had four kids.)

He said, "Either tell your husband to get busy, or find yourself a boyfriend." Well, I didn't know where to look for a boyfriend, so I prodded my husband, and said, "Doctor's orders!"

ST. CHARLES, LA.

DEAR ABBY: Tell GOING BALD not to panic. I started to go bald, too. I was 27, and the more I worried about it the worse it got.

My internist sent me to a dermatologist.

The dermatologist sent me to an endocrinologist who sent me to a psychiatrist!

I was told that my hair loss was caused by stress! And, of course, the more I worried about losing my hair, the more stressful I became, so it was a vicious circle.

My psychiatrist got to the root of the trouble (no pun intended) and once I faced my problems, my hair came back. (I had been denying them.)

GOING BALD could save a lot of time and money if she went straight to a psychiatrist. I was literally "tearing the hair out of my head" until I found peace of mind.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

For years, women have influenced television commercials. You had only to watch them to know that advertising was geared toward women's buying power, their decision-making and their expertise.

Men couldn't do anything right. The dummies bought the soap powder without the built-in bleach, the toilet paper that was scratchy and caused crankiness, the pale coffee crystals, and the cold capsule that lasted five minutes.

But a commercial came on the other night that caused me some concern. A man was all dressed to go out when his wife appeared with a trayful of his favorite beer and said, "Surprise. The party was last night. Tonight we stay home."

I said to myself, "A woman wouldn't have written that commercial."

A few minutes later, another message came on from a perfume sponsor. Again, the man was all ready to go out when an underdressed woman whispered huskily, "Let's stay home tonight. I'm wearing Unleaded Premium." (Not real name of perfume.)

I'd have figured it for coincidence had not a third commercial flashed on the tube of another male standing at the door, his tie crooked, his face pained when his wife announced, "Cheer up, dear. We're not going out. I've got the all-new Braised Blubber (not real name of frozen dinner) in the oven. We're eating at home."

Frankly, I'm worried sick. I don't have to check stores to know that by noon the next day men had picked the shelves clean of that beer, perfume and frozen dinner. I know a trend when I see one and if we don't nip this in the bud right now, none of us will ever again get a man into hard shoes after 7:00 p.m.

Why, this thing could snowball. Mr. Whipple could be touted as a picture of contentment sitting around in a lounge sack in front of the fire saying, "I'm not anti-social. I just like to stay home and squeeze my Charmin."

Or how about, "No need to go out in the evenings. Buy Kachina Cat Chow and sit around and watch your cat tango."

I don't know about you, but I have no intention of sitting home taking the Bubba paper towel test or watching the waistband on my husband's underwear come to life.

Before it really gets a foothold, I suggest women play their little game with some products of their choosing. How about a man in formal attire standing by the door when the wife nuzzles him and says, "You don't want to go out tonight, do you, honey? How about staying home and painting the bedroom with silky, satin Hizzin paint with the hard finish and the lasting shine?"

Pray we're not too late.

Expert Offers Tips For Single Fathers

COLLEGE STATION — There IS help for single-father families, but it may take their organizational — and creative — skills, says a family life education specialist.

"Cooperatives, or small businesses formed by single fathers to help themselves could 'take some pressure off' of their single-parent role and allow them more qualitative time with their children," says Dr. Betty Jo Smith.

Dr. Smith is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Today more than 1.3 million fathers are learning to cope as single parents she says.

"They list a variety of problems, some similar to those listed by single mothers," Dr. Smith reports.

"However, single fathers have special problems — parenting and homemaking head the list.

"After all, these are the areas in which men usually have the least training," she points out.

"Cooperatives" or small businesses formed to serve these single fathers and their children would be one answer to this dilemma, Dr. Smith suggests.

For example, together several single fathers could form a registered, organized housekeeping service.

Also, they could create a "cooperative" that would provide services for school children before and after school.

These child-care facilities could maintain longer hours of service, such as from 7 or 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

In addition to meeting the needs of the children, these "cooperative" or small businesses offer great potential for creative enterprises, Dr. Smith adds.

Other ideas for helping single fathers meet their children's needs are these:

- More flexible work schedules for everyone (such as part-time, half-time or altered hours).
- More acceptance of children in a variety of housing situations.
- Family Resource Centers that provide information and counseling.
- If your community offers some of these services but could use more, you could find yourself in an ownership or a director's position.

More importantly, you could find yourself having more success in your role as a single father — with more qualitative time to spend with your children.

distribution in the two hands. Give either North or South one more diamond and one fewer heart, and the auction would be praised for its accuracy.

In the actual play, however, South succeeded thanks to a major assist from the defense. The defenders took their three heart tricks and then shifted to a trump. Declarer cleared the remaining trump, ending in dummy, and then led the queen of clubs. Obsessed with "covering an honor," East inserted the king. Declarer won the ace and successfully finessed the nine of clubs, and the contract was home.

The play of the king of clubs by East was simply silly — on no lie of the cards could it gain. You should never cover an honor unless it can prove useful to do so. When touching honors are led from dummy, the practical rule is: "Don't cover the first honor that is led if it is just as easy to cover the next time." In other words, only cover the last of a sequence of honors.

Applying this principle to the present case, East should refrain from covering the queen of clubs when it is led — he must not cover the top of a sequence. But when the jack of clubs is led — the last card of the sequence — East covers, and the defenders must score a club for the setting trick.

Old Jewelry Making Comeback

It's a time-proven fact that if you hold on to your old clothes long enough, they'll soon be in fashion again. The same is true with jewelry. Along with fitted suits and straight skirts, we're seeing a comeback of chokers, pearl ropes and bead necklaces.

This 23-page instruction guide will lead you step-by-step in creating a variety of bead and pearl jewelry. The lovely necklaces pictured here are made with crocheted pearl rope. The directions and photos show you how to make the rope, add tassels, an imitation knot, or turn it into a belt.

Other projects include a velvet choker which uses round pearls on a velvet background. This addition will bring a touch of class to any evening wear. Another necklace uses crystal beads for a delicate accent. And wooden bead necklaces and earrings are great for color-coordinating with special outfits.

Price Hike Speeds Work On Electronic Camera

By SANDY COLTON
Associated Press Writer

Kodak has just dropped its price-increase bombshell and other film and paper manufacturers are sure to follow with comparable increases — 30 percent for black and white film, 20 percent for color and 50 percent for papers.

This should speed up development of an electronic camera that would eliminate the need for film and processing as we know it today. But how would prints be made?

Recently, in this column, I reported that such a camera was already in the development stage. Rather than film, it will use some sort of memory to capture the picture — charge coupled device (CCD) and possibly bubble memory, perhaps linked to a tape recorder onto which the memory can be dumped so that it can be used again to capture another picture.

The design will be similar to many of the new TV cameras and TV editing devices being made today. Many of these are going to a digital process for recording and treating the pictures.

As with television, pictures are transmitted as a number of lines that butt up against each other until the picture is complete.

In digital transmission, black and white and the shades of gray in between are assigned numbers representing their density. These numbers are then transmitted at high speed to be reconstructed into a photo at the receiving end.

Each line in the picture is broken up into tiny bits called picture elements, pixels or pels. It is the pel that is assigned the number representing its gray scale equivalent.

An 8x10 transmitted AP Laserphoto print contains some 1,800 pels per line and nearly 1,400 lines for a total of about 2½ million pels.

Imagine now a photo made up of two or more million tiny squares (pels), each coded to represent a shade between black and white. For color add millions more pels to represent blue, green and yellow that, when combined with the black, will make up a color photo.

That's a lot of memory for just one picture, but when this information is placed into a computer, it opens up all sorts of doors for treatment of the picture.

At least two computer setups programmed to handle photos are in use today. One, at the Jet Propulsion Labs in California, handles pictures being transmitted from space. The other, at The Associated Press in New York, deals with news pictures from around the world that you see in your newspaper every day.

The AP's computer, called an electronic darkroom, can store up to 100 pictures at a time in digital form.

An editor, sitting at a computer console, can call up any picture stored in the memory bank which will then appear on a TV screen.

Once he sees the picture, he can crop it, enlarge the cropped version, improve saturation by lightening or darkening the picture and even sharpen up a soft picture.

He can also retype the caption and then, when all this is done — usually in three or four minutes — send the picture via regular transmission systems to receivers all over the world.

It's all done by working with those numbers. To lighten a picture, for example, you just tell the computer to lighten each number by a factor of one or two or more, and vice versa to darken it. Working within a selected area, the computer only lightens the light areas or darkens the dark, leaving the rest alone.

To sharpen a photo, you ask the computer to locate those areas where light and dark areas touch and then lighten the lights and darken the darks only in that area to increase contrast and apparent sharpness. This is called image enhancement.

All sorts of things are possible and more are being programmed into the computer almost every day. Also under development for the AP is a scanner that will read the image directly from a 35mm negative for treatment in the electronic darkroom, eliminating the need for an original print.

How will the final print be made? Once the picture has been treated it is transmitted by wire, radio or satellite to a Laserphoto receiver where a laser beam then exposes an 8x10 piece of paper pel by pel until the picture is complete. The paper is then heat processed. It's a special dry silver paper that does not require wet processing.

Isle Issues Stamps Illustrating History Of Guernsey Coinage

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

Illustrations of coins on stamps have proved popular with many philatelists throughout the world. Old coins have appeared frequently on the stamps of Israel, Italy, Greece and Great Britain as well as of nations in the British Commonwealth.

The latest set of stamps depicting coins has been issued by the Channel Island of Guernsey. The three new stamps are additions to Guernsey's coinage series, first issued a year ago. The illustrations trace the history of Guernsey coinage.

The 50-pence shows a 10-shilling coin minted in 1966 commemorating the 900th anniversary of the unification of the Kingdom of England and the Duchy of Normandy. The dates 1066-1966 appear on the stamp. The one-pound adhesive features the 1977 commemorative coin

NEW STAMP — The U.S. Postal Service announced recently that this 15-cent Benjamin Banneker stamp will be issued in Annapolis, Md., on Feb. 15, during Black History Month. Banneker (1731-1806) was a pioneer American scientist and mathematician. (AP Laserphoto) which was issued for the Silver Jubilee. The 2-pound stamp pictures a crown piece in honor of Queen Elizabeth II's 25th wedding anniversary in 1972. The design shows the winged mythical God of Love (Eros) and the Guernsey Lily plus the dates 1947-1972.

Each stamp bears the inscription "Guernsey Bailiwick Commemorative" and the Queen's Crown emblem.

The West German government has issued a new stamp of 60-pennig denomination honoring Dr. Johannes Faust, the famous character of Goethe's "Faust." The Faust stamp is part of the German series portraying legendary German figures, according to the World Wide Philatelic Agency Faust is not a fictional character but rather was a school teacher adept at magic and the art of legerdemain. He lived in the latter part of the 15th century and the beginning of the 16th. Stories with the Faust theme have been the basis of many books, plays, an opera and even motion pictures. The new stamp depicts Dr. Faust and the Devil, Mephistopheles.

The British Virgin Islands has issued a new set of definitives showing some of the wide variety of underwater marine life found in their area of the Caribbean. The first segment of the series just released contains eight values. The second part to be issued in April will have nine stamps. Some of the species shown are: Purple-tipped sea anemone, starfish, pencil urchin, triton's trumpet, flamingo-tongue snail, spider crab, sea squirt, rooster-tail cochi, peppermint shrimp, West Indian murex and mangrove crab.

The American Topical Association, the organization representing those who specialize in topics rather than countries, is making available a two-color cachet for the recently held Midwest Postage Stamp & Coin Show. In a perforated simulated "stamp" design, a U.S. Postal Service pictorial cancellation shows Sir Rowland Hill, the 1929 Graf Zeppelin and an 1879 ship, marking postal transportation of 50 and 100 years ago.

The cachet pictures pertinent stamps such as Liechtenstein's portrait of Hill, Great Britain's Penny Black and the U.S. 5-cent featuring Ben Franklin.

Picture Adds Touch Of Greenery To Home

The back-to-nature trend in home decorating seems to have everyone and his grandmother cultivating a greenhouse around every available window. Granted for those with a green thumb, the look of lush foliage is a lovely addition to the decor. But for some, it's difficult to keep even the hardiest plants thriving.

If you're a disappointed member of the latter group, cheer up! There are a number of creative ways to cultivate the look of the outdoors inside your home (ital) without (Unital) collecting a dozen pretty planters filled only with dirt and a few withered stems.

First, admit your defeat! There's nothing wrong with dead foliage and flowers as long as that's how they were meant to be. Substitute dried flowers and plants for the green variety. You'll be surprised how lovely they look in the planters and hanging baskets you once thought only worthy of housing live plants.

Second, simplify. If you really like the look of live greenery in your home, but just don't have the time or inclination of care for lots of little plants, invest in a few large ones. Most of the large plants and small trees available in plant stores and greenhouses today are so easy to care for you can slip them into your shower once a month for a good dousing and that's it.

The hanging basket picture here is a striking way to add a touch of greenery to your home without adding the hassle of the live variety. To make this 12x16-inch string art planter, you nail and weave the basket and greenery with string, then add flowers formed by groupings of nailheads painted in bright colors.

Hanging basket picture kit includes cloth backing fabric, nails, paint, paintbrush, string, and backing. To order, ask for kit No. 11387 for $17.99 plus $1.95 for postage and handling. For basket picture with frame, order kit No. 11388 for $24.99 plus $1.95 for postage and handling.

Tustin was honored for his work on "Diary of the American War: A Hessian Journal," by Capt. Johann Ewald. Warm, Moist Air Causes Toilet Tank To Sweat

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q — About a year ago, you advised someone about how to correct a sweating toilet tank. I didn't pay much attention to it because I had no such problem then. Now, for some reason, the tank sweats considerably. Could you repeat the advice?

A — Since quite a few other persons have asked about the same problem, this is a reply to all of them.

A toilet tank sweats because it is cold and warm, moist air has settled on it. This results in condensation or sweating. To prevent the condition, you have to find a way to keep the tank from getting cold or to get some of the moisture out of the air.

One way to do this is to have a plumber provide a mixing valve that will allow some warm water into the tank. Then, when the warm, moist air settles on the warm tank, condensation will not occur.

Another way is to line the inside of the tank with a special material made especially for that purpose. Most hardware stores, lumber yards, building-supply dealers and similar establishments carry this material. To install it, the inside of the tank must be drained, sponged and kept dry until the adhesive has hardened.

A third method is to cover the outside of the tank with fabric. Any place that sells bathroom materials sells this type of cover. Some provision must also be made to cover other parts of the toilet equipment that tend to get cold to the touch. While this fabric provides a decorative appearance, it sometimes interferes with easy operation of the seat cover.

Of course, none of these steps is necessary if the warm, moist air in the bathroom is permitted to escape via an exhaust fan or open window or is trapped in a dehumidifier.

Q — We have some hardboard on the walls of our attic. It was there when we moved in. It does not appear to have been painted because it has the original dark brown color of hardboard. We wonder if we can bleach out that color so the boards are lighter?

A — Not very likely. Even if you could, it would be a messy job. The only way to change the color of the hardboard is to paint it.

Q — There is a kind of rumbling noise that takes place only when the hot water is turned on. What causes this?

A — This may call for the changing of the pipe hookup near the hot-water heater or a draining of the tank to remove sediment or simply a lowering of the temperature of the water. This last act will also cut down on energy costs.

Leaky faucets, balky toilets, clogged drains, noisy pipes and dry wells are among the subjects discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.

Gunfire Riddles Area Home

A house just east of the city was riddled by gunfire about 8 p.m. Thursday, but the occupants escaped injury, Lubbock County sheriff's deputies said.

Jerry Lewis, who lives about two miles east of Lubbock on FM 40, said he was lying on his couch when he heard a vehicle pull up in front of his house.

He said he went to the door and reached for the knob just as a gunshot blast struck the entrance. Lewis and two members of his family took cover and several more shots shattered his front windows.

Lewis heard someone outside yell, "I want my guitar you —," and then more shots, according to reports. Lewis said it sounded like the gunman was using a shotgun, pistol and rifle.

Investigating deputies said they found the front of the house and interior "severely" damaged by bullets.

Bullet fragments were buried in the walls in several rooms, in the living room carpet and on the kitchen floor.

Investigation indicated the gunman drove up to Lewis' front porch before beginning his assault on the house. Deputies said it appeared the gunman struck a tree stump in the front yard when he was leaving.

Lewis could not name a possible suspect in the incident, but he said it appeared the person was driving a late model Ford pickup truck.

In other activity, a 28-year-old Littlefield man allegedly struck a Lubbock policeman in the throat during his arrest inside a motel lobby about 12:30 a.m. today.

Reports state that officers Richard Pooley and Bill Allen were called to the motel in the 300-block of Avenue Q on a report of a drunk in the lobby.

When approached by the officers, the suspect reportedly began emptying his pockets on a counter and said he was "getting ready for a trip." He then began filling out a registration card, Police said.

Reports state that Pooley told the man he was under arrest and reached over to take the pen from the suspect's hand when the man hit Pooley in the throat with his fist.

Pooley and Allen wrestled the man to the floor and handcuffed him. He was taken to the county jail and booked on suspicion of aggravated assault on a police officer, public intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Pooley suffered only minor injuries in the assault, according to reports.

An argument over a pool game about midnight Thursday apparently resulted in injuries to two men at a bar in the 500-block of East 34th Street.

Olen Keith Buckaloo, 17, of 1719 E. 49th St. told police that during the altercation the suspect pulled a knife and cut him on the hand. He was treated and released at Methodist Hospital.

Buckaloo said another man at the club was also cut by the man, but police were unable to find the second victim. The suspect was described as a white man, about 30, 6 feet tall, weighing 170 pounds and wearing a blue shirt and blue pants.

David Kochler Brown of 2317 16th St. said his house was burglarized between 4 p.m. and 10 p.m. Thursday, and $965 in property stolen, including stereo equipment and a rifle.

A 17-year-old Lubbock woman told police a man assaulted her Thursday morning after she refused to give him money.

The young woman said she was walking in the 2900-block of First Street when the man approached her and asked her for $15. When she refused to give him any money, the man reportedly pushed her against a fence and struck her in the nose, mouth, forehead and back of the head.

The assailant then knocked the woman to the ground and kicked her in the leg, police said.

The man was described as a Mexican-American, 18-25 years old, tall, with black hair and wearing blue shirt and blue pants. He reportedly left the scene in a red 1970 Chevrolet Monte Carlo.

Some 102 Michelin tires valued at $7,381 were stolen from the Woody Tire Co. warehouse between last August and Wednesday, police said. The theft was discovered during an inventory, which was made after police found allegedly stolen tires on a car belonging to a man recently arrested in connection with a separate incident.

An amplifier, electric guitar and three microphones were taken from the home of Jerry McDonald, 23, 4217 70th St., while he was out of town recently, police said. The theft was not discovered until Tuesday. The items are valued at $2,000, reports indicate.

GOODWILL AWARDS — Award recipients and some new officers of Goodwill Industries of Lubbock got together at Thursday night's annual dinner meeting of the organization. Paraplegic Worker Honored Paraplegic Kathleen Muller's unique knack of working solely with her feet won her the Worker of the Year award Thursday night at Lubbock Goodwill Industries' annual dinner meeting at the Hillcrest Country Club.

Rounding out the evening was the installation of new officers for 1980. These include Hadley Phillips as president, Phil Hoel as vice president, Roland Wilkinson as secretary and Harold Murdock as treasurer.

Other awards presented include the Employer of the Year, which went to Sears, Roebuck & Co.; Good Willy, Goodwill's special friend award, went to Charles Hastings; and Store No. 14 received the Store of the Year award.

Wilkinson also was inducted into the Goodwill Hall of Fame.

Leon Harris, Texas Tech marching band announcer for the past 30 years, served as master of ceremonies and the Rev. Ted Dotts gave the keynote address.

UW Elects New Officers

Joe L. Price, who led the United Way campaign last year to a record goal of $1.8 million, was chosen president of the organization at its annual meeting Thursday night at the Texas Tech University Center.

Ron Ritchie, who served as vice chairman of the campaign in 1979, was chosen as the new campaign chairman. Other officers elected include Marjorie Kastman as vice president, Cliff Cummings as secretary-treasurer, David Miller as planning council chairman, Bob Greenhill as budget chairman and Ralph Sellmeyer was re-elected as public relations chairman.

Also elected Thursday night were new members of the United Way board and Community Planning Council.

An award program entitled "Let the Spirit Free" was a tribute to volunteer United Way workers. City Councilman Bill McAlister closed out the program with award plaques to outgoing officers. These include President Don Douglas, Vice President Howard Vandell, Secretary-Treasurer Buddy Forbes, Campaign Chairman Joe L. Price, Budget Chairman Tom Locke and Public Relations Chairman Ralph Sellmeyer.

Election Decision Delay Refused

EL PASO (AP) — A federal judge has refused to delay the effect of his ruling overturning two state election laws until after the May 3 primary.

U.S. District Judge Harry Lee Hudspeth ruled unconstitutional provisions of the Texas Constitution that required some officeholders to resign before running for higher office and forbid an officeholder from running for the Texas Legislature during his term of office.

The state attorney general Wednesday asked Hudspeth to delay putting his ruling into effect until after the primary, but the judge declined.

Assistant Attorney General Susan Dasher said the state is taking the matter to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Jurors Picked For Gacy Trial

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — The trial of John W. Gacy Jr., accused of killing 33 young men and boys — more murders than anyone in this nation's history — is returning to Chicago now that five women and seven men are empaneled as jurors.

The jury was seated Thursday, and four alternate jurors also were selected. Cook County Circuit Judge Louis B.

Garippo said the trial will open Wednesday. Jury selection was moved out of Chicago on a defense motion because of heavy news coverage after the first bodies were found just before Christmas of 1978.

Garippo told the jurors they would be sequestered in Chicago, and the trial would last at least six to eight weeks. He said proceedings would be held six days a week, including holidays.

New Innovation Helps Simplify Planting For Home Gardeners

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

Planting seeds can be as easy as squeezing toothpaste out of a tube with a new fluid form, the latest in efforts to make sowing simpler for home gardeners. This follows other innovations such as tapes, on which seeds have been pre-packed, and pellets, where seeds have been coated to facilitate handling.

For the coming season, kits are available in garden centers and through seed catalogs. The kit provides an adaptation of the professional method of seed starting known as fluid drilling. Pregerminated seed is placed in a gel suspension, which is put into a plastic squeeze bottle, then planted in prepared rows.

"Germination of difficult seed becomes reliable and measurable," we are informed. "The percentage of seed germinated is visible when seeds sprout in the specialized sprouting chambers. The gardener then can sow the sprouted seed, already aware of how much plant material to expect."

"That suspension of seeds offers opportunities for more precise planting per row. This further reduces the need to thin seedlings. Thinning is often a chore either not completed, or done in a way that damages the delicate emerging plants."

Many seeds need warmth for germination, while sprouted seeds can be planted in cooler soils. The pre-sprouted seed, in gel suspension, can be sown in the garden weeks ahead of seed planted by the traditional method outdoors.

One kit, named Easy Grow Seeding Kit ($5.99 from Carefree Garden Products), includes gel for 200 feet of garden rows, four sprouting chambers for germination of multiple varieties, a squeeze bottle with two nozzles adaptable for a wide range of seed sizes, and a thermometer useful for germination temperature control.

The gel will dissipate in th soil. With better spacing, there is less thinning and thus elimination of much transplanting shock.

Offering a system developed by the National Vegetable Institute, England, Thompson & Morgan Seed Co. reported that Dr. David Gray, wrote in the Journal of the Royal Horticultural Society:

"With all vegetables so far tested, fluid sowing of pregerminated seeds gives higher and more predictable emergence than from dry seeds. With crops such as salad onions, parsnips, carrots and parsley, fluid sowing can give up to 2 to 3 weeks earlier emergence than traditional sowing methods." Other examples are lettuce and celery.

Pre-germination light also can be controlled indoors.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER: Glad You Asked That!

FROM THE INSIDE LOOKING OUT. Drew Hayes, enterprising young member of the Miami radio talk show fraternity, long-distanced Al Marks, the Miss America executive who hired Bert Parks, then fired the once smiling exec of the annual televised spectacle a quarter of a century later.

As an alert newsman, Hayes drew out Marks to get the low-down right out of the sources' mouth that ignited the brouhaha. Out of this conversation came rewarding information which the all-talk radio station reporter relayed to his listeners — that Marks might eat crow and invite Parks to be an extra added attraction (that's our phrase) at the event and sing the pageant's theme song. This might both please and appease everyone concerned including the various committees, the sponsors, the viewers and the folks who got into the act. At Johnny Carson's request, his viewers wrote postcards demanding a reprieve for the popular Parks. For what ensued since then, read your favorite newspaper, listen to your favorite radio station and dial your favorite TV channel.

Sidelight: Maybe Johnny would like to be on the spot and further support Parks. We remember a competitive pageant in the '60s which Carson emceed — the finals of the Miss Universe parade of pulchritude. The nimble-brained emcee introduced all the winners and finalists all by name and city without reading a single cue card. This was a memory feat worthy of inclusion in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Newly appointed U.N. Ambassador Donald F. McHenry is a bright diplomat cast in the right role. Photographers weren't permitted to take shots of a spoof gift during an affair in Washington, D.C. It was a dartboard using the ayatollah's countenance as the target — the game's called The Ayatollah Khomeiniac Dartboard. Those Susan B. Anthony mini-silver dollars are a bust in Vegas. So much so, sighs Vegas newsletter editor Red McIlwaine, that casinos will reconvert slots back to "like" or tokens. Muhammad Ali's ex-personal physician, Ferdie Pacheco, always seen on TV as the third man in the ring at title fights, is now a neutral sports commentator signed as boxing consultant for NBC Sports. Ferdie's also a good artist. He doesn't know it yet, but his next art exhibit will be run as a column feature here in this space.

EARLY NOMINATION FOR FATHER OF THE YEAR 1980 University of Miami baseball coach Ron Fraser of the Hurricanes, for turning down a lucrative offer from the N.Y. Yankees to be vice president in charge of minor league operations and scouting. He turned it down, he explained, because he decided to remain in Miami to be with his three daughters, all of school age. At a tense stop in the world's erratic spinning, it's inspirational for a father to share the responsibility of helping his wife to bring up and guide his family in preference to guiding the destiny of a major league ballclub. That makes Fraser a Big Leaguer in any game, life or sports.

Carl Riblet's political philosophy makes sense. He asks: Why is it that the minute a politician is elected, he forgets his campaign promises and steers a course up the middle of the road? Didn't he ever learn what the average driver knows so well — that the middle of the road is where most accidents occur?

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, Glad You Asked That, care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 19620, Irving, Calif. 92714. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Thief Returns Stolen Money To Store

SOUTH BOSTON, Va. (UPI) — An admitted thief has returned the money he swiped from a South Boston department store in 1932 — with interest.

The thief sent a small card wrapped in legal paper to the Rayless Department reading:

"In 1932, I took $20 from your store. I am sending you $40 to repay you for my wrong. Please forgive me."

Inside the envelope were two crisp $20 bills.

The writer did not sign the letter, nor put his return address on the envelope. The letter was postmarked in Lunenburg.

Jimmy Bohannon, the store manager, said the store did not have a clue as to who could have sent the money or any record of the theft.

Stella Henderson, a clerk who was working in the store in 1932, said she did not recall a reported theft. She said each clerk was responsible for his own register and would have had to replace any money taken from it.

Miss Henderson said the clerks made $7.50 a week in 1932 and probably would have quit before reporting a $20 loss.

Bohannon said the store will make no attempt to find the thief. In fact, he said he doesn't want to know who took the money.

But he said it's a sure thing the thief took cash, not goods.

"It would have been difficult to carry $20 of merchandise out of the store in 1932 without being noticed," he said.

Safety Administration Dropping Speedometer Regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has decided not to require that speedometers in cars be accurate within 4 miles per hour.

The rule had been scheduled to take effect in September, but drew objections from major automakers. They said that while the vast majority of speedometers are that accurate, it would be too costly to assure 100 percent compliance.

The government agreed, and decided to drop the rule. The agency noted that there is no incentive for manufacturers to produce less accurate speedometers than at present. It said consumer awareness and product liability concerns will combine to keep accuracy standards at the current level.

Message Raises Issues Of Concern For Church

WASHINGTON (Special) — Although President Carter's 30-minute State of the Union address to a joint session of Congress on Jan. 23 dealt largely with his response to the twin crises of Iran and Afghanistan, his longer and formal message to the lawmakers spoke to numerous issues of interest and concern to the religious community.

On the international scene the issues included nuclear weapons, world hunger, refugee legislation, human rights concerns and Carter's Commission on the Holocaust.

Issues of domestic concern to religious leaders and others included the role of women and the Equal Rights Amendment, families and the aged, privacy, fair housing and lobby reform.

The president, aware that the tone of his speech to the nation amounted to a call to arms, nevertheless emphasized in the longer message that he remains committed to the mutual slowdown of the nuclear arms race.

"All that mankind has achieved to date, all that we are seeking to accomplish, and human existence itself can be undone in an instant," he warned in renewing his pledge to seek eventual ratification of the SALT II treaty in the Senate. Before that can happen, he acknowledged, both he and the Congress must first deal with the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

On the question of world hunger, the president vowed to wage "war," especially in the developing countries. He said that U.S. foreign aid, both bilateral and multilateral, will be "geared increasingly" toward fighting hunger. "The goal of freeing the world from hunger by the year 2000 should command the full support of all countries," he declared.

Regarding his proposal to Congress last year that U.S. refugee policy be liberalized, Carter said he regarded the measure's passage in 1980 a "high priority." His proposal marks the first comprehensive effort in the last 28 years, he argued, to reform the system of admitting refugees to the U.S. He predicted that if passed, it "will bring common sense and cohesion to an unnecessarily fragmented approach" to refugee resettlement.

Carter also promised to maintain his emphasis on human rights overseas — calling "freedom for ourselves and others" the ultimate aim of our foreign policy. He especially asked the Senate to ratify five pending human rights covenants.

On another of his foreign priorities, the president said he will soon appoint a council of "distinguished Americans" who will have the task of implementing recommendations from his Commission on the Holocaust. He promised to work closely with Congress in establishing "an appropriate memorial" to the six million Jews and other victims of Nazi extermination during World War II.

On the domestic front, Carter renewed his pledge to seek final ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. Although 35 state legislatures have ratified the measure over the past eight years, three more are required before it becomes part of the Constitution. A handful of ratifying states have since rescinded their earlier action and have asked the courts to uphold them. The question is still unresolved.

"We cannot stand tall as a nation seeking to enhance human rights... so long as we deny it to American women at home," he declared.

On other women's issues, the president said the Congress and his administration should continue to fight discrimination in education and employment, seek to improve health problems related to pregnancy and seek passage of legislation on domestic violence and shelters for battered spouses.

To strengthen family life, Carter noted the formation last year of an office of families in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He also said this year's White House Conference on Families "will help focus public attention on the problems affecting families and on the means needed to solve or avoid those problems."

On problems facing the aging, the president pointed to progress in the areas of strengthening Social Security trust funds, a new public law prohibiting forced retirement before age 70 and general improvements in housing, social services, food delivery and employment programs. He said that among matters still needing attention in federal budgeting for the aged are increased funding for nutrition, senior centers and home health care.

Carter said that because Americans' privacy is more threatened all the time by technological advances, Congress should pass a package of five bills designed to protect citizens' right to be left alone. The measures would establish privacy safeguards for medical, research, bank, insurance and credit records.

He also asked Congress to go along with another privacy bill, this one limiting police searches of newsrooms. The legislation is needed, he said, "to deal with the problems created by the Supreme Court's 'Stanford Daily' decision."

Also needed, Carter emphasized, is new legislation putting teeth into the section of the Civil Rights Act guaranteeing fair housing for all citizens. Enforcement of the law against housing discrimination has proved difficult, he noted, adding that the Department of Housing and Urban Development should be given such power. Fair housing, the president said, "will continue to be my highest legislative priority in the civil rights area."

In the only church-state issue addressed in the message, Carter said he will continue to push for lobby reform legislation. The religious community has lobbied against inclusion of churches in such a law, an effort which has apparently succeeded. The prime sponsor of the lobby legislation in the Senate recently introduced a revised version of his bill which eliminates the churches from coverage.

Investigations Shedding Light On 'Pseudepigrapha' Texts

By FRED McNEESE
United Press International Writer

Pseudepigrapha pronounce it soo-da-pig-ra-fa. The very word means false writing. But James H. Charlesworth, head of Duke University's International Center on Christian Origins, believes the 53 Pseudepigrapha texts, written in the years between the close of the Old Testament and much of the New Testament, will lead to a better understanding — and more questions — about the formative years of Christianity.

"It will give us a better understanding of this historical period," said Charlesworth, who is coordinating the project. "It will give us a better understanding of what we mean when we talk about the Bible. We will be able to study more seriously why some of the documents were not in the Bible."

The texts are believed to have been written between 200 B.C. and 200 A.D. but were long thought to be of much later origin, perhaps even medieval.

Now, however, investigations based in part on study of the Dead Sea Scrolls have shed new light on the texts and some scholars believe some of them may be contemporaneous with Jesus.

The titles of the texts caused much of the confusion. With names such as "The Apocalypse of Adam," "The Apocalypse of Sedrach" and "The Testament of Moses," early biblical scholars dismissed them as irrelevant after concluding they were not written by the person for whom they were named.

"Just because an author attributes his work to Abraham or Moses does not mean he is telling us about their time," Charlesworth said. "He is telling us about the time in history in which the author lived."

Charlesworth, who has been working on the collection since 1972, said researchers have scoured Europe in an attempt to track down texts.

"It is evident there is no sacred number 53," he said. "What we are trying to do is throw a net out there and pull in everything that has a very strong look like it was from this period and then we study it more closely."

The study is being done by 50 specialists in 11 countries working in numerous modern and old languages.

He said one effect of the collection will be a better appreciation of the enormous similarities between Judaism, as revealed by some of the texts, and Christianity.

"There are some passages that are strikingly similar to things that we now identify with Jesus," he said. "We need to study them very carefully. It doesn't necessarily mean that Jesus quotes them or that they quote Jesus. It could be two sources from a shared image."

Charlesworth said researchers have found nothing that he considers a threat to the Bible.

"It may be a threat to some people who have a closed idea of the Bible and what the Bible is," he said.

Charlesworth already is receiving reaction to his studies.

"We are getting reaction from the very fundamentalist groups that really don't want anybody studying the Bible critically, they want it to be read only devotionally," he said. "There is another group that is getting almost emotionally carried away with their interest, saying this or that book probably should be put in the Bible."

Charlesworth said researchers are making no such claims and he said he believes publication of the collection is not going to settle arguments.

"I believe it will foster questions rather than settle issues," he said. "That is very much at the heart of Judaism and Christianity — searching and trying to obtain a better understanding of God and his will for us."

West Coast Churchgoers Conservative

SAN ANSELMO, Calif. (Special) — The rift between churchgoers and the unchurched is especially wide on the West Coast, a United Church of Christ researcher told an ecumenical conference on church growth held recently in San Francisco Theological Seminary.

William J. McKinney Jr., secretary for research and evaluation of the United Board of Homeland Ministries, reported that church members on the West Coast tend to be slightly more conservative than the rest of the country, while the unchurched are considerably more liberal.

McKinney based his findings on a regional breakdown of a 1978 nationwide Gallup poll on religious participation. Defining "unchurched" as those who are not church members and who did not attend a worship service in the six months prior to the survey, he analyzed the responses of 123 unchurched and 120 church members who live on the West Coast.

The religious conservatism of Pacific state church members contrasts strikingly with the rest of the nation, McKinney observed. Over half the West Coast churchgoers polled take the Bible literally as the actual word of God, compared with 41 percent of church members elsewhere. Forty-six percent of the churchgoers in the Pacific states report they have had a religious experience, against 38 percent in other parts of the country. Fifty-one percent of the West Coast church members had watched a religious television show or heard a religious radio show in the week preceding the poll, compared with 34 percent of churchgoers in the East, South and Midwest.

Among the unchurched, the gap is also sharp. Thirty-six percent of West Coast survey participants outside the church believe Jesus to be God or God's

BISHOP J. CHESS LOVERN Say Church Has New Vitality

Church News Bishop Says Church Has New Vitality

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
A-J Religion Writer

Bishop J. Chess Lovern of San Antonio, bishop of the Rio Grande Conference (Hispanic) of the United Methodist Church, characterized the state of that part of the church as "having new vitality... with sizable numbers of persons taking part in the church programs, especially a significant number of young adults."

Lovern was in Lubbock Jan. 27 to take part in the dedication of a new parsonage for the District Superintendent of the Central District, the Rev. Hector Gonzales, and to preach at the Emmanuel United Methodist Church.

The decade of the 80's has been identified as the Decade of the Hispanic. Many of the area religious leaders commenting on the future of the church in a recent A-J interview cited the growing number of Spanish-speaking persons in the area as a major challenge to the ministry of the churches.

This district includes 33 United Methodist churches, of which two are in Lubbock, and approximately 17,000 church members.

Lovern said the effectiveness of the Spanish language portion of the United Methodist Church would not be as great if it were not a specific entity. He said it is the language and cultural tie that binds the churches together within this judiciary.

At the same time that this part of the Methodist structure offers security to the Spanish-speaking congregations, it also provides a base from which these churches can reach out to deal with common problems faced by Hispanics such as border issues, employment and justice, he said.

A meeting of United Methodists was held recently in El Paso-Juarez out of which came a position paper on several of these vital issues, Lovern reported. The paper advocates more lenient crossing regulations at the border, and says that families should not be separated by border restrictions. The paper also supports the stand that children of undocumented aliens should be entitled to public school education while in the United States. Notice of this latter position has been sent to President Jimmy Carter and to Texas Governor Bill Clements. Lovern said. In responding, an aide to Carter responded favorably; Clements restated his opposition to the position, but acknowledged the concern expressed by the United Methodists, according to Lovern.

During the last four years, the United Methodist Church has had ethnic ministries, along with evangelism and world hunger, as established priorities. Lovern said that at the upcoming General Conference of the denomination, a resolution to make ministry with ethnic groups the sole priority will be submitted and will most likely be adopted.

The first Red Cross convention, drawn up to care for war casualties, was signed by 28 countries in 1864.

Conference Scheduled On Women's Concerns

MEMPHIS (Special) — A national Women's Concerns Conference will be held May 15-17 at Bellevue Baptist Church here featuring a variety of speakers and workshop leaders.

Mrs. Adrian Rogers, wife of the Bellevue pastor and Southern Baptist Convention president, will chair the conference which expects to attract 3,000 participants.

Centered around the theme, "A Wise Woman Builds," the conference will feature such speakers as Adrian Rogers, Carolyn Weatherford, executive director of the Southern Baptist Women's Missionary Union, Elisabeth Elliot, author and speaker, Billie Barrows, speaker and wife of Cliff Barrows, who is the music director for the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, Beverly LaHaye, speaker, author and wife of Tim LaHaye, a pastor and president of Family Life Seminars of San Diego, Vonnelle Bright, speaker, author and wife of Bill Bright, who is president of Campus Crusade for Christ, and Millie Dienert, speaker, Graham team member and wife of communications director Fred Dienert.

Besides general sessions, the conference will include choices among 35 workshop sessions.

The conference will deal with such concerns emphasizing the Biblical definitions of the male-female roles, the priority of homemaking, the high calling of singleness and many others.

Religion Roundup

New Baptist Movement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the Southern Baptist Convention has backed the 1962 and 1963 U.S. Supreme Court decisions banning officially sponsored prayer and Bible-reading from public schools, the convention president is part of a new movement to reinstate such practices.

The Rev. Adrian P. Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., president of the 13.5 million-member denomination, says his involvement in the effort is as an individual, not as president of the convention.

Several other Southern Baptists and conservatives of other denominations are part of the newly formed group, the Coalition for the First Amendment, which seeks congressional action to remove school devotionals from federal court jurisdiction.

Expressing "dismay" at Rogers' involvement in the effort, the Rev. James E. Wood Jr., director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, says Rogers' stand "completely repudiates the official resolutions" of the convention.

Rogers says he doesn't see himself opposing convention positions since the resolutions reflected only "meetings at those times," and he adds "I am strongly opposed to any state-supported religion, but I do not believe in separation of God and government and neither did our founding fathers."

He says the court did not ban voluntary prayer in public schools, but many of schools misinterpreted the decision to do so. The bottom line is that we have come to an almost anti-God and humanistic approach in our school systems because of their misapplication of the Supreme Court ruling.

Olympic Escort Named

NEW YORK (AP) — Four Americans of Greek ancestry — all of them active in the Greek Orthodox Church — have been named by President Carter to escort the Olympic Torch from Olympia, Greece, to Lake Placid, N.Y., for start of the winter Olympic Games.

They are Andrew A. Athens of Chicago, Mike Mantos of Washington, Yorka Linakis of Jamaica, N.Y., and Nick Smyrnia of Indianapolis.

Shortage Of Priests

NOTRE DAME, Ind. (AP) — Roman Catholic lay men and women soon will replace priests in much of what is now considered priestly work because there won't be enough priests to go around, writes the Rev. Dennis Geaney of Chicago.

He says that in the near future, priests won't have time for such tasks as administration, finance or parish and civic meetings, but will have to concentrate on the key roles of liturgist and theologian, with laity taking over the other tasks.

POW Ordeal Compared With Hostages In Iran

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent
Marriages collapsed entirely, or survived only through negotiation.

Depression and guilt feelings followed them home. There were continuing physical problems.

That was the consequence on the lives of Americans held prisoner of war in Vietnam. "They're all back to the baseline now."

they've done well," said a spokesman for the U.S. Navy's Health Research Center in San Diego that has been monitoring the lives of the 566 U.S. servicemen released from Vietnamese prisons in 1973.

But the readjustment for many was long and hard. Now another group of Americans are captives in a foreign nation — the nearly 50 hostages in Tehran, Iran. They have been held for 90 days, with no end in sight to their captivity.

The circumstances are entirely different from the Vietnam War, but there are parallels — the solitary confinement and the possibility that cooperation with the captors has been caused by duress. Some hostages have made public statements supporting Iranian policy.

However, the average duration of imprisonment for Americans in Vietnam was four years for the Army and Marine captives in the South, and six years for the Navy and Air Force pilots in the North. This was a much longer period than in earlier wars.

A research group set up by the Army, Navy and Marine Corps to study the effects of imprisonment on the men and their families, found after a five-year study that the "most psychologically devastating treatment" the captives endured was solitary confinement.

Many of the hostages in the American Embassy in Tehran are believed to be in solitary confinement. This practice was used far more extensively by the Vietnamese than previous enemies, and the American prisoners were kept in solitary confinement for periods ranging from a few weeks to four years. Around 20 percent of them spent one to two years alone.

"Physically, the men who spent extensive time in solitary appeared older than their chronological age," the report said. "Psychologically, the experience left severe scars because many of the men were the toughest to begin with, had the highest expectation of themselves, and subsequently were very guilty and ambivalent about their behavior under duress," the report said.

Some of the prisoners under torture went beyond the military code of conduct and signed documents and made statements favorable to the enemy cause.

"They fully expected to be court-martialed when they came home and were shocked to find that they were heroes. There was a great deal of guilt," said one of the doctors who contributed to the report.

Attempts were made to charge about a dozen prisoners of war with cooperating with the enemy, but the charges were later dropped.

The exception is Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who returned to the United States last year after 14 years in Vietnam. Garwood has been charged with desertion and collaboration with the enemy and a hearing is now under way at Camp Lejeune, N.C., to determine whether he should be court-martialed.

Garwood's defense has been that he did nothing more than other POWs, who cooperated with the enemy. Witnesses have said Garwood was given special treatment and claimed to be an officer in the enemy army. If convicted, Garwood could be executed.

The most immediate impact seen on the POWs' return home was the effect on their families. There have been more than twice as many divorces among the prisoners of war than among other servicemen.

"Many of the families had to renegotiate their marriages," said one of the doctors involved in the study, a finding supported by one of the POWs, Lt. Commander Richard A. Stratton, a prisoner for seven years.

After returning, he said he went through "six months of open rebellion and finally, six months of negotiations." He credited his wife Alice, a social worker, with keeping the family together.

Wives often found their husbands' behavior changed by the long prison experience. The men tended to be rigid and compulsively organized as a result of the mental habits formed in years of isolation.

Forced to keep a tight lid on their emotions in prison camp, the men who returned were often unable to express anger or even show personal feelings, especially in the first year of freedom. Two men committed suicide soon after their return home, and there were some cases of depression.

Medical experts agree that the full physical and mental impact of the Vietnam imprisonment will take five to ten years to become evident.

Rescued American Diplomats Reported In Good Condition

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — The six Americans who escaped from Iran with the aid of the Canadian Embassy appear to be in "very good condition, both mentally and physically," says Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV. The diplomats talked on Thursday with du Pont, who described the mood in their quarters as "a little bit like Christmas."

The six diplomatic staffers were going to Washington today, where they were to meet with reporters at the State Department. Originally, a news conference had been planned, but officials said Thursday that one of the escapees would read a prepared statement instead.

The escapees spent some time here with their families, who arrived Thursday evening from Washington, according to Maj. Robert Groom, base spokesman.

"They're obviously very happy to be home. They've been through the toughest kind of ordeal — not knowing whether they were going to be discovered or whether they would ever make it home again," du Pont said.

The Americans hid in the Canadian Embassy in Tehran after the takeover of the American compound on Nov. 4.

"We expressed our appreciation to them for upholding the tremendous tradition of our country. We also expressed our deep appreciation to the Canadian government," du Pont said.

He said the escapees told him they whiled away their time in hiding at the Canadian Embassy by playing cards and Scrabble. "They said they've gained quite a lot of expertise in Scrabble," du Pont said.

All the diplomats wore maple leaf flag pins in honor of Canada's aid in their escape, he said. Delaware flag pins were added to their lapels Thursday, the governor said.

The meeting between the governor and the escapees took place in a heavily guarded barracks where the six are staying. Guards with M-16 rifles patrolled the barricaded area, and reporters were barred from the base — the most secure on the East Coast.

Base personnel for the most part refused to discuss the situation. But, said an unidentified airman, "We're so happy they escaped. And we're proud to be playing a part in this."

Iranians Lose Appeal In Deportation Suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals judge says the Carter administration should locate all Iranian aliens in the United States and "take proper security measures" if the crisis with Iran worsens.

Lawsuits for the Iranian students who filed suit have already stated their willingness to take the case to the Supreme Court.

Judge George E. MacKinnon said in a written opinion the measures would "protect against the dangers which all aliens of such a foreign nation potentially create" during a crisis between the United States and their country.

MacKinnon, of the U.S. Court of Appeals here, did not specify the security measures or elaborate on the dangers. But he said some type of action would be justified and legal if the crisis deteriorated.

MacKinnon wrote for the majority Thursday in a 5-4 decision denying a rehearing to Iranian students challenging the administration's deportation program.

Carter, in response to the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, ordered on Nov. 10 that the visas of Iranian students in this country be checked. Those who were found to be here illegally faced deportation.

The administration postponed the deportation program until its legality is determined in the courts. The Iranian students who filed suit have already stated their willingness to take the case to the Supreme Court.

Thursday's decision sustained a Dec. 27 ruling by a three-judge appellate panel that upheld Carter's program. A U.S. District Court judge had earlier ruled the program was unconstitutional because it violated the equal protection guarantee of the Fifth Amendment.

MacKinnon, in his opinion, said, "The international crisis and confrontation in Iran is of such severity that those who are illegally in this country create a clear and present danger because of their allegiance and illegal status."

He said the Iranians have been made a special class "by virtue of the violent and lawless acts which their government has allowed to be committed against the United States and its envoys duly accredited to Iran."

The four judges who voted in favor of a rehearing by the full nine-member court said they had made no decision on the controversy, but felt the legal challenge raises "a grave constitutional issue."

Afghan Refugees To Receive U.S. Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, responding to an appeal from the United Nations, is pledging more than $21 million in emergency aid to an estimated 500,000 Afghan refugees fleeing into Pakistan.

He attributed the influx to the Soviet move into Afghanistan on Dec. 27, and said Carter has deplored. Bloomfield said the number of refugees leaving Afghanistan has quadrupled since the Soviet action.

Lincoln Bloomfield, of the president's National Security Council staff, said Thursday that the number of people crossing the border into neighboring Pakistan may rise as high as a million.

Bloomfield said the United States is chartering a commercial plane to take 40,000 heavy blankets from an Army depot in Utah to Pakistan next week, "before people actually freeze to death."

The Carter administration earlier had pledged $6.1 million to help the refugees, mainly in the form of 17,000 tons of wheat.

Publisher Plans Iran Newsletter

NEW YORK (AP) — A Pennsylvania publisher plans a newsletter he says will be "must" reading for anyone interested in Iranian legal affairs — the "Iranian Assets Litigation Reporter."

Half of the $300,000 already has been used by Church World Services, which flew in medicine, blankets and clothing on Jan. 19. Bloomfield said.

The newsletter, priced at $150 a month, is aimed at lawyers, says Publisher Leonard Andrews of Edgemont, Pa. He said in advertisements that it will carry "editorial summaries of significant legal events, government and principals' actions worldwide and the text of pleadings, opinions and orders from courts in the forefront of litigation in New York, Washington, London, Paris and elsewhere."

He said the new $5.3 million pledge was coming out of an emergency fund the United States uses for refugees. "It's only February and there is only about $25 million left for the rest of the year," Bloomfield said. Much of it was spent earlier to aid Cambodian refugees fleeing into Thailand.

The newsletter is to begin bi-monthly publication Feb. 8 by Andrews Publications Inc. of Edgemont.

The total United States donation of about $21 million is about 40 percent of what the United Nations has asked for in Newspapers Herald Canadian Efforts

By The Associated Press
Canada got a ringing "thank you" in Thursday's editorial pages from El Paso to Dallas, as many major Texas newspapers expressed appreciation to the Canadians for smuggling six Americans out of Iran.

The Dallas Times Herald summed up the newspapers' feelings in a single sentence: "Thanks, Canada. We needed that."

"The Canadian action was the work of a real friend indeed," the Dallas newspaper added.

The Houston Chronicle noted in its editorial that Americans were starting to feel a little lonely lately. "The Canadians, bless 'em, have made a remarkable dent in that lonely feeling," said the Chronicle.

"It sure feels good to have a friend who is willing to stand by you, not way behind you," the Chronicle added. "The Canadian government didn't have to get this involved. It could have tut-tutted like many other countries while cautiously keeping out of the line of fire."

"The Canadians chose instead to act the way the storybooks tell us real friends do. We know this isn't a storybook world, but it is still nice to know these ideals sometimes come true. They have won an even more special place in every American's heart," the Houston newspaper said.

The Austin American-Statesman, observing that Canadian officials risked their own safety, suggested that the United States owes Canada more than just a "thank you," perhaps a special medal for valor.

The San Antonio News led its Thursday lineup of editorials with one entitled: "Canada Proves Its Friendship."

Reagan Offers 'Doctrine' For Dealing With Soviets

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Ronald Reagan has outlined a "Reagan Doctrine" for dealing with the Soviet Union that is based on sending strong signals to the Soviet Union, including a blockade of Cuba and a token U.S. military presence in Pakistan.

Reagan, campaigning for the Republican presidential nomination, has drawn his position during a four-day campaign swing ending today in Florida.

The Pakistan proposal raised questions about whether the United States should drop its opposition to nuclear development by Pakistan and it forced Reagan to make a hurried trip to a campaign press room to clarify his position.

"I am not opposed to the policy of trying to hold down nuclear proliferation," Reagan told reporters.

The issue stemmed from the former California governor's suggestion that showing off the U.S. flag in Pakistan by a token force such as an Air Force squadron would signal the Soviet Union that a move against Pakistan, which borders Afghanistan, could mean a U.S.-Soviet confrontation.

"The Soviet Union is not ready for that all-out confrontation," Reagan said.

At a news conference shortly after his arrival Thursday in Jacksonville, Reagan was asked how he would respond if the end of U.S. opposition to nuclear development is the price Pakistan sets for letting a U.S. force on its soil.

Reagan replied that he didn't think the nuclear issue was "as important as our military presence there."

Reagan also said he believes the United States has failed in its efforts to keep other nations from developing the technology with which they could build nuclear weapons.

Furthermore, he added, it could be interpreted as an interference in the affairs of another sovereign state for America to say if another nation could develop its nuclear capability.

Reagan, however, stopped short of saying flatly that he would pay such a price if it were demanded by Pakistan and if he were president.

A blockade of Cuba is a proposal Reagan has mentioned repeatedly since the Soviet military move into Afghanistan. He also has said that if he had been president when U.S. citizens were taken hostage in Tehran, he would have set a deadline for their release and told the Iranians that "if as of this date certain they are not free, this is the action we will take."

Reagan said he didn't think it proper, while the hostages are being held, to discuss specific actions that might be taken. Reagan also said Carter had watered down the strong stand he took in his State of the Union message against any Soviet move into the Persian Gulf area. Carter said any such move would be resisted by any means necessary, "including military force."

Reagan noted that Carter told a group of editors and broadcasters two days later that the United States does not have "enough military strength and enough military presence there to defend the region militarily." Carter added that any such effort would require the cooperation of other nations.

MAKES A CHOICE — Former Sen. Edward W. Brooke was about to pat Republican presidential contender John B. Kennedy Puts In Long Hours Campaigning In New England

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, wearing a blue suit and watched closely by more than a dozen aides, bodyguards and others, picked up a bowling ball and rolled it down the alley. Nothing.

He tried again and seven pins fell. "See that," he joked. "The first one was Iowa and then the next seven in a row."

Kennedy is campaigning in New England from before dawn until well after dark these days to prevent any more Iowa — a state where his presidential challenge suffered a two-to-one defeat to President Carter in Jan. 21 precinct caucuses.

Kennedy arranged to leave Boston today for a motorcycle through New Hampshire and Maine.

The Massachusetts senator concedes he faces a tough campaign in those states — Maine's Feb. 10 caucuses and New Hampshire's Feb. 26 presidential primary. A defeat in New England would be a serious setback in Kennedy's campaign for the White House.

Kennedy no longer flies around the country on a chartered jet. He flew round-trip from Boston to northern New Hampshire Thursday on a stuffy, noisy, chartered, two-engine, 19-seat plane. Behind him was an assortment of seven planes and helicopters chartered by the reporters trailing him.

Wherever he goes, Kennedy attacks Carter's handling of both foreign and domestic policies, and says the president should debate him.

Kennedy routinely assails Carter's handling of the Iranian crisis, now nearly three months old. "I think 89 days is long enough," he told a full house Thursday at the opera house in Littleton, N.H.

On domestic issues, Kennedy favors gasoline rationing and a six-month freeze on wages and prices, to be followed by mandatory economic controls.

But there is more to presidential campaigning than talking about weighty issues such as the economy and foreign policy.

So Kennedy stood, hatless and without gloves, for more than 30 minutes in near-zero temperatures outside a paper mill in Berlin, N.H., to greet men and women coming to work.

Over at the VFW hall, he received a red-and-white hockey jersey with the numeral "1" and his name on the back. After he spoke, he stood in a receiving line, as he almost always does, to shake hands with everyone who wants to. "How's your mother?" asked one middle-aged woman. "Well," he replied, reaching for the hand of the person next in line.

Four-Man Race Foreseen In Arkansas GOP Voting

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Ronald Reagan, George Bush, Howard Baker and John Connally all are expected to win Arkansas delegates, but not a majority, Saturday in the first election of representatives to the Republican National Convention.

Reagan long has been considered the favorite, but Bush's straw poll upset in Iowa and the vigorous cross-state campaigning by the two other challengers has placed Reagan's lead in doubt.

Delia Combs, executive director of the Arkansas Republican Party, predicts no candidate will win a majority of the state's 19 delegates — 12 to be selected in four GOP district meetings across the state Saturday and another seven elected by the GOP State Committee two weeks later.

"I don't have the foggiest idea how it will turn out," Mrs. Combs said. "And anyone who says they do doesn't know what they're talking about. There are just too many variables."

However, Reagan's state campaign coordinator cautiously says his candidate should get about half the delegates.

"We'll be happy with a majority," J.J. Vigneault said. "I think we've got a chance to get 10, but I'm not saying we'll walk away with it."

In 1976, Arkansas Republicans held a presidential primary which Reagan won over former President Ford. Instead of a voter free-for-all again, party leaders decided to gain national attention by holding district caucuses in early February and becoming the first state to select national delegates.

Arkansas' national convention delegates will be chosen by fewer than 200 Republican party faithful in the state.

Mrs. Combs, who is uncommitted, said Reagan's secondplace finish to former CIA Ambassador Bush in a straw poll in Iowa probably would have little effect on the Arkansas caucuses.

"I don't think Reagan was hurt in Arkansas by the Iowa caucus, but it can't do anything but help Bush," she said. "I haven't heard any talk of anybody switching from Reagan."

Connally Qualifies For Texas Primary

AUSTIN (UPI) — Both of Texas' native son candidates for the Republican presidential nomination, George Bush and John Connally, have now qualified for spots on the state's May 3 primary ballot.

Leaders of Connally's campaign in Texas Thursday filed petitions bearing more than 30,000 signatures with the state GOP headquarters.

The petitions gathered by the Connally supporters carried at least five times the number required to have him placed on the Texas ballot. Only Connally and Bush have earned ballot places in Texas, but Ronald Reagan and perhaps others are expected to qualify before the filing deadline at 6 p.m. Monday.

"There are actually more than 30,000 qualified voters on these petitions, but we had the workers stop counting at 27,000 because they needed to get to work on the big upcoming nationwide telethon Governor Connally will hold Feb. 14," said Paul Eggers, Connally's Texas campaign chairman.

Eggers said campaign workers gathered signatures of more than 5,000 Connally backers in Harris County and 4,200 in Dallas County.

"We are obviously quite pleased with this expression of widespread grassroots support for Governor Connally's candidacy. This is a true indication of the organization we have put together in Texas, which we believe will be vital to the success of any candidate on the Republican ticket this year," Eggers said.

Eggers said polls have shown Connally maintaining a strong lead in Texas for the past nine months and have given no indication of any gains by George Bush, the surprise winner in the Iowa caucuses.

"We think by the time we roll into the national convention, the 80 votes from the Texas delegation will be very important," Eggers said.

He said the hour-long nationwide telethon planned by Connally will be telecast on a cable television network and independent stations and will be a major factor in the campaign.

"It's more than just dollars we're talking about. We're trying to broaden the base of support. We're going to have groups of people in homes all over the country to contribute $5 or $10. But it's more than just a fundraiser, it's to bring the troops together before the March primaries."

State Board Debates Solutions To Heated Insurance Battle

AUSTIN (AP) — A fight between savings and loan associations and insurance agents — so severe one observer calls them "the warring parties" — has fallen into the lap of the State Insurance Board.

The board conferred with attorneys for both sides this week and instructed its staff to start work on possible solutions.

Agents complained when savings and loans — mainly large chain associations — began requiring them to sign "certificates of insurance" as proof that mortgaged homes are insured.

Lending institutions require insurance to protect the value of property used as collateral for a loan.

Some agents read the certificate forms provided by the savings and loans as obligating them — the agents — to keep insurance in force and in amounts that keep pace with inflation.

"They are afraid that if they sign them, they are putting themselves in a binding legal situation," said one source.

"Farm and Home and Gibraltar are saying that if the agents don't sign, they won't accept any other evidence of insurance and will tell homeowners to go to an agent who will sign the form."

Some savings and loan associations refuse to accept copies of an insurance policy as evidence of coverage because a policy is bulky and takes up too much file space.

While the fight is largely between agents and savings and loan associations, board spokesman Tom Bond said it has "a slight percolation effect to homeowners."

Base Holds Career Day Activities

divulged what unclassified material they could about their aircraft.

"You're looking at the world's two best fighters," Yates grinned.

The F-16 is highly maneuverable, excelling in air-to-air combat and delivery of air-to-surface weapons.

It can turn inside any other Air Force plane and can out-perform any fighter in the Russian inventory.

Yates described the F-15 as the world's greatest air superiority fighter that, like the F-16 can outperform any other in the world.

"It's built around a tremendous radar. You can see a long way, pick out a target and go into it."

For going into combat — which both aircraft can reach by in-flight fueling with one take-off — Yates sees the ideal situation as an F-15 with "a couple of F-16s under its wings."

No nickname has been given the F-16, but Yates would like it called "Viper."

Shelton, who beams with pride and affection for his craft which can reach nine Gs, would like to name it "Scorpion II." It's the most outstanding aircraft Shelton has flown in his Air Force career.

Among other planes, to be at Reese are the F-111, an all-weather medium range bomber; KC-135 Stratotanker, a tanker transport for refueling and rescue operations as well as cargo and aircraft deployment; T-3 Shooting Star, a supersonic all-weather fighter interceptor; A-10 Thunderbolt, a twin turbofan aircraft for close air support.

Also the F-5 Freedom Fighter, the combat version of the T-38 supersonic jet trainer at Reese; F-4 Phantom, the Air Force's primary operational tactical fighter; RF-4, a tactical reconnaissance aircraft; F-106 Delta Dart, a supersonic all-weather fighter interceptor; A-10 Thunderbolt, a twin turbofan aircraft for close air support.

U.S. Air Force Director of the F-16 program, made the presentation. At right is Israeli Air Force Brig. General Amos Lapidot, standing next to Richard E. Adams, General Dynamics executive. An F-16 was on display at Reese Air Force Base near Lubbock today. (AP Laserphoto)

Israelis Accept New Fighter-Bombers

FORT WORTH (UPI) — An Israeli general has accepted the first of 75 F-16 fighter-bombers from the manufacturer, General Dynamics, which calls the craft the "best air combat fighter in the world."

Brig. Gen. Amos Lapidot, former Chief of Staff of the Israeli Air Force, powered the two-seat F-16 aircraft Thursday from General Dynamics' runway in Fort Worth en route to Hill AFB, Utah, where the plane will be temporarily assigned for pilot and maintenance training.

A company spokesman said the $8 million multi-role aircraft is the latest and most advanced fighter-bomber available anywhere.

"Its top speed is near 1,400 mph, but more significantly, it can carry a payload equal to that weight," said the spokesman.

"Also, its airframe is so strong it can maneuver under stresses up to nine times gravity. The Russians have some faster planes, but they don't have any dogfighter in the league of the F-16."

The Israelis became the third air force within a week to begin flying the fighter. The Royal Norwegian Air Force accepted the first of 72 of the planes last Friday, and the Royal Danish Air Force accepted the first of its 58 fighters Monday. In all, six nations have the F-16.

Club Remodeling Nears Finish

Construction is nearing completion on a major remodeling project at the Lubbock Club in the First National-Pioneer Building, with an opening scheduled for late next week.

The $200,000 project has resulted in the enlargement of the club's kitchen, including new floors, ceilings, walls and equipment.

The Lubbock Club moved its executive dining room across the hall to the north and added space to bring the facility to a seating capacity of 36. A collapsible wall was installed to provide flexibility for various parties, according to the manager.

The club also has installed a service bar on the dining room level.

Byron Martin of Lubbock is contractor for the renovation project.

Bureau Says Aliens' Numbers May Fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illegal immigrants from Mexico may be crossing the border in lower numbers than previous studies indicated, according to "cautious speculations" by Census Bureau demographers.

Their conclusions indicate that the number of Mexican illegal aliens may be less than commonly believed, almost certainly below 3 million and possibly as low as 1.5 million.

Whatever the number of Mexican illegal aliens might be, the research indicated that about one-fourth of them could be found in Texas.

The evidence suggests that the distribution of the illegal alien population probably resembles the distribution of the legal alien population, according to a paper the demographers prepared for the Select Commission on Immigration and Refugee Policy.

That would place 26 percent of the Mexican illegal immigrants in Texas, about 49 percent in California and 10 percent in Illinois.

Greg Robinson, one of the demographers who prepared the paper, said it by no means offered the final word on the subject.

"It was not a report of an official nature. We call it a preliminary view of existing studies," he said. "In it, we offer some cautious speculations."

Robinson said the research showed a considerable in-and-out movement of Mexican immigrants, entering the United States and then returning to Mexico.

The paper also concluded that the total number of illegal aliens may be much less than commonly believed, placing the figure almost certainly below 6 million and possibly as low as 3.5 million.

Events Set To Observe Catholic Schools Week

An observance of "National Catholic Schools Week" will begin here this weekend with the celebration of Mass at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium.

Families with children in the four Catholic schools located in the Lubbock area will participate in the Mass. Catholic schools in this area include St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann and Christ the King, both located in Lubbock; St. Joseph's in Slaton; and St. Michael's in Levelland.

A full schedule of events for next week has been announced by both of the Lubbock schools.

St. Elizabeth's-St. John Neumann School will sponsor a pancake supper from 6-7:30 p.m. Monday in the school cafeteria. Admission will be $1.50 for adults and $1 for children.

Following the supper will be a special performance of "Godspell," directed by Michael Wood. Curtain time for the musical will be 8 p.m.

Members of the "Godspell" cast include Douglas Hamman as Jesus, Wesley John Hunter as John the Baptist and Judas, Becky Carr as Mary Magdalene, Natalie Gonzales as Natalie, Diane Hawkins as Diane and Wood as Peter.

Parents of students at St. Elizabeth's-St. John Neumann have been invited to visit the school Monday through Wednesday to discuss their jobs or hobbies with the youngsters.

The school will hold a "Kid's Day" on Thursday and a staff appreciation luncheon and family night on Friday.

Christ the King will sponsor a "coffee klatch" for parents beginning at 9:30 a.m. Monday. Featured will be a panel discussion on "The Changing Realities of Family Life," led by Dr. Arlin Peterson.

A staff appreciation luncheon will be held at the school Tuesday. Coffee klatch programs also will be held at Christ the King at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday and Thursday. Wednesday's program will be on "Moral Development," led by Nancy DeGuire. The Rev. James A. Comiskey and the Rev. Ronald F. Krisman will lead Thursday's program on "Faith Growth and Development at Home."

All of the Catholic schools in the area will be having open houses during the week.

Governor Set As Speaker

Gov. Bill Clements will address students at South Plains College in Levelland on Feb. 21 as the guest lecturer for the second annual George Mahon Lecture series.

Current governmental affairs will be the general topic of the governor, a spokesman for the college said. High school students from the area also will attend.

An aide to the governor said Clements has no other speaking engagements planned in the area during his February visit to the South Plains.

The lecture series speaker last year was former Congressman George Mahon, for whom the series is named.

Refugees Land In Miami Aboard Stolen Barge

MIAMI (AP) — Sixty-seven men, women and children arrived at a Coast Guard station in Miami today after commandeering a leaky, slow-moving barge at gunpoint from a port in Cuba.

The refugees were greeted by reporters and cameramen. Most smiled but said little before being led to a waiting bus operated by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Queen's Abdication Gets Mixed Response

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch people greeted Queen Juliana's announcement of her abdication in April to bring Crown Princess Beatrix to the throne with general surprise, widespread approval and some sentiment that the monarchy should give way to a republic.

Typical of the contrasting feelings were the opinions of Myrna Tensen, 23, and of Pieter Overduin, 48.

Stock Mart Recovers Early Loss

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market was mixed in slackened trading today after recovering most of an early loss.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 4 points at the outset, was down 1.36 at 874.49 by noon.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 4-3 margin in the broad list of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was nothing of note in the economic news to explain the selling pressure that set in on Thursday, when the Dow fell more than 6 points.

They said it seemed to stem mainly from an impulse to cash in on some of the market's recent gains.

The January rally, which came on the heaviest volume in the market's history, put most major indicators at record highs earlier this week.

The oil stocks, hit by a squall of selling Thursday, began moving ahead again today. Texaco was up 1/4 at 35 1/2.

Baxter-Travenol Laboratories led the active list, off 1/4 at 41 1/2. A 318,300-share block traded at 41.

The NYSE's composite index rose .06 to 85.67. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .45 at 275.87.

The volume of the Big Board totaled 21.97 million shares at noon-time, down from 32.87 million at the same point Thursday.

Livestock

SOUTH ST. PAUL (AP) - Cattle and calves 2,300 Friday. Not enough slaughter steers or heifers on offer to fully test prices.

Sheep 5,000. Barrows and gilts moderate. Active, steady, extreme top 50.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Cattle 300, hogs 2,000, sheep 50.

NATIONAL STOCKYARD (AP) - Hogs 4,000. Trade moderate. Barrows and gilts 50 to 125 lower.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Cattle and calves 1,500, hogs 5,000, sheep 500.

Dollar, Gold Both Rise

LONDON (AP) - The dollar strengthened today against all major currencies except the British pound.

Gold opened at $667 an ounce in both London and Zurich and by midmorning rose to $681 in London.

Gold closed Thursday at $643.50 in London and $653 in Zurich.

The dollar rallied in Tokyo, hitting 240.72 yen at the end of a moderately heavy session.

Dealers were puzzled by the dollar's rise in Europe.

Law School Team Takes First Place

A team from the Texas Tech School of Law has placed first in the national moot court competition this week in New York City.

The team of David Weinstein, Fred Raschke and Jeannette Robison went through all of the rounds undefeated.

Weinstein was awarded best oralist award for the national competition and Jeannette Robison was awarded second best oralist of the national competition.

Twenty-seven law schools were represented in the competition. In the semifinal round, Tech defeated the University of Denver law school and in the final round, Tech defeated Boston College.

The judges at moot court competition are not aware which schools are being judged. The school name is not used and the students don't reveal which school they are with, Miss Crabtree said.

The moot court competition trains students to argue cases on appeal before appellate judges, Miss Crabtree said.

In November, Tech sponsored the regional moot court competition, in which schools from Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas competed. In the regional competition, Tech took first place and the Southern Methodist University team took second place.

In the regional competition, Weinstein was awarded best oralist and Raschke received the award for the best brief.

Weinstein is a second-year law student, Raschke a third-year student, and Miss Robison graduated in December.

The Board of Barristers is an oral advocacy program that sponsors mock trial and moot court competition.

Education At Yale Rises To $9,110

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) - The cost of an undergraduate education at Yale University will rise to $9,110 next year.

An 11.9 percent increase, Yale's biggest ever, was prompted by inflation and soaring energy costs.

The $9,110 figure includes $6,210 for tuition and $2,900 in room and board charges.

Yale tuition was higher than last year but three other Ivy schools, Giamatti said, but you get more for your dollar at Yale.

Yesterday's Brain Twister: I am holding two U.S. coins in my hand. They add up to 55 cents. One of them is not a nickel. How is that possible?

Answer: In my hand I am holding a nickel and the other coin, which is not a nickel. It's a half-dollar. "Remember" — I only said that one of the coins was not a nickel — the other one was!

Today's Brain Twister: While we're fooling around with numbers, I thought you might like this Brain Twister sent to me by Martin Guerra of Corpus Christi. He said:

"Take four 9's. Make them equal 100. You may add, subtract, multiply, divide or put them in any position you want. Sounds easy? I thought so, too. It sounds like a cinch because you have all those options. You will soon discover that is not the situation!" (Look for the answer in Sunday's Kids-Only Club column.)

Anti-Terrorist Measures Learned By Executives

COLUMBIA, Mo. (UPI) — Dick Thomas takes time from his law practice in this university town — hardly considered a world hot spot of terrorist activity — to teach anxious executives how to protect themselves from terrorists.

For a part-time job business is good. Since Thomas and three associates began the school last year, 55 executives have undergone intensive training at the rural Ray Chapman Academy.

The reason the terrorist business is getting to be such a popular thing is that it is successful, said Thomas, holding the civilian version of the Army's M-16 rifle.

Thomas became interested in self-defense after he was threatened by a disgruntled husband while working on a divorce case. He believes that fear of terrorists has become a fact of life and will remain so.

The lawyer said today's well-protected executive should have a .38-caliber revolver strapped to his waist and a submachine gun under the front seat of his car.

Obviously, there should be a bodyguard to handle the submachine gun, he said. If the executive wishes, they will train the bodyguard.

Since the school opened in 1978, students have come from Venezuela, Puerto Rico and Germany. A terrorist course costs from $700 to $1,000. Students must shell out $1,200 for a six-hour session.

Thomas said they teach students to shoot, but also when to shoot and how to shoot properly.

Thomas, 37, operates the school with Ray Chapman of Columbia, a world pistol champion, James Cirillo, a customs department firearms instructor in New York City, and Ken Haeccathorn, who teaches law enforcement in Marietta, Ohio, and commutes for special classes.

The school operates on a 33-acre site using odd-looking structures that provide a variety of experience. Final tests are given in old houses in the country.

It's a three-dimensional experience, Thomas said. It is so vigorous some potential customers have shied away.

One of the case studies at the academy is the kidnapping of Italian Prime Minister Aldo Moro in 1978. Thomas believes the Moro kidnapping and murder probably could have been prevented if his protectors had learned their lessons at the Chapman school.

The first graduate to report using his training is an executive from Puerto Rico. He said he avoided serious problems because of what he learned.

Thomas said several women have taken the course and were easier to teach than men.

"They don't have this macho stuff. And because few of them have used a gun before, they don't have bad habits," Thomas said.

Telephone Soliciting Gets Good Results

By LEROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — Newspaper and magazine publishers who once looked on telephone marketing chiefly as a competitor for advertising revenue are using it now to gain readers.

Murray Roman, head of Campaign Communications Institute of America, one of the big telephone marketers, says his firm has sold more than two million subscriptions for newspapers and magazines in the last five years.

He has a list of blue-chip publishing clients including The New York Times, Readers Digest, TV Guide, Harvard Business Review, McGraw-Hill, Prentice-Hall and others.

Roman said that while telephone soliciting, now a $9 billion-a-year business, competes with all advertising and selling methods, it appears to supersede most direct mail and broadcast advertising.

He cited one rather dramatic comparison of the results from direct mail and telephone solicitation. Public Broadcasting System spent $50,000 on direct mail and the same amount on telephone solicitation in a fund raising campaign. Even though the direct mail solicitation went to 333,333 prospects as against 44,445 in the telephone solicitation, the telephone calls got a 25 percent response and raised $125,000 against $100,000 raised from a 2 percent response to the direct mail appeal.

Roman's firm has been in telephone soliciting since 1968. It grew out of a telephone project he developed six years earlier while working for Ford Motor Co., that generated two sales leads a day for each of 32,000 Ford salesmen. The company now operates in Britain, Canada, Holland, France, Finland, Germany, Australia and Japan, as well as the U.S.

Its clients, other than publishers, have included the Democratic and Republican parties, the American Medical Association, the American Bar Association and such industrial and commercial giants as IBM, U.S. Steel, Xerox, AT&T, Citicorp and Chase Manhattan Bank.

Roman says telephone marketing is bound to keep on growing because it is the only person-to-person mass marketing medium, and is economical, reflecting new and sophisticated services and equipment.

His company also develops internal private telephone networks that save communications costs for such companies as Olin, United Technologies, Union Carbide and American Can. Here again, leased sophisticated electronic hardware plays a big cost-saving role, Roman said.

Telephone soliciting is not new. It began back in the 1920s, mainly for selling vacuum cleaners and other household items that were considered "big ticket" in those days. But now it's much used in selling to businesses as well.

Endangered Raiders Host TCU, Aggies

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
The game started off with a real pop, fizz, fizz.

Tech controlled the tip. David Little immediately had the ball ripped out of his hands by Houston's Kenneth Williams, who took the ball downcourt and missed an uncontested layup. Ah yes, this one was going to be a barn-burner.

Moments later, both teams exchanged missed slam-dunk attempts and the Tech-Houston contest Wednesday night in Hofheinz Pavilion quickly deteriorated into little more than an alley fight.

And it was a fight the Red Raiders lost. In fact, coach Gerald Myers took a standing eight-count and was escorted out of the arena after picking up three technical fouls.

Suddenly, the Tech cagers find themselves fighting for their lives. The Raiders are now 5-4 in Southwest Conference play, only days ago they were 5-1 in SWC action. Saturday, the squad hosts TCU and Monday the Raiders entertain Texas A&M.

The Raiders have already played three games since last Saturday. Now they face the prospect of four more games in the next eight days. On top of that, the Raiders will spend Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday traveling next week.

They've already had road trips to Dallas and Houston. Still ahead is a five-day jaunt back to Houston and then Waco.

In all, the Raiders will play seven games in two weeks. That schedule has Tech boss Gerald Myers more than just slightly peeved.

"The last three games have been under," said Myers immediately after the Houston loss. "We can't rest and we can't practice while some teams have off days."

Wednesday in Houston, the Raiders were obviously ragged, worn and probably suffering an emotional hangover from their overtime loss to Arkansas two nights earlier. After playing with amazing efficiency against the Hogs, Tech looked like a different team against the Coogs.

But Houston played little better than the Raiders and it was readily understandable because the Coogs only drew 3,000 folks to the contest. The general consensus along press row was that it really wasn't a basketball game, it was shambles.

Then there was the officiating, another bad performance. Nobody, not even Houston coach Guy Lewis, would dispute that.

"That was the same bunch we had up at Arkansas," said Lewis. "Can you imagine what they were like in front of a crowd?"

Houston, after leading by 14 points with 12 minutes left in the game, could not get a single call to go its way in an earlier loss to Arkansas. The same crew of Lynn Shortnacy, Dan Watson and Robert Ledbetter called both the Tech-Houston game and the Tech-Arkansas tilt.

Apparently, they took turns playing favorites.

Myers drew three technicals in the game. Tech totaled five Ts and Myers was ejected from the game for the first time in his coaching career.

Hofheinz Pavilion officials sent four policemen to escort the officials to their dressing room fearful that Myers might approach them. Myers let his eyes do the talking — and they said plenty.

"The conference has a gag rule against talking about officials," he said. "So I'm going to go through official channels. But my feelings should be obvious."

In spite of that, the officials weren't the difference in the game. To a man, the Tech cagers agreed that they were outplayed by the Coogs.

The question now is can the Raiders regroup. Saturday's game with TCU should give a hint of the team's pulse — but the real examination comes Monday against the Aggies.

Estacado, Dunbar Hope To Write Happy Ending

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Tonight's Estacado-Dunbar basketball game is set up so perfectly. John R. Tunis could have written it in one of his juvenile sports novels.

Since the game will be played at Dunbar, let's give Estacado the ball first. Call it "Hanging On." The story line is this: a high school basketball team playing an emotional, full-tilt, full-court press goes from a rag-tag 7-7 mark to win nine of 10 games.

The streak carries them past a taller, favored team to a district lead. Then the bottom falls out. The kids forget what got them to the top. They get beat by a team they should have handled.

Now they can only tie for the title. And they have to go across town to do it.

Can the Matadors return to their old self? Can they gain that crucial tie? Will John get a date for the sock hop?

Now for the Panthers.

A young squad with a lot of raw talent struggles early, but seems to be in good shape going into district play. They win four games in a row including a one-point overtime tilt against a highly-favored big school.

But, inexplicably, something goes wrong. They lose four (including two at home) in a row once loop play starts. Now they must face the team across town.

Can they regroup? Can they restart that winning streak? Will Joe McWilliams ever smile again?

You'll have to be at Dunbar gym tonight at 7:30 to find out.

Both coaches agree, it'll be worth your time.

"We have to beat Dunbar to stay in the first half," said Estacado coach J.J. Wood. "I anticipate our toughest game all year."

"There's a lot riding on this game as far as we're concerned," said Dunbar boss McWilliams. "It should be an interesting and exciting game. We're still searching for our first district win."

"There probably will be a lot of pride riding on the ball game tonight."

The matchup is always a classic, but this one could be one of the better games.

"We've been going over there for 12 years now," said Wood. "We've won two games in the other key District 1-AAA game. 3-1 Canyon hosts 3-1 Borger. The winner of that game will tie with Estacado (if the Mats can beat Dunbar) for the district's first-half title.

In another loop match, 1-3 Dumas travels to 2-2 Levelland. In this game, the girls' side of the contest is more interesting. Dumas, the heavy district favorite, lost to Canyon Tuesday night and must top the 3-3 Lobo girls to regain its stride.

In District 2-AAA, Ector (4-1 and second in the district first half finish) travels to woeful Pecos (1-21 on the year, 0-5 in loop play). In the other loop game, Andrews (5-0, 24-2 and the first-half champ), travels to Monahans (8-13 and 1-3).

In 3-AAA, Snyder defeated Lamesa Thursday night 55-49 to assume sole possession of the boys' race.

In the girls' race, three teams tied for the first-half title. Tonight, Sweetwater (3-1 and 18-4) hosts Lamesa (4-16 and 0-4); Snyder (14-9 and 3-1) hosts Brownfield (9-12 and 1-3); and Lake View (18-5 and 3-1) takes a night off.

Saturday Sweetwater and Lake View meet in San Angelo for another big makeup game.

Victim Of Alleged Rape Promises 'Tall' Trouble

DALLAS (UPI) — A nurse who filed a rape complaint against former Dallas Cowboy Ed "Too Tall" Jones intends to follow through to a conviction, despite fears of personal reprisals, her attorney says.

Jones, who retired from football to become a boxer, was arrested early Thursday by police who were called to the Dallas apartment of two women. Jones, found sleeping in one bedroom, offered no resistance.

After being arraigned on the complaint and jailed, the 28-year-old, who started five years for the Cowboys, was released on $2,500 bond. Jones refused to comment on the incident following his release.

Attorney Bill Rice, who called himself a personal friend of the victim, said he had no doubt the incident was a genuine rape.

"This lady was raped. I guarantee it," he said Thursday night. "She's a registered nurse, a very stable lady, and she had a lot of problems in bringing charges against him."

In New York, Jones' boxing manager, Dave Wolf, called the complaint an outgrowth of the athlete's notoriety.

"The charges are frivolous," he said. "If it wasn't Jones or another athlete, this woman wouldn't do this."

"Ed categorically denies that a rape occurred. He is prepared to take a lie detector test. Under no circumstances will we consider any financial settlement with this woman, and we expect him in Los Angeles Tuesday to prepare for his Las Vegas fight on March 22," Wolf said.

Rice said the victim nonetheless was determined to press her case against Jones.

"Her intention is to follow this through to a conviction and jail sentence or whatever the court decides," he said.

The police report said the 25-year-old victim awakened early Thursday to find the 6-9, 255-pound Jones on top of her, and then the rape occurred.

"The victim and her roommate went to a disco last night, where they met a doctor and Jones," Rice said. "I understand that Jones was ordering two beers at a time and had also been drinking earlier in the day."

Rice said the victim was taken home from the club by the doctor, who then left the apartment. Rice said the roommate and Jones returned to the apartment later.

"Too Tall was pressuring her roommate to let him stay for the night, and she gave him a blanket and told him to sleep on the couch," Rice said. "The next thing, Jones went into the victim's room, although the door had been closed, and raped her."

Rice said the victim initially was afraid to call police but finally decided to press charges against Jones.

"She was reluctant to bring charges against him for various reasons, she didn't want to hurt him and his career or other people, and she was also afraid of possible retaliation," he said.

A spokesman with the Dallas Police Department said investigators were awaiting results of the victim's examination at Parkland Hospital before deciding whether to file charges. There was no indication when that decision would be made.

DHS Grid Candidates Surface

By JIM FERGUSON

In all likelihood, a successor to Van Jefferson as head football coach at Dunbar-Struggs High School won't be named for at least two, maybe three, more weeks.

According to Lubbock Independent School District athletic director Pete Ragus, the recent desegregation case has brought the hiring process almost to a complete halt.

"We really can't do anything until after the court case. The board is involved with that right now. When that's resolved then we'll proceed," said Ragus.

"Hopefully," continued Ragus, "we'll do it (hire a head coach) within the next two weeks. But that's just hoping. The ideal time would be in the middle of the month (February). It could take longer, though.

So for the time being, Ragus said he would continue to accept and evaluate applications.

Ragus said "around 10 or 11" coaches have applied for the vacancy recreated Jan. 14 when Jefferson resigned the post after a five-year stint and asked to be

Ali Embarks On Olympic Mission

By The Associated Press
Former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, at the urging of President Carter, prepared to visit five African countries to seek support for the American stance on the 1980 Summer Olympics.

Ali, in New Delhi Thursday, cancelled the last half of a 12-day tour of India, saying Carter had asked him to tour Africa and explain the U.S. position on the Moscow Games. Carter has called for the movement, postponement or cancellation of the Games if Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

"I'm sorry my tour of India had to be cancelled, but the President of the United States comes first," said Ali, adding he was "honored to be considered for this mission."

A U.S. embassy source in New Delhi said Ali would visit Tanzania, Nigeria, Kenya, Liberia and Senegal. The retired champ and eight members of his group were to leave Sunday for Africa, according to Arthur Lefkowitz, a spokesman at the American embassy in New Delhi.

"Multitudes know me — in China, Russia, India and Africa," said Ali. "In India, there's turmoil on the streets; when I go outside, traffic stops.

"Russia has got to be stopped in whatever way," said Ali, who won the heavyweight gold medal at the 1960 Summer Games in Rome. "If Russia is allowed to keep taking territory, she soon will be taking the oilfields (south of Afghanistan). Then you're forced to go in militarily."

The Soviet news agency Tass, in a Thursday dispatch from Moscow, said, "The U.S.S.R. Olympic Committee expresses confidence that no forces will be able to undermine the world Olympic movement." The dispatch called on all national Olympic committees and sports federations to "give a resolute rebuff to the sponsors of the present hostile campaign."

Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser gave his own rebuff to that, calling for an "effective boycott" of the Moscow Games because "this is not the appropriate time for the athletes of the free world, of the independent world" to attend an Olympics in Moscow.

At least 11 Western European Olympic Committees were to meet in Frankfurt, West Germany today to discuss a coordinated response to the prospective boycott. Spokesman Ulrich Pabst said, however, final decisions would not be made at the Frankfurt meeting.

"On the boycott question, the national Olympic committees of each country have the right to decide for themselves," said Pabst.

The group was to hear reports on boycott sentiment in each country.

In related developments: —A Yugoslavian Olympic official reiterated the intention of his nation's committee to send athletes to Moscow.

—France, originally one of the staunchest opponents to a boycott, now is in a national debate on the issue. Jean-Pierre Soisson, French minister of sport, said France would not participate if the Games evolved into a meeting of Communist countries and their sympathizers.

—Sprinter Harvey Glange, in Toronto for an international track and field meet tonight, said "I'm still training as though I were going to the Olympics," but added he would boycott if that was his nation's wish.

"We have to realize that those guys who make the decisions are doing the best they can," he said. "Really, the chance of going is very slim right now."

—Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker offered to sponsor legislation to provide financial support for a Free World Olympics, to be held in Puerto Rico, if the U.S. Olympic Committee deems that commonwealth an appropriate site.

—Kenneth Hahn, a county supervisor in Los Angeles, suggested a "Spartan Games" be held in that California city in 1980.

—USOC Vice President Jack Kelly warned in Philadelphia that Los Angeles' plans to hold the 1984 Summer Games would be jeopardized if the U.S. holds an alternate international competition during the Moscow Games.

Such a competition, said Kelly, "Would be in strict violation of all kinds of Olympic regulations which could jeopardize our holding the Los Angeles Games in 1984."

Politics Perturb AAU President

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A boycott by the United States and other nations of the 1980 Olympic Games this summer would mean the death of the modern Olympics, according to Robert Helmick, president of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU).

Helmick, here Thursday to help in the announcement of an expanded Masters program for athletic participation by young and old, said he was trying to be practical about the boycott issue.

"If the boycott is effective ... who would be willing to bid on the games again?" Helmick asked. "Where would a television network ever be able to find an insurer to insure the Olympic Games again?"

Helmick was joined by Bill Toomey, a gold medal winner in the 1968 Olympics, in questioning the feasibility as well as the morality of President Carter's and Congress' request that American athletes boycott the summer games in Moscow.

The President has called for the boycott unless the Soviet Union withdraws its troops from Afghanistan. He has suggested as an alternative to switch the Games from Moscow.

"This is a very safe political issue," said Helmick. "No politician has anything to lose by jumping on the bandwagon."

Helmick said what disturbed him was that the entire Olympic movement could be disrupted. He said also that if other countries did not join the proposed U.S. boycott, this country would suffer a tremendous loss in world propaganda and public opinion.

Helmick termed the idea of switching the games as incredibly naive, or as an attempt to fool the American public. He said the site could not be changed without several years' preparation.

Toomey, a one-time decathlon performer, said the nation basically was faced with a problem that was unanswerable. He said, however, a boycott would be a tremendous tragedy for the athletes.

"If I was an athlete today I would be throwing rocks, making a lot of noise, and being very upset," Toomey said. "What is being done to the athlete is incredible."

Toomey said he felt that the Olympic movement should be above governments.

Wells Retains Optimism Despite Losing Record

By JIM FERGLSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

No one is about to charge Craig Wells with pessimism in the first degree. He wouldn't stand for it.

"I'm not going to start sounding like an 0-3 coach, no way," stressed Wells. "We've got a lot of things going for us here (at Lubbock High). And I'm optimistic that we can turn things around."

Prior to the start of the current high school basketball season, Wells said one of the primary goals for the Westerners was "to be competitive in the district."

After three conference outings, the Westerners have yet to chalk up that elusive loop victory. But LHS isn't the only district team without a win. Plainview — LHS' opponent tonight — also stands 0-3.

"There is a pride factor for both teams," continued Wells. "We're both down and we both need to get something going (before the start of the second-half race). That's important."

Monterey, which takes the night off, has already clinched the first-half crown outright. So tonight's District 4-AAAA contests are, in all reality, meaningless.

In one other contest, Coronado (2-1) travels to Hereford (2-1) for a 7:30 p.m. contest that will decide second-place.

In girls' action, Lubbock entertains Plainview and Coronado visits Hereford. Both games are set for 6 p.m. starts. Monterey, the first-half winner, will sit this one out with the MHS boys.

Plainview had a chance to pull off the upset of the first-half Tuesday when it managed to lead Monterey by two points with only five seconds remaining. However, Greg Thomasson hit a 40-foot shot at the buzzer, forcing the game into overtime. During the three-minute extra period, Monterey outscored Plainview 15-4 and went on to win 64-53.

Through the first half, Plainview has had more close encounters than Richard Dreyfuss. The Bulldogs, led by center Kenneth Storey, opened the district schedule by losing to Hereford 52-48. Three nights later, Coronado pulled the rug out from under PHS with a 69-68 decision.

"They haven't been able to put it together, yet," noted Wells. "I know they certainly have the talent. I still believe they are going to be a factor (during the second half)."

Storey is the third leading scorer in the conference with a 16.1 average. On top of that, the 6-4 center leads all rebounders in the district with an 11.0 per game mark. Joining Storey are Kenneth Jordan (14.3 ppg) and Ernest Mosley (13.9 ppg). The trio ranks, one, two and three, respectively, on the district's scoring list.

Coronado head coach Barry Arnwine believes the Mustangs "must" whip Hereford tonight.

"We've got to keep our momentum going," said Arnwine. "And to do that we must win and have a good showing on the road."

Both teams are coming off wins over Lubbock High. Coronado defeated the Westerners last Tuesday 62-46. Hereford, which took Tuesday evening off, handed the Westerners to a tune of 60-45 last Friday.

For Arnwine, tonight's visit to Hereford is a homecoming, of sorts. The CHS head man left Hereford in 1977 after guiding the Herd to a District 4-AAAA championship and accepted a job at Amarillo High. After a year at AHS, Arnwine moved to Coronado.

"There aren't any hard feelings anymore," said Arnwine. "We got over that years ago. Now, I hate them and they hate me."

Only a joke, fans, only a joke.

KING IN TROUBLE
TULSA, Okla. (AP) — University of Tulsa officials have denied a Tulsa television station's report that they have decided not to renew basketball coach Jim King's contract after the current season.

KTUL-TV sportscaster Chris Lincoln aired the report Thursday evening.

Star Receivers Headline NFL Free-Agents

NEW YORK (AP) — Wide receiver Harold Carmichael of the Philadelphia Eagles and the Atlanta pass catching duo of Wallace Francis and Alfred Jenkins were among the approximately 140 National Football League players who became free agents today.

Feb. 1 is the deadline for clubs to make qualifying offers to players with expired contracts. Those offers mean a player's original club retains the right to match the offer of one of its free agents might get from another team.

If the offer is matched by his original club, the player stays with that team. If the offer is not matched, he moves, and the acquiring team compensates the losing team with draft choices.

The number of choices, and their location in the draft, is regulated by the player's new salary.

The player reports offers back to his old club by April 15 and the old team decides within seven days whether to match the offer and retain the player or let him go for the compensation.

Francis received 74 passes for 1,013 yards and eight touchdowns in 1979. Jenkins contributed 50 receptions for 858 yards and three scores, while Carmichael caught 52 for 872 yards and 11 touchdowns.

Among the others are multi-talented running back Preston Pearson of Dallas; Miami quarterback Don Strock, guard Larry Little and defensive back Tim Foley; Denver placekicker Jim Turner; running back Eric Torkelson and tackle Tim Stokes, both of Green Bay; Seattle offensive tackle Nick Bebout and defensive end Bill Gregory; and wide receiver Isaac Curtis, linebacker Tom Ruud and defensive end Mack Mitchell of Cincinnati.

Few of the players, however, are expected to move to other teams.

Unlike baseball, where veteran free agents almost always sign with rival clubs, football's free agents have for the most part remained with their original teams. The reason for that is the compensation and right of first refusal clause.

Bum Confirms Reports

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite denials by Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini, Oiler coach Bum Phillips says the nine-year veteran had asked to be traded if certain requests could not be fulfilled by the Oilers.

Pastorini was quoted in a copyright story in the Houston Chronicle as saying "I love it here but I want out." Pastorini later denied a request to be traded.

Oiler owner Bud Adams also issued a statement saying Pastorini had assured Oiler management that he did not want to be traded and had not requested to be traded.

Phillips, visiting in the Port Arthur area Wednesday, was contacted by Port Arthur News sports editor Bob West. Phillips confirmed to West that Pastorini had asked to be traded.

Phillips and Pastorini were discussing the Oiler quarterback's plan to start drag racing in the off-season and Phillips' opposition to such activity. At one point in the conversation, Phillips told West Pastorini said "I trade me."

Phillips returned to his office Thursday but could not be reached for comment. A secretary said Phillips had left the city until Tuesday.

LCCHS Cagers Start Quickly

ABILENE (Special-Lubbock Christian High School) took a couple of easy wins Thursday in the first round of the Christian Schools Tournament held here in Moody Coliseum on the Abilene Christian University campus.

The Eagle boys jumped to a 52-22 lead at the end of the first half before knocking off Fort Worth Christian 91-67 in the first round.

The girls didn't have it quite that easy, but still beat Fort Worth Christian by plenty, 57-35.

Shawn Williams paced the boys with 28 points, 26 coming in the first half. Shawn Bove added 22 more and Billy McConnell chipped in 10.

Kerry Robertson paced FWCHS with 15 and Rick Stelmach pumped in 10 more.

reassigned within the system.

But Ragus would not disclose the names of the candidates.

"I can't do a thing like that," said Ragus. "It's against our policy."

According to Avalanche-Journal sources, top candidates for the position include Kenneth Wallace, an assistant coach at Coronado, David Graham, a former Dunbar assistant, Willie Adams, an assistant at Odessa, Ector, and Canyon assistant Jeff Boarden.

Wallace, an assistant at Coronado for the past five years, was an all-state quarterback at Estacado High School in 1969 and an all-Southwest conference defensive back during his collegiate days at Texas Tech.

Graham, a longtime assistant coach in the Lubbock system (three years under Jefferson and three more prior to that at Lubbock High) was out of coaching last year. He worked as an English teacher at Alderson Junior High.

Adams, a two-year NFL veteran with the Washington Redskins, once played for Ragus at Corpus Christi King High School.

Beavers, Buckeyes Run Into Basketball Buzzsaws

By The Associated Press

This may be an off-year for the UCLA Bruins, but they still pack a pretty good punch.

They proved that by flooring second-ranked Oregon State 93-67 Thursday night. "If we play like this, we can play with anybody," said UCLA coach Larry Brown, whose Bruins are off to a relatively slow start this season with a mediocre 11-7 record, including 6-4 in the Pacific-10 Conference and have dropped completely out of their accustomed place in the Top Twenty.

Mike Sanders had a team-high 19 points for the Bruins, who led the Beavers by as much as 26 points at one stage.

"Our pressure defense was the key," said UCLA's Kiki Vandeweghe. "It kept building and building and forced them into errors."

The Beavers were one of three Top Twenty teams upset Thursday night, as sixth-ranked Ohio State lost to Michigan State 74-54 and No. 15 Weber State dropped a 51-45 decision to Idaho.

Jay Vincent scored a game-high 21 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead the Spartans to their runaway Big Ten victory over the Buckeyes. Ohio State guard Kelvin Ransey finished with only six points, ending a streak of 80 games in which he had scored in double figures.

"I can't think of one Buckeye that played well," said Ohio State coach Eldon Miller. "Michigan State beat us any way you could get beat."

Don Newman scored 17 points to lead Idaho past Weber State, breaking the Wildcats' 18-game winning streak. The defeat was only the second of the season in 20 games for Weber State.

Elsewhere in college basketball: No. 7 Louisville defeated Tulane 64-60; No. 16 Clemson routed Georgia Tech 76-52; No. 17 Purdue stopped Iowa 70-56; No. 18 Indiana turned back Illinois 60-54 and No. 19 Brigham Young beat Texas-El Paso 89-81.

Darrell Griffith led a balanced attack with 17 points as Louisville defeated Tulane. The victory was the 17th in 19 games for the Cardinals and their sixth without a defeat in the Metro Conference.

Billy Williams scored 22 points to lead Clemson over Georgia Tech. The 24-point margin was the worst defeat of the season for the Yellow Jackets, yet to win an Atlantic Coast Conference game in 10 tries in their first season in the league.

Joe Barry Carroll scored 17 points and Keith Edmonson added 16 to lead Purdue over Iowa. The Boilermakers broke the game open in the final five minutes after taking the lead for good, 43-42.

Butch Carter scored 17 points to lead Indiana over Illinois. The Hoosiers trailed by five points with about eight minutes left before holding the Illini scoreless for a seven-minute period.

Smith's Miss Helps Issel Sleep Soundly

By The Associated Press

Nobody's perfect at the foul line — not even Robert Smith.

Smith, who once led the country in foul shooting as a collegian and has a season average of a nifty 89 per cent in the National Basketball Association this year, had a chance to perform his speciality for the New Jersey Nets Thursday night.

But the usually unerring Smith missed the second of two free throws with no time left on the clock, and it cost the Nets a 127-126 loss to the Denver Nuggets.

"I just knew we were going into overtime," said Denver's Dan Issel, well aware of Smith's foul-shooting prowess.

But after watching the potential tying shot fall off the rim, Issel noted: "I felt badly that Robert Smith was the guy who missed it, because he was a teammate of mine for nearly two seasons."

Issel, by the way, had a powerhouse game for the Nuggets with 47 points. He took charge of the offense in the absence of two Denver stars, David Thompson and George McGinnis.

"I'll have no trouble sleeping to-night," said Issel. "I played 40, 40 and 41 minutes the last three nights."

In addition to Issel's monster point total, John Roche contributed 24 points for the Nuggets. John Williamson scored 28 points for New Jersey before fouling out with 1:39 remaining in the game.

Sonics 105, Bucks 101

Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson scored 21 points each as Seattle snapped a three-game losing streak by beating Milwaukee. Johnson locked up the victory by hitting two free throws with two seconds remaining.

Hawks 111, Warriors 107

John Drew's layup with 17 seconds left in overtime gave Atlanta a tight victory over Golden State. Purvis Short took a shot for the Warriors with four seconds left, but missed, and Charlie Criss added two free throws for Atlanta for the final margin.

"Their offensive rebounding hurt us," said Warriors' coach Al Attles. "We had the ball and the score tied and a chance to win. It went in and out. But I can't be too upset with this game. I'm generally very pleased with the way we played."

Lakers 107, Bulls 97

Jamaal Wilkes scored 28 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 27 to lead Los Angeles over Chicago. Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 14 points and handed out nine assists as the Lakers won for the ninth time in 11 games. The Bulls dropped their fourth straight.

Celtics 119, Bullets 103

Larry Bird broke open a tight game in the third quarter by scoring five points and dishing off two assists in a two-minute span as Boston scored 11 straight points and pulled away from Washington.

Bird wound up with 24 points and 13 rebounds to spark the Celtics to their fourth straight victory and their third in three nights.

76ers 110, Rockets 105

Bobby Jones scored 15 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter to lead Philadelphia past Houston. The Rockets, who have lost their last three games, had battled back from a 56-52 halftime deficit to take a 85-79 lead at the end of the third quarter.

Knicks 112, Pacers 102

Ray Williams scored 25 points, including six of the 11 in a spurt that put New York ahead for good, as the Knicks defeated Indiana. The Knicks trailed 56-50 at the half but went ahead by 11, 85-74 at the end of the third period.

Blazers 94, Kings 93

Ron Brewer scored 20 points and contributed a key defensive play to lead Portland over Kansas City.

Miss Jaeger Continues String Of Net Upsets

SEATTLE (AP) — Another highly ranked women's professional tennis player has been toppled by 14-year-old Andrea Jaeger.

The Lincolnshire, Ill., high school freshman breezed past fifth-seeded Sue Barker of England 6-1, 6-3, Thursday to reach the semifinals of a $150,000 women's professional tennis tournament.

The match lasted only an hour, and followed Miss Jaeger's victories earlier this week over third-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia and tour veteran Rosie Casals.

"I had to hit the ball back consistently to beat her (Barker)," said Miss Jaeger, who is playing in only her second professional tournament. "She made too many mistakes. I moved her wide on her backhand and then hit to her forehand."

"I'm glad I've gotten this far in the tournament. I didn't think I would get this high," Miss Jaeger said.

Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd won handily Thursday over Terry Holladay 6-2, 6-2 to conclude the second round of singles play.

"I saw Andrea Jaeger play for the first time tonight," Mrs. Lloyd said. "I was in awe. I didn't realize just how good she was. If I had some advice to give Andrea, I would tell her to enjoy tennis and not to overdo it. I don't think she should play a lot of tournaments."

In earlier play Thursday, it was Virginia Ruzici of Romania over Sherry Acker 6-2, 7-5, and eighth-seeded Sylvia Hanika of West Germany over Betsy Nagelsen 6-3, 6-3.

In doubles action, former Wimbledon champion and fourth-seeded Virginia Wade of England and sixth-seeded Greer Stevens of South Africa slipped past Tanya Harford and Bettina Bunge 7-6, 6-3.

Paul Wiggins May Be Stanford Pick

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Former Kansas City Chiefs' head coach Paul Wiggins reportedly has been named head football coach at Stanford University, where he was once an All-American.

Wiggins, 45, an assistant coach with the New Orleans Saints of the National Football League, will replace Rod Dowhower, the Peninsula Times Tribune said Thursday. Dowhower resigned Jan. 23 to become offensive coordinator for the NFL Denver Broncos.

University officials refused to confirm or deny the story, and Wiggins was unavailable for comment Thursday. He returned to his New Orleans home Wednesday after a two-hour interview with Stanford officials.

Wiggins, who has a reputation as a defensive specialist, said earlier this week that if hired he would immediately seek an offensive-minded assistant, the newspaper said.

Streaking Vicki Lee Fuels Raider Women

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
 SAN ANGELO — Texas Tech assistant basketball coach Rob Evans covers a lot of ground in hopes of stumbling onto a standout eager for the Red Raiders. But one of Evans' most impressive "finds" won't ever play for Gerald Myers' cagers.

But she's doing plenty to boost the record of Gay Benson's women's team at Tech.

During a recruiting trip to New Mexico last year, Evans discovered a phenomenal athlete in Alamogordo's Vicki Lee. He relayed the information to Mrs. Benson and the rest is — as they say — history.

Miss Lee earned a starting spot with the Raider women midway through December and since she's been in the lineup Tech has won nine of 10 games. The tiny (5-4½) but lightning-quick guard already has 36 steals to her credit and is averaging 9.4 points a game.

VICKI LEE

She also relies on a left-handed jumper that can be deadly from as far away as 25 feet out and has an uncanny courage to drive the lane for a lay-up or dish out an assist with the big girls.

"I used to be scared to go in there for rebounds," she admitted. "I almost got knocked out once, but it doesn't really bother me anymore. I just don't stay in there long enough to get hurt."

Success didn't come immediately for Miss Lee when she came to Tech.

"We had more depth at the guard position than anywhere else," said Mrs. Benson. "So Vicki had to wait her turn. But we knew that Vicki could do the job."

"Some girls get frustrated," added the coach, "but keeping her on the bench simply made her want to play that much more."

Miss Lee has scored in double figures in eight of her 10 contests as a starter and garnered most-valuable player honors at the Tech Invitational by scoring 36 points in two games.

"If I know I can get away with it, I'm going to take the shot or drive to make the other player look bad," she said. "That's my job. Guards have to read the defense and pick the zone apart."

Miss Lee and her Raider teammates have done a credible job on both counts. Currently, they own a 16-6 record and are coming off an historic 75-72 win over Wayland Baptist Monday night in the Coliseum — where the team owns a 10-0 record.

"I could have gone to a school like Wayland Baptist, or maybe Texas, but I would have sat on the bench for the first couple of years. I thought my chances of playing would be better here," said Miss Lee.

"But I figured Tech would play a slow deliberate type of game using the 30 second clock to its limit."

With Miss Lee in the lineup, that is impossible. She was clocked at 4.7 in the 40-yard dash earlier this year and was a standout trackster in high school.

Miss Lee is a flashy player, a natural showman, but she is not at all selfish.

"I'd say Gwen McCray and Pam Stone are the keys to our team," said Miss Lee. "Everybody looks to them to lead us. And playing beside Louise (Davis) is great. I've learned a lot from playing with her."

Mrs. Benson explained that Miss Lee just complements the rest of her young players' abilities and needs. (Misses McCray, Stone and Lee are all freshmen.)

"You don't always put your best five out on the court," explained the coach. "Rather you just find a combination that can work together. Vicki just fits in well with the rest of the players and makes them look good."

Miss Lee has also made herself look pretty fair also.

ASU Minority Hiring Practices Called To Question

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Arizona State University Black Caucus has accused university officials of violating affirmative-action guidelines in the hiring of athletic director Joe Kearney, football coach Darryl Rogers and six assistants as a package deal.

The caucus' call for an investigation into the hiring was endorsed by the board of directors of the ASU Faculty Association.

The Arizona Republic said today in a copyrighted story that the caucus charged that some qualified candidates were ignored, including Gale Sayers, athletic director at Southern Illinois University, who applied for the same post at ASU. Sayers, a black, is a former running back for the Chicago Bears.

The Republic said John Morris, an ASU law professor and counsel for the Black Caucus, wrote ASU president John Schwada last week, saying his investigation confirmed violations of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Morris also charged that the assistant athletic director's post, advertised last week, already was promised, which is an offer violation.

Cecil Coleman, former athletic director at the University of Illinois, has been mentioned as the leading contender for the post.

"I suggest you talk to members of the committee who handled the matter. That is the appropriate group," Schwada said when asked about the allegations.

Sue Cummins, chairman of the Intercollegiate Athletic Board, which had the responsibility of hiring the athletic director and coaches, was not available for comment.

Morris said ASU did not meet advertising requirements as specified in affirmative-action guidelines in hiring the athletic director and football coach, and didn't advertise at all before hiring six assistants from Rogers' staff at Michigan State.

Morris said Schwada told him the advertising requirements had been waived because an emergency situation existed.

"I asked him what the emergency was," Morris said. "He said he had been informed that Bob Owens and the rest of his staff weren't doing anything; they weren't recruiting, and we would have a very bad season coming up if something wasn't done right away to get a coach."

Owens, who was named Oct. 13 to succeed fired Coach Frank Kush, told the Republic his staff was recruiting.

Kearney was hired from Michigan State to replace Fred Miller, who was fired three weeks ago.

Morris said his investigation showed the decision to hire Kearney, Rogers and the six assistants was made Jan. 13, two days before the announcement of Kearney's hiring, four days before the announcement of Rogers' hiring and six days before the announcement of the assistants.

Morris told the Republic Schwada had originally recommended that Dan Devine, Notre Dame football coach, be hired. Morris said he believes Schwada then intended to have Devine promoted from within as athletic director and thus fill both jobs.

But Morris said Devine was rejected by the selection committee because it was highly publicized that Devine had met in December with several influential members of the Sun Angels Foundation, ASU's wealthiest athletic booster group.

Morris told the Republic that after Sayers applied for the post, he was not contacted by the selection committee.

"People on the committee were impressed with Sayers, but they wouldn't talk with him," Morris said.

Morris said he may ask the Department of Labor and Department of Health, Education and Welfare to investigate the matter.

"This may indicate a pattern of discrimination here at the university involving high-level positions," Morris said. "I don't like to go around lambasting the university, but I'm interested in knowing the truth."

"The law is for everybody. You don't use it just when it's convenient to use it. There are no shortcuts," Morris said.

Nicklaus, Watson Rank Among Crosby Leaders

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus had his game back in gear. Tom Watson had it in position and Tom Kite and Jerry Pate had a share of the lead.

"Nice and encouraging," Nicklaus said after shooting a 69 in the first round of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Thursday, the first round of an attempted comeback from the most dismal year of his spectacular career.

"Considering it's my first competitive round in quite a while (since last August), I'm very happy with it."

Watson, Player of the Year for the past three seasons and heir to Nicklaus' long-time role as golf's dominant force, shot a 68.

"The course probably played easier than I've ever seen it," Watson said.

"You have to shoot under par at Cypress Point (where he and Nicklaus played). Then, if you can shoot 74 or better at Spyglass, you have a chance to win the golf tournament."

Pate and Kite had 66s and David Edwards shot a 67, all at Cypress Point.

But Kite and Watson pointed to PGA champion David Graham as the actual tournament leader.

He had a 68 at Spyglass Hill, by far the more difficult of the three courses. The pros and their amateur partners — many of them show business celebrities — play one round on each layout before the field is cut for the final round at Pebble Beach.

"That's like a 64 at Cypress Point," Watson said of Graham's effort.

"I'd have to say he's the real leader of the golf tournament," Kite said.

Also with 68s were John Mahaffey and Jim Nelford, both of whom played at Pebble Beach, and Watson and Gene Littler, both at Cypress.

Arnold Palmer also played at Cypress and shot a 75. His amateur partner, former President Gerald Ford, helped the two-man team score by six shots.

Kite played his back side in 30, including birdies on three of the last four holes.

"You just hope to play those holes even par," said Kite, who ranks as one of the game's more consistent performers.

"Making three birdies is like beating the field maybe 4-5 shots. Those last four holes just made my whole round."

Watson, a winner last week, was one of the few men in the field to escape without a bogey. He was more impressed, however, with his 25-foot birdie on No. 16, a 233-yard par 3 over water and one of the more feared holes in the nation.

"That's the happiest round I ever had at Cypress," Watson said. "It's the first time I've ever birdied No. 16."

Nicklaus, playing with the authority that made him the greatest performer the game has known, birdied five times in one stretch of six holes, drifted back to two under par, then closed with a 30-foot birdie putt.

"I had a good opportunity to shoot a very low score, but let it get away," he said. "Overall, though, I played very well."

Morgan Eager To Help Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Joe Morgan says if he stays healthy, he can be a better second baseman than when he won five Golden Gloves awards and the Houston Astros, with their pitching staff, are capable of winning the National League pennant.

That was the picture Morgan painted Thursday after he had signed a one-year contract with the Astros, for an estimated $225,000 plus various incentives.

"If pitching is 80 per cent of the game as some people say, then the Astros have a good chance," the 36-year-old eight-time All-Star said.

The Astros earlier signed Nolan Ryan to a $1 million per year contract.

Morgan, suffering through frustrating injuries the past three years, played out his contract with the Cincinnati Reds last season and went on the free agent market.

Morgan said he still had a desire to play baseball and felt he could contribute to the Astros' success.

"I'm probably a better second baseman now than when the guy won those five Golden Gloves," Morgan said. "I've got a stronger arm and I know more about the game."

After leading the Reds to consecutive World Series championships in 1975 and 1976, Morgan's batting average dwindled but he blamed much of the problem on injuries.

"In 1978 I had a pulled stomach muscle that restricted my pivot and I really shouldn't have been playing," Morgan said. "But Sparky Anderson (then Reds manager) and I were close friends and he said half a Joe Morgan was better than anything else he could put out there."

Morgan went through a series of ankle, hand and hip injuries last season with the Reds, when he batted 250 and drove in 32 runs.

"This club was a good ball club before Joe Morgan came here and before Nolan Ryan came," Morgan said. "They knew how to win last year."

Morgan said Houston's pitching staff made the Astros solid contenders.

"I would obviously take the Astros' pitching staff over any other in the league," Morgan said. "Cincinnati was still a good ball club when Pete Rose left and they'll be a good one when Joe Morgan leaves. But with our pitching staff, I think we have the edge."

Young Netters Make Inroads

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — John Sadri and Johan Kriek, a pair of rising young stars who appear ready to make their mark on the pro tennis circuit, have advanced to the quarterfinals of the $175,000 Richmond Tennis Classic at the expense of two seeded players.

Kriek, from South Africa, ousted seventh-seeded Brian Gottfried and No. 8 seed Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina fell to Sadri in Thursday's second round action.

Kriek parlayed speed and timely rallies for a 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 victory over Gottfried.

Sadri, a semifinalist in last week's U.S. Pro Indoor tournament in Philadelphia, had little trouble beating Clerc 6-4, 7-5. Sadri had 10 service aces.

In other second-round matches, top-seeded John McEnroe breezed by Hank Pfister 6-1, 6-2 in less than an hour. No. 2 seed Roscoe Tanner defeated Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland 6-3, 6-4 and third-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina eliminated Ilie Nastase of Romania 7-6, 6-4.

Kriek, one of the quickest players in pro tennis, staged several remarkable comebacks in his victory over Gottfried.

Kriek was fined $450 for two separate incidents in the match. He smashed a ball deep into the seats, which is an automatic $200 fine, and then was fined $250 for making an obscene gesture at tournament director Lou Einwick.

Today's quarterfinals match McEnroe against sixth-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland. Tanner against Bill Scanlon, Vilas against Sadri and Kriek against Victor Amaya.

The tournament ends Sunday with the successor to Bjorn Borg, who is not participating this year, earning $30,200.

U.S. Turns Attention From Iran To Soviet Troops

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF
WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. military options in the Middle East crisis have turned more in the last several weeks to stopping Soviet troops from intervening in Iran or Pakistan than on pressuring Iran for release of the hostages.

It was the possibility of further Soviet military advances that caused top administration officials last week to sound the alarm.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown, on his return from China, told a news conference the administration would take any Soviet move into Iran or Pakistan border very seriously.

Then, over the weekend, at least one B-52 strategic bomber equipped with special infrared sensors and low-light television cameras flew from Guam to the Arabian Sea to exercise with the three U.S. aircraft carrier task forces there.

The round-trip journey of over 12,000 miles required periodic aerial refueling and augmented flight crews.

Since a B-52 flies at about 600 miles an hour, a single "sortie" would require the crew to be in the air for nearly 24 hours.

The implication left by the Pentagon's terse announcement this week was that if a B-52 could fly to the Indian Ocean area for sea surveillance, it could also carry bombs.

During the Vietnam war, the United States used Guam-based B-52s to bomb Vietnam and Cambodia. Those were 10,000-mile round-trip flights.

Military experts say the president could call on B-52s to bomb Soviet staging centers in Afghanistan should the Russians go on the offensive.

The heavy bombers (which would have been subject to limitations under the ill-fated SALT II treaty) could also bomb advancing troop columns, according to experts.

The United States, presumably, would seek Iranian assent in advance before ordering strikes against Soviet forces intervening in Iran.

Intelligence experts say for the mo-

Iran Crisis Changed President

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The phone rang before dawn Nov. 4 at Camp David. It jolted Jimmy Carter awake with the information that militant Iranians were holding 60 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

As is his wont, the president's immediate response was restraint.

A short time later, he called Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser. Then he talked with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

And, as planned, he stayed on at Camp David another day.

But that event — the seizing of American hostages and their internment without seeming end — was the watershed of the Carter presidency.

That Sunday morning changed Carter profoundly — his policy toward Iran, his policy toward the Soviet Union, his view of worldwide communism.

And it may well have been the moment his faltering re-election hopes were salvaged.

But to go back a few months Carter had worked closely with the now-deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi during the first three years of his presidency.

They stood together on the south grounds of the White House in November 1977. The shah wiped away tears streaming down his cheeks, tears caused by police gassing dissident Iranian youths demonstrating nearby.

With the loud, often ugly chants of the demonstrators ringing in his ears, Carter stood — unsmiling, unblinking.

They spent New Year's Eve, 1978, together in the shah's Niavaran Palace, and amid the feasting and dancing, Carter called him a close friend and great leader.

"The shah is very deeply concerned about human rights," Carter told reporters a short time later. "We've seen in Iran the opening up of the rights of women, the welcoming of disparate religious and racial groups to Iran."

But the shah fell.

Avatollah Ruhollah Khomeini came to power, but Iran seemed to fade behind the glow of Carter's other foreign policy triumphs in the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty last spring, or Pope John Paul II's visit last autumn.

Then came the early Sunday morning call to Camp David, and Carter's world changed.

He set out with his usual restraint and moderation — typical of the way he had responded when a U.S. helicopter was shot down over North Korea in 1977, or when Soviet combat troops were discovered in Cuba last summer.

ment the mass of Soviet troops in Afghanistan do not appear poised to move against Iran or Pakistan.

Some Soviet patrols, however, have moved within a few miles of the Iranian borders in pursuit of Moslem rebels.

Another military move which the administration may now be contemplating would involve stationing U.S. Air Force elements in Pakistan.

Such an option has the disadvantage that it cannot be ordered until the United States and Pakistan reach prior agreement.

Pakistan has suggested converting its 1959 pact with the United States into a formal security treaty.

But the White House has been unenthusiastic.

Pre-positioning Marines and supplies on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia is a theoretical option. But its utility is doubtful.

The U.S. naval facility on the British-owned island is 1,000 miles south of the tip of India and 2,000 miles from the Persian Gulf.

In recent weeks, rumors have circulated here the United States might seek to close off the Persian Gulf as a means of pressuring Iran to release the 43 U.S. hostages.

Such a move appears less likely now because of the Soviet threat from Afghanistan.

— A blockade of the narrow Straits of Hormuz, entrance to the Persian Gulf.

— Mining Iranian ports.

Both have drawbacks.

The United States currently has 25 ships in the Indian Ocean-Arabian Sea area, with the USS Kitty Hawk and five other ships due to leave shortly.

That is a small number of vessels to mount a total blockade or "quarantine."

During the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, the United States had to draw on many ships of the Atlantic fleet to mount the quarantine around Cuba.

A blockade of the Persian Gulf might cause the Kremlin to label the action "illegal" and then proceed to test it.

That would quickly lead to superpower confrontation.

"I'm not sure we'd want to get on the road which leads to the brink of something we don't want," said one Navy officer.

Mining harbors could be accomplished quickly by minelaying aircraft.

But the drawback of mines, experts say, is removing them when the crisis is over.

Mines can be programmed to deactivate after a certain number of days. At least, theoretically.

"You just can't be 100 percent sure," says one old Vietnam hand.

Grocery Prices Increase Slightly In January

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
Associated Press Writer

A drop in the price of eggs and fewer increases for beef and pork helped hold the overall increase in grocery prices in January to 0.7 percent, a sharp improvement from the 2.6 percent price surge in December, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey.

Frozen orange juice concentrate also was down in price at many of the supermarkets in the survey. This could mark the start of further citrus-product price reductions nationwide, said Paul Westcott, an economist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"After two years of killing freezes, there's quite a large citrus crop, especially the oranges, being harvested now," he said. "That should show up in concentrate prices."

The January increase in the average value of AP's marketbasket of 14 grocery items was the smallest in four months. Still, the overall price of the marketbasket of goods was more than 7 percent higher than in January 1979, reflecting the inflation of the intervening months.

The survey has been taken in supermarkets in 13 cities every month since March 1, 1973. Prices initially were checked for 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, but one — chocolate chip cookies — was dropped from the list at the end of November 1977 because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The January analysis showed that the marketbasket bill rose an average of 2.5 percent in supermarkets in eight cities and fell an average of 2.75 percent in four others. In a Chicago supermarket, the total price of the 12 available items rose only a penny, not even a tenth of a percentage point over December.

In the previous month, overall prices had gone up an average of 3.2 percent in 11 cities and down about one percentage point in two.

Egg prices do not usually decline at grocery stores in January, Westcott said. But he added that they have been going down since late December on New York commodity markets, possibly reflecting a fall-off in demand at the end of the holiday baking season.

While egg prices declined an average of 11.2 percent in the survey cities in January and orange concentrate prices began edging down, the costs of detergent, the price of chopped chuck rose in four and center-cut pork chops in three. In December, chuck prices had risen in eight stores, and pork chop prices in nine.

The Agriculture Department is predicting that food prices will rise between 7 percent and 11 percent this year, compared with the 11 percent seen in official Agriculture statistics last year.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed fewer increases and more decreases in January than in December. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

	Dec.	Jan.
Up	36.3	30.2
Down	13.2	22.0
Unchanged	46.7	44.5
Unavailable	3.8	3.3

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of the percentage each item represents in a family's actual grocery outlay.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available on March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the overall total.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The Agriculture Department's marketbasket, issued each month, is based on a complex set of statistics. It is used to keep track of changes in the proportion of the food dollar received by the farmer, wholesaler and retailer and does not correspond to actual family spending.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M.; Atlanta; Boston; Chicago; Dallas; Detroit; Los Angeles; Miami; New York; Philadelphia; Providence, R.I.; Salt Lake City; and Seattle.

Following is a city-by-city breakdown of what happened to prices from Jan. 1 to Feb. 1:

ALBUQUERQUE: The marketbasket bill rose from $18.67 to $19.50, for a 4.4 percent increase. The prices of chopped chuck, pork chops, coffee, butter, peanut butter, detergent, frankfurters and sugar rose; the prices of eggs and fabric softener fell. Prices of the other four items were unchanged.

ATLANTA: The marketbasket total increased 1.3 percent from $19.05 to $19.29. Prices of coffee, detergent and sugar increased, while the consumer cost of butter, eggs and frankfurters decreased. The prices of the remaining eight items were unchanged.

BOSTON: The price of the marketbasket of goods fell 2.3 percent from $18.67 to $18.24. Peanut butter and milk prices rose; orange juice, butter, eggs, detergent and tomato sauce prices fell. There was no change in prices of seven other items.

CHICAGO: The marketbasket bill for 12 available items rose a penny, from $15.10 to $15.11. Increases in the prices of frankfurters and sugar were almost offset by a decline in the price of eggs. There was no change in the prices of nine other items. Figures on fabric softener and coffee were not available.

DALLAS: The bill went from $18.98 to $19.23, an increase of 1.3 percent. Prices went up for chopped chuck, paper towels, butter, detergent, milk, frankfurters and sugar, but down for pork chops, orange juice and eggs. There was no change in the four other items.

DETROIT: The prices of the 12 available items rose 7.2 percent from $16.48 to $17.67. Prices of chopped chuck, coffee, paper towels, detergent, milk, frankfurters and sugar increased. Prices of orange juice, eggs and tomato sauce fell. Pork chops and butter were unchanged. Peanut butter and fabric softener were not available for price comparison.

LOS ANGELES: The marketbasket total increased 1.6 percent from $17.47 to $17.75. Prices were up for pork chops, coffee, eggs, milk and frankfurters; down for sugar; and unchanged for the remaining eight items.

MIAMI: The price of the marketbasket fell 0.7 percent from $18.44 a month ago to $18.32. The prices of pork chops, frankfurters and sugar rose, but the prices of chopped chuck, eggs, detergent and milk declined. Prices of the other seven items were unchanged.

NEW YORK: The total of the 13 available items was $22.75, up 0.2 percent from last month's $22.71. The rise in the cost of detergent was almost offset by declines in the prices of eggs and tomato sauce. Prices of 10 other items were unchanged. Fabric softener was not available.

PHILADELPHIA: The bill rose 2.2 percent from $19.35 to $19.77. Prices of butter, detergent, tomato sauce, frankfurters and sugar increased; prices of paper towels, eggs and fabric softener decreased. The prices of the remaining six items were unchanged.

PROVIDENCE: The marketbasket total fell 5.6 percent from $18.54 to $17.51. Increases in the prices of butter and detergent were more than offset by decreases in the prices of chopped chuck, pork chops, orange juice, coffee and frankfurters. Chopped chuck and pork chop prices were substantially below those of December, although there was no indication at the meat counter that a "special" was under way. Prices of the other seven items were unchanged in January.

SALT LAKE CITY: The prices of the 13 items available rose 1.8 percent in January from $15.98 to $16.26. Increases were reported for orange juice, paper towels, peanut butter, detergent, milk and sugar. Decreases were found in egg, tomato sauce and frankfurter prices. There was no change for chopped chuck, coffee, butter and fabric softener. Pork chops were unavailable for pricing.

SEATTLE: The marketbasket total fell 2.4 percent from $18 to $17.56. Increases in the prices of chopped chuck, fabric softener, tomato sauce and milk were more than offset by declines in orange juice, coffee, butter, eggs and frankfurters. Prices of the remaining five items were unchanged.

Longshoremen Told To Load Vessels

By The Associated Press
A federal judge in Florida today told longshoremen to load three ships bound for the Soviet Union with phosphoric acid, saying they could not boycott the work even though their sentiments were "understandable and admirable."

U.S. District Judge Susan Black issued a preliminary injunction in Jacksonville, ordering workers to load the three Norwegian vessels, which have been idled in Jacksonville harbor for two weeks.

Members of the International Longshoremen's Association are refusing to handle cargo destined for the Soviet Union because of the Russian military intervention in Afghanistan.

There was no immediate indication if the dockworkers of Local 1408 would comply with the judge's order, which was limited to the three ships. She said earlier the ruling would cover only the three because "this is a situation that could change day by day, hour by hour."

"The underlying dispute in this case is clearly political," the judge said in her ruling. "In fact, other than the work stoppage, there appears to be no dispute at all between plaintiffs and defendants. Defendants' underlying objections are not to the policies of their employer, but to the political policies of a foreign nation."

"Though both understandable and admirable, those objections do not involve or grow out of any labor dispute," she said, granting the injunction.

Cotton Men Urge Equitable Tax Laws

LCC Livestock Judges In High Finish

Lubbock Christian College's livestock judging team started the new year on a high note finishing third in the Arizona National Contest at Phoenix last month. LCC compiled 3,467 points behind second place Chico (Calif.) State College with 3,474 and top ranking Fresno (Calif.) State College with 3,479 points. The team was first overall in both hogs and sheep, but a fourth place in cattle prevented LCC from taking overall honors among 11 teams. Junior Mike Mimms of Lazbuddie, was fifth high individual and first overall in sheep and second in horses. Gary Patterson, a junior from Hale Center, was third highest in sheep and horses and sixth overall.

Prices For Farm Products Drop Sharply In Year's First Month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices that farmers get for raw products dropped 2 percent in January, averaging only slightly higher than they did a year ago, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said lower prices for corn, eggs, wheat, soybeans, turkeys and cattle contributed most to the decline from the December average.

However, higher prices were reported for broilers, rice and calves, which helped soften the declines for the other commodities.

But the January decline left the overall farm price index only 0.9 percent above its average in January 1979, officials said.

Meanwhile, prices farmers pay to meet expenses rose 3 percent in January, averaging 14 percent higher than a year ago.

Although the report did not spell it out, the price decline for grain — computed as of mid-month — came in the aftermath of President Carter's announcement Jan. 4 of a partial embargo on the delivery of U.S. grain to the Soviet Union.

Subsequently, the administration announced the government will buy much of the embargoed wheat and corn, and take other actions to bolster the markets and protect farmers from financial losses due to the suspension.

Thus, some grain prices — notably wheat — have recovered somewhat since the mid-month figures shown in Thursday's price report.

For example, the department reported that as of Jan. 28 wheat prices at the farm averaged $3.88 a bushel, compared to the mid-month price of $3.62. Wheat in

But corn prices most recently averaged $2.22 a bushel at the farm, still below the $2.25 shown as the mid-January farm average. The December average was $2.38 a bushel.

In December, farm commodity prices held steady, according to the new report's revisions. A month ago it showed farm prices in December rose 0.5 percent.

According to the preliminary January figures, prices of meat animals dropped 0.7 percent. That put the price index for meat animals 1 percent below its year-earlier level.

The report said prices paid to fruit growers dropped 4 percent from December to January and now average 10 percent below a year ago.

Prices of fresh market vegetables rose slightly during the month, a seasonal increase. However, the figures showed those were down by 24.2 percent from a year ago when severe winter weather hurt much of the harvest.

In a separate report, the Agriculture Department said consumers can expect retail prices of fresh vegetables in the first quarter of this year to be down 5 percent to 10 percent from last winter.

Farm prices of poultry and eggs, as a group, dropped 5 percent in January and also was down 5 percent from a year earlier, the report said. Prices dropped for turkeys and eggs, but broiler prices edged higher.

Department economists are predicting retail food prices will rise by about 8 percent or 9 percent in 1980, but add that the actual increase could range between 7 percent and 11 percent, depending on inflation, weather and what happens to food supplies in foreign countries.

On the average, retail food prices rose about 11 percent in 1979.

Economists do not consider changes in the farm price index for a single month to be reliable indicators of future trends at grocery stores. For example, in 1979 farm prices increased in six months, dropped in four and remained unchanged

NEW ORLEANS (Special) — National Cotton Council delegates here this week called for government programs and tax laws that "deal equitably with all farmers" regardless of the size of their operations.

In a resolution adopted unanimously at the council's annual meeting, delegates went on record as favoring programs that allow farm operators to determine the size and type operations they consider most desirable.

A related resolution regarding reclamation law reaffirmed the council's position that individuals, partnerships or corporations have "a basic right to own, lease or otherwise manage land without limits or residency requirements."

Other farm policy matters, the industrywide organization called on the secretary of agriculture to consider:

— A cotton set-aside whenever there is a grain set-aside so long as a sufficient cotton supply is assured to meet domestic and export needs.

— A voluntary paid diversion program amounting to at least 10 percent of 1980 cotton plantings.

Council delegates continued to support principles of the 1977 farm act's cotton section and to call for extension of current disaster payments until a federal crop insurance program is in full operation.

They urged that farmers not be required to adopt specific conservation practices in order to be eligible for farm or crop insurance programs.

Delegates also took the position that growers should not be required to plant within the normal crop acreage (NCA) when no set-aside is in effect.

On trade matters, the council continued to emphasize exports of cotton yarn, fabric, and made-up goods, as well as raw cotton, cottonseed and their products.

Delegates stressed the importance of government export credit and assurance programs in foreign market development and urged strengthening of these programs through revolving fund arrangements that would preclude yearly budget reductions.

The resolution noted that all government loans made in past years to finance export cotton sales have been "fully repaid with interest." The council called for changes in federal laws and accounting procedures to reflect repayment of the Commodity Credit Corp.'s GSM loans as credit to the program in order to keep the funds self-sustaining.

Increased research to identify and eliminate the agent in cotton dust responsible for byssinosis was urged by council delegates.

They asked that the U.S. Department of Agriculture — along with Cotton Inc., the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, and other "appropriate" organizations — increase research by $8 million for the next 24 months for a "critically needed crash research program."

Council delegates in their 154 resolutions also expressed support for:

— Efforts to improve the cotton grading system by computerization and instruments were feasible.

— "Realistic" depreciation and investment credit schedules.

— More congressional control over federal regulatory agencies.

— Extension of the boll weevil eradication trial into a national program where eradication feasibility is determined.

— A trial pink bollworm control program in Mexico's Baja peninsula.

Earlier, delegates heard Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., declare that a widespread belief that the energy crisis is not real "precludes the tough decisions necessary to turn the situation around."

Long said oil imports now are costing this country more than $100 billion a year and added that the United States is dependent on foreign oil for 43 percent of its needs.

"Frankly, we'd be better off if the government had never got involved in

Farmer Energy Use Cutbacks Possible

LAS CRUCES (Special) — Although agricultural production uses only 3 percent of the energy consumed in the United States, farmers still may be able to cut back on the energy they use, says Larry Cibacek, extension plant nutritionist for New Mexico State University.

Often farmers may use as much energy to dry a crop as used to grow and harvest it. By using slower drying methods with more air and less heat or solar heat, farmers can cut energy use by as much as one-half.

Farmers can also save energy by replacing or modifying the nozzles on high pressure sprinkler irrigation systems to convert them to lower pressure. Conversion from flood irrigation to sprinkler irrigation may improve water application efficiency and result in reduction of energy costs.

Use of good soil fertility management practices, such as reliable soil tests and proper fertilizer rates, placement and timing, can also improve energy use in crop production. Overall energy requirements can be reduced by using livestock manures, crop residues and legumes to supplement commercial fertilizers.

Another way to reduce energy consumption is to reduce tillage. Reduce tillage decreases fuel costs by eliminating unnecessary trips across the field.

the oil situation in the first place," Long said. "Oil profits would have been high but they would have been put back into producing energy."

Long urged cotton leaders to continue insisting on agricultural priority for diesel fuel and gasoline and not to wait for government to lead the way.

A large Texas delegation attended the convention. Herman A. Probst, Anson producer, was named council president, succeeding Hoke Leggett, Hobgood, N.

C. grower, who now is board chairman.

Council vice presidents include Lewis S. Morris of Greensboro, N. C., textile manufacturer; Samuel B. Hollis of Memphis, warehouseman; and Gerald B. Brewer of Fresno, Calif., cottonseed crusher. Frank M. Mitchener of Sumner, Miss., producer, is treasurer.

Renamed were Earl W. Sears of Memphis, executive vice president and secretary, and Macon Edwards, vice president of Washington operations.

THE RATE OF REFUNDS FOR THE COTTON checkoff program so far this season has increased about 5 percent from levels reached by the corresponding time a year earlier, according to Cotton Board officials.

The Cotton Board is a quasi-governing body over Cotton Inc.'s programs and budget. Cotton Inc. is financed by grower per-bale assessments and is responsible for research and promotion of U.S. cotton.

As of Jan. 24, the Cotton Board had completed applications for about $3.3 million in refunds to growers, says Ed Gillespie, board manager. This was out of a total of about $16.2 million received in checkoffs.

Gillespie reported on refunds at a Cotton Board meeting last weekend in New Orleans.

The rate of refunds so far this season is about 21 percent of total receipts, compared with 16 percent — or about $1.9 million — a year earlier. The board last January had received about $11.6 million in checkoffs.

THE LARGEST INCREASES IN REFUNDS, on a percentage basis, were in California, where about $530,000 had been returned to growers, compared with only $126,000 a year earlier.

Refunds in Texas have increased to $1.1 million or 50 percent of receipts so far this season, twice as much as the year-earlier level of $550,000. Oklahoma also showed a significant increase in refunds, from about $10,000 in 1978-79 to $50,000.

The rate of refunds in Arizona has more than tripled, from $63,000 to about $212,000.

Gillespie said he believes recent public disclosure of Cotton Inc.'s alleged mishandling of funds and export sales referrals to Cotton Board members have resulted in the higher level of producer refund requests.

The Cotton Board currently expects the final level of refunds this season to reach about 27 percent of all monies received. But Gillespie said refunds are expected to drop to about 20 percent in both 1980-81 and 1981-82 after the Cotton Inc. controversy has had a chance to settle and after corrective steps prescribed by the Cotton Board and the USDA have been implemented.

Gillespie said Cotton Inc. should have a maximum of $21.560 million available in calendar year 1980 and about $23.583 million in 1981. The 1981 budget would include a $2.5-million carryover in funds from the 1980 budget.

These projections are based on current estimates of checkoff refunds, anticipated U.S. production, per-bale assessments at $2.20 for three years, and other factors.

FOREIGN MARKETS FOR U.S. COTTON are expected to provide the greatest growth potential for the cotton industry in the 1980s, says Arlie Bowling, director of economic and market research for the National Cotton Council. Bowling said at the NCC's annual meeting in New Orleans, which concluded this week, that foreign cotton consumption is expected to increase at a faster rate than foreign cotton production.

Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations limiting the amount of cotton dust present in domestic cotton textile mills are the biggest obstacle to expanding cotton's share of the U.S. fiber market, he said.

Domestic mills must consider the cost of dust control and also the possibility of workers seeking damages after claiming to have contracted "brown lung" disease, he said, as well as per-pound costs of cotton or synthetic fibers.

COTTON WILL FACE INCREASING competition for agricultural land in the 1980s, minimizing the need for set-aside or land diversion programs.

However, Bowling added, cotton acreage could increase this year as a result of the recent partial U.S. grain embargo on the Soviet Union.

Bowling said USDA estimates indicate that the 1979-80 U.S. production of 14.9 million bales, 4 million bales more than the 1978-79 output, would result in ending stocks of only 1 million bales more than a year earlier.

However, he added, the estimated ending stocks of 4.0 million bales would be reduced to about 2.5 million bales if estimated export sales of 9.0 million bales were used in the computations rather than the projected actual exports this season of 7.5 million bales.

(Some in the trade believe the USDA's estimate of ending stocks may be too high and the department's projection of actual export shipments may be too low.)

COTTON FUTURES RACED TO NEW CONTRACT highs in March and May Thursday before backing off on local profit taking.

March closed with the best gain, up 75 points at 84.80 cents, after having posted a 155-point advance at the high. Estimated volume was 17,550 lots, again close to a daily record.

Floor brokers said the late rally came on local and comission house buying. They said the trade was a scale-up hedge seller in the new-crop months, which closed off 20 to 115 points.

The market fell to losses of as much as 73 points in spot March on mixed commission house activity and trade selling after opening with 20 to 46-point losses in nearby, somewhat lower than had been forecast.

Floor brokers said prices firmed when the selling failed to push March to a real test of the 83-cent area.

Open interest going into the session had posted yet another new all-time high at 53,131 lots, up 876 from the previous day.

NET U.S. COTTON EXPORT SALES continued strong in the week ended Jan. 20 at 151,900 running bales for current-season delivery, the USDA reported after the close.

The total included 48,800 bales to Japan, 26,000 to Canada, 21,200 to Taiwan, 12,400 to South Korea, and 10,900 to Indonesia. This brought the export commitment — shipments plus undelivered sales — to 8,239,700 running bales.

Sales for the 1980-81 marketing year amounted to 19,600 bales and were principally to Japan, Spain and Greece. The 1980-81 commitment was 116,400 bales.

Exports maintained a brisk pace with shipments of 183,400 running bales. Of this, 16 percent was shipped to Europe and 79 percent to Asia, including 27,400 bales to China.

Shipments for the season totaled 3,298,200 running bales, up from 2,393,700 a year earlier.

SPOT QUOTATIONS AT LUBBOCK WERE DOWN 75 to 200 points. The base was off 75 points and micronaire discounts were widened by 75 points for 3.3-3.4 and by 125 points for the remainder of the lower mikes.

Activity throughout the Lubbock market was described as dull. Shippers were reported mostly out of the market when futures were down and were said to have bought only in desultory fashion later.

Trading on Telcel was sluggish on a volume of 8,266 bales, which brought an average price of 56.58 cents and an average over the loan of 1,449 points. Price quotes were down 25 points at one time but ended up 25 points.

There was only a slight pickup in Telcel activity after the futures market closed at New York. Growers were not offering heavily and merchants were not bidding aggressively, officials said.

Inquiries continue to be received from most overseas buyers of U.S. cotton, sources said this week. But they said buying has been limited because of the recent runup in futures prices.

Livestock Futures Mostly Go Lower

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 67 points lower to 10 higher on sales of 37,483 lots Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. April paced the decline with December up the most.

Futures gained early on buying stimulated by the bullish construed cattle inventory report. Prices failed to hold on light profit taking and other selling during the day.

There have been 385 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was unchained at 98 to 100 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Slaughter was 119,000 head.

Feeder cattle futures closed 62 to 130 higher paced by October and November. Sales totaled 4,260 contracts. All months ended on or near daily lows.

Futures ran up the limit early on buying stimulated by the bullish construed cattle inventory report. Late profit taking and other selling eased prices to lows.

Deliveries total 468 thus far. Cash feeders were steady to up $5 with the best top $103.50 per hundredweight.

Early gains were reversed on local and commission house selling. Spillover weakness from the belly pit and selling stimulated by easier pork prices at noon and expectations of lower live prices to-day eased futures to new daily lows in late trade.

Wholesale hams were unchained to off 2 1/2 at 62 to 63 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were up 50 to off 100.

New Mexico To Lose 100 Farms In '80

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — New Mexico will lose 100 or so farms this year, experts predict, primarily because small farmers faced with rising costs have a tough time making ends meet.

Larry Losleben, the office's assistant statistician, said crop and livestock service officials believe smaller farms are selling out to larger ones.

The average New Mexico farm last year had an estimated 4,170 acres. The reporting service estimates the average farm this year will comprise 4,207 acres.

But Losleben said the trend does not necessarily mean that large agricultural conglomerates are moving in.

"We think it's more like the small farmer selling out to his neighbor," he said.

Paul Hudson of Clovis, chairman of the New Mexico Farmers Union, said farmers are selling both to neighbors and to larger conglomerates.

"Principally most are getting out because of the size of their operation. You can't make ends meet on little farms anymore. It's prices and inflation. Farms have to get larger to meet the payments," Hudson said.

"I don't think it's all good that it's happening, but it's happening," he said.

The break-even size for a farm depends on the type of operation, Hudson said. Vegetable farming, dryland farming and irrigated farming all incur different costs.

Hudson said he doesn't see much prospect for a change in the pattern. In fact, he said, the loss of farms may accelerate.

"It's inflation; it's the squeeze," he said.

"And farmers are getting older. The young are not coming back like they used to. It's almost impossible for a young person to raise the capital and stand the risk to get started."

Hudson said he's seen statistics that say a large number of farms in the United States are maintained by off-farm income, with the people that own them working in other sectors of the economy.

In some cases the farm land is used as a hedge against inflation, or the farm is used for tax purposes, he said.

Despite the loss in numbers of farms, the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service estimates that the total acreage for farms in 1980 will remain steady at about 46.7 million acres.

Losleben said the reporting service expects a loss of some farm land, but that officials believe it will be less than 50,000 acres.

"Land in farms is kind of a nebulous thing," he added. "It's a survey of what farmers say they have. The official definition of a farm is anyplace with sales or normally expected sales of $1,000 a year or more. That could be five acres which could sell $1,500 (in agricultural products) in a given year. It's really theoretical."

50 cents with the best top $39.75 per hundredweight at Indianapolis. Kill as 351,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 24,300 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 95 to 200 lower on sales of 13,577 cars. All but distant February ended at the daily limit.

Futures reversed early gains on active local and commission house selling. Stops were touched off late, adding to the drop. Traders noted the easier pork complex and expectations of lower live hog prices today as well as a turn around in the cattle pits after sharp early gains.

Wholesale bacon was unchained to off 2 at 36 to 39 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Computer Aid In Cotton Bug Battle Seen

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Cotton growers in Texas have a valuable weapon to fight an enemy they have struggled against for years — the bollworm-tobacco budworm complex, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The weapon is a computer model that predicts insect population buildups and plays a vital role in managing the bollworm-tobacco budworm complex, an enormously expensive pest of cotton.

Developed by agricultural engineers Albert W. Hartstack and John A. Witz, with the department's Science and Education Administration (SEA), the computer model enabled cotton growers across the state to realize a saving of almost $5 million in pest control costs in 1979.

This is termed a conservative estimate. Moreover, it is estimated that similar savings were realized in 1978 and 1977.

MOTHZV (Model of the Heliothis zea and H. virescens), as the computer model is called, has a multiplicity of uses. It aids cotton producers in scouting efforts to properly time insecticide application to maximize control and perhaps eliminate the need for further applications.

Also, two seemingly unrelated phenomena are tied together by the model — the timing of irrigation and the outbreak of bollworm-tobacco budworm infestations. Rapid plant growth and lush foliage following irrigation are extremely conducive to heavy egg laying by the moths. Therefore, irrigating when pest populations are low is an effective control measure.

A third way the model helps cotton growers is to predict the time to stop early insecticide applications for other early-season insect pests in order to give the beneficial insects that attack the bollworms and tobacco budworms a two to three week period to build up and thus provide a non-chemical control of the costly pest.

In short, the computer model, developed by SEA scientists and widely propagated by Texas Agricultural Extension Service, has given cotton producers what officials describe as a valuable management and planning tool.

"When I drove into Nevada... there was nothing but sagebrush flats under a clear blue sky," he said.

"I felt free. There was a feeling you were your own man."

That was 20 years ago. Now, the mantle of federal laws is spreading over the vast open spaces.

Kennecott Copper Corp. shut down its huge mine and smelter blaming federal air quality regulations as a major reason. Federal atomic testing grounds and Navy gunnery ranges make much of the state off limits. The controversial MX missile will take away even more land.

One federal law in particular has spawned the "Sagebrush Rebellion," an attempt by Nevadans to win back local control of their land.

The 1979 Nevada Legislature passed a law that attempts to take control of 48 million acres of federal land within the state. More than 87 percent of the land in Nevada is managed by the federal government.

Other western states are virtually in the same position. Ranchers, miners, and outdoorsmen must comply with changing federal regulations in order to use their land. Two of those ranchers authored the bill that became known as the "Sagebrush Rebellion."

The main bone of contention is the 1976 federal "Organic Act." It says the public land, rather than be disposed of, must be kept in perpetual trust for the people under supervision of the federal government. It requires the land be inventoried for possible wilderness use, which would bar access to miners, ranchers and off-road vehicles.

The new Nevada legislation, which has provided a war chest of $250,000 for a court test, contends the land could be managed more productively by the state. It says western states did not get an equal footing with the original states on land allocation from the federal government.

Attorney General Richard Bryan said the early states obtained land through means that were denied to the territories that later joined the Union. He argues the land eventually was intended to be

AGRICULTURAL MARKETS

Trade remained light in a narrow price range for most of the day until local traders and commission houses returned to the market to buy when prices were pushed down to the day's lows.

"It (the rally) had nothing to do with news," said one veteran trader. "There was no news."

Few sellers were in the market at the close, so prices were primarily bid up. When prices started to make gains for the day it triggered computer-regulated buy orders that commission houses followed in order to reduce the losses for their clients.

At the close, soybeans were 5 1/4 to 8 cents higher, March $6.73; wheat was 3 1/4 to 5 3/4 cents higher, March $4.67 3/4; corn was unchained to 1 cent lower, March $2.74 3/4; and oats were 1 1/4 to 1 3/4 cents lower.

Surprise Party Backfires

DENVER (UPI) — A security guard summoned to his surprise birthday party by the office's ruse accidentally shot the co-worker in the wrist.

Investigators said security personnel met in the office of the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center this week to celebrate the birthday of Cpl. Harold Shepard, 62.

Security Chief Ruben F. Goeringer broadcast a report of trouble in the office on the department radio. When Shepard arrived outside the door, Goeringer pulled it open and said, "It's all right, Shep."

But Shepard, who had drawn his .38-caliber revolver in anticipation of trouble, was startled by the rapidly opening door. His weapon discharged, striking Goeringer in the wrist.

Fans Demand Oscar For Miss Piggy

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Look out Hollywood.

Miss Piggy's surrogate is heading your way for a week of whole-hog Oscar campaigning.

Toting along mail sacks crammed with 38,000 letters of support, Bruce E. Collin will be flying to Hollywood next week to try to win an Oscar nomination for best actress for Miss Piggy.

The puppet from the Muppets' television show starred in the "Muppet Movie" last year and Collin, along with at least 38,000 other people from around the world, says he believes Miss Piggy deserves the Oscar over her human competitors.

The 38,000 have sent letters of support to Collin's Committee to Award Miss Piggy the Oscar (CAMPO, P.O. Box 3311, Cincinnati, Ohio, 45201) and Collin figures that's a mandate.

"I'm going to fly at my own expense to Hollywood on Feb. 2 and stay until Feb. 9 campaigning for Miss Piggy," said Collin, 23.

"But I won't have any lodging expenses because I'm accepting the invitation of West Coast Miss Piggy supporters to stay at their houses while I'm out there."

Collin has timed his trip to coincide with the climax of the Oscar nominating period. Actors and actresses have a Feb. 8 postmark deadline for mailing their nominees to Academy Award officials.

"They can list five nominees, and I'm asking them to make one of their nominations Miss Piggy," Collin said.

NBC To Air Bob Hope Special

ON THE SLOPES — Stefanie Powers and Robert Wagner put on their ski gear while on location in Vail filming an episode for their popular television series, "Hart to Hart." The episode is due to air Tuesday night. (AP Laserphoto)

By PETER J. BOYER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — War cries and patriotic whoopings, a new military draft and Cold War II...

"The timing is fantastic." Bob Hope talking. He senses that the mood in America is just right for a six-hour retrospective of his entertainment tours for American troops. It seems a bit cold, but he is probably right.

A curious bit of irony: the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan seems likely to ruin NBC's plans for a Moscow Olympics ratings bonanza this summer. But the patriotic fervor in the air may well make a big winner of "Bob Hope's Overseas Christmas Tours: Around the World With the Troops." Six hours of big ratings, and on Sunday evenings (this weekend and next), when NBC usually finishes third behind CBS and ABC.

Not that Hope's overseas shows ever suffered for audiences — three of them are among television's 15 top-rated shows of all time. It's just that a retrospective of Hope's tours — Christmas-time, troops, America at war and all — seems an easier product to sell just now than it would have been, say, five years ago.

Ratings were a central factor in the Hope tours from the beginning, when someone talked Hope into taking his radio show to March Air Force Base in Southern California, and the sponsor loved it. Moms and Dads and girlfriends liked hearing Hope's shows from faraway places where drafted lads were doing military time; the notion stuck, all the way through the Vietnam War years.

"It was an event," he says, "and they got a chance to see how their guys reacted, how they looked. It was important to millions of people."

The first program, airing this Sunday, covers the tours from World War II to the early Vietnam days, and will include footage of Judy Garland, Clark Gable, Humphrey Bogart, Jimmy Cagney, Al Jolson, Henry Fonda, Jack Benny, and other Hollywood pals Hope brought to war. Deborah Sampson was the first woman to fight as a uniformed U.S. soldier. In 1779 she joined the colonial forces fighting the Revolutionary War — disguised as a man.

"I've been thinking about doing this for some time," Hope says, "these things are history. I told the network about it, and last year they said we could do four hours. I said, 'Forget it.' This year they came to me and asked, 'How much time do you want?' I told them six hours. And that's out from 80 hours of film."

The second show will cover the Vietnam years, when Hope entertained a new generation of young men — some of them sons of GIs who'd seen Hope's shows in World War II — fighting a very different kind of war.

"But really, they were all the same,"

Hope says, "sensational audiences. Of course, I always took along such good insurance — Miss World, Lana Turner, Raquel Welch, Jill St. John..."

As to the possibility of future "Christmas With the Troops" shows, Hope thinks not, ratings or no ratings.

"Listen, I'm not gonna do a monologue from a camel's back."

Bo Derek Helps Cancer-Stricken Girl

BENNINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — She's got the flu and waits in supermarket lines like anyone else. But actress Bo Derek happens to be a perfect "10." Her signed T-shirts are fetching $25 these days — to help a cancer-stricken young girl.

As the object of Dudley Moore's middle-aged lust in the movie "10," she rated the proverbial "10" on the 1-to-10 scale.

And with the help of a lithe bathing-suited figure and a complicated braided-beaded hairdo, she rocketed to instant stardom and a million-dollar-per-movie fee.

Now she is on location in snowy Vermont, filming "A Change of Season," sneezing because of the flu and trying to avoid reporters and photographers, but making headlines nonetheless for supposedly acting unprofessionally.

She has shown up now and again in the Vermont mountain community of 8,000, usually guarded by sheriff's deputies. The glamorous star was even seen in an unglamorous supermarket checkout line.

But the press is miffed at her.

She was the only star of the film who did not attend a press reception Jan. 17, and has since turned down all attempts to interview her. Telephone calls are stopped at the front desk of her lodgings with husband, John, 53, at the Paradise Motel.

The Boston Globe quoted anonymous sources on the set as saying Mrs. Derek was behaving unprofessionally and her husband was causing difficulty — reports that publicist Peter Emmet dismissed.

The crew has been on location in the Berkshire mountains since early this month, but are packing their bags to return to the California sunshine soon, Emmet said. Actress Shirley MacLaine left last week after becoming ill.

Co-star Anthony Hopkins and others have spoken up in defense of Mrs. Derek.

"Bo has a fine natural talent. She has a natural charisma," said Hopkins. When a reporter questioned him more closely, he snapped, "What do you expect me to say about her?"

While avoiding the paparazzi, she has found time to meet with a civic group from Ludlow, Mass., giving it permission to sell T-shirts bearing her autograph to help raise funds for 14-year-old Judy Dubour, a victim of bone cancer who has had a leg amputated.

"Bo and her husband are super people, just super," said Peter Ragucci Jr., one of those involved in the fund-raising. "We just called her up and asked her to help, and she said, 'If my name can help, do whatever you want with it.'"

"She signed these T-shirts and they're selling for a minimum of $25. It's fantastic."

He said Mrs. Derek also sent the teenage girl a photograph, autographed: "To Judy with tons and tons of love, Bo Derek."

"Judy's going to wear the T-shirt when she goes back to the hospital," said her mother, Mrs. Eleanor Dubour.

She admits, however, that her daughter had not heard of Bo Derek before being given the autographed shirt.

Tour Will Bring Recognition To LA Orchestra

By ROBERT BARR
NEW YORK (AP) — You better believe Gerard Schwarz is excited about taking his orchestra to the Winter Olympics.

For Schwarz and his Los Angeles Chamber Symphony Orchestra, the trip to Lake Placid, N.Y., means recognition, publicity and an opportunity for the orchestra's first tour of the eastern United States.

But what excites him most is the prospect of repetition — playing Haydn's 96th symphony, for instance, six or seven times on tour.

"We'll know that piece," Schwarz said in a recent interview. "We'll know it so well that the level of musical perfection should be beyond anything we have ever done before."

"That is more exciting than playing in the Olympics."

Schwarz talks of perfection as possible, and he pursues it both in Los Angeles and in New York, where he conducts the St. Paul Chamber Symphony. Along with the St. Paul (Minn.) Chamber Orchestra, they are the nation's premiere small orchestras.

The Los Angeles group, in its second year under Schwarz, was invited to join a $14 million arts program at the Lake Placid Olympics, which includes a repertory theater company, a dance group, the Jazzmobile, chamber music players, visual art, and magicians and mimes.

The orchestra performs at Lake Placid Feb. 18-19, and will also visit Toronto, Montreal, New York, Boston and Washington.

While major orchestras involve more than 100 players performing 200 or more times a year, chamber orchestras live on a smaller scale. The Los Angeles group of 35 players is playing 50 concerts this season, while the 40 Y players are doing 25. It is the same size orchestra with which Mozart and Haydn — and the young Beethoven — worked.

"In the chamber orchestra we are in an ideal situation because no one ever gets tired, it is not every week, everyone is an individual and no one gets washed over because there are so many of you," Schwarz said. "Everyone is important."

It is one of the few places in the orchestra world where you can deal with perfection. "And," he said, "I have two orchestras with no bad players."

The trip to Lake Placid also gives Schwarz a chance to make a point close to his heart — that Americans deserve a chance to conduct American orchestras.

This is not, he added quickly, a complaint about foreign conductors leading major orchestras in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington or Los Angeles.

"I'm not talking about the really great conductors, because there are so few."

he said, "but on the next level of greatness or fame, the Americans will lose."

"Take a Grade B orchestra with a good budget and a full season. If the board of directors can choose between a very good European and a very good American, the European will win. Always."

"It is a shame," Schwarz said. "We should do a better job of taking care of our own."

With his two chamber orchestras, Schwarz, at 32, already is among the most prominent of the American directors. He may not be in a hurry, but he has moved fast.

At age 17, he toured the world with the American Brass Quintet. At 26, he joined the New York Philharmonic.
