West Texans are having a stamp-licking good time in Lubbock today with the debut of a booklet of postage stamps.

Avid collectors and fans of the windmill swarmed into The Museum of Texas Tech University for first day of issue ceremonies for a $3 booklet honoring five historic American windmills.

Many maintained their places in a lobby line for first day covers and stamp booklets while official ceremonies held forth in the main gallery in the shadow of the Eclipse windmill towering two stories tall.

"Do not tilt at windmills," Carl C. Ulsaker, senior assistant postmaster general for the U.S. Postal Service urged the first day visitors jamming the gallery and hanging over the balcony.

Americans, he noted, are accustomed to expecting the better life, and, with expectations now exceeding resources, Americans must learn to apply self discipline by reaching for the possible, not dreaming of the impossible.

Ulsaker stressed the place of the windmill in American heritage, then touched on wind energy projects to put windmills in the "possible" future.

A wind turbine generator in Cleveland, he said, creates 100 kilowatts to supply 20 to 30 homes while 200 kilowatt turbines are operating in New Mexico.

The 2,000 kilowatt windmill overlooking Boone, N.C., he added, provides power for hundreds of homes from its perch on top of a 4,000-foot mountain.

Tilting at windmills like Don Quixote is no way to solve the energy situation, Ulsaker said. American ingenuity and the windmill might provide the answer, as it did for pioneers.

"Ingenuity and foresightedness of days gone by" produced the windmill, Dr. Lawrence L. Graves, interim president of Texas Tech, said in welcoming the group.

The windmill on the stamps, he added, "will commemorate an important part of our past."

Dr. Virginia Noelke of San Angelo, of the Citizens Stamp Advisory Committee, told briefly how the windmill booklet came to be in answer to popular request.

In Lubbock for the ceremonies was the stamp artist, Ronald C. Sharpe, who was swamped with autograph requests by fans crowding the museum long before the morning ceremony.

Hostage Release Plan Disclosed

By The Associated Press

A Kuwait newspaper reported from Tehran today that the release of the American Embassy hostages is "imminent." State Department officials said they could not confirm the report, but the situation remained "promising."

The Iranian government, meanwhile, took a new step to undercut the power of the militants holding the U.S. Embassy — it banned their accusations against Iranian officials from the air waves.

The weekly Kuwait newspaper Al Khadaf, which did not give the source of its information, said the number of young Iranian militants occupying the U.S. Embassy has been reduced from 400 to 50, and final arrangements for the release of the approximately 50 captive Americans are being completed "following the election of Abolhasan Bani Sadr as Iran's new president."

"Bani Sadr has set the settlement of the hostage crisis and the ending of the duality of authority being exercised in Iran as the main objectives at the beginning of his term," the report said.

Al Khadaf said U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim is trying to persuade Bani Sadr to "pressure the students to leave the embassy and have them replaced by regular Iranian troops."

The Kuwaiti press is highly competitive, and the reliability of the Al Khadaf report was not known. But the Kuwaitis have good contacts in Iran because of the proximity of the two countries. There is also a relatively large Iranian community in Kuwait.

Spokesmen for the embassy militants were unavailable for comment on the Kuwaiti report, a Western journalist in Tehran said.

State Department spokesman George Sherman, after checking on the report, said, "We have no evidence to confirm it."

But Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, echoing the cautious optimism of the Carter administration in recent days, said "We have a somewhat promising situation and we are working hard on it."

The ruling Revolutionary Council has agreed to Waldheim's plan to set up an international commission to investigate the Iranian revolutionaries' charges against the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, but the Iranians want to hold on to the hostages until the panel issues its report.

Waldheim and the Carter administration want the hostages turned over to a third party in Tehran, possibly the Red Cross, as soon as the commission begins meeting. Today was the 96th day in captivity for the Americans.

President Carter told congressmen and some 3,000 other people at a National Prayer Breakfast today that he prays every day not only for the hostages, but also for Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the embassy militants.

"It's not easy to do this, and I have to force myself sometimes to include someone on my list because I don't want to acknowledge that that person might be worthy of my love," Carter said.

Bani Sadr lashed into the embassy militants Wednesday after their allegations — broadcast on national radio and television — that the national guidance and information minister, Nasser Minachi, had "close links with the CIA" led to Minachi's unauthorized arrest by revolutionary guardsmen. The militants said the allegations were based on documents found in the embassy.

Today the ruling Revolutionary Council, headed by Bani Sadr, ordered the state-owned broadcast system to not give the militants any more air time to publicize such allegations. The Council said it See MILITANT GROUP Page 14

NO HAVEN FOR AMERICANS

Canada To Bar Draft Evaders

REGINA, Saskatchewan (UPI) — Canada, once a haven for men fleeing conscription, would not open its borders to draft dodgers if America reinstates selective service, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said.

Miss MacDonald, asked Wednesday on a radio talk show how Canada would respond to a renewed U.S. military draft, answered that nation would not maintain its open-door policy of the Vietnam War period, when it accepted between 50,000 to 100,000 Americans.

"I don't see Canada harboring draft dodgers," she said on CKCK radio in Regina. "I just don't see at this point that we would suddenly turn ourselves into a haven for draft dodgers."

"I don't know what steps could be taken. I just haven't given any detailed thought to it. But I don't see us encouraging people to avoid their responsibilities to their own country."

In a series of radio and television interviews in two cities Wednesday, Miss MacDonald also touched on the twin Middle East crises in Iran and Afghanistan, and on the possibility of an Olympic boycott.

She said Canada was prepared to play a role if the volatile Middle East situation were to flare up into a major conflict. "If there is any kind of a call on Canada, we'll be there. I don't mean we will go out and engage in military action, but in other ways."

Miss MacDonald said there were indications the threat of an Olympic boycott was having severe repercussions within the Soviet Union.

"From papers that are circulating in Moscow, we know there is great concern about the boycott," she said, adding that concern revolves around the loss of money, prestige and pride.

Miss MacDonald said the Soviets planned to use the Olympics as a propaganda vehicle and there was concern that opportunity would be denied them.

Soviet-backed Afghan forces reportedly have been using air strikes and artillery to counter fierce rebel resistance in eastern Afghanistan.

ghan capital of Kabul and Afghan units are being built up with Russian soldiers filling the ranks. The Times of London reported today in a dispatch from Kabul.

The airlifts include night flights into the mile-high city, which are normally prohibited, the newspaper said.

The newspaper's report was substantiated by a Western diplomatic source in New Delhi who said an average of 20 Soviet fighter and transport planes a day are landing at the Kabul airport.

"The planes come every day except when it snows," the diplomatic source said. He added they had been averaging 20 flights a day since the Soviet invasion Dec. 25.

The source said that following days when the runway is blocked by snow, the Russians play catch-up, sometimes doubling the flights for a day. He estimated some 500 transport planes and 150 fighter aircraft have landed in the Afghan capital since the start of the Soviet campaign.

Afghan rebels "have captured heavy machine guns, mortars, maybe even some armored vehicles, and they're using it" in their fight to topple the Soviet-backed regime, he said.

The diplomat said Afghan soldiers and their Soviet allies in Badkshan Province had not been able to flush out the insurgents from the rebel stronghold in Afghanistan's extreme northeast area.

Crime Line Tip Solves Slaying

A sealed murder indictment expected to be returned this afternoon in the mysterious death four years ago of Lubbock nightclub dancer Marcella Valenzuela resulted from a Crime Line tip last July, Lubbock police said today.

Detective Sgt. Doyle Nelson, who supervises the Crime Line program at the police department, said the tip was considered a possible major break in the Valenzuela case when it came in last July 19.

"It's been under continuous investigation," Nelson said, adding that it is the oldest case to be broken by Crime Line to date.

"It was just a steady type investigation on the part of Det. Ronnie Goolsby and Cpl. Billy Hudgens," he said.

While a 140th District Court grand jury panel has been considering cases this week, Lubbock police detectives have held numerous closed-door meetings with Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford and his staff.

Montford and his office members have refused comment on the secretive sessions, but sources told The A-J Wednesday that lawmen now have a break in Miss Valenzuela's puzzling death.

On Jan. 5, 1976, police found Miss Valenzuela's partially clad and decomposing body in the bathtub of her small efficiency apartment near the Texas Tech campus.

Officers at the death scene said her apartment was "messy," but did not appear to be ransacked. However, police reportedly found signs that someone had been in the apartment with the 20-year-old Carlsbad native.

Miss Valenzuela, who had moved to Lubbock from Carlsbad only 18 months earlier, reportedly had last been seen alive the early morning hours of New Year's Day 1976. But authorities declined comment on who had seen her.

Then Justice of the Peace F.H. Bolen, who handled the inquest concerning the young woman's death, said Miss Valenzuela had been dead "three to five days, at least" when her body was discovered by the apartment complex manager.

The manager had received a long distance phone call from Miss Valenzuela's sister inquiring about her welfare and that led to the gram discovery. Her employer and coworkers at a city club told police they thought Miss Valenzuela had gone out of town to visit relatives after she left the nightclub about 9 or 10 p.m. New Year's Eve, and they said they had not been overly concerned by her absence from work.

For Mayor

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS

A Coronado High School senior hopes to become Lubbock's youngest mayor this spring and says he would bring a "fresh approach" to city government.

Eighteen-year-old Bill Roddy has notified the news media that he intends to file for the mayor's slot on the City Council at 4 p.m. today.

In a telephone interview with The Avalanche-Journal this morning, the youthful candidate said he first decided to run for mayor after learning that Councilman Bill McAlister is currently running unopposed for the post. Roddy said he believes that no one should be just handed a public office without some form of challenge.

"I don't want to be looked at as a kid running for the publicity," Roddy stressed. He said that he intends to run as a serious candidate and plans to be well versed on local issues.

Roddy said he also was motivated to seek public office through a high school government class. According to Roddy, the teacher asked how many students were planning to register to vote this year, and it was discovered that many of the 18-year-olds were not interested.

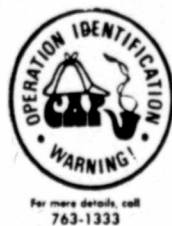

"I think it's a very important civic duty to vote," the student said. Roddy said that even if he doesn't win the mayoral race, his candidacy could interest other 18-year-olds in exercising their right to vote.

However, Roddy emphasized that he will be running to win, and said he is See TEEN EYES Page 14

Special County Task Force Nabs Thieves

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Eight felony suspects have so far been arrested and more than $25,000 in property reported stolen in Lubbock recovered by an undercover, four-department law enforcement operation which is still in force, The Avalanche-Journal has learned.

The clandestine investigating body, labeled "Lubbock County Task Force," is made up of the Lubbock Police Department, Lubbock County Sheriff's Department, Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney's Office and the Department of Public Safety, a member of the force revealed today.

The 13 men assigned to the force from the four departments operate under the code name of "catch," and use two-way radios and night scopes in their 24-hour surveillance of various suspected offenders against property, the source, who asked not to be identified, said.

Force members track suspected burglars and thieves in unmarked cars, and have "fugitives in this town so scared..." he said.

Though the operation targets in on crimes committed within the city, the undercover officers have the capacity to trail suspects wanted in Lubbock throughout the state. Eight arrests have been made so far, including five in Lubbock, one in Slaton and two in Roscoe — where authorities also confiscated about $20,000 in property suspected of being stolen in this city.

The task force began to form in November 1979, and went into operation the first week of this year.

"We range from state line to state line," the force member said. "If we leave the city limits of Lubbock we have a county officer with us. If we leave the county of Lubbock we have a state officer with us, even though you have Lubbock police officers on a moving surveillance."

The officer stressed that members from the four law enforcement departments contribute equally to the operation. Texas Rangers and DPS narcotic agents assist.

However, the source said the force works strictly on crimes against property — "nothing else."

Seven city policemen, three DPS agents and a county deputy are assigned full time to the force, which works out of the DPS intelligence office. The district attorney's office coordinated the effort and two of its men are on call, the source said.

Acting almost totally on confidential information, the force may set up surveillance on a single party, or split into two teams and track two parties. So far, the plainclothes officers have made no more than two arrests at a time.

Once information is gained, the force will follow every step a suspect takes — in or out of the city and county. If the person or persons have not been spotted committing a crime within seven days, the undercover agents will back off, the source said.

However, he said, "It's never gone that far yet. The longest was five days before we made the pop."

The source said the undercover agents, as of yet, have not been discovered until the arrest is made. "We don't harass him. We don't approach him. He See THIEVES TARGET Page 14

Winter Storm Warnings Go Up Across Southwest

A-J News Services

A major winter storm developing over the southern Rocky Mountains today triggered warnings across much of the Southwest, as Lubbock and the South Plains were placed under a winter storm watch.

Snow is forecast in the Texas Panhandle and South Plains tonight and Friday.

The storm, now sweeping across New Mexico with heavy snowfall and high winds, also is expected to bring some of the coldest weather of the season. Snow accumulation, however, is expected to amount to only about 2 inches in the Lubbock area, an NWS spokesman here said.

Light rain fell intermittently in Lubbock and across portions of the South Plains this morning, and forecasters said there is an 80-percent chance precipitation will continue on Friday. Light rain covered most of the Texas Panhandle late this morning and Amarillo reported strong, gusty winds.

Forecasters said there is a 50-percent chance of snow for Friday.

Temperatures will be near 50 today, middle 20s tonight and upper 20s Friday, weathermen said.

Winds will be southeasterly to easterly at 15 to 20 mph and gusty today and northeasterly at 15 to 20 mph and gusty as the storm comes in tonight.

The storm is expected to begin in the Panhandle this afternoon and the South Plains tonight and spread eastward across North Texas Friday before ending late Friday or early Saturday.

Rain that began this morning in West Texas will likely change to snow this afternoon in the Panhandle and by tonight on the South Plains, a Lubbock weatherman said this morning.

"There is a threat of significant snow accumulations in all sections of North-Texas by early Friday, with the greatest possibility of heavy snow seeming to be in the Texas Panhandle at the present time."

"Rain may be mixed with snow at times tonight as far south as the Permian Basin."

The storm will bring winter to the South Plains again after several days of pleasant weather, including a high temperature of 60 degrees Wednesday in Lubbock.

Overnight lows were mostly in the upper 30s and 40s over the South Plains today. Lubbock's low this morning was 44 degrees.

Heavy rain or snow would be beneficial from an agricultural point of view because only 54 inch of precipitation has been recorded officially here so far this year.

Friona and Hereford had traces of rain Wednesday.

In New Mexico, a winter storm warning was issued for the mountains and northern part of the state today and to See AREA MAY Page 14

Cronkite Not Ready To Quit

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite says everyone has to retire sometime — but he plans to stick around as anchor of the "CBS Evening News" for a while yet.

CRONKITE

Speaking through CBS News' press department, Cronkite confirmed Wednesday published reports that he had told network executives he would like to leave the show, which has been the ratings leader since 1968, no later than November 1981, when his contract expires.

Cronkite, 63, has said he would like to devote more time to other journalistic endeavors.

"There have been some reports today about my plans to retire from this broadcast," Cronkite said before he signed off the news show Wednesday. "Well, of course, that has to happen sometime. But meanwhile there are some big stories ahead in coming months and I intend to be right here to report them.

Pogus For President

SPIVEY'S CORNER, N.C. (AP) — Move over Jimmy, Ted, Ronnie, George and all the rest of you — here comes O.P.

O.P. is a bred-and-fed Spivey's Corner opossum — or, as they say in the South, 'possum — who wants to put his fellow 'possum, Pogo, in the White House.

Pogo, the cartoon strip creation of the late Walt Kelly, has been courted frequently as a presidential candidate. Even today, Pogo-for-President buttons and bumper stickers tout the intellectual 'possum as the best of the litter.

It was the most recent resurgence of Pogomania that piqued O.P.'s public conscience, according to Ermon Godwin of Spivey's Corner.

O.P. has decided to volunteer his services to Pogo. Godwin said Wednesday. "He's got the political machine already at work. He's going to put Pogo in the White House, and those other candidates might as well start playing 'possum right now."

Spivey's Corner, population 49, is the home of the National Hollerin' Contest and also claims fame as the 'possum capital of the state.

Godwin said O.P. has already started drafting Pogo's presidential campaign platform, based on the slogan: "Walk softly and wear a big grin," and on the promise to "put black-eyed peas and a pot in every home."

Senate Rejects Veto On FTC Administrative Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission is going to have fewer powers when Congress finishes with it, but for now the embattled consumer-aid agency has one major victory.

By a 53-44 vote Wednesday, the Senate defeated an attempt by Sen. Harrison Schmidt, R-N.M., to establish a veto over FTC administrative rules by either house of Congress.

But whatever bill Congress eventually passes is sure to have a series of stern prohibitions on FTC regulation of various industries. This is because the House already has passed a bill with numerous anti-FTC provisions and the Senate is considered certain to enact additional ones.

In addition, the one-house veto provision could still become law. The House bill contains it, meaning that a House-Senate conference committee will try to work out a compromise on the veto issue.

The FTC's vigorous pro-consumer regulation has led to frequent complaints from business and moves on Capitol Hill to cut back the agency's authority.

Schmidt's one-house veto amendment failed only after the Senate overwhelmingly approved an amendment by Sens. Carl Levin, D-Mich., and David L. Boren, D-Okla., that would increase congressional supervision over the FTC.

The Levin-Boren amendment, approved 87-10, would delay the effective date of FTC rules while allowing a veto by both houses of Congress. Under this plan, the president could overrule a congressional veto.

The two senators argued that their amendment was a way of avoiding a possible veto of the FTC bill by President Carter, who has said the one-house veto would be unconstitutional.

Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., was the leading opponent of Schmidt's veto provision, arguing that Congress should instead closely watch the commission. Ford, who has criticized numerous FTC actions, chairs the subcommittee that has jurisdiction over the commission.

"Congress doesn't need the legislative veto to oversee the workings of the FTC. If we don't like what the FTC has done, we can always pass legislation directly," Ford said.

Russian Dancers Arrive In U.S. After Defection

NEW YORK (AP) — While in Japan the Bolshoi Ballet promised the show would go on, two more defectors from the Soviet dance world arrived here after being granted asylum in the United States.

Soulamif Mikhailovna Messerer, 71, a top Soviet ballet teacher, and her son, Mikhail Messerer, 31, an occasional solo dancer with the Bolshoi Ballet, on Wednesday thanked the American and Japanese governments for their aid in the defection.

Mrs. Messerer had been in Japan for the past three months giving ballet lessons to the Tchaikovsky Memorial Tokyo Ballet troupe. She is a widow, had visited Japan frequently over the past 20 years and speaks fluent Japanese.

Messerer joined his mother in Japan when the Bolshoi arrived there for a 12-city tour, and the two defected Tuesday in Tokyo. The troupe's first performance was in Tokyo last Saturday.

During a tour of the United States in August and September last year three better-known dancers with the famed Moscow company defected.

A spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Tokyo, John Ohta, said the Messerers "wanted a freer environment for artistic activities." The Tokyo newspaper Asahi Shimbun quoted police sources saying the two "despaired of life in Russian society."

When she arrived in New York, Mrs. Messerer read a statement in English to reporters waiting for her at Kennedy International Airport, saying she wanted to "thank the American government for the opportunity to be here and thank the Japanese government for their help."

The Soviet embassy (in Tokyo) didn't do anything against us," she said.

There was no immediate comment from Soviet officials.

In 1699, Peter the Great ordered the Russian New Year to be reckoned from Jan. 1 instead of Sept. 1.

New Mexico Prisoners Transported To Kansas

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — Up to 75 more inmates from the riot-torn New Mexico State Prison were expected to arrive today at the federal penitentiary in Leavenworth, Kan., prison officials say.

Guarded by federal marshals, 74 handcuffed prisoners from the New Mexico facility arrived by plane in Kansas City, Mo. Wednesday and were then transported by bus to Leavenworth to await possible reassignment to other prisons.

Prison officials in New Mexico are attempting to relocate most of more than 1,000 prisoners who survived the 36-hour weekend riot, which left 35 inmates dead and the penitentiary in ruins.

U.S. Bureau of Prisons officials anticipate at least 350 of the New Mexico prisoners will be shipped elsewhere while officials consider what to do with the ravaged prison at Santa Fe.

The men who arrived at Leavenworth Wednesday appeared glad to have the nightmarish riot behind them.

"These guys have been through a lot. They're glad to get out of there," said a penitentiary official who asked not to be identified.

More than a dozen armed prison guards were on hand to meet the four-engine Lockheed Electra, operated by the Bureau of Land Management, which flew the prisoners into Downtown Airport in Kansas City.

"They were passive as they could be," said a flight crewman who asked not to be identified. "Most of them just settled down and went to sleep."

As each man left the aircraft, guards draped light khaki jackets over their shoulders to ward off the 25-degree cold.

The men wore only T-shirts and light prison pants, distributed after most of their belongings were destroyed in the rioting.

A prison official carried a sheaf of makeshift cards. Each contained the name, date of birth, sentence and prison number of the 74 prisoners, along with a color photograph of each inmate. The cards marked the start of a new system that would replace records destroyed in the rioting.

Lloyd Lucero, of Farmington, said he was angry at the state for failing to keep families informed about the fate of those inside the prison following a brutal 36-hour weekend takeover that ended with the deaths of more than 30 people, some mutilated beyond recognition.

"The state was real uncooperative about the whole deal," said Lucero.

"I'd still rather hug that skeleton than know I have to bury him," Mrs. Hurst said. Foley had been imprisoned for 10 weeks on a murder conviction.

Loyd Lucero, of Farmington, said he was angry at the state for failing to keep families informed about the fate of those inside the prison following a brutal 36-hour weekend takeover that ended with the deaths of more than 30 people, some mutilated beyond recognition.

"The state was real uncooperative about the whole deal," said Lucero.

Families Informed Of Inmates' Deaths

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The mother of an inmate slain during the bloody riot at the New Mexico State Penitentiary says she feels that her son has gone to "a much better place."

"I feel like the demons of hell were turned loose in Santa Fe," Phyllis Gossens said Wednesday.

Her son, Donald J. Gossens Jr., father of a 2-year-old girl, died in Cellblock 4 of the maximum-security prison. He turned 23 the day before he died and had been in the prison for only six weeks following his conviction for distributing amphetamines.

Families who had waited days for word of loved ones inside the prison learned Tuesday night the identity of 27 of the 33 prisoners known to have died in the uprising.

Another mother who heard bad news was Sandra Hurst of Albuquerque.

When she last saw her son, 19-year-old James Foley, during a visit to the penitentiary, he had lost so much weight that his prison uniform "just hung on his shoulders."

Legislature To View New Prison Plan

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — The New Mexico Legislature, which three years ago scrapped a proposal to renovate the state prison and build a new maximum security facility because the plan was too costly, today will get a look at a similar package that now will nearly cost twice as much.

"Three years ago we recommended $47 million for improvements to the existing facility, plus money to build a complete new maximum security facility," Department of Finance and Administration Director David King said Wednesday.

"Now, three years later, it's almost twice as much. Maybe if we had done it then like we wanted, it wouldn't be this much today."

King said it will cost the state of New Mexico $82.5 million to put its prison system back in order in the aftermath of the nation's biggest prison riot since Attica.

The amount includes repairs to the existing prison and all costs associated with the riot, plus money for construction of a new 500-bed maximum security prison experts say should have been built two years ago when it was recommended.

The plan was scrapped by the 1977 New Mexico Legislature as too costly.

King said a bill allocating the money would be introduced to the New Mexico Legislature today. The Legislature has until Feb. 14 to complete its work in the current 30-day session.

King said costs of repairing the existing prison, heavily damaged by the rampaging inmates, were expected to total $19.4 million, plus $200,000 for restoration of records destroyed in the incident.

There will be $7.6 million required to keep inmates in other institutions for up to one year, King said. That amount was calculated by using a figure of $50 per day to keep inmates in federal prisons and $35 per day in state prisons.

"We hope to have most of these people back in the state next year, although some may be out longer," he said.

There will be another $600,000 required for medical expenses and funerals, King said. He said state law requires the state to pay for funerals of inmates.

Autopsies on the dead will cost $100,000, King said.

The cost of calling up the New Mexico National Guard for the riot will be $1 million, King said, and State Police will get $320,000 for their assistance.

Lubbockite Killed In Uprising

A 26-year-old Lubbock man and nine persons from eastern New Mexico were among the 33 inmates killed during last week's riot at the New Mexico State Penitentiary in Santa Fe.

Danny Dewayne Waller of Lubbock, who was serving a 1-to 5-year sentence for use of a stolen credit card, possession of a stolen auto and contributing to the delinquency of a minor, was among those listed as killed during the uprising, according to a report released Wednesday by New Mexico Gov. Bruce King's office.

Waller, a Lubbock native, was arrested in August 1978 in Clovis on a warrant out of Wichita Falls.

Late Wednesday, his body was being held at the New Mexico State Medical Examiner's office in Albuquerque before being transferred to a funeral home.

Hance Got A Zero!

THE AMERICAN Civil Liberties Union is challenging Massachusetts' new state law requiring schools to give students a minute for voluntary prayer or meditation.

House votes rating a minus by the ADA included those for budget cuts, a constitutional amendment outlawing forced busing, terminating sanctions against Rhodesia and development of the MX missile.

Spending keeps going up faster than Congress can pass new windfall taxes. Things are rough all over Department: A private jet that sold for $2.5 million just four months ago now is priced at $3 million. Better order fast.

Former state Sen. H.J. (Doc) Blanchard's decision to turn Republican and run for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission was a mild surprise to many.

ADA lobbies vigorously for greater federal spending in human needs programs and full-employment policies. "It pointed out in releasing the ratings, ... when the President said it's time to increase military spending, only a few members of Congress counseled restraint and warned of the domestic cuts and the inflation that increased military spending will cause."

Each coconut picker in Malaysia who completes 10 years on the job will be given a monkey to "help" him. Uncle Sam does the same thing for workers in this country—but, over here, it's called a bureaucrat.

The amount of financial support he receives will be a tipoff to how serious the GOP is about trying to get present and former Democratic officeholders to switch parties.

SEN. GEORGE MCGOVERN earned a 100 Liberal Quotient from the ADA. Sen. Ted Kennedy, who voted against the ADA position on the corporate income tax and didn't vote three other times, was rated at 79.

House Speaker Tip O'Neill, asked about so many Congressmen being implicated in the latest Capitol Hill scandal, said "we want to expeditiously clean it up and let the cards fall where they may."

Monday was the filing deadline for this year's elections. Hooboy. The campaign is only three days old and already it seems like forever.

Kennedy got a 0 and McGovern a 10 on ratings put out by the American Conservative Union, however.

FORMER MAYOR Jim Granberry, most lately in the news as co-chairman with Gene Alderson of the highly successful campaign to defeat collective bargaining by firemen, has a new interest.

U.S. REP. KENT HANCE has received the greatest Backhanded Compliment that the leftist Americans for Democratic Action can bestow on a Congressman.

By contrast, the conservative group gave Hance a healthy 80. Stenholm 81, Hightower 68, White 72 and Wright 6. The ACU liked Tower's vote 83 percent of the time. Bentsen's 24.

Back home in Lindale, Granberry still is known by his childhood nickname of "Hoozie." He's chosen Lindale as the site of his first unit in a hopper chain of fried chicken outlets. It'll be called "Who's He? Fried Chicken."

He was rated as a big fat zero by the ADA, which annually grades members of Congress on their "Liberal Quotient" from no percent to 100 percent. A member who voted the way the ADA thought he should on all 19 "key issues" last year got 100. If he always voted opposite of the ADA's philosophy, he got 0.

The director of the Congressional Budget Office says this year's deficit probably will run closer to $44 billion than to the $29.8 billion Congress and the President misleadingly projected when the budget was adopted.

Granberry, who ran a "Who's He?" campaign for governor in 1974, says he's hatching up some other ideas, none of which includes a return to politics. Well, turning's everything. The fried chicken king in Kentucky ran for, and was elected, governor AFTER getting rich in the business.

Sen. John Tower got an 11, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen a 26, Rep. Jack Hightower of Vernon was rated at 16, Richard White of El Paso and Charles Sten-

I think Synge must have had mystical foresight and drew his chief character from Sen. D. Pat Moynihan, who claims honorary degrees from 27 colleges and universities and cannot speak without affection of being oh-so-exotic and erudite.

Q: Then why not say so? A: I would rather not. Q: But, senator, if you sensed this global pincer movement closing on us, what final choice have we got except to strike at the center of it? You warn against making alliances with totalitarian countries which happen to have common enemies with us, but you don't have the resolve to shake off Pakistan and China, two dictatorships.

A: American power is enormous; the American will to use it is simply—in relative terms—less than it has been... Q: As a historian you note that the Soviet march has been going on for 70 years. Are you going to brag like Falstaff, continue to be the "preposterous" playboy of the village pub? A: "I welcome another presidential year, and the prospects of further discussion."

I hesitate to speak disparagingly of my betters, but it's past time someone cut Moynihan down to size.

The "Western World" is not the great community of human freedom. It is a village pub. Truth requires putting Moynihan through such a process of shrinkage.

Sylvia Porter:

Physical Disability Can Cripple You 'Fiscally'

WASHINGTON—Do you know that: Your chances of being unable to work for 90 days or more between the ages of 35 and 65 are far greater than your chance of dying? That if you are age 30, you face odds of 3-to-1 of being unable to work? At mid-life—age 40—the numbers are 25-to-1? At age 50, the odds are 2-to-1?

leave your job and you can't readily convert to an individual policy (in contrast with a group life policy). Your new employer may have a similar plan, though. Check immediately.

For millions of aware Americans, the spectre of a disabling injury or illness is a personal nightmare. With the exception of the wealthy, few of us could maintain our basic standard of living during a disabling income loss.

(3) If you are a member of a union or a professional association, you may be able to get an association policy. Premiums generally are higher than on group policies, but less than on individual ones.

Being ill or injured for a prolonged span can be bad enough. Being hit financially at the same time—particularly if you are burdened with a mortgage or car installments, children in college, the care of an elderly parent, etc.—can be catastrophic.

(4) To find the best policy, ask whether it is non-cancellable, guaranteed renewable, optionally renewable, cancellable. In a non-cancellable, generally more expensive policy, premiums cannot be raised.

THAT'S WHY AN estimated 90 million-plus Americans now have some disability income protection. If you're not among them, you should be—for what would you do if through some tragic illness or accident you became permanently and totally disabled?

IN A GUARANTEED renewable, the carrier cannot cancel but it can raise premiums for a general risk class. Optionally renewable policies allow cancellation at an anniversary date or dates when the premium is due.

Could your family survive on your Social Security benefits and any life savings alone? Almost surely, they could not.

Reasons for cancellation must be broad scale, never personal. Cancellable policies can be terminated at any time and generally without cause. Many states prohibit sale of these.

True, there are state laws that require employers to give some benefits to workers who suffer serious illness or injury even if not caused by jobs. Among the states providing this benefit are: New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, California, Hawaii, (Puerto Rico does, too.)

(5) Don't buy more policies or coverage than you need; be cautious about replacing existing coverage; understand maximum benefits and pre-existing condition exclusions; check renewal rights.

BUT ALL OF these are only for starters in 1980. Only about one in three of you has any private disability insurance protection. Even if you do have this insurance, the monthly benefit well may be inadequate.

Berry's World

The fundamental points are: loss-of-income or disability insurance pays you cash benefits which help replace your lost earnings because of disability up to a maximum of about 60 percent of your gross earnings; the insurance starts paying benefits from a week after the disability to six months later; the policies pay from a minimum of 13 weeks to a lifetime; you can buy disability insurance in an individual policy and frequently through your employer or an association to which you belong. Some specific guides:

(1) THE INDIVIDUAL POLICY is the most expensive. Its advantage is that it can be virtually tailor-made for you, with you selecting a policy written to the waiting time, size and duration of your preference. The policy can cover you wherever you move or work. (2) If you can buy a group policy through your employer, it will be cheaper. The disadvantages are that you can't take the policy with you if you

Ag Movement Sets National Convention

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The militant American Agriculture Movement is holding a national convention in Washington this month in its third annual winter trip to seek higher farm prices.

In addition to seeking parity prices, the farmers will protest lower prices following the Russian grain embargo and will promote gasohol.

The movement is snubbing the Agriculture Department. No department officials have been invited to address the convention.

"We've seen enough of Howard (Hort, the department's chief economist) and the secretary (Bob Bergland) following the grain embargo," said a spokesman.

In another symbolic act, farmers scheduled their meetings at the Commerce Department auditorium, to show their belief that parity prices are advantageous to the entire economy.

Parity is a standard to measure farmers' buying power based on farm prices in the years before World War I. Prices now average 64 percent of parity. The militant farmers want a floor under farm prices at 90 percent of parity.

About one-fourth of the nation's farms — or roughly 600,000 — produce nearly 80 percent of its food and fiber, with the largest 200,000 farms already producing half the agricultural supply.

There are no plans to hold events during the five-day convention at the Agriculture Department, where scores of meetings were held last year when farmers came to Washington.

In 1978, the movement was successful in helping persuade Congress to raise price supports for wheat and cotton.

Last year the farmers met with little success. Tractors tied up traffic into Washington Tractors were barricaded on Washington's Mall by police for more than a month.

This year farmers plan a "paritycade" of trucks, cars and campers fueled with gasohol, a blend of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent alcohol. Some vehicles will be fueled by a pure alcohol fuel.

They plan to set out from several Midwest locations on Monday and hold rallies at overnight stops along the way, arriving in Warrenton, Va. on Feb. 16.

Washington activities will begin Sunday, Feb. 17 when farmers plan to attend church services at the National Cathedral.

On Monday, when George Washington's birthday will be celebrated, they plan to demonstrate alcohol fuel on Washington's Mall. They expect to reach area residents who will be in the Mall area; spending the holiday at museums.

Convention proceedings will be held Tuesday and Wednesday. Keynote speaker will be Richard Gilmore, a former Senate Foreign Relations Committee aide who is writing a book about the multinational grain trade.

Last year he filed suit against the Agriculture Department to gain access to old, confidential documents about the grain trade.

Other speakers are expected to be a high State Department official discussing the grain embargo and Robert Gray, who is heading a federal study on the loss of farmland to development.

The convention is expected to consider several resolutions.

All presidential candidates, including President Carter, were invited to speak to the convention, but the group has received no replies.

National American Agriculture Movement chairman Marvin Meek of Plainview said he does not expect as many farmers to come to Washington as last year when 2,000 vehicles converged on the city. But he said he expected good attendance.

On Thursday and Friday of the convention week, farmers will lobby members of Congress.

In the first couple years of existence after its creation in late 1977, the movement was loosely organized and had no elected national leadership. This past year, it was incorporated and national officers were elected.

In an official statement, the movement said, "Prior to the recent grain embargo, prices were at a disastrous level." The statement said that the embargo made the problem worse by pushing down grain prices. Prices in some areas have rebounded.

Firms Hire Undercover Agents To Combat Corporate Theft

NEW YORK (UPI) — That new employee could be an undercover agent hired to find an inside thief. Corporate theft and corporate espionage have become so pervasive that supplying such agents to combat them is a thriving business, says Lee Beck.

Beck's firm, Searchers Investigating Co. of Los Angeles, has represented some of the biggest firms in the country, as well as law enforcement agencies and lawyers.

In one of its recent publicized cases, Beck was hired by MCA, Inc., and caught the chap who was pirating messages recorded by Pope John Paul II while he was still a cardinal.

"Actually, that was a small deal as business crime goes," Beck, a former actor and stage director, told United Press International.

The toll of crimes against corporations and crimes by corporations runs to billions of dollars a year, he said, and is a major contributory factor to the nation's high inflation rate.

"Stealing from the company, or shady practices by companies against each other have become a way of life in America," Beck said. So much so that companies now accept inventory losses of 6 to 8 percent from such theft.

Many companies are reluctant to prosecute white collar crime, Beck said. This encourages dishonest employees to broaden their depredations with little fear of harsh punishment.

It isn't moral lethargy, but the gross inefficiency of American criminal court procedure that makes firms unwilling to prosecute a dishonest employee, he said.

The court procedure is rigged in favor of the thief. The complainant often must sit eight hours in court in order to testify two minutes — if he is even allowed to testify. Rules of evidence also favor the defendant, he said.

Business firms are turning to outside guards, electronic surveillance and undercover agents to find ways to stop the losses.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19). Competitive situations are your cup of tea tomorrow. That old fight in you will come to the fore and help you grab the trophy. Don't let push get to shove, however.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Once you set your mind on a goal tomorrow you'll be very aggressive about seeing it realized, even though you may have a negative person trying to discourage you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Most of your energies tomorrow will be devoted to doing things for others, and you'll enjoy it. Be careful, however, not to let yourself be used.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You won't be happy tomorrow unless you're with those who enjoy the same activities as you. Avoid the bossy types, if at all possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Projects around the house give you the most pleasure tomorrow, but if you expect them to come out well, reject well-meaning advice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Make it a point to get together with some fun friends tomorrow. You'll be looking for excitement, and the best way to find it is with them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Nothing is too good for your family tomorrow. You'll demonstrate this in every way you can. Take care, however, not to become overly solicitous regarding their welfare.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You won't wait for things to come to you tomorrow. If what you want isn't happening fast enough, you'll take the bull by the horns and direct the action yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Trust your instincts tomorrow to guide you toward acquiring a material desire, and to ignore those who'd try to sell you a "get-rich-quick" scheme.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Better make plans to get out of the house tomorrow. You're far too restless and need to be around stimulating people who can sweep the cobwebs and doldrums away.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You make such a fine impression that others want to do nice things for you tomorrow. A jealous on-looker, however, may have a few unkind things to say about this.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It won't be difficult to put into immediate practice anything you are taught tomorrow. Seek out the teachers who can help develop your skills.

Total Sales Of Automobiles Rise Unexpectedly In January

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit is shaking its head in disbelief over January sales. General Motors is setting records, imports are going through the roof and total sales unexpectedly are up.

Leading importers sold 216,623 cars during the month, 58 percent ahead of January 1979. That gave them 27 percent of the U.S. market, nearly three percentage points better than the best previous month and more than nine points better than the 1979 month.

Put another way, foreign producers outsold the combined total sales of Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp., American Motors Corp. and the U.S.-made Volkswagen — all the major U.S. producers besides GM.

GM sales rose 0.3 percent to a record for the month, 380,848 cars, for 65 percent of the market for domestic makes. Nobody at GM could remember a market share that high, but spokesmen said that counting all cars, GM's share was 47 percent, a shade under normal.

Sales for the five U.S. producers slid only 7.5 percent where analysts were expecting the 20 percent decline typical of recent months. Thanks to GM, Big Three sales were down 8.6 percent despite declines of 23 percent at Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

VW sales dropped in the last 10 days of the month thanks to a three-week strike. It was the automaker's first decline since beginning U.S. production in mid-1978. For the month, however, sales still were up 16 percent.

AMC sales were 48 percent higher. AMC has enjoyed increases for months on the strength of its four-wheel drive Eagle model.

The five domestic producers sold 587,739 cars, a 7.5 percent decline from the previous January. Most analysts were expecting a 20 percent drop.

The import surge was so great, however, that dealers delivered a total of 804,362 cars, 4.2 percent above January 1979, the second-best January ever and the first improvement in year-to-year comparisons in 11 months.

"It proves there's no recession and people don't like American cars," said one analyst in the industry who requested anonymity.

Meanwhile, the United Auto Workers union raised the ante in its campaign against auto imports, now a bigger share of the U.S. market than ever before.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser said he would ask manufacturers on his trip to Japan next week to "restrain exports until the American market stabilizes; until we can convert to more small cars."

Fraser has called for Japanese companies to build cars in the United States. He has proposed a limit of 200,000 on U.S. sales by foreign competitors without U.S. production.

Stock Debate Heats Up Again On Wall Street

By CHET CURRIER
 NEW YORK (AP) — One of the long-running arguments in the realm of personal finance has been revived again in recent weeks: Are stocks a good hedge against inflation?

Yes, say analysts who point out that dividends have been rising at a 12 percent or better annual rate since the mid-1970s, while prices of many stocks have also climbed sharply.

No way, reply others who note that the Dow Jones industrial average was higher a dozen years ago than it is today.

The debate has heated up again because of what many people on Wall Street are calling a shift in the philosophy of many large investing institutions.

In the latter 1970s, these institutions — pension plans, insurance companies, mutual funds, college endowment funds, and the like — tended to shy away from stocks because they perceived them as too risky. Instead, they opted more and more for interest-bearing investments, ranging from short-term securities such as Treasury bills to long-term bonds.

But even the 10 percent-plus yields available on those short-term securities last year were no match for inflation, which ran at 13.3 percent as measured by the consumer price index.

And the bond market suffered a steep price decline which tarnished its image as a place to avoid or minimize market risks.

If bonds didn't fill the bill, where else could the institutions put their money? The choices were limited. Gold, real estate, and other "tangible" assets that proved to be good inflation hedges in the 1970s were still available, but certainly not at bargain prices.

That left stocks — still controversial, but relatively cheap by many traditional measures. In the first few weeks of 1980, stock prices rallied on record activity.

"At long last," suggested William LeFevre, an analyst at the brokerage firm of Granger & Co., "stocks are rising (at least partially) because investors now realize equities are about the last investment around that have not been bid up as an inflation hedge."

The most important question, of course, is whether this new view will gain widespread and lasting acceptance. If institutions were to make a major new commitment to stocks, any individual investor who already owned stocks would be in a position to sit back and reap the benefits of a bull market.

But some people aren't ready to conclude that all this will happen. "The perception of the degree to which stocks are an inflation hedge swings like a pendulum over time," observed Robert S. Salomon Jr. in a report for the Wall Street firm of Salomon Brothers.

The idea that stocks provide inflation protection has, not surprisingly, been popular when the market is strong, as in the 1960s, and derided when the market is weak, as in the mid-1970s.

Lately the market has been healthy, if not booming. Corporate profits and dividends are up, and many people have been making money in stocks.

However, says Salomon, "the naive extrapolation of these favorable conditions would appear to defy the laws of gravity."

One of the chief arguments for stocks as good investments in inflationary periods is that their dividends can rise, unlike the fixed interest payments on bonds.

Last year, reports Standard & Poor's Corp., dividends were increased more than 12 percent, on average, nearly matching the inflation rate.

But the number of dividend increases counted by the investment advisory firm was down 8 percent from the record total of 3,211 in 1978. This year, S&P looks for more signs of a slowdown.

"With the expectation of a slower economy, continuing inflationary pressures, and a possible tightening in money availability, the number of dividend increases is likely to shrink somewhat further," its analysts concluded, "and the amount of dividends paid may be up only modestly from the 1979 level."

Guerrillas Seek Help Of Whites

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — The promise of power and realities of an election campaign have brought a dramatic change in the attitude of Patriotic Front guerrilla leaders towards Rhodesia's minority white community.

Men who only months ago called for the annihilation of the whites now urge them to stay with promises of prosperity and peaceful co-existence.

Joshua Nkomo spearheaded the shift with persistent calls for reconciliation of the races.

"To all whites who have chosen Zimbabwe as their home, stay with us," he told a Bulawayo rally. "We are all the same. There is no boss."

Nkomo has met white business leaders to assure them they would have a future under a black government ruled by him. He hit this theme hard as soon as he returned from exile — with good reason.

He had an acute need to change his image from warmonger to peacemaker. His guerrillas shot down two civilian airliners with heavy loss of life, and Nkomo chuckled when claiming responsibility for one of them, filling whites with horror and hatred.

Robert Mugabe, the avowed Marxist leader of the Mozambique-based wing of the Front, also has sharply changed his stance towards the whites.

When his party held its first rally in Salisbury, his local representative, Enos Nkala, threatened the white community with a bloodbath.

"If they try to stave off black rule, they will see more blood than they have ever seen," Nkala said. "Their freedom, happiness and well-being depends on their conduct."

Within a month Mugabe was trying to discount fears that his party planned a revolution at the expense of the whites, as in Angola and Mozambique, if he gained power.

"All will be safe in Zimbabwe," he said in an interview. "We are definitely not going to harm anyone. There will be no vengeance or arrests."

He assured white farmers they would be allowed to keep the land they carved out of the bush and even said former Prime Minister Ian Smith would be allowed to live "in retirement" in the country.

Such promises might be broken once votes have been counted in the independence elections at the end of February. But for the moment, sources within the parties insist their leaders are sincere.

During the election campaign the guerrilla parties need the whites in their vote-getting efforts. Afterwards, they need key elements of the white community to keep the economy from a disastrous nose-dive.

Whites control the country's economy. They operate the factories and farms, provide the mechanical skills and run the mass media.

While the guerrillas fought in the bush, these factors meant little to them. Now that they are in the open fighting for votes, the situation is reversed.

Nkomo's followers woke to this fact when, trying to set up election machinery, they met obstructions at every turn.

When they applied for extra telephones, the post office said no lines were available.

SECURITY CHECK — Spectators at the mass murder trial of John W. Gacy, charged with slaying more people than anyone in the nation's history, are searched by security guards before entering the courtroom in Chicago Wednesday. Gacy is charged with the sex-related murders of 33 young men and boys and the prosecution will seek the death penalty. (AP Laserphoto)

Boy's Mother Collapses While Giving Testimony

CHICAGO (AP) — The mother of one of the 33 young men and boys John Wayne Gacy Jr. is accused of murdering collapsed in sobs today as she identified her son's bracelet during Gacy's trial.

Bessie Stapleton, mother of Samuel Stapleton, a 14-year-old who disappeared May 13, 1976, was helped from the room after she broke down. Judge Louis B. Garippo called a recess and excused the jury.

The incident occurred as prosecutor Terry Sullivan was questioning Mrs. Stapleton about her son's disappearance and introducing the bracelet as evidence. She told him her son wore a chain bracelet. Sullivan then took a bracelet from an envelope and slid it toward her.

"That's Sam's bracelet," Mrs. Stapleton shouted, sobbing violently as she collapsed in the chair.

Earlier, Marco Butkovich, a 51-year-old maintenance man, testified about his son, John, who disappeared in July, 1975. He said his son began working for Gacy, a building contractor, the year before.

Butkovich said he met Gacy in 1974. He said of Gacy: "I noticed nothing unusual. He seemed to be a good man, talked about the business." He said he last saw his son after the youth went to Gacy's house to pick up a check.

One of Gacy's attorneys said Wednesday the his client collected bodies like "souvenirs." The defense is trying to turn evidence 37-year-old Gacy killed 33 young men and boys into proof that he is "sick," "insane," "deranged" — a man with "a profound obsession."

Gacy is accused in the nation's worst mass murder case, and the prosecution has said it will seek the death penalty.

"If John Gacy swatted down 33 individuals" like flies "buzzing around his head," it only demonstrated his insanity, defense lawyer Robert Motta said in an opening statement to the jury of seven women and five men picked last week in Winnebago County, 85 miles northwest of Chicago due to heavy pretrial publicity.

Earlier Wednesday, Cook County Assistant State's Attorney Robert Egan told the jury Gacy homosexually attacked 33 young men ranging in age from 14 to 22 and then killed them, nearly all by strangulation.

Egan argued in his opening remarks that Gacy was a "rational, premeditated, evil man" who knew exactly what he was doing in the string of killings that began in January 1972 and ended on Dec. 11, 1978.

Egan, one of three prosecutors, said Gacy feared his neighbors would learn he was a homosexual and that there were "33 people who John Gacy snuffed out because they were inconvenient to him."

Gacy has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

"John Gacy collected souvenirs," said Motta. "He collected bodies. These facts the state will show you... The question of why is the most important."

Motta said in an hour-long address that Gacy "has a mind that is deranged, abnormal. John Gacy is insane under any standard... and could not control his conduct."

Twenty-six bodies were found under Gacy's ranch-style home in an unincorporated area north of Chicago. Three more were found on the property and four were recovered from rivers. Twenty-two bodies have been identified.

Motta said four psychiatrists will testify Gacy is a deranged psychotic. Gacy, he said, will require institutionalized psychiatric care for the rest of his life.

"The defense of insanity is valid and the only defense we could use here because that is where the truth lies," Motta said.

Gacy's victims were killed from early 1972 until 1978. In each instance, Egan said, Gacy used a "rope trick" to subdue the victim — putting a rope around the neck and using a bar or a pipe to twist it from behind like a tourniquet. Some victims were found with the rope still around their neck, he said.

"If there is a man among us as evil as John Gacy, God help us all," Egan said.

Washington (AP) — The Agriculture Department said today it has no evidence that Arab grocers in the United States are diverting profits from a food stamp fraud scheme to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Robert E. Magee, the department's assistant inspector general, told the House Agriculture Committee there have been 47 arrests recently in four cities in a crackdown against food stamp fraud.

Magee said almost all the suspects were store owners of Palestinian ancestry. But he said there was no evidence of an organized conspiracy to funnel the money to the PLO or any other Palestinian political organization.

"We have no information at all to draw (that) conclusion," he said.

Magee said the Agriculture Department did not conduct extensive investigations into the backgrounds of the suspects. He said some food stamps in the alleged fraud showed up in different cities than the one where they were issued.

But, Magee said, the department had no information linking Palestinians in one city with those arrested in other cities.

The potential for fraud in the $8 billion a year food stamp program is enormous, Magee suggested. But he refused to estimate how much money the government may have lost through the Palestinians.

He said the arrested grocers redeemed an average of $40,000 in food stamps each month, but he did not say how much might have been illegal.

The Agriculture Department's investigation was modeled after a so-called "Sting" operation in which undercover agents sold $400,000 in supposedly stolen food stamps at a discount to the grocers who would ultimately redeem them at full value.

Magee said the shop owners would "lay off" some of the stamps with other grocers at less than face value, something akin to illegal bookmakers who reduce their risks. That way, the stamps would be spread around in hopes of arousing less suspicion, he said.

Magee testified in place of Thomas F. McBride, the Agriculture Department's inspector general, who had been scheduled to appear.

Government Denies Food Stamp Link

nying a PLO connection. "We are aware of the speculation this involved a national ring and some of the money was destined to be sent out of the country for questionable purposes," said the statement. "We have absolutely no information to support such a conclusion."

McBride said Wednesday that food stamp fraud is "not all that unusual... We're investigating these kind of cases all the time."

A department report last year said at least $2.5 billion "in illegally obtained food stamps were redeemed" over a two-year period. There was no indication in the report of Palestinian involvement.

The Justice Department also said it was not aware of any evidence the money is going to the PLO.

Israel Sends Warplanes Over Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Fighting was reported in north Lebanon today between Christian militias, and Israeli warplanes swept over Beirut, already jittery because of reports that Syria plans to withdraw its peace-keeping forces from the port city.

At least two Israeli jets were spotted in the skies, flying from east to west. The sound of anti-aircraft batteries boomed across the city, triggering a cacophony of horn-toting from automobiles. Lunch-time crowds craned their necks to get a view of the planes.

There was no indication the ground fire had hit any of the warplanes, or that the jets had attacked any positions in Lebanon.

The Palestine Liberation Organization claimed it had shot at the Israeli warplanes. There was no immediate elaboration on the reports from state-owned Beirut radio.

Earlier, fighting between Christian groups in north Lebanon and threats by leftist militias complicated the central government's task of replacing departing Syrian army units with Lebanese army regulars.

Reports from the northern coastal town of Tripoli said several persons were wounded in heavy battles between the militias of pro-Syrian former President Suleiman Franjeh and the right-wing anti-Syrian Phalangist Party of Pierre Gemayel.

The Phalangist Voice of Lebanon radio station accused Franjeh's private army, the Marada Brigade, of launching an attack on several northern Lebanese villages early today.

Independent reports said the clashes involved the villages of Mazraat Bani-Saab, Qnat and Deir Billa, 13 miles south of Tripoli.

Franjeh, one of the founding members of the Lebanese Christian Front, split from the alliance two years ago over differences with his Phalangist and National Liberal partners who vehemently oppose the Syrian presence in Lebanon.

The inter-rightist fighting came as the central government went ahead with its preparations to deploy Lebanese army regulars to replace Syrian peace-keeping forces in Beirut and along the northern and southern highways.

Jurors In Florida Find Bundy Guilty Of Murder

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Theodore Robert Bundy, already under a death sentence for slaying two university sorority sisters, was found guilty today of killing 12-year-old schoolgirl Kimberly Diane Leach two years ago.

The five-man, seven-woman jury deliberated for two hours and 15 minutes Wednesday before retiring for the night to a hotel one block from the Orange County Courthouse.

The jurors had been sequestered since testimony began 2½ weeks ago following two weeks of jury selection.

Circuit Judge Wallace Jopling turned the case over to jurors after instructing them on the law in the case. He called a halt to their deliberations at 9:30 p.m. EST.

In closing arguments, the defense spent most of its time criticizing the testimony of the state's lone eyewitness while the prosecution urged jurors, "do not turn your backs" on the evidence, the victim and justice.

"In a sense, the judicial system is also on trial here," Bundy lawyer Victor Africano told the jury. "Can a man who has had this much publicity and so much exposure actually receive a fair trial?"

Bundy is under a double death sentence for the January 1978 murders of two Chi Omega sorority sisters at Florida State University. The former Tacoma, Wash., resident also has been charged with murder in Colorado and convicted of kidnapping in Utah.

Africano urged the jurors to forget the past and think of Bundy "only as the man on trial."

State attorney Jerry Blair and chief prosecutor Bob Dekle outlined the state's largely circumstantial case as one that did not depend on any single element.

Blair said scientific evidence showed Bundy was in a white van identified as the vehicle used to kidnap Miss Leach from her Lake City, Fla., junior high school on Feb. 9, 1978.

He said the girl also was shown to be in the van "and that both were in the vehicle at the same time."

The only conclusion, Blair said, "is that the defendant killed Kimberly Diane Leach and transported her in that van."

Chicago Teachers Defy New Court Work Order

CHICAGO (UPI) — Teachers defied a new back-to-work order today, again setting up picket lines amid swirling snow and Board of Education officials struggled to open classrooms in the nation's third-largest school district for the first time this week.

An early spot check showed pickets at many schools as teachers heeded the call of their union president to ignore a preliminary injunction issued Wednesday against the strike.

Operator Hurt In Explosion

BORGER (UPI) — An operator has been hospitalized with injuries from an explosion near the site of a blast that injured 41 persons and caused millions of dollars in damage Jan. 20.

C.D. Williams, 51, was injured Tuesday in an explosion that touched off a fire at the Phillex Plant of the Phillips Petroleum Co. The fire at Phillex, located about a quarter mile from the Phillips refinery where two explosions have occurred since last October, was extinguished quickly, officials said.

Williams was listed in satisfactory condition at North Plains Hospital with first, second and third-degree burns on his face and hands.

In October, two persons were killed and 15 others were injured when toxic fumes leaked from Unit 22 at the Phillips Refinery.

The company later was fined $15,000 by the federal Occupational and Safety Health Administration for violation of safety regulations.

Meanwhile, repairs are continuing at the Phillips plant where major damage resulted from the Jan. 20 explosion.

At one North Side school, officials reported parents joined picketing teachers.

Interim Schools Superintendent Angelina P. Caruso said the decision to open schools — made before the union announced it would ignore the court order — would hold good only if students were admitted "safely and prudently."

On another labor front, the president of the city firefighters' union expressed cautious optimism a contract — the first ever — covering the city's 4,350 firefighters and 1,000 supervisors could be reached soon.

Firefighters Union President Frank Muscare late Wednesday interrupted a meeting of the union's strike committee to say, "There is no strike in the immediate future because we are not at an impasse in our talks with the city."

"We are making progress. We're still unhappy about how things are going but we're optimistic we'll have a contract at the end of this. I'm not saying we won't be at an impasse tomorrow or the next day, but for now, we're making progress," Muscare said.

The strike committee adjourned its meeting late Wednesday night following discussion of the size of the bargaining unit, staffing levels in the fire department and wages. Muscare said today's bargaining session will open with a city counter-proposal.

Couple Sues Christian Science Church

DETROIT (AP) — A former suburban Detroit couple has sued the Christian Science Church and two of its healing practitioners in the 1977 death of their 16-month-old son.

The suit was filed this week in Wayne County Circuit Court by Douglas and Rita Swan of Jamestown, N.D., who lived in Grosse Pointe Park when their son, Matthew, became ill on June 17, 1977. He was treated by church practitioners for almost two weeks. The youngster died in a Detroit hospital July 7, 1977.

Sharon Lutz, lawyer for the Swans, said the action is unprecedented because it, unlike previous suits, makes no claim of malpractice against the church. At least three malpractice suits against the church have been lost in recent years.

The suit claims the practitioners neglected to follow proper church procedures in treating the child and the church neglected to make certain those procedures were followed. Lutz said.

Officials of the Mother Church in Boston were not available for comment.

The Swans name practitioners Jeanne Laitner of Grosse Pointe Park and June Ahearn of St. Clair Shores.

The Swans, who were raised in the Christian Science Church but now attend a Methodist church, are suing the church and the practitioners for at least $10,000 and have asked for a jury trial.

"Any money awarded will go to the Muscular Dystrophy Foundation," Swan, a mathematics professor at Jamestown College, said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

The Swans were told medical treatment would not help the child and "they would have a long, hard road back to Christian Science if they turned to medicine and that such thoughts were responsible for Matthew's condition."

The Swans claim that 10 days after the child became ill they asked for emergency treatment and that Miss Ahearn told them they should be "able to work this out without turning to medicine." The Swans said that three days later Miss Ahearn suggested the child might have a broken neck.

Separate Fires Kill Seven In Virginia

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Seven persons were killed in two separate early morning fires in this coastal city, authorities said.

A mother, her four children and a teen-age friend were killed when a fire swept through a small home in a housing project early Tuesday, they said. In another part of the city, about 4½ hours later, one person died, 13 were injured and 100 were evacuated after a fire raced through an apartment for the elderly.

Concord House is proud to present this fabulous showing and sale

Oriental rugs and carpets have been protected for centuries and the rugs and carpets produced today are the same in almost every respect as those produced 500 years ago. The best known and most beautiful rugs come from Persia but there also excellent pieces that come from China, Afghanistan, Turkey, Pakistan, India and Romania. There are other countries in Asia and Africa who produce handmade rugs, but we do not have enough space here to enumerate all of them. All these rugs are made of wool. There are exceptions such as some of the Persian Qum that are made of pure silk. One may ask why is a hand made oriental rug or carpet the most prized and sought after of all floor coverings? The main reasons are:

- 1) An oriental rug, being entirely hand made, has a guaranteed durability, even accidental damage can be repaired without decreasing the rug's value. This cannot be said of a machine made rug which once damaged, loses its value.
- 2) The decorative value of an oriental rug is undeniable it greatly enhances a room and creates an immediate impression of friendly warmth on entering it.
- 3) Provided it is used with care, the value of an oriental rug increases year by year. It is a safe investment and can be turned into ready cash at any time. It is sometimes believed that oriental rugs and carpets are very expensive items. This is not so. We have many fine pieces that sell at under $500.00. A brief summary of our rugs and carpets, and their characteristics, is as follows:

Persian: The finest pieces come from the towns such as Isfahan, Qum, Kashan, Tabriz and Kerman. In addition there are the nomadic rugs of coarser weave such as Hamadan, Shiraz, Abadeh, Afshar and Belouch. We also have Kelims which have no pile, which come in colorful, geometric designs. Chinese: The thickest pile of all carpets and rugs. They are very luxurious and come in embossed Aubusson, Floral and Peking designs. Pakistan: Specialises in Bokhara and Afghan designs and in excellent copies of Persian design. Considerably less expensive than Persian rugs. Afghan: in well known elephant foot designs in red and gold. Useful for offices and hallways. Other designs are also produced. India: Mainly heavy pile. Produced with beautiful pastel backgrounds in Floral, Aubusson or Chinese Peking designs. Turkish: Made of wool, silk and artificial silk. Some rugs rival those of Persia in quality and design. Reasonably priced. Romanian: mainly copies of Persian designs, but we also have large carpets with the Aubusson design made in wool supplied from England. Extremely good value at very low prices.

Lawmakers Study Tax Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House-Senate conference committee, after scoring a major breakthrough on President Carter's "windfall profits" tax on the oil industry, is trying to decide if part of the money should finance an income tax cut for individuals.

A path for final action on the tax bill was cleared Wednesday when the conferees broke a two-week stalemate and agreed that the tax on the oil industry should remain in effect at least until Sept. 30, 1980.

Still to be decided is an unrelated amendment, aimed at stimulating Americans to save and invest more. It would let an individual avoid income taxes on up to $201 a year — $400 for a couple — in interest and dividends.

Aides to the conference committee have proposed a spending package that would ticket at least $85 billion for individual tax cuts in the 1980s, with the first installment in October 1981.

The proposal also envisions federal aid of at least $4 billion a year to help

Prison's Black Inmates Fear Violence To Flare

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Black state prison inmates, saying they banded together during a bloody uprising to escape the wrath of other racial groups, say they fear further violence when the New Mexico State Penitentiary returns to normal.

Meanwhile, with the death count now at 33, anthropologists poked through the fire-gutted gymnasium and a dormitory of the prison looking for more victims of the brutal weekend violence.

Officials ordered the search in an effort to account for all of the 1,134 prisoners inside when the revolt at the maximum-security facility began early Saturday. The siege ended Sunday.

Corrections Division Director Felix Rodriguez said Wednesday night that the bodies of 33 inmates had been recovered. "I might be a fool and an optimist. But I think it should stay around that figure," he said.

doesn't know we are there. When he breaks the law we pop him."

He said a lot of the confidential information received is gained through known criminals and channeled through the different departments. "How do you catch a crook? Through another crook."

"The word is out on the street. The crook probably knows more about this than you do."

But the source said the operation has been effective and has slowed down house burglaries immensely in this city. Authorities hope the results will scare many of the burglars and thieves out of the area. The undercover investigations will continue until it's determined they have lost their effectiveness, he said.

"We have fugitives (and suspected criminals) so scared in this town. They're shook. They don't know who's a cop and who's not," the officer said.

The agents switch their unmarked cars on the average of once a week. "I might be driving a Mercury today and a Lincoln tomorrow," the source said.

Carter Set To Reveal Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will announce Friday his decision on whether to include women in his draft registration program, ending weeks of speculation and rumor, a White House source said today.

Carter reportedly decided Wednesday whether to include women in the program, and also made decisions on a range of other issues pertaining to the resumption of draft registration.

There was widespread speculation that the president favored including women.

The rebellion began as a reaction to overcrowding, lack of rehabilitation programs and harassment by guards, but turned into a racial incident, Wright said.

Inmate Richard Johnson said, "It was rough all the way through once the Mexican Mafia and Aryan Brotherhood combined and took over. Just as soon as they took over, the killings started taking place."

Johnson said he feared that blacks would be returned to one of the cell-blocks and face retribution even if separated from other inmates.

platform guests and all guests inside the gallery received a program with a pane of 10 stamps already canceled — "Lubbock, First Day of Issue."

The issue has attracted wide attention from philatelists, and a special first-day canceling machine, capable of imprinting perfect marks demanded by collectors, will be at the Lubbock post office through Feb. 22. Officials expect to cancel more than half a million first-day covers from collectors from all over the world.

King said he hopes to have several hundred maximum-security inmates in jails and prisons in Nevada, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arizona by Friday.

Johnson said he feared that blacks would be returned to one of the cell-blocks and face retribution even if separated from other inmates.

Congressman Gives Explanation For Pocketing $25,000 In Cash

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of eight members of Congress named in the FBI's bribery investigation admits taking $25,000 in cash, but says he did so as part of his own personal inquiry into wrongdoing by unidentified "shady characters."

Rep. Richard Kelly of Florida, the only Republican named in the FBI "sting," told that story in a lengthy interview on a network television news special Wednesday, shortly after the Justice Department indicated there likely would be indictments in the case within 90 days.

driving support from students and faculty members at Coronado.

Roddy said he has tried to approach officials at City Hall to learn more about the current issues. But he said most have treated his efforts lightly. Local firefighters, who recently sought public support in a special election here, have been the chief ones willing to discuss issues with him, the student said.

"I really would like to know both sides of the issues," Roddy said. He believes that if he gets some recognition, city officials will be more willing to discuss issues with him.

Campaign Slated To Recall Board

ESCONDIDO Calif. (AP) — School children here have no school buses to get them to classes and parents are so angry they want to recall the school board.

Blaming tax-slashing Proposition 13, officials canceled buses last year but arranged for a private company to provide rides for a fee.

Last Friday, the private line quit, citing financial losses. School officials asked parents to get their youngsters to school. Thirty-two failed to make it on Monday. The new Committee for Rides to Education, meanwhile, announced a campaign to recall the board.

decomposed state of Miss Valenzuela's body hindered pathologists. No visible wounds were found on the body, and four attempts at discovering what killed the young woman failed.

Bolen finally ruled Miss Valenzuela had been "murdered by unknown means."

AJ sources say new information in the case now indicates Miss Valenzuela was strangled. Her death, sources say, apparently was the result of a lover's quarrel and authorities have the name of a suspect.

If the new information, which was presented to the grand jury late Wednesday afternoon, does yield a murder charge in the case, sources say the indictment will be sealed because the suspect is not in custody. Another source said investigators believe the suspect already may have left the Lubbock area.

Farm Town's Residents Root For Reagan

TAMPICO, Ill. (UPI) — The dying farming town of Tampico has only one claim to fame: 69 years ago today, Ronald Reagan was born in a simple, six-room flat above a local restaurant.

Many of the village's 850 residents are rooting for Reagan to win the presidency — and revive their community by making it a national landmark.

"Tampico might become just like Plains, Ga.," one man cheerfully put it.

About 35 miles down the road in Dixon, Ill. — where Reagan's family moved when he was 9 and he became a high school hero — civic boosters nurture similar dreams for their bustling city of 18,000.

Tampico needs the help. About half of the dozen downtown business buildings are vacant. Three firms, including the town's only restaurant, were burned in a fall fire.

The owner of the First National Bank Building, where Reagan was born, is getting ready for the former California governor's inauguration by installing new furnace and restroom facilities in the 90-year-old red-brick structure.

"I'm trying to get the building presentable just in case he becomes president," said Paul Nicely, 60, a livestock farmer. "I'd like it to look fairly decent."

"It would become a national landmark," his wife Helen added. "Chances are it would be taken over by the state."

The building's first floor, now vacant, has housed Tampico's City Hall and a bank in addition to the restaurant. An elderly couple lives upstairs.

"People around here will rally behind him," predicted the Rev. George David, a Methodist minister. "It has a lot to do with our small town."

"Most of Tampico and this area are behind him," agreed Vernon Denison, a grade school classmate of Reagan's. "He's well thought of around here. We're certainly rooting for him."

"It might help the town," said Don Crow, glancing casually at a Reagan poster tacked to a wall of his gas station. "We had a lot of visitors when he was here last time."

The family that lived above the restaurant 69 years ago was poor and could not afford to stay long. Reagan's father, who worked as a clerk across the street in a general store when his son was born, hopped from town to town.

While Reagan was a boy, the family moved 35 miles northeast to Dixon, where he attended high school and became a star athlete, leading performer in class plays and president of the student body.

Injured Victim Put In Trunk

BELLEVUE, Iowa (UPI) — The town's mayor and police chief have reprimanded two police officers who transported an injury victim in the trunk of their new squad car to keep from staining the seats with his blood.

Mayor Larry Chaney and Police Chief Clarence Hinke issued a joint statement following a meeting with the officers, Mike Doyle, 20, and Jan Latta, 22, Monday night saying the pair would not be suspended for their involvement in the Jan. 15 incident.

"It is our opinion that circumstances warrant no suspensions or other punitive actions," the statement said.

In their statement, Chaney and Hinke noted both officers were responding to their first personal injury accident and had acknowledged making an error in judgment.

Noise Control Bill Sent To President

WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise bill relaxing noise control regulations for two-engine jet airliners is on its way to President Carter.

The Senate also approved this week, and sent to the House, a bill extending federal aid to airports for five additional years but limiting the aid to airports below a certain size. The noise bill amends an existing law that would have required jetliners to be replaced or refitted with quieter engines by 1983.

Virginia Teen-Ager Invents New Math Term

By PATRICIA MCCORMICK
United Press International Writer
You won't find the word "groshing" in a dictionary.

Michael Vincent Finn, 17, of Annandale, Va., recently invented it. That's why.

Finn gave the name to a mathematical system he developed. A "grosh," says he, "is the sum of powers of the digits of a number."
"Can't pretend to understand? Join the crowd."

Brainy types understanding such things decided Finn's project proving out "groshing" was worthy of winning status in the 39th Westinghouse Science Talent Search.

"By iterating his 'groshing' procedure, Michael produces a cyclic sequence of natural numbers," says the official description of the Virginian's project.

Others among the 40 winners focused on topics ranging from robins and rockets to the Red Sea, worms and ski chairlifts.

George F. Weinert, 17, of Gaithersburg, Md., probed the viability of a theory for the parting of the Red Sea — described in the Old Testament.

The phenomena he looked into holds such a division of a body of water might be cised by heavy celestial bodies passing the earth at close distance, creating a strong gravitational attraction. This would be similar to tidal forces caused by the moon and sun.

Honey bees put Gary E. McGahan, 18, on the track of earthworms. McGahan, from Decatur, Ala., read about bees signaling flower locations to other bees by secreting a substance. He set out to prove the existence of a similar substance, an alarm pherome, in earthworms.

He discovered worms in a T-maze would avoid a route on which other earthworms got an electric shock. They picked another path.

In Schenectady, N.Y., Kenneth G. Brownie, 17, designed and built a working model of an original type of ski chairlift. His design with a movable pulley arrangement allows chairs to slow down at stations where skiers get on or off, but move quickly between stations.

In Niceville, Fla., Mark V. Turner, 16, studied the effect of nozzle design on the performance of solid propellant rocket motors. Using skills he had learned fixing cars, Turner designed and built an eight-foot air track, a small glider, eight types of rocket nozzles and a Time Pulse Generator for measurements.

Using two types of solid propellant rocket motors, he ran 50 tests with various comb nations of nozzles. Results with his system — using relatively cheap, homemade components — compared favorably with proven rocket propulsion theory.

Craig Perdue, 17, of Livonia, Mich., studied robins. He reported abundant food supply and readily available nesting materials play a large role in a robin's reproductive success.

Perdue selected the robin because it nests in a wide variety of habitats common to many American birds. He hopes his field study will contribute to a more harmonious relationship between man, birds and the environment.

Capsules of other winning projects: —In El Paso, Lourdes Gamez, 17, looked at allelopathy, toxic effects plants can have on each other. She studied wild and cultivated grasses such as wild oats, barley and wheat.

—In Hillsboro, Ore., Faith Louise Van Nice, 18, investigated the hormone progesterone in cells extracted from dairy cow ovaries. She found smaller cells produce the progesterone.

—In Madison, Wis., Karen L. Middleton, 17, investigated effects of three drugs on the thyroid hormonal system. The thyroid, at the base of the neck, secretes two basic hormones which affect almost all organs. Some drugs make it overactive; others, underactive.

—In Riverdale, N.Y., Lee D. Turkel, 17, studied the visual system in dragonflies. Like other insects, they have an extra set of eyes — ocelli. Miss Turkel's report showed ocelli are present in the dragonfly before emergence from the egg.

—From Roosevelt Island, N.Y., Philip Sung-En Wang, 18, reported on the joba plant. Jojoba seeds produce a wax that could possibly replace the banned sperm whale oil and fossil petroleum in certain industrial applications. His study showed that the wax also exists in other plant organs, not just the seeds.

—In Cut Bank, Mont., Jenae R. Bunkak, 17, studied the fusion of soybean and barley plant cells with their walls removed — protoplasts. She came out with a protoplast that was half-barley and halfsoybean.

If past is prologue, it's a good idea to keep an eye on the winners — considered the nation's most promising budding scientists.

Winners in the 1944, 1947, 1950 searches went on to win Nobel Prizes in 1972, 1975, and 1979. Dr. Sheldon Glashow of Harvard University — a 1950 winner from the Bronx High School of Science in New York, and one of three scientists shared the 1979 Nobel Prize in physics.

During the 39 searches New York has produced the most winners, 469; Illinois, is second with 116; California, third, with 112; Pennsylvania, fourth, with 80; Ohio and New Jersey, tied for fifth, with 63.

After that: —Massachusetts, 54; Florida, 48; Wisconsin and Virginia, 38; Indiana, 37; Texas, 36.

—States which have had at least 10 winners include Maryland, 32; Oregon, 25; Connecticut, 23; Arizona, 21; Minnesota and Oklahoma, 19.

Clements Opposes TSTA Proposal

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has sent the Texas State Teachers Association a simple message about their 1981 legislative effort to gain teachers the right to bargain collectively and strike.

"If the Legislature passes it, I will veto it," Clements said Wednesday while the TSTA outlined its legislative program for reporters elsewhere in the Capitol.

"I am absolutely opposed to it and will oppose it in any way I know how. ... I think they (TSTA) are making a mistake. To borrow a phrase, I think they've shot themselves in the foot," Clements told a news conference.

TSTA leaders said their 118,000-member organization is not abandoning its insistence it is not a union, despite the new push for collective bargaining rights.

"We are a professional organization," said president Cecile Russell of Amarillo, who contended this makes TSTA different from the rival Texas Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO.

Major items in TSTA's legislative program are:

— Job security — similar to tenure at colleges — for teachers who satisfactorily complete a 1½-year probationary period. When lay-offs are necessary, senior teachers would go last.

— Collective bargaining, with teachers receiving a right to select by majority vote an organization to negotiate wages and working conditions with school boards.

— Higher salaries, but the amount of increase TSTA will seek has not been decided. Executive secretary Jim Butler said Texas teachers average $13,038 a year, compared with a national average over $15,000.

— A statewide group health insurance program for teachers and retired teachers that will cost $288 million per biennium.

"Because many teachers cannot afford to obtain health insurance, they are reluctant to be absent. So they teach when they should not. That hinders education," Mrs. Russell said.

TSTA's collective bargaining proposal leans heavily on binding arbitration to resolve impasses with school boards. It opposes strikes that "present a danger to public health or safety."

"I really feel there is not a teacher in this state that would like to strike. But when we are looking at the needs and concerns of our students, that would be a possibility," Mrs. Russell said.

At a Dallas news conference Tuesday, she said strikes would be useful to upgrade districts with "deplorable" conditions and in "situations where there is a lot of fear and concern on the part of teachers."

She said 70 percent of Texas teachers polled by TSTA support collective bargaining.

Mrs. Russell said teachers will be asked to support legislative and congressional candidates who endorse the TSTA's goals.

VETO THREATENED — Texas State Teacher's Association president Cecile Russell, left, tells reporters at an Austin news conference Wednesday that the TSTA plans to seek higher teacher salaries and a collective bargaining law in the 1981 legislature. However, Gov. Bill Clements, right, says he will veto any bill granting collective bargaining. (AP Laserphotos)

HRC Surveying Availability Of Medical Aid Programs

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock's Human Relations Commission is surveying city health facilities to determine the availability of programs for people who "fall through the cracks" between those who can pay their medical bills and the legally indigent.

"I know this is a strange thing for HRC," director Carolyn Lanier said, "but who else is doing it?" Mrs. Lanier explained that she was constantly receiving phone calls from people who are working and paying taxes, but still can't afford medical care.

She cited a complaint from a young woman who makes about $500 a month. Her 20-month-old child has a severe vision problem and had been seeing an ophthalmologist for treatment every two or three weeks at $25 to $35 per visit.

The young mother could not afford the treatment. After contacting the Texas Commission for the Blind, the Texas Tech Eye Clinic and a private physician, Mrs. Lanier found that most agencies assume another group is taking care of the problems.

The HRC survey is designed to find out which agencies are taking care of such problems. If the surveys document a need for an agency or program to provide medical care for the working poor, the HRC probably will approach the county medical society, Mrs. Lanier said.

In other business, the commission was told that letters have gone out to other cities which have agreed to name a street after Martin Luther King Jr. The letters request information relating to the process of naming or changing the names of streets in other cities as well as the response to the name change.

The information is requested in light of the recent push by some city groups to rename Quirt Avenue after King. City officials cite a local ordinance preventing the naming of city streets after people, claiming that if they make an exception to the ordinance it will create a flood of such requests.

Mrs. Lanier also reported that in response to a drive to recruit minorities for the police force, pamphlets are being printed for distribution before the Feb. 15 deadline. City public information director Vaughn Hendrie told the group that 157 persons have picked up applications for police work, 12 of them women.

Deans Ordered To Remain Silent

DALLAS (AP) — Country and Western singer Jimmy Dean settled a libel suit filed against him by his brother, Don Dean, out of court Wednesday, but was prohibited by court order from discussing the case.

Don Dean, formerly a 50-50 partner with the singer in the Jimmy Dean sausage company, sold his interest in the firm in 1976, and then filed the libel and slander suit two years ago after complaining that his brother had made derogatory remarks about him in broadcast and press interviews.

The suit asked more than $4 million. The Dallas Times Herald reported today the entertainer agreed to pay more than $75,000 in the out-of-court agreement, but both Dean brothers abided by the gag order and declined comment.

"It's hardly my nature, but I will comply with the wishes of the court," Jimmy Dean said.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders said, "Among all controversies, the most bitter, most profitless and hardest to solve are those that involve families."

"As public figures, you are expected to stand a little taller and walk a little straighter than others," Sanders told the Dean brothers, but he added, "It is not up to me to lecture or give sermons."

A BAGEL IS A DOUGHNUT WITH RIGOR MORTIS

Legislative Session Planned For August

AUSTIN (UPI) — Gov. Bill Clements, citing the necessity of cleaning up state business before the November general election, has decided to call a special session of the Legislature in August.

"It will be in August," he said Wednesday during a private interview with four reporters in his office.

Clements earlier had ruled out March and indicated the date would be set for either August or September, but he said he eliminated September because of its proximity to the general election.

The governor's main purpose in calling the session is to allow consideration of three of his pet projects: authorization of the use of wiretapping devices in major drug cases, initiative and referendum, and additional tax relief.

Clements said he was considering other items to add to the special agenda, but indicated he hoped the Legislature could accomplish its business in fewer than 30 days, the maximum length of time the lawmakers can meet in special session.

The governor also predicted that the four major Republican presidential candidates who have qualified to enter the Texas May 3 primary — John Connally, George Bush, Ronald Reagan and Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn. — would still be in contention by late spring.

"I wouldn't be surprised if we still didn't have the four candidates still contending," he said.

Clements said Texas would be pivotal in the Republican race and in the general election in November. He made reference to former President Ford's having been confident of carrying Texas in 1976, then losing to Reagan in the Republican primary and to President Carter in the general election.

Opening lead: Two of ♦.

One axiom of declarer play is to plan the campaign before playing to the first trick. Not enough stress is put on the fact that the same holds true for the defense.

Since his heart suit was not biddable, South correctly opened one diamond, but this led to a rebid problem when North responded two clubs. His choice of two no trump has our endorsement—in modern theory, this bid does not show extra values—and North's raise to game was automatic.

The opening lead of the two of spades was covered by the five and king and won with the ace. Declarer ran the ten of clubs and East, after a few moment's thought, correctly ducked. The club finesse was repeated and East won the king. However, the contract was no longer beatable because the jack of spades was a sure entry to dummy's clubs.

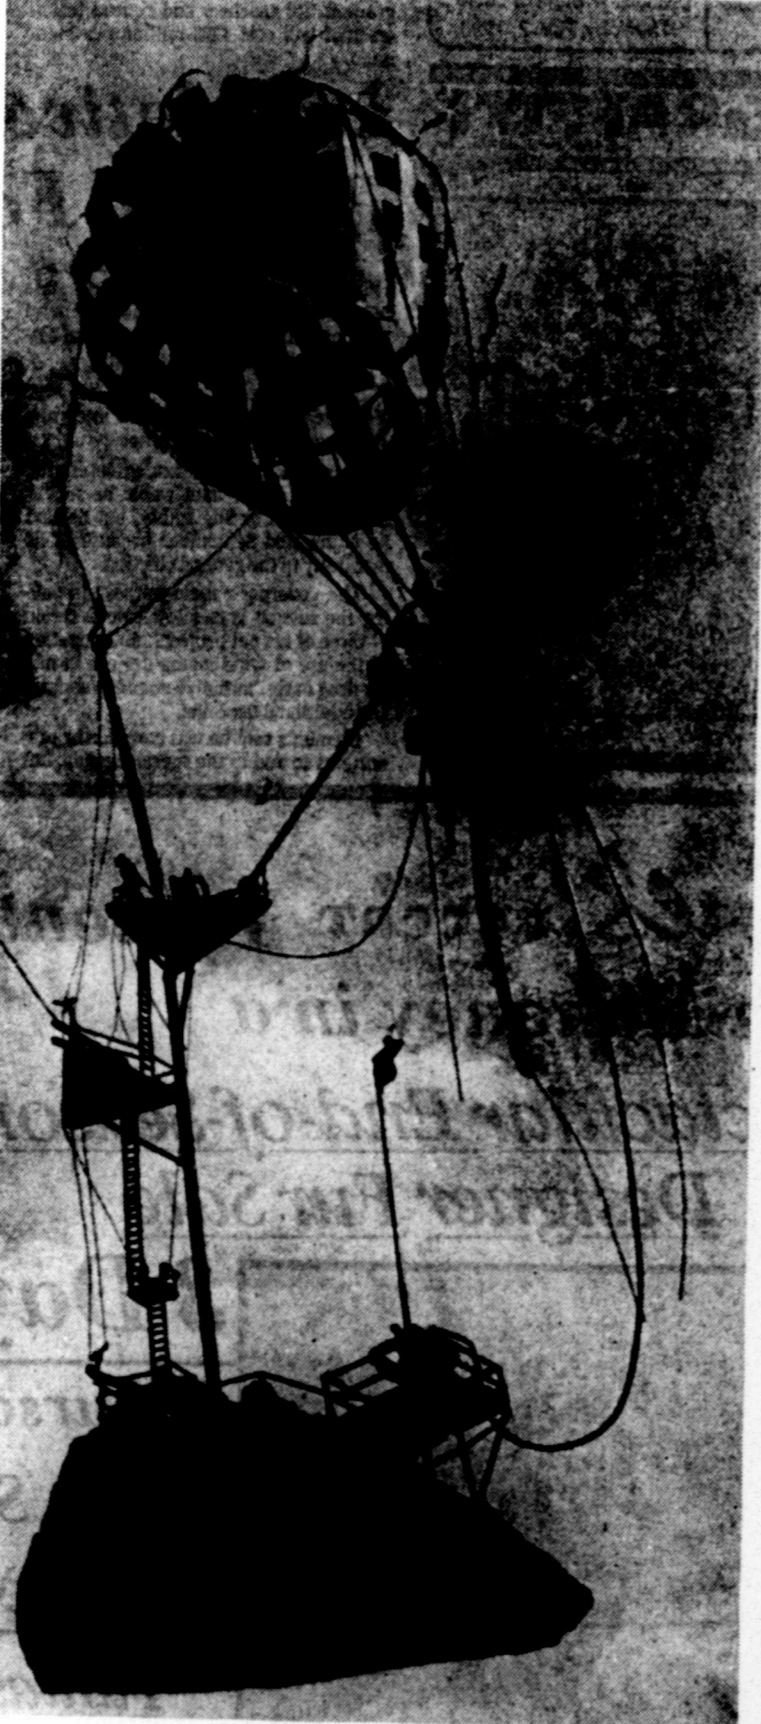

East did well to hold up the king of clubs one round in case declarer held a doubleton. He would have done even better had he decided to think about the hand as a whole before playing to the first trick.

Obviously, the club suit in dummy posed a serious threat. It was equally apparent that entries to dummy were not exactly plentiful. East had the ace of hearts over the king, and he could hold up the king of clubs for one round to prevent declarer from running that suit. The only possible entry card was the jack of spades. Therefore, East should have retained the king of spades in case it was needed to neutralize the jack.

Not only would East have defeated the contract had he played a low spade to the first trick, his play wouldn't even have cost a trick. No matter which card East chose to play, declarer was destined to get two spade tricks. The only difference is that playing low permits East to concede one trick early and cheaper than he had imagined.

Dear Abby,

DEAR ABBY: Two and a half years ago I married a lovely girl named Ramona. She was 20 and I was 26. It was the first marriage for both of us. On our honeymoon, Ramona was killed. (Thank God it wasn't my fault. Ramona was driving.) I am getting married again. It will be the first marriage for Suzie. She wants a big wedding, which I really don't want. But, for her sake, we are having one.

As far as I'm concerned, I've already had my wedding and gifts, so should I put a notation on the invitations saying, "No gifts," or what? My friends and relatives gave already, and once is enough. Or do you think I should leave it up to them?

After Ramona's funeral I asked everyone if they wanted their gifts back, and they all said no.

Also, should I send a wedding invitation to Ramona's folks? I haven't told them about Suzie yet. I can't get up the nerve since they are still grieving. Answer soon.

GETTING MARRIED

DEAR GETTING: Don't put "no gifts" on your wedding invitations; leave it up to the guests (even though your friends and family gave once, this is Suzie's first marriage, and discouraging gifts would be unfair to her.)

Tell Ramona's folks personally — and soon. If they're still grieving, don't send them an invitation to your wedding. Good luck. I wish you joy.

DEAR ABBY: Before my husband married me, he had a girlfriend who was the ultimate in charm, beauty, manners, etc.

Lest I forget this, my mother-in-law reminds me every time I see her.

Finally, one day, when I had had it up to here, I said, "Listen, Barbara is gone, and I am here, so you can shut the hell up!"

My husband agrees that I am the injured party, but he wants me to apologize. But don't you think his mother was wrong in the first place?

SUCCESSOR

DEAR SUCCESSOR: She was wrong, but you were rude. Apologize.

DEAR ABBY: God bless you for saving not only my sanity, but my life.

A little more than a year ago you suggested I come to terms with a serious drinking problem and seek out Alcoholics Anonymous. It turned out not only to be a life-saver, but also an entirely new life and serenity I never knew before.

With my brothers and sisters in AA, I have learned I am not alone as I once so deeply felt. But most importantly, I have learned how to care for others and myself and maybe for the first time in my life, I know how to love another human being.

I took you up on your suggestion of AA, Abby, and with the fellowship's help and my staying with my Higher Power, I celebrated a complete year of sobriety this January!

Of those readers going through the hell of alcohol addiction, please tell them what AA has to offer, that it is there for the taking with no questions, dues and fees. And what AA has to offer is life, not only a sober one, but a beautiful one.

Thank you again for my life, Abby.

RECOVERING IN INDIANA

SAN FRANCISCO (Special) — Serve Marinated Beef and Walnut Salad for the main course of a luncheon or supper, along with crusty French bread and a dessert, and you'll have a meal fit for royalty — especially the king of your castle for this is a real man-pleaser.

This delicious recipe calls for strips of beef (a good way to use leftover stead or roast) which are marinated in a wonderfully tangy dressing along with mushrooms and pimiento. Once this tasty mixture is heated on a bed of crisp shredded lettuce, the final touch of superb flavor and texture is a generous sprinkling of toasted, seasoned walnuts.

While the recipe calls for coarsely chopped walnuts, you may want to leave the kernels in even larger pieces to enjoy good big bites of their crunchy texture and well-seasoned flavor.

The Horseradish Cream is optional, but it is a tasty addition and mixes well with the salad dressing. Pass it in a serving bowl for those who want an extra filip of flavor.

Since seasoned toasted walnuts make such delicious croutons as well for other salads of tossed greens, seafood and chicken, it's a good idea to make up a big batch at one time to have on hand. The fixing is easy — just increase the proportions given in this recipe and store the toasted seasoned walnuts airtight in your refrigerator where they'll keep well for several weeks.

For big batches of this recipe — just as for big baking sprees — you'll find it a timesaver to use already-shelled walnuts. If you want perfect walnut halves to garnish this salad, pick up a package of in-the-shell walnuts. It just takes a nut-cracker and a little care.

Marinated Beef And Walnut Salad
2/3 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1 tsp. salad oil
1/4 tsp. marjoram, crumbled
1/4 tsp. seasoned salt
1/2 cup salad oil

DEAR RECOVERING: Don't thank me. I merely threw you a lifeline; you caught it!

Beef Salad Brightens Menu

1/4 cup garlic flavor red wine vinegar
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. dry mustard
1/4 tsp. granulated sugar
1/4 tsp. lemon pepper seasoning
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
2 tbsps. pimiento strips
Lettuce leaves
1 qt. shredded iceberg lettuce
1 cup cooked beef strips
Horseradish Cream
Turn walnuts, 1 teaspoon oil and marjoram into small skillet and toast over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, for 6 to 8 minutes, just until very lightly browned. Remove from heat and sprinkle with seasoned salt. In a small jar, combine 1/2 cup oil with vinegar, salt, mustard, sugar and lemon pepper; cover tightly and shake until well mixed. Pour over mushrooms and pimiento strips; refrigerate until needed (1 hour or longer). At serving time, line individual serving bowls or plates with lettuce leaves; add a cup of shredded lettuce to each. Add beef strips to dressing mixture; combine well and spoon over lettuce in bowls. Sprinkle the seasoned walnuts over top of each salad if desired, serve with Horseradish Cream. Makes 4 servings.

Reader's Exchange

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Hello, again!
Jo Ann Ray, Lubbock, sent a recipe for "Dream Pie" that was printed in the A-J 16 or 17 years ago. So, for everyone, including Eloise Maynard, here is the recipe (it must be a good one!).

DREAM PIE

- 2 eggs
- 1 cup light corn syrup
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 1/4 cup flour
- 1 cup coffee cream
- 1 cup pecans
- 1 cup coconut
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1/2 tsp. melted butter
- 2 unbaked pie shells

Mix dry ingredients, add cream and syrup and beat well. Add eggs, vanilla, pecans and coconut and continue mixing. Pour into 2 unbaked pie shells and bake at 350 degrees until brown. Can be served with ice cream or whipped cream.

Well, you asked for casserole recipes, and here are some most unusual ones!
La Norma Stringer, Lubbock, enclosed the following two recipes.

ZUCCHINI CASSEROLE

- 1 clove garlic
 - 1 cup sliced red onions
 - 1/2 green pepper, thinly sliced
 - 2 tps. cooking oil
 - 1 lb. ripe tomatoes sliced or a 16-oz. can
 - 3 cups thinly sliced zucchini
 - 1 cup grated cheese
- Saute garlic, onions and peppers in hot oil. Add zucchini, tomatoes, 1 tsp. salt and 1/4 tsp. pepper. Cook for 2 minutes. Place in a shallow baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes or until zucchini is tender. Sprinkle with cheese. Cook until cheese melts 5 to 8 minutes. Makes eight servings.

FINNAN HADDIE AND POTATO CASSEROLE

- 3/4 lb. finnan haddie
 - 4 med. potatoes peeled and diced
 - 2 1/2 cups milk
 - 2 tps. butter
- Cut finnan haddie into serving-size pieces, and put into sauce pan with potatoes and milk. Heat slowly until milk begins to simmer. Turn into a shallow baking dish, and dot with butter. Bake in oven 350 degrees until potatoes are tender, about 30 to 35 minutes. Serves five.

Zahn Turner, Floydada, would like the recipe used by Furr's Cafeterias for "German Chocolate Pie." She wrote, "I have tried several recipes but none can compare."

BANANA SPLIT CAKE

(sent by Darlene Herring)
2 cups graham cracker crumbs
1 stick oleomargarine, melted
Add crumbs, pat into 13 x 9 x 2-inch pan and bake 8 minutes at 350 degrees.

Filling:
2 eggs
2 cups confectioners' sugar
1 stick oleomargarine
Beat all ingredients no less than 15 minutes. Spread on top of cooled graham cracker crust. Slice 4 bananas on top of filling. Add 1 large can drained crushed pineapple. Cover with 1 large carton commercially-prepared and frozen whipped cream topping. Garnish with pecans and maraschino cherries. Refrigerate.

BANANA SPLIT CAKE

(sent by Mrs. Joe Pryor of Hobbs)
Mix 2 cups graham cracker crumbs with 1 stick melted oleomargarine. Line oblong (approximately 13 x 3 x 2-in.) pan with above.

Mix:
2 cups powdered sugar
2 sticks oleomargarine (room temperature)
2 eggs
Beat 15 minutes.
Put on top of crumbs.
Then, slice three or four bananas and put on top, and follow with a large can of crushed pineapple (drained) on bananas. Top with 9-oz. whipped cream topping, maraschino cherries and one cup of pecans. Chill overnight.

Pat Snider of Snyder enclosed a similar recipe. Thanks, Pat! She would also like a recipe for "Green Enchiladas" if anyone has a good one.

Mrs. Royce Stanley, Spade, enclosed several recipes. May we just use two this time?

NAVAJO TACOS

Sauce:
4 cups cooked pinto beans
1 15-oz. can tomato sauce
1 small jar picante sauce
2 lbs. ground beef
Brown meat. Add meat to bean mixture and simmer about 30 minutes until most of liquid is absorbed. Spoon meat mixture over fry bread and top with choice of grated cheese, lettuce, onion, tomatoes and avocados.

Fry Bread:
2 1/2 cups flour
1/4 tsp. salt
1 to 1 1/4 cups water
4 tps. baking powder
1 rounded tsp. shortening
Mix everything together, cover and let set 15 minutes. Fill heavy skillet 1 to 1 1/2 inches deep with shortening and let get very hot. Knead large spoonful of dough with enough flour to roll. Roll into size of saucer, punch hole in center about the size of a penny, and place in hot shortening. Fry until light brown and turn over once. Drain and serve hot.

BUTTERNUT POUND CAKE

3 cups sugar
1 small (the smallest) can evaporated milk
1 1/3 cup water
1/2 cup shortening
1 cup oleomargarine
5 eggs
2 tps. vanilla, butter and nut flavoring (this is in one bottle)
1/4 tsp. salt
3 3/4 cups flour
Beat sugar, oleomargarine, shortening together, add flavoring and beat in eggs, one at a time. Mix water and milk together, adding alternately with dry ingredients. Pour into greased and floured tube pan. Place in cold oven and bake approximately one hour and 40 minutes at 325 degrees. You can also bake in two loaf pans but if you do, cut the time of baking by 20 to 25 minutes.

Here is a "super" one dish meal recipe. Thanks to Charlene Haynie of Lubbock for sending it.

BEEF AND TATER CASSEROLE

Spice Experts Give Tips For Storage

NEW YORK (Special) — Although most spices may, and should, be stored on your spice shelf — away from direct light and heat — some spices retain their color and flavor best when stored at even cooler temperatures — in your refrigerator. Among these, according to the American Spice Trade Association, are the capsicums: paprika, red pepper and chili powder. Parsley flakes retain their green color longer when refrigerated. And the spices which are particularly oily, such as poppy and sesame seed, are also best kept cold. The refrigerator door, because of both easy vision and easy reach, is a logical place to store the containers.

Several Centenarians Visit Washington

BY GHITA LEVINE

NEW YORK (WNS) — It was "show and tell" on Capitol Hill recently.

Maria de Quiroz showed the bright patchwork quilt she had stitched with her century-old hands just the week before. Harry Lieberman told how he signed a seven-year contract to illustrate art calendars on his 100th birthday. And Lizzie Dickens said she had only lost four teeth in her 103 years.

Altogether, there were eight centenarians sitting in a row in the large meeting room, staring politely at the huge, elevated mahogany podium where the congressmen sit. All around them, couching on the floor, leaning over their heads, pushing forward, coming up from behind, were dozens of men and women only a quarter their age trying to get a good look.

Some focused huge, bulky television cameras into position while others adjusted their zoom lenses to catch these incredibly wrinkle-free faces. Still others pushed long-handled microphones overhead, underneath, in front and behind to catch any words that might reveal the secrets of their long lives.

For three hours, these century-old men and women sat good-naturedly under the strong camera lights responding to clumsy, redundant questions about their diet, their families, their health.

Leading the questioning was Claude Pepper, D-Fla., the oldest congressman at age 79 and chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging.

Over to the left sat slim George Washington White, the oldest man in the room at 112, who worked as a fireman for the Southern Railroad Company and who never went to school.

"Back then they didn't have schools for colored people," he says. Leaning back, he listened to the proceedings through ear plugs that looked like the apparatus to a dictating machine.

Next to him sat Nanreen Walton, a fit 104, ablaze in a bright dress, hands folded over a cane but mouth unfolding frequently into an infectious chuckle revealing only occasional white teeth.

Beside her was Maria de Quiroz, born in Mexico but a U.S. resident since 1919, her full, pretty face speckled with brown patches and a jaunty velour hat on her head. Mrs. de Quiroz took her first airplane flight the day before.

And so it went, pleasant, unassuming people with stories lifted right out of a history book.

Dr. W.L. Pannell, born July 31, 1879, in Kingston, Ontario, graduated from Queen's University in 1901, worked as a country physician in the "horse and buggy days" and returned to medical school five years later in New York to become an ear, nose and throat specialist. He is still seeing patients in his office today, at age 101.

Lizzie Dickens, born Nov. 19, 1876, in Halifax, N.C., where she lived the hard life of a sharecropper — shucking corn, planting peanuts, picking cotton. She only stopped gardening two years ago, at age 101.

Ida Johnson is a meticulously groomed woman with a disarmingly strong voice and the look of a school-teacher of about 55. Born Nov. 12, 1875, she entered a hospital for the first time in her life when she was 100 years old.

"They put me in intensive care for two days and two nights, no disease, I was just weak," she explained. "Then they sent me to a nursing home." She refused to stay, longing to go home. "Plus I didn't see the need for the government to pay two hundred and sixty-five dollars a month when they paid me only one hundred and ninety-seven dollars," she said. Mrs. Johnson lives alone in her own house.

And Harry Lieberman, an erect elegant man with a white goatee and a long white ponytail of hair down his back, a fresh daisy pinned on his suit lapel. Born on Nov. 15, 1876, in a small village outside Warsaw, Poland, he started life in New York as a clothing cutter in 1906, then built up a lucrative confectionary business until he retired in 1956.

Six years later, after the "six worst years of my life," he picked up a paint brush for the very first time at age 80 and quickly became a successful and renowned artist.

"I don't call myself young, because I know I'm not. I don't call myself old, either," he says. Lieberman will concede to "mature," though. "The longer you live, the more mature you get," he says.

What magical secrets were unleashed in the congressional caucus room that day? Activity seemed to be the single key to all these long lives. Artist Lieberman had just scaled down from a hectic 14 hours a day at his easel to a daily maximum of four hours.

Ida Johnson, who had worked in the cotton fields, farmed and "did everything except dig ditches; as a younger woman, worked in a nursing home until well into her 90s and still volunteers now. Each day she eats lunch at a nearby senior center. Each summer, she goes camping.

Nanreen Walton, who takes no medication at all and who takes care of her two-year-old great-grandchild, advises, "Just keep on doin' something. Make quilts or rake the yard, but do somethin'."

Many had parents or close relatives who also lived long lives, such as 112-year-old George White's father, who lived to 113. Mrs. Walton's mother died at 91. Perry West, a 101-year-old brick manufacturer, whose mother lived to be 90, a sister to 96 and a second cousin alive today at 108.

Diet was not much of a clue. Although White eats raw eggs every morning, Walton eats "hard food — bread, corn and meat." While Dr. Pannell has virtually eliminated all fats and sweets, the others admit they'll "eat anything and everything."

White smokes, chews tobacco and drinks whiskey. Dr. Pannell enjoys good Scotch. And Ida Johnson swears a life-long habit of going to bed early has lengthened her life.

What they do have in common is a legacy of a tough, hard-working life. The women worked out in the fields or raised children without husbands. The men worked long years. West didn't retire until 93.

What they also share is good humor. "I was never sick a day in my life except for typhoid fever," says George Washington White. And to Harry Lieberman 102 "isn't old at all."

Mortgage Interest Rate Record Set In January

WASHINGTON (AP) — The effective interest rate for all conventional home mortgages hit a new high last month and is certain to go even higher, the government says.

The rate reached 12.03 percent in early January, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Wednesday, adding that future mortgage rates probably will average more than 13 percent — a figure already eclipsed in some parts of the nation.

Meanwhile, labor officials and homebuilders urged Congress Wednesday to quickly approve $10 billion to help people buy homes at low mortgage rates.

The Carter administration opposes such fast action, although it favors a similar plan spread over a longer period. Administration officials warned a Senate banking committee that injecting that sum into the economy to subsidize mortgages now could fuel double-digit inflation.

Under the program, the government would buy mortgages and then resell them to homebuyers at rates below the current, virtually prohibitive levels facing many Americans.

Bank board chairman Jay Janis, also testifying before the committee, said, "Higher market interest rates, the poor savings experience of thrift institutions that supply most funds, and the Federal Reserve's continued anti-inflation policy all contributed to the higher mortgage rates."

Mortgage demand remains weak, he said. And while mortgage funds are available in major markets, "loan commitment activity remains low, and points to further reductions in housing starts."

Housing demand also is deflated by the economy's uncertain outlook, he said.

Budget Proposal Has Drawbacks For President

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal budget is a political document with the numbers filled in, and that can have its drawbacks for a president seeking re-election.

The president has to say what he wants to do and what he thinks it will cost. His challengers can go heavy on the proposals and light on the specifics.

"A budget rests on specific proposals related to specific costs, not on rhetoric," President Carter said in proposing his $616 billion budget for the 12 months beginning next Oct. 1.

Carter's proposals are not those he made when he was a challenger and a Republican administration was doing the budgeting four years ago.

Defense spending is up, not down, and Carter said it will be his policy to increase defense budgets through 1985.

Once it was Carter who said he could spend less and build a leaner, tougher fighting force. Now Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, challenging him for the Democratic presidential nomination, says he wants to be the president "who improves our military without gilding our weapons."

This was to have been the year when the federal budget was balanced, instead, Carter forecasts a $16 billion deficit. The administration projects black-ink budgets beginning next year, but acknowledges that it cannot be guaranteed.

"The president who promised a balanced budget as a candidate four years ago now proposes a budget with a deficit of $16 billion," Kennedy said.

That's down from about $66 billion the year before Carter took office. It would be the lowest deficit in seven years.

Kennedy chose another set of numbers. "If you take this new deficit and add it to other Carter deficits of the past three years, you will discover an extraordinary thing — the total federal deficit during the Carter administration will go down in the economic record book as the largest deficit of any presidential term in the history of America."

The challenger, of course, is not required to translate his proposals into a deficit or a surplus.

The budget also has to include economic forecasts, and if those figures prove accurate, Carter will be campaigning for a second term with inflation still in double digits and unemployment increasing.

In his first campaign, Carter said he would strive to hold both inflation and unemployment to no more than 4 percent by the end of his first term.

Instead, the administration foresees inflation of 10.4 percent this year, with the unemployment rate expected to go up to 7.5 percent.

Those are politically damaging rates, or will be, when and if the campaign focus shifts from foreign crises to economic woes at home.

That can't happen too soon for Kennedy, who has been trying for weeks to make campaign capital out of economic issues. Kennedy's managers contend the focus on foreign crises cost him heavily in Iowa's precinct caucuses, which Carter won by a margin of nearly 2-1.

"The 1980 election should not be a plebiscite on the ayatollah or Afghanistan," Kennedy said recently. "The silence that has descended across foreign policy has also stifled the debate on other essential issues."

Seeking to change that, Kennedy has called for a wage-price freeze followed by mandatory controls, and for gasoline rationing to curb oil imports.

At the same time, Kennedy directly challenged Carter policies on Iran, Afghanistan and the Persian Gulf. He described Afghanistan as a regional crisis, and said it does not justify "a reflex decision to spend many billions more on defense systems that have no relevance."

On defense spending as on domestic issues, the differences between the two Democrats center on the priorities set by the budget Carter has just sent to Congress.

THE CAPITOL

Byrd 'Speechless' Before Reporters

By TOM RAUM
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's new federal budget has produced lots of vocal reaction on Capitol Hill, but left Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd speechless.

When Carter sent his $616 billion fiscal 1981 budget message to Congress the other day, reporters flocked to the Senate chamber to gather responses from Senate leaders.

Each day, Byrd and his Republican counterpart hold short news conferences on the Senate floor before the day's session begins.

But on budget day, Byrd arrived about one minute before the Senate was to convene. The first question, of course, was about the budget.

"Well," he said.

As reporters waited with pens poised over notepads, the West Virginia Democrat rocked on his heels. And gazed into the distance.

Then the bell rang, signaling the start of the session.

"That wasn't deliberate," Byrd said as reporters were escorted from the floor.

Somewhat less than speechless was Budget Director James T. McIntyre, who testified before the Senate Budget Committee in defense of his boss's budget message.

"The uncontrollable items are driving this budget. That doesn't mean the budget is out of control," said McIntyre. "We have good control over the controllables."

Endorsement Backfires

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., a dropout from the 1976 presidential race, is beginning to wonder if he isn't jinxed after backing Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for the 1980 Democratic nomination.

"The week after I endorsed him, Kennedy dropped 20 points in the polls," Udall has been telling reporters. "That being the case, I'm now considering endorsing Ronald Reagan."

Salvage Program Saves Egyptian Monuments

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — Twenty temples honoring Isis, the mother goddess of Egypt, have been saved from drowning in the Nile.

The rescue of the temples on Philae Island between the old and new Aswan dams 600 miles south of the Mediterranean culminates a 20-year international effort that also rescued the famed temples of Abu Simbel and other lesser edifices from rising waters and lakes created by the damming of the River Nile.

The salvage program was the result of an appeal by Egypt and Sudan in 1959 to save the monuments in Nubia, and prevent progress — in the form of the Aswan High Dam that backed up the floodwaters of the Nile — from submerging a nation's history.

In the case of Abu Simbel, known for its gigantic statues of the Pharaoh Ramses II, engineers and archaeologists cut it out of the rock mountain in which it was carved and raised the temple above the water level.

The temples of Isis, nestled on the island of Philae for nearly 2,000 years, were dismantled block by block and moved to the nearby island of Agilkia which will remain above the water level.

When the British built the first Aswan Dam in 1902 the Nile rose around Philae, submerging the temples for nine months every year. The Aswan High Dam, completed in 1970, trapped Philae in a growing lake between the two dams.

The threat of submersion and erosion launched the United Nations Educational, Social and Cultural Organization's international drive to save the Nubian monuments, and in 1971 the work began on Philae to save the temples that withstood Pharaohs, Greek rulers, Roman invaders, and Christian zealots.

The oldest building in the complex is the temple of Nectanebis, a Pharaoh of the 13th dynasty, but the main edifice is the Temple of Isis, built during the Macedonian dynasty which began with Alexander the Great's conquest of Egypt in 332 B.C.

New Center Built For Refugees

MORONG, Philippines (UPI) — About 1,000 Indochinese refugees bound for the United States will arrive in mid-February at the World War II Battlefield of Bataan where a huge new center is being built to prepare them for life in a new land.

Clusters of bunkhouses are rising on the windswept valley to house about 10,000 refugees from Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos due in the next few months.

The United Nations-administered refugee camp is the first specifically aimed at easing the culture shock for those assured homes abroad.

When the five-stage construction process is completed, the center is expected to accommodate as many as 50,000 refugees, 99 percent of them bound for the United States.

Their stay at the center will include English language lessons, introduction to American ways, and instruction in skills to help them get jobs in their new homeland.

It is absolutely essential for the success of the entire resettlement program that the refugees who have not had the benefits of association with our culture have an opportunity to learn survival English, said U.S. refugee coordinator Victor Palmieri, who recently visited the site.

The Philippine government pledged to set up the camp last July at the height of the largest mass migration since Jews fled the Nazi holocaust in Europe.

For the refugees, many of them boat people, the center is a leap out of the barbed wire-fenced hovels of Pulau Bidong in Malaysia and plastic sheet tents on the borders of Thailand.

The first phase of the project, 113 miles northwest of Manila, includes 168 rectangular wood and concrete huts, each to house 10 families. The units have a living room, bedroom, kitchen, dining room and laundry area.

There are communal baths and toilets, stores, assembly halls and classrooms in addition to soccer fields, basketball and volleyball courts in playgrounds and open spaces separating the bunkhouses.

There are embroidery and carpentry shops, an orchard, land to grow crops and animals and ponds to cultivate fish. Hundreds more huts are under construction, funded by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees with contributions from the United States, Japan and other wealthy countries.

When completed later this year, the center will have a church, a hospital, post office, fire and fuel stations, a market and a cemetery.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos formally opened the center Jan. 21 in ceremonies attended by a U.S. congressional delegation headed by Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y.

The first batch of 1,000 refugees come from Philippine refugee camps and are expected to be joined soon by about 500 to be picked up in Thailand by Philippine navy ships.

A refugee's stay at the center may range from two weeks to three years, depending on how soon his papers are processed by the admitting country.

Palmieri expects the center will be operational for as long as there are refugees fleeing Indochina.

CHILDHOOD DISEASES
GENEVA (AP) — About five million children in the developing countries of the world die each year because of six diseases that can be prevented by proper immunizations: diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, poliomyelitis, tetanus, and tuberculosis.

Legend has it that Isis, the ideal of loyalty, lived on Philae to be close to the remains of her husband Osiris, who was murdered by his envious brother Seth, and his body cut in pieces and strewn all over the Nile Valley. One of Osiris' legs was said to be buried on Philae's neighboring isle, Bigeh.

The Romans captured Philae in 30 B.C. and added to the temples. Hadrian built a pylon and Trajan a large reception hall where on one wall he is depicted in Egyptian dress.

The Romans were ardent worshippers of Isis, and her cult was officially recognized by the state in Rome, said engineer Fouad Atwa, the current director of the Philae project.

The cult of Isis flourished until the 8th century A.D., long after northern Egypt was converted to Christianity. When Egypt's Coptic Christians finally triumphed they turned the temples into churches, delating the sculptures of the ancient gods and replacing the Pharaonic ankh — symbols of life — with Coptic crosses.

"The early Copts built villages on the vacant areas around the temples. They mutilated the reliefs of the pagan divinities, and many inscribed blocks were taken from the temples and used in the walls of Coptic villages," Atwa said.

Men continued to scratch at the temple walls even through modern times. In the last century, sailors from Napoleon's fleet left carefully carved graffiti and British soldiers returning from battles in Sudan carved a memorial to their fallen fellows.

Twenty five Italian engineers of the Condotte-Mazzi group, 3,000 Egyptian workers and dozens of archaeologists began work on the temples of Isis in 1971.

A cofferdam was built around the island, the site was dried out and the dismantling operation began.

About 50,000 blocks were moved after being photographed, injected with reinforcing material and marked with a letter and number code to indicate its precise place.

The last block was laid in place on Agilkia last October.

Saving the temples of Isis cost $30 million, with UNESCO bearing two-thirds of it and the U.N. world food program supplying the workers with their needs for four years. The Egyptian government bore the remainder of the cost.

But engineers working on the project said that though it cost less than the $45 million Abu Simbel project, it had been more complicated and had taken more time.

The Italian engineers have gone. The workmen of the Egyptian High Dam civil works company remain in Agilkia, landscaping and planting Papyrus and palms, to make Agilkia a copy of Philae.

But their main task is completing a dock by March 10, the date set for the reopening of the temples of Isis to the public.

Peking Retailer Learns From Japanese

PEKING (AP) — After 34 years as a Peking retailer, Meng Hsien-yuan spent his first trip abroad visiting 41 stores in Japan in two weeks.

Some of the early results of his trip: Sales of bedsheets in his store here have jumped from 200 or 300 a day to more than 3,000, and umbrella sales have gone from more than 200 a day to more than 1,000, he said.

Meng is manager of the Peking Department Store, and his experience points up two new trends in China — learning from advanced nations, and switching to the idea that businessmen are supposed to sell, not just wait for customers to come to them.

The Peking Department Store doesn't lack customers. Meng said 180,000 a day come into the cavernous building with its three selling floors, and 200,000 come on Sundays.

He said trade volume has been rising about 8 percent a year since 1965, with shoe sales climbing from 400,000 to 800,000 pairs a year and clothing from one million to three million items. Last year's sales exceeded $120 million, with gross profits of 13 percent, he said.

But one thing struck him on his visit to Japan last September, he said.

"We don't display our products well. In Japan, lighting is important. It makes the products stand out like an actor on stage," he said in an interview.

Pointing to lights on the store's high ceilings, he said, "A lot of light is wasted here. The light is diffused and doesn't bring out the products. It's not only a question of attractive display. Now it's hard for the customers to pick out colors."

The store has been selling goods, mostly folded or piled up, from wooden cases behind dark glass counters. Meng started his reforms with the sections selling bedding, umbrellas, plastic products and dried candied fruit, using steel and aluminum racks to spread them out and pinpoint lighting to show them off. Previously wasted space has been used for display.

Meng talked animatedly about his remodeling plans, for which he and his staff must do all the designing and make all the equipment themselves. He said smaller Chinese stores lacked the ability to do this.

clothing now will be hung instead of folded and piled up, so customers can see all styles and colors at a glance and the clothing will keep its shape better, he said.

"Now our clothing is fairly drab, but the customers are demanding change," he added.

Meng went to Japan under an exchange between his store and Mitsukoshi Department Store.

In Japan, he said, "the courtesy is extraordinary." He said he had been introducing his store's 2,400 employees to the kind of respect for customers he observed there. Some clerks here have been criticized for ignoring customers.

Service attitude is one factor in deciding bonuses, Meng added, along with standards based on sales turnover, mistakes on the job expenses and profits. Bonuses range from nothing for those with bad attitudes up to more than $20 a month for some who have made innovations, he explained.

The average wage of store employees is $33 a month.

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — My question concerns the accumulation of fat on my abdomen. My thighs are somewhat heavy for my weight, but I'm not fat elsewhere. I'm 5 foot 4 and weigh 120 pounds when in the nude. I take leg and abdominal exercises and ride a bicycle but my abdomen does not reduce any. I have had back trouble — maybe due to the abdominal fat I'm carrying around. My question is, can surgery be done successfully to take the layer of fat from the abdomen? I'm aware of surgery on large heavy breasts to reduce their weight. I am 68 years old.

DEAR READER — Five feet four and 120 pounds doesn't sound bad. Perhaps you should count your blessings. You're better off than a lot of people who have weight problems.

I do understand your concern and I'm sending you The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding the Big Middle. It will give you a review of the proper kinds of exercises you need to be using to help reduce your girth.

Since you've told me that you have back trouble, I think you better check out any exercise program, including this one, with your doctor to be sure that the exercises are helpful for you and won't harm your back.

Usually the common back complaints are benefitted by a proper exercise program that helps to strengthen the abdominal muscles. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

To answer your question specifically, yes, fat can be taken off the trunk including the buttocks, abdomen and thighs. These overhaul jobs are done as part of modern cosmetic surgery. Of course, the fat will usually come right back unless a person has changed his or her living habits to avoid patterns that lead to obesity.

You may have a couple of other problems which concern me. First, you may have fat inside the abdomen itself, not just under the skin. There's no way you can squeeze that down with exercises. Your height and weight don't suggest a lot of fat. Second, I'm concerned about the possibility that you may have some osteoporosis.

As the bones become porous and the vertebrae shrink in size or collapse, particularly in women in your age group or older, it literally shortens the spine and usually allows the spine to bend forward. That's why you see the buffalo hump in many older women.

The combination of the shortening of the spine and its forward bending causes the abdominal muscles to be slack and protrude. Therefore, an enlarging abdomen is part of the overall physical characteristics that can occur with osteoporosis.

If that's the case, you need attention for the osteoporosis and posture effects. You might profit from a properly designed exercise program, but with osteoporosis you have to be careful that the exercise doesn't cause a fracture of a vertebra. On the other hand, properly designed exercises may help.

Rancher Seeking Wife In Want Ads

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — It can get lonely on a Montana ranch when neighbors count the distance between them in miles. And rancher John Hart, whose first marriage dissolved from the isolation, is seeking a new wife in the want ads.

His ad was straightforward: "Lonely rancher on isolated 2,000 acres needs wife to enjoy ranch with me, help check out the cattle and keep track of me on cold winter nights. I don't smoke or drink. I like to dance and go out for dinner, help with housework, and I make the best pancakes in the world."

Hart, 33, said his first wife was terrified of ranch life. His 2,000-acre Flat Mountain Ranch is 35 miles from Colstrip, Hysham or Forsyth, and his nearest neighbor is eight miles away.

"She didn't like being out there alone and I'm gone a lot," he said. But he adds, "I don't want to live up there alone. It's awful lonely coming home at night to a dark, empty house."

So far, said Hart in a recent interview, four women have responded to his ad. Most were "desperate women," more interested in finding shelter for themselves and their numerous children than in forming a loving relationship with a new husband, he said.

"It's not an easy life," said Hart. "A rancher is very dependent on his wife and family to get along, especially if he works away from home."

He also noted that, if he were injured on the ranch now, "no one in the world would know where I was."

Hart also has tried a Billings dating service, and says the want ad is a last resort.

He built up his ranch over the years by saving until he could buy a small one, improving it and trading for a bigger one, then continuing to trade. His herd now numbers 100 head of cattle.

Deficit Spending Under Attack

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — Nobody but the people seem to want the federal budget balanced, said Jim Davidson of the National Taxpayers Union. And so he is seeking a constitutional amendment to consider the people's will. Thirty states already have signed up. Add just four more, and a limited constitutional convention is likely to be called. That is, unless Congress gets the hint and proposes an amendment of its own. "There is no way around (the connection between) loose fiscal policy and the

To counter it, Davidson would take away "the hypodermic needle of deficit spending that keeps us on a high." Then, he said, "we'd have to face the problems of production, of paying our way instead of kidding ourselves. We'd have to stop printing money and we'd have to invest. And when faced with recession we'd have to face the facts rather than just print more money."

Many people, including congressmen, are surprised that Davidson and the Taxpayers Union have come so close to calling a constitutional convention to propose a balanced budget amendment. Davidson isn't.

While still in his early 20s, working on the fringes of the Washington power structure and possessed of "a sense one has that things were being screwed up," Davidson sought to donate $25 to a taxpayer group.

Finding none, he formed the union, recognizing, he said, that while articulating rational, logical arguments might have some impact, the goal was reached sooner when rationality was combined with power.

The Taxpayers Union, based in a Pennsylvania Avenue townhouse in southeast Washington, now has about 150,000 members who pay $5 or more. "We ask for $15. Some pay $1. We don't turn anyone away."

The amendment is the centerpiece of its activities, for now, although it steadfastly monitors, sometimes in fine detail, the various financial habits and excesses of elected and non-elected officials.

"Popular government, if it is to work, must have a way out if its leaders are not wise," he says. "We can take action on our own. State legislatures are more responsive than Congress."

Davidson is convinced that the American people, "if given a chance would oppose many of the things Congress and the president support." And he thinks the impending success of the balance-the-budget drive proves it.

level of prices the ordinary person suffers," said Davidson, a 32-year-old candidate for a doctorate in economics.

The fiscal policy that offends him, and most Americans if you can judge from polls, is centered on deficit spending. Just once in two decades has the federal budget been balanced. And it's getting worse.

In the past five years, Davidson points out, deficits have totaled more than $276 billion, eight times higher than in a similar period 10 years earlier. Interest on the public debt amounts to $60 billion.

It doesn't take an economist to see the consequences. As the deficits have increased so has the consumer price index. Since 1967 it has more than doubled. "At current rates it will double again by the early 1980s," according to a leaflet distributed by the Taxpayers Union.

Ironically and destructively, Davidson maintains, the ups and downs of the economy which Congress claims deficit spending is needed to counter, are partly the result of political manipulation in the first place. The end result, he fears, is more federal control and inflation.

Congress rewards special interests and gives the bill to everyone, he continues. To him, not even inflation or threats to freedoms will make elected officials cease when their self-interest, getting elected, conflicts with the public good.

"Congress is an obstacle," Davidson says. "The government is on a binge."

Library Of Congress Issues Letter Series

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Library of Congress has issued two new volumes of letters of the delegate to Congress in the years 1774 to 1789.

These are part of a series of about 25 volumes scheduled to appear over the next dozen years, aimed at filling gaps in the knowledge of the American Revolution.

While some of the 343 delegates, such as Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison are well known, others have never been the subject of serious biography and knowledge of their work remains fragmentary. Officials expect these books to be a rich mine of information on many poorly understood issues and episodes of the period.

The new editions, Volumes 3 and 4 of "Letters of Delegates to Congress, 1774-1789," are for sale from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402.

Carlsbad Woman Killed In Pharmacy Robbery

By KIMBERLY PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

When Carlsbad City Councilman John Volpato and his wife, Elaine, were called to their pharmacy late Tuesday to fill an emergency prescription, they thought they were helping one of their many customers.

Instead, Mrs. Volpato, 36, was fatally shot and her husband seriously wounded by two men who entered the store demanding drugs.

Carlsbad Assistant Medical Examiner Marilyn Sullivan pronounced Mrs. Volpato dead at the scene. Although Miss Sullivan is withholding a ruling on the death pending an autopsy, reports indicate the woman suffered four gunshot wounds.

Volpato, a 12-year veteran of the city council and mayor pro tem, was shot in the hand and left shoulder and was reported in stable condition today at Baylor Hospital in Dallas.

Carlsbad Det. Lt. John Tully said no suspects were in custody late Wednesday, but that Volpato described one suspect as a "tall, good-looking Spanish male."

Police Chief Charles Galloway said Volpato, 42, had received a telephone call about 11 p.m. from an unidentified person asking that an emergency prescription be filled. Galloway said Volpato and his wife went to the store, known as Corner Drug, and waited a few minutes before two men entered.

Reports indicate one of the men told Volpato, "Here's my prescription," and pulled out a handgun ordering Volpato to the back of the store to get drugs. Galloway said Mrs. Volpato then screamed and the other suspect began shooting. Volpato managed to reach a telephone and call police.

Tully said he believes the Volpatos, the parents of two teen-agers, were shot with either a .38 or .357-caliber gun and that a third suspect may have been waiting in a car outside the downtown drugstore.

John Heaton, co-owner of the pharmacy, told investigating officers that although an unknown quantity of amphetamines and methadone was taken during the robbery, a large amount of cash that was in the store was not touched.

When Volpato was going to be in his store after hours, he usually notified the Carlsbad police department and had done so Tuesday night, Tully said. "In the past, he (Volpato) sometimes requested a police unit to meet him at the store, but he didn't make a practice of it," Tully said.

Police said Volpato, who had operated the pharmacy for about 15 years, did not make such a request Tuesday.

Indian Religious Leader Raps Detainment Of U.S. Hostages

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

An Indian religious man visiting Lubbock today criticized leaders in Iran for mixing religion with politics, but he praised President Carter's efforts in handling the hostage situation.

"President Carter is doing an excellent job," observed Swami Bhashyananda of the Vivekananda Society of Chicago.

According to Bhashyananda, the president is doing the right thing in seeking the help of friends from around the world to resolve the crisis situation at the American Embassy in Iran. "I'm sure your hostages will come back unharmed," the swami said. "It will take a little time."

Bhashyananda took issue with current state of affairs in Iran, where politics and religion have been mixed together under the regime of the Ayatollah Khomeini. Such a situation allows dogmatism to enter the picture, and a leader can assert that his truth is the only truth, the swami said.

Politics increases the drive for power, Bhashyananda said, and power demands money. "A true religious experience must keep all this away," he added.

The swami believes he at least partially understands the motives behind Khomeini's actions, however. According to Bhashyananda, Khomeini feels that his Islamic religion and his people are threatened by the West. But he said that the difficulties should be overcome through education and reconciliation, not fighting.

Bhashyananda is visiting Lubbock to present a seminar this afternoon for faculty members at Texas Tech University. He also will present a public lecture on "Vedanta Philosophy for Daily Living" at 8 p.m. Friday at the Universalist Church, 2104 36th St.

Bhashyananda was born in India in 1917 to a priest family with a background of seven generations of scriptural training. He obtained a master's degree in English and Sanskrit literature from a university in Nagpur, Central India.

Since 1965, Bhashyananda has served as head of the Vivekananda Vedanta Society, the Chicago center for the Ramakrishna Mission.

According to the swami, Vedanta teaches the existence of one God — though He may be called by any one of a number of names. The philosophy also teaches that man is divine by nature because the spirit of God dwells within every individual.

The philosophy also teaches that the whole universe is one and that total harmony should exist among all peoples of the world, Bhashyananda said.

Bhashyananda said that modern man is beset by many tensions both from within himself and from his environment. But he said that man must learn to "slow down" to really live.

The Vedanta philosophy teaches that peace already exists within every man, Bhashyananda noted. It is up to the individual, he said, to find the ways in which to discover that inner peace.

Water Table Decline Slows

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 reported a considerable slowdown in the drop of water tables in the area over the past year.

Latest figures show that water levels in more than 900 area wells measured in the district's 15-county service area have dropped an average of 48 feet per well from January 1979 to January 1980.

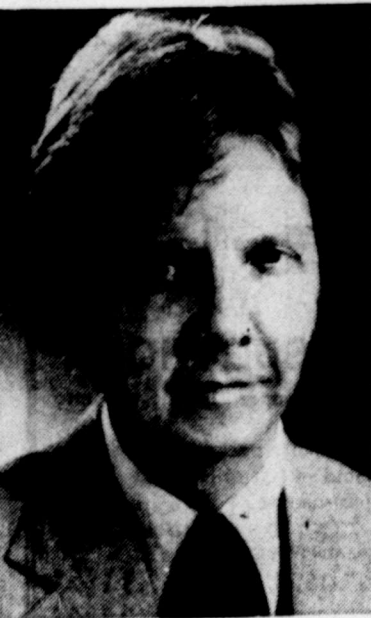

The average annual change for the past five years showed a drop of 1.34 feet per year and the 10-year average annual drop was 1.42 feet per year. The 1979 decline was an improvement over previous averages, partially because 1979 was an abnormally moist year, officials say.

Other factors affecting the reduced decline in 1979 were improved water conservation practices and the high cost of energy to pump water, according to water district officials.

The water levels in some wells rose in 1979, and officials said the rise probably reflected filling of the cones of depression around those wells other than substantial recharge to the aquifer.

A measurement of 119 wells in Lubbock County from January 1979 to January 1980 showed an average rise of 1.49 inches per well.

Ford Executive Says Company Rejected Expensive Repairs

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) — The rear structure and fuel tank of the 1973 Pinto were "grossly inadequate," but Ford Motor Co. decided against repairs "because of cost and ensuing problems," a former Ford executive testified today.

Harley Copp, who supervised crash tests at Ford's Dearborn, Mich., headquarters after 1975, said that if the 1973 Pinto had been designed like other subcompacts at the time, it could have withstood a rear-end collision at 15-40 mph without fire risk.

Ford is charged with three counts of reckless homicide in the August 1978 deaths of three young women whose 1973 Pinto sedan burst into flames when hit from behind. The state contends Ford recklessly designed the Pinto's fuel tanks, did nothing to correct the defects and failed to warn the public.

Ford is the first corporation ever indicted on a criminal charge.

Copp, an engineer who served as a vice president for Ford's European operations, said the 1973 Pinto was designed to withstand a 20 mph rear-end crash with a 4,000-pound vehicle.

He said a 30 mph fuel tank integrity program for the 1973 Pinto was discussed at an August, 1969, meeting with then-Ford President Lee A. Iacocca and other Ford executives. The proposal was rejected, he said, "because of cost and ensuing problems."

Copp said the rear structure and fuel tank design of the 1973 Pinto were "grossly inadequate, probably the weakest I've seen in cars in the last 10 to 12 years."

He criticized the crush space between the gas tank and the bumper, the strength of the floor pan above the tank, the design of the fuel tank filler tube — which he said caused it to pull out in a rear-end collision — and the size and shape of the fuel tank.

Ford was aware of the problems, but decided to forego redesign to save money, said Copp, who retired in 1977.

Meanwhile, the trial judge admitted Wednesday he may have made errors in the landmark criminal liability case that will lead an appeals court to overturn the jury's verdict.

Navigator Cites Flaw In Radar

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A navigator aboard the Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn says the "radar was finely tuned" but failed to pick up a huge oil tanker looming ahead moments before a collision that killed 23 sailors.

Quartermaster Jeffrey Huse, 27, spent eight hours before investigators Wednesday recounting the shocked silence among Blackthorn officers when they realized collision with the SS Capricorn was imminent on the moonlit night of Jan. 28.

Huse was scheduled to return to the witness stand today, the seventh day of a federal inquiry into the Coast Guard's worst peacetime disaster.

Bandidos Club Members Viewed In Police Lineup

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two unidentified persons have viewed a police lineup that included Bandidos Motorcycle Club members named as suspects in the 1978 attempted slaying of a federal prosecutor, according to sources and observers.

Federal authorities refused any comment on the lineup. They had summoned the Bandidos to appear Wednesday before a federal grand jury investigating the unsolved case.

James Gillespie, attorney for two of the Bandidos, said his clients and three other "alleged" members of the club took part in the seven-man lineup. But Gillespie and other attorneys were barred from the viewing room.

An unidentified woman and a man, not known to be connected to the case, were observed being escorted into the lineup room by federal agents and prosecutors.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr viewed a police lineup last March and selected two Bandidos and a former Bandido as closely resembling those who attempted to kill him Nov. 21, 1978, according to FBI documents released in court last year.

An assailant firing from the back window of a stolen van riddled Kerr's auto with bullets as the prosecutor drove to work. Kerr, 38, who had been heavily involved in drug investigations, escaped serious injury by ducking behind the dashboard.

Hospital Criticizes Employee Cutback

KERRVILLE (UPI) — An official of the Kerrville State Hospital says if the institution is forced to trim its staff by 5 percent, a domino effect could ensue, leading to loss of accreditation and, ultimately, the loss of federal funds for the state Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Loss of accreditation could lead to a loss of patient and public confidence, Packard said, but beyond that might mean a loss of federal funds for MH-MR.

Clements interpreted the provision as an across-the-board decrease in state employees, although most of the state bur-earcacies and some legislators interpreted it to mean a reduction in authorized personnel.

With 742 employees, Kerrville State Hospital already is well below its authorized strength of 791 and within the 5 percent figure of budgeted strength, Packard maintained. He said a further reduction of 5 percent of present strength would seriously harm the hospital's ability to care for 620 patients.

"It would pose a very difficult problem and I just really doubt we'd be able to retain JCAH accreditation," he said.

Numerous Bandidos and their associates have testified before the grand jury, which is also investigating the unsolved assassination last May 29 of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The 5 percent across-the-board reduction in state employees ordered by Gov. Bill Clements would trim 37 workers from the staff by Aug. 31, said Assistant Superintendent C.E. Packard, leaving the hospital on shaky grounds for next year's accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

In early January, the governor sent letters to each of the state's 240 departments requesting the 5 percent cut in existing personnel by the end of the budget year, taking his authority from a rider attached to the last Legislature's appropriations bill. The rider called for a 5 percent annual reduction of "full-time classified employees."

With 742 employees, Kerrville State Hospital already is well below its authorized strength of 791 and within the 5 percent figure of budgeted strength, Packard maintained.

Kerr underwent hypnosis before viewing the lineup to heighten his memory of the attempted assassination.

But federal officials did not ask Larson to take part in the lineup or go before the grand jury, said his attorney, Charles Butts.

Editor Of A-J To Speak At LCC English Meet

Jay Harris, editor of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, will address Lubbock Christian College's Freshman English Symposium on Monday.

Harris' topic will be "Words: a Tool of the Trade." He will address the symposium at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the chapel of the C.L. Kay Christian Development Center.

Tech Accounting Professor To Receive Teaching Award

Accounting Prof. Thomas A. Ratcliffe in Texas Tech's College of Business Administration has been selected 1979-80 recipient of the "New Professor-Excellent in Teaching Award" from the Dads Association.

The award will be presented at the Dads Association Midwinter Trustees meeting at the university Feb. 16. He will be the seventh recipient of the award, which goes to a professor who has been at Texas Tech University no more than four years and who has demonstrated teaching excellence. Ratcliffe is in his third year at Tech.

Dr. Ratcliffe received the bachelor's degree from Troy State University in 1974, the master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Alabama in 1976 and 1977, respectively. His major field is accounting, with secondary fields in economics, statistics and organizational behavior. His dissertation was "A Simulation of Changes in the Social Contract: A Step Toward a Social Accounting Model."

attended public schools in Paducah and Lubbock. He received a BA degree from Texas Tech with majors in journalism, political science and government and minors in English and Spanish. He graduated in the top 10 percent of his class.

Plans To Cut Trees Altered

HOUSTON (UPI) — Neighborhood pressure, including one man's threatened sit-in in the path of ditching equipment, has caused the Texas Highway Department to cancel plans to cut 37 70-year-old pecan trees.

The recognition carries with it a $500 award provided by the Hemphill-Wells Foundation.

He joined the Texas Tech faculty in 1977. He has developed and taught continuing education programs for the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, National Association of Accountants, Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, Texas Tech University Center for Professional Development and University of Alabama Continuing Education Division.

While still a student in 1938, Harris began working for The Avalanche-Journal news editing and makeup on the afternoon and morning papers.

Following a three-year stint in the Army Air Corps 1942-45, Harris returned to the A-J. He was managing editor of the morning paper for 20 years, then became executive editor and served in that capacity until 1972 when Morris Communications purchased the paper. He became editor in 1972.

The trees, located on state highway right-of-way in the 100 to 300 blocks of Maxey Road in northeast Houston, were to be cut to make way for a drainage ditch.

Director of Accounting Gary E. White, in his nominating document, said Ratcliffe has a record of "teaching excellence in undergraduate, graduate and continuing professional development courses. Students and participants in his course offerings have given him outstanding evaluations, and he is consistently mentioned as an outstanding instructor by recent graduates and current students in our program."

An evaluation group of his peers said Ratcliffe could "present a complex topic in a manner in which students could understand the material . . . he showed a marked level of confidence in presiding over the class. He has a highly proven knowledge in financial accounting. There exists an obviously outstanding rapport between the teacher and the students."

He serves as consultant to a variety of business and accounting firms, especially in the areas of leasing and foreign currency exchanges.

Truck Driver Dies In Gas Explosion

FOLLETT (AP) — A 26-year-old truck driver died in a natural gas explosion when he backed his truck into a processing tank at a gas well four miles from here.

In the past five years Harris has traveled extensively, approximately 480,000 miles in numerous trips abroad. He has met with and interviewed several heads of state and other leading officials, both foreign and domestic.

However, District Engineer Omer Poorman and Resident Engineer Allen Ranft said Wednesday the ditch will be moved so the trees can be spared. Ranft said his office altered the plans after neighborhood residents complained.

James F. Newman threatened to sit in the path of equipment and chain cars to each tree to block their cutting. Newman told City Council Wednesday the trees are beautiful, located across from a new city park and should be saved.

Dr. Duane Miller, 45, was reappointed to the State Seed and Plant Board.

Woodward was appointed for a term to expire June 7, 1980.

The victim was identified as Lanny Jerrett, 26 of Booker, who died instantly when he was thrown 30 feet by the Wednesday explosion, according to Babitzke.

Harris visited South Africa, Egypt, the Middle East, Israel, Italy, Morocco, Portugal, France, Switzerland, Germany, Greece, India and Mexico.

A member of the Texas and national Associated Press and United Press International managing editors associations, Harris serves as a trustee of the West Texas Museum, has been an active member of the Downtown Rotary Club for 28 years and delivers 30 to 60 talks a year on various subjects from foreign affairs to local events.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward was appointed to the Governor's Advisory Committee on Education.

Miller, a professor and chairman of the department of plant and soil science at Texas Tech University, was reappointed for a two-year term to expire Oct. 8, 1981.

Others at the natural gas well escaped injury, Babitzke said.

City Men Named To State Posts

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements has announced the appointment of two Lubbock men to posts on state panels.

Woodward was appointed for a term to expire June 7, 1980.

Others at the natural gas well escaped injury, Babitzke said.

Miller, a professor and chairman of the department of plant and soil science at Texas Tech University, was reappointed for a two-year term to expire Oct. 8, 1981.

Woodward was appointed for a term to expire June 7, 1980.

Our lot is jumping with '80 Rabbits that can't wait to get their show on the road. They've got some impressive new features to show off this year. Like their shiny metallic coats. Touches of chrome here and there to make them even snappier. Trunk space and people space galore. And a refined fuel-injection engine for a quieter and more efficient ride. If you've never seen a Rabbit strut, drop by Montgomery Motors today. We've got a lot of Rabbits and they're putting on quite a show.

Wheelchair-Bound Man Questioned In Stabbing

A 37-year-old wheelchair-bound man was questioned by police Wednesday in connection with the reported stabbing of another man in an East Lubbock night-spot.

Reports indicate the victim, a 31-year-old dock worker, the man in the wheelchair and a woman were sitting together drinking at the club in the 600-block of Idalou Road about 9 p.m.

The victim reportedly told police that the man in the wheelchair got mad "for no apparent reason" and cut him on the left side of the neck with a knife.

The victim was released from Health Sciences Center Hospital for slight knife wounds.

According to reports, the suspect told police someone stole the woman's purse and ran out of the club. At this point, according to the suspect, the other man didn't seem to care about the purse-snatching and grabbed the partially paralyzed man and started hitting him. The man in the wheelchair then pulled a knife and cut the other man, reports show.

A 19-year-old Texas Tech student was arrested early today when he reportedly was seen by officers leaving the scene of a convenience store burglary.

Reports indicate the man was apprehended about 1:02 a.m. today outside the Kwik-O Food Mart at 6802 19th St. Reports show $335 worth of food and change was taken from the store.

Police said the burglar apparently kicked in the front door to gain entry. He was arrested after police saw him climb over the broken door frame as he left.

In other crime activity, police questioned a man in connection with the reported sexual assault against a dancer at a club in the 1800-block of Clovis Road early this morning.

Reports show the man, described as a black male about 26 years old, wearing a white shirt and blue pants, reportedly put his hand inside the dancer's garment while she was doing her routine.

The club manager told police he pursued the man, along with two other men, to the parking lot. They were detained when their car rammed another car in the parking lot as they tried to flee.

A Monterey High School student was cut on the chest and arm Wednesday when he was attacked by two men near the school.

Steve Phillip Dehn, 17, told police he was attacked after he parked his car about 8:15 a.m.

The youth said the two attackers pulled up in a late model tan Ford Galaxie just as he was leaving his car. One of the suspects, described as a tall white male, about 18 years old, wearing a red cap, began to argue with the victim about a previous fight, the victim told police.

Then the suspect pulled a small knife out of his pocket and began swinging it toward the student, police said. The pair struggled and the student was cut on the chest and the left forearm.

During the struggle, the victim was able to break free and get a club out of his car. He said he used the weapon to frighten the two suspects away. He was not seriously wounded, police reports indicated, and he was able to get the license number of the suspect's car.

An elder of the South Side Church of Christ, 1409 23rd St., reported to police Wednesday that more than $1,500 in electronic equipment was stolen from the church either late Tuesday or early Wednesday.

W.C. Boyd of 3213 67th St. said that a tape recorder, public address amplifier, microphones, cassette recorder and radio were taken.

Police said entrance to the church was gained by kicking out a window in a door. Police said they found fingerprints that may belong to the burglar in several of the church rooms.

ALL THAT'S LEFT — The wreckage of an F-111D Air Force fighter jet is scattered over several miles of farmland just northeast of Clovis, N.M. The collision between the jet and a private single-engine Cessna killed the four occupants of both planes Wednesday morning. A board of inquiry made up of Air Force officers and members of the National Transportation Safety Board will investigate the crash. (Staff Photo by Dennis Copeiland)

Air Force, NTSB Officials Plan Probe Of Jet, Plane Collision

A board of inquiry made up of Air Force officers and members of the National Transportation Safety Board will study the cause of Wednesday morning's collision of a fighter jet and private plane just north of Clovis, N.M., that killed four persons.

The collision between the F-111D jet fighter and a Cessna 204 killed the occupants of both planes, scattering debris over a four-mile area about seven or eight miles northeast of Clovis.

An Air Force official has said that the single-engine Cessna was responsible for checking its own course at the time of the crash. The private plane was flying under visual flight regulations, which means its flight path was not cleared by air traffic controllers.

The Air Force jet was under tower control on its final approach to Cannon Air Force Base, where its flight had originated.

The dead were identified as Capt. Roy W. Westerfield, 34, of Smithtown, N.Y., and 2nd Lt. Stephen P. Anderson, 24, of Ivyland, Pa., in the Air Force plane and Homer D. Douglas, 43, and Jon R. Russell, 32, both of Albuquerque in the Cessna.

Westerfield was an instructor pilot with the 27th Tactical Fighter Wing at Cannon AFB and Anderson was a weapons officer, also at Cannon. Douglas owned a construction firm in Albuquerque.

State police said the private craft, on a Tucuman-to-Clovis leg of a flight begun in Albuquerque, crashed first near Ned Hook State Park about 6 1/2 miles northeast of Clovis.

The jet, flying to the southwest on a final landing approach to Cannon, crashed in what a witness called "a ball of flames," about 5 1/2 miles northeast of Clovis.

Witnesses at the park reported they heard a low-flying plane and looked up to see the two planes collide. One witness said the Cessna spiraled to the ground after being hit, but the fighter stayed aloft a short while longer before bursting into flames.

The cockpit of the F-111D, carrying the two Air Force crew members, ejected before the plane crashed, but both men were found dead, still strapped to their seats.

"Evidently the collision caused (the F-111D) to go into a roll so when they pulled the plug on the ejection pod it just drove them into the ground," an Air Force spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said.

Mrs. Juanita Brandon, who lives on a tomato farm near where the jet crashed, said she was walking from her home to a greenhouse when she noticed the jet low in the sky. "When I looked up, it was just above the greenhouse," she said. "It was right over me. At first, I thought it was going to land in the field, but then I realized it wasn't going to land."

Air Force Security Police had cordoned off the F-111D crash site by early Wednesday afternoon, because the plane reportedly contained "classified material," including advanced electronic devices. The plane was not, however, carrying any missiles or bombs at the time of the crash.

George R. Baker, chief of the National Transportation Safety Board in Denver, will head the joint military-civilian investigation into the crash.

Clovis Votes To Extend Leaves

After meeting behind closed doors for more than an hour Wednesday night, the Clovis City Commission voted unanimously to extend indefinitely the leave of absence of City Manager Darrel Kreighbaum and Assistant City Manager Cleve Teague.

The motion, made by Commissioner Frank Murray, also includes the stipulation that the two be taken off the payroll effective the pay period that ended Feb. 1.

A standing-room-only crowd was present at the meeting after reports of a secret meeting held by the city commission Tuesday night. The commission reportedly met at the office of Mayor Chick Taylor Jr. and decided to ask for the resignations of Kreighbaum and Teague. Two commissioners called on each man Tuesday night with a message "the commission wants your resignation." Neither man was present at the Wednesday night meeting.

Kreighbaum and Teague had been given a leave of absence at their request in January after the New Mexico Department of Finance and Administration had requested that the men take a leave of absence while an investigation of city financial matters continued. The investigation was started after City Clerk-Treasurer Mike Taylor was fired for conduct unbecoming a city employee subsequent to bonding out three massage parlor employees from Clovis City Jail in October of 1975.

Taylor is wanted on a felony warrant out of Curry County in connection with the check he apparently issued for the bond.

Solon Favored By Civiletti

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti has picked Texas state legislator Matt Garcia, son of a one-time illegal alien, as his candidate to head the immigration service, Justice Department sources say.

President Carter must make the final decision on whether to nominate the San Antonio attorney as commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. But sources said Wednesday Garcia, 52, was Civiletti's top choice.

The selection of Garcia is expected to give the administration a political boost in the Hispanic community, which has been demanding that another Hispanic-American be named to the post.

Garcia, known as a civil rights activist, would replace acting commissioner David Crosland, who has run INS since Leonel Castillo resigned.

Convention To Assess Christian Movement

DALLAS (AP) — Religious leaders from charismatic congregations will assess the state of the Christian "renewal" movement when the U.S. Summit Convocation convenes in Dallas today.

Officials of the Episcopal Charismatic Fellowship, sponsor of the convocation that runs through Saturday, say they expect 400 to 500 Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Methodist, Lutheran, Baptist and Pentecostal leaders from around the world.

Charismatics, who claim to be "born again" or "filled with the Holy Spirit," gained momentum in the '60s and '70s as a neo-Pentecostal movement toward emotional expression and the use of "gifts" such as speaking in tongues and healing.

But unlike the Pentecostal movement, the charismatic renewal has grown within the "mainline" Protestant and Catholic denominations.

The Gallup Poll last year estimated 3 million Americans had joined the charismatic movement.

Glossolalia, speaking in unknown tongues, has received the most criticism from denominations that denounce the renewal outright or greet it with mixed emotions.

Some theologians contend such gifts ceased after Biblical times or that charismatics over emphasize them. Others said charismatics became too dependent on individual leaders and lost touch with the real world.

Charismatic leaders see the movement maturing and reconciling with the mainline churches — with less emphasis on gifts and more on spiritual unity.

The renewal in Dallas has been closely watched by charismatics around the world, primarily because of the efforts of the city's "five elders."

Dr. Everitt Fjordbak said he and the other four Dallas elders have laid the foundation for a unified Christian community.

"The explosion is ahead," he said. "This is going to spring into fruition among many denominations."

The Rev. Ted Nelson of Dallas said the renewal is "kind of growing up" and that the Episcopal Church has become more tolerant.

"I think the perspective of the renewal has changed some for the better," said Nelson, "and it's not going to go away."

Another Dallas elder, the Rev. Paul Morrell said the Methodist charismatic movement is "beginning to establish a stronger theological base."

Panel To Study Request To Move Center

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission will meet at 10 a.m. Feb. 14 to consider an application by R.E. Thomason General Hospital-Texas Tech University Regional Academic Health Center in El Paso to relocate its Model Family Practice Center.

The THFC also will consider an application by South Plains Health Provider Organization of Plainview to expand its Plainview clinic.

R.E. Thomason and Texas Tech are seeking to relocate the center to the Rushfair Shopping Center in northeast El Paso.

The center will include 12 examination-treatment rooms, patient counseling area, one minor operating room, laboratory and radiology services.

South Plains is seeking to expand its Plainview Clinic by leasing 2,190 square feet of additional space.

The meeting will be held at the THFC offices at 1600 W. 38th St., Austin. West Texas Hospital of Lubbock also has applied to the THFC to acquire a Helena Clinician unit to perform electro-phoresis testing in-house.

Persons wishing to protest the applications may do so by filing as a formal party in the matter.

If protests are received, a public hearing will be held on the application. If no protests are received, the application may be referred to a THFC voting session without a hearing.

Starting From Scratch

A MOVEMENT IS NOT YET UNDERFOOT to nickname Lubbock Christian College the women's basketball capital of the Southwest, an Old Dominion or UCLA in the rough, but that doesn't stop Coach Dave Simpson from breaking into a feature-length smile whenever his Lady Chaps nuzzle into the conversation.

"The coffee table talk I hear is that the (LCC) administration is really excited about my team," Simpson said, wholly unaware — as recently as three months ago — that his team would afford him any such rewards.

The Lady Chaps are in the midst of an introductory season that has been anything but rude. It had been expected that LCC's totally volunteer, no-name roster would make its only impression on the loss column, with a definite possibility of losing each of its 21 games.

LCC, though, has gone so far as to defy even Simpson's law of averages and won six of its last 10 encounters. The Lady Chaps are an unmistakably buoyant 4-2 in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association and 6-12 altogether, prompting Simpson to the recent comment: "That 6-12 record is, as far as I'm concerned, equal to 500."

"After LCC went through its first year of football with only one win, I'm sure there were people who thought the basketball team wouldn't do any better," Simpson said. "I gather from talking to some people that they felt we might not be able to win a game."

"Now, I think we can win two of our last three games. It's realistic to see us with at least eight victories for our first year. And when you've scheduled as many scholarship teams as we have (ten), you can understand why I feel very pleased."

Simpson assembled his squad in September from among students who answered the open invitation to audition for the newly-forming team.

At the time, Simpson took notice of the inclusion on his squad of players who were not only unfamiliar with each other but, in some cases, could not dribble without looking at the ball.

"We've come a long way as a team and as individuals," Simpson said. "As I bring individuals along, so goes my team. Some of the girls have doubled their output from the beginning, and others have doubled their confidence, which is what I enjoy seeing most."

"I CAN SEE SOME CONFIDENCE and pride being established. This has helped enable us to set some more realistic goals; we're going to work towards being champions of the TIAA and becoming a state title contender."

Although the Lady Chaps will not deserve to be ranked among the pre-tournament favorites, they are almost certain to qualify for the AIAW Division III meet in March.

"I think the girls are 100 percent behind what they've done this year," Simpson said. "They play as intensely when there's a 30-point difference as a five-point difference. To me, that shows commitment."

"I think we have peaked in terms of our team potential," Simpson added, "but we've not peaked in terms of individual potential. That excites me most about this first year."

The first season of Lady Chaps' basketball also has been Simpson's starting point as coach of a women's program. Simpson came here from York (Neb.) College where he coached men's basketball and tennis.

The most difficult problem I've had this year is in trying to put myself and my feelings into their feelings and understanding them," Simpson said. "It's not always easy to understand their moods and to know how to cope with those feelings."

For instance, the girls really respond to compliments and positive reinforcement. I've learned that, when you criticize them, you must be very, very tactful in doing so."

Simpson also has remembered that, because LCC's recruits are non-scholarship, there is less justification for applying pressure to perform.

"It's a goal of mine to keep this an enjoyable program, a fun program," he said. "I don't ever want to become so wrapped up in winning that it ceases to be enjoyable."

"I'VE SEEN GIRLS, MORE OFTEN and more quickly than guys, get burned out on basketball and tend to lose interest. It may be a situation where girls have not been as conditioned, down through the years, to be as competitive as guys. But I've observed that, with girls, you can tend to overdo the competitive aspect."

In light of administrative backing that Simpson says he is "thankful for," an operating budget he calls "very adequate," and a first-year record that has boggled all expectations, Simpson anticipates few major changes in his approach within the next 12 months.

The one negative aspect of the program — the necessity of recruiting players who may displace current members of his squad — will be handled with as much delicacy as can be mustered, according to Simpson.

"I feel I've been blessed in getting these particular girls this year," he said, "but, skill-wise, I must select girls who will help us in areas where we're weak right now. We'll need girls who are strong, and can score and rebound inside against the scholarship schools, we also need a couple of ballhandlers and perimeter shooters," which, in fact, leaves little ground uncovered.

Simpson expects at least 10 of his 12 Lady Chaps to attempt a return next season. There is bound to be disappointment.

"This is something that athletes have to come to grips with in any competition," Simpson said. "It takes a mature individual to face up if someone comes in who's a little better. The reaction — I hope — is that they will see it as a challenge. They will have the advantage of having played a year of college ball and knowing the system."

"If this were a scholarship school, I'd have to go out and get the 12 best players. I'd recruit only talent. But here we have different needs and, to me, it's more important to recruit girls who will get along with one another ... girls who won't have a lot of jealousies. That's where the joy comes from."

Raiders Visit Lowly Owls

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
HOUSTON — Nobody needs to tell Gerald Myers or his Texas Tech basketball team that the Rice Owls are a much-improved squad. And nobody needs to remind the Raiders what happened on their last trip to Houston, one week ago.

The Rice Owls drove home the first point quite well the last time the two teams met in Lubbock — forcing Tech in to overtime before David Little's free throws finally clinched a tough 62-59 win.

One week ago today, the Raiders suffered their worst defeat of the year, bowing to the Houston Cougars 75-63 in Hofheinz Pavilion.

Myers said the Owls' earlier performance should give the Rice club a vote of confidence when they meet the Raiders at 7:30 tonight in Autrey Gym. The Raiders will take a 7-4 Southwest Conference mark into the tilt while the Owls are 2-8.

"I think our guys realize what we're up against," said Myers. "They know we've got to be ready to play. We have a lot of respect for Rice — I shouldn't have to do a lot of talking to get them ready."

But the Owls close game in the Coliseum should also give Rice an added edge — or so says Myers.

"On the other hand, that last game will also give them a lot of confidence," he said. "They believe that they can win this one."

In the Owls' last outing, they defeated Wright State 83-79 in a non-conference game. In that contest, the Owls hit a phenomenal 71 percent of their shots from the field in the second half. For the game, Rice hit 62.2 percent.

Leading the Rice attack in that game was 6-5 sophomore Ricky Pierce who scored 26 points. Pierce also had 28 in a losing cause against Baylor last Saturday. He leads the Owls in scoring with a 17.1 per game average and in SWC play has been scoring right at 20 points an outing.

Others averaging in double figures for the Owls are 6-5 guard Bobby Tudor (11.7) and 6-8 forward Kenny Austin (11.2). The other Owl starters are 6-8 freshman center Robert Shaw and 5-10 point guard Anthony DeCello. First off the bench is 6-6 Brian Burns.

"That last game with Wright State should give us some confidence," said Owl boss Mike Schuler. "We started shooting the ball like we are capable of doing."

The Owls did not play well in a regionally televised loss to Baylor and could hit only 36 percent of their field goal efforts. Both Rice conference wins have come against TCU.

"We'll need to play better defense against Rice than we did last time," said Tech's Myers. "I know that's all I've said. "Texas and Houston are fighting with us for that third place spot and SMU and Baylor are fighting for the sixth spot."

"Everybody needs to win now and every game has become crucial," he added. "We can't afford to get lax and we can't afford to go so overboard on defense that our offense slips."

"You see teams go backwards sometimes," Myers said thoughtfully, "and they start playing worse. Hopefully that's already happened to us — and we're past that."

Last Thursday's loss to Houston was the Raiders third in a row, but Tech came back to defeat TCU and league-leading Texas A&M at home. With their 7-4 record, the Raiders have a one-game lead over Texas for third place — the Longhorns are 6-5 in SWC play.

Of the Raiders four SWC losses, three have come on the road.

been talking about lately, but our overall team defense is what enabled us to win our last two games (against TCU and A&M)."

"Pierce, Tudor and Austin are three outstanding players," Myers added. "But Austin is the guy that can kill you if he comes up with a big game."

Austin, a 6-8 freshman from Los Angeles, has played well at times this year (he scored 20 in the Owls 60-59 win over TCU a week ago) but he has been erratic most of the year.

The Raiders will open with their set lineup of Kent Williams and Jeff Taylor at the guards; David Little and Ben Hill on the wings; and Ralph Brewster on the post. Thad Sanders, Leslie Nichols and Steve Smith are also expected to see action for the Raiders.

After tonight's contest with Rice, the Raiders will drive to Waco for a Saturday night battle with Baylor. Myers says both games are important as far as the SWC post-season tournament is concerned.

"Right now you've got two or three teams fighting for every spot," Myers

Aggies Regain Victory Touch

By The Associated Press

Texas A&M's "Great Wall," which showed some cracks against Texas Tech, apparently got a quick fix from Coach Shelby Metcalf and 48 hours later was as solid as ever.

The Aggies lost a 10-point game to the Red Raiders Monday, but manhandled Southern Methodist at College Station Wednesday for a 67-56 win and a temporary half-game lead in the Southwest Conference race.

Junior forwards Rynn Wright and Vernon Smith combined for 37 points and sophomore center Rudy Woods collected 10 points, nine rebounds and five blocked shots in the win.

In the only other SWC game Wednesday, Texas Christian played a generous host to Texas, as the Longhorns breezed to a 90-62 win.

Tonight, Arkansas visits Baylor and Tech plays at Rice.

The Aggie win gives them a 10-1 SWC mark, while Arkansas stands at 9-1. The difference in the A&M win was a scoring spurt early in the second half, as the Aggies outscored the Mustangs 14-6 in the first 10 minutes and SMU, which had hit 55 percent in the first half, could collect just two field goals in 15 tries during that stretch.

"SMU played a good game, very deliberate, and they made us work for the win," said Metcalf, but he pointed out a second-period defensive change as the difference.

"In the second half we dropped back and stopped their penetration," he said, as the Aggies forced SMU into some low-percentage perimeter shots.

When we stopped their penetration, we moved out in front."

SMU coach Sonny Allen, who drew a technical foul protesting an offensive goaltending call, saw the same result from a different perspective.

"The second-half cold streak got us behind early and we had to battle back all of the second half," he said. "If we got a break we still had a chance. A couple of goaltending calls and missed shots got us behind."

In Fort Worth, though, the Horned Frogs could not get within shouting distance of Texas once the second half was under way.

Landry Rebuffs Henderson

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry has told outspoken linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson that he will not be reinstated to the team.

Henderson, forced into retirement in midseason for poor play and being a disruptive influence on the team, had said he did not want to play for another club and had hoped Landry would change his mind.

But during a 30-minute meeting Wednesday, the coach said Henderson was finished as a Cowboy.

He's pretty firm in his stand," Henderson said. "I tried everything. I even offered to cut the yard, cut the lawn at the practice field on Saturday. The bottom line was I couldn't even come back and clean cleats."

"I did everything but get on my knees and he still said no. So for the fans of Dallas, the fans of Hollywood or those with mixed emotions, I tried. I threw my pride out the window."

Landry was unavailable for comment but Henderson said the coach told him that rejoining the Cowboys would not be in his best interest, nor the team's.

He kept throwing the "team" thing at me. I guess everybody's a teammate until you're cut or fired," he said. "If there is such a 'team' and everybody's a part of it, why didn't the 'team' come to my call when I needed them?"

"Tom Landry's the 'team.' There is no 'team.' That's a copout. Really the best interest of the team is the best interest of Tom."

After Dallas lost to Washington — a game in which Henderson played poorly and was mugging for television cameras — Landry told the linebacker he was being waived. Rather than play for another team, Henderson said he would rather retire but later changed his mind.

He was unable to arrange a trade with a suitable team and decided to ask Landry for reinstatement.

Henderson said "out of frustration" he asked Landry to ask New Orleans Saints' coach Dick Nolan, a former Cowboys assistant, if there was room for him with the Saints. Henderson said Landry asked him to leave the room and then called Nolan.

The Saints' coach said he spoke with Landry for about 15 minutes but would not reveal his interests on taking Henderson.

Henderson said he was interested in New Orleans because it is only a one-hour plane flight from his home in Dallas and the Saints employ the same "flex" defense the Cowboys use.

Greg Thomason Kept MHS Afloat

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

For awhile Tuesday night it looked like Monterey's conference winning streak was about to be put on permanent hold. It appeared No. 23 was the end of the line for the Plainsmen.

The Plainsmen, swarmed all night by an alert Lubbock High defense, had been held to just nine points in the first half. A Billy Breedlove bucket early in the second period had kept the Plainsmen from being shut out in the second quarter.

Trav Clardy, Monterey's 6-6 senior center, who averages over 20 points a contest, was scoreless for more than 16 minutes. And Lubbock owned a four-point lead, 13-9.

But just when things seemed their darkest for MHS, Greg Thomason came in to turn on the lights. Thomason, this week's Avalanche-Journal AAAA player of the week, hit all 10 of Monterey's third-period points to help lead MHS to a 39-35 District 4-AAAA win over the Westerners in overtime.

Thomason edged out teammate Steve Wooten and Westerner Kirk Cole for the weekly honor.

Against LHS, Thomason was Monterey's leading scorer with 14 points. It was Thomason's shooting from the 12-to-14-foot range that helped open the middle of the lane for MHS' big men to work.

Until Thomason started hitting in the third quarter, MHS had failed to penetrate LHS' stubborn defense. After that, however, the Plainsmen got close-range buckets from Clardy and Gary Hodges during the final period.

Meanwhile, Wooten scored all eight of Monterey's overtime points to lead a big hand in the victory. He connected on a 15-footer with 2:20 left in the fifth period and then came back two minutes later with a four-point play. The four points, which came after he hit a layup and a pair of free throws following an intentional foul, put MHS up 37-33.

Cole, the biggest man in LHS' lineup at 6-3, led the Westerner defense that shut down Monterey completely. The Plainsmen hit only 17-of-41 shots from the field and five-of-11 free throws. Cole, LHS' second-leading scorer for the evening with nine points, eventually fouled out of the game, however.

Miss Holladay Makes Cubs Snarl

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Ask Brownfield coach Vernon Paul about his star player, Marcy Holladay, and he'll tell you what a "super kid" she is.

She'll probably be president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes next year, he'll tell you, and besides that, she's a hard worker who'll stay in the gym as long as he lets her.

But mention her name to any of her District 3-AAA opponents, and all they can talk about are points and rebounds.

Sure enough, Marcy Holladay is leading the area in scoring in her sophomore year with a 22.2 point per game average. And she's the fourth-leading rebounder with 11.3 boards a game.

But she topped even those statistics last weekend. Miss Holladay scored 23 points against both Sweetwater and Snyder, two of the top three teams in that district, and pulled down a total of 37 rebounds.

Miss Holladay and the Cubs split, winning Tuesday night's clash with Sweetwater 46-44 and losing to Snyder 46-38 in overtime. Those performances are more than enough to earn Miss Holladay the Avalanche-Journal's AAA player of the week award in the girls' ranks.

The 5-foot-10 sophomore is one of the main reasons Brownfield has done so well this year, the Cubs' first varsity season. Records of 10-13 overall and 2-4 in league play may not sound like much, but for the first season under the District 3-AAA circuit, it's impressive.

In the Snyder game, Miss Holladay popped in 23 points and dominated the boards, pulling down 21 rebounds. In the win over Sweetwater, she got another 23 points and 16 rebounds.

But life isn't all sunshine and tip-ins for this week's MVP. Seems people think she's a tomboy because of her athletic talent.

"Everybody thinks I'm a tomboy and everything, but it doesn't bother me that much," she said.

This weekend's top boys' performance was turned in by Berger's Chester Williams. He tossed in 33 points Tuesday night to lead the Bulldogs past Levelland in a key District 1-AAA win. That, linked with 26 points against Canyon Friday night in a win that clinched a share of the district's first-half title for the Bulldogs, wrapped up the weekly honor for Williams.

Chap Baseball Team Splits With UTEP

EL PASO (Special) — Dave Hanna failed to give up an earned run as Lubbock Christian College defeated the University of Texas-El Paso 4-3 in the first game of a double-header here Wednesday afternoon.

However, in the nightcap, LCC fell for the first time this season, losing to the Miners 8-6 in a game called after five innings because of darkness.

The Chaps are now 3-1 for the year and will return to action Feb. 17 when they travel to Hawkins for a meeting with Jarvis Christian College.

Steve Cargile broke open a 1-1 ball game when he slapped a two-out single to score Tim Leslie in the fourth inning of the first game. Steve Brigante, who drove in three runs for LCC but had two errors that led to three Miner runs, connected for a two-run single with bases loaded to keep the drive alive and led LCC to the win.

Hanna, who gave up only four hits and one walk while striking out five, picked up the win. He was relieved by Chris Cook in the fifth stanza.

LCC gave up five unearned runs in the first inning of the nightcap and lost a race with the sun to come from behind. The Chaps put together a rally in the top of the fifth inning and came up with three runs, but the comeback was thwarted in the final inning when Tracy Witherspoon flied out to deep center field. Prior to that, Richard Bowles and Toney had slapped home runs.

Kelley Simons was the winning pitcher, Paul Wright the loser.

Ken Griffey Hopes For Pleasant Resolution Of Salary Troubles

CINCINNATI (AP) — Outfielder Ken Griffey, one of 15 players on the Cincinnati Reds' 40-man roster who has not yet signed a contract for this season, is flirting with the idea of playing without a contract so he can enter the free-agent draft next season.

"It's in my subconscious," said Griffey, who missed the last half of last season because of knee surgery. "It's getting late and I'd rather not discuss contract in spring training. I have more important things on my mind then."

I guess I have a one-track mind. I don't want any distractions when I play."

Griffey, 29, would qualify for free-agent status now if he had been on the Reds' major league roster for one more day a few seasons ago.

It pushes comes to shove, I won't sign and I'll play out my option," Griffey said. "But I don't think it'll come to that. I feel both sides can resolve the problems which exist."

Griffey has a .310 career batting average with the Reds. Under baseball rules, the club would be obliged to pay him only 80 percent of last year's salary for this season's work if he doesn't sign a contract.

I know I could play without a contract. It would mean blocking out a lot of things, but I know I could do it," Griffey said. "But I wouldn't want to go through the situation Joe Morgan went through last year. I'd make sure somebody wanted me."

Joe had some injuries, but he might have been pressing a little, too. I know I wouldn't do that. The fans are going to boo if you don't do well, but I could block that out."

It was a very tough year for Joe. It was demoralizing for him," Griffey said. "I'd have to stop all that from happening to me. I'd make sure I'd be in a position to go out in the free-agent market and get what I felt I deserved."

Morgan batted .250 last season and was drafted by just four clubs in the free-agent draft before eventually signing with the Houston Astros, who obtained negotiating rights to him in a supplemental draft.

Joe never changed toward the ballplayers, and he always talked to the press," Griffey said. "I'd probably keep talking to the press (in a similar situation), but I'd have to cut out reading the newspaper."

Griffey considered fighting for free-agent status this year, but backed out of a battle over that one day of major league credit that would be worth big money in negotiations now.

I know I had a good case, but my intentions were not to go out on the free-agent market to get all that money," he said. "I don't want to leave Cincinnati. The organization has been good to me."

I feel if a person is worth that much money somewhere else, he should be worth that much or more to his own team, a team you've been on through a few championship years."

Newspaper Background Helps ABC's Jim McKay

By The Associated Press

Since he will be coming into many of your homes for 13 straight nights starting next Tuesday, it might be nice to give you the man behind the makeup — Jim McKay — up close and personal.

Next to Johnny Carson, McKay is American television's second most famous host. The Lake Placid Games (Feb. 12-24) will be McKay's ninth Olympics, dating back to 1960 when he worked for CBS in Rome.

Carson began his entertainment career as a magician, which often puts him in good stead when he has to make 30 minutes worth of material stretch over an hour and a half. McKay began his career as a police reporter for the Baltimore Sun, which is a superb background when news events — like the massacre of 11 Israelis at the Munich Olympics — play games with sports.

Another major influence was a sports writer McKay read

Olympic Boycott Rankles Lord Killanin

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — "The bane of my life is the word boycott," says Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

Killanin's comment as he arrived in Lake Placid for the XIII Winter Olympic Games Wednesday night sets the tone for the IOC session this weekend. There is likely to be no support for President Carter's call for next summer's Olympic Games to be moved from Moscow, cancelled or boycotted.

"I think it is very important that we should not be dictated to by governments on where we shall go," Killanin said at a press conference, underlining the traditional role of the Olympic Games as being independent of politics.

Some 76 of the 89 members of the self-elected, self-perpetuating IOC, the ruling body of the Games, are expected for the Lake Placid session. Some have already arrived and have indicated they are backing Killanin and standing firm against Carter's boycott call.

Julian K. Roosevelt, one of the two IOC members from the United States, kept up his campaign to keep the Olympic Games in Moscow, despite the world reaction against the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

"I have heard it said that a boycott of the Olympics would be the strongest weapon we could use against the Russians," Roosevelt said before Killanin arrived. "If that is the strongest thing we can do, we have no Washington."

"The United States would be a bunch of cowards if we stayed home. The only way we can stand up to the Soviets is to go over there and beat them in Moscow this summer."

Killanin plans to meet Friday with Robert Kane and Col. F. Donald Miller, president and secretary, respectively, of the U.S. Olympic Committee, which has promised to pass on Carter's call for moving or cancelling the Games.

Killanin told the news conference he is ready to let Kane and Miller go before the full session of the IOC, although he has said repeatedly the Games cannot be moved from Moscow.

"Any national Olympic committee has the right to express views to the IOC," Killanin said.

But the U.S. Olympic Committee cannot put a resolution on the IOC agenda. The 140 national Olympic committees around the world are simply recognized by the IOC and play no part in its deliberations.

Killanin, 66, who succeeded the late Avery Brundage as president in 1972, said the IOC's session in Lake Placid will be one of the most vital in its 86-year history.

"Things have come to light which will make people re-think many aspects of the Olympic movement in the years to come," Killanin said.

He did not elaborate, but could have been referring to the idea of a permanent site for the Games, possibly in Greece. The Greek government has suggested Olympia, the site of the ancient Games, and has hinted it might be prepared to create an independent territory for the celebration of the Games every four years.

"The IOC signed a letter of agreement with Moscow, which I regard as morally and legally binding," he said.

The IOC stands to lose a lot of revenue if the Moscow Games collapse. If no American team competes in Moscow this summer, NBC is expected to pull out of its contract to televise the Games in the United States. The television network is insured against the non-appearance of a U.S. team.

NBC is paying $35 million for the television rights, and one-third of the money would go to the IOC for its administration costs and for helping amateur sport around the world through the international sports federations and the national Olympic committees. If that revenue were cut off, the IOC would be crippled.

Carter's Olympic Stance Slows Donations

NEW YORK (AP) — As the televised pitch for money goes, "America doesn't send athletes to the Olympic Games; Americans do." And they're still trying, despite President Carter's threat to boycott the Moscow Olympics.

In early and mid-January, Americans were sending money at "a furious rate" to fund the U.S. Olympic team, says an analyst of the U.S. Olympic Committee's fund-raising figures. But Alan Sack, senior vice president of Hub Mail Advertising in Boston, said Wednesday that he noticed some slackening since Jan. 20, when Carter said the Moscow Games should be cancelled, postponed or moved if Soviet troops aren't pulled from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

And Sack admits it's still too early to tell how the boycott threat hanging over the Games will affect future fund-raising efforts, although E. Ray Mueller, the USOC's director of fundraising, says: "As of now, we're on target."

That's partially because Americans didn't slow down when Carter threw up the caution flag Jan. 4, hinting at the possibility of an Olympic boycott for the first time. Even though polls reflected popular opinion in favor of a boycott, Americans sent more money to fund the U.S. Olympic team during January 1980 than they did during the identical period one year ago, Sack said.

Sack's company uses its computer to tally private citizen donations to the USOC, which asked for contributions from 750,000 individuals in letters mailed last October. That total was 35 percent higher than the number of appeals mailed out in October 1978.

After subtracting the 35 percent, the number of donors last month increased by 66 percent over January 1979, while the amount of money raised jumped 79 percent.

Sack said that logic would dictate money being withheld while an American team's participation was in doubt. "But in this business, you can't think about what you would do. You have to take yourself out of the Big Apple," he said, adding you have to go to America's heartland to find the real public pulse.

"It did baffie me initially," Sack said. "But then I did some serious contemplation, applied some of my psychology background and could come up with only one conclusion.

"It's total conjecture on my part, but I think the whole situation in Iran and then Afghanistan created an enormous frustration on the grass roots level in the U.S. People were asking 'What the heck's happening here?'"

"Then they have in their hands this letter from the USOC, which is the equivalent of apple pie, motherhood and the red, white and blue. It's supposed to represent all that's good in America. So they send in the money, perhaps hoping that — by magic — the hostage problems and the Russian troops would go away. It's partly a fantasy, but basically it's a patriotic move."

Sack said Carter's Jan. 20 statement appeared to have some impact on donations. "There's been some effect, but how much is hard to tell. We need at least three weeks to get a proper read. Responses are still coming in now at a greater rate than they did a year ago at this time. But I see a slackening."

Still, the USOC appears in good shape for the months remaining in this Olympic quadrennium. The USOC is some $10-11 million short of the $44 million it estimated was needed to cover the 1977-80 Olympic period.

Rangers Seek Exec

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Texas Rangers are expected to offer New York Mets' general manager Joe McDonald a similar position with the Rangers, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

Brad Corbett, chairman of the board of the Arlington-based American League baseball team, declined comment on the newspaper's report.

"I don't want to comment on that. We're always interested in any talented person. I will say that if anyone does any hiring like that, it will be Eddie Robinson, not me," Corbett said.

Robinson, the team's general manager, was in New York today for a league meeting. He declined substantial comment on the report, but said he would see McDonald at the meeting.

Contacted at his home in Yonkers, N.Y., McDonald told the newspaper, "I can't comment on that. I still work for the New York Mets."

Eddie Chiles, a member of the Rangers' executive board, said McDonald is being considered for a position on the team.

"But I don't know what his title will be," Chiles said.

Chiles said, however, that McDonald will not replace Robinson in running the front office. Robinson was brought to the Texas team three years ago over the head of then-general manager Dan O'Brien, who left the Rangers last year to become president and chief operating officer of the Seattle Mariners.

"Nobody's going to replace Eddie Robinson," Chiles declared. "If we hire him (McDonald), he'll be in addition to Eddie Robinson."

Chiles said it would be McDonald's job to handle the paper work and details regarding rules, regulations, laws and the "gobbledygook" of the American League office.

"Somebody's got to see that we comply with the rules," added Chiles, an oil drilling company executive who is well known in Texas for his radio and television commercials attacking the federal government's bureaucracy.

"I guess they (the American League) are about as bureaucratic as the government, where you have to file a bunch of foolish papers. Somebody's got to keep up with all the paperwork," Chiles added.

The need to keep up with the rules may have resulted from the incident last year in which the Rangers had a deal vetoed by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn. Before the matter was resolved, the Rangers lost the services of Oscar Gamble, who hit .335 with them before he went to the New York Yankees, where he hit .389.

The trade between the Rangers and Yankees was voided when the Rangers announced the names of several minor league players involved in the trade before getting waivers on them.

Although he says the final decision on hiring McDonald will be made by Corbett and Robinson, Chiles said the Rangers need to add more staff to the front office.

Hayes' Parole Receives OK

AUSTIN (AP) — Next month, Bob Hayes will get out of prison.

The former Dallas Cowboy wide receiver and Olympic gold medalist, serving five years for cocaine delivery, was granted a parole when Gov. Bill Clements signed the order.

"I wrote him that I did so with a real sense of anticipation that with his experiences now, both bad and good, he could be a great influence on young people, not only in Texas but in the entire country," the governor said at an afternoon news conference.

Clements said he has read reports that Hayes plans to work with the Rev. Jesse Jackson's youth programs, but said he could not verify those reports personally.

Hayes will be eligible for release in March, according to a spokesman for the state Board of Pardons and Paroles who said board members would determine the exact release date.

Hayes has served 10 months of his five-year sentence for delivering cocaine to an undercover officer.

The board had recommended Hayes for parole in early January, and Clements' staff concurred earlier this week.

Frosh Aid Wildcats, Cavaliers

By The Associated Press

Good things came in small — and big — packages for the Kentucky Wildcats Wednesday night.

And once they unwrapped Kyle Macy and Sam Bowie, the party was over for the Mississippi Rebels. Macy scored 28 points and Bowie collected 15 more and blocked six shots as fifth-ranked Kentucky defeated Ole Miss, 86-72.

"Macy was playing with great confidence," Mississippi coach Bob Weltlich said of Kentucky's fine guard. "There isn't much you can plan against a player like that. We just tried to do the best job we could in guarding him."

Nor was there much the Rebels could do against Bowie, the seven-foot freshman center who seems to be playing at the top of his game these days.

"Bowie has improved a lot since the first game against us," said Weltlich. "We let him get started with a lob dunk. That was our mistake because we knew it was coming, but we just weren't ready for it defensively. He got his confidence and was a big factor."

Kentucky coach Joe B. Hall called Bowie's performance "the best defensive game he has played this year." Not only did Bowie block six shots, Hall said, "but he intimidated many, many more and caused a lot of walks."

Ralph Sampson, another sensational freshman center, scored 20 points to help 18th-ranked Virginia defeat 10th-ranked Duke 73-69 in another big game Wednesday night.

In other action involving Top Twenty teams, No. 3 Louisville stopped Cincinnati 88-73; No. 6 Louisiana State edged Alabama 68-66 in overtime; No. 9 Notre Dame walloped Manhattan 93-49; No. 15 Missouri beat Iowa State 84-70 and No. 16 Clemson blasted Wake Forest 86-69.

Macy scored eight of his game-leading points in an 18-2 second-half run that helped Kentucky break the game open against Mississippi. John Stroud, the Southeastern Conference's leading scorer, had 27 points for the Rebels.

"We were very concerned about Mississippi because of the fine way they've been playing," said Hall. "That was a real good victory for us."

Sampson scored 16 of his points in the second half, and the Cavaliers needed just about every one. Virginia's 7-foot-4 center contributed several key baskets, including a layup with just under six minutes to go, to boost the Cavaliers into a four-point lead they never lost.

Noted Duke Coach Bill Foster after losing his fifth Atlantic Coast Conference game in 10 this year: "I really don't have much to say. We played much better in the second half. We overcame 30 percent shooting in the first half. It's a tough loss for us."

Derek Smith scored a career-high 26 points and Darrell Griffith scored 13 and became the first player in Louisville history to hit the career 2,000-point level in the Cardinals' victory over Cincinnati. Griffith finished the game with 2,005 points for his four-year career.

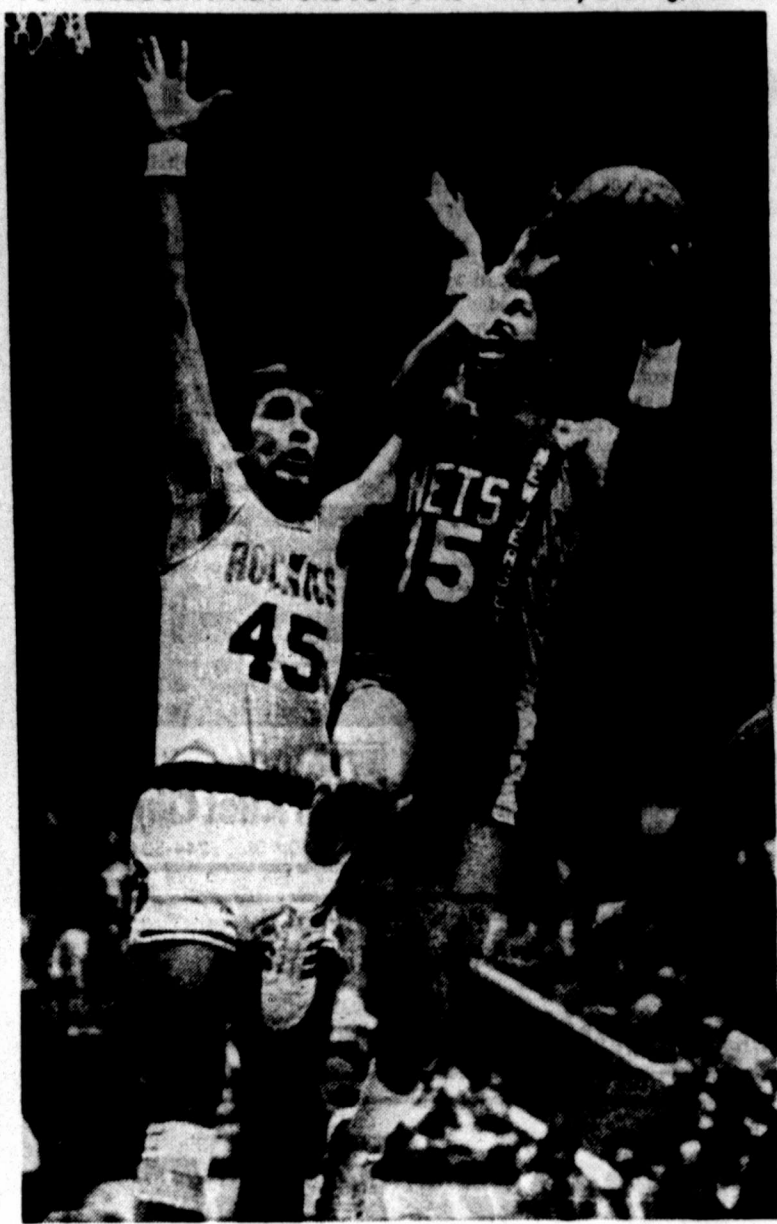

"I think Louisville's defense is built on quick spurts. You've seen that all season," said Cincinnati coach Ed Badger. "Our game plan was not to get into a running match with them. We started out and got behind them and wanted to attack."

"Then we got into a rat race, we went up and down, made three errors in a row, they made three buckets in a row and that was the thing right there."

Willie Sims hit two free throws with four seconds remaining in overtime to lead LSU over Alabama. The Tigers controlled the ball for the entire overtime period and with four seconds left, Mike Davis fouled Sims, who calmly put through the winning points.

Kelly Tripucka returned to the starting lineup after missing four games with back spasms and scored 15 points to lead Notre Dame past Manhattan. Tripucka had eight of his points as the Irish rushed to a never-headed 20-2 lead in the first 10 minutes.

Curtis Berry scored 20 points and collected 10 rebounds to lead Missouri over Iowa State. Larry Nance sank 12 of 15 shots from the floor and finished with a career-high 25 points as Clemson defeated Wake Forest.

Rick Barry Keeps Distance, Wins

By The Associated Press

For openers, Houston's Rick Barry showed seven 3's Wednesday night but he had a pair of aces in the hole that proved fatal to the New Jersey Nets.

Barry set a National Basketball Association record with seven three-point baskets — he tried nine — but it took his pair of free throws with four seconds left to give the Rockets a four-point lead en route to a 115-114 victory over the Nets.

"I can't go crazy with it (the three-pointers)," said Barry, who hit his first four long-distance shots late in the opening period after the Rockets fell behind 19-7. "I think all the shots I took tonight were good. I just don't try to force them."

Barry's long-range bombing enabled him to top the Rockets with 27 points. His seven three-point baskets broke the NBA record of five which he shared with Boston's Chris Ford and San Diego's Brian Taylor.

"Rick doesn't have a green light to go for the three points, he's got a yellow light," said Coach Del Harris. "I just tell him to go for it in the context of the situation."

The context this time, as Barry put it, was that "we are not executing well offensively. In the last three games we've had leads going into the final quarter and we were just lucky to win this one."

The Nets, led by newly acquired Roger Phegley's 25 points — 16 in the fourth quarter — pulled within 113-111 with 49 seconds left. Phegley attempted a game-winning shot with 17 seconds remaining but it was blocked by Tom Henderson. Barry then hit two free throws that nullified a last-second three-point basket by New Jersey's Ed Jordan. Moses Malone added 26 points and Rudy Tomjanovich had 20 for Houston.

Celtics 129, 76ers 110

Larry Bird, Nate Archibald and Cedric Maxwell led a furious second-half charge in rallying Boston from a 14-point third-period deficit. Bird scored 22 of his 32 points in the second half while Archibald had all of his 18 and Maxwell 15 of his 19 in the final two periods. The victory put the Celtics two full games ahead of the 76ers in the Atlantic Division.

Philadelphia took a 14-point lead at the outset of the third period before the Celtics took command and charged to an 88-85 lead. The 76ers tied the score 90-90 before Archibald put Boston in front to stay. Then, with the score 94-92, Boston ran off 12 straight points.

Rick Hoby, spelling the injured Dave Cowens for a seventh consecutive game, had 22 points. Philadelphia's Julius Erving led all scorers with 36.

Kent Benson Glows In New Role As Piston

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — His reddish-blond hair flounced as Kent Benson soared above the rim and stuffed the ball down through the hoop off a fast break.

The net popped and the 6-foot-10, 235-pounder broke into a wide grin as the ball bounced away and he chased it up into the seats in the empty Silverdome.

"Woeeee!"

"Good hustle, Kent."

The Wednesday morning practice was supposed to last an hour. Nobody wanted to stop. Finally, after more than two hours, Coach Richie Adubato chased his Detroit Pistons off the court.

"I hope I can play him a lot," Adubato said. "He doesn't know many of our plays yet, but he will. His attitude is great. I hope he scores a lot of points for us."

"At Milwaukee, the Bucks' offense wasn't geared for him, but he's proven he can score points if you want him to."

Adubato picked up the former Indiana All-American at the airport Tuesday and the two had a long dinner. Adubato was concerned that Benson might be depressed coming from a contender to the worst club in the National Basketball Association in the deal that sent Bob Lanier to Milwaukee.

The coach needn't have worried. "I'm really relieved," the 25-year-old Benson said after the spirited workout. "I'm happy to be here in Detroit. The coaches seem to be fundamentally sound. That's the kind of background I come out of, playing for Coach (Bobby) Knight at Indiana. I'm very happy with what I saw out there in practice."

Benson said he was very aware of the Pistons' 14-40 record, but said he welcomed the chance to be part of a team he felt was building for the future.

"I have no control over the situation," Benson said. "My future is here in Detroit and I'm happy I'm here."

Adubato said the Pistons were "giving and taking" on the trade: giving up a proven scorer but getting a little more speed, quickness and a man six years younger than Lanier.

"I don't want to be compared with Bob Lanier," the soft-spoken Benson said. "I'm not going to try to fill his shoes. I'm coming in here as Kent Benson."

Benson, who had to leave his wife, Monica, and infant daughter, Andrea, behind in the house they recently purchased in Milwaukee, said he hopes to find a home on a lake in northern Oakland County and settle in Michigan.

"I'm a family man. I want to live here and be a part of the community," Benson said. "The coaches have made me aware that I'm included in their plans."

Adubato said Benson would get plenty of playing time in tonight's game against the defending NBA champion Seattle SuperSonics, although he wouldn't start.

"I feel more excited about this than I have about anything in basketball in the last three years," Benson said.

Arbitration Cases Upset Detroit Tiger Tranquility

DETROIT (AP) — This is fast turning into the winter of Jim Campbell's discontent.

Campbell, the Detroit Tiger president and general manager, has suffered through nearly a crisis a week with one player or another.

Wednesday he learned he had double trouble. His double play combination — shortstop Alan Trammell and second baseman Lou Whitaker — is taking him to arbitration in a contract dispute.

It marks the first time any Tiger has used the arbitration process since it became available six years ago.

Detroit attorney Rick Brode, bargaining agent for both players, says Trammell and Whitaker each want more than $125,000, up from the $60,000 each earned last season.

Campbell says the Tigers have offered Trammell a package worth more than $100,000 and says Brode never had put Whitaker's 1980 contract demands on the table.

"I paid them $60,000 last year — $55,000 plus a $5,000 bonus on attendance," Campbell said angrily. "In December, we sent them contracts for $75,000 or $80,000 — in that area. You have to leave yourself some bargaining room."

However, Campbell said, Brode came back with a demand for $200,000 for each player.

Things were supposed to be rosy with the promising young Detroit club looking forward to the first full season under manager Sparky Anderson. But something went haywire.

First all-star outfielder Steve Kemp refused to join the club's annual press tour; then outfielder Kirk Gibson began talking football with the St. Louis Cardinals; now, this.

Campbell was especially furious when he heard that Brode had been calling reporters around Detroit.

"I just don't like to do business in the media this way," Campbell snapped. "I think it's bush. We've never done it before, and I'm not doing it with other agents, because they've respected confidentiality."

"But if that's the way he (Brode) wants it, that's the way I'll do it."

An arbitrator takes a club's best offer and a player's demand and selects one or the other. There is no compromise.

'Ice' Stays Cool To Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio Spurs' guard George Gervin, unhappy with his contract, has missed a game and three practice sessions. But both Gervin and his agent insist the NBA scoring leader is ill and isn't staging a mid-season holdout.

Gervin, who's aiming at his third consecutive scoring title, inexplicably missed practice sessions Monday and Tuesday morning. He called in sick for Tuesday night's loss to New Jersey and Wednesday's practice.

The absences came after Gervin told reporters he wanted his $350,000-per-year contract renegotiated and prompted speculation that Gervin's illness was dollar-related.

But Gervin told the San Antonio Express after Wednesday's visit to the team doctor, "I'm not hiding. I was ill. I feel much better. There is no use in my coming out there if I wasn't 100 percent."

Asked when he thought he would return, Gervin replied, "I can't disclose that. Can't too much keep me down. I don't know what the chaos is about."

Team officials maintain they will not even consider any renegotiation until after the season.

Gervin, in the midst of his best pro season, has four years remaining on an eight-year pact that reportedly pays $350,000 per year, plus incentive bonuses. It was renegotiated in 1978 after Gervin demanded to be traded.

Gervin, 27, reportedly makes only a third as much money as other NBA superstars. About 15 NBA players make more money than Gervin, said Tacoma, Wash., attorney Pat Healy, Gervin's spokesman and agent.

But Healy said Wednesday by phone from Tacoma that it's "totally coincidental" Gervin's illness coincides with his contract unhappiness.

George would never hold out or do anything like that. That's not our style. He's a professional," said Healy. "George has proven that he plays sick. He wasn't feeling 100 percent in the All-Star game Sunday. You can't play if you're nauseated. He'll be back and give 100 percent when he's well."

Gervin hit 34 points and was the most valuable player in Sunday's NBA All-Star game. He is averaging more than 33 points per game, twice scoring more than 30 points this season.

Spurs' officials planned to present Gervin with his All-Star MVP trophy and other awards at Tuesday night's game. Fans booed when it was announced he was ill and would not suit up.

Healy said he has "on-going communication" with Spurs' officials about Gervin's contract.

George wants to stay in San Antonio. He feels he must get security for his wife and three kids. He's willing to sign to stay in San Antonio for life to get that," said Healy.

Gervin faces fines for missing the first two practices, said Coach Doug Moe.

Asked if he thought Gervin was staging a holdout, Moe replied, "I can't jump to conclusions just because it happens at the same time he is saying he's sick. I trust him. I can see the possibility of a contract problem. It's no secret he isn't happy with his contract."

Burns Wants To Benefit From Hawaiian Pairings

HONOLULU (AP) — George Burns, having just won his first big professional golf tournament, says he'll be taking a lesson today.

I'm paired with Tom Watson and Jerry Pate in the first round of the Hawaiian Open and I can learn from each of them," said Burns, who comes off victory in the tough Bing Crosby event at Pebble Beach, Calif., last weekend.

I'll watch both of them closely. I'll be taking some mental notes and I'll learn something.

Burns and Crenshaw won the team title.

I'm still searching for a lot," Burns said. "There is no such thing as instant success."

The 210-pound former University of Maryland golfer joined a field of 144 in the $325,000 Hawaiian event with its $58,500 first prize.

His victory at Pebble Beach was worth $54,000. Even without an individual victory in 1979, he collected $107,830 in prize money.

The 72-hole Hawaiian event includes Hubert Green, who won on this 7,234-yard, par 36-36-72 Waialae Country Club course the last two years.

Burns had a special reason to be pleased to be in the threesome with former U.S. Open champion Pate and Watson, the leading Professional Golfers Association money-winner the past three years.

This is the first time I've been paired with such winners. I consider Watson the greatest player in the game today," said Burns.

He's got to do something I can use to my benefit. Anybody who earned one-half million dollars in a year, with the kind of competition he had, has to be some sort of a player.

Tech Promotes SID Samples

Texas Tech Athletic Director Dick Tamburo Wednesday announced that Keith Samples, Tech's sports information director for the past two years, has been named to the newly created position of Assistant Athletic Director for Media Relations and Promotions.

In making the announcement, Tamburo said Samples will continue to have direct input into Tech's sports information operation, but would have expanded duties in the areas of promotion, marketing, advertising sales and involvement with radio and television networks for Tech athletics.

"The creation of this new position will be a tremendous plus for the expansion and development of our athletic program," declared Tamburo. "By establishing this position, we are making a conscious effort to continue to be competitive in the Southwest Conference."

Having Keith work more extensively with promotion projects and with our radio and television projects will speed up the positive growth of our department."

Samples took over the duties of sports information director in January, 1978, after 1 1/2 years as assistant SID at Tech. He began working in athletics at Tech as a student assistant in the sports information office in 1974 and later became a full-time employee after receiving a degree in journalism, with a minor in business.

"I am both happy and excited about the new position," Samples said. "It is a tremendous opportunity for me and I am grateful to Dick Tamburo and Texas Tech for having the confidence in me to let me expand my responsibilities."

U.S. Olympic Policy Elicits Indignance Of Soviet Official

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A Soviet Olympics official has branded the Carter Administration's call for a boycott of the Moscow games a "crude" violation of the Olympic charter that could backfire on its supporters.

"The idea of a boycott is condemned by the international Olympic movement," Valery Smirnov, a member of the Moscow Olympic organizing committee, said Wednesday.

"The rules of the Olympic movement prohibit countries from not participating for religious, political, economic or social reasons," he said. "I repudiate totally the idea."

Smirnov, also a vice president of the International Olympic Committee, called the Carter boycott proposal a "very crude violation" of the Olympic spirit and said it could backfire in the administration's face.

Quoting Clause 23 of the IOC Charter, Smirnov said the IOC had "final authority on all questions ... including matters of discipline" against member nations.

After the lengthy news conference, Smirnov left for Lake Placid, N.Y., site of the IOC meetings which begin Friday.

Persian Gulf Oil Cutoff Could Cause Depression

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International Writer

What happens to Americans if Persian Gulf oil is cut off? At the very least it would be costly and uncomfortable, under the worst circumstances it would leave us cold, dirty, hungry and broke in the grips of the worst depression the country has ever seen.

Analysis

And it just could happen. The Persian Gulf area doesn't seem like it would be such a choice piece of real estate. Temperatures are often well into the 100s and the heat ranges from violently dry in Kuwait to miserably wet in Bahrain.

But 40 percent of the free world's oil comes from the countries along the long, sandy water-edge ringed by date palms and bare dunes.

And although the United States is less dependent on Persian Gulf oil than many other industrialized nations, in the event of a cutoff, international agreements call for the shortage to be spread evenly. Such international rationing would cut U.S. oil supplies nearly in half.

"The United States cannot afford to be strangled by the loss of Persian Gulf oil," said David Mizrahi, editor of the Middle East Report in New York. "Any cutoff of Middle East oil or just Saudi Arabian oil alone would mean war."

After the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan pushed Russian troops to within 300 miles of the Persian Gulf, President Carter warned the United States would use force, if necessary, to protect the area from attack by a hostile power.

About 19 million barrels a day flow through the Persian Gulf to the United States, Western Europe and Japan. U.S. Energy Department figures show:

Saudi Arabia — America's largest foreign oil supplier — Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates border the Persian Gulf and account for two-thirds of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' production.

Industry specialists said the United States, which imports 2 million barrels a day from the Persian Gulf, normally would be in a better position to weather a stoppage than its allies, because Americans have more leeway to conserve and U.S. wells provide 55 percent of domestic oil needs.

But analysts said U.S. participation in the international Energy Agency's emergency plan — under which 20 nations have agreed to share oil supplies during a major disruption — would subject the United States to a 40 percent oil shortage and severe economic hardship.

"The United States could withstand the loss of 2 million barrels a day of Persian Gulf oil, which amounts to about 10 percent of U.S. consumption, by rationing gasoline, lowering speed limits, setting thermostats below 65 degrees and burning more coal," an oil economist told UPI.

But if the United States adhered to the IEA sharing mechanism, we'd be cut back from current consumption of 18.5 million barrels a day to about 11 million barrels and sharing a 40 percent crude shortage with everybody else," he said.

The economic consequences would be a good deal worse than the worst depression the United States has ever had.

The 1973-74 Arab oil embargo, which lasted five months, reduced U.S. oil supplies by 15 percent, caused a severe recession in the United States and quadrupled world oil prices.

A disruption in the flow of Persian Gulf oil and its nightmarish impact on the industrialized world cannot be ruled out.

The Shah of Iran's forces had guarded the vulnerable Strait of Hormuz, which connects the Persian Gulf with the Indian Ocean, until the withdrawal of Iranian naval patrols last spring. Although 26 U.S. navy units are stationed in the Indian Ocean, the 24-mile-wide Strait remains for all practical purposes unguarded.

Persian Gulf officials are holding talks with the United States on measures to secure the Strait of Hormuz against a Soviet takeover or a terrorist strike, sources said, but most Arab states are opposed to a U.S. presence in the Gulf.

The U.S. oil industry readily admits that it has no contingency plans to offset a Persian Gulf cutoff, which would leave very little uncommitted crude up for grabs.

The federal government and the International Energy Agency would inherit immediate responsibility for handling the oil shock.

But several specialists expressed doubt that the United States would honor the IEA sharing agreement in the event of a Persian Gulf catastrophe.

If only half of Persian Gulf oil were affected, there would be a fair chance of the IEA Mechanism working and, hopefully, exerting quite a bit of discipline," said Warren Davis, chief economist of Gulf Oil Corp.

But if the whole of Persian Gulf oil were lost, governments would panic. We'd be at economic war with each other bidding for crude from Africa and Indonesia and see an almost total breakdown of foreign commerce."

Exiled Shah's Status In Panama Unclear

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Panama's foreign minister says the Shah cannot leave Panama and that he is living in the country "as if it were a jail," but the Panamanian president said the exiled monarch is free to leave under certain conditions.

The statements by Foreign Minister Carlos Ozores and President Aristides Rovo in separate television interviews Wednesday were the latest in a series of confusing statements issued by Panamanian authorities on the status of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Rovo was asked by ABC-TV whether the Shah was free to leave his home in exile in Panama.

"Yes, under the requirements of our security authorities, of course," Rovo said.

Kabul Editor Fired For Two Editorials

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The man put in charge of the government newspaper Kabul New Times after the Soviet-engineered coup in Afghanistan six weeks ago has been fired after publishing two controversial editorials last week.

Mohammed Rahim Rafat's name was removed from the masthead of the English-language paper last weekend. No official reason was given, but the move had been expected after the paper published an editorial that seemed to criticize President Babrak Karmal.

When he was asked if he could leave tonight, he said, "Yes, he can go if he wants to go."

Though Ozores said the Shah had not been placed under arrest and has not been told by Panamanian authorities he could not leave the country, he said the Shah "definitely cannot cross the borders (of Panama)."

"The Shah cannot leave Panama for obvious reasons," Ozores said. "He can move around inside the national territory, but he is constantly guarded and watched by the Panamanian National Guard."

"He lives in the country as if it were a jail, if you can call our country a jail."

Shah spokesman Mark Morse, speaking by telephone from the Shah's home on Contadora Island, 32 miles southwest of Panama City, said the monarch had not been told by authorities that he could not leave Panama.

"No one has communicated to us anything about the Shah being detained or that he is not free to leave the country at any time," Morse said.

"The president (Aristides Rovo) and Gen. (Omar) Torrijos (commander-in-chief of the National Guard) told us the Shah could leave the country any time he wanted to and we have to assume that is still the same, unless there is a change of ideas or status."

Ozores said he "had no knowledge" of some reports which said the Shah had been arrested or placed on bail by Panamanian authorities.

Roe Seeks To Halt Entry Of Iranians

WASHINGTON (UP) — Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., noting that 8,414 Iranians have entered the United States in the last three months, has called on President Carter to stop further entry of Iranians until American hostages are released.

"It is clearly unfair for this 'open door' policy for Iranians to continue at a time when American citizens are being refused the right to leave Iran under their own free will," Roe said Wednesday in a letter to Carter.

Roe said the Immigration and Naturalization Service told him 8,414 Iranians had entered the country since the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized on Nov. 4.

Somalia Wants Substantial Aid In Return For Loaning Bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hard bargaining over U.S. aid is slowing down completion of an agreement with Somalia to give the United States use of a former Soviet naval and air base on the Gulf of Aden in East Africa.

Discussions are proceeding also with Kenya and Oman, two other friendly countries in the volatile Persian Gulf region. U.S. officials say they are optimistic that deals will be worked out bolstering American defenses against potential Soviet penetration.

A team of Pentagon and State Department officials arrived in Mogadishu, the Somali capital, on Tuesday and is holding talks there. The group, headed by Reginald Bartholomew, director of political and military affairs at State, plans to go on to Oman, Kenya and also Saudi Arabia before returning to Washington next week.

President Carter, in his State of the Union message last month, declared protection of the oil-rich Persian Gulf within "the vital interests of the United States." He said the United States would not hesitate to use force against an attempt to gain control of the oil fields.

This gave new impetus to already ongoing negotiations for U.S. military use of facilities in Somalia, Kenya and Oman. Additionally, Diego Garcia, a British naval base in the Indian Ocean, is being expanded.

In deference to local sensibilities, the Carter administration is not speaking in terms of bases. "No one is thinking of a fence around an area with the American flag flying high," one official here said.

Rather, any facilities to be used by U.S. military forces would remain under the control of the host government.

Officials here said Somalia is less sensitive about aligning itself with the United States militarily than Oman and Kenya. The Saudis have already informed the administration they would welcome U.S. protection if attacked but do not want a U.S. base on their territory.

The hitch so far in negotiations with Somalia is the amount of U.S. assistance to be given in return for use of the Berbera base. "They're real tough bargainers," said one U.S. official who asked not to be identified.

The base, three miles southwest of the capital, was built by the Soviets in 1975 under a treaty of friendship and cooperation, the first between an African country and Moscow.

The Soviets were expelled from Somalia two years later, when they switched their allegiance to neighboring Ethiopia, where U.S. influence had faded. They hauled away a valuable drydock and disbanded a communications system.

Afghans Discuss Hatred Of Soviets

EDITOR'S NOTE — AP Correspondent Marcus Eliason and two other journalists were the first western reporters to reach the Soviet border in northern Afghanistan after the Soviet Army crossed the frontier in force six weeks ago. He filed this report upon leaving Afghanistan.

By MARCUS ELIASON
MALKHON, Afghanistan (AP) — The innkeeper showed out the cats, covered the birdage and reminded his guests — if they had to use the privy during the night, they should go out singly.

No one needed to ask why. The detachment of Soviet troops camped 20 yards away might take more than one person for a squad of anti-communist Moslem rebels.

All day we had been riding south in an Afghan bus, a magnificent vehicle festooned in front with plastic flowers, satin drapes, quotations from the Koran and pictures of Indian film stars.

But the constant snow had finally brought our bus and its 60 passengers to a halt at the foot of the Hindu Kush mountains and now we were settling down for the night in that most durable of Afghan institutions — the roadside chaikhana, or tea house.

The chaikhana at Malkhon is a large mud-floored stone hut with no electricity or running water. It probably has changed little since Marco Polo passed not far from here on his way to the Orient.

In the middle of the chaikhana stood a huge vat of water simmering over a charcoal fire. Each time someone came from outside he would huddle close to the fire to thaw out.

Guests sat cross-legged on wooden platforms, sipping tea brewed from the waters of a rushing river outside, playing cards or talking about the No. 1 topic in Afghanistan these days: the Russians.

I had been traveling around northern Afghanistan for four days, talking to Afghans who said the Russians were the only foreigners they had seen for six months. I found an almost universal hatred for the country's Marxist leaders and the Soviet forces that started pouring in six weeks ago.

"They are dogs," hissed a turbaned youth, staying at the chaikhana on his way to Kabul to take an exam. "Taraki was a dog. Amin was a dog and now we have Karmal who brought in the Russian dogs."

He referred to the succession of communist presidents — Nur Mohammed Taraki, Hafizullah Amin and Babrak Karmal — who have headed the government since April 1978.

The night before, in a town to the north, an Afghan told me what happened to a group of Soviet engineers who came to this country a year ago.

The driver stopped on a deserted road. He said he had to check the engine. Then mujahiddin (rebel guerrillas) came. They poured gasoline over the minibus. They lit a match. There were seven Soviets and one Afghan soldier inside. They were cooked.

Now a bearded young man was telling me of 11 months spent in Brooklyn in 1976 "Ocean Avenue, Flatbush, Coney Island. I like America." On Bicentennial Day, he claimed, he made $2,000 selling shish kebabs on the streets of Manhattan.

Six months ago, he said, Amin's secret police banged on his brother's door in the middle of the night and no one saw him again. A father with two children, the young man said, his voice choking.

The innkeeper woke me, saying I must sign the register. He said all foreigners had to sign. Room number, passport, nationality, permanent address.

I signed in under the name of his last visitor, a Swiss student who passed through one year before.

"By the way, the Shuravi (Soviets) have a password," said one of the innkeeper's assistants standing at the door. "You should use it when going outside."

"What's the password?" someone asked.

The man said he didn't know. It was something in Russian.

Morning broke with snow still falling on the chaikhana. Some of the men were on their knees, praying westward to Mecca. On his own platform, the innkeeper huddled under a blanket, stroking a cat and surveying his realm.

Russia Claims Boycott Means End Of Detente

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union is telling NATO nations clearly that those who follow U.S. foreign policy and boycott the Moscow Olympics are throwing away a decade of detente.

The official Tass news agency for the first time also justified the invasion of Afghanistan by saying the insurrection by Moslem tribesmen in that country represents a direct security threat to the Soviet Union.

"Can it be demanded from the Soviet Union by references to the indivisibility of peace and detente that it should confine itself in this case to the role of an impartial onlooker?" asked a commentary by Nikolai Portugalov released Wednesday night.

The United States, it charged, is using the Afghan invasion "to shelve the policy of detente, to resume the Cold War, bring pressure to bear on the U.S.S.R. and seek its isolation."

"One cannot, as some politicians in the NATO countries do, declare for continuing detente in Europe and simultaneously express solidarity with the U.S. Policy directed at frustrating it, boycotting the Moscow Olympics and curtailing contacts with the Soviet Union in all fields of life."

Referring to Afghanistan, the commentary rejected what it said were U.S.

attempts to force the Soviets "to refrain from any reaction to crises provoked by the West, even if they take place along the perimeter of the Soviet Union's border and outgrow into a direct threat to its security."

It was the first time the Soviets said in such clear terms that nations which followed the U.S.-sponsored boycott of the summer Olympics in Moscow would forfeit the fruits of detente worked out over the last decade.

The threat to NATO nations came shortly after the White House announced that West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt had assured President Carter his nation and France would support the United States "when the going is rough" on the Afghan issue.

The commentary was also the first indication from the Soviet press that the Moslem-led revolt in Afghanistan against the Moscow-backed regime in Kabul represented a direct threat to Soviet security.

"By staging armed interference from the outside in the affairs of People's Democratic Afghanistan, the United States not only intended to drown in blood the revolution in that country, but also hoped to gain there a base for its military expansion near the U.S.S.R.'s southern border."

Nevada Senator Says FBI Not Planning Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Las Vegas neighbor of Sen. Howard Cannon says the Nevada Democrat was on a "neighborhood crusade" when he made a telephone call that brought him under FBI scrutiny.

And Cannon, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, says FBI director William Webster told him Wednesday that there is "no pending investigation against me."

Cannon concedes he made a telephone call about a real estate deal to Allen Dorfman, a Chicago businessman previously involved in the Teamsters' Union pension fund scandal.

Sources familiar with the case say FBI agents investigating organized crime overheard the call. The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the FBI investigated whether there was any attempt to influence Cannon's handling of legislation calling for deregulation of the trucking industry, which the Teamsters oppose.

Cannon, in an interview, said deregulation was not discussed in the telephone conversation. He said he had discussed the subject with Dorfman and other Teamsters union representatives at a meeting, requested by them, in his Las Vegas office earlier in the year.

He said when he and about a dozen of his neighbors decided to try to buy a vacant piece of land owned by the Teamsters, he called Dorfman "because I knew who he was." He said he knew Dorfman had some reputed underworld connections, but did not know the details.

Cannon and Zachary Taylor, a Las Vegas savings and loan executive who was one of his neighbors, said the group of homeowners decided to make an offer on the land after protesting another prospective buyer's plan to build three high-rise apartments on the plot.

"If we got it, we would have it rezoned into single family dwellings so that nothing could be put on there to destroy the nature of the area," Cannon said.

Taylor said Cannon "clearly was involved in a neighborhood crusade."

The homeowners offered $1.4 million, but the property sold for $1.6 million to other buyers.

"The land got too expensive for us, so we just dropped the whole deal," Taylor said in a telephone interview.

Sources who asked not to be named said the conversation between Cannon and Dorfman was overheard on a telephone wiretapped by the FBI with a court warrant.

Cannon said it was "absolutely absurd" to suggest he "had ever at any time withheld action on the trucking bill in exchange for anything from the Teamsters."

"I have been going very actively on this all the time," he said. "I don't know of any bill that got more attention from this committee last year than the trucking bill."

The bill was assigned to the Commerce Committee early last year after a jurisdictional battle with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Kennedy is the Senate sponsor of the administration proposal.

Cannon's committee held 14 days of hearings on the bill. Cannon said about 200 witnesses were heard.

When Congress adjourned in December, Cannon said, the committee still "had not formed a consensus as to what kind of a bill we could try to get out" so he started working on an alternative measure.

Cannon introduced his bill last week. It does not go as far as the administration wants. For instance it would end the antitrust immunity on some trucking operations, but not on others. But it goes further than a bill introduced by leaders of the House Public Works Committee this week, which leaves the antitrust immunity intact.

Supporters of trucking deregulation have said the Cannon bill goes further toward their goals than they had expected.

Hance Urges Removal Of Convicted Solons

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance Thursday offered no sympathy for eight of his fellow congressmen implicated in a major FBI bribery scandal, declaring that "if they are found guilty, they should be removed" from Congress.

"It's a tough situation," the Lubbock Democrat said of the findings of the FBI's "Operation Abscam," in which FBI agents posed as representatives of an Arab sheik offering bribes to win a casino gambling license and other favors.

"But if the FBI stays within the letter of the law, even if they have to use unusual means, I think they should be able to check into any type of criminal activity," Hance said.

Seven House members and a U.S. senator have been implicated in this, the largest investigation of political corruption ever undertaken by the FBI. They are Sen. Harrison Williams Jr. of New Jersey and Reps. John Murphy of New York, Frank Thompson Jr. of New Jersey, Richard Kelly of Florida, John Jenrette of South Carolina and Michael Myers, Raymond Lederer and John Murtha of Pennsylvania. All but Kelly are Democrats.

"I don't think the FBI needs to hold a guy's head in a fire until he confesses to something," Hance said. "But if a person is involved in criminal activity, whether he's in the Mafia or Congress, then I think the FBI is justified in checking into it."

Throughout his career in the Texas Senate and in Congress, Hance has held a hard line against legislators implicated in scandals and plans to maintain his tough stance. "I was one of only two House members to cosponsor a bill asking (Rep. Charles) Diggs (D-Mich.) to step aside after he was convicted of 25 counts of mail fraud last year," he said.

"I think we should see what the grand juries will do with this, but if these guys are indicted, I will support and maybe sponsor legislation calling for them not to vote on anything until after their trials," he said. "And if they're found guilty, they should be removed."

News of Operation Abscam surfaced Saturday and, Hance said, there had been no advance warning. The revelation caught most Congressmen "quite by surprise," he said.

"The first thing I knew about it was when I read the Sunday papers here," Hance said. "There's a lot of speculation going on up here right now. Everyone has their theories on what happened, but it's still in the gossip stages."

Implicating more than 20 public officials in its 14-month investigation, Operation Abscam, which involved well over 100 FBI agents, is being called "the biggest Washington scandal since Watergate" by some veteran Capitol Hill observers. The Justice Department, which oversaw the operation, is preparing to present its evidence to a series of East Coast grand juries, and U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti already has declined to turn over any evidence to the House Ethics Committee before the grand juries get it.

"I agree with Civiletti on that if for no other reason than it will prevent anyone from saying that because we're investigating each other there could be some tapering with the evidence or some of it could be misplaced," Hance said.

Hance is worried about the damage the scandal could do to Congress's image and effectiveness, but he's more concerned with the diversion from the many pressing problems before Congress the scandal and subsequent investigation could provide.

"Well, it certainly doesn't help us, but I look at it like this," Hance said. "I work as hard as I can at this job and I have nothing to apologize for. You can take any group of 435 people, whether they're preachers or congressmen or newspaper people or whatever, and you're going to find a few rotten apples."

"There is a problem with elected officials, though, because we're supposed to uphold the public trust," he continued. "Therefore we have higher standards."

"We've just got to correct it as quickly and easily as we can and move on, and get back to the issues at hand," Hance said. "We've still got inflation to whip and a defense to bolster and a lot of other things to work out. And that's what we need to concentrate on."

But the heavy-set, energetic developer was actually making deals for FBI agents posing as Arabs, and didn't find out until Saturday that he unwittingly aided the FBI's inquiry into official corruption dubbed Abscam, says Silvestri's lawyer.

"They indicated they wanted to invest $60 million to $100 million in a casino," said attorney Alfred DeCotis. "In his business, that's not unusual."

For 10 years, Silvestri worked to build his consulting firm, Concept Building Industries, Inc. He met the Arabs last spring, said attorney Ashley Goodman of Livingston, Silvestri's former partner.

"He was a believer," Goodman said.

The Arabs claimed to be worried they would be "discriminated against politically," Goodman said. "If you're in the building business, you want to find out the lay of the political land." So Silvestri unwittingly helped the FBI's Abscam investigation, DeCotis said. "He thought these people were legitimate."

State Sen. Joseph Maressa, D-Camden, said Silvestri asked him to act as counsel to the Arabs, and Maressa reportedly introduced the Abscam team to other New Jersey legislators.

Silvestri's associates said he is a friendly, outgoing man. But he has declined to discuss his role in the investigation, except to issue a statement denying any criminal misconduct.

His political connections have been scrutinized in a separate state and federal investigation of the New Jersey Housing Finance Agency. Last year, the Keyport resident told the Trenton Times he had paid $60,000 to do business with the agency.

Silvestri said he paid $17,500 to Daniel W. Horgan, a former deputy state commissioner of community affairs. Horgan denied any wrongdoing and resigned as executive director of the Democratic National Committee.

Silvestri is reportedly cooperating with state and federal investigations of the HFA, but DeCotis said his client is "absolutely not" assisting the Abscam investigation.

By representing the Arab businessmen, Silvestri was simply doing his job as a real-estate broker, DeCotis said.

Maressa, a lawyer, said Silvestri asked him to represent two companies interested in building casinos in Atlantic City. Maressa has acknowledged accepting $10,000 for his legal services, but denied any wrongdoing.

State Reps. James Florio of Camden and William Hughes of Ocean City, both Democrats, said Silvestri tried to get them to meet with Arabs. Silvestri also reportedly arranged meetings between the undercover FBI agents and Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., and Camden Mayor and state Sen. Angelo Errichetti, a Democrat.

NJ Businessman Unknowingly Aids Bribery Investigation

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Businessman Joseph Silvestri believed a group of wealthy Arabs could be a catalyst for his career as a real-estate financier, Silvestri's former partner says.

But the heavy-set, energetic developer was actually making deals for FBI agents posing as Arabs, and didn't find out until Saturday that he unwittingly aided the FBI's inquiry into official corruption dubbed Abscam, says Silvestri's lawyer.

Bush Accused Of Receiving Slush Funds

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Republican presidential candidate George Bush received $106,000 from a secret Nixon White House slush fund during an unsuccessful 1970 U.S. Senate race in Texas, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The Times report, based on documents it said were obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, confirmed a report published in Newsweek magazine in 1974. The magazine's report, attributed to unidentified White House sources, was labeled "a lie" by one of Bush's county finance chairmen.

The Times also said the documents, included in reports of the Watergate special prosecutor now in the National Archives, say more than half of the money — $55,000 — was in cash and was not reported.

While the transactions apparently did not violate federal law, the Times said acceptance of the money and failure to fully disclose the funds as required by Texas law raised questions of propriety and shed new light on Bush's relationship with the Nixon White House.

Bush refused comment Wednesday, the newspaper said.

But James A. Baker III, Bush's current campaign chairman, told the Times that Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski had looked into the "allegation" and had given Bush "a clean bill of health."

Jaworski told the Times his investigators did not attempt to judge the propriety of the actions of Bush and other candidates who received money from the fund.

Jaworski said he could not recall whether he knew Bush had failed to report the funds, the newspaper said. He added federal reporting requirements imposed on candidates were lax in 1970.

According to the records, the Times said, other Republicans who received large sums from the Townhouse fund in 1970 were Bill Brock, now Republican national chairman, $192,000; former Rep. Thomas Kleppe of North Dakota, $175,000; Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut, $65,000, and Sen. John C. Danforth of Missouri, $60,000.

There was no immediate comment from those named. The Times story did not say whether those contributions were fully reported.

The secret fund, code-named Townhouse because it was operated out of the basement of a Washington townhouse, caused three Nixon campaign workers — Jack Gleason, Herbert Kalmbach and Harry Dent — to plead guilty to election law violations during the Watergate scandal, the Times noted.

The newspaper said that before 1973 state campaign laws were not strictly enforced in Texas, partly because they were filled with loopholes. However, the oath signed when filing final campaign reports required that "all gifts and loans" received by the candidate and his campaign managers be fully shown, it said.

In 1970, Bush gave up his seat in the U.S. House to run for the Senate, at the reported urging of then-President Richard Nixon.

In August 1974, Newsweek quoted White House sources as saying there was "potential embarrassment in reports that the Nixon White House had funneled about $100,000 from a secret fund called the 'Townhouse Operation' into the losing campaign." It quoted sources as saying some $40,000 of the money may not have been properly reported.

Bush's 1970 Harris County finance chairman, James L. Bayless, called that report "a lie... There are absolutely, unequivocally no grounds for this report."

Clements Planning To Campaign

AUSTIN (UPI) — Gov. Bill Clements, foreseeing the election of more conservative and Republican legislators next November, says he can be counted on to do some campaigning before the general election.

"You're going to have a more conservative House by 15 or 20," Clements said Wednesday.

The governor said he expected the Republicans — who have 107 House and 21 Senate candidates — to gain 10 seats in the House. He said the House also would add five to seven "solid conservatives." In the Senate, the governor would not predict any GOP gains but said about four conservatives would be added.

Earlier, the state Republican Party chairman, Chester R. Upham, said the large number of Republicans filing for the Legislature was indicative of Texas' becoming a two-party state.

"The conclusion is unmistakable. Office-seekers have become aware that the GOP nomination is worth something, that you can run for office in Texas as a Republican and win," he said.

Chances For Kennedy, Carter Debate Slim

WASHINGTON (AP) — It seems unlikely Sen. Edward M. Kennedy will get his wish for a debate with President Carter, although the two are giving back-to-back speeches today at the same hotel.

In fact, there was no assurance the two candidates would even see each other during their appearances — one hour apart — before the Consumer Federation of America.

Spokesmen for both indicated Wednesday there was little chance the speeches would turn into a debate.

Carter was expected to use his speech to seek support for his responses to the crises in Iran and Afghanistan as he has in recent weeks, an administration official said. The source, who asked not to be named, said Carter also was likely to strongly criticize a water projects bill passed Tuesday by the House.

"To the extent that you are interested in a lead (a new story angle), I think you'll have one," White House press secretary Jody Powell told reporters Wednesday.

At the same time, Powell played down the chance Carter and Kennedy would directly clash.

What will happen if Kennedy decides to show up early to listen to the president and then pose a question? Powell was asked.

"He would give him an honest, straight-forward answer," the presidential spokesman replied.

Panel To Eye Equal Time Repeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee planned to open hearings today on a bill to repeal some of the so-called "equal time" requirements for broadcasts during presidential campaigns.

"The public needs information to vote intelligently," said Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, the communications subcommittee chairman and one of the bill's two sponsors.

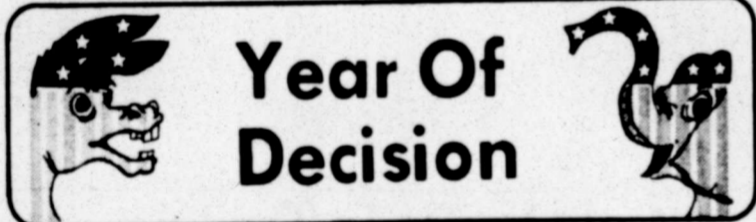

"The broadcast journalist needs the freedom to provide that information with no other restrictions than editorial judgment."

The "equal time" provision is a section of the federal Communications Act. It specifies that if a candidate for an office obtains air time, then all candidates for the same office must be given "an equal opportunity" to present their views. It covers both free and paid time.

Van Deerlin's bill wouldn't affect the provisions governing air time sold to candidates, nor would it affect the law for candidates not running for either president or vice president.

The bill would make it possible for the broadcast media to air debates, documentaries and other programs on some candidates without having to air comparable programs on the other candidates.

Year Of Decision

Legal Battle May Halt Puerto Rican Primary

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — A suit by the Puerto Rican Independence Party has triggered a complex legal battle that is threatening the Feb. 17 Republican primary, the first in the nation and the first in Puerto Rico's history.

"Some people tell me there's no way it can be held, and others tell me they're certain it will be, so I really don't know what to think," said Manny Casiano, campaign coordinator for former Texas Gov. John Connally.

The suit, filed by a pro-independence political party that believes the primaries will bring the island one step closer to statehood, argues that local funds cannot be spent for non-local elections.

Filed several weeks ago in local Superior Court, the suit seeks an injunction against the commonwealth government from spending the $518,000 allocated by the legislature to organize the GOP primary and the Democratic primary March 16.

With only $100,000 in its coffers, the local chapter of the Republican Party would be hard pressed to organize an election in which voter turnout is uncertain, party officials said Wednesday.

The Republican Party is seeking to have the suit transferred to federal District Court, where the party believes it has a better chance to win.

While the federal court considered that transfer request, the three main candidates in the primary — Connally, Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, and former U.N. Ambassador George Bush — filed identical suits in federal court Tuesday.

The three candidates, who argued for federal jurisdiction, said they had spent considerable time and money in their respective campaigns on the island and would unfairly suffer if the primary was not held.

Baker campaign coordinator Antonio Monroig said, "My candidate is very worried. He counts on a victory here to help him with the national campaign and to show his proven appeal with Hispanics."

As of today, no contracts had been let for printing ballots or tally sheets or building ballot boxes, and no official request was made to the Education Department for use of 1,700 schools as voting places in the primary.

Oreste Ramos, a senator of the ruling New Progressive Party and vice president of the local GOP, said that if the federal court does not rule by the end of the week, "I will do everything in my power to convince (the elections board administrator) to start organizing the primary and let out the contracts."

Bulldozer Crushes Woman Scavenger

RIDGECREST, Calif. (UPI) — A woman prowling through rubbish at a dump was crushed beneath the treads of a bulldozer and buried in rubble.

Authorities said this week that the tractor driver did not see Elizabeth Hulens, 48, until he saw part of her body sticking out of the trash.

The woman apparently was scavenging in the dump site for valuables.

Stock Prices Advance Steadily

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices advanced steadily in heavy trading today, carrying the market's early-1980 rally to new highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.01 to 885.84 by noontime.

Gainers led a 2-1 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

A Kuwaiti newspaper reported that the American hostages in Tehran might soon be released. But one U.S. official said he had no confirmation of such a development.

Some analysts contend that investors recently have been paying more attention to the domestic economic outlook than to the Middle East situation anyway.

Persistent strength in the market has been attributed to a move of institutional funds out of bonds and into stocks because of the prospect of continuing rapid inflation.

Oil and rail issues, which spearheaded the market's advance on Wednesday, showed more strength today.

Gulf Oil led the active list, up 2 1/4 to 43 3/4. Exxon rose 1 to 63 1/4, and Union Oil of California 2 1/4 to 58 1/4.

Among the rails, Chessie System was up 2 1/4 to 32 1/4 and Santa Fe Industries added 1 1/4 to 66 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index gained 4.0 to 66.79. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.67 to 282.64.

Volume on the Big Board reached 25 3/4 million shares in the first two hours.

Saudi Arabia Predicting Oil Glut

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — Saudi Arabia and other oil-producing nations might lower production unless they are assured of a "reasonable return" to offset inflation, Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said today.

The minister also said there were signs of an approaching glut in oil supplies as a result of increased Mexican and North Sea output, falling consumption in industrialized countries and reduction of stocks held by traders.

But he said he was convinced a likely oil shortage in Eastern Europe in the second half of this decade was a major reason for the movement of Soviet troops into Afghanistan in recent months — taking Russians closer to the Middle East oilfields.

He also spoke of a policy under which Saudi Arabia would grant contracts only to customers willing to help build up industry in his country. He did not indicate when such a policy, which has been mentioned by oil states before, would take effect.

Yamani said the current rate of return on the investment of dollars earned by Saudi Arabia was "below zero" because of inflation and added.

"Unless we assure ourselves of a reasonable return over and above the inflation rate, I do not think we will continue to produce at the current high levels."

This view, Yamani told an international business symposium here, is shared by the other oil-producing states in the Arabian Gulf.

In New York, Gary Ross, an analyst at the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, said other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting countries are likely to threaten production cuts if they cannot adequately invest their surplus today because of the higher returns the oil might yield for future generations.

But on Monday, the influential Middle East Economic Survey reported from Nicosia, Cyprus, that an unidentified Saudi Arabian source said his country might boost its production or cut prices in a bid to halt the latest OPEC price spiral.

Saudi Arabia started the latest round of oil price increases on Jan. 28 when it raised the price of a 42-gallon barrel of its oil from $24 to $26.

Firm Announces 1979 Earnings

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Gannett Co. Inc. has announced record revenues, earnings and earnings per share for the 12th consecutive year.

Campaign Year Brings Cronkitophobia Attack

By PETER J. BOYER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sam the barber was stricken again, and this time it was bad. Wobbly legs, accelerated heart beat, dizziness and sweaty palms. Cronkitophobia. The fear of being on the six o'clock news. Sam hadn't had a panic attack for awhile, and his friends and customers had hoped he was fully recovered. In fact, it had been five years. Sam was nearly crippled by that last attack. He was afraid that a network would do a "human feature" on him as the last barber in America that didn't do styling. He thought he saw Charles Kuralt walk by the shop one day, and fainted. But this was worse. Much worse.

Sam believed that his barber shop was about to be invaded by hordes of network TV people. It was imminent. He jumped every time the phone rang. He gave accidental flat-tops. Customers were staying away.

I thought I'd try to help. "Sam, what makes you think network people are coming here, to Eagle Rock, California?" "I don't think," he replied. "I know. It's just a matter of time."

"Why?" "Because of Iowa."

"Iowa?" "Yes. A nice little farm state, you say. But did you see what happened to that nice little farm state a couple of weeks ago? Television City."

"Yes, but what..." "NBC, CBS, ABC. Chancellor, Frank Reynolds, Tom Brokaw doing the 'Today' show."

"But Sam..." "...and Cronkite! I read that CBS had 110 people there, and three press agents! There are less people than that in some Iowa towns."

"Sam," I said, "they were all in Iowa to cover the Iowa caucuses. It was an important event, a significant first step toward the presidency."

"Sure, that's what they used to say about New Hampshire, and before that, about the national conventions. No, they're coming here next. I can feel it."

"Sam, I don't see the connection."

"Oh, you don't. Think for a moment. What do my customers talk about in here?"

"Uh, baseball, whether the Raiders will come to L.A., um, Bo Derek..."

"Yes, and politics!"

"Sam, you don't really think..."

"Oh yes I do. I don't suppose that some of those Iowa farmers expected their corn fields to be overrun by network field producers and tape editors..."

"Field producers? Tape editors?"

"Know your enemy, I say. And they'll be here soon enough, if word gets out. Why, just last week, Lou the tailor and Mario from Mario's Italian Deli were in here arguing Kennedy versus Carter."

Well, Sam was convinced, and still shaking, and I left feeling that I hadn't done much good. What can you say to a person who has so thoroughly distorted reality?

I felt a little sorry for Sam. But as I turned the corner toward home, I glanced back toward Sam's shop and saw a huge white truck with a big, black eye painted on its middle. Could it be?

Nah.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB

Code Can Keep Message Secret

By SHARI LEWIS

"I've Got a Secret" is more than just the name of a longtime favorite TV show. It's an all-time favorite activity for kids.

Having secrets and sharing them only with a special few is fun. If you can send your secret message in code it doubles the fun. This code is called Across and Down. Here's why:

You make a grid of the alphabet with five letters across and five letters down. Since there are 26 letters in our alphabet you have to put Y and Z together in the last square. Don't worry about this. People decoding your note will understand which of the two letters to use when they read the message.

On the top and left side of this box of letters, put the numbers from 1 to 5. Put them outside the grid as I have in the picture.

Make matching Across and Down alphabet grids for your best friends. To make a hidden message, look for the letter you want, then put down the number of its row across and then the number of its column down. Let's say you want to write: Do It Now.

Your Across and Down message would look like this: 14-35 24-45 34-35-52.

New Jersey Resident Attains Stardom From Popular Show

FORT LEE, N.J. (AP) — Dear Roseanne Roseannadanna. Did you ever live in New Jersey? Do you ever get collect calls at 3 a.m.?

Do you ever have people stare at you when you sign a check? What am I doing in New Jersey anyway? What should I do?

Signed, Mr. Richard Feder, Fort Lee, New Jersey.

"Dear Mr. Feder, 'Whadda you doin' livin' in NEW JERSEY anyway?' Or so the frizzy-haired Miss Roseannadanna is likely to respond before launching into a rambling, mindless monologue that has little to do with early-morning phone calls or New Jersey.

Letters from the troubled Mr. Feder

Business Bureau Offering Choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most consumers are able to resolve complaints against businesses either by agreement with the firm or through a trip to court, but there is another choice.

In more than 100 cities across the country the Better Business Bureaus have begun offering arbitration services.

In arbitration, the disputing parties argue their case before an impartial arbitrator — a third party volunteer from the community — after agreeing in advance to abide by the arbitrator's decision.

In some respects arbitration is like going to court, and in some states arbitration decisions can be enforced in the courts. But there are differences.

For example, both sides must agree to arbitration. Neither can force the other to take part. There is also no filing fee for arbitration, which is a free service, and the proceedings are less formal.

The Better Business Bureaus will only arrange arbitration when the dispute cannot be worked out otherwise, when there are no criminal charges involved and when the claimed damages are limited to the value of the product or service involved.

Usually there is a single arbitrator selected from a pool of community volunteers. However, if the parties cannot agree on one arbitrator, each picks one and those two pick a third to form a three-member panel.

are a regular item on an NBC-TV "Saturday Night Live" segment devoted to the popular consumer affairs reporter played by Gilda Radner.

And Richard Feder is a real person who really lives in Fort Lee. Only he doesn't write the letters.

"I can't write. I have trouble talking on the phone," he says.

The real Feder is vice president of a Mahwah textile printing plant and lives with his wife, Francine, and daughters, Dara, 2, and Jessica, 1, in a Fort Lee high-rise.

His new-found popularity makes him uncomfortable, he says, but of course, most people don't recognize him.

"Sometimes people just stare at me. It's a terrible feeling. One time when I was kid in school, I read a book report with my fly open. So now when people stare at me that's the first place I look."

Feder rose to stardom one Saturday, when his brother-in-law, Alan Zweibel, a writer for the show, told him to watch that night.

"The first time I heard my name, I looked at my wife," Feder recalled. "I was debating whether to go under the chair or feel good about it. So I decided to feel good about it."

Feder now gets calls from all over the country.

"Most of them want to know if there really is a Richard Feder. The people who call are very nice," Feder said Tuesday night. "I try not to be rude and only rarely do I hang up. Then they call back the next day and apologize — collect."

"Gilda Radner's mother's friend called once. She wanted to know if I was a real person. She was a sweet lady. She wanted tickets to the show."

Feder says he has a clear image of what the "television" Richard Feder looks like, though he doesn't really identify with him.

"He's very fat ... wears dirty, sleeveless T-shirts ... always sweaty ... always drinking beer. But I think he's the best."

Feder said one thing the real and mythical Mr. Feder share is a frustration with life in the Garden State. He says his hometown, only minutes from Manhattan, was used to poke fun at New Jersey, which to many New Yorkers may as well be as far away as Arizona.

"He makes fun of New Jersey. I make fun of New Jersey. Factories, giant smog-kestacks, smog, the turnpike ... it's the pits," said Feder, who moved from Long Island, N.Y., to cut his commuting time.

But NBC spokeswoman Simone Harris demurs, "they're not picking on Fort Lee."

Edward Albee Play Opens On Broadway

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — At play's end, an anguished Tony Musante asks Irene Worth who she is, really. She says, "Why, I'm the lady from Dubuque. I thought you knew." Then, to the audience: "I thought he knew."

He should. She's told him often enough. And the play's title is "The Lady From Dubuque." It's a new work by two-time Pulitzer Prize dramatist Edward Albee. It premiered recently on Broadway.

Set in suburbia, it offers a caustic first-act echo of his "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and a second act of cryptic to-and-fro.

It involves three couples in their 30s whose lives are jolted by the strange arrival of a mysterious matron from guess-where (Miss Worth) and Oscar (Earle Hyman), her black companion.

It seems to concern dying, loss and how these things radically alter the realities of the soon-to-expire and those around same.

The dying party here is Jo (Frances Conroy), tart-tongued wife of decent, loving Sam (Musante). The drama's traumas and puzzles thrash about in their home, a spacious, starkly modern apartment.

There, amid heavy drinking, they entertain two couples. The pals include Edgar (David Leary), a nice guy wed to a dim blonde (Celia Weston). Jo, bright, scared and hostile, needles her without mercy.

She also snipes at Carol (Maureen Anderson), a brittle, fading beauty who lives with a rugged, boozing suburban redneck (Baxter Harris) who is thrice-divorced. "A three-time winner." He often asks Carol to marry him when not telling her to shut up.

Jo, whose husband can't confront her impending demise, won't let them forget she's dying. She also bitterly wonders as to the whereabouts of her mother, who lives in nearby New Jersey.

Corrosive insults and jokes abound in sort of a nasty fugue. The night ends in bad-tempered disarray, with Sam sighing, "I don't know how six people can make such a mess of a perfectly good evening."

He helps his weak, suffering wife upstairs to bed. Then, downstairs, Miss Worth and Hyman, the latter a tall, well-dressed, mocking, elegantly sinister chap, enter the apartment. They agree that this is the place. That constitutes Act 1.

At dawn, Sam is mighty surprised. He demands to know who they are. The play's murky machine starts going full blast.

Miss Worth claims she's Jo's mother from Dubuque. No way, cries Sam, the real mother lives in New Jersey and the visitor is bogus. His friends trickle in. All but Carol believe the visitor is for real.

Jo wobbles downstairs, embraces Miss Worth as her mother, and thereafter is mostly comatose, lying on the sofa.

Miss Worth at one point declares: "All things are relative save one — who am I?" That should clear things up, but assorted shouts and cries keep coming and Sam gets violent.

Whereupon Miss Worth's pal — he sardonically claims he learned karate either in the Japanese army during World War II or the Foreign Legion — renders Sam unconscious. The menfolk tie Sam up for his own good.

He's revived and freed in time to see Oscar carrying his dying bride upstairs with the vow, "We'll make you better."

Well, at least Alan Schneider, who has directed Albee plays since 1960, keeps things moving. And thespians Musante, Hyman and Miss Conroy and Miss Anderson are good, even if the drama isn't.

There'll be bets that Albee's "Lady" and Oscar represent angels of death. I'm not sure. They could represent the firm of Being & Nothingness, Inc., or hail from the tiny dramatic duchy of Enigma.

Whatever the case, I tear "The Lady From Dubuque" is a play from hunger. Only very devoted fans of Albee will feast on it.

Walter Kerr, New York Times — ...if

Mr. Albee wishes to continue indulging himself in the sort of philosophical speculation he's lately become addicted to (I find this speculation thin and familiar) he must first put some muscle, some tangible flesh and blood, on the stage to serve as a base.

Douglas Watt, New York Daily News — It's a troubled evening, but an individual one by a voice unlike any other on our stage. And that's something.

Jurors Begin Deliberations In Murder Trial

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A jury has begun deliberations in the murder trial of a man accused of beating a 21-year-old woman to death with a hammer and eating parts of her body.

Ronald Wilburn, 38, of Santa Barbara, Calif., is charged with kidnapping and first-degree murder in the mutilation slaying of Mary Ann Linco, of Ventura, Calif., in July 1978.

He has pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity and if convicted could be sentenced to die in the gas chamber.

The case is one of the first to be tried in California under a new state Supreme Court rule broadening the definition of criminal insanity.

Wilburn, who served more than six years in prison after pleading guilty in 1968 to a sex offense in Contra Costa County, is accused of beating Miss Linco to death with a hammer and then eating parts of her body, including her breasts.

La Paz, Mexico, Offers More Than Just Fishing

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

La Paz has the best of fishing, shopping, weather and sunsets," said Victor Arcos, as we drove past a sea wall lined with laurel and palm trees into Baja Sur's picturesque capital city. Although my host was speaking on behalf of the La Paz chamber of commerce and the Baja Tourism Bureau, I knew the remark was a sincere statement of pride from a La Paz resident.

The quality of deep-sea sport fishing in the Sea of Cortez (between the Baja peninsula and mainland Mexico) is certainly well known and documented. The Bay of La Paz was a favorite port for the better known stores are Importaciones Sara where there's a wide selection of perfumes, Oriental and European clothing. El Trebol features men's clothing from England and Christian Dior ties; La Perla de La Paz is the largest and oldest department store on the peninsula with items ranging from crystal and jewelry to silks and woolsens. The House of Arts and Crafts has a very extensive display of local crafts. If sea shells interest you, be sure to visit the Shell Market where the collection is abundant and varied. Usually the apparel and jewelry bargains will be in items originating in Europe or the Orient. Items made in the U.S. will be priced about the same as what you would series of different levels. By the way, the round building has been constructed in such a way that the music doesn't reach into the rooms of the hotel, so sleep for the early to bed set is assured.

Econhotel Palmira (part of a chain of quality Mexican hotels that specialize in moderate prices) has a dining area that features buffet-style meals. The buffet dining has become quite popular with La Paz residents. The dining patio every Friday evening becomes a Mexican fiesta complete with mariachi or marimba music. The Sunday noon buffet is international. American-style food is always available. At this writing the room rate for a double is 570 pesos — $25.33. Value Added Tax (VAT) is now in effect in Mexico, however while most of Mexico has 10 percent VAT, Baja has only 6 percent.

Major hotels have tour representatives or can make the necessary arrangements. Viajes Raymundo Tours service has a city tour beginning at $8.45 for one to 24 participants; an excursion to Balandra Beach is $14.65; a five-hour bay cruise is $13, with lunch included. The tours provide hotel pickup and a guide.

Continental Airlines' roundtrip tour-basing airfare (Lubbock-La Paz) is presently $135. There will be an increase in the airfare effective March 15. The cost of a taxi ride from the airport to downtown is approximately $8. Incidentally, if you'd like to make a quick side trip to "land's end" at Cabo San Lucas, there are regular commuter flights. The 35-minute flight to the Cabo San Lucas Airport is approximately $17 one way.

NET RESULTS — First and foremost a commercial fishing center (shrimp, lobster, tuna, etc.), the La Paz boat captains often sell all of their daily catch within minutes after returning to port. The clear waters off the east coast of Baja also attract many deep-sea sport fishing enthusiasts. (Staff Photo by Ted J. Simon) late John Wayne and his friends seeking marlin, sailfish, sea bass and whoop. Sportsmen have considered southern Baja a fishing Utopia for many years.

However there is more to La Paz than the fishing action; shopping for world bargains is another favorite pastime, thanks to the Mexican state being a free-port area.

The city's many shops have brand names from around the world. Made in Paris, or London, or Hong Kong fashions are common items in the better stores.

Commerce has always been the mainstay of La Paz; present population approximately 100,000, ever since Hernando Cortez set out from the mainland of Mexico with explorers and settlers in 1535. The conquistadors found pearls for their efforts — beautiful pink and black pearls. For more than four centuries the pearls beckoned ships to La Paz; today many of those same pearls are seen in European crown jewels.

Eventually the pearl production declined, but before that happened the area attracted a new form of commerce when it became a haven for Dutch and British pirates. One of the more famous pirates was one named Cromwell. Today a beach and a predictable afternoon ocean breeze bear his name.

The pirates are gone and the pearls are few and far between but the daily stream of commerce continues in a multitude of shops and stores. Some of the pay at home.

Dining also mirrors the city's international charm. American, Chinese, Italian, seafood (and not course) Mexican restaurants offer some of the best food to be found anywhere. Local business men frequent the hotel dining rooms, which speaks well for hotel cuisine in La Paz.

Hotels range from moderate to luxury in accommodations and services in the colonial city. The modern Gran Hotel Baja is the tallest hotel and offers luxury appointments. Hotel Posada is between the airport and the business center; in town are Hotel Los Arcos (a charming colonial-style structure) and Hotel La Perla.

Most of the larger hotels not only have pools, but their own private beach. The El Presidente, a quick taxi ride from the city's shopping district, has an immaculate sandy beach. Rates at the better known hotels will range from approximately $28 to $40 for a double.

My accommodations were at the Econhotel Palmira. It is a new first class hotel that features moderate prices. Facilities include 120 air-conditioned rooms, four junior suites, meeting room with sight and sound equipment, swimming pool, tennis court, and a children's playground.

Adjacent to the hotel is El Rollo Discoteque, one of the city's most popular discos. It features special lighting, a modern sound system, and dancing on a
