India Pushes For Russian Withdrawal

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today told visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko the Kremlin should help reduce tension in the region by such measures as withdrawing Russian troops from Afghanistan, an Indian government spokesman indicated.

Gromyko, who earlier today arrived on a two-day official visit to India, the Soviet's biggest Asian ally, was given India's views on defusing the Afghan crisis during a three-hour meeting with Mrs. Gandhi, including nearly 25 minutes with no aides present.

In Washington, President Carter's national security adviser said the United States will view anything less than a complete withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan as "insufficient."

Zbigniew Brzezinski said Monday night that although a "cosmetic" withdrawal of Soviet troops is anticipated, it would not be "a solution to what is a serious problem."

Both Mrs. Gandhi and her foreign minister, P.V.N. Rao conveyed to Gromyko "India's views regarding the need for defusing tension in the area," said Indian External Affairs Ministry spokesman J.N. Dixit.

Answering reporters' questions, Dixit said the official Indian view includes two major points — a hope that Soviet forces will withdraw from Afghanistan, and strong opposition to American plans for a military buildup of Pakistan.

Gromyko and Gandhi agreed to consult further in continuing talks Wednesday about "measures by which the tension in the region can be defused," Dixit told reporters.

India is the third foreign country visited by Gromyko in an apparent effort to reduce foreign opposition to the Soviet military action in Central Asia. Previously he visited Syria, where President Hafez Assad backed the Soviet action fully, and Romania, where President Nicolae Ceausescu didn't.

Gromyko, in a statement on his arrival, did not mention Afghanistan. But he said India and the Soviet Union "have labored strenuously" to develop their ties, and their relations have "never been guided by momentary considerations or mere emotions."

Foreign Minister Rao welcomed the visitor as "Comrade Gromyko" and said he shared his optimism about continued good relations between their two countries.

About 25 slogan-shouting Afghan youths held a demonstration at a distant part of the airport protesting the Soviet role in their country and shouting: "Russians quit Afghanistan" and "Down with the KGB (the Soviet secret police)."

Mrs. Gandhi told U.S. presidential envoy Clark Clifford two weeks ago and other visitors that she would try to influence the Russians to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan, but she said she was not optimistic that her words would have any effect.

She and other Indian leaders take the line that no amount of pressure, such as the U.S. arming of Pakistan or a boycott of the Moscow Olympics, is going to budge the Kremlin's resolve to keep troops in Afghanistan as long as the communist Afghan government is unable to contain the Moslem rebellion against it.

Clayton May Take 'Fifth'

AUSTIN (UPI) — Speaker Bill Clayton received $5,000 rather than $10,000 from a union official and may refuse to answer questions from a federal grand jury investigating bribery allegations, his attorneys said today.

Lawyers for the embattled House leader summoned three reporters to the (Civiletti Seeks Source Of Leaks, Page 7, Sec. A) speaker's Capitol office today to observe the removal of a sealed envelope from a locked desk drawer.

Clayton and his administrative assistant, Russell Kelley, watched, but referred most questions to their lawyers.

Defense attorney Bill Fitzgerald said the five bundles of cash — each containing 10 $100 bills — were placed in a sealed envelope immediately after Clayton's Nov. 8 meeting with L.G. Moore, a Houston union leader, and an individual who introduced himself as a representative of Prudential Insurance Co. of America.

"That's correct," Clayton said. "I could have put them in an envelope or he (Kelley) could have put them in."

Investigators have alleged Clayton accepted a $10,000 bribe from Moore in exchange for a promise to help Prudential win a state contract for a multimillion dollar insurance program on state workers.

"This looks like just another place where they messed up on their case," Fitzgerald said when the envelope revealed only $5,000.

Fitzgerald said U.S. Attorney J.A. Canales suggested Clayton's attorneys make pictures of the bills and bring the cash to the federal grand jury in Houston Wednesday, where the speaker is subpoenaed to testify.

Clayton's aides said the speaker is "torn up" about his lawyers' insistence that he invoke his constitutional privilege to refuse to answer incriminating questions.

"No question he wants to testify," Fitzgerald said. "That's a decision we're laboring over. The speaker has been insisting constantly that he wants to testify."

Clayton, asked if he will make the final decision, said his lawyer "told me I was going to listen to him or he wouldn't represent me."

The speaker and his attorneys earlier had refused to say where they placed the cash.

Jack Gullahorn, former executive assistant to Clayton serving on his legal defense team, said reporters were summoned to see the money taken from a

Iran's Foreign Minister Hints Of End To Crisis

By The Associated Press
Iran's Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said today he hoped the hostage crisis will end soon and added that Iran will cooperate with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim (Former Hostage Sues Iranian Government, Page 2, Sec. A) General Kurt Waldheim "in this matter," Tehran radio reported.

There was no elaboration on Ghotbzadeh's statement. A U.N. spokesman in New York said Monday that negotiations over the hostages' release are at a "very sensitive stage" and that Waldheim is in constant touch with U.S. and Iranian officials.

Waldheim has attempted to arrange freedom for the 50 Americans since they were seized at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran 101 days ago. He has also proposed an international commission be set up to investigate Iranian charges against the deposed shah.

The radio said Ghotbzadeh declined to give a timetable for the Americans' release. But in what could be a related development, the radio quoted Ghotbzadeh as telling ABC News that an international commission being set up to investigate deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi will "probably" meet in Tehran within a week.

Ghotbzadeh said he was leaving for Athens tonight to begin a five-day European tour, the radio said. A broadcast monitored in London said Ghotbzadeh will also visit Italy and France. It was not known if his trip was connected to the arrival in Tehran of an international commission.

The radio reported that President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, meanwhile, repeated his offer to free the hostages within a few days if America would admit its "crimes" in Iran since it helped the deposed monarch regain his throne in 1953.

"If America agrees to our view this may be possible," it quoted him as saying in an interview with French radio and television.

When his offer was first made public in an interview published Monday in the French newspaper Le Monde, the State Department said there will be no profession of guilt from the U.S. government.

Iran's revolutionary patriarch, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leveled a strong warning to the Soviet Union to refrain from aggression against Islamic countries, the radio reported in a broadcast monitored in London. It said the warning came in a message sent to Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and quoted him in part as saying:

"Any aggression against Third World countries and Islamic countries, particularly in this region, is against the norms which should constitute a proper basis and foundation between nations."

The portion of Khomeini's message broadcast by the radio, monitored in London, did not mention by name the So-

South Plains Association of Governments this morning reviewed and passed favorable comment on three applications for drug abuse prevention programs to be funded through the state and federal Criminal Justice Division budget.

Directors waived comment on a fourth project, which will be sponsored by SPAG.

Some $80,000 in criminal justice funds has been made available to SPAG's 15-county region for juvenile drug and alcohol abuse prevention programs.

A Garza County funding request for a $3,625 drug and alcohol abuse prevention for middle and high school students received favorable comment from the board.

Jack Brown Candidate For Council

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Citing a need for increased efficiency and productivity in city government here, Lubbock businessman E. Jack Brown today became the second candidate to enter the race for the Place 2 slot on the City Council.

At a morning news conference, Brown told reporters that Lubbock has had responsible city management in the past, but he believes there is room for improvement. According to Brown, the city will continue to face a fight with inflation, and "a hard-nosed effort is needed" to increase efficiency and productivity in local government.

One of the areas Brown said he is most concerned about is the development of a third water supply for Lubbock. "We may have waited too long already," he said.

Brown was selected last spring to serve on the city's Water Development Board, but he said to his knowledge, that board has not met since July. "I don't really know what the city administration is doing about it," he said.

However, Brown said he believes that Lubbock citizens must be told more about the city's water situation and what it will take to develop another water supply. Financing such a project will be "the biggest dollar item" Lubbock has ever had to face, Brown said. He stressed that local residents must be fully informed about the necessity of securing another water source so that they will be willing to foot the bill for it.

The city has been studying a proposed

Lottery Set If Draft Resumes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Congress today that if it becomes necessary to reinstate the draft, the inductees will be chosen by lottery among 20-year-olds.

Carter sent Congress his proposal to register all 19-and 20-year-olds — men and women alike — as part of a 62-page report on Selective Service reform. Congress directed him last year to prepare such a report.

"If it ever becomes necessary to draft anyone, Selective Service will operate under the concept of random selection (lottery) based upon year and date of birth," the report said.

"The first year-of-birth group from which inductees will be drawn is the one that contains those who reach 20 in a given calendar year."

Before a draft could actually take place, however, the president would have to declare a national emergency and ask Congress for authority to induct.

"He has no intention of doing so under present circumstances," the report said.

The report said the first inductee could report within 13 days after the president declared a national emergency.

The report spelled out restrictions on the mobilization of women.

It said the Defense Department will continue the current policy of not assigning women to jobs involving "close combat."

City Leaders Hail Job, Business Outlook

By JOE GULICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock business and civic leaders credit a strong and growing economy and a high quality work force as major factors in the city's achieving the lowest jobless rate in the nation — 2.4 percent — at the end of 1979.

And, although such glowing figures have brought problems to some boom areas in the past, they paint only a rosy picture for the future.

The minuscule unemployment figure and the city's ranking came to light in a report issued Monday by the Labor Department. The Lubbock figure was in sharp contrast to that of Anderson, Ind., which had the highest unemployment rate in the nation, 15.2 percent, and experienced the sharpest increase during the year, jumping 8.7 percentage points from a 6.5 percent rate in December 1978.

Lubbock was one of 33 metropolitan areas that experienced a drop in the jobless rate of at least one percentage point over the year, declining 1.5 percentage points from 3.9 percent in December 1978.

Texas Employment Commission manager Bert Darden said, "For the last two or three years, this area of the state has had an unemployment rate considerably lower than the national rate and consistently lower than the state rate."

Darden said other parts of the country are experiencing high unemployment because of extensive layoffs in the automobile industry and related industries. "In November, Lubbock had only about 13,000 people in the county in manufacturing. There have been very few layoffs," he said.

John Logan, executive director of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, said he thinks Lubbock's low unemployment rate reflects a strong economy which has prevailed in Lubbock the last few years.

"Growth has been good and steady, with a lot of jobs available," Logan said.

He added that Texas has had good, steady growth statewide during the last decade, with industries growing and moving to the state.

Grey Lewis, assistant chamber manager, wasn't surprised at the unemployment figure, but was surprised Lubbock's was the lowest in the nation.

"This reflects the diversification of Lubbock's economy," Lewis said. "All segments are in a strong position right now. The strength of the Southwest Sun Belt is also very strong right now."

Lewis said the recession economists have been predicting for some time may be weaker than originally thought, and that there is some question it will develop at all.

George Miller, chairman of the chamber's industrial committee, said Lubbock's industrial complex has grown faster than the supply of labor.

"We have had interesting growth in the industrial complex the last 10 years," Miller said.

Miller predicted the industrial growth of Lubbock will continue for several reasons, among which is a quality work force. "Companies look at

Students Honor John Belushi

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'm moved by this, but not a lot," John Belushi told an audience at UCLA as he accepted the annual "Jack Benny Award" for excellence in comedy. "Anyway, I had nothing better to do today," said the former star of "Saturday Night Live" as he accepted the award Monday.

He told the audience he considered the award special because it had been given by students, but received groans when he said he would return to the NBC television show where he gained fame. "Well, maybe I will return — when hell freezes over," he replied.

Others who have received the award named for the late Benny are "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson, comedian Steve Martin and "Saturday Night" alumnus Chevy Chase.

Boone Offers Musical Prayer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Pat Boone, who says he thinks the crisis at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran will end soon, is distributing an orchestrated prayer for the release of the Americans.

Boone says he got the idea for "The Hostage Prayer" after praying at Christmas for the 50 Americans held since Nov. 4 by militants demanding the return of the deposed Shah of Iran.

"A friend and I were talking later and decided radio stations needed some type of song asking God to provide for the hostages' release," he said.

The recording is a recitation of what Boone feels a hostage might be praying: "Lord, bring us home."

Jay Silverheels Ailing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Jay Silverheels, who last year became the first Indian to have a star placed in Hollywood's Walk of Fame, has been bedridden with a combination of illnesses, the Motion Picture and Television Country Hospital reported.

Officials of the facility said Monday the 62-year-old Silverheels, a Mohawk, is suffering from heart and other problems. He was hospitalized at the facility last year during his recovery from a stroke.

Silverheels is best known for his portrayal of Tonto in the long-running "Lone Ranger" television series.

Jerry Colonna 'Recovering Slowly'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Jerry Colonna, whose career was launched after Bob Hope signed him on for his radio show, is "recovering slowly" but is in good condition after a series of heart problems, officials say.

Colonna remained hospitalized Monday at the Motion Picture and Television Country Hospital. The 75-year-old comedian, who suffered a stroke in 1966, has been hospitalized since May 29 at the Woodland Hills facility.

Known best as the comedian with the walrus mustache and popping eyes, Colonna began his show business career as a musician. He joined Hope's radio show after they met in 1938 and starred in dozens of films and television shows through the 1950s and 1960s.

Students Can Attend Haley Lecture

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — After a protest by parents who threatened to boycott classes, school officials have reversed a decision not to allow elementary students out of class to attend a college lecture by "Roots" author Alex Haley.

The school board had decided to let some 800 older students go to today's lecture at Southern University because it was geared to a college-level audience and because seating was limited. However, after the protest grew, officials said the university guaranteed seating for 2,000.

Southern University, the nation's largest predominantly black university, had invited all public school students to attend the lecture by Haley, whose book traced the ancestry of his family through slavery and back to Africa.

Fat Cat Leads Double Life

SMYRNA, Tenn. (AP) — How do you decide who owns a 20-pound, toilet-trained cat when all it wants to do is sleep?

That's the Solomonesque question facing Judge James Clayton. Was it Muff, or was it Lufer?

Muff left home and his heartbroken owner, Helen Hall, last September. That's about the time a toilet-trained tabby — no litter boxes for this fat cat — showed up at Mary Lou Goins' doorstep, where he was promptly dubbed Lufer.

Miss Hall heard about Mrs. Goins' cat, went to see and decided Lufer was Muff. All three wound up in Clayton's court last Friday.

"I took off his leash to see what he'd do," said Clayton, thinking the cat would go to its rightful owner. "He laid right down on top of all my papers, closed his eyes and went to sleep."

But justice prevailed — thanks to a bit of judicial rationalization.

"I just couldn't believe there would be another cat like that in the neighborhood," he said. Muff went home with Miss Hall.

Ex-Hostage Sues Iranian Government

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Marine who says he was tortured and sentenced to death while he was held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran wants at least $60 million in damages from the Iranian government.

Sgt. Kenneth Kraus was taken prisoner a year ago this week, during an earlier takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by Iranian militants. The embassy was later returned to U.S. control, only to be captured again Nov. 4. About 50 Americans are still being held hostage.

Kraus was freed after several days, but said in a suit filed in federal court here that he was almost killed by the militants during his ordeal.

He said he was first saved from a firing squad by an Iranian commanding officer after he and other Americans had been lined up against a wall to be shot.

Kraus, of Warrington, Pa., said he later was struck by a rifle, and at one point was "placed on a table" while his feet were "continuously hit" until he lost consciousness.

He said he was forced to live on a cup of tea and a piece of bread a day.

After a week, Kraus said he was tried before a revolutionary court for 10 minutes and then told he would be shot on Feb. 22. But he was released to U.S. diplomatic officials a day earlier, on Feb. 21.

Although American courts have no authority over Iran, Kraus could seek to have a lien put on Iranian assets in the United States, which have been frozen by President Carter.

Kraus said the mistreatment left him with permanent injuries. He charged the Iranian government with violating treaties, U.S. laws and constitutional guarantees that protect Americans at U.S. embassies abroad.

Grain Embargo To Have Less Impact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The latest estimate of Russian grain supplies indicates the Russians will have more grain this season than American officials expected a month ago.

After President Carter's Jan. 4 grain embargo to retaliate for the invasion of Afghanistan, the Agriculture Department said the Soviet Union would be able to fill 2 million tons of the shortfall with new imports from other nations.

On Monday, in a monthly report on the Russian grain outlook, the department raised its estimate of new imports to 5 million tons, for the season that ends in June.

The department said Russia would fall 6 million tons short of the 34 million tons American analysts expected Russia to import before the embargo.

Extra grain is expected to originate in Argentina, Thailand and South Africa.

Carter embargoed 17 million tons of grain, but only 11 million tons would be cut off for the current season. The other 6 million tons would have an impact after mid-summer.

The department said Russia would have 125 million tons of grain to feed animals, the same as last year, but 3 million tons less than predicted before the embargo. The Russians need more grain this year because they have more animals to feed.

Despite the change in Russian supplies, officials insisted that "the USSR is still expected to suffer a grain supply shortfall" as early as March, with the significant shortfall coming from April to June.

So far weather is favorable to Russian crops this year, in contrast to last year when a drought damaged crops in late spring.

In another report, the department slightly reduced its forecast for the 1979-80 world grain crop. Worsened crop prospects in Argentina and Thailand were nearly offset by a larger Chinese crop.

Citizens Fast For Hostages

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Abie Ingber and 49 other Cincinnatians didn't eat today.

Another 50 residents will go without food Wednesday.

And, for every succeeding day that 50 Americans are held hostage in Iran, 50 more Cincinnatians residents will fast.

"It began bothering me that I was able to go about my daily routine so casually, while those 50 were being held captive," said Ingber, a 29-year-old rabbi who originated the Cincinnati Fast for Freedom.

"The first 30 days of captivity, the hostages were our main topic of discussion. The next 30 days, sometimes it was brought up, sometimes not. And the last

An estimate of a world crop of 1.5 billion tons was 4 percent below the 1978-79 harvest.

The mix of wheat and feed grains within the overall grain crop was changed, with the wheat crop 1 percent larger than last month's estimate and the feed grains crop 1 percent smaller.

Canadian troops are a key part of NATO's plans for the defense of its northern areas, Bernald said.

The issue of the weakness of NATO northern defenses has been under discussion for a long time. It has been given recent impetus by the Soviet actions in Afghanistan.

MARMADUKE by Brad Anderson GOP Hopefuls Delay Coming To Texas

"But we can't afford to have steak EVERY night!"

By GARTH JONES
AUSTIN (AP) — Four big-name contenders for the Republican nomination have a spot of the May 3 Texas ballot but don't look for any personal campaigning in the state for at least another month.

That doesn't mean we won't be seeing some of their kinfolks or other surrogates before then.

Former Gov. Ronald Reagan is the only candidate with an announced Texas date — a March 13 speech in Longview.

Spokesmen for the other candidates on the Texas GOP ballot say they will be much too busy in other states trying to stay in the race to visit Texas until at least the latter part of March.

Some predict there may be only two GOP candidates left by the time the Texas primary is held.

"It's an uneasy situation among us handling the campaigns," said one statewide figure who did not want to be named. "Here we are trying to raise money and organize in Texas and our candidates are running around the other states."

It is much the same for the Democratic candidates, although Texas Democrats have not yet scheduled a presidential straw vote for May 3. The decision for against a "beauty contest," which will not directly affect selection of national convention delegates, will be made March 10 by the state committee.

Gov. Bill Clements, Texas' first GOP governor of the 20th Century, believes the Texas primary will be important to both parties, no matter the outcome of early primaries in other states.

"I do not think either race (Republican or Democratic) will be decided before it gets to Texas," Clements said. "The Texas primary will be terribly important to both parties."

A spokesman for John Connally says his candidate will not shift his campaign to Texas until after the Alabama, Florida, Georgia and South Carolina primaries set for March 11 and 15.

"These are critical for us and they are critical for the others, too," he said.

Reagan is generally expected to carry Florida, but Connally people hope he will regain some of his momentum in the South, particularly in South Carolina.

Hal DeMoss, head of the George Bush campaign in Texas, expects Bush to visit Texas the latter part of March.

"Personally I think the Texas primary may be very much a contest," he said, "although I think by the time we get through the Illinois primary (March 18) the race will be down to two candidates, and naturally I hope George is one of them. However, I believe Reagan, Connally and Bush will all be strong contenders in the Texas primary."

Bob Rowland, a vice chairman of Reagan's Texas campaign, thinks there is a chance Reagan might have the nomination sewed up before the Texas primary but even then there could still be a hot fight for the Texas delegates.

"If we should win New Hampshire, South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia and Florida, and then go heavy in Illinois, it could be all over," Rowland said. "But Reagan's strong states mostly come late and Texas's delegates will be important to him... there probably will be a split delegation from Texas, probably split among Reagan, Connally and Bush."

Richard Agnich, Dallas, state coordinator for Sen. Howard Baker who does not have a state headquarters, says Baker has a "wait and see" approach in Texas.

"Right now we see no point in coming in (to Texas) and making a major effort against two favorite sons and Reagan," he said. "But if one or more of those should drop out, then Baker is in a position to make his move in Texas."

Agnich said Baker has predicted Illinois will be the most critical state for all the GOP candidates. "After that we may be down to two candidates, and if Baker is one of them there certainly would be a major effort in Texas."

British novelist Aldous Huxley worked on the scripts of a number of movies, including the 1940 version of "Pride and Prejudice."

Doctor Cites Alcoholism Epidemic In America

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Alcoholism is a tragic epidemic raging across America and growing progressively worse while becoming the third leading killer of Americans, a California physician says.

Dr. George D. Lundberg, co-chairman of the California Society for the Treatment of Alcoholism's education committee, said the epidemic is reflected "in the violence we find ourselves with in this country — be it homicides, suicides, battered wives or battered babies."

He said during the California Medical Association's annual meeting that 10 to 20 million Americans are alcoholics and "alcoholism, in all its ramifications... is the third leading cause of death in the United States" after heart disease and cancer.

Lundberg of the University of California-Davis Medical School said the ramifications include such grisly statistics as alcohol's involvement in one of every three suicides and one out of every two traffic deaths.

He said half of all homicide victims have high blood-alcohol levels, noting that "a lot of people who get drunk get pretty obnoxious and they're in places where violence occurs."

"From a disease standpoint, the average alcoholic dies 12 years earlier than the non-alcoholic," he said. Liquor ravages the liver and pancreas and poisons skeletal muscles and probably heart muscles as well. Alcoholics are prone to lethal bouts with pneumonia and tuberculosis.

The problem has become "dramatically worse in the last 15 years," Lundberg said, although it's not yet as severe as that described by Benjamin Franklin in 1790 America or in reports from 16th century Sweden, "where it was extraordinarily rampant."

Lundberg had no solutions to the modern epidemic, since "drug abuse and alcohol abuse are as old as history and nobody's ever been able to figure out how to solve any of them. The Swedes have been trying to deal with it since the 16th century."

In America today, he said, almost everybody drinks, including an alarming number of high school and junior high school children, because "it's fun — it makes you feel good."

Alcohol is universally available, surprisingly inexpensive and Americans are more affluent than ever, he said. "It used to be that people could afford to get drunk just once a week. Now most folks have enough money to get drunk every night."

Rowers Plan Alaska Trip

SEATTLE (UPI) — A couple of months ago John Black of Seattle placed a small newspaper advertisement which said: "Rowing to Alaska Summer 1980. Need Rowers!"

About 60 persons responded and Black, 32, carefully selected three to join him on the 900-mile adventure from Seattle to Glacier Bay Alaska.

Black and his associates — Lucy Reid and Paul Rerucha, a married couple and both graduate nurses, and graduate biologist Lou Holm — are busy building a pair of Swamscott Dorries, one of them almost finished.

Rerucha, an outdoorsman and mountain climber, proved his sincerity in applying for the trip by saying he would quit his job at Children's Orthopedic Hospital when the early summer trip begins. His wife persuaded Black she'd be a good team member by telling of her experiences paddling a kayak.

Miss Holm, who was a member of a women's rowing team at Oxford, England, said she applied "because the ad appealed to my sense of whimsy."

As for Black, why is he doing it? "There's this line from Kurt Vonnegut," he explains. "It goes something like 'unusual travel suggestions are dancing lessons from the gods.'"

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Big Oil Gets Bum Rap

ARE THE high prices we are paying for imported oil really responsible for the 13-plus percent rate of inflation that is suffocating the American economy?

One would certainly think so from listening to the politicians from both parties on the stump. But Heritage Foundation energy analyst Milton Copulos says "no."

In fact, after a careful examination of oil prices over the past five years, he says it is "eminently clear that oil prices have lagged behind, rather than led inflation."

The price for Saudi crude oil at the beginning of 1974, for example, was $11.65 per barrel. That same barrel cost $14.34 at the end of the first quarter of 1979.

When the 1979 price is adjusted for inflation and expressed in 1974 dollars, however, it comes to only $10.13 per barrel—meaning the price actually declined 13 percent.

THERE CAN be little doubt that inflation is much on the minds of the American people these days. It has eroded the take-home pay of everyone—at a scandalous rate.

There can be little doubt that the oil companies, and by proxy the oil-producing nations, make attractive scapegoats.

The oil industry never has been the darling of the American public, and recent events in Iran and Afghanistan have given rise to more than a little xenophobia.

Hard as it is to believe, until the most recent round of increases, the price of oil, says Copulos, had gone up at a rate considerably lower than the general inflation rate.

"Moreover," he writes, "domestically produced oil has been... sold at a price roughly half that prevailing on the world market."

The November national average of 98.9 cents a gallon, when adjusted for inflation, only amounts to a 22.4 percent increase during the past five years.

THE INFLAMED rhetoric currently in vogue on the campaign trail might be excused were it based in fact, but this is not the case. It does a real disservice, therefore, to the public by adding further impetus to the pervasive belief that the increased cost of energy is solely to blame for inflation.

It is not big oil or big business, the traditional hobgoblins of politicians, who are responsible for the rampant inflation we are experiencing, but the politicians themselves.

It is they who have allowed The Fed to print more paper instead of encouraging productive activity. It is they who have placed barriers in the way of innovation. And it is they who have encouraged runaway federal spending on countless boondoggles.

Like the energy crisis itself, inflation bears its maker's name stamped on its bottom, where it says: "Made in Washington."

No Place To Hide

THE "ABSCAM" scandal is expected to be used as an argument for public financing of congressional campaigns.

My Neighbor Twice Removed says the theory is that if a Congressman can dip into the federal treasury for $100,000 to buy the office, he won't be quite so tempted to sell it to somebody else for a paltry $25,000.

Voter: "Why did you take that bribe?"
Congressman: "How was I to know it was the FBI?"

Ralph Nader: "In the minds of millions of people, these guys (Congressmen) are guilty, and they haven't even been charged."

Automakers: "Are you sure it was Ralph Nader who said that?"

Tis said that "you can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink." Wonder if that goes for Congressmen who might protest they were "entrapped"?

WITH WAR CLOUDS drifting over the horizon, what is the state of Lubbock's civil defense preparedness?

In a word, sorry. As it is everywhere in America. The nation is as ill-prepared to protect its civilians as it is to send its troops into combat. Only more so.

"In a nuclear exchange, if it came to that, we'd

War On Crime Won In Streets

WASHINGTON—The holdup man, rifle at shoulder, stood in the middle of the narrow dirt road and confronted our slow-moving touring car (so called in 1916 circa) which was driven by my young mother and which carried a half-dozen of us kids.

A moment later, the outlaw lay floundering in the ditch, and the car speeding past him. Within a mile or so we met an approaching car with several men returning to Clarksburg, W.Va., from the country club. My mother waved them down and told the story.

Within less than an hour, a well-armed citizens' posse had grabbed the would-be robber. He was easily identifiable and probably drunk.

But the reason he didn't get away with the crime was because a nervous young woman stepped on the accelerator and went on the attack. And the reason a criminal career met this interruption was because law-abiding citizens leapt into action.

IT IS NOT an experience which a boy forgets, and I never did. In the 1960s, the father of three, I lived in Baltimore, corner of Lamvale Street and Jenkins Alley.

It was a respectable neighborhood, one block from Memorial Episcopal Church where I was a vestryman at the time I moved to Washington.

For all the respectability, we began to have holdups and purse-snatching, but not for long—some of us husbands formed a protective society.

We all had guns, mostly for sport shooting, and we showed them openly. When the ladies went out at night to collect community funds, we patrolled the streets.

I wrote to the Baltimore Police Commissioner of the time and told him of our vigilante organization. I made clear that we were willing to take the law into our own hands, regardless of consequences.

PRACTICALLY BY RETURN mail, the Commissioner offered an alternative which allowed us to disband. Thereafter, a police squad car lurked in the alley and a plainclothes policeman sashayed the streets. She was often attacked, and the attacker as often was put into handcuffs.

In the 1960s, I lived in Foggy Bottom, a short walk to the State Department and within sight of the Kennedy Center. Respectable enough?

But a mom-and-pop store directly across the street from my home was twice held up. Then, a liquor store two blocks from home was stuck up, and a customer shot dead.

Falling back on my Baltimore experience, I carried an Army rifle openly on Saturday mornings and tried to recruit some vigilantes. Only one neighbor enlisted.

And he insisted we notify the police depart-probably be lucky in this area to save 10 percent of the population," says Bill Payne.

Payne is the guy responsible for Lubbock's civilian mobilization plan, such as it is. He's had practically no support for years.

Neither the people nor the federal government wants to think about the nasty business of being prepared for the worst. They'd rather put their money into social programs.

But in the last 30 days, says Payne, a few people have begun to get worried. He has had "about 10" calls.

Payne doesn't tell them much to ease their minds.

LUBBOCK HAS AN 11-year-old fallout shelter plan. If a nuclear war threat were to become apparent, that plan could be published or broadcast.

It would tell people where they could have gone in 1969 to seek shelter, mostly in the downtown area and at Texas Tech. It would tell them what to take with them for survival.

Given a little lead time, the plan could be updated.

Federal planners, though, have been more interested in what they call a Crisis Relocation Plan. It calls for evacuating more than 75 percent of urban populations to the countryside.

In Lubbock's case, people would go to counties west, north and east of the city, there to live as best they could off the land, in farm houses, campers or dugouts.

"It's a loco plan," Payne himself characterizes it.

But, he says, there really hasn't been much in the way of funds or plans either one coming down the federal pipeline in recent years.

"WE ARE BACK about where we were in the 1940s," he says. "Practically at zero."

There is, however, on paper a plan to keep government functioning in a crisis.

Actually, it's a pretty good plan.

It calls for people in government and in government-related fields such as the Red Cross to take leadership roles and "interact" with people in the private sector.

For example, if there were massive piles of rubble to be dealt with in Lubbock, the public works and building inspection officials at City Hall who deal with contractors every day would call 'em up and get 'em going.

A contractor would get his crews together. Much better plan than trying to round up volunteers.

THERE ARE THOSE, like Tom Donaldson of 1510 83rd St., who have called Payne in recent days wanting to volunteer for a civil defense chore.

Payne suggests to them that they contact the Red Cross or some other agency that might be pressed into service during an emergency.

But local government, he says, will have the responsibility for functioning and coordinating as best it can whatever resources might be available through federal and state agencies.

The private sector would best serve through existing organizational and business structures. And by praying.

'WHO SAYS NO MAN IS AN ISLAND'

James J. Kilpatrick:

Power To Tax Can Destroy, Too

WASHINGTON—In a free society, where theoretically the people are masters and government is their servant, agencies of government ought not to engage in vendettas.

But the Internal Revenue Service has been waging one, and thereby hangs this tale.

Twelve years ago a group of men and women, deeply concerned at the abuse of an individual worker's rights by the excesses of trade unionism, created the National Right to Work Legal Foundation.

Thanks to aggressive leadership and a popular cause, the foundation soon gained a reputation as a redoubtable defender of the little guy—the worker who gets ground down by the union shop.

THE FOUNDATION WENT to court in behalf of a teacher in Michigan, a telephone worker in Maryland. It fought legal battles for airline employees in California and college professors in Michigan.

Its clients came to include truck drivers, electricians and construction workers. These were people whose elementary right to work was imperiled by the brute power of Big Unionism.

And, little by little, the foundation racked up an impressive string of victories. As you can imagine, these successive gnat-stings eventually began to penetrate the elephant hide of the AFL-CIO.

The foundation operates on a total budget of $3.6 million a year; it has only 14 full-time staff attorneys.

There is no way even to estimate the combined resources of the great unions, but we are dealing here with a very small David and a very large Goliath. And Goliath began to get mad.

SO IT CAME to pass that the giants of organized labor waxed wrath, and being wrath, they conveyed their displeasure to the Internal Revenue Service.

The giants of labor complained that they were being impudently trod upon by this pesky outfit, and they demanded that the IRS put an end to it. Specifically, they demanded that the IRS revoke the foundation's certificate of tax exemption.

In the field of private philanthropy, such a certificate is more precious than diamonds. It is the absolutely essential condition for survival.

Without an exemption under Section 501 (c) (3) of the Tax Code, contributions swiftly diminish from a flood to a trickle.

In 1977, out of a clear sky, the IRS suddenly, inexplicably revoked the foundation's certificate—a certificate that had been effective since 1968.

The IRS said the original exemption had been granted in "error."

IN THE GOVERNMENT'S view, little David never had been entitled to exemption in the first place.

Why was this? Under IRS regulations, a foundation is entitled to exemption if it promotes social welfare by defending "human and civil rights secured by law."

The IRS astonishingly took the view that a right to work is not a human or civil right secured by law.

Yes, admitted the IRS, the individual worker may have certain statutory rights, but he has no "fundamental" right that might be deemed essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men. Therefore, exemption denied.

The foundation challenged this tyrannical decree in court and on Dec. 21 won a resounding victory.

A text of the opinion by U.S. District Judge F. T. Dupree Jr. of North Carolina has just come to hand.

He ruled in the foundation's favor on every essential point. A man's right to work, said Judge Dupree, is "liberty's cornerstone."

INDEED, "THE COURTS have rarely articulated a fundamental right with more sweeping eloquence and affection than they have the right to work." And the right is most certainly a right "secured by law."

The IRS has not decided whether to appeal the Dupree decision. The probabilities are strong that the decree will be left to stand.

But we still ought to inquire what motive of vendetta led the IRS to undertake this costly harassment, and we ought to reflect anew upon a dictum from John Marshall.

It provides a moral to this tale: The power to tax involves the power to destroy.

This is what the IRS set out to do to the Right to Work Legal Foundation. Little fellows across the land may be grateful that the effort failed.

ment. We were told we'd be lawbreakers if we attempted to enforce the law, so we desisted.

Later, taking my after-dinner constitutional with a loaded pistol in my pocket, I was queried by two cops who were searching for a "man with a gun." When I showed them my gun, they were scandalized.

"If you do that again, we'll have to run you in, sir," one of them warned.

In law-abiding frustration, I gave my pistol to an out-of-towner and surrendered my license.

My daily paper—like yours—carries stories of armed robbery, rape of young and aged women, murder in darkness and broad daylight. Editorialists from individual cities and states.

But what's a statistic? If you prick it, will it bleed? If you tickle it, will it laugh?

If we're fit for self-government, we must win our lives and liberties on our own. For starters, we need liberalized gun licensing that will arm decent citizens and disarm the crooks on pain of death.

We need a federal statute for capital punishment. Most of all, we need neighborhood organization, made lawful, to win this war against criminals.

Sylvia Porter:

Test Your 'Jobless' I.Q. With Employment Quiz

WASHINGTON—To give you a clearer concept of what the unemployment rate does and does not mean, test yourself with the following short quiz.

Write down whether each of the persons described below is "employed," "unemployed" or "not in the labor force." Don't look at my answers before answering on your own.

(1) Peter Brown is 16 years old. He has no paying job but he works at least 20 hours a week helping on his father's chicken farm.

Answer: "Employed." Peter is counted as employed because he works at least 15 hours per week. If he worked less, he would be tagged: "Not in the labor force." He is known as an "unpaid family worker."

(2) Juliana Smith was told she has a job as a cosmetic counter clerk at her local department store. She'll report to work in two weeks and so she no longer is looking for a job.

ANSWER: "UNEMPLOYED." Workers waiting to be recalled from a layoff as well as those waiting to start a new job within 30 days are counted as unemployed.

(3) Bill Jones, 22, wants a regular job as a carpenter. He hasn't looked for work during the past month, though, because he thinks he lacks the necessary experience.

He also says that some potential employers have looked at his long hair and told him he is "too young."

Answer: "Not in the labor force." Until 1967, when changes were last made in labor force definitions, Bill would have been classified as unemployed.

BUT NOW HE is considered not in the labor force and particularly, as a "discouraged worker"—a person 16 years of age or older who wants a job but who is not actively searching for one because he thinks: no suitable job is available; he lacks the required skills, training or experience; employers find him too young, old or discriminate against him for other reasons.

Generally, on the first Friday of each month, the BLS of the Labor Department announces the number of employed and unemployed workers in the U.S.—plus various other statistics on labor force turnover, hours of work, hourly and weekly earnings, etc.

MUCH OF THIS additional data gets scant attention from the press and politicians. The public focuses on one figure: the official unemployment rate.

It's generally regarded as a convenient, reliable, useful signal of overall economic conditions and particularly of the state of the labor market. In brief, the jobless rate should rise as businesses' need for workers slows.

But is the significance of this rate so great? Some analysts insist the unemployment rate, as now defined, overstates the extent of joblessness and hardship.

As the three illustrations with which I began today's report underline, the simple classification of workers as employed, unemployed or not in the labor force, is somewhat arbitrary and does not reflect the gray areas among categories.

Nevertheless, a presidential commission which recently evaluated and suggested improvements, concluded that the rate "is generally a useful indicator of current national conditions."

Several changes were proposed. Among them, reports my associate, Brooke Shearer, was that the BLS prepare a yearly national report on the links between economic hardship and unemployment.

TODAY'S STATISTICS DON'T serve this purpose because many jobless may have ample family income if they're without a job for only a short time, or they receive hefty unemployment insurance or welfare benefits, or other family members who are working fill up the gap.

In contrast, many people with jobs still have a tough time making ends meet because their wages are low. Thus, unemployment which was once so closely connected with hard times may not be so today.

The head count is suspect in several areas—and I have long felt that a real overhaul is desperately needed.

Today's LAW: YOU'RE NEVER TOO BIG TO GET RIPPED OFF ...

Gas Price Differences Causing Long Lines At Service Stations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Motorists shopping for the best available price for gasoline are forming long lines at some California service stations, an oil and gasoline industry newsletter says.

But statistics from the American Petroleum Institute and the federal Department of Energy show daily nationwide allocation of gasoline recently has improved and that motorists are using less gas, the Los Angeles-based Lundberg Letter currently notes.

Before limits were placed on both a dealer's profit margin — which often dictates what price he'll set for — and the amount allocated to a dealer, the difference in price from one gas station to another in the same area varied only slightly, the letter's publisher, Dan Lundberg, said. Gasoline dealers had the option of staying open longer and making more money.

Now, according to Lundberg's publication, the complicated pricing formula and recent, disparate wholesale price increases have led to neighboring dealers having as much as a dime-a-gallon difference in their prices. That means gas lines will form at the cheaper station until that dealer sells all his gas and closes the station, the letter said.

At that point fewer stations are open, so the motorists must go to the ones which are open and more lines often result, it said.

The stations may have their relative pricing positions changed as often as five times a month because of wholesale price changes and the complicated pricing formula, the letter claimed, resulting in confusion for the motorist and the dealer.

"The only thing left to the dealer is his time," Lundberg said, quoting from his publication. "Motorists are unaware that it's their time that is relatively worthless."

The letter said API and Energy Department statistics show daily nationwide allocation of gasoline in February is up 2.6 percent over January while consumption by motorists is down 10 to 11 percent over the last three months, compared with the same months a year ago.

The stock of gasoline in the United States was 261 million barrels last month, compared with 256 million barrels a year earlier, the letter said.

The Almanac TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International
Today is Tuesday, Feb. 12, the 43rd day of 1980 with 323 to follow. This is Abraham Lincoln's birthday.

The moon is moving toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.

Abraham Lincoln, 16th president of the United States, and British biologist Charles Darwin were born Feb. 12, 1809.

On this date in history:
In 1953, the Soviet Union broke off relations with Israel when terrorists bombed the USSR legation in Tel Aviv.

In 1963, a jetliner crashed into the Florida Everglades, killing 43 people.

In 1973, the first American prisoners of war were released by North Vietnam; 116 were flown from Hanoi to the Philippines.

In 1974, Patricia Hearst's abductors asked her wealthy father for $230 million worth of free food as evidence of good faith in negotiating for her release.

A thought for the day: Abraham Lincoln said, "As I would not be a slave, so I would not be a master. This expresses my idea of democracy."

Salt Tablet Dangers

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Since soldiers or hikers take salt tablets to retain water, therefore permitting them to go for a longer period of time without water, why can't they just drink salt water?

DEAR READER — You've made a couple of presumptions that are not correct. In the first place, not all soldiers or hikers take salt tablets and they shouldn't. The only people who should ever take salt tablets are those who really lose a lot of salt and that's through copious sweating. That's why salt loss usually occurs only in vigorous athletes or heavy laborers. They can get additional salt through food and liquids that contain salt.

Thus, salt tablets are not to keep a person having to drink water. The salt is merely to replace the salt lost in sweat. In fact, if a person takes salt tablets and fails to drink adequate amounts of water at the same time, he may increase his chances of having a heat stroke.

To give you more information on salt I am sending you The Health Letter number 10-12, Salt: Your Vital Sodium and Potassium Balance. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently my grandfather had some kind of a respiratory attack. He had been outside in the evening air when it first started. He said he couldn't catch his breath. He asked for a glass of hot water because he said afterward that it opened his chest up so he could breathe.

At the moment he was having the attack, his face turned purple, his eyes watered and he was unable to exhale. He could breathe in but he couldn't breathe it back out. Sometimes he looked swollen around the chest. Could it be his heart? The doctor said he had a slight heart attack a year ago but he hasn't been back to any doctors for any checkups since then.

DEAR READER — You're a very good observer. Your grandfather apparently had some form of asthmatic attack. Characteristically, these individuals can inhale but they have trou-

Ex-Members Of Skynyrd Group Prepare To Unveil New Band

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Survivors of the ill-fated Lynyrd Skynyrd rock band say their music is still Southern and still raunchy, but they have a new act to unveil at the Superdome the night before Mardi Gras.

The act, part of an evening-long whoopla featuring the likes of Willie Nelson and Crystal Gayle, will be a comeback performance for the group, now named Rossington & Collins after Gary Rossington and Allen Collins, two members of the original cast.

The Lynyrd Skynyrd band, which specialized in high-energy rock, was put out of commission in October 1977 when the group's chartered plane crashed in Mississippi. Six people were killed, including three band members — among them the lead vocalist Ronnie Van Zant.

"It took us a long time to get back," said Rossington, one of four Lynyrd Skynyrd members forming the nucleus of the new group.

In a telephone interview from their headquarters in Jacksonville, Fla., Rossington and Collins said the group's music is similar to the Lynyrd Skynyrd style but not a duplicate of it.

There'll still be heavy emphasis on electric keyboard, with the same-style three guitars alternating between lead and rhythm. But they have a female lead vocalist — Dale Krantz, who used to sing backup with Leon Russell. And most of the songs will be new.

"We might do Free Bird (a Lynyrd Skynyrd biggie) because the people like it and we want to please them," Rossington said, "but we have our own songs."

He said, "We didn't want to fall back on Lynyrd Skynyrd because that was one group and that group is no more. We wanted to go ahead on our own."

Collins said the new band also wants to modify the Lynyrd Skynyrd image of hard-partying, run-ins with the law.

"It was a tad," Collins said. "We are a band from the South but not a Southern band."

Besides guitarists Rossington and Collins, the new group includes Lynyrd Skynyrd alum Billy Powell at keyboard and Leon Wilkeson on bass.

The Skynyrd drummer, Artimus Pyle was in line to be a part of the new group too, but he broke his leg in 12 places in September and has been replaced by Derek Hess.

Barry Harwood, an old friend from Florida, comes on at guitar and vocal.

The Superdome performance Monday puts the band on stage right after a Mardi Gras Parade rolls through the dome. House managers predict a mammoth crowd of 65,000.

It will be the first big appearance by the new group. After New Orleans, the group has scheduled a week in England in April, where the group will participate in the 50th anniversary celebration of the Rainbow in London.

Then they will be in the studio; cutting their first record under the new name.

Wedding Guests Die In Crash

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — A bus loaded with 45 people celebrating the marriage of a Brazilian man careened off a winding road and crashed down a 360-foot ravine, killing nine people and seriously injuring 22 others, police say.

The recent accident occurred in the southern state of Rio Grande do Sul on a mountain road that is serving as a detour while the principal highway is closed for repairs.

Most of the passengers were relatives or friends of Joao Luis Rhedel and were returning home after attending his wedding and subsequent celebrations, reports said.

One of the bridegroom's sisters and one of his brothers died in the accident. His parents were injured, but were not in danger, doctors said.

The cause of the accident was not immediately known and police said they could not yet speak with the driver, Remy Moraes, who was said to be in a state of shock.

Hearing Test Set for Lubbock, February 11-12-13
Texas State Hearing Aid Center
Free Hearing Tests. Introducing the "Gem" Hearing Aid by NU-EAR

Free electronic hearing tests will be given on February 11-13 from 9:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The hearing tests will be given at Texas State Hearing Aid Center, 2321 50th, Suite A.

The tests have been scheduled because many people suspect they have trouble hearing and understanding. Use of the latest electronic equipment will indicate whether there is such a problem and whether it can be helped electronically. Experienced hearing aid specialists from NU-EAR Electronics will be present to perform the tests and discuss the "Gem" hearing aid.

Worn totally within the ear, the "Gem" features automatic noise suppression which automatically shuts down background noises, enabling one to hear and understand conversation better in a crowd. It also has a built-in analog computer which is programmed and custom built to accommodate individual hearing needs. During this special event sponsored by Texas State Hearing Aid Center, free tune-ups on your present hearing aid along with free batteries will be available.

Texas State Hearing Aid Center, suggests that everyone have their hearing tested at least once a year. Texas State Hearing Aid Center also encourages the general public as well as those presently wearing hearing aids, regardless of the make, to take advantage of the free hearing tests February 11, 12, 13.

To avoid waiting please phone 792-0254 for an appointment.

Vote Count Pleases Candidates

By United Press International
For years, the New Hampshire primary was the first milestone on the long road to the Democratic and Republican presidential nominating conventions.

This year, instead of anticipating the effect its primary will have on the future presidential race, the Granite State is assessing how earlier votes will affect its primary results Feb. 26.

New Hampshire still has the first state primary, but it now follows a whole series of political events: delegate selection caucuses in Iowa, Arkansas and Maine, and preliminary straw votes in Maine and Florida.

Not to mention Puerto Rico, where registered voters are allowed to cast ballots in both the Republican primary next Sunday and the Democratic primary two weeks later.

Workers in all three Democratic presidential camps in New Hampshire found something to cheer about Monday in the Maine caucus results of the day before.

"The president absolutely did win in Maine. We're very pleased..." said Gov. Hugh Gallen, chairman of President Carter's campaign in the Granite State.

Sen. Edward Kennedy's spokesman, Jeff Petrich, also said, "We're certainly pleased... I think this spells trouble for Carter in future primaries."

Stephen Rivers of the Gov. Edmund Brown campaign said the results were "real encouraging to us. I think it makes it a three-way race."

But none was quick to project the Maine results into New Hampshire. Kennedy's campaign, meanwhile, estimated CBS News had cost them 3 or 4 percentage points by projecting Carter as a big winner in mid-afternoon, when a third of the caucuses had not yet begun.

The network interrupted a tennis match to project Carter the winner with slightly more than half the vote, and Kennedy with less than one-third.

Final, unofficial figures gave Carter 45.2 percent of the delegates to Kennedy's 39.4 percent — not a large distinction in numbers. But holding an incumbent to less than half the vote is considered a plus psychologically. Brown finished with 13.8 percent.

Kennedy press aide Thomas South-wick said the CBS projection "definitely had an impact, probably three or four points." He called it "outrageous."

But CBS spokesman Ernest Leiser said, "We were able to extrapolate, using our computers, and based on past results as to what would be expected to happen."

He conceded the language used in the broadcast — that Carter would win more than half the vote — "was unfortunate."

White House press secretary Jody Powell dismissed Kennedy's claims of having done better than expected. "When you win, you win. He lost."

But on his arrival back in Washington later, Powell told reporters, "I'm sure we were hurt" by Carter's failure to campaign actively. He said that policy will not be reassessed, however, until the hostages are released in Tehran.

Brown, who did not start campaigning until 10 days ago, said Maine gave his campaign a lift. But by failing to get the required 15 percent he won no actual delegates unless he can persuade every uncommitted delegate to sign on with him. If the unofficial figures are confirmed, Carter and Kennedy will split the delegates with 12 for Carter and 10 for Kennedy.

Robert Dole Aide Says Report Concerning Heart Attack False

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Robert Dole may have suffered a "silent" heart attack without knowing it, a medical report shows, but an aide to the Republican presidential candidate says Dole denies it.

Press officer Bob Waite said Dole dismissed a report Monday in the McGraw-Hill magazine Medical World News, which printed doctors' reports on nine presidential candidates.

"In general," the magazine said, "the health reports of the 1980 presidential candidates range from typical to excellent for men of their ages."

California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., of the 10 candidates solicited, turned down a request for medical information.

It said "by far the sketchiest report" came from President Carter's physician, Dr. William Lukash, who said Carter was in "excellent health."

Waite quoted Dr. Freeman H. Cary, Dole's doctor and the attending physician to Congress, as saying, "I do not believe Sen. Dole has ever had a heart attack. His (electrocardiograms) have variations that are normal for him. However, these variations show up with athletes and others who share his excellent health."

Neither Dole, who was campaigning in New Hampshire, nor Cary could be reached for comment Monday night.

The magazine, which is distributed to doctors, carried a report by Cary in which the doctor said abnormalities in a vector cardiogram, a heart test related to the electrocardiogram, showed Dole had evidence "suggesting (an) old MI (inferior myocardial infarction)" or heart attack.

Cary's report did not specify when the infarct occurred, but it said there were abnormalities in Dole's electrocardi-ogram as far back as 1977, although an exercise stress test at that time was normal. The stress test measures heart strength and can disclose problems of heart blood supply.

But in the magazine report, Cary said the 56-year-old Dole was in "excellent health" and "there is nothing in his health status to contraindicate his pursuit of the Presidency."

Other reports on candidates included:

Ronald Reagan — The former California governor, who turned 69 on Feb. 6, had prostate surgery in 1967 and has been taking shots for allergies. A doctor said Reagan achieved the maximum expected heart rate for his age during a stress test last October and was in "remarkably good physical condition."

John Connally — The former Texas governor takes the drug propranolol to combat what his doctor described as "mild" high blood pressure.

Howard Baker — The Tennessee senator had a CAT scan when he began to get headaches last September but they eventually went away.

George Bush and Edward Kennedy — Both men have a history of ulcers.

Connally Blasts Handling Of Investigation

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican presidential candidate John Connally took time from a fund-raising dinner in his honor Monday night to criticize the FBI for its handling of recent bribery investigations.

Connally referred to allegations by the FBI involving officials in several states, alleging an insurance kickback scheme.

"Here you have an obvious scheme on behalf of the FBI to test the morality and integrity of public officials," Connally said. "I think it is an extension of the FBI role that goes too far.

"So far as I can see, they were not investigating any crimes. On the contrary, they were guilty of trying to create a situation, creating circumstances, testing morality."

Connally spoke with newsmen prior to a speech before 1,500 persons attending the fundraiser at Albert Thomas Convention Center. The $100 per plate dinner netted an estimated $170,000 for Connally's campaign fund, officials said.

Connally suggested at one point "there must be more to it than we know now."

He then added, "Obviously, the more that comes to light, they weren't investigating a crime, they were enticing those individuals into their lair."

The GOP presidential hopeful said the Justice Department would be hard pressed to prove their investigation was not a case of entrapment. "It looks to me like the FBI deliberately set out to entrap a number of people," Connally said.

The former Texas governor later told the dinner crowd the United States would have to make drastic changes if it is going to survive. He suggested new alliances in the Middle East, and said the economic future of America lies in a Pacific-based common market.

Connally also called for new western alliances that ultimately would "look to push Castro and communism plumb out of the Western Hemisphere."

The United States is facing the fourth crisis of its history, Connally said. The first three were its founding, the War Between the States and the Great Depression.

Election Probe Requested By Dallas Solon

AUSTIN (UPI) — Rep. Clay Smothers, R-Dallas, saying "dishonesty at the polls is a tradition in some 30 precincts in Dallas County" has asked Secretary of State George Strake to investigate alleged voting irregularities in the Jan. 19 Dallas City Council election.

Smothers cited allegations that more than 100 voters voted twice on two different machines in Precinct 3340.

"Mr. Secretary, there is evidence that supports the theory that 100 voters did not even show up on Jan. 19," Smothers said Monday in a letter to Strake. "That would imply, at least, that votes were forged by someone working the polls."

Smothers also called for an investigation of voting irregularities in 30 predominantly black voting precincts in Dallas County.

"Those of us who are black and live in the black community are well aware that for the last two decades, outright cheating has taken place," Smothers said. "Some of us in the black community have shouted from the rooftops to authorities about criminal activities at the polls."

Smothers is not seeking re-election to his House seat but is running for Congress.

Activists Spearhead Students' Protests

By The Associated Press
Anti-Vietnam War activists Tom Hayden, Daniel Ellsberg and David Harris led a new series of protests on California campuses, this time arguing against reinstatement of the draft.

The three men who were familiar figures in the 1960s appeared in Sacramento, Berkeley and San Diego on Monday, addressing an estimated total of 6,500 persons on three state school campuses.

Other anti-draft protests were also held at the University of California at Santa Barbara, UC Davis and UCLA.

Harris spoke to the largest crowd, about 3,000, telling UC San Diego students that "our Bill of Rights and our Constitution are the only things we should fight for — the rest is garbage."

Hayden, one of the Chicago 7 defendants, told 1,500 people at Sacramento State that the government "is trying to use you as a chip in an international game of military poker, you are pawns in a game of nuclear brinkmanship."

"Many of you would fight if you thought the national interests of this country were threatened. But you're not willing to fight for petro-chemical interests."

Ali Supporting Draft Registration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champ Muhammad Ali, an Olympic gold medal winner who supports President Carter's threat to boycott the Olympics, is also a former draft resister who now favors the draft.

Ali met Monday with Carter to report on his efforts to win African support for the U.S. threat to boycott the Summer Games in Moscow if Soviet troops remain in Afghanistan, and if the International Olympic Committee fails to take action to move or delay the Games.

After the meeting, Ali, who won a gold medal for boxing in the 1960 Rome Olympics, discussed Carter's call for draft registration.

"If America is in trouble, and the country said Russia is escalating... I will be first to join, and I will get a rifle, jump in an airplane and jump out if Russia attacks America," he said.

"I think the draft is right."

Ali was convicted of draft evasion in the mid-1960s after he refused induction into the Army, and he was subsequently stripped of his world heavyweight boxing title. His conviction was overturned by the Supreme Court and he then won back his title.

Ali said he fought his own conscription during the Vietnam conflict because "in Vietnam we were wrong."

Despite some controversial comments made by Ali about the United States during his African trip, he said, "I know enough diplomacy to get by." And Carter told Ali at the start of the 15 minute meeting that he was "grateful for the results you obtained."

Ali said his trip was "75 percent successful" and that Kenya and Liberia plan to boycott the Games.

After meeting with Carter, Ali said he is about to make another international journey — to China, where "Dong Shing Pong, Ding Shong Ping wanted to see me about something."

Ali, who was advised that the Chinese leader's name actually is Deng Xiaoping, said he would be giving advice on boxing equipment.

"This could be big business," he said. "Eight-hundred million people buying shoes and sweatsuits."

Carter To Seek Action On N-Waste Disposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter plans to ask Congress today to start laying groundwork for the nation's first nuclear waste disposal plan, according to a published report here.

The president will seek permission for federal purchase of a permanent repository for radioactive waste and a storage pool for burned-out nuclear fuel. The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

A White House press officer was unable to confirm the report Monday night.

By 1985, Carter wants to select a permanent waste repository from 11 possible sites, the Post reported.

Those locations reportedly include the Nevada Test Site, where nuclear weapons are detonated underground; a Hanford, Wash., site, where some wastes already are stored, and eight underground salt domes in Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.

The president also will tell Congress he intends to establish a repository for spent nuclear fuel by 1983 and that he wants legislation by 1981 authorizing government purchase of at least one "away-from-reactor" site, the newspaper reported.

Sites under consideration for that repository, which would be used to store spent fuel now accumulating at the nation's nuclear plants, include Barnwell, S.C.; Morris, Ill.; and West Valley, N.Y.,

Military Women Testify To Sexual Harassment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Army private complaining of sexual harassment at Fort Meade Army base has testified male soldiers talked dirty to her and made improper advances.

Pfc. Sarah Tolaro told a House Armed Services subcommittee Monday the sexual harassment women were subjected to at Fort Meade in Maryland was worse than anything she had experienced while working as a nude dancer in a bar.

"I have never seen people treated the way they are treated at Fort Meade," she said, adding that male soldiers "talk extremely dirty and nasty" to female soldiers.

She said two non-commissioned officers once pushed her into a corner, exposed themselves to her and laughed.

Another time, when a senior patrol officer was supposed to train her on the midnight to 6 a.m. shift, she was told to drive out to the airfield very fast and weave between the lights to test her driving ability.

"When I got up to about 60 miles an hour, he grabbed me all over," she said. "I screamed and knocked out a row of lights."

She said she never reported any of the incidents because "anytime I brought up something I thought was important, I've been told 'Don't make waves.'"

Mrs. Tolaro said the general attitude of those in command is, "You got what you deserved."

During the hearing, Mrs. Tolaro, 23, said she was a go-go dancer in a Baltimore bar for almost two years while she was in the Army.

Mrs. Tolaro said in an interview she does not believe her dancing reduced her credibility in charging sexual harassment on the base.

"I took the job because I was skinny and agile and liked to dance," she said. "I didn't have any job skills and I needed the money."

Mrs. Tolaro, who earns about $400 a month in the military, said she danced to support her two children who live with her parents in Roanoke, Va. The extra $200 a week from dancing went to pay medical expenses of her partially blind son.

Clayton Vows To Reveal 'Plot'

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

HEREFORD — "I have done nothing wrong," Speaker of the Texas House Bill Clayton told cheering supporters here Monday night, pledging that he will "get to the bottom" of a wide ranging insurance bribery scandal.

"I'm convinced this is part of some plot; that there's something behind all this that we don't know about," Clayton told a crowd of 350 Deaf Smith and Oldham County residents gathered at a special appreciation dinner. "And I promise you, we'll get to the bottom of this."

The packed dinner marked the three-time speaker's first appearance since his implication in a Justice Department undercover probe that alleges he accepted $10,000 from an FBI agent posing as a representative from a major insurance company.

Clayton is scheduled to testify Wednesday before a federal grand jury in Houston investigating bribery and kickback charges resulting from the latest FBI investigation of government officials and political figures from across the South and Southwest.

At a news conference Saturday, the millionaire farmer from Springlake said he accepted "a stack of $100 bills" only to avoid embarrassing a supporter in front of a business associate. The speaker insisted the money was neither a bribe nor a political contribution because he has not touched the money since and intended to return it.

"In Austin, some of my friends are asking me how I've kept going the last couple of days, and I told them I keep going because I've done nothing wrong," the 51-year-old Clayton said to a standing ovation. "I feel no guilt because I've done no wrong."

"The last two or three days have been a difficult time," he admitted. "But my colleagues in Austin have said they'll stand firm behind me and I'll vindicate myself from this political assassination."

With his wife, Delma, Clayton received the first key to the city of Hereford presented and a western painting from Hereford's National Cowgirl Hall of Fame. As he accepted the art work, Clayton turned to the crowd, grinned, and asked, "Is this a bribe?"

Clayton concluded his remarks by declaring, "Right will win. I have confidence."

After the banquet, Clayton told The Avalanche-Journal, "We're going to whip this thing. If I have to be an example to find out what brings these attacks on, then I will. I'm really gratified with the turnout tonight and with the support we've gotten from all over Texas."

He told reporters, however, that he could not answer specific questions "under the advisement of my lawyer."

"I'd like to speak openly and freely with you, but I can't because I don't know the answers," he said before returning to Austin.

At least 21 political figures and union officials from Louisiana and Texas are going before federal grand juries this week to discuss the FBI's so-called Brilab investigation — a "scam" involving alleged kickbacks to influence insurance purchases by government agencies in four states.

Brilab is the second major undercover FBI investigation to surface within two weeks. The other probe, called Abscam for Arab scam, allegedly involves eight members of Congress as well as businessmen and politicians in several states who took money from undercover FBI agents purporting to buy influence — for special immigration treatment and investments — on behalf of Arab investors.

MASTER OF THE STING — Melvin Weinberg is the FBI's con artist behind the Abscam probe according to an interview in a New York newspaper Monday. Abscam was an undercover bribery investigation in which Weinberg posed as a wheeler-dealer that led to the implication of eight members of Congress who thought they were receiving Arab money in exchange for favors. Weinberg is now under FBI guard waiting to be called as a witness. U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said Monday that the FBI's undercover bribery investigation will go no further in Congress than the eight members already implicated. (AP Laserphoto)

U.S. Attorney To Head Search For Source Of Media Leaks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. attorney is taking charge of an intense Justice Department hunt for the sources of leaks to the news media about the FBI's undercover "Abscam" investigation.

Department officials are concerned the leaks could damage the chances of successful prosecutions stemming from the controversial and unprecedented probe of political corruption that has implicated eight members of Congress.

Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti announced Monday he is naming Richard Blumenthal, U.S. attorney for Connecticut, to take over the internal probe — which will focus on leaks to the New York Times, NBC and the Long Island newspaper Newsday before the FBI investigation was completed.

Civiletti also sought to quiet reports the scandal still is widening.

"Other than the unfortunate, regrettable and inexcusable leaks that have endangered (presumably) innocent persons by identifying them specifically, there are no other senators or congressmen to my knowledge in any way related to the Abscam investigation," he said.

In a question-and-answer session at the National Press Club, Civiletti said he has never been more "angered and frustrated" as attorney general than he was over the leaks.

Civiletti said he was "beefing up" the investigation, calling the leaks about investigations of officials yet to face criminal charges "inexcusable and tragic ... particularly when it involves public officials whose reputations are their life's blood."

Asked if the leak could allow defense lawyers to raise a serious defense of unwarranted pre-trial publicity, one department official said, "absolutely."

Civiletti did not mention the effect of the leaks on prosecutions. But he said he wants to trace the leaks and to determine the motivations of the leakers — "and through that examination, develop not only punishment for those sources who have violated departmental policy, but remedies to prevent such repetitions in the future."

Civiletti later declined to comment on published reports that polygraph tests may be used in the investigation, but one high-ranking official told United Press International he doubted that decision has been made yet.

Civiletti said he had been assured those snared in the FBI undercover bribery probe had not been entrapped — or lured into committing crimes by undercover agents posing as Arab businessmen or their representatives.

FBI agents simply followed leads in the 18-month investigation that moved from a probe of stolen property "and particularly certificates of deposit and art objects, and then into casino franchise or licensing availabilities, and then into representations and purveyors of political services," he said.

Casino Commission Shake-Up Urged

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Gov. Brendan T. Byrne has proposed a wholesale shake-up of New Jersey's scandal-linked Casino Control Commission, and advocates of casino gambling in other states say their campaigns have been hurt by the FBI's Abscam investigation.

Byrne said Monday he wanted to "begin restoring public confidence" in the state's casino operations following accusations of improper attempts to influence the awarding of casino licenses in Atlantic City.

Byrne recommended that commission members be full-time state employees and that increased restrictions be imposed on former lawmakers taking casino jobs. He proposed that commissioners be subject to immediate dismissal if they refused to testify with any court, state or federal investigative agency.

The governor also urged an end to temporary permits, which allow the enormously expensive casinos to begin taking in gambling revenues before licensing investigations are completed.

Last week, commission vice chairman Kenneth MacDonald resigned his $18,000-a-year, part-time position amid published allegations that he shared a $100,000 bribe. MacDonald has denied the allegations and no charges have been filed.

Joseph P. Lordi, the commission's $60,000-a-year, full-time chairman, was cited in a purported boast by U.S. Sen. Harrison Williams Jr. — taped by the FBI — that he helped a casino developer save $3 million.

New Jersey residents approved casino gambling in 1976 and revenues are expected to reach $5 billion a year within several years. The state gets 8 percent off the top, and the industry's success has prompted other states to consider competing for casino dollars.

Gov. Hugh Carey says the Abscam allegations "constitute a setback" for New York's casino movement, and Louisiana advocates of a state-owned casino say the allegations are going to hurt. A Pennsylvania state senator postponed hearings on casino legislation.

"If New Jersey wanted to make sure New York didn't get casinos, they are going about it in the right way," said Dr. Gerald Lurch, who led a state study that recommended casino gambling for New York.

Byrne's proposal was expected to hurt three casinos slated to open this year.

"I wonder if we're overreacting to what are, at this time, merely newspaper accounts," said William Downey, executive director of the Atlantic City Casino Hotel Association.

Immigration Officials Named In Probe

NEW YORK (AP) — Work permits, travel visas, even coveted "green cards" are available to foreigners seeking to smooth their way into the United States through unscrupulous Immigration and Naturalization Service agents — if the price is right, a convicted briber asserts on secretly recorded FBI tapes.

The undercover recordings were made last year during a continuing federal investigation that, sources said, has spread to INS offices in Newark, N.J., Miami and 12 countries.

The Associated Press has learned that about 15 INS employees here are under investigation and that several others are the subject of sealed indictments. While the FBI's Abscam investigation of bribery has resulted in the indictment of an INS employee here, officials say the two investigations are not connected.

INS officials here and in Washington, D.C., declined comment.

The existence of 52 hours of tapes came to light this month in the trial of Isidore Markowitz, an analyst in New York City's Community Development Agency. Markowitz was convicted of giving INS clerk Juan Espinal $2,800 in return for forged or blank documents.

Espinal, who had access to a range of INS files, went to the FBI in April after fellow employees asked his aid in illegal activities. He was wired by the FBI to record meetings and telephone calls Markowitz had with him and a INS investigator over 3½ months.

According to the tapes, Markowitz said he made $16,000 a year at his city job. He told Espinal, "I make an extra 20, 20 grand a year. It's good enough for me."

The transcripts of 20 hours of tapes — 32 hours remain sealed — examined by the AP and evidence produced at Markowitz's trial allege:

— Payoffs to some 20 INS employees here and others in Miami, Newark and to U.S. consular employees overseas, as well as employees of 12 foreign countries.

— Payoffs to "immigration consultants" who bribe low-level INS employees to help bona fide aliens entitled to legitimate paperwork to avoid bureaucratic red tape.

— Payoffs ranging from daily $50 payments for employment permits to $40,000 for workups involving the wholesale forgery of official files and the issuance of "green cards" that indicate legal immigration and eligibility for work.

— Payoffs to destroy incriminating files.

Targets of the investigation include file clerks, inspectors in the travel documents section, deportation officers, detention section guards, contact representatives and clerks in the citizenship, alien and investigation sections.

New Judge Appointed To Racketeering Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man appointed to the federal bench today will take over a complex racketeering and extortion trial after the FBI's Brilab investigation uncovered a purported attempt to bribe the previous judge.

Terry J. Hatter Jr., 33, drew for his first assignment the trial of five reputed organized crime figures accused in connection with the slaying of a government informant.

Hatter, 46, replaces Judge Harry Pregerson, who withdrew from the case when an FBI probe uncovered a purported attempt by one of the five defendants to bribe Pregerson in exchange for a light sentence, if the defendant was convicted.

The discovery, announced Friday by the Justice Department, was a spinoff of an undercover operation looking into alleged insurance fraud involving union and political figures in four southern states.

Pregerson, now on the U.S. 9th District Circuit Court of Appeals, said he felt such revulsion when informed of the bribery charge that he could not in good conscience continue to sit on the case.

The Justice Department said that no contact was ever made between the defendant and judge, and nothing of value was ever transferred.

Hatter is a former aide to Mayor Tom Bradley and has been on the Los Angeles Superior Court since 1977.

He was selected to preside over the trial by the normal procedure of random drawing by a court clerk.

The FBI said it had tape-recorded conversations in which one of the defendants, Samuel Orlando Sciortino, said someone should offer Pregerson a $100,000 art object in return for no prison sentence. Sciortino's trial was scheduled to begin March 18.

Why dermaculture? Because DermaCulture is first and foremost a skin care company, not a cosmetic company. Our specialty is clean beautiful skin, regardless of age. A beautiful complexion is usually an achievement attained through care, not a gift.

Not only is a lovely skin important to you personally, but your complexion is the first thing other people notice. By the same token, an unlovely skin is the despair of everyone so afflicted.

Make-up preparations are undoubtedly glamour assets, but unless the pores are free of old creams, powder bases and daily accumulation of wastes, your skin cannot function normally.

A MUST for a clean and glowing complexion is a skin free from blackheads, whiteheads, and dead tissues which cling to the pores.

How does the DermaCulture Method Correct these skin problems?

1. By moisturizing vapor to open pores under an infra-red mask.
2. Gentle and thorough vacuuming of the face and neck.
3. A firming technique performed by trained operators using highly perfected equipment covered by U.S. patents.

Our good friend Richard L. Frey, chairman of the Goren Editorial Board and president of the International Bridge Press Association, is 75 years young today. He is well known as a prolific writer and editor. However, because of his journalistic activities, he seldom has had time to play in tournaments since World War II. Thus, people tend to forget that he was a member of the Four Aces, the first powerhouse team in contract bridge, and was Life Master No. 1, awarded by the American Contract Bridge League when the title was first instituted.

His play has much in common with his writing. It is neat, logical and cuts straight to the heart of the matter. Watch his technique at a four heart contract reached through no fault of his own. North's jump to three hearts with a balanced hand, no ruffing value and only three trumps leave something to be desired—three no trump was the standout bid.

West led a low diamond, and when dummy appeared it seemed that Frey would have to lose three tricks in the minor suits and, barring a miracle, a trump. But over the years, Frey has specialized in doing the impossible.

He won the ace of diamonds, cashed the two top spades and ruffed a spade. He crossed to dummy with the king of diamonds and led the last spade. Since it would not help East to ruff, he discarded a diamond and declarer was able to ruff safely. He then cashed the ace of clubs and exited with a club.

The defenders could take two club tricks and a diamond, and arrange for either East or West to be on lead at trick ten. But by simply playing for the queen and jack of trumps to be in different hands, declarer was able to avoid a trump loser. Actually, West won the third defensive trick and cleverly led the queen of hearts. But Frey wasn't taken in. He won with the king in dummy, then finessed East for the jack to fulfill his contract.

City Observes U.S. Jaycee-Ettes Week

Mayor Dirk West has proclaimed this week as 1980 United States Jaycee-Ette Week. Jaycee-Ettes reach out to citizens in over 4,200 communities in 51 states. An organization of over 60,000 women, the U.S. Jaycee-Ettes provide individual development and leadership training to women 18-35.

Nationally, Jaycee-Ettes actively support such programs as Project Concern, Walks for Mankind, Muscular Dystrophy, Governmental Affairs and Today's Woman. The Texas Jaycee-Ettes are active in Family Life Development, Criminal Justice, Special Olympics, March of Dimes and Child Abuse Operation Peace of Mind.

Texas Jaycee-Ettes have promoted community service for over 30 years and today have over 750 members. Lubbock Jaycee-Ettes actively participate in local projects including the annual Starving Artist Sale, Special Olympics, Multiple Sclerosis and Jaycee Campus.

Prospective members are invited to our next meeting Feb. 19. The program will be a motivational film by Zig Zigler. For further information call Cindy Ferguson at 795-5937.

Dear Abby,

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old woman who recently was hired for a civil service job at a local Air Force base. They gave me a physical, and a few days later I received a call from the medical center asking me to come back since they had something to talk to me about. I went, and was shocked when a nurse told me that my test for syphilis had come back positive!

I immediately called my boyfriend (I'll call him J) with whom I'd been living for nine months, and it really shook him up. I was a virgin when I met J and have been 100 percent faithful to him, so I figured I must have gotten it from him. He swore he had not been with anyone since we started living together, so if he had syphilis, he must have gotten it before he met me. I believe him, but was very upset anyway.

I took a blood test, and I took another one just to be sure. J's came back negative and mine was positive! We couldn't believe it, so we went to another lab and took the tests over again. Mine was positive again and J's was negative. We talked to the head doctor and he said there are only two ways to get syphilis: one is through birth and the other is by having sexual intercourse with someone who has it. Abby, if I had had it since birth it would have shown up before this, and I swear to God I was a virgin when I met J and I haven't even kissed another man since. How can this be?

If I do have syphilis, how come I didn't give it to J? We've been sleeping together for nine months. Now he's beginning to doubt that I was really a virgin when we met. The doctor thinks I'm lying too. Nobody believes me, Abby. Please tell me what to do.

ALL TORN UP

DEAR TORN: I believe you. It is entirely possible that you do not have syphilis, but that other factors are causing your tests to show a false positive reaction. Your experience is not unique. Don't panic.

Call your City Department of Health and ask them to recommend a physician (most probably a dermatologist) who specializes in venereal diseases. You will be given tests to rule out the false diagnosis of syphilis, and all those doubts will be laid to rest.

The couple plans to be married April 4 in Oakwood Baptist Church.

DEAR ABBY: The item about widows who bragged about their deceased husbands reminded me of the minister who announced to his congregation: "If anyone out there is perfect, please stand up."

One gentleman stood up. The minister asked, "Are you perfect?"

"No, sir," the gentleman replied. "I'm standing for my wife's first husband."

JACKSONVILLE READER

DEAR ABBY: When a person turns his empty wine glass upside down at the table, it does not mean he doesn't want any wine. It's an old Australian soldiers' custom which means, "I can lick any man in the house!"

Overton PTA will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday in the school cafeteria, 2902 Louisville Drive. The third and fourth grade classes will present a music program.

Allegro Music Club has awarded Tamara Camille Vance, a sophomore music major at Texas Tech University, a $200 scholarship. She will play a bass clarinet selection for the group at a club meeting April 9 at the Municipal Garden and Arts Center. While attending Coronado High School, Miss Vance was in All-Region band three years, the UIL solo contest three years, All-State symphonic band two years and outstanding girl musician at Coronado.

Community Hospital of Lubbock, 5301 University Ave., will offer free C.P.R. classes to the public, two nights a month, beginning March 11. You are required to complete six hours of instruction, so attendance of two three-hour classes is mandatory. The classes will be taught by Ali Poonawala, C.R.T.T. The first class will be held from 6-9 p.m. March 11 and March 13. Contact Jennie Moore at 795-9301, ext. 45.

SPC Begins Music Course

LEVELLAND (Special) — Kenny Rogers "The Gambler" touches a universal emotion.

Ray Stephens' material is humorous. The hit "Lovin', Touchin', Squeezin'" has a strong physical beat.

"Many different aspects go into the making of a potentially commercial song," says Dan Hanson, musician who will teach a six-week course in "Song Writing" beginning today at South Plains College.

"I've had numerous inquiries from both college students and the community on a course that would help them write lyrics and music to their own songs," explained Hanson, SPC music instructor since 1977. He has a bachelor's degree in music theory from Texas Tech University and will complete a master's degree in composition there this spring.

"I decided to present all this information in an organized class," he added. "Song Writing" will meet 7-9 p.m. Tuesdays through March 11 in the SPC Fine Arts Building, Rm. 10. Cost is $15.

One requirement is a basic knowledge of music. "People have to know the major scales and chords and be able to accompany themselves on an instrument," said Hanson.

Hanson will use a variety of records, from jazz to country to gospel and easy listening in teaching students to listen analytically to music. "We'll also look at the business side of music, how to copyright a song and the law that goes with it, music licensing and various licensing agencies, publishing and analysis of the pop charts. We'll study Billboard Magazine, for example, which lists the top 100 songs in several categories each month," he said.

"By the time we get through, I want the students to have a pinpointed knowledge of how to write a song, what to write and who to contact to get it published and on the song market."

Another goal will be to write five or six more songs, both words and music, during the course. "I hope they can produce imaginative lyrics, be able to set them to an appropriate style with colorful chord progressions and appealing rhythm," he said.

Hanson has composed about 50 songs and other pieces for band, orchestra and choir.

Persons wishing to register can contact the SPC Continuing Education Division at 894-9611 or sign up at the first class meeting.

New Mexico Sees Population Rise

LAS CRUCES (Special) — "Economic growth is not the only driving force in recent migration patterns to the West, especially for New Mexico," says Robert Coppedge, Extension economist at New Mexico State University.

"Economic factors, such as energy, will continue to move development towards New Mexico. However, these developments are not the sole cause of growth."

Some people come to New Mexico for noneconomic reasons, the NMSU specialist says. They hope to find employment, but may not have a firm job prospect.

"In many cases they expect to receive a lower salary," Coppedge says. The lower salaries are acceptable in their quest for a better life. "This says something about the state's appeal."

Changing value systems in the world, and especially in many parts of the United States, underlie many of the shifting migration patterns toward rural areas and toward the West, Coppedge says. The desire or the need to reduce consumption, to live a simpler life, to enjoy life, is on the mind of many people even in the middle class.

Many businessmen, especially small businessmen, are also considering noneconomic factors when selecting business sites. This has always been true to a small degree, but the importance of non-profit considerations seems to be growing.

Coppedge says, "Our development strategy at state and local levels should take these new factors into consideration. It is always hard to change. But our society as well as our economy is changing and we will fare better if we anticipate some of the changes."

Disabled Offered Computer Program

By GEORGENE KALEINA

BALTIMORE (AP) — For 34 years, Robert Penn's world was confined to the four walls of his bedroom. He spent a lot of time "doing nothing."

Besides occasional trips to the hospital, "where I met nurses and patients," his contact with people was limited to family members and a few friends.

But life for the Wilmington, Del., man is suddenly "interesting," a word the 54-year-old Penn never used to describe his life before.

And he has the Maryland Rehabilitation Center — particularly its Computer Programming Training for the Severely Disabled course — to thank.

Penn, like 13 other students in the course, will graduate after nine months of extensive training in the computer programming field.

But unlike the average student, these persons are severely disabled; many are in wheelchairs. Most spent their time before enrolling in the class "doing nothing."

"It's like coming back into the world after solitary confinement," said Penn, who at the age of 18 suffered crippling arthritis, a disease that has left him stiff from the head to his waist and from his hips to his ankles. He is also unable to move his head.

Energy Awareness Topic Of Meeting

West Texas Home Economists in Business will present an "energy awareness" program featuring current information on today's energy problems and issues at 2 p.m. Friday in the Lubbock Women's Club, 2020 Broadway.

Featured speaker will be Tiny Batts of Texas Electric Service Company, current state chairman of AWARE, a Texas organization formed to present information on energy and energy sources to the public.

All interested persons are invited to attend the meeting which will focus on alternate sources of energy, planning for the future and the public role in energy issues.

AWARE, is affiliated with NEW, Nuclear Energy Women, a nation-wide organization of persons who are concerned about the energy situation. Their goal is to present educational, realistic and factual information on this country's energy and energy resources and their commercial availability.

For most of his adult life, Penn had to lay flat in a bed "in one room, only getting out once in awhile."

After spending almost a year in the hospital, where he had artificial hips implanted, Penn was accepted into the program and lives at the center during the week, returning to Wilmington on weekends.

"It's good to be meeting people," said Penn, who maneuvers his wheelchair expertly past the computer terminals. "It's interesting."

But Penn, who is able to walk with the help of crutches, is especially excited about the prospect of being financially self-supporting, something he hasn't known since he was a young man. He has also learned how to drive again.

Bill Montgomery, manager of the center, says Penn has gone from being totally dependent to taking care of himself.

All the students in the class have discovered new worlds opening up for them, Montgomery said.

"Computer programming does not require a great deal of physical activity," Montgomery said, "so it's an opportunity for the severely handicapped."

The project, a cooperative venture between the rehabilitation center and the Johns Hopkins University, opened in April 1979 with 17 trainees.

The students, ranging in age from 20 to 54, were referred to the center by vocational rehabilitation counselors in Maryland and Delaware.

They must be certified severely disabled: have a high school diploma or the equivalent; have a reading comprehension level of high school and score in the 30th percentile on a computer aptitude test, Montgomery said.

When the students finish the course, they will receive a joint certificate of achievement from the center and Johns Hopkins.

CRAB BISQUE
Combine 1 can condensed cream of shrimp soup, 3/4 cup half and half, 1/4 cup tomato juice and 1/4 teaspoon dill weed. Bring to simmer. Add 1 cup sliced Alaska King crab and 1 tablespoon sherry. Heat gently. Makes 2-3 servings.

The trainees learn about the history of computers and different types of computer systems. They also get on-the-job experience during a month-long, work-study internship with businesses in the Baltimore area.

It costs about $2,500 a year for a day student in the class, while those who need room and board pay $9,000, Montgomery said. But the state and federal governments pick up the tabs on the costs because the trainees — most of whom have never worked before — do not have money available, he added.

"One of the basic keys to the success of the program is the involvement of an industry advisory board," Montgomery said.

The board, made up of members from the business community, aids the program in course planning, provides guest lecturers, allows the students into the businesses for field trips and helps in the placement of the graduates in jobs.

Library Presents Valentine Exhibit

Antique valentines collected throughout the 20th century are currently on display at Lubbock City-County Library.

Some of the valentines shown are over 75 years old. Many are elaborate stand-up cards with cupids, flowers and sentimental verses, while others are simple postcards with humorous pictures or sayings.

The largest valentine in the collection was sent in 1904. Over 12 inches tall and wide, it is made of celluloid and decorated with hand-painted pink roses.

Each decade of the century produced distinctive types of valentines. Those made in the Thirties show Kewpie-like characters while those of the Forties are more romantic. By the Fifties and Sixties, the cards were much simpler.

The valentines will remain on display during the entire month of February. Lubbock City-County Library is located at 1306 9th St. and is open from 9 a.m. — 9 p.m. Mon.-Thurs. and from 9 a.m. — 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

GRAIN FUTURES
CHICAGO (AP) — Early commercial buying in corn set the tone for mostly higher corn, oats and soybean futures prices Monday, but speculative interest in wheat pushed futures sharply higher.

Traders said one prominent local broker bought about 2 million bushels of wheat in a back contract month that helped propel prices higher.

Trading volume in nearly all the agricultural commodities was light, described by one trader like this: "Watching paint dry on the wall would be more interesting."

Soybean activity was overshadowed by a report due out at the close of trading on Brazilian soybean production. Estimates are that the crop will total about 15 million to 15.5 million metric tons. Traders say any higher figure would be a surprise and could have an adverse impact on futures prices.

Good local trade that started when futures prices upward was aided when some computer-triggered buy orders were hit as prices climbed.

Trade in wheat last week was thin. At the close, soybeans were 1/4 cent lower to 3/4 cents higher, March $6.75; wheat was 5 to 8 1/2 cents higher, March $4.63 1/4; corn was 1 to 2 cents higher, March $2.76; and oats were unchanged to 1/4 cent higher.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U.S. Department of Agriculture

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was moderate on Monday. Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate and demand was good.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations were steady to 200 points higher.

The base price of grade 41, staple 3 1/4, 3/16 to 3/8, up 150 points from one week ago. Grade 42, staple 3 1/4, 3/16 to 3/8, up 150 points from one week ago.

Growers sold 100,000 bales, 1,500 to 1,750 points over 1979 low rates. Mixes 2-2-2 brought 1-175 to 1,275 points over 1979 low rates.

High Plains Agricultural Marketing Services graded 9,400 samples Friday. This brought the season's total to 2,320,000 samples. About 7,000 samples were carried over unclassified.

Soames Assumes Vote Control

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — British colonial governor Lord Soames today assumed powers to cancel independence elections in any part of Rhodesia because of growing political violence and intimidation.

Official sources said Soames presented his order to the British Election Commission supervising Rhodesia's return to legal independence and that it would be published as an ordinance.

The sources said the order gives Soames power to disenfranchise any voting area in the country where he feels intimidation by one or more parties threatens a free and fair election.

The ordinance will become part of the "armory of powers" Soames can use in an effort to stamp out political intimidation, the sources said.

The British have accused guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe's party of responsibility for the most serious intimidation in the country, affecting five of Rhodesia's eight election districts.

Mugabe had previously charged that Soames' policies were to blame for recent attempts on his life.

British sources said Soames had called a special meeting with Mugabe to discuss the charges and threats by the guerrilla leader that he will send his men back to war if Soames does not control the Rhodesian security forces and their auxiliaries.

Under the cease-fire agreement that came into effect Jan. 4, Soames has given the Rhodesian army and the auxiliaries — the private army of former Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa — free reign to stamp out violence in the country.

Mugabe blamed the auxiliaries, now incorporated into the regular Rhodesian forces, for planting the remote-controlled bomb that injured five of his aides and narrowly missed killing him Sunday.

Mugabe indirectly blamed Soames for the attack because the forces were "working under the governor's general orders."

"We say the governor is responsible for these attacks because he chose to deploy these forces," Mugabe said. "We are not satisfied with condemnation. He has to check them by barracking them."

For his part, Muzorewa said that he had given up hope the elections would ever be free from intimidation and violence. Muzorewa said he has stopped reporting election violations against his party because "it is simply no use."

At a news conference Monday, Mugabe said he would demand that Soames order the auxiliaries confined to bases or he would tell his guerrillas in the 14 cease-fire assembly points to go back to the bush.

But he said this was not an ultimatum and would not set a deadline for Soames to meet the demands. Instead, Mugabe said he would choose an appropriate time to order his men out of the camps and back to war.

Mugabe also criticized Soames for the banning of a top party official from actively campaigning for the February elections.

On Sunday Soames banned Mugabe party treasurer Enos Nkala from campaigning and accused him of making inflammatory statements and encouraging violence and intimidation of voters. Nkala will be permitted to remain on the ballot as a candidate from Mashonaland East.

British sources have said the Nkala ban was intended as a "warning shot" to Mugabe to order his supporters to cease violent intimidation of voters. Most of the pre-election violence has been blamed on Mugabe's party.

In London, British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington has shown his concern about the situation by consulting daily with Soames.

Terrorists Take Responsibility For Slaying Of Italian Official

ROME (AP) — Two unmasked assailants firing pistols killed one of Italy's top magistrates in an ambush today at Rome University where a debate on terrorism was about to begin, police said. A telephone caller later said the Red Brigades were responsible for the shooting.

Prof. Vittorio Bachelet, vice president of the Superior Council of Magistrates and who has close ties to the Vatican, was gunned down at point-blank range on a staircase of the political science department.

Two hours later a man called the newspaper of the Italian Socialist Party and said the attack had been carried out by the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist group.

Police sources also reported the words "Long Live the Red Brigades" were painted in black on a wall near the ambush site.

Witnesses told police a young man and woman fired nine shots at Bachelet, then fled the campus on foot to a car parked outside the main gate. They said a third person was waiting behind the wheel of the beige getaway car.

Police closed the campus gates after the attack.

Bachelet, 54, was a law professor at the university. He was former president of the Italian Catholic Action, a powerful lay organization, and served as a consultant to several Vatican committees. He had known Pope John Paul II when the pontiff was a cardinal from Krakow, Poland.

In Italy, however, gasoline consumption climbed 8 percent from the 1978 level despite the price increases. U.S. gasoline use fell 5 percent in the same period.

The average price of a gallon of regular gasoline at a full-service U.S. station was $1.13 in January, up from 68.42 cents a year before, according to the Lundberg Letter, a publication that covers the industry.

In many areas prices are expected to continue to climb as the new Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries price boosts that hit in late January and early February work their way down to the pump.

Those increases will hurt poorer countries especially. In Kenya, where the World Bank estimates annual per-capita income at $270, the price of a gallon of premium gasoline has risen to $2.16 a gallon from $1.57 at the end of 1978.

But motorists aren't paying more everywhere. Big gas clog streets and highways in Venezuela, OPEC's fourth-largest member, where the price of premium has remained at just 30.8 cents a gallon over the past year.

A traveler who visited Saudi Arabia this month said he oil cartel's largest producer has even cheaper fuel: High-test at 29 cents a gallon.

In Mexico, another major producer, the state oil monopoly has frozen the price of gasoline at 46 cents a gallon for regular and 65.4 cents for premium since November 1976.

And in Canada, where controlled domestic crude oil prices are 60 percent below the world level, drivers pay 81 cents a gallon for regular gasoline, up from 71 cents a year before.

In many countries, high gasoline prices are due not only to rising crude oil prices but to high taxes as well.

School May Ban Steinbeck Book

KANAWHA, Iowa (UPI) — The Kanawha School board is considering banning John Steinbeck's classic, "The Grapes of Wrath."

School officials will meet this week to decide whether to allow a 10th grade English teacher to use the book, which contains language that some parents have complained about.

The book tells the story of poor white Oklahomans, uprooted from their land during the Great Depression of the 1930s. The tenant Oklahoma farmers packed up their meager belongings and moved to California where many found jobs picking vegetables in the fields.

HAWAII ANNEKED IN 1898

The United States annexed Hawaii in 1898, after being requested to do so by the island republic. The U.S. had leased the naval base at Pearl Harbor since 1884. The island succeeded in its long campaign for statehood in 1950 to become the 50th state of the union. Hawaii is the first overseas and second non-contiguous state.

HELLO, THERE — Pope John Paul II holds a baby in his arms as he meets the residents of Casal Palocco, a new middle-class residential area on the southern edge of Rome. The pope addressed some 3,000 people gathered around a square. Casal Palocco, located 20 kilometers (12.5 miles) from the heart of Rome, was developed during the 1960s. Nearly 3,000 of the area's 18,000 residents are foreigners, mostly members of international organizations and diplomats. (AP Laserphoto)

Price Of Gasoline Climbing Worldwide

By The Associated Press

The next time you pump $1.20-a-gallon gasoline into your car — and think longingly back to last year when it was half as much — consider the poor motorists in other countries. You could have it worse.

You could be driving in Bulgaria, where the price of a gallon of regular gasoline doubled to $4.32 last year, or in Italy, where a gallon of high-test would set you back $3.02, up 71 cents in a year.

An Associated Press worldwide survey, conducted in late January, found that gasoline prices in most countries jumped as the world price of crude oil doubled to nearly $30 a barrel over the past year.

In Hong Kong, gasoline climbed to $1.72 from $1.12, prompting one wealthy factory owner to forsake his luxury Mercedes-Benz and Continental cars for a compact Honda.

Israeli schoolteacher Shlomo Eidan said a 53 percent increase in gasoline prices over the past year has meant "there's no way I can afford to drive my car to work instead of taking the bus" for his daily 24-mile round-trip commute.

"We take the car only if we have a lot of shopping or for trips, which are very infrequent these days," Eidan said. Israeli gasoline prices have risen to $2.60 a gallon from $1.70 a year ago.

In Denmark, bus use in metropolitan Copenhagen jumped 10 percent as the price of a gallon of gasoline climbed to $2.55 from $1.45 a year ago. Even in oil-rich Britain, gasoline now costs $2.34 a gallon, up from $1.64 a year ago.

A survey by the Greater London Council said the price rise apparently has spurred a drop in the number of cars entering the British capital, a 2 percent weekday decline and 4 percent on weekends.

"We might use the car once a month over the weekends now," a British housewife told the AP. "A year ago, it was every weekend, and now I think twice about driving to the supermarket in London on weekdays."

In Italy, however, gasoline consumption climbed 8 percent from the 1978 level despite the price increases. U.S. gasoline use fell 5 percent in the same period.

The average price of a gallon of regular gasoline at a full-service U.S. station was $1.13 in January, up from 68.42 cents a year before, according to the Lundberg Letter, a publication that covers the industry.

In many areas prices are expected to continue to climb as the new Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries price boosts that hit in late January and early February work their way down to the pump.

Those increases will hurt poorer countries especially. In Kenya, where the World Bank estimates annual per-capita income at $270, the price of a gallon of premium gasoline has risen to $2.16 a gallon from $1.57 at the end of 1978.

But motorists aren't paying more everywhere. Big gas clog streets and highways in Venezuela, OPEC's fourth-largest member, where the price of premium has remained at just 30.8 cents a gallon over the past year.

A traveler who visited Saudi Arabia this month said he oil cartel's largest producer has even cheaper fuel: High-test at 29 cents a gallon.

In Mexico, another major producer, the state oil monopoly has frozen the price of gasoline at 46 cents a gallon for regular and 65.4 cents for premium since November 1976.

And in Canada, where controlled domestic crude oil prices are 60 percent below the world level, drivers pay 81 cents a gallon for regular gasoline, up from 71 cents a year before.

In many countries, high gasoline prices are due not only to rising crude oil prices but to high taxes as well.

Tech's Reaction Surprises Education Official

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff
AUSTIN — A state higher education official said Monday she had "no intention to slur Tech" when she remarked that Texas Tech and other state universities are not quality institutions, but she also did not back down from her original comments.

Beryl Milburn, chairman of the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board which regulates public higher education in the state, called Friday's criticism of her by Texas Tech regents "so ungrateful after I'd been out there."

She visited the Tech campus Jan. 21 along with Gov. Bill Clements.

Mrs. Milburn said she was "surprised" at the Tech board's reaction, adding that she had "no intention to slur Tech or any other institution."

"Texas Tech regents took it (her comments on quality institutions) so personally," she said, adding, "I think people took exception to what I said."

In a recent interview with the Associated Press, Mrs. Milburn was asked how Texas state-supported colleges rank nationally. She was quoted as replying, "I don't think Texas has a single (state-supported) institution that ranks in the first 10. UT-Austin might be in the first

20. A&M is getting better and better and competing with UT-Austin, but as for the others, I don't think they approach quality."

It was the latter remark that offended Tech regents, but in an interview with The Avalanche-Journal in her Austin office, Mrs. Milburn stressed that her comments were made in the context of national ranking. She reiterated that, with the possible exception of UT-Austin and

A&M, "I think, in terms of national ranking, all the other (state-supported) institutions fall short."

However, she credited Texas Tech with being one of the top research institutions in the state and praised the administration and board of regents "for taking all the steps I think are important," which she said included tightening budgets and setting priorities.

She also was aware of many Tech programs and named the Textile Research Center as one of Tech's quality areas, saying it has a great impact on cotton farmers.

Mrs. Milburn also was chastised by Tech regents for her opposition to a new music building at Tech, a project she calls unnecessary.

Mrs. Milburn also was chastised by Tech regents for her opposition to a new music building at Tech, a project she calls unnecessary.

A decision on the building was tabled at the Coordinating Board's January meeting, but the project is due to be reviewed in April. When asked about the building's prospects, Mrs. Milburn said her opposition stemmed from considerations of energy costs and space utilization.

Based on 1979 energy costs, she estimated that heating and cooling state institutions of higher education will cost the state $1 billion in the coming decade. "When an institution builds, initial cost of building is just one factor," she said, naming heating, cooling, maintenance and custodial costs as others.

Mrs. Milburn suggested at the January meeting that Tech renovate existing space, such as former dormitory McClellan Hall, for music facilities.

Tech officials argue that heating and cooling an old building costs more than heating and cooling a new building and, Mrs. Milburn agreed.

Officers Seeking Changes At Penitentiary

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico State Penitentiary guards say they are organizing to work for changes in the prison, the scene of a bloody revolt that claimed 33 lives.

About 20 corrections officers, along with relatives, picketed the state Capitol Monday. "No more hostages, more staff" and "Our families deserve a fair shake — we want our husbands alive" were among the slogans painted on signs carried by the protesters.

John Byers, a guard, said the officers are banding together to "gain input into the correctional system."

He said some prison employees have been told to "resign or be fired" because they have tried to organize.

Warden Jerry Griffin denied the allegation.

Gov. Bruce King met with some of the officers after the demonstration.

About 40 other demonstrators representing the Santa Fe Ministerial Alliance, the Coalition for Prisoners' Rights and other groups also picketed the Capitol.

The Ministerial Alliance, which is composed of pastors from about 20 churches, urged King to appoint a special commission to "analyze the causes of the prison tragedy and to insure that the factors which caused the catastrophe are eliminated."

Convicts took 14 guards hostage when they seized the prison early Feb. 2. Several of the guards were injured, but none was killed. Officials say all 33 of the inmates who died were murdered.

The prisoners released most of the hostages before National Guardsmen and a Special Weapons team regained control of the prison, without firing a shot, 36 hours after the inmates took over.

Griffin said late Monday the relocation of prisoners to other states was complete.

"We sent a total of 482 out of state and we have 538 remaining here now," he said. "At the present time we are not planning to take any more out of state. There may be some minor changes, but no more mass movement of prisoners."

He said inmates are being housed in three of the least damaged cellblocks and five of the dormitories.

"We have not yet been able to put back together two cellblocks and two dormitories," he said.

GRAFFITI Ex-Bartender Named In Dancer's Murder

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Victor Manuel Montalvo, a bartender at one of the clubs where Marcella Valenzuela worked, is the man authorities say killed the young night club performer four years ago.

Thursday, Montalvo was named in a sealed indictment which accuses him of strangling Miss Valenzuela with a towel. The 20-year-old woman was last seen alive the early morning of New Year's Day 1976.

On Jan. 5, 1976, police found her partially clad and decomposed body in the bathtub of her small apartment near Texas Tech University. Authorities estimated she had been dead three to five days.

When the murder indictment against the 32-year-old Montalvo was returned by a 140th District Court grand jury last week, the panel asked that it remained sealed, or secret, until Montalvo was apprehended by lawmen.

Monday afternoon Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford released the suspect's name, although Montalvo still is free.

Montford said officials have no leads on Montalvo's whereabouts, but another person with the prosecutor's office said that it is believed Montalvo, whose last known address was in Littlefield, still is in Texas.

Montalvo is described as about 5-foot-9, weighing between 135 and 140 pounds and dark complexioned.

His indictment last week was the result of an almost seven-month investigation into Miss Valenzuela's death which began after police received new information on the case from a Crime Line caller.

Earlier investigations into Miss Valenzuela's slaying, the oldest case to date to be triggered by a Crime Line tip, had been stymied by the decomposition of her body and resultant inability to pinpoint the cause of her death.

Depositions Slated In School Case

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff
The Justice Department will take depositions this week from three city residents in preparation for the conclusion of the city public school desegregation hearing which is expected to focus on the development of northeast Lubbock.

Schools attorney Tom Johnson said Monday that depositions will be taken Thursday from Orville Alderson, director of the Urban Renewal Agency here, and from Jim Bertram, director of planning for the city.

A deposition will be taken Friday from Maxine McCormick, a former Urban Renewal employee.

Johnson said Mrs. McCormick will not be present in Judge Halbert O. Woodward's court for the hearing on Feb. 22, but she does not know whether the other two will be called as witnesses.

He also said he does not know yet whether the school district will call any rebuttal witnesses.

Government attorneys previously took depositions from Alderson and Bertram prior to the 1977 desegregation hearing that resulted in a partial integration plan in the district.

Alderson said Monday he does not know what the government attorneys plan to ask him this time and Mrs. McCormick said she would not comment.

But Johnson said their deposition testimony probably will concern information on the development of northeast Lubbock as was requested by Judge Woodward when he called for a delay on Jan. 31 in the final stage of the federal court trial.

Woodward called for a postponement of the second federal court hearing that began Jan. 28 when he learned that a Justice Department witness had been in the courtroom to hear testimony he was to rebut.

Harry Stokley Jr., a member of the Planning and Zoning Commission, was expected to testify on the development of northeast Lubbock, and particularly the Cherry Point housing division as a minority area, including any effects school board actions may have had on the development.

But Stokley was in the courtroom earlier in the week and heard school district witness Dr. E.C. Leslie's testimony on the subject.

Under a sequestration rule invoked by attorneys for both sides, all witnesses, except expert witnesses, were prohibited from listening to prior testimony in the trial.

Woodward told attorneys that since the information concerning Cherry Point is "very important and critical" to this case, he would allow government attorneys to locate a new witness to testify in that regard.

Woodward said, "I'm hopeful the government can come up with someone else to testify to the facts."

The case was heard again by Woodward after it was remanded by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in August. The appeals court ordered Woodward to determine whether deliberately discriminatory school board acts affected housing patterns, thus preserving segregation in the district.

Bids To Be Taken On Lubbock Project

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation will take bids March 11-12 on four Lubbock area highway projects totaling more than $21.7 million, including a $19.87 million project in Hale County.

The highway department will take bids March 11 on proposed improvements to Interstate Highway 27 in Hale County.

The work on the Hale project covers 5.11 miles of IH 27 from Hale Center to Loop 445 south of Plainview and from north of Hale Center to south of Loop 445.

It will include work on grading, structures, base, flexible base, asphalt stabilized base, asphaltic concrete pavement, safety lighting, signs, pavement marking, lining and guard fence.

Completion time for the project is estimated at 350 working days.

The highway department also will take bids March 11 on proposed improvements to FM 3385 in Crosby County.

The highway department plans to work on grading, drainage structures, flexible base and two-course surface treatment on 3.54 miles of FM 3385 from FM 2794 south to FM 261.

Estimated cost of the project is $910,998 and completion time is estimated at 175 working days.

The highway department will take bids March 12 on proposed improvements to FM 400 in Hale County.

The highway department plans to reconstruct grading, salvage and replace base, salvage and stockpile base and work on asphalt stabilized base and asphaltic concrete pavement.

The project will include .92 mile of FM 400 from U.S. 70 to 6th Street in Plainview.

Estimated cost of the project is $406,183 and completion time is estimated at 80 working days.

The highway department also will take bids March 12 on proposed improvements to FM 3300 in Swisher and Briscoe counties.

The highway department plans to work on grading, structures, base and surfacing on 5.93 miles off FM 330 from FM 2301 four miles south of FM 146 in Swisher County east to the Briscoe County line and from FM 330 to the Swisher County line four miles south of FM 146 south to State Highway 207.

Official Aims Concern On Prison Bill

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — The New Mexico Legislature may be reacting without thinking by deciding soon to reconstruct the state penitentiary devastated in the worst prison riot since Attica, a community leader said today.

"Personally I am concerned that perhaps we are reacting in shock, almost," City Councilwoman Dora Battle said.

Her view, shared by other citizens and some legislators, was a response to quick action by the House following the Feb. 2-3 riot which left 33 inmates dead and 89 people injured.

That chamber Sunday unanimously approved appropriating $82.5 million to pay for costs associated with the riot and for construction of a new 500-bed maximum security prison.

"It seems to me the state has a chance — for the wrong reasons, of course — to install perhaps one of the most progressive penal systems in the nation," Mrs. Battle said. "I would like to see us take whatever steps necessary to achieve that end, and I don't think we can do it in seven days."

She said she had no objections to some provisions of the bill which had been well thought out previously, but she was "very concerned if they make a major decision with respect to reconstruction of the penitentiary a few days after it burned down."

Judge Permits Moving Of Maternity Services

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Moving maternity services from an aging downtown hospital to the Bexar County Hospital 11 miles away will not discriminate against poor blacks and Mexican-Americans who rely on the downtown facility, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears made the ruling Monday after a three-week trial of a U.S. Justice Department suit aimed at preventing the relocation from Robert B. Green Hospital. Bexar County Hospital is located on the city's northwest fringe.

Spears said the better facilities and equipment available at Bexar County Hospital outweighed the inconvenience the poor patients would suffer after the move.

"It is patently obvious from the evidence that far better facilities and equipment exist at the Bexar County Hospital than at the Green, thus enabling the Bexar County Hospital to provide a much higher quality of health care," he said.

Attorneys for the Justice Department said they would not decide on an appeal until after reviewing Spears' ruling.

More than 6,000 infants are born each year at the Green maternity facility, evidence showed. Mexican-Americans mothers who live south and west of downtown accounted for 80 percent of those admissions, according to testimony.

Prenatal, post-natal and pediatric care will remain at the downtown facility.

Justice Department and Bexar County Legal Aid attorneys argued that the move removes the services from the people who need them most. They also argued that the poor mothers often do not have the transportation to get to the county hospital, and might be forced to turn to midwives.

Coast Guard Searching For Fisherman's Body

SEADRIFT (AP) — Coast Guard officers ordered a helicopter search of San Antonio Bay today, hoping to find the body of local crab fisherman Dale Hall.

His wife, Josephine Aplin Hall — sister of a local fisherman killed at the height of last summer's conflicts with Vietnamese immigrants — was found dead in the water Monday, apparently drowned, the Coast Guard said.

The Halls had been reported missing during the weekend when they failed to return from a crab fishing trip, said Police Chief Bill Lindsey.

Bond Set For Amarillo Suspect

AMARILLO (UPI) — A cash bond of $5,000 has been set for a man accused of attempting to hire an undercover detective to kill his wife.

Alvin C. Bicknell, 46, was arraigned Monday on a charge of criminal solicitation to commit capital murder and released after posting the cash bond, Randall County Justice of the Peace E. Jay Hail said.

Bicknell was arrested last Friday after he allegedly agreed to pay an undercover Amarillo detective, who posed as a hitman, $20,000 to kill his estranged wife, Patsy.

Police said detective James Smith received a $2,000 payment from Bicknell and under the terms of an agreement was to have received another $18,000 when the job was finished.

Authorities entered the case last week after receiving a tip that Bicknell had approached several people trying to find someone willing who would agree to kill his wife for money. Police reportedly taped telephone conversations between Bicknell and those he solicited.

Last Friday, detective Smith arranged two meetings, one at an Amarillo bar and a second at Bicknell's home, authorities

"I don't think they could have lasted long in that water," said Lindsey. "It was terribly, terribly cold. (The boat was) in an area where they'd been dredging for shell for years and there are holes 50 to 60 feet out there."

Mrs. Hall's brother, Bly Joe Aplin, 35, was shot to death last August, climaxing violent confrontations between Anglo and Vietnamese crabbers here.

Two Vietnamese brothers, Nguyen Van Sau, 21, and Nguyen Van Chinh, 20, were acquitted in Aplin's death. Testimony indicated Aplin beat them moments before the shooting.

Earlier in the summer, long-standing tension between the two factions erupted into violence, with houses firebombed and boats set afire. The local fishermen claimed the immigrants violated unwritten crabbing laws and placed their traps too close to those of other fishermen.

The violent retribution that followed Aplin's death, including the sudden appearance of Ku Klux Klan members, forced city officials to enforce nightly curfews in August.

Tech's Reaction Surprises Education Official

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff
AUSTIN — A state higher education official said Monday she had "no intention to slur Tech" when she remarked that Texas Tech and other state universities are not quality institutions, but she also did not back down from her original comments.

Beryl Milburn, chairman of the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board which regulates public higher education in the state, called Friday's criticism of her by Texas Tech regents "so ungrateful after I'd been out there."

She visited the Tech campus Jan. 21 along with Gov. Bill Clements.

Mrs. Milburn said she was "surprised" at the Tech board's reaction, adding that she had "no intention to slur Tech or any other institution."

"Texas Tech regents took it (her comments on quality institutions) so personally," she said, noting, "I think people took exception to what I said."

In a recent interview with the Associated Press, Mrs. Milburn was asked how Texas state-supported colleges rank nationally. She was quoted as replying, "I don't think Texas has a single (state-supported) institution that ranks in the first 10. UT-Austin might be in the first

20. A&M is getting better and better and competing with UT-Austin, but as for the others, I don't think they approach quality."

However, she credited Texas Tech with being one of the top research institutions in the state and praised the administration and board of regents "for taking all the steps I think are important," which she said included tightening budgets and setting priorities.

She also was aware of many Tech programs and named the Textile Research Center as one of Tech's quality areas, saying it has a great impact on cotton farmers.

Mrs. Milburn also was chastised by Tech regents for her opposition to a new music building at Tech, a project she calls unnecessary.

A decision on the building was tabled at the Coordinating Board's January meeting, but the project is due to be reviewed in April. When asked about the building's prospects, Mrs. Milburn said her opposition stemmed from considerations of energy costs and space utilization.

Based on 1979 energy costs, she estimated that heating and cooling state institutions of higher education will cost the state $1 billion in the coming decade. "When an institution builds, initial cost of building is just one factor," she said, naming heating, cooling, maintenance and custodial costs as others.

Mrs. Milburn suggested at the January meeting that Tech renovate existing space, such as former dormitory McClellan Hall, for music facilities.

Tech officials argue that heating and cooling an old building costs more than heating and cooling a new building and Mrs. Milburn agreed.

Coordinating board member Marshall Formby, a Tech graduate and uncle of a Tech regent, supported the music building proposal at the January Coordinating Board meeting, saying that a music building is different from other construction requests, because colleges can't put drums next door to an English classroom or horns in the math department.

Mrs. Milburn said she recognizes that "music education has a need for slightly different space requirements than others."

But Mrs. Milburn, who has a banking background, said she and other board members feel a responsibility to the state to now allow any unnecessary construction. Her recommendation in January that Texas Tech renovate existing space was based in part on statistics which show Tech has more space than the state average.

"Does greatness require a great big new building?" she asked. "It's the taxpayer footing the bill."

Officers Seeking Changes At Penitentiary

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico State Penitentiary guards say they are organizing to work for changes in the prison, the scene of a bloody revolt that claimed 33 lives.

About 20 corrections officers, along with relatives, picketed the state Capitol Monday. "No more hostages, more staff" and "Our families deserve a fair shake — we want our husbands alive" were among the slogans painted on signs carried by the protesters.

John Byers, a guard, said the officers are banding together to "gain input into the correctional system."

He said some prison employees have been told to "resign or be fired" because they have tried to organize.

Warden Jerry Griffin denied the allegation.

Gov. Bruce King met with some of the officers after the demonstration.

About 40 other demonstrators representing the Santa Fe Ministerial Alliance, the Coalition for Prisoners' Rights and other groups also picketed the Capitol.

The Ministerial Alliance, which is composed of pastors from about 20 churches, urged King to appoint a special commission to "analyze the causes of the prison tragedy and to insure that the factors which caused the catastrophe are eliminated."

Convicts took 14 guards hostage when they seized the prison early Feb. 2. Several of the guards were injured, but none was killed. Officials say all 33 of the inmates who died were murdered.

The prisoners released most of the hostages before National Guardsmen and a Special Weapons team regained control of the prison, without firing a shot, 36 hours after the inmates took over.

Griffin said late Monday the relocation of prisoners to other states was complete.

"We sent a total of 482 out of state and we have 538 remaining here now," he said. "At the present time we are not planning to take any more out of state. There may be some minor changes, but no more mass movement of prisoners."

He said inmates are being housed in three of the least damaged cellblocks and five of the dormitories.

"We have not yet been able to put back together two cellblocks and two dormitories," he said.

Monday afternoon Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford released the suspect's name, although Montalvo still is free.

Montford said officials have no leads on Montalvo's whereabouts, but another person with the prosecutor's office said that it is believed Montalvo, whose last known address was in Littlefield, still is in Texas.

Montalvo is described as about 5-foot-9, weighing between 135 and 140 pounds and dark complexioned.

His indictment last week was the result of an almost seven-month reinvestigation into Miss Valenzuela's death which began after police received new information on the case from a Crime Line caller.

Earlier investigations in Miss Valenzuela's slaying, the oldest case to date to be triggered by a CrimeLine tip, had been stymied by the decomposition of her body and resultant inability to pinpoint the cause of her death.

Ex-Bartender Named In Dancer's Murder

Victor Manuel Montalvo, a bartender at one of the clubs where Marcella Valenzuela worked, is the man authorities say killed the young night club performer four years ago.

Thursday, Montalvo was named in a sealed indictment which accuses him of strangling Miss Valenzuela with a towel. The 20-year-old woman was last seen alive the early morning of New Year's Day 1976.

On Jan. 5, 1976, police found her partially clad and decomposed body in the bathtub of her small apartment near Texas Tech University. Authorities estimated she had been dead three to five days.

When the murder indictment against the 32-year-old Montalvo was returned by a 140th District Court grand jury last week, the panel asked that it remained sealed, or secret, until Montalvo was apprehended by lawmen.

Bids To Be Taken On Lubbock Project

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation will take bids March 11-12 on four Lubbock area highway projects totaling more than $21.7 million, including a $19.87 million project in Hale County.

The highway department will take bids March 11 on proposed improvements to Interstate Highway 27 in Hale County.

The work on the Hale project covers 5.11 miles of IH 27 from Hale Center to Loop 445 south of Plainview and from north of Hale Center to south of Loop 445.

It will include work on grading, structures, base, flexible base, asphalt stabilized base, asphaltic concrete pavement, safety lighting, signs, pavement marking, lining and guard fence.

Completion time for the project is estimated at 350 working days.

The highway department also will take bids March 11 on proposed improvements to FM 3385 in Crosby County.

The highway department plans to work on grading, drainage structures, flexible base and two-course surface treatment on 3.54 miles of FM 3385 from FM 2794 south to FM 261.

Estimated cost of the project is $910,998 and completion time is estimated at 175 working days.

The highway department will take bids March 12 on proposed improvements to FM 400 in Hale County.

The highway department plans to reconstruct grading, salvage and replace base, salvage and stockpile base and work on asphalt stabilized base and asphaltic concrete pavement.

The project will include .92 mile of FM 400 from U.S. 70 to 6th Street in Plainview.

Estimated cost of the project is $406,183 and completion time is estimated at 80 working days.

The highway department also will take bids March 12 on proposed improvements to FM 3300 in Swisher and Briscoe counties.

The highway department plans to work on grading, structures, base and surfacing on 5.93 miles of FM 330 from FM 2301 four miles south of FM 146 in Swisher County east to the Briscoe County line and from FM 330 to the Swisher County line four miles south of FM 146 south to State Highway 207.

Estimated cost of the project is $539,513 and completion time is estimated at 120 working days.

Judge Permits Moving Of Maternity Services

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Moving maternity services from an aging downtown hospital to the Bexar County Hospital 11 miles away will not discriminate against poor blacks and Mexican-Americans who rely on the downtown facility, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears made the ruling Monday after a three-week trial of a U.S. Justice Department suit aimed at preventing the relocation from Robert B. Green Hospital. Bexar County Hospital is located on the city's northwest fringe.

Spears said the better facilities and equipment available at Bexar County Hospital outweighed the inconvenience the poor patients would suffer after the move.

"It is patently obvious from the evidence that far better facilities and equipment exist at the Bexar County Hospital than at the Green, thus enabling the Bexar County Hospital to provide a much higher quality of health care," he said.

Attorneys for the Justice Department said they would not decide on an appeal until after reviewing Spears' ruling.

More than 6,000 infants are born each year at the Green maternity facility, evidence showed. Mexican-Americans mothers who live south and west of downtown accounted for 80 percent of those admissions, according to testimony.

Prenatal, post-natal and pediatric care will remain at the downtown facility.

Justice Department and Bexar County Legal Aid attorneys argued that the move removes the services from the people who need them most. They also argued that the poor mothers often do not have the transportation to get to the county hospital, and might be forced to turn to midwives.

His wife, Josephine Aplin Hall — sister of a local fisherman killed at the height of last summer's conflicts with Vietnamese immigrants — was found dead in the water Monday, apparently drowned, the Coast Guard said.

Official Aims Concern On Prison Bill

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — The New Mexico Legislature may be reacting without thinking by deciding so soon to reconstruct the state penitentiary devastated in the worst prison riot since Attica, a community leader said today.

"Personally I am concerned that perhaps we are reacting in shock, almost," City Councilwoman Dora Battle said.

Her view, shared by other citizens and some legislators, was a response to quick action by the House following the Feb. 2-3 riot which left 33 inmates dead and 89 people injured.

That chamber Sunday unanimously approved appropriating $82.5 million to pay for costs associated with the riot and for construction of a new 500-bed maximum security prison.

"It seems to me the state has a chance — for the wrong reasons, of course — to install perhaps one of the most progressive penal systems in the nation," Mrs. Battle said. "I would like to see us take whatever steps necessary to achieve that end, and I don't think we can do it in seven days."

She said she had no objections to some provisions of the bill which had been well thought out previously, but she was "very concerned if they make a major decision with respect to reconstruction of the penitentiary a few days after it burned down."

Depositions will be taken Friday from Maxine McCormick, a former Urban Renewal employee.

Johnson said Mrs. McCormick will not be present in Judge Halbert O. Woodward's court for the hearing on Feb. 22, but said he does not know whether the other two will be called as witnesses.

He also said he does not know yet whether the school district will call any rebuttal witnesses.

Government attorneys previously took depositions from Alderson and Bertram prior to the 1977 desegregation hearing that resulted in a partial integration plan in the district.

Alderson said Monday he does not know what the government attorneys plan to ask him this time and Mrs. McCormick said she would not comment.

But Johnson said their deposition testimony probably will concern information on the development of northeast Lubbock as was requested by Judge Woodward when he called for a delay on Jan. 31 in the final stage of the federal

Depositions Slated In School Case

Woodward called for a postponement of the second federal court hearing that began Jan. 28 when he learned that a Justice Department witness had been in the courtroom to hear testimony he was to rebut.

Harry Stokley Jr., a member of the Planning and Zoning Commission, was expected to testify on the development of northeast Lubbock, and particularly the Cherry Point housing division as a minority area, including any effects school board actions may have had on the development.

But Stokley was in the courtroom earlier in the week and heard school district witness Dr. E.C. Leslie's testimony on the subject.

Under a sequestration rule invoked by attorneys for both sides, all witnesses, except expert witnesses, were prohibited from listening to prior testimony in the trial.

Woodward told attorneys that since the information concerning Cherry Point is "very important and critical" to this case, he would allow government attorneys to locate a new witness to testify in that regard.

Woodward said, "I'm hopeful the government can come up with someone else to testify to the facts."

The case was heard again by Woodward after it was remanded by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in August. The appeals court ordered Woodward to determine whether deliberately discriminatory school board acts affected housing patterns, thus preserving segregation in the district.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Stock Mart Declines Moderately

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined moderately today as traders cashed in on some of the recent gains in such groups as oil and rail issues.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 1.28 at 888.31.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 7-4 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the observance of Lincoln's birthday was slowing the pace of activity a bit from its recent record-breaking clip.

Those traders who were active seemed to be concentrating on cashing in on some of the market's early-1980 gains, particularly after the weakness that showed up in stock prices on Monday.

Oil and rail stocks continued to settle back after their dramatic run-up last week.

In the oil group, Texaco was down 1/4 at 38 3/8, Gulf Oil dropped 1/4 to 45 1/4, Exxon lost 3/4 to 65 1/4, and Mobil was off 1/4 at 62 1/4.

Among the rails, Burlington Northern was off 2 at 75 and Santa Fe Industries dropped 2 1/2 to 65 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index lost 14 to 66.97. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 85 at 287.50.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 20.49 million shares at noon-time, down from 29.33 million at the same point Monday.

Fraser Asks Japanese To Cut Exports

TOKYO (AP) — President Douglas A. Fraser of the United Auto Workers told Japanese auto-makers today that "Americans tend to become emotional in an election year" and urged them to curb exports to the United States to help lift the threat of unemployment from the members of his union.

Fraser said in meetings with Nissan Motor Co. makers of Datsun, and Mitsubishi Motors Corp. that with 220,000 American auto workers now laid off it is time for the Japanese to exercise voluntary orderly market policies regarding exports to the United States and set up American manufacturing plants.

However, Nissan President Takashi Ishihara told Fraser that Japanese imports were not responsible for the current layoffs, a Nissan spokesman said. Ishihara said that Nissan, Japan's second biggest automaker after Toyota Motor Co., is still unable to decide whether to invest in U.S. assembly plants, the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Japanese government said it considered U.S. production desirable, although the final decision was up to the companies.

Of course, they have to think about a lot of things before doing that — whether they can acquire necessary parts in the U.S., the labor situation in the U.S. and Japan as well as distribution systems. This is the kind of thing that takes a lot of time to do, and money, too. Nevertheless, it's the government's position to encourage production in the U.S.," said the spokesman for the Ministry of International Trade and Industry.

FBI Disrupts Crime Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI has evidence crime syndicate bosses were planning as recently as last week to call a summit conference and carve new boundaries in underworld fiefdoms spanning the nation, knowledgeable sources say.

But FBI officials now believe the session was canceled after public disclosure of bureau investigations, including Brilab, the sources said.

The secret summit, involving crime bosses from an undetermined number of cities, was said to equal in scope the notorious 1957 conclave of more than 60 mob leaders in Apalachin, N.Y.

The FBI learned of the planned session through several major investigations of organized crime, including Brilab, the undercover probe of mob involvement in insurance bribery and kickbacks in the Southwest, said sources familiar with the investigations.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said mob leaders were drafting plans to alter the boundaries and terms of agreements giving each of them exclusive rights to a certain geographic region. The mobsters involved are the bosses of the syndicate the FBI calls La Cosa Nostra.

"This included narcotics traffic and everything else organized crime is involved in," one source said. "There were a variety of modifications in the works."

The sources declined to say where the summit was to have taken place.

The first hint of the underworld plan surfaced when a letter from Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann was made public in federal court in Los Angeles on Friday. Heymann wrote that the FBI "is on the verge of developing evidence regarding a massive, nationwide conspiracy relating to the allocation of territories in the United States for certain types of illicit activities."

The planned conclave was reminiscent of the Apalachin summit, which startled the nation with the strongest evidence to date that a national crime syndicate did, indeed, exist.

Until then, J. Edgar Hoover, the FBI director, had resisted urgings to investigate organized crime. After New York state police disclosed the Apalachin summit, Hoover was forced to pay attention to crime syndicates.

But it was not until the 1970s that the bureau focused on organized crime in a major way.

When William H. Webster took over as director two years ago, he accelerated the investigations with more sophisticated techniques, often employing court-authorized wiretaps and agents working undercover for months at a stretch.

Evidence of the new gangland summit was developed partly from the Southwest insurance investigation, another long-running FBI probe of organized crime in the Midwest, and at least one other separate but interwoven investigation of organized crime.

Dozens of politicians and labor leaders have been implicated in the insurance investigation, which the bureau calls Brilab, a contraction of bribery-labor.

Federal prosecutors are taking those cases to federal grand juries in Houston today and in New Orleans on Thursday.

The Brilab probe "ranges nationally," John Volz, the U.S. attorney in New Orleans, told a news conference Monday.

"I think you can safely say it involves all 50 states. By the time this is over, it will involve other jurisdictions ... other cities ... other states," he continued.

Another aspect of Brilab involves the Immigration and Naturalization Service and its former deputy, Mario Noto, now a Washington lawyer.

The FBI is investigating whether Noto agreed to help New Orleans mob boss Carlos Marcello with his immigration problems in exchange for a promise of a job after leaving INS, said a knowledgeable source. Noto denied wrongdoing.

Law enforcement authorities have identified Marcello as the New Orleans underworld boss for years.

He was deported to Guatemala in April 1961, but returned within weeks, was arrested again and was slapped with a new deportation order that August. Since then, Marcello and his lawyers have waged a persistent and successful legal battle against deportation. Immigration rules prevent him from traveling outside the five-state region of the New Orleans INS office while his case is pending in the courts.

side drawer in Kelley's desk after efforts to contact a court official to take the money failed.

"We've been trying to do this all weekend," Gullahorn said. "There's no federal judge that will touch this with a 10-foot pole."

Meanwhile at Houston, two city councilmen and an associate of Clayton — the first batch of witnesses called to testify before the federal grand jury investigating bribery among government officials — today refused to discuss the matter on their way to the jury room.

Bob Johnson, longtime director of the Legislative Council and Clayton's appointee to the Texas Employees Retirement Board, was the first to appear for the 9:30 a.m. session. City Councilmen Homer Ford and Jim Westmoreland appeared soon after, but they would not comment on the investigation.

Also on hand were U.S. Attorneys Tony Canales of the Southern District and Jamie Boyd of the Western District.

Clayton also will testify before the federal grand jury in its investigation of the FBI's "Brilab" — short for bribery-labor — investigation in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. Clayton said he was given a "stack of $100 bills" — said to have been $10,000 — but had no intention of keeping it.

The undercover operation involved bribe-offering FBI operatives trying to arrange large insurance contracts for Prudential Insurance Co.

In December the Houston City Council switched its $14 million employee coverage to Prudential by a 7-2 vote. The retirement board, which Johnson heads, arranges for state employees' insurance.

Clayton's appearance before the grand jury was postponed until Wednesday at the request of defense attorney Charles Burton, who had another case set for today.

Among others subpoenaed to appear this week or next were Randall Wood, an Austin attorney and former lobbyist for Common Cause; Clayton's executive assistant, Rusty Kelley; and former Houston city councilman Frank Mann.

The Texas Civil Liberties Union Monday denounced the "Brilab" operation and questioned the propriety of the FBI techniques.

"All indications in the news stories are that agents set out to find someone to bribe and there is no indication that evidence of criminal activity existed prior to the undercover operation," said John B. Duncan, TCLU executive director.

Clayton, 51, a millionaire farmer from Springlake, has acknowledged receiving "a stack of $100 bills" on Nov. 8 from a union official who visited him ostensibly on behalf of Prudential Insurance Co.

The speaker said he intended to return the reported $10,000 in cash to Deer Park labor leader L.G. Moore, but did not want to make a scene by refusing a political contribution in front of the supposed representative for Prudential who was with Moore.

House Votes Award For Canadian Envoy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted overwhelmingly today to strike a gold medal honoring Kenneth Taylor, the Canadian ambassador who helped spirit six Americans out of Iran.

The vote was 362-1. Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., cast the only vote against the proposal, which now goes to the Senate.

Mrs. Fenwick said she voted against the bill because "I don't think every single warm-hearted and kindly emotion has to be expressed in something expensive. Ambassador Taylor did a wonderful, brave thing. But the appropriate measure would have been a resolution by Congress, not a medal."

Both the House and Senate earlier commended Taylor in separate resolutions.

Final passage of the bill had been delayed until today as a result of a one-man protest by Rep. Bill Frenzel.

Frenzel held up the final vote Monday as a protest against Democratic leaders, whom he said were trying to make the House look busy when there's little to be busy with.

Frenzel said Monday he intends to ask for roll calls each day this week so that the public will know just how little is being done and just which members are around to do it.

Frenzel is irritated because both chambers were originally expected to be in recess this week. He says many members — himself included — accepted speaking engagements and set up appointments with their constituents in their home districts.

But several House members last week criticized the tendency of the House to schedule action on major bills only on Tuesday through Thursday. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. then announced the House would be in session until Wednesday this week.

So when the House opened for business Monday, Frenzel demanded a roll call vote on a routine matter.

Among others subpoenaed to appear this week or next were Randall Wood, an Austin attorney and former lobbyist for Common Cause; Clayton's executive assistant, Rusty Kelley; and former Houston city councilman Frank Mann.

U.S. Hopes Get Boost armed intervention in Afghanistan, an overwhelmingly Moslem nation to the east of Iran and, like Iran, to the south of the Soviet Union.

In the Le Monde interview, Bani-Sadr said the revolutionary government no longer demands the return of the shah before the Americans are released.

The president said the hostages would be released at the U.S. government's request.

1. Acknowledged U.S. "crimes" against the Iranian people, since the CIA helped overthrow leftist Prime Minister Mohammed Mossadegh and restored the shah to power.

2. Recognized the right of the revolutionary regime to obtain the extradition of the shah and the restitution of his fortune.

3. Pledged to "no longer interfere in our affairs."

Bani-Sadr told correspondent Eric Rigueau of Le Monde that his proposals were the result of a consensus of the ruling Revolutionary Council, which he now heads, and had been submitted to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the 79-year-old leader of the revolutionary regime.

"If he accepts them, it would be up to President Carter to respond in turn," said Bani-Sadr.

He said he had made a separate proposal to the council and Khomeini that control of the hostages be transferred in the next few days from the young militants who seized the embassy on Nov. 4 to a third party. He said force would not be used and if the militants refused, he would go to the embassy and "convince them to fall in line with my view."

The president also said he favored combining a tribunal to study the U.S. government's role in Iran along with Waldheim's proposed international commission to probe allegations against the shah. But he said the hostages could be freed before completion of the inquiries.

Mrs. Fenwick said she voted against the bill because "I don't think every single warm-hearted and kindly emotion has to be expressed in something expensive. Ambassador Taylor did a wonderful, brave thing. But the appropriate measure would have been a resolution by Congress, not a medal."

Ailing Tito Unchanged

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — A medical bulletin today reported no improvement in the condition of President Josip Broz Tito, 87. There was a general feeling in Belgrade he was fighting for his life.

"The health condition of President Josip Broz Tito has not changed," the bulletin said.

"Difficulties in connection with the functioning of the kidneys and periodical weakness of the heart are still present."

"The necessary treatment is being undertaken," it said.

Government sources privately called the situation "serious" and "unpredictable."

Senior Western diplomats expressed deep concern and pessimism over the condition of the Yugoslav leader.

The Yugoslav government — run since Tito's illness by the collective leadership bodies he instituted to head the state and Communist Party — went on normally.

Carter Revives Boycott Threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spokesmen for President Carter reiterated today that Carter would not favor U.S. participation in the Moscow Olympics unless Soviet troops are withdrawn from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

Press secretary Jody Powell and his deputy, Rex Granum, passed this word to reporters after the Washington Post reported the United States apparently was willing to give the Soviet government additional time beyond Feb. 20 to pull its troops out of Afghanistan before calling for a boycott of the Summer Games in Moscow.

Carter had set the Feb. 20 deadline and said that if Russian troops were not withdrawn and the games were not postponed, moved or canceled, he would seek a boycott of the summer Olympics.

Granum said: "Our position is as it has been. Unless Soviet troops are withdrawn from Afghanistan by Feb. 20, the president would not support, nor would he expect the American people to support, U.S. participation in the Moscow Olympics."

However, the Post quoted Lloyd Cutler, White House counsel, as saying the United States might consider entry if the Soviets withdraw from Afghanistan, or present a plan for withdrawal, by May 24 — the date the U.S. Olympic Committee has to send in its entry.

Cutler was quoted as saying that the International Olympic Committee should be given "a reasonable amount of time" to make a decision about the Moscow Games.

Carter's latest position was formally presented to the IOC by a delegation from the U.S. Olympic Committee, the Post said.

"I couldn't say if we won any points or lost any," said USOC President Robert Kane after the meeting in Lake Placid, N.Y. "I was pleased, however, that their questions indicated at least that our points were being understood. That's been difficult to get across, even in our country."

Following the closed meeting, three senior IOC members worked until late Monday to draft a resolution rejecting the original proposal to take action by the Feb. 20 deadline.

Jack Brown Candidate For Council

water plan that would involve development of a supply source in the Justiceburg area. City officials have estimated the cost of that project at approximately $108 million.

Despite the cost, Brown said he believes the Justiceburg project "is the way for the City of Lubbock to go."

Brown also stressed the need for the council to "maintain a continuity of pride in the city." In the past few years, he said, public facilities and parks have not been maintained in a way in which the city can be proud of. Brown said he would push to improve that situation.

On another topic, Brown cited a need for improved cooperation among local governmental entities. He said that creating a cooperative spirit is not always easy, but he believes the city should make a greater effort in working with officials from the county and Texas Tech University.

The candidate praised the efforts of the anti-crime campaign initiated by the current city administration. This effort must be continued, and innovative ways should be found to improve, he said.

Brown said the city must make Lubbock "a hard place to live" for the criminal element. And he believes the anti-crime campaign is one way to do that.

A 32-year resident of Lubbock, Brown serves as president of Brown-McKee, Inc., an engineering and construction firm specializing in industrial construction. He holds a B.S. degree in mechanical engineering from Texas Tech.

"I'm not a politician and I don't have any ambitions to be one," Brown said. He said his main reason for running in the council race is to be of service to the city which has afforded him many opportunities.

Brown has served as a member of the Texas State Board of Health and is a member of the board for Milam's Children's Training Center. He and his wife, Frances, have three children.

The Place 2 seat on the council is currently held by Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan, who has announced as a candidate for state representative. Local attorney Tomas Garza announced earlier his plans to seek the post.

Delay Sought On Abortion Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government sought permission from Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall today to continue denying money for most welfare abortions.

The Justice Department asked Marshall to postpone the Feb. 15 effective date of a federal judge's order that federal money finance all poor women's medically necessary abortions.

U.S. District Judge John Dooling of New York City last month struck down as unconstitutional the so-called Hyde amendment, which restricts federal spending for Medicaid abortions to women whose lives are endangered by their pregnancy or who are victims of rape or incest.

Persons opposed to expanded federal spending for abortions last week filed a similar request with Marshall, who handles emergency matters from New York for the nation's highest court.

On Monday, the full Supreme Court was asked to add the New York case to a similar one from Chicago before deciding the government's abortion-funding obligation.

The justices already have agreed to study the Chicago case, in which a federal trial judge struck down the Hyde amendment in far less sweeping constitutional language than Dooling's ruling.

In today's emergency request to Marshall, government lawyers cited numerous "administrative problems" as one justification for postponing the effect of Dooling's order.

Noting that Justice John Paul Stevens and then the full court refused to issue such emergency relief in the Chicago case, the government said the New York case is different.

Dooling's order was directed at the federal government while the Chicago ruling was directed only to Illinois, the government said. Also, the New York ruling requires funding of medically necessary abortions throughout a woman's pregnancy while the Chicago ruling dealt only with the first six months of pregnancy.

"The district court's ruling is incorrect, and the (government) is likely to prevail on appeal," government lawyers told Marshall after attacking the constitutional grounds used by Dooling.

In a related development, investigators from the federal Center for Disease Control linked the financing restrictions to the deaths of four poor women. Complications in all four cases might have been avoided if the women had obtained Medicaid money for abortions, they said.

Monday's request for consolidation of the New York and Chicago cases is aimed at the full court. It was filed on behalf of the New York individuals and groups who won in Dooling's court.

preme Court consideration of the Chicago case.

The request called the New York case "the vehicle for directly deciding ... the merits of the challenge to the Hyde amendment."

In the Chicago case, U.S. District Judge John Grady struck down the spending restriction but ordered only Illinois — not the federal government — to pay for all medically necessary Medicaid abortions.

Special Prosecutor Requested To Investigate Miller, Textron

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four Republican members of the Senate Judiciary Committee are asking for appointment of a special prosecutor to look into alleged payoffs by Textron Inc. while Treasury Secretary G. William Miller was the corporation's chairman.

In a letter delivered to the Justice Department Monday night, the senators asked Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti to reconsider his decision last week that there is no need for a special prosecutor because Miller already has been cleared of any wrongdoing.

The letter was signed by Sens. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, Bob Dole of Kansas, Orrin Hatch of Utah and Paul Laxalt of Nevada. Thurmond is the senior GOP member of the committee.

Civiletti could not be reached immediately for comment. The attorney general said Monday he had not seen any evidence which met the tests in the law providing for a special prosecutor — factual evidence of a violation of a specific criminal statute. But he said he had never resisted naming special prosecutors where warranted.

The Securities and Exchange Commission reported recently that Textron, a Providence, R.I., conglomerate, improperly used $600,000 to entertain Defense Department officials while Miller was its chairman.

The SEC also charged in a federal court suit that Textron at the same time failed to mention at least $5.4 million in questionable payments to foreign officials.

Miller has denied knowledge of any illegal payments.

Under a 1978 federal law, the attorney general is required to respond when a majority of the minority party members of the Judiciary Committee request appointment of a special prosecutor. The four GOP senators constitute a majority of the panel's seven Republican members.

Within 30 days, or within 15 days after completing a preliminary investigation, the attorney general must provide written notice of any action he has taken, or explain why he has not taken action.

"There are several reasons why ... an investigation is needed," the senators told Civiletti.

"One reason is that a number of Textron executives who were questioned by the Securities and Exchange Commission invoked their Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. This is their right, but it does leave a significant gap in the factual record of the Textron investigation. Further, it is unclear whether immunity from prosecution was sought for these witnesses, or why such immunity would not be obtained," the senators wrote.

Their letter said the SEC had "implied" that "circumstantial evidence justifies drawing the inference that a chief executive in Mr. Miller's position should have known, and could reasonably be expected to know, of the questionable payments made by Textron."

GAO Official Raps Energy Department

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite unexplained increases in oil company profits, the Energy Department has refused to investigate why heating oil prices have gone up so sharply in the midst of an abundant supply of fuel, the General Accounting Office said today.

"There seems to be an indifference on the part of the Department of Energy," GAO official F. Kevin Boland said.

Boland testified before a House energy subcommittee examining recent studies which show sharp increases in heating oil prices which the studies say go well beyond explanations of inflation, operating costs or increases in the cost of imported oil.

There was no immediate response from the Energy Department, whose officials were scheduled to testify later.

The House subcommittee conducting the inquiry is chaired by Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., a consistent critic of Carter administration energy policies.

Boland said a GAO investigation of heating oil profits made by refiners shows that profits from 1976 to 1978 went up about 2 cents per gallon. In the first seven months of 1979, he said the figures rose to 8.6 cents per gallon.

The figures include operating costs, but Boland said there is no explanation why the refiners raised their prices so dramatically during 1979.

Heating oil prices in many areas have doubled compared with a year ago, and in New England have now reached $1 per gallon in some states.

From January 1979 to December 1979, Boland said, natural gas prices nationally rose by 18 percent, electricity rose by 13 percent, while heating oil costs to the consumer rose by 59 percent.

Boland said the Energy Department has refused to answer who is responsible for looking into rising heating oil costs.

A GAO report on which Boland based his testimony says, "It appears the Department of Energy is not on top of this situation and is not in a position to say what current heating oil prices are equitable."

"We believe that the Department of Energy's inattention to the escalating heating oil prices ... borders on indifference and incompetence," the GAO said.

One study done by a House consumer subcommittee said consumers may have been overcharged by as much as $3 billion over the last year.

Heating oil prices have been decontrolled since 1976. Liberals such as Moffett have urged that controls be reimposed as a means of preventing "price gouging" by some refiners and retailers.

Opponents of decontrol say prices should be permitted to seek their natural levels to insure a steady supply.

Moffett said Monday, "DOE's failure to assure equitable heating oil prices is inexcusable, irresponsible and simply unconscionable."

The consumer subcommittee study found that from September 1978 to September 1979, domestic oil refiners' profits rose by more than 800 percent.

It said there has been little federal scrutiny of oil industry price increases by either the Energy Department or the White House Council on Wage and Price Stability.

Last summer, President Carter set a goal for a reserve of 240 million barrels of heating oil.

TMI EMPLOYEE CHECKS RADIATION MONITOR — An employee of the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant checks a radiation monitor tape across the Susquehanna River from the disabled Three Mile Island nuclear power plant testing for possible nuclear radiation leaks. Leakage was contained inside the building. (AP Laserphoto)

Nuclear Plant Authorities Say Radioactive Leak Not Harmful

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Radioactive water from a leaky switch in the Three Mile Island reactor cooling system released a tiny amount of krypton gas into the atmosphere, but it posed no public danger, officials said.

It was the first release of radiation from the crippled plant since it was shut down last year after the worst accident in the history of commercial nuclear power. Eleven workers were evacuated during the incident, which began when about 1,000 gallons of highly contaminated water leaked from the cooling system Monday.

The water flowed into a sump compartment in the basement of an auxiliary building, which was quickly sealed, but an isotope in the water apparently found its way past a network of filters, officials said.

"A review of monitoring devices ... confirms there was a small release of radioactive gases, probably krypton 85," said a statement by Metropolitan Edison Co., operator of the plant, currently being cleaned up from the March 28 accident.

The statement said krypton was detected by monitors atop the auxiliary building while monitors nearby showed no positive readings.

"There would be no adverse health effects to workers on the island from such a minute release," the statement said.

Radioactive gases such as xenon and iodine escaped from the auxiliary building last spring. Federal, state and company officials said those releases also were too small to cause health problems.

Met Ed spokesman Sandy Polon said Monday's leak occurred when technicians routinely switched from one pump to another in a "make-up" line that keeps the proper amount of water in the cooling system. The make-up system draws water directly from the reactor core area, which contains about 100 tons of damaged uranium fuel and is highly contaminated.

Polon said about nine gallons a minute squirted onto the floor from a pressure switch on a small pipe. The evacuated workers were wearing protective clothing and breathing devices and "we don't have any indication at all that anyone received any radiation," he said.

He said the estimated 1,000 gallons spilled had no effect on the cooling capacity of the system.

Met Ed said the maximum amount of radiation in the escaping krypton

"ranged from 200 to 300 millicuries, or less than a third of a curie." There are 53,000 curies of krypton, a byproduct of nuclear fission, trapped in the reactor containment building.

Met Ed has asked permission from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to vent the krypton into the atmosphere gradually to get rid of it.

Mayor, Union Leaders Meet On City Layoffs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The chances for settling a dispute over police and firefighter layoffs brightened after a meeting between Mayor William Green and representatives of the two groups, the mayor's secretary says.

"The climate for settling the dispute has improved," secretary Kathy Gosliner said Monday.

John A. Reilly, president of Local 22 of the Fire Fighters Association, and Charles Gallagher, president of the local Fraternal Order of Police, met with Green on Monday for 2½ hours.

"The line of communications is open for further discussion on this problem," Reilly said. "That's all I'm going to say at this point."

Neither side would comment further on the negotiations.

Green announced the layoffs of 1,219 municipal workers last Monday to reduce a $167 million deficit by July 1981. Since then police and firefighters have staged three protest marches on City Hall, including one Monday.

Before Monday's meeting with the mayor, union officials raised the possibility of a strike, although state law prohibits strikes by firefighters or police officers.

"A strike is not what anyone wants," Reilly said. "But the feeling of the men is running very high now."

Green met with the union leaders last Thursday concerning the layoffs, but he refused to reconsider his order which would eliminate 738 jobs in the city's 8,500-member police force and 246 jobs in the 2,850-member fire department.

Monday's rally, which snarled downtown traffic, appeared to be the largest of the mid-day marches so far. Police estimated 3,000 off-duty police officers and firefighters were involved.

Witness Recalls Proposition By Gacy

CHICAGO (AP) — John W. Gacy Jr., on trial for murder in the deaths of 33 young men, offered a teen-ager money in exchange for sex and once handcuffed the youth, a Cook County Circuit Court jury was told.

Tony Antonucci, now 20, told jurors Monday that Gacy, a remodeling contractor and then his employer, made advances on two occasions in 1975, when Antonucci was 16.

The first incident occurred June 2, when Gacy and Antonucci went to a Democratic Party headquarters to set up chairs for a meeting, Antonucci testified.

He said both of them had a drink of whiskey and Gacy offered him "between $50 and $100" for oral sex. Antonucci refused, testifying, "I thought it was a joke and that Gacy was just trying to test me under pressure."

Later that summer, when Antonucci was at home alone, Gacy stopped by and asked to come in, offering the teen-ager wine and asking if he would like to see some stag movies. Antonucci said he consented and Gacy brought in some film and a projector from his car.

After the movies, Antonucci said, "we talked and then started wrestling around ... He put me to the floor and handcuffed both my hands behind me with my face up. He unbuttoned my shirt and pulled my pants down, then he left the room and went to the kitchen."

"I worked my right hand out of the handcuff," Antonucci said. "I stayed there and then when he came near, I grabbed his legs and tackled him down."

Antonucci put the handcuffs on Gacy and made him lie face down. "I held him there for maybe 5 or 10 minutes," he said. "The only thing he said, was 'You are not only the one who got out of handcuffs but put them on me.'"

Robert Zimmerman, 18, testified he became acquainted with Gacy at a service station where he worked. He said Gacy would come in for gas several times a week and "offered me marijuana on a lot of occasions and speed."

Zimmerman said that in November 1978 he was invited after work to Gacy's home where there was beer-drinking and marijuana-smoking and Gacy propositioned him for oral sex. Zimmerman said he refused.

The bodies of 29 young men and boys were found last year under Gacy's home in northwest suburban Norwood Park Township. Four additional bodies were found in Chicago area rivers.

Chicago Firefighters Resume Negotiations

CHICAGO (AP) — Classes have resumed for nearly 500,000 public school students, while Board of Education officials face the task of implementing revised spending cuts agreed upon to end a two-week teachers' work stoppage.

Interim Schools Superintendent Angeline Caruso said 92 percent of the system's 25,355 teachers reported to work Monday to greet the students. She said about 360,531, or 76 percent of the 472,897 students attended school Monday.

Meanwhile, negotiations resumed Monday between the Chicago Firefighters Union and city representatives in the presence of federal mediators. Firefighters, who previously had only a handshake agreement with the city, are seeking their first written contract.

The crowded school halls marked the first time in two weeks that both teacher and student attendance was more than 5 percent.

The teachers began a work stoppage Jan. 28 when they didn't receive paychecks and even though they were paid later, the work stoppage escalated into a five-day strike.

Engineer Testifies In Pinto Case

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) — No subcompact automobile built in America during the decade ending in 1976 is able to withstand rear-impact collisions effectively, a former Ford Motor Co. executive testified in the automaker's trial on criminal charges of reckless homicide.

But the metal used in the 1973 Pinto gas tank was thicker than that used in many other small cars, including the Chevrolet Vega, AMC Gremlin and Dodge Colt, said Harley Copp, an engineer and former vice president who supervised crash tests.

Ford is charged in the August 1978 deaths of three teen-agers whose 1973 Pinto exploded when hit from behind.

Prosecutors contend Ford knew the model had fuel tank defects that could lead to fiery crashes, but that the automaker sold the cars anyway. Ford contends the model was not significantly different from other subcompacts and met acceptable safety standards.

Under cross-examination by defense attorneys during his fifth day of testimony in Pulaski Circuit Court, Copp said Monday he believed every American-made subcompact car built from 1966 to 1976 was unable to withstand rear-end collisions effectively.

Copp said the 1973 Pinto was similar to other subcompacts in the location of its fuel tank and the number of potential puncture sources that might cause the tank to leak gasoline and explode in a rear-end accident.

The state contends Ford recklessly designed the Pinto by cutting corners on costs, charging Ford ignored the engineering examples of other automakers and rushed Pinto production to compete with foreign subcompacts.

The judge announced that he plans to hold court on Fridays from now on, ending a policy of four-day work weeks adopted at the defendants' request.

"We have been going so slowly in this case," Moye said.

Lance Trial Pace Picks Up

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal judge has refused to dismiss the bank fraud case against Bert Lance, the former U.S. budget director, deciding instead to step up the pace of the trial.

Lance's attorney, Nickolas Chilivis, asked U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moye on Monday to throw out the charges because of actions by the prosecutors that Chilivis called reprehensible and offensive.

Chilivis said prosecutors tried to sneak photocopies of loan records into court as bank records, when in fact they had been provided to the bank by the government.

"We contend that it's reprehensible conduct," Chilivis said. "We feel that the court ought to be offended."

Moye overruled the motion and allowed some of the challenged documents — which had been in the bank files but were mailed to the borrowers when the loans were paid — to be introduced as evidence. He reserved his rulings on the remainder.

The judge announced that he plans to hold court on Fridays from now on, ending a policy of four-day work weeks adopted at the defendants' request.

Clinic Measures Performances Of Businesses

By JOHN CUNIFF

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Scores of businesses come each year to Dr. Sidney Schoeffler's clinic for their regular physical checkup — Rate of return, productivity, market share, tactics, cash flow and the like.

The companies are put through a detailed set of tests in which their performance is measured against standards obtained from a data base of 2,000 business units that report in strict confidence to the clinic.

When the data analysis is completed, company strengths and weaknesses are revealed as clearly as those of a human being whose pulse, blood pressure and lung capacity are examined in a hospital clinic.

Schoeffler and his staff operate the Strategic Planning Institute, a nonprofit think tank into which 250 member companies pour data about their performance, and from which general health standards emerge.

Input is understandably enormous and varied. It comes from large corporations operating many business units, and small companies with one or a few units. And from foreign as well as domestic concerns.

All members (their dues range from about $10,000 to $20,000 a year) report in a common format what they do about pricing, expansion, personnel, marketing and the like.

They describe the market and their share: expanding, shrinking, local, national. The competition: few or many, small or large, similar product or differentiated. And results: growth, cash flow, profit, loss.

The tests seek to determine the PIMS, or profit impact of market strategies. The data bank establishes a par for the various marketing strategies, based on companies with similar characteristics.

"If profits are below par there is strong evidence of an operating problem," says Schoeffler. "Either that or the company is in the middle of a price war." Additional tests bring out the facts.

An audit of productivity follows, often giving early warning of poor management decisions. It might be found, for example, that the company has increased labor productivity 1 percent, but only by spending 1.5 percent on costly equipment. Yes, there is good productivity and bad.

Marketing-type information — sales force and advertising expenses as a percentage of sales — are examined for each business unit of a member company. Depending on goals, market share and other characteristics, a par figure can be provided for sales or advertising expenses.

Changes in market share are examined. If a company increases its share by 3 percent, and par for a company of its characteristics is 5, it can lead to a revision of tactics. If the reverse is true, it can mean either of two things: a temporary windfall or superior tactics.

A cash flow (cash generated versus cash used) test follows. Because of high borrowing costs, it can reveal critical flaws for small, growing companies in need of cash. Or, if the company has a large market share and little chance to expand, it might suggest investment possibilities.

Few companies fail to benefit from what Schoeffler calls the tactics optimality test, sixth in the series. Look-alikes in the data base are sought and their tactics matched against the company being examined. Some of the tactics from the base have led to success, some to failure. Is the examined company falling into the same traps?

A company's entire portfolio of business units is examined. Is the mix of units well balanced? Which of the units are performing well? Where are the weaknesses? What corrective action can be taken?

The final tests deal not with a company's existing businesses but with the future. Even before that stage is reached, however, Schoeffler and his staff have come to a great generality:

The company either has or doesn't have serious problems.

If it's the latter, a decision must be made: With the knowledge gained, can the company deal with the problems on its own or does it need further assistance from the Institute?

Probably one-half the member companies decide they do need assistance, and thus sign up with the institute's consulting arm, PIMS Associates, paying a negotiated fee in addition to the regular membership arrangement.

Eight years old, an offshoot of an in-house project at General Electric, the Institute already has determined what it sometimes calls laws of business. Its findings have resulted in numerous papers, and obviously have led to major changes in important businesses.

Schoeffler still looks for additional growth, however, convinced that the more input from members the more precise, extensive and valuable will be the output of the data base.

Hockey Launches Games

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Hounded by continuing political problems and haunted by logistical nightmares, the Games of the XIII Winter Olympiad began on schedule today in this picturesque village nestled in the Adirondack Mountains.

The official opening of the Games, complete with the ceremonial parade of nearly 1,300 athletes, is scheduled for Wednesday. But the hockey competition got a jump on the other sports with six games on today's schedule.

For American athletes, the 1980 Games could yield a record winter medal haul. The United States won 10 medals in the 1976 Winter Games at Innsbruck and never has captured more than the dozen it won the last time Lake Placid hosted these Games in 1932.

But stars like speed skaters Eric and Beth Heiden, cross country skier Bill Koch, figure skaters Linda Fratianne and Charlie Tickner and skiers Phil Mahre and Cindy Nelson could make this a memorable Olympiad for the United States.

Most of the hockey interest centered on the awesome Soviet Union team, considered almost certain to win the hockey gold. The Russians open against Japan tonight. In other games, Norway meets Czechoslovakia, Canada plays Holland, the United States faces Sweden, West Germany opposes Romania and Poland takes on Finland.

The young American team, composed largely of college players, got a close look at the Soviets in a 10-3 thrashing last Saturday in New York. Coach Herb Brooks thought he detected some extra verve in the play of the Russians, brought on, perhaps, by the current world political situation.

"The Russians have always been subtle, physically, before," said Brooks. "I've never seen them quite as physical as they were against us. When Khrushchev said that they'd bury us, I didn't think he meant the American hockey team of 1980. They vented a lot that seemed to be inside them in that game."

The Soviet squad includes many of the stars such as goalie Vladislav Tretiak and forward Boris Mikhailov, who have become familiar to North American fans in the last eight years in games against National Hockey League teams. Brooks smiles at matching them up against his young American team.

"Eight years ago, they were playing against Team Canada," the coach said. "I've got six or eight kids on my team who were playing peewee hockey eight years ago."

Meanwhile, American Olympic officials presented to the IOC President Carter's case for moving, postponing or cancelling the 1980 Moscow Games because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Robert Kane, of the United States Olympic Committee, called the question of the Moscow Games the most difficult crisis situation the IOC has ever faced. "We are trying to preserve the Games, not destroy them," the American official said.

And while the philosophical questions dominated the political side of the Games, the more practical problem of logistics plagued the world press assembled to cover this event.

The carefully-constructed transportation plans to move people around the Olympic area venues seemed to have collapsed completely on Monday. Only 80 of the expected 300 busses were on duty because of a labor dispute and waits of more than two hours for transportation were routine. The press corps from Switzerland, Italy and France filed official protests over the situation.

"A couple of contracts had to be clarified," said Ed Lewis, press coordinator of the Lake Placid Organizing Committee. "Our labor problems seem solved one day but then not the next. The last word I have is that they are solved and we will have 300 busses available Wednesday."

Credentials were another problem, with limited access for events such as hockey, speed skating and figure skating leaving some members of the media vying with each other for seats.

For the athletes, however, all the problems were strictly peripheral. As the start of the Games approached, they occupied their time in the Olympic Village, where a disco and first-run movies kept them busy. But they were aware that their moment in the world's sports spotlight was approaching.

"We've waited a long time for this," said Mike Eruzione, captain of the U.S. hockey team. "We're looking forward to it right now."

Raiders Claim

Lewisville Star

LEWISVILLE (AP) — All-state running back Freddie Wells says he will enroll at Texas Tech next fall.

Wells, a 5-9, 200-pound running back who rushed for more than 1,300 yards last fall in leading Lewisville to the Class AAAA semifinals, said he made the decision Monday.

"I wanted to play in the Southwest Conference, at a school where I thought I'd get a chance to play quickly," Wells said. He said he had been considering Texas and North Texas State.

He said he eliminated Texas because he believes they are recruiting as many running backs as possible and it might be difficult to break into the starting lineup. "I didn't want to get involved in that sort of thing," he said.

Star Olympians Pan For Gold

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — While the price of gold has rocketed to the heavens, the Olympic gold medal has ridden its coat-tails.

For figure skaters especially, and a few others on a smaller scale, the gilded medallion can be an "open sesame" to instant riches.

They can all thank Sonja Henie for that.

"The gold medal in itself is not a guarantee," says Dick Button, former Olympic and world men's figure skating champion and a leading authority on the specialty. "You've got to have some pizzazz, a sense of style, projection and good management."

As this little Adirondack community prepares for the formal opening of the XIII Winter Games Wednesday, a trio of Americans is thrust into the spotlight as potential Dick Buttons, Peggy Flemings and Dorothy Hamills. Movie and ice show promoters are queuing up with checkbooks unsheathed.

These candidates for theatrical and commercial stardom are Linda Fratianne, the dark-haired, blue-eyed ice ballerina from Northridge, Calif., reigning world champion and favorite in the ladies' singles, and the graceful, daring tandem of Handy Gardner and Tai Babilonia, conceded an excellent chance of upsetting the Soviet Union's almost flawless pairs champions, Aleksandr Zaitsev and Irina Rodnina.

"Fratianne is very pretty, with a Lat-in Sophia Loren beauty," said Button. "She photographs wonderfully. She moves like liquid."

"Tai is cute as apple pie and extremely talented. Her partner, Gardner, has great ability — a super athlete. They are a brilliant, innovative pair who perform beautifully as a team."

"All any of them needs to do is get their act together and they can attain instant fame."

Button should know. It happened to him. It has happened to a long line of U.S. figure skaters, principally the female gender, as well as Olympic gold medalists in other sports. Leaping readily to mind are Mark Spitz, the swimmer with the wedding cake handsomeness who won an unprecedented seven golds at Munich in 1972, and Bruce Jenner, the blond "All American Boy" who captured the decathlon at Montreal four years ago.

"You must remember they didn't make it automatically," said Button, who won his first Olympic gold medal while in prep school in 1948 and repeated while getting his law degree at Harvard in 1952.

"They had to have something extra. You might call it a star quality. As in the movies, it's the ability to project and appeal to audiences."

Button gave skating exhibitions while working on his law degree, later did TV specials, finally became a successful TV commentator and head of his own production company.

He was chosen as one of the U.S. flag-carriers for the opening ceremony after which he must rush off to do TV commentary for ABC-TV, an assignment he has handled for years.

"Sonja was the first," Button said, recalling the captivating Norwegian who won three Olympic gold medals in 1928, 1932 and 1936, the middle one here in Lake Placid. "She was short and stumpy, too fat, but she was adorable. She had dimples, a great smile and an enormous personality."

Miss Henie moved easily from the ice to Hollywood where she entranced movie goers with romantic roles played in a winter wonderland setting. American mothers became so hypnotized that they couldn't wait to put their offsprings on flashing blades, resulting in U.S. figure skating success.

Starting in 1956 with Tenley Albright, the United States produced ladies' champions in four of six Games. Carol Heiss, the New York baker's daughter, won in 1960. Peggy Fleming in 1968 and Dorothy Hamill four years ago in Montreal. The skein was interrupted by Holland's Sjoukje Dijkstra in 1964 and Austria's Beatrix Shuba in 1972.

"Peggy is an example of what one needs to become a star," Button said. "Not only did she have the basic ingredients — classic beauty, talent and grace — but she got her act together. Everything fell into place. She projected. People never tired of her."

Owls' Ricky Pierce Wins SWC Honor

DALLAS (UPI) — Rice sophomore Ricky Pierce, a 6-5 transfer student who averaged more than 26 points per game last week in victories over Wright State and Texas Tech, Monday was named the Southwest Conference player of the week.

Pierce scored 27 points in Rice's 55-53 loss at Texas A&M Saturday. That performance, plus bringing down 14 rebounds against Tech and 11 against the Aggies, gave Pierce five of 15 votes cast by SWC coaches.

He moved to second on the SWC scoring list, averaging 18.2 points per game, behind Baylor's Terry Teagle, who's averaging 22.3 points per game. Teagle was second in he voting with three votes.

Estacado, Dunbar Face Rugged Foes

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

What more can be said about tonight's District 1-AAA showdown between Estacado and Borger that hasn't already been said over and over again? Apparently, not much.

Estacado — 18-10 overall and 1-1 in the district's second round of play — simply has to win. A loss knocks the Matadors out of title contention, and means EHS will be playing the rest of the season for pride.

Borger, on the other hand, is sitting pretty. After coming from behind to tie Estacado for the first-half championship, the Bulldogs have regained their form and are once again playing like a 20-2 team.

If you don't believe it, ask the Dumas Demons.

The Demons, who handed Estacado its opening loss in the 1-AAA second round by a 63-57 count, were butchered by Borger 74-50 in Dumas Friday night.

Meanwhile Estacado, which at one point had won nine of 10 contests, has lost two of its last four.

A 68-60 defeat at the hands of Levelland cost EHS sole possession of the first-half title (as well as a sure playoff berth), and last Tuesday's setback to Dumas put them in a must-win situation for the remainder of second-half action.

Even if Estacado beats Borger, the Mats would still have to win three more games before they could call themselves district champs.

After Borger, Estacado plays at Levelland and then hosts Dunbar. Should the Matadors win those three games, they would likely finish in a tie with the Bulldogs for the second-half title and would then play Borger in a playoff game.

Dunbar is in a must-win situation, too, though of a different sort. The Panthers have not yet won a district ball game.

And they have only Dumas, Borger and Estacado left on the schedule. In the first half, Dumas beat DHS 104-60; Borger won 73-63 and Estacado took a 88-72 win.

If this were any other school but Dunbar, it might not be so surprising. But since 1967, Dunbar has had only one losing season — and that squad went 13-14.

In all of those 14 years, Dunbar has never had a losing district season.

The fewest wins the Panthers ever had in loop play were six both last year and during the 1972-73 season. Over a full season, the fewest Dunbar wins were 13 in the losing 1972-73 year.

Now Joe McWilliams' bunch stands 10-16 and 0-7, with only slim hopes of improving on that.

"I don't think Dunbar has ever gone a season with as few wins as we have this year," said McWilliams, a star for the Panthers in his playing days. "I think from here things have to get better for us."

"Really, I think we have a bright future. We'll be young again next year, but we'll have some experience."

Along with experience, the Panthers may also have a team leader, something McWilliams says Dunbar has been lacking all season.

"I think the lack of senior leadership has really hurt us the most," McWilliams declared. "That and being as inconsistent as we have been all year. How are we going to do against Dumas? It's hard to say. It's the same old story, it's been that way since the beginning of the year."

"I don't feel like we have anything to lose," he continued. "This might be our last chance for a win. It looks that way. If we can't beat Dumas, it's going to be tough against Borger. And Estacado will probably be even more difficult."

Certainly, the last time Dumas and Dunbar played is etched in McWilliams' mind. The Demons ran up a 104-60 count, not pulling their starters until three minutes remained in the game.

At that time, McWilliams said "I will have no mercy in my heart for them the next time we play."

And if Dunbar returns to its old ways, you can bet he'll make good on that threat. His first three years as coach, the Panthers went 33-3 in district play.

In the other 1-AAA game tonight, Levelland visits Canyon.

Tonight is the last night of girls' competition across the South Plains. In District 1-AAA, second-half leader Canyon hosts Levelland and first-half champ Borger hosts Estacado. Only a combination of a Canyon loss and a Bulldog victory would prevent a playoff for the district title.

In 2-AAA, Monahans travels to Pecos. A win over the 0-3 Eagles would clinch the district's second-half title and force a playoff with Odessa Ector.

A loss, and Ector would tie for the second-half and win the overall championship.

In 3-AAA, Sweetwater and Lake View are 2-1 while Snyder is 2-0 with a game still to be made up against Brownfield. Tonight, Sweetwater is open and Lake View is at Snyder.

EMPTY-HANDED — North Carolina's Mike O'Koren (31) pulls a rebound away from the grasp of Georgia Tech's John Mann (45) during Atlantic Coast Conference play Monday night in Atlanta. North Carolina won 60-50. (AP Laserphoto)

Chaps Bow To Trinity, McVea

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — The Trinity Tigers took advantage of a Lubbock Christian College turnover with seven seconds remaining Monday night to post an 84-82 victory over the Chaparrals in TIAA competition.

Trinity held an 83-82 lead with seven seconds to play when Wyatt McVea missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw situation and LCC's Kevin Wharton came down with the rebound. But before the Chaps could get the ball across the midcourt line, the Tigers picked off an errant pass and picked up an insurance point on a Dan Marquez free throw with one second left to ice the win.

The loss was LCC's fourth in the last five games and dropped the Chaps to 5-4 in TIAA action and 15-16 overall. Trinity is now 5-4 in conference play and 9-9 overall.

The game was tied 13 times and the lead changed hands 23 times. The lead changed hands 20 times in the second half alone.

LCC had the biggest lead of the night, 44-38, with 17:08 remaining in the second half. The Chaps trailed at intermission 38-36, but scored the first eight points of the second stanza to pull ahead.

Keith Gardner and Bruce Carver led the Chaps with 22 and 20 points respectively. Wharton added 16 counters and 16 rebounds. Jim Steensma also dropped in 10 for the losers.

McVea led all scorers with 35 tallies.

Tech Women Netters Meet South Plains

LEVELLAND (Special) — The Texas Tech women's tennis team will meet South Plains College here today at 2:30 p.m.

The Raiders and SPC have already met twice this season with Tech taking home 5-1 and 9-0 dual match wins. Tech will take a 14-6-1 dual match record into the tilt.

WHBA NEEDS GAME — The Western Hills Baptist Academy boys' basketball team needs a basketball game for Friday. WHBA will play any Class B or A district champion. For further information call Jim Briggs at 796-4304.

Coronado, MHS Duel Offers Diluted Suspense

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

What started out as a showdown might just turn out to be nothing but a showup tonight.

For awhile, it looked like tonight's meeting between the Coronado Mustangs and the Monterey Plainsmen had the makings of a first-class barnburner. But all that changed last Friday night when the Mustangs blew a 17-point third-quarter lead and wound up losing to Plainview 71-70. And while the Mustangs were allowing the Bulldogs to celebrate Christmas 11 months early, Monterey was also giving more than receiving.

Like a Studebaker with locked brakes, Joe Michalka's Plainsmen saw their 23-game winning streak come to a screeching halt last week. Hereford, which faces

Lubbock High tonight at 7:30 in the LHS gym, defeated Monterey 64-53.

Let's set the scene for tonight's game then:

• Both teams still have a chance at tying for the District 4-AAAA crown. But, in reality, neither can win it outright with one loss already under their belts.

• A win would mean quite a bit more to Monterey than to Coronado. Reason: Monterey ends its conference race Friday night against Plainview. A win tonight over Coronado and a victory Friday translates into a district championship for the Plainsmen. And that means a bi-district contest against the District 3-AAAA champ. But a loss to either the Mustangs or the Bulldogs means post-season playoff between Monterey and — in all likelihood — Plainview a week from Friday. (Monterey, remember, has already won the first-half title with a 4-0 mark).

• Oh, Coronado still has an outside shot at the title. But it's comparable to hitting a moving target in the dark with a pea shooter at 100 paces. Coronado must win its remaining three games (Monterey, Lubbock High and Hereford) and hope that Plainview loses to both Monterey and Lubbock. That's all it takes.

"We brought it on ourselves," said CHS coach Barry Arwine, following the loss to Plainview.

The Monterey girls, which meet Coronado prior to the boys' contest, can wrap up a district championship with a win over the Mustangs. Monterey, however, has already won a trip to the bi-district contest opposite the District 3-AAAA winner.

Queens Shave Tech

PLAINVIEW (Special) — The Texas Tech women's basketball team was turned back in its quest for win No. 20 for the third straight time here Monday night, dropping a 72-61 decision to the Wayland Baptist Flying Queens.

The Raiders, after losing three straight, are 19-9 on the year while WBC is 16-9. Earlier this year the Raiders took a 75-72 decision from the Queens in Lubbock.

The game was close until the 6:44 mark of the final half when the Raiders went six minutes without scoring a single point. Tech had trailed by only three, 57-54, but during that stretch fell behind 68-54.

Kathy Booth paced the WBC attack with 20 points and Jamie Horacek added 18 for the Queens. Although Wayland did not get a single free throw in the first half, they were 14 of 15 at the line in the second stanza.

Henson's Bomb Misses As Louisville Triumphs

By The Associated Press
It was a long shot. Well, not as long as Les Henson's — but just long enough for Louisville.

"The play was just to get it to Darrell Griffith and let him do what he could with it," said Louisville coach Denny Crum.

Spinning around at the baseline, Griffith went high in the air and hit a 20-footer with one second left in overtime to give the nation's third-ranked college basketball team a 56-54 victory over stubborn Virginia Tech Monday night.

"Griffith hit it with two hands in his face," said Virginia Tech coach Charlie Moor.

After Griffith's shot, Henson launched a 40-footer from just beyond the half-court mark for Virginia Tech. But the ball just missed — hitting the rim inside the basket and bounced out at the buzzer. Henson, of course, was the player who beat Florida State earlier this season with a record 89-foot, 6-inch shot at the final second.

In other action Monday night involving the nation's Top Twenty teams, eighth-ranked Maryland walloped Boston University 99-76. 11th-ranked North Carolina defeated Georgia Tech 60-50, and No. 12 Notre Dame turned back San Francisco 78-66.

"There aren't too many guards that can block one of my jumpers," said Griffith. "I just concentrated on getting good elevation. I wasn't having what you would call a hot night (7-of-19), but that's basketball. You can't let that bother you."

Griffith wound up with 14 points for Cardinals, one behind team leader Wiley Brown, who scored 15. Virginia Tech's Dale Solomon led all scorers with 27 points.

Albert King scored 32 points, including 16 of 17 free throws, to lead Maryland's victory over Boston University. King's first free throw of the game gave him 30 in a row, then he missed his next attempt before dropping in the next 15.

Michael O'Koren scored 17 points to lead North Carolina past Georgia Tech. The Tar Heels scored only two field goals in the last 10 minutes, but hit 20 free throws in that time.

"We got a lot of practice shooting foul shots," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "But, that's the way they chose to play it."

Trinity Women Defeat Chaps

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — The Lubbock Christian College women's basketball team lost a 68-66 heartbreaker in overtime to Trinity Monday night.

The loss dropped the Lady Chaps to 6-14 this season and 4-4 in Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association competition. Trinity is 5-4 and 3-6. The game was tied 12 times, including a 32-32 tie at halftime and 60-60 at the end of regulation. Trinity then outscored LCC 8-6 in overtime.

The Lady Chaps' biggest lead was eight points, 20-12, with 8:59 left in the first half.

Trinity then came up with eight straight points, to tie the score. Trinity had two six-point leads in the second half.

poll for the fourth straight week. DePaul was tabbed No. 1 on all 58 ballots and received a perfect score of 1,160 in the voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

But that was the easy part. DePaul faced a tougher challenge in upping its record to 20-0 last Saturday — Dayton. It took a basket by Clyde Bradshaw with three seconds left before DePaul emerged with a 65-63 triumph.

"We got the scare of our lives," said Meyer after the game.

DePaul wasn't the only team to find a niche to its liking — the next-five teams in the poll also remained unchanged.

Second-ranked Syracuse collected collected 1,047 points in outdistancing Louisville for the runnerup slot. The Cardinals, who posted victories over Cincinnati and Providence last week, were third with 1,012 points.

Oregon State, which nipped Arizona State in overtime last week, was fourth with 959 points, followed by Kentucky, 898, and Louisiana State, 874.

Trade Rumor Involves Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Robinson, the Pittsburgh Pirates' part-time slugger, says he's given permission to Pirate management to be traded to the Houston Astros, but that's as far as a possible trade has gone.

"I don't know where I stand, but if Houston still wants me I want to play for them," the 36-year-old Robinson said. "I want to play everyday and help bring them a pennant."

The veteran Robinson, with 10 years' major league experience and five years with the same team, has veto power over any trade the Pirates try to make.

Robinson said his agent told the Pirates on Jan. 24 he'd approve a trade to Houston, but Pirates' general manager Harding Peterson said no such notification had been given.

"First of all, I have to decide whether I even want to trade Bill," Peterson said. "Two, he then has to give us his okay. Neither Bill nor his agent has given us that okay yet."

A deal by the Astros for Robinson likely would send unhappy Astros' pitcher Joaquin Andujar to the world champions.

Robinson hit 24 home runs and knocked in 75 runs for the Pirates last season and hit .264 in his part-time role.

The unpredictable Andujar once last season took a shower in his uniform to avoid talking with newsmen. Andujar had an up and down season with the Astros last season.

Andujar won five of six starts in June and earned NL pitcher of the week.

Andujar later was named to the NL All-Star team and pitched two innings allowing two runs on two hits. But Andujar won only two of his last nine decisions, finishing the season with a 12-12 record and 3.43 earned run average.

Foreign Languages Easy To Learn, Teacher Says

BELOIT, Wis. (AP) — Webster's defines clarity as "directness, orderliness and precision of thought or expression." Hence, Bud Clarity is aptly named, in this or any of the other four dozen or so languages he speaks and writes.

Clarity retired recently as a linguistics professor at Beloit College, where he taught 35 different foreign languages.

Students would come to him, announce what language they wanted to learn and Clarity would teach it to them.

"I can learn a language today and teach it to you tomorrow," he says matter-of-factly.

Clarity, a 66-year-old bachelor, admits he was often only a day or two ahead of the student, depending on the language. But he taught them all, from Arabic to Swahili.

"Once you know the system of a language, you may lose the vocabulary, but you still have the system," he says. "By system, I mean each language has a way it all fits together in theoretic patterns."

His first system was Irish, the ancient Gaelic spoken at home by his parents. He picked up Latin and French in high school, but really didn't begin collecting languages until he was out of work for five years during the Depression.

With a short-wave radio, he listened for hours to broadcasts from Poland, Russia and Norway. He went to libraries for books and taught himself those systems.

He majored in German in college and was an Army intelligence officer interrogating German prisoners in World War II. He then taught at Cornell and Louisiana State universities before going to Saudi Arabia in 1950 as a language consultant for an oil company.

"I didn't know any Arabic at the time," he says. "But if you can learn one language, you can learn another."

He spent 12 years teaching the company's American workers the general and technical work-related aspects of various Arabic languages, and returned to Beloit to teach German in 1962.

Some Jewish students expressed an interest in modern Hebrew. Clarity didn't know any, but he organized the class and from then on would teach any language a student wanted to learn.

"I had had the experience of nobody wanting to help me," he explains. "Whatever language they wanted, I'd teach it."

He says he is an expert phonetician and loves alphabets — "I know dozens of them" — but believes anyone can learn foreign languages.

"It enriches your life," he says. "It's human-oriented. You shouldn't just study the language. Look at the history, cook the food, listen to the music and learn the folk dances."

He believes children should be taught languages because their ability to pronounce odd sounds begins to fade at age 16, but says much of this country's foreign language education is wasted.

"If you want to make progress in a language, you have to have a goal, preferably to visit the country," Clarity says. "I don't believe you can learn to speak a language in the classroom. You have to go to the place where it's used if you want to be a fluent speaker."

Keeping his own languages up via short-wave radio and planning more trips abroad, Clarity wants to spend his retirement on an academic project: finding the vowels that were somehow dropped out of Egyptian thousands of years ago. But first he has to learn Coptic, a language that died out somewhere around the 16th century.

He suggests that people tracing their family "roots" also learn the languages of the ancestors, and advises, "languages like Norwegian, Swedish and Dutch are probably easiest for the English speaker because the grammar is similar."

He says modern Greek is his personal favorite for pure beauty, but, "Italian feels good in your mouth. It has good vowel quality, a great language for singers. You show emotion by lengthening the vowels."

"French has too many nasals to sound good, but it has been used beautifully."

He likes Russian for its expressiveness, thinks Cambodian sounds odd because of its lack of variety and disdains Spanish for its staccato syllable pattern.

He likes Swahili's vowels and finely tuned reference system, says Chinese's one-syllable words with many inflections make it "extremely succinct," and labels Gujarati, spoken in parts of India, as "the toughest" to learn.

Unless prodded, Clarity won't say much about English.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Worrying out unforeseen eventualities could cause you to rationalize yourself into inactivity tomorrow. That would be a serious mistake.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Skirt topics of conversation tomorrow that might annoy a friend. Speaking without thinking could generate a heated debate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't operate in fits and starts tomorrow. This would prove counterproductive. Only after you've finished one project should you begin another.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Normally, you're not the type of person who jumps to conclusions. Tomorrow, you could form inaccurate opinions before all the facts are in.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be wary of a tendency to be easily distracted. Success will not elude you if you force yourself to concentrate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Problems between you and your mate can be resolved tomorrow through a little give-and-take. Set the tone by being the first to compromise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Behaving too impulsively in business or career matters could cause you problems tomorrow. Take plenty of time to sound things out before making any moves.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A situation may develop tomorrow which could cause you to feel you're being taken advantage of by a friend. Point out the inequities.

The other party won't be aware of them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may not be too willing to help others tomorrow unless there is something in it for you. This role is not in character for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to judge others on their actions tomorrow, rather than on how they behaved in the past. Past memories should be treated for what they are — past memories.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Before spending money frivolously tomorrow, ask yourself if these funds could be better used to enrich the lives of those in your charge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Disappointments are likely tomorrow if you expect others to do things exactly as you think they should. Allow them the freedom of expression you reserve for yourself.

Murderer Granted Stay Of Execution

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Convicted murderer James Adams has been granted an indefinite stay of execution from his scheduled date this week in Florida's electric chair, his attorney says.

The stay will remain in force pending a hearing before U.S. District Judge Jose A. Gonzalez, attorney Craig Barnard said. Gonzalez granted the reprieve recently, following the Florida Supreme Court's unanimous rejection of Adams' plea.

'Aggressive Scheduling' Backfired For Network

By PETER J. BOYER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Aggressive scheduling," it was called, a programming strategy aimed at exploiting a wealth of popular shows and, perhaps, setting the course of a prime time television dynasty.
ABC's plan backfired, or at least, sputtered, and the result is that ABC is engaged in a ratings battle with CBS that is closer than most TV observers imagined possible at the beginning of the season.
Interestingly, the man responsible for ABC's 1979-80 schedule says he would do it again, that the shifting of popular shows — most notably, "Mork and Mindy," "Fantasy Island," "Laverne and Shirley" — was sound strategy subverted by unpredictable circumstances.
Tony Thomopoulos, president of ABC Entertainment, considers the mixed reviews accorded his strategy:
"I think you can look at it from the marvelous perspective called 'hindsight.' But given the same set of circumstances — knowing what we know then, not what we know now — we'd probably make the same changes with some minor adjustments."
"The moves we made were not totally successful, but they did accomplish certain things. They did allow us to establish a hit with a show called 'Benson' and they did allow us to build another hit with 'Hart to Hart,' which has had some very positive effects for the network."
Actually, that is a matter open to question. "Laverne and Shirley" was moved from its very successful Tuesday night slot to lead the way for "Benson" on Thursdays. But "Laverne and Shirley" lost a substantial portion of its audience in the move, and has shown no signs of fully recovering in its new Monday night slot.
And "Fantasy Island" was moved from its Saturday night slot to give "Hart to Hart" the advantage of "Fantasy Island's" former "Love Boat" lead-in; but "Fantasy Island" couldn't maintain itself on Fridays, and "Hart to Hart" became a hit not in that Saturday slot, but in its new Tuesday night time period.
"The 'Mork and Mindy' move from Thursday to Sunday was, as far as I'm concerned, and even in hindsight, a positive move for us. Even though it sat there as an 8 o'clock island by itself, it averaged a 22 rating. If we didn't have 'Mork and Mindy' in that time period, I wonder what would have happened."

What did happen was that "Mork" left the realm of 38 and 40 ratings scores for a man to man encounter with CBS' Archie Bunker, and Bunker prevailed.
"There is no taking away from the fact that CBS scheduled very smartly on Sunday. But at the same time, there was an enormous benefit accrued to them by the lead-in of football."
Here, Thomopoulos has a point. He refers to a circumstance called "football rerun," which worked strongly in CBS' favor during the season, a CBS-televised game would run past its estimated three-hour link, carrying viewers straight into "60 Minutes."
Viewers were inclined to stick with CBS rather than miss the end of a game, and switching to the other two networks at game's end meant joining a program in progress.
"The reruns led into '60 Minutes,' which carried into their 8 o'clock shows, and then into the rest of their evening. I think if there was one factor we underestimated, it was the number of reruners and the impact of those reruners on 7 o'clock in the evening. I don't think we realized that circumstances would allow for that number of reruners. That's not to take anything from CBS, that's just the circumstances."

There was another factor at work on Sunday — the disappointing showing of ABC's "The Associates," the critically acclaimed sitcom about a Wall Street law firm that lasted just a few weeks before being lifted from the schedule.
"We scheduled 'The Associates' in a time period (following 'Mork' on Sunday) that was just too early. I think that, deep down inside, we might have known it was too early, but we were just wishing that it would be an early appeal show. It didn't turn out that way, but it did turn out to be a very good show, and in early March we'll bring it back at a later time period."
"Was our strategy totally successful? No, it wasn't. But I still think it was a sound strategy."

Influenza Strain Spreading

ATLANTA (AP) — A mild strain of influenza is spreading across the United States, affecting mostly children and young adults in sporadic cases, health officials say.
The national Center for Disease Control has received reports of Influenza B strains in 19 states, while state health officials in one additional state also have reported the disease.
The CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report that Influenza B has been confirmed in Georgia, Missouri, Montana and Texas during the latest reporting period. Oklahoma health officials also have reported Influenza B in that state.
Previously, the CDC said Influenza B has been confirmed in Arizona, California, Illinois, Wisconsin, Delaware, New Jersey, Colorado, Utah, Oregon, Hawaii, Alaska, Michigan, New York, Ohio and Washington.
A more virulent strain, Influenza A, has been diagnosed in a 59-year-old Arkansas resident, the third such case since the beginning of the current flu season, the center said.

Nixons Visiting Millionaire Florida Retreat

KEY LARGO, Fla. (UPI) — Some of the things former President Richard M. Nixon likes best about southeast Florida — luxury and privacy — were abundant this week.
The Nixons flew in from California recently aboard a commercial jet liner. Without stopping for a word with waiting reporters or onlookers, they were whisked off to join old friend C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo.
The Key Biscayne banker took the Nixons to his new home at Ocean Reef, a hideaway for millionaires at the north tip of Key Largo, some 55 miles south of Miami.

Ocean Reef, fenced in and reachable only by a single road, boat or light plane, has some of the tightest private security in the nation. It sometimes is used by the Defense and State Departments to house foreign officials attending meetings at Homestead Air Force Base.
