Blaze Sweeps Club; At Least 42 Killed

CHAPAIS, Quebec (UPI) — A fire apparently started as a prank by a New Year's reveler raced through a crowded community club early Tuesday, killing at least 42 people, some trampled to death by screaming guests fighting to escape.

ber of partygoers who attended the New Year's eve charity fete were missing. Searchers probing the ruins recovered 41 bodies in and around the wood-frame building in this remote mining town of 2,200. Another victim died in a hospital of burns.

21-year-old man was taken into custody for questioning on the cause of the blaze and a spokesman said "We are investigating whether the fire was criminal or accidental in origin."

Water Remains Area Problem

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff
THROUGHOUT the 1970s, West Texas read like the back of an instant soup can: "Just Add Water And Stir."

The first truly serious mention of water importation into West Texas, an idea which had been mentioned several times in preceding years, came in 1974, when Brig. Gen. James Rose, Gov. Dolph Briscoe's special planning coordinator, told a Lubbock meeting of Water Inc. that "High Plains residents possibly could witness some form of water importation through the area within five to 10 years."

In Retrospect the 70s

Rose didn't go into specifics, but his remarks were directed at tentative plans to pipe water from the Mississippi River through Louisiana into West Texas. That idea sounded good, but eventually fell through, thanks to a series of complications.

The water situation began to make its presence felt in 1973 and 1974 when a drought proved that several of the area's smaller towns could face water problems as severe as the bigger cities unless something were done.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected off the coast of Washington and Oregon for today and snow is predicted for western North Dakota and a small portion of Montana, according to the National Weather Service. The rest of the nation should have clear skies. (AP Laserphoto)

Pleasant Weather Opens 1980

A-J News Services
The 1980s got off to a promising start with a beautiful New Year's Day over the South Plains.

Today will also be pleasant, weathermen predicted, but somewhat cooler with temperatures near 50 degrees.

The high Tuesday was 64.

Partly cloudy skies through Thursday are forecast for Lubbock and the South Plains.

The low tonight will be in the low 20s and the high Thursday in the upper 40s.

Winds will be northerly at 10 to 15 mph today.

The entire state had mild New Year's Day weather with 4 p.m. temperatures ranging from 53 at Dalhart on the High Plains to 73 at McAllen in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Lubbock ended 1979 with an official 20.82 inches of precipitation at Lubbock International Airport and substantially more in parts of the city during the year. The official total is 2.41 inches above normal, weathermen said.

Fog engulfed the nation's midlands and freezing rain glazed highways in the Plains and upper Midwest Tuesday, slowing travel and posing potentially lethal hazards to motorists heading home from New Year's festivities.

The 1980s arrived to weather more fitting for spring than winter, with nary a flake of snow outside the western mountains. Temperatures were relatively warm for much of the country, but fog and ice made travel a nightmare.

Police said the fog and freezing rain could cause a deadly flurry of traffic accidents as millions of motorists headed home from parades, parties, sporting events and other New Year's revelries.

Authorities across much of the Midwest reported roads fogshrouded or slippery. The fog and icy roads were blamed for a number of fatal accidents in the Midwest early Tuesday.

Dense fog spread from southern Michigan across the upper Ohio Valley. Another blanket of fog spread from the eastern Dakotas to the upper Mississippi and lower Missouri Valleys.

Thick banks of fog cut visibility to zero in some areas.

Freezing drizzle dotted parts of the Plains and the northern Mississippi Valley, combining with the fog to make driving even more hazardous.

Travel advisories were posted across parts of Missouri and Michigan.

Fog also rolled over parts of the West.

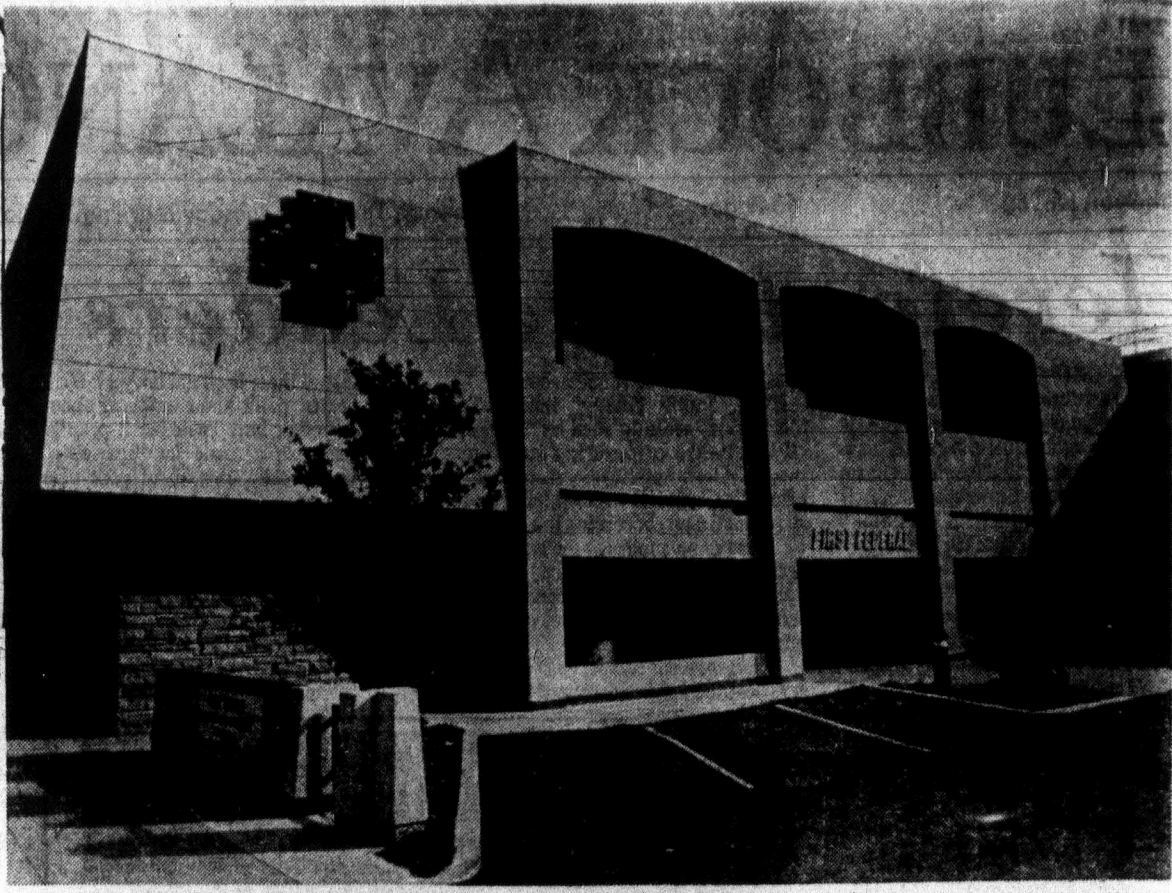

Travel advisories were posted along the Wasatch Mountains in northern Utah in the valleys of northern and central California and southwestern Idaho.

Scattered light rain dotted the Pacific Northwest. Rain and snow — with scattered freezing rain — spread over the northern Plateau.

Strong, gusty winds prompted travel advisories for the higher elevations of the Sierra Nevada in northern California.

Rain and drizzle spread from northern Alabama to South Carolina.

Cloudy skies stretched over the Rockies and the sun shone on the southern Plains, the lower Mississippi Valley and the northern Atlantic Seaboard.

RECYCLED BUILDING — One of the best examples of recycled architecture in Lubbock is the building housing the First Federal Savings and Loan Association. Located on the corner of Broadway and Avenue L, the structure was built in 1955 and first served as the downtown store for Dunlap's. The savings and loan firm decided to renovate the structure in 1976 after it had stood vacant for several years. (Staff Photo by Linn Scherwitz)

Recycling Buildings Becoming Popular Method Of Renovation

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Recycling became the "in" thing to do in the 1970s, as Americans learned to conserve their natural resources by reusing paper, cans, clothing and even old buildings.

This tendency to recycle architectural structures caught on in Lubbock during the past decade, resulting in some interesting new uses for older buildings.

For instance, a small fast-food restaurant that once dished up chicken and potato salad to hungry customers was transformed into a haven for posies, petunias and hanging plants. It's now called the Posey Palace, located at 4620 34th St.

A modern supermarket where harried housewives once wheeled their grocery carts is now the scene for disco roller skaters. The new business is called the Skate Machine, which opened Nov. 30 at 5002 34th St.

A church located at 3400 50th St. became the new home for the West Texas Savings Association. And a drive-in restaurant at 3202 34th St. shut down its grills and reopened as The Last Book Store.

The teachers have rejected two pay proposals, one of which would give them a 7 percent increase retroactive to Sept. 1 and a 9 percent boost next Sept. 1. The second proposal would provide an immediate 10 percent increase and another 10 percent on Dec. 31, 1980.

The union says the proposals are virtually identical because of the differing effective dates and are little different from the original offer voted down before teachers struck. The union is demanding pay raises totaling 27 percent over two years.

The teachers' pay now ranges from $9,828 to $20,072 a year.

In Cincinnati, meanwhile, the board of education and school employee unions, with an assist from the City Council, reached a settlement hours before a midnight Monday strike deadline.

The board and union representatives agreed to a 37 percent raise over the next 2½ years. The agreement was facilitated by a $1 million "lease" from the City Council of some school facilities.

A starting teacher in the 56,000-pupil Cincinnati school district earns $9,511.

In Illinois, Gov. James R. Thompson said he hoped the 48,000 employees of Chicago's school system — who already missed one payday — would be paid on Friday and that a temporary solution to the system's cash shortage could be arrived at next week.

Chicago politicians and school leaders, facing the prospect of closing the 475,000-pupil system because of a lack of money, met over the weekend to try to come up with a rescue plan.

As in most cases, economics played a role in the decision to renovate. Maeker explained, "They could get about twice the space in this building for about the same money as they could have gotten if they built a new building."

However, there was also an interest in revamping Lubbock's downtown area. Maeker said. By recycling the old building at Broadway and Avenue L, Maeker feels the savings and loan firm salvaged something of worth which has enhanced the city's central core.

Another major local recycling effort was the transformation of the old Fort Worth and Denver Railway Station into a fashionable restaurant. The Depot Restaurant, located at 1801 Ave. G, is considered one of the best examples of historic preservation in Lubbock. Recently the structure was designated the city's first design-historic landmark.

Many local residents see the efforts to recycle old buildings as a means of preserving Lubbock's history.

"It's one thing to live in the past, but it's another thing to project our past into the future," Maeker observed.

One of the most notable examples of architectural recycling in Lubbock is the building that houses First Federal Savings and Loan Association at 1300 Broadway. This structure, which stands on the site of the old Lubbock Memorial Hospital, was built in 1955 and served as the downtown location for Dunlap's until shortly after the 1970 tornado. Then, it stood empty for a number of years, standing as a solemn reminder of the

Teachers Give No Indication Of Obeying Order

CLEVELAND (AP) — Negotiators worked through New Year's Day under a judge's order in an effort to settle a 76-day-old teachers' strike, but the teachers gave no indication whether they would obey another court order and return to work Wednesday.

Some of the 5,200 members of the Cleveland Teachers' Union have insisted throughout the strike — longest teachers strike in the nation this school year — that they would defy any order to return. But union president Eugene G. Kolach declined comment Tuesday on how many teachers he expected to show up on Wednesday.

Bernard Berkman, a union lawyer, had said earlier, "This is a union in which the individuals ... make their own decisions."

The teachers, who walked off the job on Oct. 18, were ordered Monday by Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Frederick M. Coleman to report back to their classrooms at 8 a.m. Wednesday. The 92,000 pupils in Ohio's largest school system are to report to classes on Thursday.

Coleman said he was uncertain what he would do if the teachers disobeyed his order.

"School teachers are professionals — law abiding, in most instances, and should be the people (who) ... should be least likely to violate in a flagrant fashion any court order. They teach our society how to conduct itself," Coleman said Monday after issuing his order.

School board president John E. Gallagher Jr. said Tuesday from the hotel where negotiations were being held that the board had not changed the offers that were overwhelmingly rejected by the teachers last month in a secret mail ballot.

Immediately after Coleman issued his order Monday, five board members, top union officials, their lawyers and negotiators went to a downtown hotel to resume talks, which had been at a standstill for three weeks. Two federal mediators were sitting in.

High Court Sets Hearing On Suit By Area Couple

A-J AUSTIN BUREAU
AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court has agreed to hear arguments on whether a Hockley County couple or their insurance company is entitled to $4,000 in damages recovered from persons who allegedly improperly installed carpet padding which resulted in a fire.

Mike and Olivia Ortiz brought the suit, seeking damages for the fire which they contended resulted from carpet padding placed negligently over a floor furnace.

The lawsuit sought $4,000 for damages to the house and $11,614 for damage to personal property. An agreement was reached for the sum of $10,000.

Great Southern Fire and Casualty Insurance Co. had insured the dwelling only for $8,500. Total damages of over $14,000 were alleged.

The company paid $4,000 on the fire damage to the policyholders, and then claimed the right to recover the $4,000 from the other parties.

The Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals said the insurer had "acquired an equitable right" to recover what it had paid out for the fire damage.

The appeal to the Supreme Court, however, contends that ruling is in conflict with other court of civil appeals decisions.

The Supreme Court agreed to hear the case on that point, and on whether the trial court had erred in granting a summary judgment for the insurer.

Oral arguments in the case were set for 9 a.m. Feb. 20.

DPS Slates Closing Of Lubbock Roads

Travelers heading west on Loop 289 and intending to travel south on U.S. 87, and those going south on U.S. 87 and planning to go east on Loop 289, should plan to select alternate routes for about a week.

Church Sets Battle Against City Crime

St. Matthews Baptist Church has opened a New Year's Crusade aimed at combatting the city's crime rate.

The crusade, which is being conducted by the Ambassadors For Christ Crusade Team, is aimed at crime areas in East Lubbock, according to the Rev. R. S. Stanley, church pastor and sponsor.

The ongoing crusade is to include joint efforts by several churches in the target area, Stanley said.

Rhodesian Police Kill Attackers

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — The British governor sent Rhodesian paramilitary police into action Tuesday, ordering them to pursue guerrillas who attacked a white-owned farm on the fourth day of the cease-fire.

In the first major clash of the truce, the police tracked down 10 guerrillas who had been driven off by the farm's owner, and killed seven of the black nationalists in two skirmishes, a British spokesman said.

According to the provisions of the peace settlement worked out to lead to elections and formal independence from Britain, Patriotic Front guerrillas have until midnight Jan. 4 to assemble at 16 locations.

Nicholas Fenn, chief spokesman for British interim Gov. Lord Soames said British officials were concerned because the number of guerrillas reporting to assembly points "was not rising fast enough," but he said the deadline would not be extended.

Soames told the guerrillas in a message broadcast Tuesday: "If you do not join your comrades in the assembly areas by midnight Jan. 4 you will be breaking the cease-fire and will be unlawful."

After the deadline, any armed men in the field will be considered outlaws and may be pursued by any forces, Rhodesian or Patriotic Front, at Soames' disposal. Paramilitary police were at their posts, but Rhodesian Army troops, known here as security forces, have been confined to their barracks while the cease-fire takes effect.

British sources said a member of the 1,300-man Commonwealth monitoring force broke a leg when his vehicle detonated a landmine on a road thought to have been cleared of mines on Friday.

The military command here reported numerous cases of criminal and other hostile acts directed against the civilian population.

The command said a woman died when her car hit a land mine and a man was abducted by a group of guerrillas loyal to Joshua Nkomo's Zambia-based faction of the Patriotic Front — the Zimbabwe African People's Union.

But British authorities said they hoped violence will begin to ebb and that more guerrillas will report to their designated assembly points. To date an estimated 3,000 guerrillas have reported to various points.

Black Guerrillas Gathering In Cease-Fire Camps

By JOHN EDLIN

HOYA, Rhodesia (AP) — British army sergeant Chris Wallace and black nationalist guerrilla commander Comrade Gilbert take their Land Rover over the dirt roads and trails of the Zambesi Valley bush trying to make Rhodesia's four-day cease-fire work.

"They're a jolly good team," said Maj. Christopher Lehardy, British commander of the 17-man monitoring force at this assembly camp. Guerrillas emerging by the hundreds from hideouts throughout the country must check in before deadline. If they do not check in by Jan. 4 they will be outlaws.

Wallace, 31, from Sheffield, Yorkshire, has been driving Zimbabwe African National Union's Comrade Gilbert through the bush on often booby-trapped roads — their task to urge wary insurgents to heed the truce.

"All I really want to do is go home to my wife," Wallace said. "But a soldier does what he must."

Comrade Gilbert, in camouflage garb and carrying the Russian-made Kalashnikov rifle he has used against Rhodesian troops for several years, grinned and would say nothing.

The other 280 guerrillas, including at least eight women, would say little more.

Most were no older than 25, clad in camouflage and civilian clothing, and armed with mortars, rockets, grenades, machine guns and rifles.

Comrade Toolboy, 21, left his father's Mt. Darwin business about 60 miles from here to join Robert Mugabe's guerrillas in Mozambique in 1975. He would say only that he's been fighting "to get our independence."

For seven years the guerrillas have fought first the white minority government, then the bi-racial government they claimed was a facade for continued white rule. More than 20,000 people have died in the war. This cease-fire and upcoming elections are designed to give the breakaway British colony independence.

Their commanders and liaison officer, working with British monitoring officers to induce the guerrillas into 16 assembly points, told the weary-looking irregulars not to speak to visitors.

The Zambesi Valley is near both Mozambique and Zambia, main springboards for incursions by thousands of guerrillas during the war.

The small British force, armed with assault rifles, pistols and light machine guns, was ambushed by guerrillas when they were led in by Rhodesian troops before the cease-fire began midnight Friday.

The Rhodesians shot back, the guerrillas melted into the bush and the convoy rolled on to assembly point Alpha where the British soldiers set up tents.

There they found that four large, cor-rugged iron water-storage tanks had all been punctured by bullets — the work, it turned out, of Comrade Gilbert.

"He thought we were Rhodesians," said Major Lehardy as some of his men plugged the holes with sticks. "We all had a big laugh about it when he told us," Comrade Gilbert grinned.

Hours later, a small group of guerrillas ventured towards the hilltop camp with machine guns, rocket launchers, grenades and rifles.

"We dug in like moles when they appeared," said Sgt. Mick Walker, 32.

India Angered By Arms Sales To Pakistan

NEW DELHI, India (AP) 09.55. Ambassador Robert F. Goheen departed for consultations in Washington Tuesday following the angry reaction here to the reported lifting of restrictions on American arms sales to neighboring Pakistan, a U.S. Embassy official said.

The official said the trip had been planned weeks before but that the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the possibility of resuming weapons shipments to Pakistan were expected to be discussed.

President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, was quoted in an interview in Washington Sunday as saying the United States is prepared to make more cash sales of weapons to Pakistan in view of the Soviet action.

Sharp reaction was reflected in angry newspaper headlines here and directly to Goheen who had been summoned to the Foreign Office on Monday to discuss the arms issue.

Caretaker Prime Minister Charan Singh told an election campaign meeting that if Pakistan is sent new arms, "we know they will be used against us." Indians and Pakistanis have fought three wars since 1947.

Goheen was told during a 30-minute meeting with Eric Gonsalves, a ranking External Affairs Ministry official, that the "supply of arms in the past to Pakistan had invariably led to an increase in tension in South Asia," an Indian government spokesman told reporters.

Commenting on the reported U.S. move, the pro-Soviet newspaper, Patriot, said: "(President) Carter does not... possess the moral right to show indignation over Soviet military presence in Afghanistan. He is not so innocent as to believe that the Soviet Union would never react to deliberate provocations..."

In Islamabad, the Pakistan government said India need not fear new U.S. arms would be used against India. "Far from desiring conflict, Pakistan has been seeking improved relations with India and remains firmly committed to this policy," a Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

The state of Idaho entered the Union on July 3, 1880.

Mecca, Saudi Officials Resign Because Of Holy Shrine Siege

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The governor of Mecca has resigned and other high-ranking Saudi officials have been removed or reassigned in a flurry of royal decrees apparently reflecting dissatisfaction over the handling of last month's siege of Islam's holiest shrine in Mecca.

The state radio broadcast royal decrees resigning three top officials and an announcement late Tuesday said Emir Fawwaz Ben Abdelaziz, the ruler of the holy city, had resigned for "health reasons."

King Khaled approved the resignation and no new Emir was appointed, the official statement said.

The Emir is a member of the ruling Saud family.

The official Saudi press agency said Khaled issued a decree ending the military service of two high-ranking army officers and appointing them to foreign service posts. The chief of staff was also retired Dec. 21.

Several hundred armed men officially described as Moslem extremists stormed the Grand Mosque in Mecca Nov. 20. Despite the efforts of Saudi security forces, some attackers held out in the catacombs under the mosque for two weeks.

The official Saudi media did not mention the mosque siege. But observers said it was apparent the changes were prompted by the siege because so many security officials were involved.

The announcement said Maj. Gen. Fayed Mohammed al Oufi was appointed as advisor to the interior ministry and border corps Maj. Gen. Abdullah Ben Abdul Rahman al Sheik was appointed director of general security.

The radio said another royal decree assigned the special security forces commander, Gen. Bin Halla to replace al-Sheik as border patrol director, and al-Sheik's former assistant director general of the border corps was appointed commander of the special security forces. All these changes were made by royal decree.

Board To Clear Bill's Language

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Home Loan Bank Board has promised a New York senator it will clarify language in a bill recently passed by Congress that could force many home purchasers to accept mortgage payments they cannot afford.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said the problem is with a bill that suspends state ceilings on mortgage interest rates. The bill is intended to free up mortgage money in states that have interest ceilings well below market rates.

But Javits said it could trap purchasers who have committed themselves in contracts to buy one money becomes available, believing when they made the commitment that the most they would pay would be the state ceiling rate.

HEARTLINE: I am 78 years old. I write poetry. I have been writing poetry for 52 years. I never thought about publishing it until a year or so ago when I saw an ad in a magazine that said this company was looking for new writing talent, especially poetry. I am afraid my vanity got the best of me and I sent them a manuscript of 100 of my poems. I foolishly sat around for 10 days wondering and worrying that maybe I should have had my work copyrighted before I sent it. But my work wasn't stolen; quite to the contrary. They wrote me back and said they wanted to publish a book of my poetry and that they needed $500 to get everything started. Visions of fame fled across my eyes and I sent the money. Less than two months later, I received a box of cheaply bound books with my name on the cover.

However, it is quite evident now that this company never had any intention of really publishing and promoting my book. They simply printed 50 of them. They even had enough nerve to write me again asking me if I wanted a thousand more. I am sure there are others that have been duped as I have been, and there will probably be more. I think this merits mention in your column, so others will be warned. — E.E.

Subsidized book publishing has its place and purpose — we do not mean to imply that it does not. Many books which contain subject material of limited or special interest could not otherwise be printed. The chicanery creeps in when the publisher understates the true nature of his or her business. The so-called vanity publishers also exact fees from older people. Older Americans, who have nursed an idea to publish a book, or wish to have someone else's book published, could be caught in this trap.

The vanity press will publish a book for a price. Often, they do not inform the person that he or she will be paying for publishing the book, plus a profit to the publisher. They also do not mention that they will not be doing any promoting or distributing of the book.

Many people are hooked on the idea that the book will become a best seller. One way to find out if the book has merit is to send it to several reputable publishers and get their reaction.

HEARTLINE: I am 66 years old and retired. I recently purchased a three-acre lot in Florida with the intention to put a large, double-wide mobile home on it. I realize that this will undoubtedly make me look very foolish, but I failed to even consider zoning regulation on the property that I bought. Now, after having made a non-refundable deposit on the mobile home, I find that zoning will not permit me to place the mobile home on my land. It would cost me $50,000 or $60,000 to build a conventional house with the same square footage and storage space available in the $28,000 double-wide that we want.

I can understand neighbors not wanting a dump, old-fashioned-type mobile home sitting in their neighborhood, but there is no logic to disallowing these modern mobile homes. The mobile home we want is better looking than some of the little crackerbox frame houses up and down the road where our land is located. You keep reading about people wanting and needing affordable housing. In my opinion, these new mobile homes are the answer, but these stupid, old-fashioned zoning laws discourage mobile home buying. Any comments? — B.W.

We agree that in many cases, antiquated zoning laws should be changed. So does Walter L. Benning, president of the Manufactured Housing Institute.

Benning said, if local governments are serious about providing affordable housing to their communities, then they should enact zoning regulations that treat today's mobile/manufactured home the same as any site-built home.

A recent study by Heartline proves that most zoning regulations fail to recognize the dramatic changes that have been made within the mobile/manufactured home industry. Mobile homes are made in factories by craftsmen. They are safe, durable and, according to Benning, are the only homes which meet a national construction and safety code established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

AN EDITORIAL:

Prognosis For 80s Promising

AS WE UNDERTAKE a serious appraisal of the economic outlook over the first half of the 1980s, we must start by answering one critical question:

"What, if anything, will the United States be doing in coming years to eliminate the inflation which now grips us so firmly?"

It seems clear that if we start with the assumption that nothing else will be done to curb inflation we will have to conclude that there will be further deterioration in the economy.

The practical cessation of productivity growth in recent years is a demonstration of inefficiencies inherent in an inflationary economy.

Furthermore, we have to reckon with the fact that inflation, untreated, tends to get progressively worse.

IF YOU TAKE the opposite side of the argument and assume that what needs to be done to stop inflation will be done, you have to recognize that our economic troubles are likely to get worse for a while before they get better.

As in the case of an alcoholic binge, say, on New Year's Eve, the worst effects of inflation are not felt while you're indulging, but after you've stopped (so we're told).

The double-digit inflation in the first eight months of 1979 was bad enough, but for several weeks in September and early October it felt as though we were teetering on the edge of something much worse.

Inflation seemed about to enter its most lethal phase—the phase when it becomes self-accelerating.

THE DRASTIC monetary measures taken by the Federal Reserve System as announced on Oct. 6 by Chairman Volcker may have pulled us back from the brink at the last possible moment.

But this is strong medicine and, as we already have seen, it has distressing side effects.

Moreover, one dose won't cure us of inflation and we will have to be taking this medicine for a long time into the future.

But there is cause for satisfaction that we finally are turning to a treatment which, however distasteful, does deal with the basic cause of inflation.

Whether Chairman Volcker and/or his program of monetary stringency, can survive in the highly politicized atmosphere of the next 12 months remains to be seen.

IF WE MAKE the optimistic assumption that the U.S. finally is ready to get a grip on its inflation problem, and will carry through until inflation is ended, we still cannot conclude that a new golden age of economic stability and prosperity immediately will dawn.

On the contrary, we will have to get used to the idea that curbing inflation may hurt a lot over an extended period of time.

All sorts of people have been making financial commitments for the future—commitments often based on the belief that inflation will continue indefinitely.

IN MANY CASES these are undertaken at very high rates of interest, which will be tolerable to borrowers only on the assumption that inflation will simultaneously be diluting the value of the dollars they are committed to pay.

When inflation ceases to provide that offset, many of them may be in trouble.

Inflation gives false economic signals and thus leads to serious mistakes, governmental and private, in the allocation of resources.

These mistakes are not revealed as such until the inflation is over and then correcting them is a painful process.

The year just past has been one of continuous talk about recession. However, broad measures of production and employment have shown no alarming downturn.

Clearly the fact that we avoided a downturn through the first three-fourths of 1979 cannot be taken as evidence that the economy is strongly based and can continue in the same pattern indefinitely.

"WHAT WE have been seeing is an economy sustained, temporarily, by the anticipation of further inflation," writes George Hagedorn, chief economist and vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers in the NAM monthly journal Enterprise.

"Buy now, it will cost more later" seems to be the universal rule," says Hagedorn. "An economy maintained at a high level on that shaky pillar is clearly due for a fall."

An optimist has to assume that the U.S. will take the steps necessary to curb inflation during the first half of the 1980s.

A realist must recognize that this means a period of slow economic growth beginning with a fairly severe recession for several months—followed immediately thereafter by a slow recovery.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT rate will persist at levels somewhat higher than in 1979. The inflation rate will fall only gradually and will still seem high in the early years of the decade," Hagedorn predicts.

In a more fundamental way, meanwhile, the economy will be regaining its strength and establishing the basis for an inflation-free period of greater stability and better productivity growth in the latter part of the 1980s.

We can whip inflation before it whips us if we really try. Or as the U.S. Army Service Forces slogan, slightly paraphrased, puts it: "The difficult we can do immediately; the impossible will take just a little longer."

JOSEPH SOBRAN:

Fathers Also Entitled To 'Equal Protection'

WASHINGTON—"Kramer vs. Kramer" is a movie about a custody fight. Ted Kramer is an ad man who has no time for his wife and young son. Joanna Kramer can't take it any more and walks out: she has to "find herself," as the phrase goes. A year or two later she comes back to announce, "I want my son."

What makes it so wrenching is that Ted has meanwhile discovered the bonds of fatherhood. Usually Hollywood locates love in bed. "Kramer" shows where love in the real world spends most of its time: in the kitchen, the living room, the park—places like that.

Love isn't eternal, it's day-to-day. It brings home the bacon and fries it. It wipes noses. It makes the bed. Sometimes it yells.

You know all that. But you'll be surprised, emotionally ambushed, to see it on the wide screen.

BOTH PARENTS appear a little too noble, and the little boy is just a shade too cute. But any excesses in the script are more than made up for by its general subtle power, and by the perfect acting of Dustin Hoffman, Meryl Streep and Justin Henry.

The film indirectly raises a much neglected issue. Ted has not only sentiment but justice on his side. Yet he is up against a profound legal prejudice: that a child is something like the property of the mother.

Ted's lawyer warns him at the outset that he will have a hard time keeping his son—even though Joanna has deserted both of them. She hasn't visited or communicated, and (it goes without saying) has paid no support.

A father who behaved as she has behaved, and who proceeded to demand custody, would be laughed out of court, assuming he could find a lawyer to take his case.

THIS TOO is straight from real life. Just as there are faces only a mother could love, there are mothers only a judge could believe. In custody battles a mother's record usually counts for less than her sex.

There is something to be said for a presumption in favor of one parent, other things being equal. It may not be fair, but it saves fighting. Conventional inequalities, Samuel Johnson observed, carry no invidious personal reflections. And full equality breeds contention and envy: the loser feels stigmatized as the inferior parent.

Still, when one parent runs off, he or she should forfeit any favorable presumption. Besides, any such presumption is most certainly at odds with current notions of sexual equality. Aren't fathers entitled to "equal protection of the laws"?

THE FEMINIST movement has been uncharacteristically silent on this question. No wonder: the whole movement for equal rights would lose a lot of steam if it were widely realized what it would mean for men to gain equality, too.

As things now stand, women have a whole series of unilateral rights with respect to children. If a woman is pregnant, the decision whether to abort is hers alone.

If she wants to have the child destroyed, her husband has no say in it. If she chooses to bear it, he must support it, whether he wants to or not. With the advent of no-fault divorce, she can throw him out of the house with the assurance that the children will remain with her, at his expense.

And if she wants to leave for a while, she can do so with the understanding that she has a good chance to reclaim the children in the future.

ASSUMING THE sexes have identical rights, all this cries out to heaven and the Supreme Court for redress. Maybe the Equal Rights Amendment will take care of it. But feminists avoid the subject, if indeed it ever occurs to them.

All of which suggests that the women's movement is far from a movement for full sexual equality. As with most so-called reform movements, it is really a demand for privileges and exemptions. Such demands are of course made in the name of "rights," but of course that's the only way you can get away with calling for privileges nowadays.

The law has traditionally distinguished between men and women. It is simplistic to talk as if they were nothing more than the oppression of one sex by the other.

In the movie, this point is deftly caught when Joanna, testifying in court, explains that she has left home because the marriage was oppressive to her. No doubt many men have felt the same way. Things are tough all over.

If only suffering were schematically distributed we could relieve it all by passing laws and amendments. But it isn't, and we can't.

"HERE'S THE STRATEGY: WE'LL PRAY FOR THE AFGHANS, BURN CANDLES FOR THE CAMBODIANS —AND IN IRAN, WE'LL FOLLOW UP OUR CHRISTMAS CARDS WITH A BARRAGE OF NEW-YEAR CARDS"

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

No More Soft Soap

WASHINGTON—The demand by Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh of Iran for a "grand jury" investigation of "crimes" of the shah and the U.S. back to President Eisenhower is setting the stage for a harder line by Jimmy Carter—or tacit admission by him that U.S. hands really are dirty.

ROBERT WALTERS:

Poll Not Reliable

THE FIRST attempt to conduct and nationally distribute an instant survey of voter attitudes has proven to be less than a resounding success. The experiment was conducted in Columbus, Ohio, immediately following President Carter's widely publicized mid-July speech on the energy crisis.

Columbus was chosen because it is the leading test market for a sophisticated two-way cable television produced by a subsidiary of Warner Communications Inc.

Called "Qube," the Warner system provides subscribers with a special home console. By pressing buttons on the instrument, viewers can register opinions that are immediately tabulated in a central location.

Columbus residents were asked five questions designed to measure their reaction to Carter's speech, with the results immediately relayed to NBC and then disseminated to that television network's national audience.

BUT ONLY 8,135 households of the approximately 32,000 wired into the Qube system—slightly more than 25 percent—participated in the unprecedented survey, raising questions about the validity of the sample.

In addition, the National Council on Public Polls, an association of the country's major survey organizations, publicly criticized NBC for using "poor judgment" in publicizing a highly unscientific poll.

"While NBC tried to make clear that the survey was neither national nor scientific," said the council, "its heavy reliance on the poll in its post-speech program lent the impression there were national implications."

INTENSE RIVALRY within Ronald Reagan's campaign organization led to a punchline from rival candidate George Bush's field operations director in a bantering exchange with his counterpart from the Reagan campaign.

Reagan operative Charles Black asked Bush operative David Keene whether he would attend the Republican preferential convention at Orlando, Fla. Keene replied that convention fell on a Saturday and he would be in Texas with Bush campaign manager James Baker hunting—not for delegates but for deer and turkey.

"That's the difference between the Reagan and Bush campaigns," cracked Black. "We're out working, while you're out playing."

"Yeah, and there's another difference," Keene replied. "No two guys from the Reagan campaign would trust each other alone carrying guns." Black did not disagree.

THE WORLD'S first nuclear submarine is about to go the way of many historic ships before it.

The U.S.S. Nautilus, being retired from active service, is to become a monument.

The Navy Department has decided that the forerunner of the nation's nuclear fleet will be berthed permanently at the Washington Navy Yard as a permanent public tribute to its pioneering achievements.

Commissioned in 1954, the $29 million, 3,000-ton Nautilus has many to its credit, including the first voyage beneath the North Polar ice cap. But it has not fulfilled the ultimate purpose for which it was designed. It has never fired a torpedo in anger.

A waste? Hardly, that's the way it should be.

Such an admission would be viewed by many presidential aides as intolerable, even if it did assure freedom for the 50 U.S. hostages.

The strategy of the Iranian militants to twin the shah with the U.S. and put both on trial before freeing the American prisoners was succinctly outlined by Ghotbzadeh on ABC's "Issues and Answers" Dec. 16.

What he wants is "getting to the front the crimes that (the U.S.) has committed here and the interventions of the American administrations," along with "the crimes of the shah."

The trouble with this is that although some American politicians, led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, have made a conspicuous point of their agreement with one half of that charge—the part about the "crimes" of the shah—the half about the crimes of the American government, past and present, has few defenders, at least in public.

The temptation to Jimmy Carter is to yield a little here, a little there on these cunning demands in hopes of freeing the hostages without having to get nasty.

THAT IS THE effect of what he did, for example, in hastily packing off the former shah to an island off the coast of Panama. The pressure was a friendly signal to the men running Iran that, deep down, Jimmy Carter agrees that the shah is not a very nice man.

But giving even so small a hostage as this is likely to whet the appetite of the fanatical but shrewd men trying to maintain their control over Iran, and to force the U.S. into at least tacit agreement that the shah should indeed be tried for "crimes."

In fact, however, political tension between the past and the present is an immovable barricade along the route toward even the first half of Ghotbzadeh's demand: an investigation of the "crimes" of the shah.

From today's perspective, Kennedy's Dec. 2 charge that the shah "ran one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind" and stole "umpteen billions of dollars" from his country must have looked like an engraved invitation in Tehran.

THE FACT that a presidential candidate with the influence and following of Teddy Kennedy could be so outspoken about the hated shah might seem to Ghotbzadeh as evidence that if only America spoke out, it would support his demand.

From an earlier perspective, however, both Carter's subtle anti-shah hints and Kennedy's blunt-instrument attack on the shah have the faint taint of Monday morning quarterbacking.

Consider President John F. Kennedy's private message to the shah 16 days before his assassination, which praised that same regime so damned today by his brother.

Talking about the Soviet political and economic threat to Iran, Kennedy said he knew the shah fully understood Soviet intentions, a fact "amply evident from the far-reaching reforms that you have undertaken."

"Opposition" to these reforms within Iran (partly resulting from a cutback of subsidies to the mullahs and ayatollahs) "was to be expected," Kennedy said, adding:

"We therefore respect all the more the courage you have shown in striking at the roots of poverty and social discontent" despite "resistance of favored groups...with privileged positions."

JACK KENNEDY was not alone in such presidential assessments of the now-scorned shah. Communications similar to Kennedy's (only one of many from Kennedy made available to us by diplomatic sources) went to the shah from every President from Harry Truman to Jimmy Carter.

At the time of Kennedy's Nov. 6, 1963, message, the shah had been in power almost continuously for 22 years, presumably within the time span covered by Teddy Kennedy's reference to "one of the most violent regimes."

In dealing with Ghotbzadeh's "grand jury" demand for a linked probe of the shah's "crimes" and the "crimes" of the U.S., Carter cannot escape this written record.

A soft response from the U.S. might indeed hasten freedom of our citizens in their embassy jail. But it would require a rewriting of history as recorded by seven Presidents, both in public and private, of monumental proportions.

JAY HARRIS:

The Lost Cause...

HAVE THE American people really changed? Are they now ready to take a stand on world as well as domestic affairs, sacrifice, do whatever is needed to turn the nation around?

Are they willing to take the risks which may be involved: 1. To protect U.S. geo-political interests abroad and close to home; 2. Challenge Soviet Communism's steady march toward world conquest.

3. Back political leaders and policies to help put a dent in double-digit inflation; and 4. Make the sacrifices in life styles and perhaps lives to bolster our few remaining friends in the Mideast and Africa in order to protect the oil and minerals needed to survive?

Like it or not, those are the questions which most of us may be called on to answer before another New Year's rolls around.

THE SOVIET Union's "brazen invasion" of Afghanistan has shaken most Americans even more so than what has happened in Iran.

And well it should: The potential for a military confrontation between the U.S. and Russia in the Kabul caper is much greater than that in Tehran's terrorism.

At long last, the message is coming through: Moscow means what it says when it says it will support those movements which it regards as Socialist and oriented toward furthering the cause of Communism, and especially so where Mideast oil, African minerals and strategic bases are concerned.

Moscow's aging madmen have thrown down the gauntlet. The surprising thing is that it took them so long. The second surprising thing is that the Carter Administration should be so shocked.

REALLY NOW, what did Mr. Carter expect? Although the policy of "getting along" with the Russians did not originate with President Carter, he and his misguided human rights policies aided and abetted it tremendously.

And while the President has enjoyed a resurgence in the polls, as well as deserved commendation for his handling of the Iranian hostage situation to this point, time may be running out, on him and the hostages.

The charade can't go on much longer. Public opinion, as well as the safety of the hostages and the nation's "honor" of which Mr. Carter so piously spoke, will demand a solution.

Having lost the initiative, Mr. Carter now only faces the ongoing showdown with the Ayatollah Khomeini and his "student" thugs and "stage-hand" protesters, but an even more ominous threat from Moscow.

AS ONE WHO has warned from the day he took office that the President did not understand foreign affairs, and most certainly the Russians, we found Mr. Carter's New Year's Eve statement on that subject illuminating.

Mr. Carter not only accused Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev of lying to him about the circumstances surrounding the invasion of Afghanistan, but said: "My opinion of the Russians has changed most dramatically in the last week and even the previous 2 1/2 years before that..." Well, better late than never. Now the question is: What do we do about it?

Basically, the President is a man who devoutly believes that he must do all possible to seek a lasting peace, not only in the Mideast but everywhere in the world.

He can't be faulted for this goal. In a day when one miscalculation can plunge mankind into the abyss of Armageddon, every effort should be exhausted, including patience and prayer.

BUT, ONE must be realistic. For the better part of the past decade, the U.S. has been "on the run" in its battle to contain Communism.

Much of the problem, of course, was the way in which the Vietnam War was handled—letting the politicians and statesmen call the shots instead of the military. The other was the trauma of Watergate which, with Vietnam, played into the hands of those who for whatever reason would relegate America to a second-rate position.

Long before Mr. Carter took his oath of office, the U.S. watched almost passively as Fidel Castro sent up to 40,000 Cuban soldiers to "stabilize" Communist conquests in Angola, and later Ethiopia.

The "dominoes" had started falling with the U.S. defeat in Vietnam. Then came Cambodia and Laos. After that, there was Angola, at which point Sec. of State Henry Kissinger and President Ford were blocked in efforts to persuade a wishy-washy Congress to take a stand.

THE REST IS now history, recent painful history.

The Carter Administration, with former UN Amb. Andrew Young and other activists selectively calling the shots, preached a policy of appeasement human rights, zeroing in on allies in Iran and South Africa while playing footsie in the opinion of many observers, with Marxist-oriented causes.

So what are the alternatives now? Short of risking a military strike against Iran, the options are more long-range than immediate.

The U.S. must move to consolidate the Israeli-Egyptian "axis" into a new line of defense in the Mideast. We should work out an arrangement with Saudi Arabia and other moderate Arab states to join in a new "Arc of Defense" in the "Arc of Crisis."

The U.S. should move immediately make use of the Israeli air bases in the Sinai which are being returned to Egypt, and move in its most sophisticated bombers, fighters and cruise missiles, all as a "peace-keeping" force.

We should warn Moscow, in the strongest terms, that there will be no SALT II and perhaps no more trade, no grain, no technology, nothing, unless its policies are changed drastically, and immediately.

Will the American people back such a policy, a military presence in the Mideast? If not, then when and where will we draw the line?

Man Awaits Outcome Of Hearing

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Three-month-old Michael Saad lies motionless on a hospital bed while attorneys and doctors argue over whether he is alive or dead.

Two fates hang in the balance. Michael, who has been connected to life-support machines since he arrived at the hospital on Christmas Eve, is a victim of child abuse, authorities say. His stepfather, Thomas Saad, 25, was arrested two days after Christmas, charged with aggravated battery and is being held in lieu of $10,000 bond. From his jail cell, Saad, a laborer, won a temporary court order preventing the hospital from removing Michael's life-support machines.

If Michael dies, the charges against Saad could be changed to murder. Associate Judge Ron Rogg of Sedgewick County District Court issued the restraining order last week. A hearing on a temporary injunction has been set for Thursday. The question Rogg faces: Is Michael Saad alive or dead?

Dr. Richard Gilmartin, a neurologist and head of Wesley Medical Center's "brain death" team, thinks Michael already may be legally dead. He says tests indicate there is no activity in or blood flowing to the child's brain.

But Steve Robison, Saad's court-appointed attorney, claims Michael still is alive. He describes the civil suit as "a father protecting his son."

Michael's mother, Karen, is not a party in the suit and could not be reached for comment on the case.

Saad and his stepson were home alone the morning of Dec. 24 when Michael suffered the injuries, authorities say.

When Michael stopped breathing, Saad took the boy to a neighbor's house and called an ambulance. The hospital called the police.

Police said Saad told them at first that the boy had fallen and injured himself.

Nola Tedesco, Sedgewick County attorney handling the prosecution, said she is waiting for the judge's decision on "whether this child is beyond help at this point."

Police Detective Jan McCloud, who investigated the case, said Michael had "old fractures in various stages of healing as well as head injuries. It's pretty obvious this wasn't the first time."

Michael's physician, Katherine Pennington, declined to comment on the boy's condition. He is listed in critical condition, the hospital says.

Gilmartin, one of three doctors on Wesley's "brain death" team, said the hospital procedure for studying cases of possible brain death calls for a series of tests. It also calls for removing the patient from life-support devices and drugs for 10 minutes.

The temporary restraining order has kept the doctors from removing the devices for the test, but Gilmartin prepared a report on Michael's case and delivered it to the boy's physician. Neither doctor will reveal the contents of the report.

The court's decision will be based on that report and Kansas law, according to the attorneys involved.

Under Kansas law, a patient is medically and legally dead if he cannot breathe on his own and his heart does not beat without aid for a substantial amount of time or if a physician believes that "based on ordinary standards of medical practice, there is absence of spontaneous brain function" for a substantial amount of time.

The brain function section was added after a similar case at Wesley in 1977.

In that incident, Herbert Smith Jr. tried to stop the hospital from taking his 19-month-old stepdaughter, Janeen House, off the respirator that kept her breathing.

Wesley officials and doctors in the case went to court and received permission to disconnect the respirator for three minutes.

Janeen died shortly after that, and Smith was convicted of killing her.

WHERE NEGLECTED GIRL FOUND — Police found a 12-year-old girl weighing less than 40 pounds in a second-floor back bedroom of this abandoned house in West Philadelphia early Monday. The girl was found in a fetal position, screaming, according to Police Capt. Dorothy Cousins. The child was extremely malnourished and unable to talk, police said. ## Girl's Mother Jailed For Murder Attempt PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The mother of a retarded 12-year-old girl found naked and emaciated in a trash-littered, roach-infested bedroom spent New Year's Day in jail on charges of attempted murder.

Denise Bowie, 27, surrendered to police Monday hours after her daughter, Kimberly, was discovered by police alone on a mattress using two trash bags to shield her naked 39-pound body from the cold in a room without heat, light or furniture.

The child remained in good condition Tuesday at Hahnemann Hospital where she was being treated for malnutrition and dehydration. A spokesman said the girl was "grossly retarded" and was eating baby food and drinking water.

Police charged Mrs. Bowie with attempted homicide, reckless endangerment and endangering the welfare of a child. Bail was set at $25,000 by Municipal Court Judge Joseph R. Glancey. A hearing was scheduled for Jan. 9.

Police had gone to the West Philadelphia home to investigate a burglary about 3 a.m. Monday, but were drawn upstairs by "moaning sounds." They found the child, who cannot speak, lying in the fetal position between two trash bags.

"The house was a mess, rather dirty and disorderly," said Capt. Dorothy Cousins of the police Juvenile Aid Division. "There were roaches all over."

Cousins said the child apparently was "considerably neglected."

An unidentified Juvenile Aid Division officer said Mrs. Bowie told police she left the girl at home while she and her four other children — three girls and a boy, aged 7 through 12 — went to her mother's house 10 blocks away for the holidays.

"Her only reason for leaving the child behind was that she felt guilty and upset over the condition of the child and she didn't want the grandmother seeing the condition of the child," a Juvenile Aid officer said.

Police said a custody hearing would be held to determine where the girl will be placed.

CAREERS

By JOYCE LAIN KENNEDY

Civil rights legislation of the '60s, which promised increased opportunities to minorities in the '70s, may not bear desired fruit even in the '80s.

Federal figures show blacks making gains in management, technical and professional fields, yet the number of black middle-class families — those earning at least $24,000 per year — actually dropped 3 percent in the mid-70s.

Vernon Jordan, president of the National Urban League, says the status of middle-class blacks is tenuous, that most would slide into poverty "by missing three paychecks."

And, as columnist William Raspberry points out, a huge proportion of the better-paid jobs blacks are entering are in the public sector — vulnerable to Proposition 13 fever.

Numerous reasons are offered why the Great Society failed to come to fruition for blacks during the past decade, all with the implications for the next:

— Housing discrimination persists, thereby restricting many black youths to schools which fail to prepare them for rigorous competition in the work-world.

— The expense of pursuing professional degrees is out of reach for most black families.

— A recent Exxon Foundation study reveals that blacks supply much less than their proportionate share of adult learners.

— Blacks are no longer exclusively protected by anti-discrimination legislation. As Richard V. Clarke, a recruiter of black professionals notes, the space under the equal opportunity umbrella is now crowded by others — women, veterans and the disabled.

— CETA programs, created through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973, are supposed to train the disadvantaged. But the focus has been on temporary public-service employment despite the fact that five of every six non-farm jobs are in the private sector.

Inner-city youth, whose unemployment rate has been running more than 30 percent throughout the '70s, will have hard times until the mid-decade. At that time, there may be some light at the end of the tunnel because there will be fewer young workers in the job market.

Prospects for blacks appear most favorable in fields expected to show solid growth — such as accounting, computer science, and engineering. In craft jobs, the Labor Department recently has proposed specific goals on a nationwide basis for the employment of minorities in construction work, but the issue is controversial, the outcome uncertain.

Overall, it doesn't look like the decade ahead will be very different from the recent past for black workers.

— Nancy McCullough and Tom Hicks helped research and write this looking-ahead column. My regular format with questions from readers will resume in January.

Begin Cites Deficiency Of U.S. Ground Forces

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin was quoted Tuesday as telling a U.S. congressman the United States "needs more ground forces" to block Soviet inroads in countries like Afghanistan and Iran. And Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said he was prepared to provide bases for American troops.

A source at Begin's private meeting with Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., quoted Begin as saying the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan was "a turning-point in the world's history" since it marked the first time since World War II that Soviet forces crossed the boundaries of a non-communist bloc country. "It is a most serious development," Begin was quoted saying. Israeli sources said the Soviet move was no immediate threat to Israel or the Middle East. But Begin, who once was imprisoned in the Soviet Union and is a fierce anti-communist, apparently was watching developments closely. No Israeli official at the meeting was immediately available to confirm the remarks.

"The United States needs more land forces around the world to prevent what is happening in Afghanistan, Iran and Lebanon," Begin was quoted as saying.

Sadat, in a CBS News interview in Cairo, broadcast Monday, said the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan was the beginning of the battle for the energy resources of the Middle East, and offered bases for American troops to protect the Persian Gulf states.

"This (Soviet intervention) has frightened all those who live in the gulf area, from Kuwait to the United Arab Emirates," and "I say, the battle around the area's oil stores has already begun," Sadat told CBS newsmen Walter Cronkite.

Sadat said the inhabitants of the gulf area wanted U.S. protection, but could not openly ask for it.

"They all want you to have a presence in the area," he said, "but not one of them can raise his voice now because we are living a moment in which the Soviets have given themselves complete freedom of action."

"There will be outbursts in the gulf because of the bad regimes there, all based on families and oil. I'm not asking the U.S. to help the leaders against their people, but help the people to find the correct way of life for themselves," Sadat said.

Gasoline Shortage Reported At Mexican Resort

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A crush of year-end holiday tourists overloaded four service stations in the Pacific resort city of Puerto Vallarta and created a temporary gasoline shortage, a police official said Tuesday.

Soldiers were called out to guard the gasoline pumps as cars lined up for five to six blocks and a one-to-two-hour wait to get gasoline, said the official, who asked not to be identified.

Officials of the country's national oil monopoly, Pemex, were unavailable for comment.

Reports of a gasoline shortage in another Pacific resort, Acapulco, were apparently false. A transit police spokesman there said, "There is plenty of gasoline here to meet the needs of the holiday traffic."

The Acapulco source added traffic was very heavy Tuesday as the holiday tourists started to drive back to their home towns. The normal four-hour drive from Acapulco to Mexico City can often take eight to nine hours on a long holiday weekend.

Mexico celebrates the Christmas and New Year holidays with an almost total shutdown of businesses in large cities and an exodus to the country's seaside resorts.

Quest For Water Looms As Major '80s Problem

primary topics of the second half of the decade. The water crisis continued to grow, as did the conflict between state and federal officials, who disagreed over the feasibility of bringing water to the Panhandle and South Plains.

"We can't allow a crisis," Rose said to a gathering of water watchers in Amarillo on Feb. 16, 1975. Two and a half years later, Rose would tell another West Texas water crowd that, "By the year 2000, all of Texas west of Dallas will face a severe water shortage unless something is done."

As the 1970s progressed, and thoughts of piping in water from the Mississippi folded, water interests began looking elsewhere and found that nearby Arkansas stood as a likely source of water. After investigating, Texans heard from engineer Bob Milwee of Little Rock, who told an enthusiastic audience that Arkansas had enough runoff water to meet the needs of a drying West Texas.

Transporting as much as 6 million acre-feet of water from Arkansas to West Texas through Texarkana was very feasible, Milwee said, but noted that routing the water through the Lone Star State was a puzzle to be deciphered through the new version of the Texas Water Plan, an all-encompassing look at the state's water situation.

Arkansas very likely would agree to the plan, Milwee said, because of the financial rewards as well as the series of new fresh water lakes across the state that would be created by the transportation of the water.

The City of Lubbock began its own search for water in earnest in 1977, after city public works director Sam Wahl noted that, "If Lubbock continues to grow at its current pace and doesn't secure an additional water supply by the early 1990s, water restrictions could become a way of life."

The result of the city's search came in the form of a series of water wells in the Sandhills of Bailey County to the northwest of Lubbock. The multi-million dollar deal angered some residents of Bailey County who felt they were being deprived of water when the water rights to the Sandhills changed hands, but water began flowing into Lubbock anyway.

The city also began moving toward what may become its ultimate water source—a series of reservoirs that could handle the needs of the future. After a series of exploratory tests, city officials decided to go ahead with major reservoirs near Post and Justiceburg, both to the southeast of Lubbock. Upon completion, the two reservoirs will be able to provide Lubbock with about 39 million gallons of water per day, said studies.

As the plans for pipelines from Arkansas and reservoirs in the South Plains began appearing on drawing boards, the water crunch tightened.

Among the more surprising developments of late 1978 was a special report from the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, which said that the water table under Lubbock County dropped some 1.36 feet during 1978, about 50 percent more than average. District manager Wayne Wyatt pointed up the seriousness of this finding by noting that the drop was in sharp contrast to surrounding counties, most of which reported much smaller drops in underground water supplies.

Further compounding water worries in the area was a series of statements from President Jimmy Carter aimed at farmers with water-intense crops. "Some of those regulations (in Carter's national water policy) propose to limit or refuse loan assistance to farmers who might violate water conservation practices," Wyatt said. "The proposals discourage irrigation through measures that would result in lower crop prices or higher production costs and would disallow crop insurance for water-intensive crops in water short areas."

"We want conservation," he added. "But conserving water shouldn't put the farmer out of business."

And, although many Lubbock residents probably didn't realize it, the water crisis hit home in 1978. Early in the year, Lubbock began running out of its allotment of water from the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, an 11-member organization that shares in the water from Lake Meredith north of Amarillo. In October, Lubbock representatives persuaded the authority to up the annual allotments.

The move itself wasn't big news, but when Lubbock water spokesmen said they feared that without the additional water Lubbock residents might be forced into water rationing in the near future, some eyebrows were raised. By the end of the year, Lubbock and the 10 other CRMWA cities had got more water and Lubbock had purchased some 10 billion gallons of water from Amarillo's annual allotment.

The decade wound down with perhaps more progress than had been seen in the preceding nine years. In March, several interested parties convened in Plainview to draft a bill that would create the Ogallala Water Import Authority, an organization to oversee the importation of water into the area. A short time later, the bill, submitted to the Texas legislature by State Rep. Bob Simpson of Amarillo, was passed and signed by Gov. Bill Clements.

In June, Lubbock city officials estimated that the completion of a dam and pump station near Post could come in 1983, although others predicted 1986 as a target date. Another schedule called for water to be flowing from Justiceburg in 1992.

Roberts and Ochiltree counties, in the far northeastern Panhandle, have several times been mentioned as possible water sources because of their proximity to Lake Meredith and the fact that the once-mighty Canadian River flows over an area with an uncommonly rich underground water supply. That plan ultimately was shelved because the groundwater from those two counties is finite, whereas the water from the reservoirs can be replaced, Wyatt said. Other opponents to the Roberts-Ochiltree plan pointed out that it could cost up to twice as much as the $109 million reservoir plan.

In November, the Lubbock City Council initiated procedures to permit a sale of general obligation bonds worth about $6.45 million on March 1, 1980. About $5 million of that would go toward water projects—mostly the construction of a pipeline between Lubbock and the reservoirs, the purchase of right of way land, and the construction of a 500 million gallon storage facility for water from Lake Meredith and the CRMWA.

By the decade's end, Lubbock and the South Plains had made some progress toward solving the water shortages that threaten their very existence. Water from Lake Meredith, however hard and unpleasant to drink it may be, continues to flow; water from the Sandhills of Bailey County now is flowing steadily; and plans for the massive reservoir system at Post and Justiceburg are well underway to satisfy the thirsty town's need for water.

City Police Keep Busy On New Year's Eve

Numerous broken windshields, cases of public intoxication and car burglaries kept Lubbock police and sheriff's deputies busy on New Year's Eve, but no major crimes were reported during the sometimes dangerous holiday.

Two security guards prevented a possible abduction in a Methodist Hospital parking lot around midnight Monday. Reports indicate the guards heard a hospital nurse scream "rape" when a man put his arms around her as she entered her car and said, "You're going with me now."

The man fled on foot but the guards caught him. He was in custody in Lubbock County Jail Tuesday night.

Criminal mischief reports included the breaking of at least 10 windshields, valued at $120 to $150 each, by vandals throughout the city.

Two Lubbock men reported being hit with BB or pellet guns below the right knee in separate incidents Monday and early Tuesday.

Andrew C. Sanders told police he was in the front yard at 55th Street and Memphis Avenue about 3:15 p.m. Monday, when he heard "a popping noise" and saw a pickup truck drive away. He was treated and released at Health Sciences Center Hospital for a BB or pellet gun wound.

Samuel Moran of Lubbock reported he was walking in the 2400 block of Main Street about 3 a.m. Tuesday, when he "heard a bang." He also was treated and released at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Sheriff's reports indicate Joe Henry Ybarra of Idalou was hauling cotton along U.S. Highway 62-82 at 8:10 p.m. Monday when a shot was fired at his windshield from a brown vehicle.

Though the glass was shattered, the bullet did not penetrate it, or Ybarra would have been struck in the forehead, according to reports.

In another Monday afternoon assault, Domingo Castillo reported being stabbed in the right shoulder when he answered a knock at the door of an East 4th Street club and a man asked him for money. Castillo was treated at West Texas Hospital. It was not known if any money was taken in the incident.

Fulton Walker of Lubbock told police he was beaten at a club on the Idalou Highway about 2 p.m. Monday. He sustained lacerations to his hand, stomach, head and neck when two men knocked him to the floor of the club. He was kept in Methodist Hospital for observation.

Tony Arrendondo of 2823 Cornell St. told police someone entered his house while he was gone between 6 p.m. and midnight Monday and took two television sets, cash and jewelry valued at $1,486. He said entry was gained by breaking a bedroom window.

Another burglary netted $3,750 in guns and jewelry and a television set. Charles K. Berg of 2427 20th St. said someone entered his house by prying open a bedroom window while he was out of town between Saturday and Monday.

Ricky Don Ellis of 1910 4th Place said someone kicked open his back door between 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Monday and took $550 worth of stereo and television equipment.

Some $500 worth of pistols and jewelry was taken from Jim Walker's 1609 43rd St. residence between 6 p.m. and midnight Monday. Reports say entry was gained through a rear window.

'Windfall-Profits' Issue Faces Solons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the big questions Congress must answer on coming back from the holiday recess is whether to make the oil "windfall-profits" tax permanent.

Although the windfall tax hasn't even been enacted yet, some congressional liberals already see it as an eventual source of revenue for major social welfare programs.

Other lawmakers view the levy's revenue billions as funds to balance the federal budget or roll back Social Security tax increases set for 1981.

Conservatives, mindful that both the Social Security and income taxes began small and grew, are fighting efforts to make the new levy as permanent as its predecessors.

The House voted last June for a permanent "windfall-profits" tax. The Senate, however, voted last month to phase out the tax after it produces $189 billion.

Some congressional aides say the Senate tax would end sometime in the mid-1990s.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, has predicted oil prices will rise so swiftly that Congress will have to enact another windfall profits tax this year.

Clovis Firefighters Battle Two Blazes

CLOVIS, N. M. (Special) — The 1980s started with two major fires for Clovis firemen.

The first was reported at 3:30 a.m. New Year's Day when a passer-by noticed smoke coming from the Beaulieu Brothers Gun and Pawn Shop on West Seventh Street.

Three units of the fire department responded to the blaze, which gutted the inside of a house used as a storage area for the firm.

Fire Capt. Floyd Cooper said the inside of the house was stacked with stereos and television sets, which made fighting the fire difficult.

"We were able to stop the fire before it reached a large storage area of ammu-munition," Cooper said.

The cause of the fire was listed as a cardboard box placed too close to a gas heater.

Cooper said the exact damage total would not be available until the firm completed an inventory.

Shortly before noon Tuesday, an off-duty deputy sheriff spotted smoke coming from the residence of Mrs. L. T. Haynes at 1708 Wilshire St.

Deputy W. H. Rickerson said he heard a noise which sounded like an explosion and saw smoke coming from all sections of the large home.

Assistant Fire Chief Bobby Williams said four units of the Clovis Fire Department were summoned to fight the blaze in a 30-mph wind.

Williams said the fire had fully engulfed the attic of the home when they arrived.

Firemen listed the cause as an electrical short in the attic.

Williams estimated that the home was 50 percent destroyed.

There were no injuries in either of the fires.

Tandy's Widow Dies At 74

FORT WORTH (AP) — Anne Burnett Tandy, supervisor of the famed 6666 Ranch in Northwest Texas and widow of Tandy Corp. founder Charles David Tandy, died Tuesday. She was 74.

Mrs. Tandy, who carried on the tradition of her West Texas pioneer family in managing the vast cattle ranch, died of cancer in her home after a long illness.

She personally supervised the 207,895-acre 6666 Ranch that surrounds Guthrie in King County, and the two Triangle Ranches in Wichita County and the Panhandle.

The ranches were founded by Mrs. Tandy's pioneer grandfather, Capt. Burk Burnett, who came to Texas from Tennessee with his family as a small child during the 19th century. The town of Burkburnett, in Wichita County, is named after him.

Her late husband, founder and chairman of the board of the Tandy Corp., which owns the Radio Shack chain of retail stores, died Nov. 4, 1978.

She is survived by a daughter, Anne Burnett Windfohr Phillips, and a granddaughter, both of Frisco.

Funeral services were set for 11 a.m. Wednesday at the All Saints Episcopal Church here.

Three Sought In Robbery

LEVELLAND (Special) — Hockley County authorities late Tuesday continued to seek three suspects in connection with the Monday afternoon armed robbery of a country store near Roundup.

Reports indicate two black men entered the store, south of the tiny community located between Shallowater and Anton, and took an undetermined amount of cash.

Owner Charles Barret was struck on the head with an unknown object during the robbery, according to Hockley County Sheriff Leroy Schulle. Barret was treated and released at Lubbock's Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The suspects left the store on FM 2130 in a car driven by a third black male, and headed toward Lubbock, Schulle said.

The three were described as 18 to 20 years old, medium height and build. They reportedly were armed with small caliber pistols.

Pope Attacks Weapons Buildup

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Tuesday condemned the buildup of sophisticated missiles in Europe and warned of the "terrible nightmare" of nuclear war.

In his strongest criticism to date of the missiles, the 59-year-old pontiff said the recent decision "to pile up many means of destruction in the cradle of civilization has forced the people to look toward the future with anxiety."

"They (means of destruction) could destroy the fruits of this rich civilization...reducing cities and villages to a pile of rubble," John Paul said.

Although he did not make any specific reference to nations, Vatican sources said the pontiff probably referred to both a reported Soviet missile buildup and a corresponding decision by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to go ahead with a modernized nuclear missile system in Western Europe.

John Paul spelled out — quoting unnamed scientists — the "immediate and terrible consequences" of nuclear war which, he said, can wipe out 50 million to 200 million people and cause genetic mutations.

John Paul told an audience of 20,000 faithful at a New Year's Mass at St. Peter's Basilica "the people around the world must be told of the terrible nightmare a nuclear war can bring."

"Nuclear war will cause a drastic reduction in food resources, spreading radioactive residue over areas of arable land and bring about substantial alterations in the atmosphere's ozone layer, exposing man to great unknown perils," the pope said, quoting the scientists.

Two hundred of the more than 50,000 nuclear bombs existing in the world today would be sufficient to destroy most major cities around the globe, John Paul said.

On Monday, the pope denounced terrorism and the arms race as casting an "evil threat" over the new year. "The evil that exists in the world, that surrounds us and that threatens man, nations and mankind seem to be bigger, far bigger than the evil for which each of us feels personally responsible," he said.

The pope, in his World Peace Day message released two weeks ago, denounced the use of the "big lie" and said the existence of the arms race raises suspicions of the sincerity of declaration in support of peaceful coexistence.

He said there appears to be a "tragic contradiction" between fervent declarations favoring peace and the escalation of weaponry.

In a later address to an estimated crowd of 35,000 gathered at St. Peter's Square Tuesday, John Paul again stressed the importance of trust and truth-telling.

"It is necessary to rediscover and rebuild reciprocal trust," he said. "Trust is not acquired by means of force, nor is it obtained with declarations. Trust must be earned with concrete actions."

Diplomats Fear Afghanistan Takeover May Spark WW III

By WILLIAM J. HOLSTEIN
PESHAWAR, Pakistan (UPI) — A grim remark made the rounds New Year's Eve in this rugged frontier town: "If World War III breaks out, it's going to be right on top of us."

The underlying fear is sparked by the presence of an estimated 50,000 Soviet troops across the border in Afghanistan, some of whom have pushed to the Afghan provincial capital of Jalalabad, a scant 15 miles from Pakistani soil. Kabul itself is just 160 miles from Peshawar.

Diplomats, rebel leaders and others agree the events unfolding across the frontier have all the makings of an explosive conflict involving one or more superpowers.

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: It is two-and-a-half years since I had my radical mastectomy. My doctor says I'm OK, but how long will I need follow-up checkups? How frequently? What kinds of tests will be needed? — N.W.

It is difficult to answer specific questions about the kinds of tests or how long you will have to be followed or how frequent visits should be. These matters depend on the type of tumor you had that required the mastectomy (breast removal); also on the extent, if any, of its spread.

I know your doctor will guide you well. He has helped you for more than two years.

I should add a word here about a term frequently heard in discussions of cancer and cures. It is "five-year survival rate." It may be misunderstood and may bear on your questions.

There is nothing magical about the term five-year survival. It means, generally speaking, that if there has been no spread or changes for five years after treatment, the cancer can be said to have been cured.

But this does not mean that after treatment, either by surgery or medicine, all follow-up testing can end after five 80 years. If a pedestrian is hit by a car, then fixed up by his doctors, he cannot then proceed to be careless in traffic on the theory that he cannot be hit again. In fact, he might be accident prone.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have dermatitis herpeticiformis. For 16 years I have taken Difone for it. Is there anything to worry about in taking this medicine for so long? I have a blood count done regularly. — S.C. (R.N.)

Dermatitis herpeticiformis is a skin disease that causes recurring small, itchy blisters. It is usually a benign but annoying condition. You can't predict how long it will persist, but, as you have found, it can linger for many years.

The drug you are taking is sulfone.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Let the word go out. Today is the first day of the reorganization of my stressful life. My family has insisted upon it. They say I'm a bundle of stress. They can tell by the way my muscles tighten in my neck and jaw, the frequent headaches and an occasional loss of words.

That's why I have set up a program of six goals.

First, I'm going to spend more time meditating — especially before I put a fattening lunch on my charge card which arrives at the same time as the bill for exercising it off.

I'm going to stop trying to do two or more things at a time. This includes listening to a phone conversation while taking the burrs out of the dog's rump, eating my lunch, and closing the door with my foot while listening to my husband telling me why the car is knocking.

Whether it be working, eating, listening, or playing, I'm going to allow myself plenty of time to do things well and provide myself with an environment that promotes peace of mind if I have to break the door down to tell the kids to cool it with the stereo.

I'm going to take time to nourish a few of my acquaintances and friendships. This includes people who have borrowed my books and never returned them.

Another goal is to learn to spend time enjoying things such as music, reading, and hobbies. In fact, I have set a deadline for myself to read ten classics by March.

And finally, I'm going to develop a philosophy of living. I've been living a long time, but I never had a plan for it. That's why I'm going to establish life goals for myself and bring back rituals and traditions that hold meaning in my life.

Yesterday, when I told my husband that I said, "Beginning with New Year's Day, I'm going to revive a wonderful old custom my mother used to observe."

"What was that?" he asked.

"She always used to serve pickled pig's feet and sauerkraut to bring us luck."

Before my very eyes his muscles tightened in his neck and jaw, his eyes blinked in pain and he couldn't seem to think of anything to say.

I didn't realize before that stress is catching.

It has been quite effective in treating the problem. It is, in fact, in the same class with drugs used to treat leprosy. Sulfone is not sulfa, however, and dermatitis herpeticiformis is NOT leprosy. I mention it to get to your question about the duration of its use. Such drugs are used for years in the treatment of leprosy.

The major side effects, if any, are anemia and certain changes in the bone marrow, where the blood cells are made. That is why you are having regular blood tests. You should have no worry about side effects if you are faithful in having the tests.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 67 and in good health, except that I ache all over and can't sleep. I was told I have a higher level of protein than normal. Would this be related to my sleeplessness? — C.N.

This is a tricky question.

The two major blood proteins are albumin and globulin. An elevation of globulins (antibodies) can indicate an underlying illness. One of them is rheumatoid arthritis. Another is a bone marrow disorder, and a third is a symptomless condition called benign monoclonal gammopathy.

But will elevated proteins by themselves CAUSE aches or sleeplessness? No. Can it be ASSOCIATED with problems that might cause aching and sleeplessness? Yes.

You would need further tests to see just which proteins are elevated and what that might mean. Otherwise, elevated protein level is a common and usually harmless thing in elderly persons.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband has polyarteritis. I would like an explanation of it, how it is treated, side effects and results of the disease. Can it be cured, and what drugs help? — M.G.

Medicine has been scratching its collective head about this problem for years.

Polyarteritis nodosa (also called periarteritis nodosa) is one of those strange illnesses about which we know little as to cause.

The larger arteries and nearby veins become inflamed. The extent and location of the inflamed vessels are important factors in just how serious it is. Vessels of the kidneys, intestines, or the muscles and the heart may show inflammation, for example. The symptoms depend on where the inflammation is. Joint pain is common as is abdominal distress.

Cortisone-like drugs are usually able to control the problem.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: This is for the newly married widow (age 67) who feels "left out" because her husband refuses to remove his partial plate in her presence. She has the idea he is not acting "natural" the way her first husband did and it makes her feel there is a wall between them.

Look, Dearie, count your blessings. My husband has a bothersome bridge that he will remove anytime, anywhere, in front of anybody, if he feels like it. It makes no difference if he is in the home of a friend, at a high-class restaurant or at the speaker's table of a fancy affair. If his teeth bother him, he will take them out. He couldn't care less if he ruins a few appetites.

I have told him several times that the sight of him taking out his teeth is very unappetizing. He says, "If people don't like it, they can look somewhere else."

I wish I could trade places with you, dear. Sign me — Richmond, Va. Wife

Dear Richmond: Some people don't know when they have it good. Thanks for giving Mrs. Second-Time-Around the word.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 19, a male in my second year of college, and I live at home. I have a sweet kid sister, a terrific mother, plenty of friends, a pretty home and my own car. The problem is my father.

He is hot-tempered, unreasonable, never has a decent word for me and is always on my back about something. He thinks I'm goofing off because I get a few B's instead of straight A's. I guess what I resent most is that he is always telling me what to do, comparing me to him when he was my age, and treating me like I was a kid.

Money is his god, and he insists on giving me lectures on "how to make it big." I want to be comfortable, but I am not interested in being rich. Dad came from a very poor family, so I can understand his attitude. But why does he try to force his values on me?

I need to know how to get along better with him. Please help me. — Trying Hard In Newark

Dear Trying: The fact that you want things to be better bodes well. They will be, I promise.

Be respectful and gentlemanly, even if your father is not. Stay off subjects that create conflicts. When he gets on these subjects, don't argue. The greater the contrast between your calm behavior and his angry attacks, the sooner he will realize that you are a mature person who can no longer be dealt with as a child.

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm hoping you or one of your readers can come up with a solution to an annoying problem.

We have a good-sized basement playroom that has no windows, an air conditioner, and the worst musty odor.

I've done everything imaginable to get rid of the smell, from scrubbing the walls and ceiling to shampooing and deodorizing the carpet. But nothing works. HELP! — Mrs. Wm. Bonini

Poor dear, what a nasty problem, and it seems to be a common one. We've received several letters in the last few weeks that plead, "Please do something — that musty odor is getting to us."

Well, muster up your energy 'cause here's what you must do about mustiness.

Place several bowls of vinegar around

If that damp, musty odor still lingers, try sprinkling cat box filler along the base of the walls. Let it stay there for a few days, then vacuum it up.

DEAR HELOISE:

I have two pairs of high knee boots that fold over when left standing. I priced plastic boot-stay forms at $5.25 pair, a bit expensive I thought, so...

I took two of my husband's old knee-high socks and stuffed them with foam and run pantyhose, then tied a knot at the top. The socks work perfectly when stuffed into the boots!

Pleasing plus: They can be thrown into the washer and dryer too! — Rosemary A. Davies.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

As you know, every "home engineer" has a drawer in which tools, such as nails, hammer, screwdriver, etc., are kept.

Well, every time I needed mine, they were always "borrowed," mainly by my teenage son.

But I think I have taken care of that little problem. I bought all new tools and sewed a nylon lace ruffle securely around the handle of each.

So far, no "borrowed" tools! Can't you just see the expression on my son's face should he be caught using lace-trimmed tools? — Jackie G.

DEAR HELOISE:

When you clean white shoes with shoe polish, the leather soles often get the polish imbedded in them and it won't wipe off.

The other day the bright idea came to me to use an old eyebrow pencil and carefully touch-up the narrow edge of sole around the shoe. I even did the heels.

It worked perfectly and made my old worn work shoes look almost new.

I enjoy your column and read it regularly. What a gal you are! — E.M.

Thanks for the kind words. Love you for using the old noggin! And I know that nurses especially will bless you for this hint. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When carrying an umbrella in bad weather, tote along a long plastic bag, the kind used to package French bread or a stack of foam cups.

The bag is a good place to put a dripping umbrella when getting into a car or entering an office or home.

Keeps the umbrella clean and doesn't mess up anyone's carpet or floor. — Marian Jackson

DEAR HELOISE:

When sliding glass furniture, doors stick, just spray the track with furniture polish.

Recent Studies On Sleep Show Shift Workers Sleeping Less

NEW YORK (Special) — Getting a good night's sleep isn't always easy, especially if you're one of America's 10 million shift workers who must work nights and sleep days. Recent studies show shift workers get less sleep than the rest of us, according to The Better Sleep Council — an average of 5.6 hours within a 24 hour period, compared to 7.5 hours for the general population.

And that's just the beginning of the sleep problems for these night owls. They rarely sleep more than seven hours at a stretch and more often wake up after only four or five hours of sleep. The result is constant fatigue. "I'm exhausted all the time," they say, and complain of short tempers and irritability.

Even after years on a night shift, workers never really adjust to their topsy-turvy hours, says The Better Sleep Council, an organization that disseminates information on sleep and sleep research.

One factor cited for the poor adjustment, as shift workers themselves report, is that (sleeping conditions aren't as good in the daytime.) The main problem is noise: children, ringing telephones and aircraft... in that order.

However, scientists cite another problem, and that is the disruption of the person's circadian rhythm. This is the sensitive biological clock that determines minute changes in the body's daily cycle, including body temperature, blood level and hormone counts, as well as one's susceptibility to sleep.

For a person on a regular schedule, these biological peaks and valleys will come at the same time every day. However, when a person makes a 180 degree shift in their sleep pattern, from sleeping nights to sleeping days, it takes the body three to four weeks to make a full adjustment.

In theory, someone who is working nights and sleeping days could make the biological change and adjust to these abnormal hours. However, a problem arises on the weekend when the workers want to be with their family and friends. What happens then is that they try to revert back to a normal sleeping pattern, asking their body to make still another adjustment.

"As a result these people are chronically de-synchronized," says Donald Tasto, a psychologist who has just completed a study of shift workers for the Stanford Research Institute, a California-based think tank. "It's a problem on consistency. They could make the adjustment to their work schedule, but their family and social life have them continually off balance."

Problems are even more severe for workers on rotating shifts, which require that they work a day shift one week, the evening shift the next week and the midnight to 8 a.m. or "graveyard" shift the following week. Tasto's research shows that in addition to chronic sleep problems and fatigue, they also suffer more accidents at work, have more marital and sexual problems and more health problems than the average person.

But the picture isn't totally grim. Some workers like working shifts because it gives them free time during the day to go fishing and hunting or to use the beaches when they aren't crowded. Others prefer to work the night shift because in some companies the pay is slightly higher as a compensation for the inconvenience.

However, so long as workers try to juggle a schedule of working nights and sleeping days, with a family or social life the other way around, sleep problems are likely to remain.

There are some ways of making this balancing act easier. Donald Tasto recommends that shift workers try to eat their meals at the same time every day, even on weekends, in order to make as little change as possible in the circadian rhythm.

He also suggests that they try to get at least four hours of common sleep time. "That means if you work the night shift and usually sleep from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., don't try to stay awake all day so you can be with family and friends. Go to sleep at 8 a.m. as usual, but get up at 12, and have the afternoon with them instead," he says. "If you can sleep and eat at the same time every day that's ideal as far as the body is concerned, but it's not ideal for social life. So sit down with family members and talk it over," he adds.

The Better Sleep Council has these additional ideas to help shift workers sleep better.

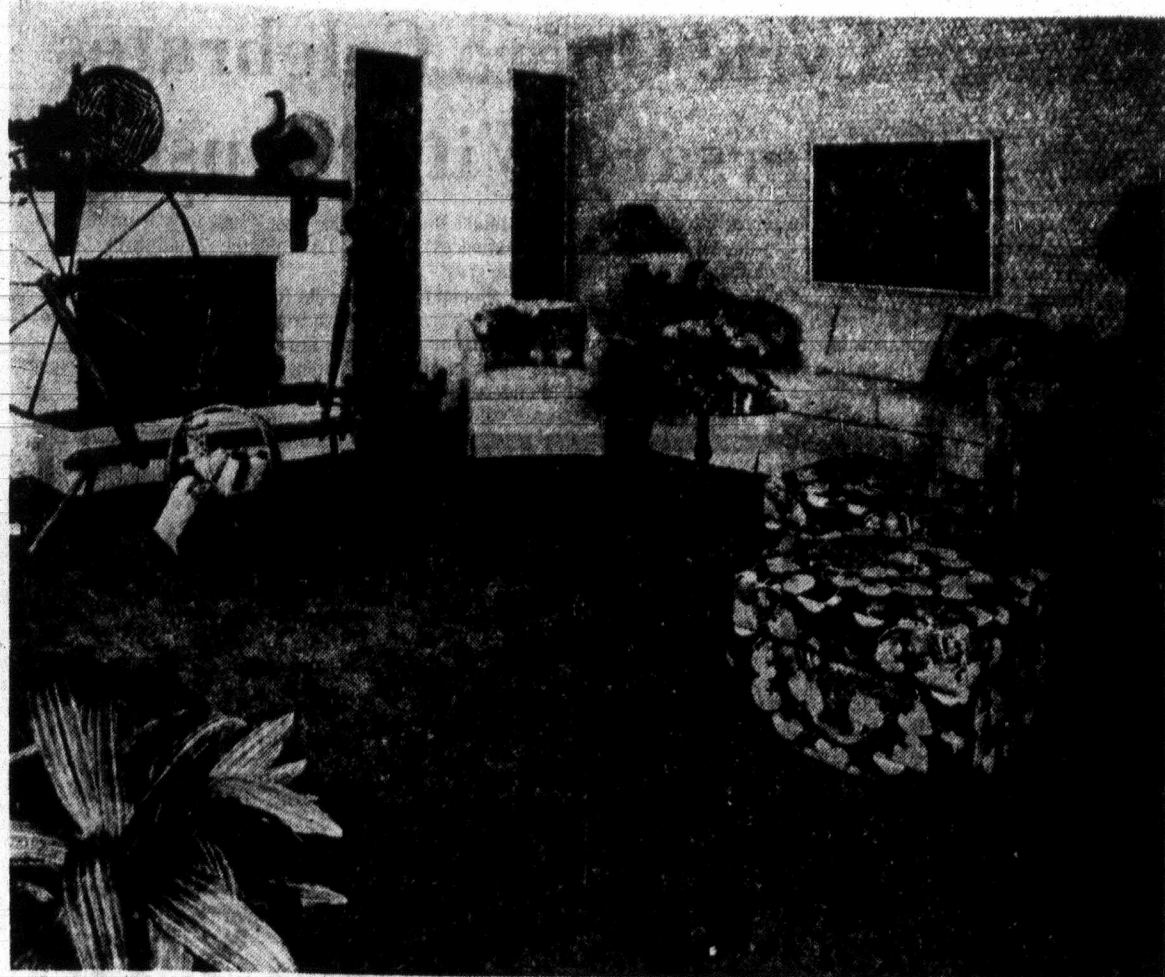

• Most people sleep better in a darkened room, so when you sleep during the day, get black-out curtains or heavy draperies to cut down the light.

• Experiment with ways to drown out noise. Ear plugs, "white noise" machines and the hum of an electric fan are popular methods. You might also try soundproofing the bedroom door and ceiling.

• Examine your sleep set for signs of excessive wear such as lumps or valleys. A mattress and foundation that do not support you comfortably can make it difficult to relax in a sleeping position without strain, especially at the hips and shoulders.

• Don't drink coffee or tea within a few hours of when you have to go to bed. Eliminate all other kinds of stimulants such as an exciting sports event on TV, or an interesting novel.

PATTERNED FABRICS — An excellent example of how to get a lot of decorator dollar-value out of a few yards of patterned fabric is illustrated. Linda Newman, Armstrong interior designer, literally "stretched" a minimal amount of material for tremendous impact in this model interior. The fabric was used in a variety of ways to ensure a pleasant visual flow.

Designer Shows How Fabric Remnants Can Go Long Way In Decorating Room

LANCASTER, Pa. (Special) — There you were on vacation last summer...stopping at a nifty little fabric shop and falling in love with a remnant. Such a buy for a few yards of material — how could you resist?

You were warned: "Not enough for a slipcover or drapes," said the clerk. But it was so pretty that you bought it anyway. It's been in the closet, hiding ever since: you still love it, but what do you do with it?

Linda Newman, A.S.I.D., an interior designer for Armstrong Cork Company, shows how a little fabric can go a long way.

Designing a model interior for Beacon Homes in Port Richey, Fla., Miss Newman created a high-style country room using a minimal amount of "Geraniums" printed yard goods by S.M. Hexter. By splitting a 54" wide panel three ways, she was able to stretch the material for stunning window-panel inserts. Two lengths gave her six panels for three windows. What was left over was enough to cover two Founders ottomans, with four toss-covers to boot.

The pattern has tremendous clout in small yardage. Its scale and brilliant colors provide enough punch to brighten up the room the easiest way possible.

Miss Newman felt that the open area needed one more tie-in. And so she asked an amateur artist to copy the geranium pattern on inexpensive masonite matching the acrylic paint colors.

The artist obliged, and the result is evident — a framed wall hanging that completes the unified look. Behind the hanging is another example of coordination: the wallpaper — an open, airy, cane design from F. Schumacher — is repeated in the adjoining kitchen, together with the bright geranium red of the fabric in the kitchen accents.

Because it is an open area, the "definition" of activity rests with the floorcovering choices. Luxurious wall-to-wall carpet sets apart the lounge area from the work space of the adjoining kitchen.

Although a Collector's Cherry cocktail table from Thomasville keeps everything traditional, the wormy chestnut Parsons table, antique spinning wheel, and country-like accessories make the room cozy and less formal in feeling.

Do you have an interesting piece of patterned fabric put away? If so — why not ferret it out? You can do something equally dramatic.

Variety Of Souvenirs Found At Mexican Market Place

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine And Food Writer
Mexico has many attractions, but what struck me most on my first visit recently was the incredible bustle and vivid colors of the great market places.

In Mexico City, I visited one market that was so big it took an hour to walk through, as peddlers hawked their wares in Spanish, English and a strange tongue someone said was Aztec.

Long strings of garlic festooned pillars reaching to the ceiling and gave off a pungent odor that permeated the whole place.

There were vegetables of every variety, including a silvery-gray fungus that grows on corn and is delicious in crepes and soups. There were also long, garbled chili peppers that my guide said were so hot they sear the lips.

The waters off Mexico abound in fish and most varieties were on display here, from sleek pompanos to small but evil-looking hammerhead sharks that did nothing for my appetite.

A local official told me this was one of the smaller markets. I realized what he meant a few days later when we drove to Puebla, a city of 4 million people. The heart of Puebla is one vast open-air market with wares spread over the sidewalks and spilling into the roads where cab drivers tried to thread their way.

Mexico's markets, I'm told, provide a key to the country's regional cuisines. In the two weeks I spent there, I saw only a fraction of the produce, which naturally changes with the seasons.

The hot months of summer, when I was in Mexico, heralded the arrival of fresh blossoms from squash and pumpkin vines. They are used to stuff quesadillas, the turnovers made from tortilla dough or corn flour.

They are also a key ingredient in the delicately-flavored soups I found so delicious.

Here's a recipe for pumpkin-blossom soup. The blossoms are available in Latin American and Caribbean markets in most American cities.

40 large pumpkin blossoms, about 1 lb.
4 cups seasoned chicken broth
2 med. tomatoes, broiled
1/2 small onion, chopped
3 tbsps. butter

Remove stems from pumpkin blossoms, strip off petals, chop flowers and put in saucepan. Cover with chicken broth and cook 15 minutes till tender. Transfer to blender and blend till smooth. Return to pan. Blend tomatoes together with onion to make smooth puree. Melt butter and cook with puree over fairly high flame 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add mixture to broth in saucepan and cook mixture over medium flame for 10 minutes. Serve with dry white wine, well chilled. Serves 6.

FOOD FAIRE

SWEET POTATO PIE
2 med. sweet potatoes or 2 cups mashed, canned sweet potatoes
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 eggs
1/4 cup milk
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. vanilla extract
Juice of 1 lemon
1/2 cup sherry cooking wine
1 9-inch pie shell

Drop potatoes into enough boiling water to cover them and cook, in covered saucepan until tender, about 25 minutes. Peel and mash. Stir in butter into warm potatoes. If canned potatoes are used, melt butter before adding. Beat the eggs in a separate bowl. Add remaining ingredients to eggs, stirring to blend well. Top with additional sprinkling of nutmeg. Bake in 400 degree oven for 1 hour or until silver knife for testing comes out clean. Serve warm or cold. Serves 6.

BASIC PIE CRUST: 1 cup flour, 1/2 tsp. salt, 8 teaspoons shortening, 8 teaspoons butter, 2 1/2 tablespoons water.
Combine flour and salt; cut in shortening and butter until mixture resembles coarse cornmeal. Sprinkle with water and mix until dough can be shaped into a tidy ball. Dust waxed paper or board with flour and roll out to form crust. Loosen pastry from board, fold it in half, lift it, lay the fold across the center of the pie pan, unfold it.

Chicago Lyric Opera Celebrates 25th Anniversary With 'Faust'

NEW YORK (AP) — Look out, New York! There's more than one U.S. city in the grand opera big leagues, as television viewers are finding out this season.

First, the San Francisco Opera checked in with a live performance of Ponchielli's "La Gioconda" on the Public Broadcasting Service network. Now, tonight, PBS Great Performances series will present Gounod's "Faust," taped at the Lyric Opera of Chicago last fall.

It was Lyric's 25th anniversary season, and "Faust" is a good example of the company's tradition of offering familiar repertory works with casts so star-studded that they put most other houses to shame.

"We have literally always had a four-star cast," said Carol Fox, founder and general manager of the Lyric, which, if for nothing else, would be remembered for bringing Maria Callas to the United States.

Singing in "Faust" are three Europeans who made their American debuts at the Lyric during the 1960s and quickly became world-famous: soprano Mirella Freni as Marguerite; tenor Alfredo Kraus as Faust; and bass Nicolai Ghiaurov as Mephistopheles. The fourth major role, Valentin, is sung by American baritone Richard Stilwell, who is fast on his way to joining the others as a superstar.

"Frankly, we're not a house that can afford to take chances," Miss Fox said in a recent interview. "New York thinks if they have it, it's great. Chicago audiences think if they have it, it couldn't be great. So we have to concentrate on popular works that we know will sell tickets."

Not that Lyric has shied away from novelties altogether. In 1978, it staged the world premiere of Penderecki's

"Paradise Lost," and took it on tour to Milan's La Scala, the virtual shrine of opera.

Since its founding in 1954, the Lyric has grown from putting on only a couple of works during three- or four-week seasons to doing seven or eight operas over 10 weeks.

Minority Broadcasters Slate Takeover Of Jackson Station

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the Federal Communications Commission announced that WLBT-TV in Jackson, Miss., would be sold to a black-controlled firm, it meant an end to a 25-year-old licensing dispute involving alleged discrimination.

WLBT will soon become the third VHF television station in the country under black control. That is both a reflection of the gains made by minorities in the broadcast industry and of the limited role they continue to play.

Less than 2 percent of the nation's radio and TV stations are controlled by minorities, and that figure has risen only slightly since the FCC's adoption in 1978 of special minority ownership policies.

Of the roughly 8,700 commercial and educational radio operations in the United States, there are about 100 controlled by blacks. Seventeen are controlled by Hispanics and a handful are under the control of American Indians.

But the outlook is not entirely bleak. Both private companies and non-profit funds have been created to help minorities find money and technical aid to purchase stations, and more training programs are available than ever before.

The key, however, is the FCC, according to blacks like Herbert Wilkins, the president of Syndicated Communications Inc. and Pierre "Peppe" Sutton, president of the Inner City Broadcasting Corp. Syndicated Communications was established in 1977 to provide funds and to help arrange financing for broadcast purchases. The firm expects to close its 13th deal next month.

"If those FCC policies weren't there, many of the deals we've closed probably just would not have happened," says Wilkins.

"I must say the greatest boon to broadcast acquisition by minorities has been the recent rules promulgated by the FCC," adds Sutton, whose New York City firm owns seven radio stations.

Frank G. Washington, assistant chief of the FCC's broadcast bureau, agrees. He also notes "the long controversy over WLBT's license spanned the development of the commission's concern over minority participation. That "concern" first centered on minority employment in broadcasting, with the FCC establishing policies in 1968 for considering discrimination complaints against owners and applicants.

Ten years later, the FCC declared: "The commission believes that ownership of broadcast facilities by minorities is another significant way of fostering the inclusion of minority views in the area of programming."

The commission thus unveiled two different policies to increase minority ownership — a tax break and a licensing break.

First, the commission said a station owner could receive a special tax certificate allowing him to defer capital gains taxes if he was selling to a minority firm.

Church Swamped By Refugees

MIAMI (AP) — The Rev. James Emmanuel Jenkins opened his heart and church to Haitians who have been caught trying to sneak into the country. But he says he never expected to end up with a thousand of them on his hands while the courts sort out their status.

Jenkins said Monday night he had finally come up with enough food for the Haitians, thanks to a department store and two women from nearby Cooper City, but no thanks to the federal officials who have been dropping the Haitians at the Friendship Missionary Baptist Church.

Jenkins said immigration officials had been bringing Haitians to the church for three weeks. He conceded he had volunteered to accept an unspecified number, but he said he never expected to be inundated.

"They just pick them off the boat, put them on the bus and drop them in our yard," Jenkins complained. "We don't have proper lodging. I'm having to sleep as many as 200 on the floor. And we've had more than 300 dropped off who haven't received physicals. We don't know what diseases they might be spreading in our community."

Church members and neighbors eased the sleeping situation some by providing rooms for the Haitians. All of the Haitians eat at the church.

Food also had been a problem until Monday, but then Burdines Department Stores donated 600 pounds of food and promised to supply enough in the future to feed 150 refugees a day.

Then Lillian Ourfalian and her best friend, Anna Law, drove in from Cooper City with $300 worth of food.

"We brought breads and rolls and donuts, a 13-pound turkey I won in a high-school raffle, detergent, salt, 20 pounds of rice, 15 pounds of sugar, oatmeal, pork and beans... We cleaned our kitchens out and went to the stores," Mrs. Ourfalian said.

Jenkins said he was elated at the unexpected help.

"We feel like the savior has come," he said.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization

Service officials offered no help and little sympathy.

"They shouldn't have told us they could take care of the Haitians if they can't," said INS district director Raymond Morris.

Morris said INS detains all Haitians unless local sponsors are found. He said Jenkins offered to take any who did not have sponsors.

Morris also disputed Jenkins' claim that the Haitians are being dumped without medical examinations. He said appointments were made for them but were broken when Jenkins failed to supply transportation. Jenkins said the INS had promised the transportation.

21-Year-Old Homosexual Charged With Murder

SEATTLE (AP) — A 21-year-old man discharged by the Army for being a homosexual was charged with first-degree murder Monday in the shooting death of the man he lived with, officials said.

Diane Rabin of the King County prosecutors office said Roger Cutsinger was charged in the Dec. 14 shooting of Larry D. Duerksen, 29, an employee of the University of Washington library.

Cutsinger is in custody and will be arraigned Wednesday, she said. Bail was set at $250,000.

Seattle police said Cutsinger and Duerksen shared an apartment near the university. Cutsinger was arrested for investigation of homicide on Friday, police said.

Police said several persons reported hearing shots the night Duerksen died in a wooded area of the campus.

After the slaying, police said they believed Duerksen and his assailant had been arguing as they walked in the rain.

A spokesman for the county medical examiner's office said Cutsinger identified Duerksen's body at the morgue.

Cutsinger's battle with the Army drew national attention when he tried to remain in the service after acknowledging his homosexuality. Many of his superiors and fellow officers testified he was a competent soldier.

The Army contends homosexuality is "incompatible" with military service. Cutsinger received an honorable discharge in early November, 10 months before his three-year enlistment would have ended.

At the time of his discharge, he was a clerk in the Ninth Adjutant General Company at Fort Lewis, Wash.

After the discharge, Cutsinger said he would sue the Army for $3 million to $5 million for alleged discrimination.

The American Civil Liberties Union was active in helping Cutsinger fight the discharge, contending the army's policy violates the constitutional rights of homosexuals.

Government Plans Revenge On Man

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — When the provincial government announced plans earlier this year to offer each citizen five free shares in the British Columbia Resources Investment Corp., one local man figured he had a way to beat the system.

He applied for his free stock in the government corporation, which operates lumber mills and other industrial concerns, at 33 banks, figuring to get 165 shares worth nearly $1,200.

However, Finance Ministry consultant Bob Hawkins said the unidentified man's scheme was detected by a computer cross-checking system.

Now the government is getting even. The man won't be charged with any crime, but Hawkins says the government has canceled 32 of his 33 applications — and nobody's going to tell him which of the 33 banks is holding his five free shares.

GOP Leader Flays Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — In his first criticism of administration actions in the Iranian crisis, the Republican national chairman said Tuesday that President Carter's only real policy is "a policy of deception" aimed at fooling the American people.

GOP Chairman Bill Brock accused the president of failing to develop a foreign policy to "discourage a repetition elsewhere of the barbaric actions taken in Iran." He characterized administration moves as "verbal protests to the offending countries and too-mild supplications before the U.N."

The Republican leader also said in a statement Tuesday that the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan makes ratification of the SALT II treaty "unthinkable."

The White House had no response to Brock's statement, although Carter in an interview taped Monday called for greater unity among Americans in what he predicted would be "a good decade."

U.S. reaction to events abroad also reportedly was questioned Tuesday by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. A source at a meeting between Begin and U.S. Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., quoted Begin as saying the United States "needs more ground forces" to block Soviet inroads in countries like Afghanistan and Iran.

The source said the Israeli leader was asked what he would do as a U.S. president and replied: "If the Russian Embassy were taken over by so-called students, the Russians would immediately march on Tehran. That is why the Iranians would never dream of taking the Russian Embassy."

Brock said he was prompted to speak out by events in Iran and Afghanistan over the past month.

He stressed that he was not withdrawing from the statement he made a month ago with Democratic National Chairman John White to illustrate the solidarity of the American people in support of the president's actions to free the hostages held in Tehran.

"The unity of the American people is not now in question," Brock said. "Despite the broad public support," he added, "Mr. Carter has failed to develop a policy that would protect American interests and prestige in the world and discourage a repetition elsewhere of the barbaric actions taken in Iran."

"Moreover," he said, "it is increasingly evident that Mr. Carter's policy of patience is a policy of deception. Its purpose seems to be to make the American people believe we have a policy appropriate to the multiple crises in the Mideast ... and to conceal from them the extent to which the policies of the Carter administration and the Democrat Congress have diminished our security and credibility."

Brock, who became Republican chairman after his defeat for re-election to the Senate in 1976, said the Soviets' "naked aggression" in Afghanistan is worrisome to the Moslem world and the Third World.

"In its own way, our response to date sends signals that must be equally worrisome — verbal protests to the offending countries and too-mild supplications before the U.N., where we have failed to show the courage to insist on tough sanctions," he said.

The Soviets' action in Afghanistan conflicts with the premises of SALT, Brock said, adding: "We should leave no doubt that the ratification of SALT II in such a context is unthinkable."

Brock also said "we should take action now to assure those bordering Moslem states that ... the United States stands willing to offer them assistance, should it be needed."

He pointed to Pakistan in particular, and said that should congressional approval be needed to provide it assistance, Republicans would support any "reasonable plan" Carter might propose.

Direct military aid to Pakistan was cut off last April after it was learned the country was developing nuclear weapons. Carter reportedly said Saturday, however, that he was studying resuming sale to Pakistan of arms not covered under the prohibition.

In the interview taped Monday and broadcast New Year's Day on ABC, Carter said he believes the 1980s will be "a good decade" but he'd like to "see the American people more unified."

Carter forecast a "nation with growing strength economically, politically, militarily and, I hope, morally and ethically."

Carter said he would like to see the American people return to "a greater trust and respect for their own government, based on the fact that the government tells them the truth and does not avoid controversial issues when the people know those issues to be important."

The president said he'd also like to see an end to discrimination against women, blacks, Hispanics and the poor.

Russian Troops Battling Rebels

credits to the Soviet Union were being studied. No decision was made on any measure, the source said.

Diplomats in Brussels said NATO might also consider increased arms sales to Pakistan, whose Moslem government has expressed grave fears about the Soviet presence in neighboring Afghanistan. Revised troop estimates placed 40,000 troops in the country, a Western diplomatic source said.

The Soviet Army, said to have suffered 250 casualties during last Thursday's coup overthrowing the government of President Hafizullah Amin, was spreading throughout the countryside of the mountainous Central Asian nation but was running into resistance, a Western diplomatic source said in New Delhi.

He said there were reports of clashes between Afghans and Soviet troops in the provincial capitals of Kandahar, 275 miles southwest of Kabul, and Jalalabad, 75 miles east of the capital.

There also were reports of resistance in Herat, 400 miles west of the capital, but the source said the city was soon put under Soviet control. Herat was the scene of a bloody uprising last March in which at least 60 Soviet troops were slain. Harsh reprisals by government troops caused numerous casualties afterward, diplomatic sources said.

Some machinegun fire was also reported in Kabul, but the Soviet troops patrolling the streets were still firmly in control of the city, the source said. Most of the troops arrived on Wednesday, reportedly took part in the overthrow of the communist Amin government and replaced it with a regime headed by Babrak Karmal, described by insurgents as a "puppet" of Moscow.

Soviet leaders are presumably motivated by fear of continued successes by Moslem fundamentalists and tribal separatists with religious and ethnic ties to Soviet subjects along a 1,000-mile border.

The Soviet Union has said it was invited into the country by the government and a commentator for the official Soviet news agency Tass said Tuesday the "limited Soviet military contingent, instructed to assist exclusively in repelling armed interference from outside, will be fully withdrawn" when there is no longer a need for them.

Diplomats said Tuesday's NATO meeting produced a consensus that the allies take the Soviet-backed coup as "extremely serious."

U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher characterized the Soviet intervention as a "brutal invasion," and NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns said, "more than ever solidarity and unity of purpose and decision between the allies is imperative."

Christopher's British counterpart, Douglas Hurd, said that although no decision was reached on the proposal to boycott the Olympic games scheduled for July 19, the subject is certain to be raised again.

He said the NATO allies would be reviewing all its contacts with the Soviet Union to "see which ones we want to continue and which ones we want to restrict."

Unless there is a firm response from the West, the Soviets will be encouraged to make similar moves elsewhere, he said.

"I think it shows that the Soviet Union wants to be boss in Afghanistan and does not want to see a Moslem state there. It will influence Iran, India and Pakistan."

Hurd said one of NATO's first tasks would be to reassure Pakistan that the West will support it against possible Soviet pressure, a possible indication of increased arms sales. Pakistan, Afghanistan's Moslem neighbor to the south and east has been accused by the Soviet Union of harboring guerrillas and supplying them.

Pakistani officials said more than 387,000 Afghan refugees have crossed into Pakistan in the past 19 months, when fighting broke out against the first communist regime in Kabul. More than 38,000 refugees have fled in the past three weeks, the officials said.

Details began emerging, meanwhile, about members of Karmal's cabinet who appeared to share the common experience of being purged by one of Afghanistan's three former governments.

Deputy Prime Minister Assadullah Sarwari was head of the secret police until September when Amin fired him. Commerce Minister Mohammed Khan Jalal and Frontier Minister Faiz Mohammed were in the cabinet of President Mohammed Daoud, the last non-aligned ruler of Afghanistan, who was overthrown in April 1978 by Marxist Nur Mohammad Taraki.

OFF TO JAIL — Reno police make one of many arrests early Tuesday when New Year's revelry turned to rioting in the downtown area near the plush gambling casinos. Seven police officers and three other persons were injured in the rampage, which was ended by the use of tear gas and police dogs. Stores and autos were vandalized by the mob. (AP Laserphoto)

Reno Police Arrest 100 After Rampage By Mob

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Thousands of revelers streamed out of downtown casinos to celebrate New Year's Eve, then ran amok for three hours, stoning policemen, smashing store windows and looting several businesses early Tuesday. Police used tear gas to disperse the mob and arrested 100 people.

One man was seriously injured as the mob rampaged through several blocks around the downtown's glittering casinos. "They just went crazy ... They were acting like animals," said Dennis Mack, manager of a pawn shop that was looted of $20,000 worth of goods.

"After they came into the store and took the things, they went upstairs and broke all my windows up there," he added. "That's how I knew they were nuts."

Police Lt. Charles Nearpass said about 10,000 people had gone into the streets for the traditional New Year's celebration when the trouble broke out. He said about 4,000 took part in the violence.

"When they started it, we were overwhelmed," said Capt. Charles Williams, one of several police officers hit by rocks. About 300 officers were called in as rioters smashed windows at a barber shop, a restaurant, several offices and some smaller casinos. Police sealed off entrances to the big casinos to keep vandals away. Windows of many cars, including police cruisers and two paddy wagons, also were smashed.

Nearpass said rioters were throwing "rocks, bottles, anything they could get their hands on."

Some people in the mob produced anti-Iranian placards and started chanting anti-Iranian obscenities, but Nearpass said that seemed to be more of "an afterthought."

He said the initial trouble was caused by "booze" and "a spontaneous combustion type of thing."

Police Chief James Parker said he ordered the use of tear gas because "I figured they weren't going to leave."

"We had the incident at the jewelry store (the pawn shop), and I thought it could spread to other businesses," he said. "I really don't think we had any choice."

Nearpass said the rampage was the worst ever in the city. It was "much worse" than a riot by about a thousand people on New Year's Eve in 1961, he said.

A security guard at the Sahara-Reno hotel-casino, who declined to give his name, said: "It just got out of hand ... It was the people against the cops."

Nearpass said more than 100 rioters were jailed on charges ranging from protective custody to assault with a deadly weapon.

Hospitals reported treating 10 riot victims. All were released except for an unidentified man listed in serious but stable condition at St. Mary's Hospital.

The incident was similar to rioting at Stateline two years ago. About 5,000 revelers streamed into the streets at Stateline, at Lake Tahoe, this New Year's, but police said they were able to control the situation and no trouble developed there.

Weather Boosts Toll On Nation's Roads

A-J News Services
Weather played a deadly game with New Year's motorists Tuesday, luring travelers to the highways, then spreading rain and fog to boost the holiday death toll.

An early run of stormy weather was credited with helping keep the death toll well behind that of the bloody Christmas weekend, which left nearly 700 motorists dead.

But balmy weather toward the middle of the four-day weekend combined with liberal doses of bottled holiday spirits on New Year's Eve, and a nasty turn in the weather Tuesday pushed the death toll to the level projected by the National Safety Council.

The Council had said 360 to 440 people could be killed in traffic accidents during the long holiday period, which began at 6 p.m. local time Friday and ended at midnight Tuesday.

A news service count showed 441 people had been killed in New Year's traffic accidents by 8 p.m. Tuesday.

California reported 31 traffic deaths and Texas had 25 by late afternoon.

Agee To Get New Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former CIA officer Philip Agee, turned down in an initial legal bid to regain his U.S. passport, will get a new court hearing today.

Agee, who has written books and articles on the CIA since quitting the intelligence agency several years ago, was stripped of his passport on Dec. 23 by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

The unusual action was taken after Agee, who now lives in West Germany, had spoken of involving himself in the Iranian hostage situation. The State Department contended that Agee's actions could seriously damage U.S. national security and foreign policy.

On Monday, U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker declined a request to issue a temporary restraining order against the passport revocation on the claim that it was a violation of Agee's constitutional rights to free speech and travel as a journalist.

Parker agreed that the case presented "substantial issues" that merit a further hearing before another District Court Judge Gerhard Gesel.

Without a valid passport, Agee could be deported from West Germany.

Michigan had 21 and Pennsylvania and Ohio each reported 20.

The Texas toll was less than half the number of deaths estimated by the Department of Public Safety. DPS officials, using statistics from past years and current trends, had warned that 56 persons would die during the period from Friday night until midnight Tuesday.

Seven new fatalities were added to the list during the day Tuesday.

Of the 25 killed on Texas roads, 10 were pedestrians struck by cars or trucks.

Authorities said fog and freezing rain that complicated the homeward travel crush could push the death toll sharply higher.

Dense fog spread made travel hazardous from the Dakotas to the Mississippi Valley across the Ohio Valley and over parts of Utah, California and Idaho.

Freezing rain spread over parts of the Plains and the northern Mississippi Valley, making driving even more hazardous. Rain, freezing rain and snow glazed roads across the northern Plateau region and strong, gusty winds prompted travel advisories for the Sierra Nevada of northern California.

Authorities said fog was a contributing factor in a car-train accident that killed three teen-agers near Aurora, Neb. early Monday.

In one of the worst accidents of the weekend, three young men and a teenage girl drowned after their car skidded on slick pavement and plunged 8 feet into the Thunder Bay River southwest of Alpena, Mich. Sunday.

Four Killed By Monoxide Fumes

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — A man, woman and two girls were killed Tuesday by carbon monoxide fumes from an unvented open space heater but another woman was pulled from the house barely alive by her father, who had to break in to get her.

The surviving woman's son, James Satterwhite, 14, said he returned from spending the night at his grandparents' house to find the eastside residence completely closed up. He said he peered through a window and saw his mother on the floor inside.

He said he ran back to his grandparents' and brought his grandfather back. They broke into the house, helped her put clothes on, moved her out to a doorway and then called authorities.

The Fire Department rescue squad found the body of a 31-year-old man on a bed in another part of the house, the body of a 22-year-old woman in another bedroom and the bodies of two girls, 3 and 7 months, on a bed beside her.

Satterwhite's mother, 31-year-old Bobby Satterwhite, was taken to Brooke Air Force Base School of Aerospace Medicine, where she was put into a special decompression chamber often used for carbon monoxide poisoning victims. She was listed in critical condition.

The youth said he first tried to enter his house about 1 p.m. but found it locked. He said he went back to his grandparents', assuming everyone was still asleep.

"I came back at 4:20," he said. "I look through the window and found her. They sleep till about 1 o'clock but not till 4 o'clock. That's when I became suspicious."

Satterwhite said he and his grandfather helped his mother out but he didn't go after the others.

"I didn't want to go in that other room," he said. "I knowed the babies were in there."

Authorities said the temperature in San Antonio dipped to 33 degrees overnight and that when they entered the house they found it completely sealed, with locked locked and newspapers wedged into cracks under the door and around windows.

They said the space heater should have had a vent to the outside but did not. They also said a gas stove in the kitchen was on — but without flame — and said they believed the carbon monoxide snuffed out the burners.

The dead were identified as Roy T. James, 33, who spent the night at the house, and Guadalupe Rodriguez, 23, and her daughters Lisa and Bonnie. The Rodriguezes had been staying with the Satterwhites for several days.

Shah Compared To Hitler

By PETER ARNETT
 Associated Press Writer

He lingers with his entourage at a quiet Panamanian island resort, his future much less sunny than the balmy tropical days that warm the Pacific Ocean lapping at his doorstep.

Of the many all-powerful leaders toppled in recent years, the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi remains the most notorious. Not only is his return to Iran still the key for the release of the American hostages in Tehran, but the new leaders, insisting that his crimes be investigated, declare that to Iranians, he is "comparable only to Hitler as viewed by the Jews."

And Democratic presidential aspirant Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said the shah "ran one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind."

While many voices have been raised against the shah's forcible return to Tehran very few have defended his regime. A lonely recent voice was that of his sister, Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, who bought a full page advertisement in The New York Times for a letter to the secretary general of the United Nations, Kurt Waldheim. She said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, now leader for life in Iran, "pretends that the shah has eliminated more than a hundred thousand political prisoners, while you know full well that in the entire 37 years of his reign nothing of that sort ever happened."

Just what did happen under the rule of the Shahinshah, Iran's King of Kings, and does he deserve a place on the blacklist of international despotism that has cast a shadow over the 20th century?

Outside investigators have long documented allegations of the systematic torture of political opponents by SAVAK, the shah's secret police, that helped him and his family maintain the absolute rule of the Peacock Throne. The revolutionary regime has taken Western reporters on tours of SAVAK's former prisons to publicize its charges that tens of thousands of political opponents were tortured and murdered under the previous government.

Iran's new leaders also charge that the United States helped train the SAVAK agents. This alleged complicity represents the background for the seizure of the hostages in November.

President Carter criticized Iran's human rights record in 1977, and the shah announced an end to torture in his prisons. Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization, said in a report that the use of the wide range of torture methods appeared to decrease — but not stop — at that time.

In an attempt to stem the tide of rising opposition, the shah released most of the political prisoners known to outside investigators before his own departure this year.

While much evidence has been presented of systematic torture, much less is known of the extent of political murders during the shah's reign in Iran.

In the long list of countries where basic human rights are allegedly being violated — Amnesty International lists nearly 100 this year — Iran under the shah is sometimes compared with the rightwing governments of Argentina and South Korea which reportedly used similar practices to maintain power.

In Argentina, according to outside investigators, 15,000 political opponents were killed or disappeared in the two years following the 1976 military coup. Human rights groups charge there are 60 secret camps in Argentina where torture is routine, and that the number of "los desaparecidos" — the disappeared — continues to rise.

In South Korea, the assassination of President Park Chung-hee in October appeared for a time to have brought an end to the pattern of frequent arrests and releases of many "suspects," some of whom were brought to trial and given long prison sentences for their opposition to the ruling clique.

Park governed under emergency powers provided by a constitution that was introduced under martial law in 1972, but the total number of political prisoners is believed to have never exceeded 300, possibly because of the widespread charges in the United States of human rights violations in South Korea.

Political repression has taken a different form in the communist world from the days of Soviet leader Josef V. Stalin. His administration is blamed for the loss of 50 million or 60 million lives during the collectivization process of the 1920s. Millions were slaughtered in the Stalin purges of the 1930s. An estimated five million to 10 million lives were taken in concentration camps after World War II.

Human rights organizations still charge that Soviet corrective labor colonies and prisons continue to be characterized by chronic hunger, overwork, cold and inadequate medical attention.

The major current criticism of Eastern Europe's human rights record is the abusive use of psychiatry and drugs in mental asylums where dissidents often are confined.

The shah's place in a despot's hall of fame would have to yield to four other rulers dislodged this past year.

Idi Amin Dada ran the African nation of Uganda with a grip so oppressive, so merciless, that Ugandans said after his ouster that they thought God had forgotten them. Human rights groups estimated that more than 200,000 of Uganda's 13 million people died in purges during Amin's eight-year reign. Amin was forced to flee his country in April by Tanzanian and exiled Ugandan forces.

Emperor Bokassa I of the Central African Empire, a former second lieutenant in the French army, capped a long career of bloodshed by participating in a massacre last year of about 100 schoolchildren, according to human rights investigators. Bokassa began his rule with a military coup in 1965, and had himself crowned emperor in 1977 and sat on a golden throne in a ceremony costing more than $30 million, one fourth of the annual national income.

President-for-Life Francisco Nguema of Equatorial Guinea was said by critics to have turned his tiny country of 333,000 into "the concentration camp of Africa" and a "cottage industry Dachau" during his 11 years in office. Human rights organizations believe as many as 100,000 people were killed during his rule that ended when he was overthrown in a military coup in August.

Premier Pol Pot, whose 4½ years of Communist rule in Cambodia was ended by the Vietnamese invasion of his country last January, was accused of imposing cruel punishment, usually death, for any infringement of the strict rules governing everyday life, leading to what human rights organizations charged was a "continuing bloodletting." President Carter once called him "the world's worst violator of human rights."

As many as a million people are believed to have died under the Pol Pot regime, based on the accounts of refugees and the new Vietnamese-backed Communist government of Heng Samrin.

The model for 20th century repression remains Adolf Hitler, whose "Thousand-Year Reich" ended with his suicide in a Berlin bunker in 1945. Ten leaders of his Nazi Party were hanged for their part in the Holocaust that took the lives of millions of Jews and other prisoners.

Hostages' Statements In Film Called Act

DETROIT (UPI) — The four American hostages who read statements critical of the United States were putting on "an act" to help themselves cope with isolation, a bishop who visited the hostages at Christmas said Tuesday.

Bishop Thomas Gumbleton, one of three American clergymen who conducted Christmas services at the U.S. embassy in Tehran, urged Americans not to "misread" or "overreact" to the Iranian-made film.

The film was shown Monday on U.S. television.

"I think there was a clear indication it was an act," Gumbleton said of the film aired by the three major networks after conditions imposed earlier by the Moslem militants were dropped.

Gumbleton said making the film was one way for the four hostages — one of them a Michigan man — to make contact with the outside world after seven weeks of captivity.

"They're trying to cope with the situation in the best way they can," he said. "In this instance they were accepting a risk that perhaps by participating in this program, their participation would be exploited, but they would choose to do so anyway because they could still achieve some really important good from it."

Gumbleton said the hostages "desperately need to know ... if anybody cares any more to get them out of there ... because the longer their isolation, the more likely that one or more is going to break."

Although it may not have been apparent to the average television viewer, Gumbleton said the four hostages used vocal inflections, speech hesitations and other subtle signs to indicate they did not mean what they were saying.

"I think they were giving lots of signals," he said.

Gumbleton said the scene in which one of the hostages, Sgt. Joseph Subic, handed him a bag purportedly filled with Christmas cards from the hostages was obviously faked.

"On the film you see Joe handing them to me and making a little pitch ... he said. "After the film was off, one of the students walked off with them and I never saw them again."

Subic, whose parents live in Redford Township, Mich., said in the film he had been sympathetic to the Shah when he arrived in Iran but, after seeing "more and more poor people, people without homes, food, education ... my thinking started to turn around."

Gumbleton said he thought the U.S. television networks acted responsibly in airing the film, but expressed concern over the repercussions it might have.

"There's a chance the American public could be fooled by this if they misread this thing or overreact to it," he said.

Hansen Says Release Near

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Rep. George Hansen, back from his second trip to Iran since the U.S. Embassy was stormed nearly two months ago, predicted Monday that "all or some of the American hostages will be released soon."

The Idaho Republican, in a telephone interview with the Idaho Falls Post-Register, said "soon" could be in a few weeks, but he hoped it would be only a few days.

He said most Iranian government officials now want to see the American hostages released. Militant students are holding between 43 and 50 hostages at the embassy.

Hansen was criticized by the Carter administration for becoming involved in

Firm Wins Squabble Over Brand Names

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnson & Johnson Inc. is the apparent winner of a legal squabble with Procter & Gamble Co. over the words "sure" and "assure" as possible brand names for two feminine products.

In a ruling recently, U.S. District Judge Pierre N. Leval held that Procter & Gamble did not prove trademark infringement because it had not established rights to the two words through bona fide commercial use on feminine products.

Leval's decision cleared the way for Personal Products Co., a Johnson & Johnson subsidiary, to market a menstrual pad under the label "Sure & Natural Maxshield." He also upheld the subsidiary's right to retain "Assure" as a brand name for a tampon being test-marketed.

Many Suits Filed Against Manufacturer Of IUD

By KATHY HORAK

DETROIT (AP) — In the early 1970s, the Dalkon Shield intra-uterine contraceptive was enthusiastically touted as an effective, safe alternative to the problem-plagued birth control pill.

Now, four years after problems and publicity persuaded the A.H. Robbins Co. to stop producing the device, the

"We claim the shield wasn't as safe and as effective as the company claimed, and that they overpromoted it on the basis of inadequate studies and incomplete evidence," said Gage.

"In Denver, the jury was not only convinced, they were convinced to the tune of $6.8 million. I suspect the company is still reeling from the decision."

Gage outlined what he called systematic negligence on Robbins' part in the development, testing and marketing of the Dalkon IUD. "The basic evidence is the same in all cases," Gage said in an interview.

When the adverse publicity on the shield began mounting, Robbins conducted a follow-up study, Gage said. The results indicated that the proclaimed 99 percent contraceptive rate was overstated, but Robbins continued to distribute information boasting of its effectiveness, Gage said.

Articles in women's magazines such as Good Housekeeping were presented as independent informational pieces but were actually produced by Robbins, the lawyer added.

"It would appear to be just a news article about a new product," says Gage. "We consider that unethical promotion."

A brochure praised the shield as "a truly superior birth control method," and claimed "a recent survey of women using the Dalkon Shield noted a marked improvement in sexual relations ... This is another reason why wearing the Dalkon Shield can be a rewarding experience."

The Dalkon Shield was developed in 1968 by Dr. Hugh Davis of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. Robbins paid Davis $750,000 for manufacturing rights, plus 10 percent royalties and a $20,000 consultant's fee, Gage said.

The Food and Drug Administration held hearings into all IUDs in 1972 to consider classifying them. A moratorium was declared on use of the Dalkon Shield.

In December 1974, against the advice of its advisory committee, the FDA allowed limited distribution of the shield through doctors who register and monitor their patients. "In this way the need ed safety data will be collected," the FDA said.

One requirement for lifting the moratorium was that Robbins make the IUD with a single-strand tail because the braided string was found to trap more bacteria within its strands.

Forrest said Robbins discontinued production of the Dalkon Shield in 1975 even though "we had FDA approval to go back to market with it ... We felt that with the adverse publicity and problems the product had, it was not viable to go back to market."

Today's FOCUS

Richmond, Va., company faces 4,000 lawsuits from women who claim the shield was neither effective — nor safe.

An additional 800 cases have been settled out of court or dismissed, and Robbins' spokesman Tom Wolfe said the company has on file 180 written complaints about the shield.

The shield is a plastic circle with spokes along the circumference. It ends in a braided string which trails from the uterus to let the user know the shield is in place.

But the string also produced what court documents called "a wicking action," allowing bacteria to enter the uterus. Medical experts say bacteria have led to pelvic inflammations which, if untreated, could cause sterility and even death.

One case involved Carrie Palmer of Denver, who in 1973 became pregnant while using a Dalkon Shield. In the final three months of pregnancy, she suffered a miscarriage and had to undergo an emergency hysterectomy.

In August 1979, a Denver jury awarded Mrs. Palmer, now 26, $600,000 in compensatory damages and $6.2 million in punitive damages.

Robbins' General Counsel William Forrest says the company is appealing the Denver judgment as "an aberration ... an unjustified outcome."

"The Denver woman was compensated for her injuries, but $6 million is not justified," Forrest said.

The Denver settlement was the stiffest. The latest came on Dec. 19 in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, for an amount Robbins refuses to disclose.

Pending in U.S. District Court in Detroit are suits by two Michigan women, both in their childbearing years. One woman miscarried; the other's uterus was punctured.

Attorney William Gage is representing the two women and asked that their names not be revealed.

Church Ban Sought By Mormon

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Saying the release of a federal judge from his Mormon church position was the "last straw," a Montana woman has asked that she be excommunicated from the church.

Arlene Wood of Whitefish, Mont., said the release of U.S. District Judge Marion Callister as a Mormon regional representative was aimed at keeping him on a case involving the Equal Rights Amendment, which the church opposes.

Mrs. Wood, a 35-year-old mother of three, was press secretary to Soma Johnson, a Sterling, Va., Mormon who was excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints last month.

Mrs. Johnson was excommunicated for allegedly undermining the church's missionary program, teaching false doctrine and defaming church leaders. She said she was cut off because of her activities as co-founder of Mormons for ERA and has appealed her local bishop's verdict.

Callister of Boise, Idaho, disclosed last week that he had been released as a church official on Oct. 31. The Justice Department and women's groups had tried to get him to remove himself from the ERA case because of his high church position.

Callister refused, saying his religious position had nothing to do with the suit brought by Idaho, Arizona and Washington challenging Congressional extension for passage of the amendment.

Oil Refinery Planned For New Jersey

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Plans for the first oil refinery built in the state in 20 years have gotten an "amber light" from officials, and the facility could be completed in a year, an oil company spokesman said Tuesday.

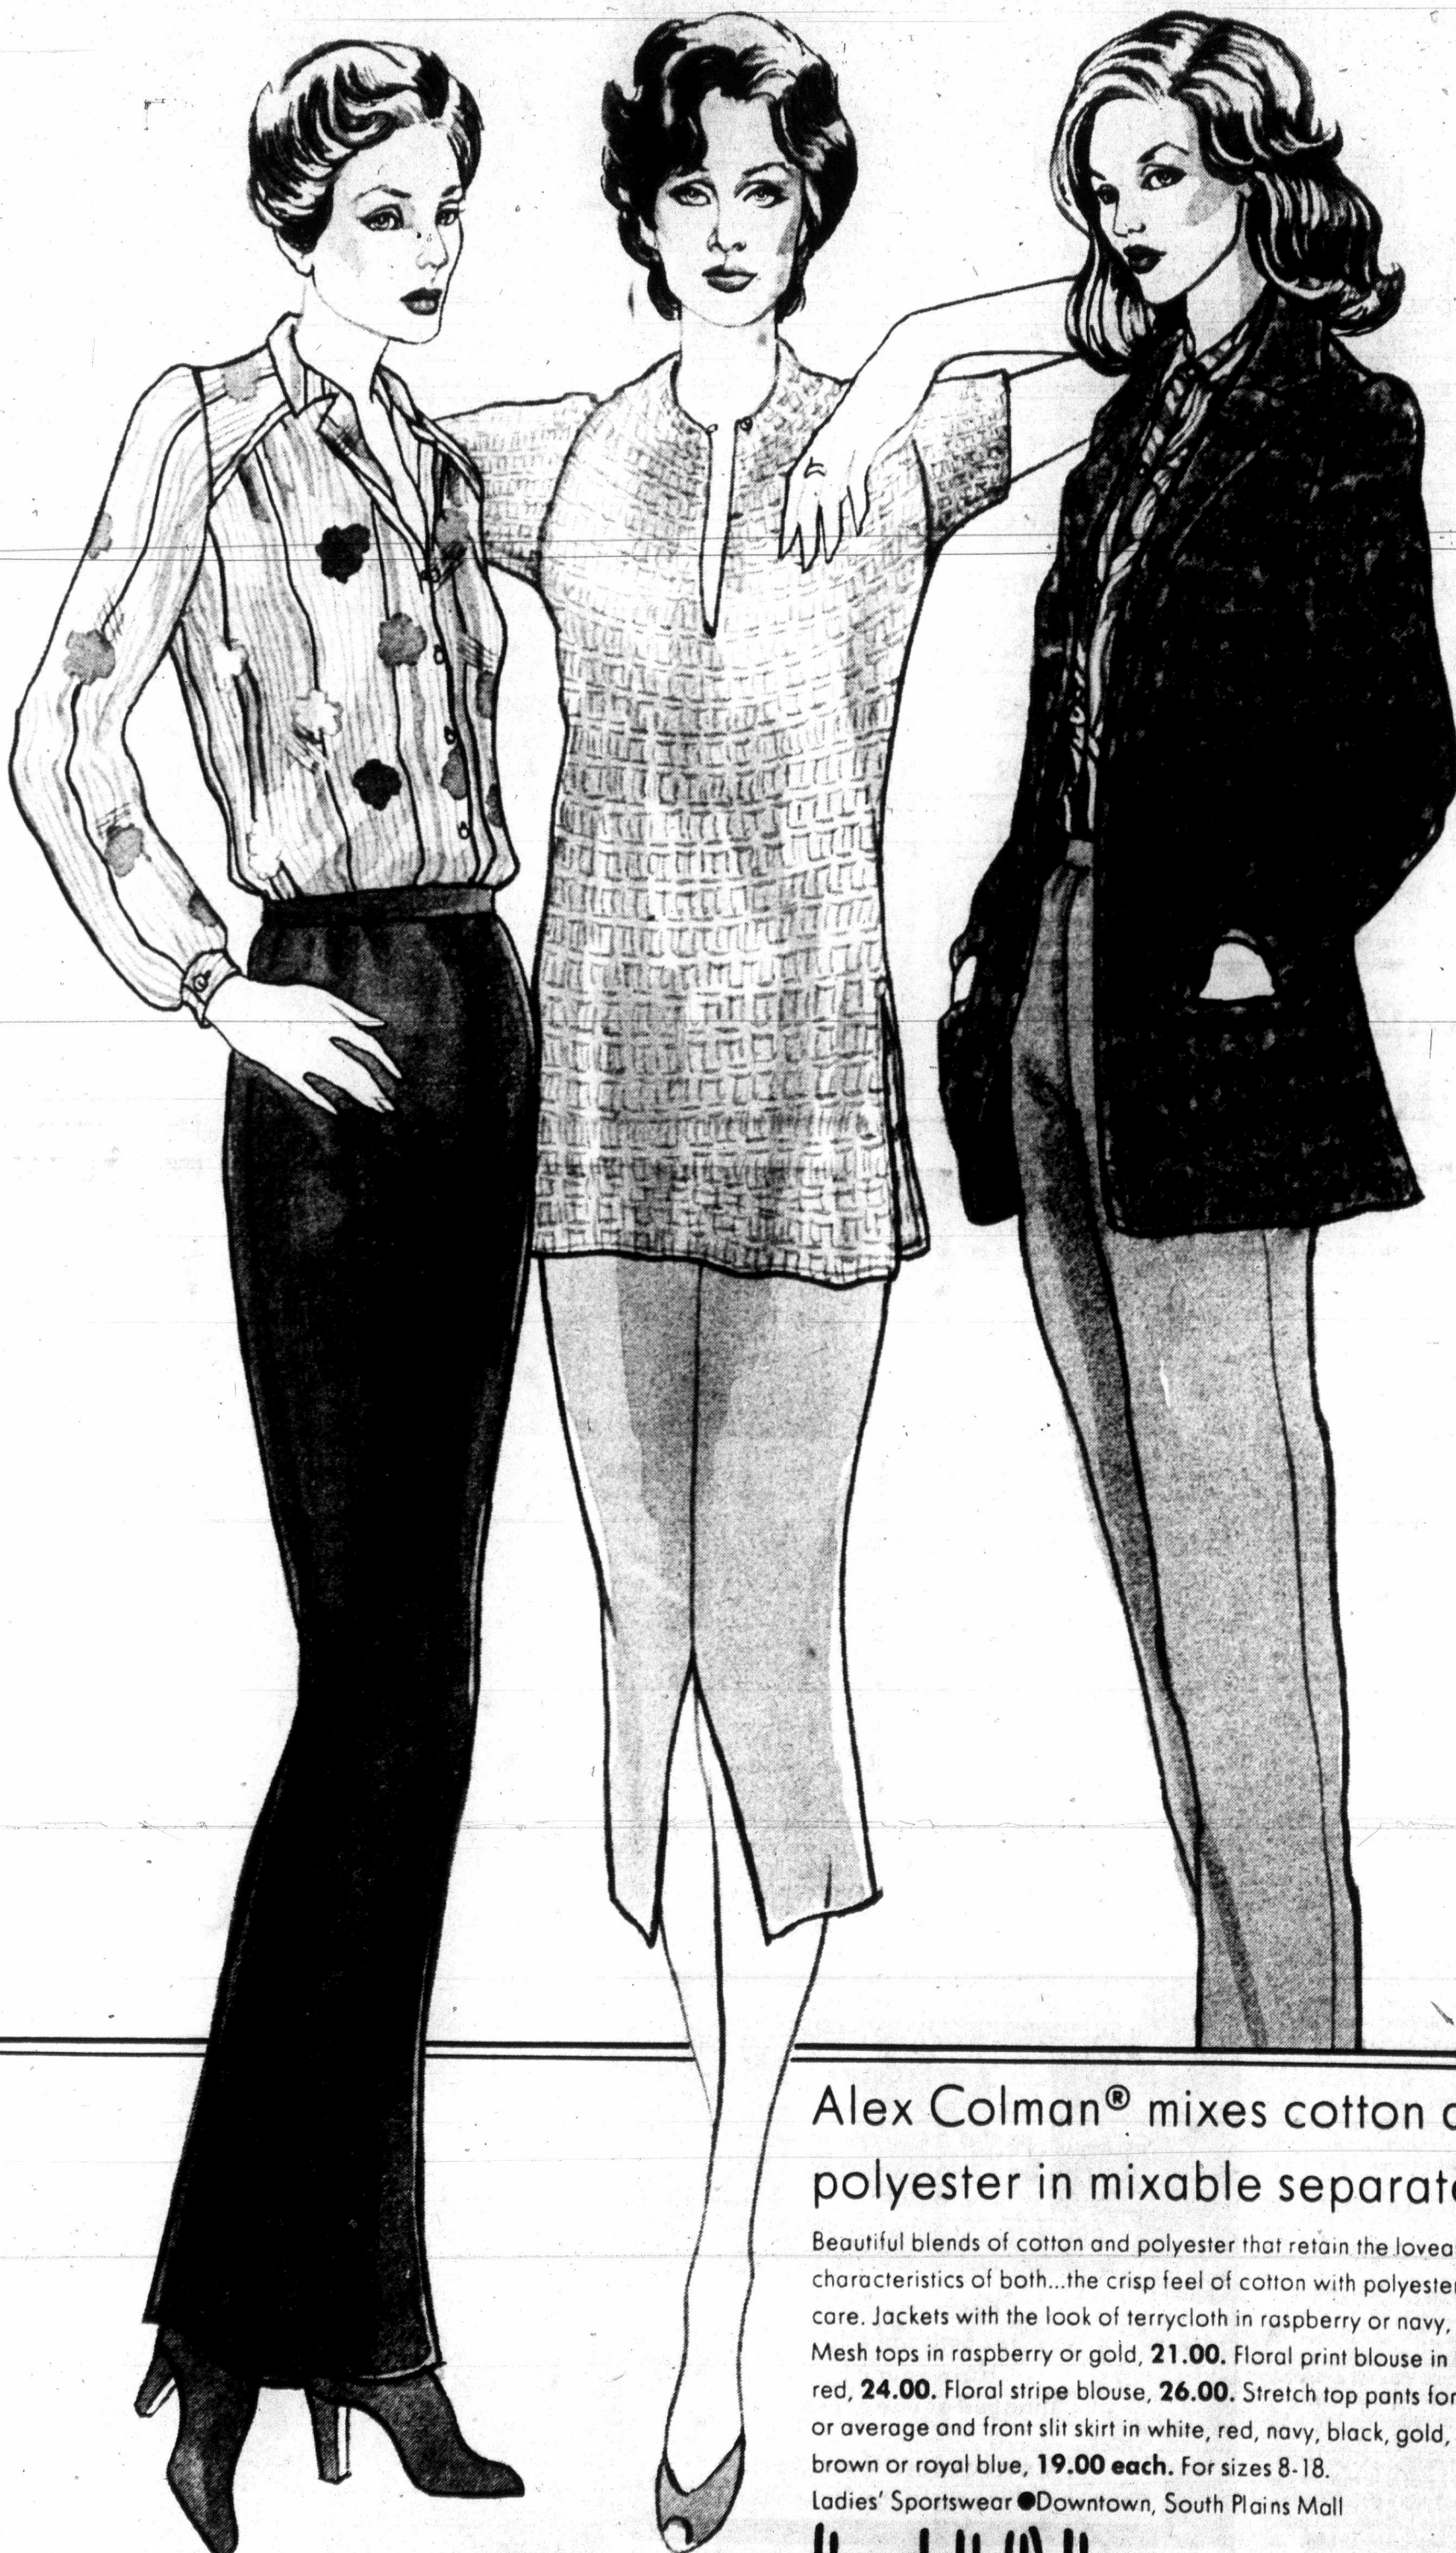

Matthew Coppolino, lawyer for the Inter-Continental Consolidated Oil Corp., said the Houston firm will soon be going through the state permit process to build a refinery on 130 acres on the Delaware River in Camden.

The facility is proposed to process 175,000 barrels of oil a day, the Philadelphia lawyer said in an interview.

If approved, the facility, along with Arco and Gulf oil refineries across the Delaware in Philadelphia, would make the region the fourth largest refining area in the country, he said.

"The effect the refinery would have on gasoline and heating oil supplies in the region, and the price of those products because of lower transportation costs, is a big, big plus," said Coppolino.

Although state officials have given no guarantee of approval of the plans, Coppolino said initial talks with state and city officials "means we have an amber light at this point."

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor
DALLAS — Last New Year's Day, the Houston Cougars were severely scalded by Notre Dame in the closing seconds of the Cotton Bowl. The Fighting Irish rallied for 23 points in the final eight minutes of the fourth quarter to post a miraculous 35-34 victory over the unbelieving Cougars.

Tuesday, the Cougars did the burning. Houston ushered in the decade of the 80s with a fiery ending of its own in the 44th Cotton Bowl Classic. And this time, the Nebraska Cornhuskers and their many fans were left shaking their heads.

Junior quarterback Terry Elston, who replaced an ineffective Delrick Brown early in the second quarter, marched the Cougars 66 yards in the final 3:49 of play and capped the drive with a six-yard, fourth-and-goal pass to junior flanker Eric Herring with only 12 seconds showing on the clock to lift Houston a stunning 17-14 win over the Huskers.

Herring made a stabbing catch of Elston's desperation pass, thrown between Nebraska defensive backs Ric Lindquist and Russell Gary in the end zone. The ball appeared to bounce off the arm of Lindquist, but Herring was there to make the grab for the winning touchdown.

"I saw him juggling the ball in the end zone and I didn't know what happened on the winning touchdown," declared Houston's Bill Yeoman. "But I knew it was something good when everybody around me started jumping up and down."

Only minutes earlier, it was the Nebraska bench that was jumping for joy. John Newhouse's second fumble of the game at the Houston 31-yard line — recovered by defensive tackle Bill Barnet — allowed Nebraska to erase a 10-7 Cougar lead and take a four-point, 14-10, advantage with only 4:01 left in the contest.

The Huskers picked up a first down at the Houston 10 on a 13-yard pass from junior I-back Jarvis Redwine to quarterback Jeff Quinn in a display of razzle-dazzle on their part of Husker head coach Tom Osborne.

On third-and-goal from the Cougar six, the Huskers tried another bit of trickery and it worked...until and illegal procedure call nullified a six-yard touchdown scamper by Redwine.

The disallowed TD play was simply a quick snap that caught the Houston defensive off guard. Most of the Nebraska

Of course, the play did not stand, but the Huskers came right back on the subsequent down. This time Quinn, who had enough time to cook a steak in the pocket, hit a wide-open Jeff Finn in the left corner of the end zone for the go-ahead score. Dean Sukup added the point after kick to push Nebraska on top 14-10.

"I thought, the way the defense had been playing, that 14-10 would be enough to win it for us," stated Finn, a junior reserve tight end. "But Houston came back and I give them credit."

It was Elston, a 6-3, 210-pounder from Oxford, Ala., who turned the game around for the Cougars. The reserve signal-caller, who rescued victory from the jaws of defeat on three previous occasions during the 1979 season, led the Cougars to their seventh-come-from-behind win of the year. The seventh-ranked Cougars ended the season with an 11-1 mark.

Elston carried the football 22 times for 87 yards and one touchdown, a nine-yard jaunt in the second quarter that knotted the score at 7-7, and completed nine of 16 passes for 119 yards and another score, his first career scoring pass. For his efforts, Elston was named the Cotton Bowl's MVP.

"Elston? He's a great player, a great runner," acknowledged Osborne, the man that guided Nebraska to a 10-2 record, following the contest. "He's just an average passer, but he gets the job done, and that's what counts. He's big and strong. We had good pressure on him."

White Guides Trojans Past Buckeyes 17-16

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Coaches John Robinson of Southern California and Earl Bruce of Ohio State agreed that the winner of the Rose Bowl must be given strong consideration as the national collegiate football champion of 1979.

"We deserve consideration to be No. 1 in the nation," said Robinson after Charles White spearheaded a fourth-period touchdown drive for a 17-16 victory over Ohio State in the 66th Rose Bowl game.

Bruce, coach of the top-ranked Buckeyes, agreed:

"I think the outcome of this game should determine the national championship. If it were me, I'd vote for Southern California."

"This was one of the hardest-hitting games I've seen."

Robinson said White was the best football player he ever had the privilege to be with.

"Let's face it; our offensive line did not give up and we kept Ohio State bottled up inside our 20," said Robinson, who just the day before had signed a five-year extension on his contract to coach the Trojans. "It seems to me no matter which way this game went, it was one of the greatest if not the most dramatic football game I was in."

Much of the drama was provided by Heisman Trophy winner White, who blasted through the Ohio State defense on two long runs and a touchdown dive with 1:54 left to boost the third-ranked Trojans to victory.

White opened the winning drive from the Southern Cal 17 with a 32-yard run and then ran to his right for 29 to reach the Big Ten champions' 23.

Mike Hayes gained six and Marcus Allen five before the final drive became all Charles White.

He gained 4, 5, 2 and then dove over the Buckeye line for the touchdown from a yard out to bring the Pacific-10 champs their 10th triumph in the past 11 games here as a crowd of 105,526 watched in the dusk.

Vlade Janakievski kicked a Rose Bowl record three field goals, giving the No. 1 ranked Buckeyes a 16-10 lead in the fourth quarter.

The favored Trojans took over after a punt and White, a 185-pound senior from nearby San Fernando, ran them to the winning touchdown.

White carried the ball 39 times for 246 yards, both Rose Bowl records.

The Trojans hoped to win the national championship with the victory, but second-ranked Alabama's 24-9 triumph over Arkansas may dampen those hopes.

The Trojans took a 3-0 first-quarter lead on Eric Hipp's 41-yard field goal and they built their margin to 10-0 on a 53-yard pass play from Paul McDonald to Kevin Williams.

Janakievski booted a 35-yard field goal to put the Buckeyes on the scoreboard before Art Schlichter connected on a 67-yard pass play to Gary Williams to knot the count.

Janakievski connected on a 37-yard field goal in the third quarter and with 1:43 gone in the fourth, Hipp missed a 39-yard attempt.

With 9:42 to go in the game, Janakievski set the Rose Bowl record with his third field goal, a successful 24-yarder after the Buckeyes had been set back 16 yards on losses.

In the 66-year history of this postseason game, five players had kicked two field goals each.

The previous record for rushes was 34 by the late Ernie Nevers of Stanford against Notre Dame in 1925 and Vic Botari of California against Alabama in 1938.

The yardage mark was 194 by Bob Jeter of Iowa against California in 1959.

White had been the maitstay for the Trojans but hadn't broken away until the final drive.

Ohio State went into the game with an 11-0 record compared with the Trojans' 10-0-1, with a tie to Stanford marring their record. Southern California missed a scoring opportunity in the third quarter when Vic Rakhshani was called for pass interference in the end zone after USC had reached the Ohio State 7.

Elston Leads Coogs Past Huskers

but he's strong enough and big enough to elude the pressure." The Cougars, representing the Southwest Conference, presented the Cornhuskers with the first big break of the game on the first play from scrimmage when Newhouse fumbled at the Cougar 25-yard line and defensive end Cole pounced on the loose ball. Quinn directed the 'Husker offense to a first down at the Houston 14, but the drive died at the six-yard line and on fourth and two. Sukup attempted a 23-yard field goal. Sukup sliced the ball and it sailed wide right and the Cougars dodged the first shot of the game. Houston managed to move 15 yards on its second possession, but had to surrender the football and the 'Huskers took over at their 15. From there, Redwine and tight end Junior Miller picked up key first downs as the Huskers drove 85 yards in 14 plays for the game's first score. It was Redwine who did the scoring honors for Nebraska, taking a pitch from Quinn and cutting left for nine yards and six points. Sukup tacked on the point after kick to give the Cornhuskers a 7-0 lead with 5:19 left in the opening stanza.

The Houston attack was helpless with Brown at the controls. He could not escape the reach of the quick Nebraska defense when he tried to run the football and most of his passes were either overthrown or way off target. Yeoman stayed with his senior field general for five series—but when the second quarter rolled around, it was Elston who was calling the shots.

Elston entered the game with 14:19 remaining in the second quarter and had the Cougars on the scoreboard in two minutes. His first running attempt netted nine yards and a 15-yard face mask penalty added to gave Houston a first down at the Nebraska 47. Three plays later, Elston hit sophomore flanker Lionel Phea with a perfect pass across the middle for a gain of 27 yards and another first down, this one at the 'Husker 15.

Elston went to the eight-yard line on first down and rolled left on second down and sprinted into the endzone. Kenny Hatfield was on target with the PAT and with 12:22 remaining in the first half, it was dead-even at 7-7.

Defensive play highlighted the remainder of the first half and much of the third and fourth quarters. Houston tried a 50-yard field goal attempt midway through the second period, but Hatfield's kick was considerably short.

Elvis Bradley gave the Cougars the ball on the following play when he picked off a Quinn pass intended for Miller at the Houston 17. The Cougars, led by Elston, moved deep inside Nebraska territory to the 31, before junior runningback Terald Clark fumbled and strong safety Mark DeRoy recovered to stop the Cougars' march.

The highlight of the third quarter was a 40-yard punt return by Nebraska's Dave Diegl — from his own 12 to the Houston 48. It gave Quinn and Company excellent field position, but the Cornhusker offense moved only six yards in three tries and had to punt the ball back to Houston.

With 8:28 remaining in the game, Hatfield booted a 41-yard field goal to give Houston a short-lived 10-7 lead. The scoring drive began at the Cougar 17 and was stopped at the Nebraska 24. Elston was responsible for three first downs during the drive and Newhouse picked up two more.

'Good Game' Says Osborne

DALLAS (AP) — Even though his team lost, Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said the 44th Cotton Bowl Tuesday was "a good game for college football."

Eighth-rated Houston beat No. 7 Nebraska 17-14 on Terry Elston's 6-yard touchdown pass to Eric Herring with 12 seconds left in the game. It was the same score as Nebraska's loss to Oklahoma in the regular season finale, a setback that spoiled the Cornhuskers' unbeaten season.

"A lot of people thought that because of our loss to Oklahoma we didn't have anything to play for," Osborne said.

"I didn't see it that way. If you play in a football game, you try to play to win. I thought we played as hard as we could and so did Houston. I thought it was a good game for college football."

Osborne, whose team finished 10-2 and lost for the second time in three Cotton Bowl appearances, said Elston's scrambling ability was an important factor for the Cougars.

Elston took over in the second quarter after starter Delrick Brown couldn't move Houston.

"He is a great player, he's strong and he runs so well," Osborne said.

"The weren't moving so well until he came in there. I thought we had pressure on him, but he either made some yards runnin or completed a pass."

Defensive tackle Rod Horn, an All-Big Eight Conference performer, agreed, comparing Elston to Utah State's Eric Hipple. Nebraska beat Utah State 35-14 in the opener, overcoming an outstanding effort by Hipple.

White Carries SC Load

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — "It was," said a smiling Charles White, "the most exciting and intense game I've played in, something I will cherish the rest of my life."

White, Southern Cal's Heisman Trophy winning tailback, gained 247 yards for the third-ranked Trojans, including 71 yards on his team's winning touchdown drive in the waning moments of a 17-16 Rose Bowl victory over top-rated Ohio State.

"I didn't feel like the load was on me on that final drive," added the Trojans' senior, who dove over from the 1-yard line with 1:32 remaining to cap Southern Cal's dramatic march of 83 yards. "If they were going to stop us, they were going to stop 11 of us."

White, the nation's leading collegiate runner with 1,803 yards this season, carried 39 times against the stubborn Buckeyes, who were undefeated coming into the New Year's Day Classic.

"I wasn't really worried although we were down late in the game," said White. "That's our game, to wear the other guy down. I was still very confident that we could come back, the coaches have stressed that you should play hard until the final gun."

Southern Cal, now 11-0-1, was third to Ohio State in the final Associated Press regular-season poll, with undefeated Alabama — a 24-9 winner over Arkansas Tuesday in the Sugar Bowl — rated No. 2.

Asked if he thought the Trojans should now be ranked first, White replied diplomatically. "I hope we're No. 1. I'll just have to wait and see. I really don't want to say anything about it, because it will just end up in the paper."

Like most of his Trojan teammates, White, a 6-foot, 185-pounder, paid high compliments to the Buckeyes, now 11-1-0.

"Ohio State played a fine game," he said. "They are aggressive and quick and they play hard."

White, who had been suffering from the flu for the past week or so, said he was ill before the game, but felt better when the contest began.

Southern Cal quarterback Paul McDonald said there was no sense of panic by his team when it took the field behind by six points in the closing moments.

"We've been in that situation before," said the senior left-hander. "And we put together a drive that will be remembered a long time by a lot of people."

McDonald praised his Ohio State counterpart, sophomore Art Schlichter, saying, "He played very well. He's a fine athlete."

Schlichter also drew praise from Southern Cal middle linebacker Dennis Johnson.

"It was a great game between two fine ball clubs," said Johnson. "Art Schlichter is not good, he's a great quarterback. Ohio State kept us off-balance a lot of the time."

Brad Budde, Southern Cal's All-American offensive guard, said the winning drive was not that uncharacteristic. "That's what we take pride in, the fourth quarter," said Budde. "We took it right at them."

"I'd be happier, I guess, if it had been a 50-0 game for us, though, since I wouldn't be nearly as sore tomorrow as I'm going to be."

SWC Cage Squads Set For Openers

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

After a full month of non-conference and tournament action, Southwest Conference schools are finally ready to get down to business. Eight teams will open league play on Thursday and Baylor will follow suit on Saturday.

And probably no one has a tougher league opener ahead than do the Texas Tech Red Raiders. After a disastrous visit to Portland, Ore. where Tech finished eighth in the Far West Classic and saw its season mark fall from 6-1 to 6-4, the Raiders must now travel to Austin and the unfriendly confines of the Superdome.

The Raiders face the Texas Longhorns (7-2) at 8 p.m. Thursday. Since its construction three years ago — the Horns have Posted an awesome 34-1 won-loss record in the Drum.

The other conference games have

SMU at Arkansas, Rice at Houston and Texas A&M at TCU.

The SMU-Arkansas tilt is the feature game of the week. The Ponies — off to their fastest start since Sonny Allen took over — are 8-2, the Hogs 6-2.

The Rice-Houston tilt will be televised regionally and features the two slowest starting SWC teams of the year. Both have had their share of early problems and the Coogs got another blow last week when Leonard Mitchell announced he would no longer play basketball for Guy Lewis but would concentrate strictly on football.

Mitchell, a 6-7 260-pounder, had played both sports during his freshmen and sophomore years at UH.

Meanwhile the Aggies, who've also had their share of problems, will face TCU — off to its fastest start since 1971. The Horned Frogs are 5-5 on the year after defeating tiny Northeast Missouri State 89-71 in their last outing.

On Saturday, the Aggies will return home to face the Baylor Bears — also 5-5 on the year.

"We're still not very tall," says Baylor coach Jim Haller. "But we're playing hard and we're getting better."

The tallest player on the Baylor roster is 6-5.

The Red Raiders tallest man is 6-8, but the Raiders have had plenty of trouble themselves. At home, the Raiders have been invincible but on the road Tech has had its problems.

The Raiders have lost four of five road games and their only win came in overtime against Vanderbilt.

RED RAIDER NOTES — Tech guard Larry Washington, a 5-11 sophomore from Brooklyn, N.Y., did not make the trip with the Raiders to the Far West Classic and will not make the trip to Austin either. Washington's status for the remainder of the season is not yet clear.

Hog Club Squeals

NORTH TONAWANDA, N.Y. — Wearing red, plastic pig-shaped hats and Razorback T-shirts, they raised glasses of red beer and cheered their heroes.

For a stranger visiting Klimek's Tavern in this Buffalo suburb New Year's Day, the scene, under the televised University of Arkansas-Alabama Sugar Bowl football game, might easily have appeared to be some kind of alumni gathering.

But the stranger would have been wrong. In fact, only one of the 30 or so die-hard Arkansas fans in the tavern Tuesday had anything to do with the school. The rest have never even set foot in the state.

According to owner Paul "Corky" Klimek, they're in the club for one main reason: "They all wanted the hog hats."

Now 73 members strong, the self-proclaimed "North Tonawanda Hog Chapter" had its origin one fall day in 1978, Klimek said, when he and five friends saw some Arkansas fans wearing the red pig hats during a televised football game.

Calling the university bookstore, they discovered the hats could be had for a mere $9 — and ordered six.

And the rest, sports fans, is history.

Herring Not Awed By UH Comeback

DALLAS (AP) — Eric Herring, reveling in the glory of his 6-yard touchdown catch that gave Houston its Cotton Bowl victory Tuesday, grinned and said the Cougars winning 66-yard drive wasn't all that surprising.

"We've been doing it all year, somebody's on our side," said the 6-2, 200-pound flanker after the 17-14 victory over Nebraska decided by his catch of Terry Elston's pass with 12 seconds to play.

Houston finished the year 11-1, but had to come from behind on seven of the victories.

Elston, named the game's offensive most valuable player, completed nine out of 16 passes for 119 yards and ran for 87 yards. He came off the bench in the second quarter to bring the Cougars to life. He ran for one touchdown and then brought Houston down field for the winning TD as time was running out.

"He was excellent, just excellent," said Houston Coach Bill Yeoman. "With him at the helm, I knew we had a chance. He executed well, threw under pressure a couple of times and when he had throw well he did."

With 12 seconds to play, on fourth-and-goal from 6, Elston dropped back

By The Associated Press
Duke, which once again had to go into overtime to keep its record unblemished, and Kentucky, which overcame disciplinary problems in whipping Notre Dame, maintained the top two spots, respectively, in the Associated Press college basketball poll Tuesday.

Duke collected 44 of 57 first-place votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters and 1,125 out of a possible 1,140 points in easily outdistancing runner-up Kentucky.

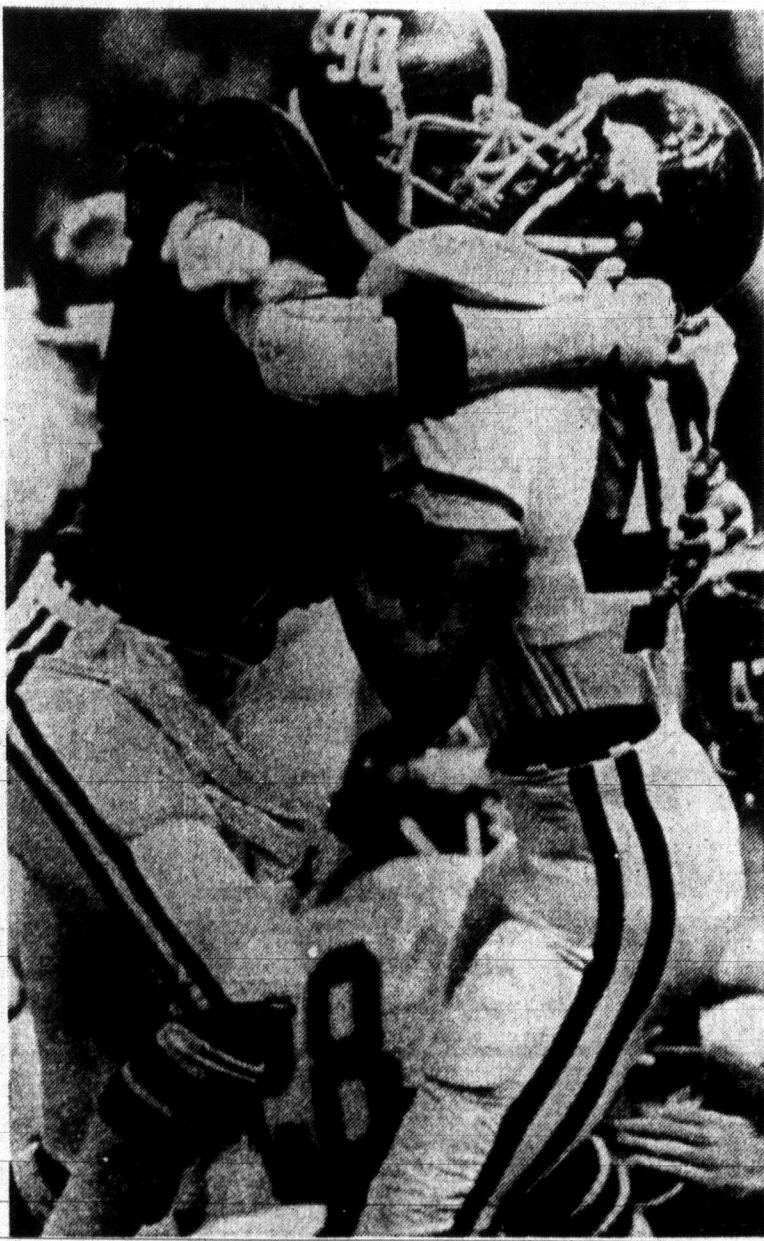

Winning the Iron Duke Classic last Saturday wasn't so easy for the Blue Devils, now 10-0. They were extended to overtime for the third time this season before emerging with an 87-75 victory over Cincinnati in the championship game of the tournament. Duke also has beaten both Boston College and Kentucky in overtime.

Kentucky received 10 first-place votes and 1,083 points in keeping a secure hold on second place. It was a position many felt was in doubt after Coach Joe Hall suspended starting center Sam Bowie and reserve guard Dirk Minniefield for last Saturday's game against Notre Dame — ranked third at the time — because they violated team regulations.

But the Wildcats, who also were without starting guard Dwight Anderson, who quit the team for personal reasons, rose to the occasion, posting an 86-80 triumph of the Fighting Irish and driving the Irish to seventh place in this week poll.

A pair of unbeaten teams — DePaul and Louisiana State — each moved up a notch to take over the Nos. 3 and 4 positions. The Blue Demons garnered the final three first-place votes and 960 points while the Tigers collected 921 points.

Once-beaten Ohio State moved up two pegs on poll and took over the No. 5 position with 840 — 16 more than North Carolina, which held onto the No. 6 position.

Bama Posts 'Major' Win

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — If Jim Bunch, Alabama's All-American tackle, had his way, the Crimson Tide's next stop would be the Super Bowl.

"There's a possibility we could play the Pittsburgh Steelers and they'd come out on top. Other than that, there's no doubt in my mind that we're the best team in college football," Bunch said Tuesday after second-ranked Alabama made a bid for a second consecutive national championship with a 24-9 trimming of sixth-rated Arkansas in the Sugar Bowl.

Steaming over a drop from first place to second in the final regular-season Associated Press poll, the Crimson Tide survived a near-disastrous fumble on the opening kickoff and rolled to its 21st consecutive triumph, longest in the nation as well as an all-time Alabama record.

Major Ogilvie, named the game's outstanding player, scored on runs of 22 yards and 1 yard in the opening period and set up Alan McElroy's 25-yard field goal with a 50-yard punt return late in the second quarter.

After Arkansas dominated the third quarter and scored on Kevin Scanlon's three-yard fourth-down pass to Robert Farrell, Alabama nailed down the verdict with an overpowering 98-yard march — nine plays, all on the ground — capped by Steve Whitman's 12-yard touchdown run with 8:59 to play.

"I feel we're deserving of the honor of being No. 1," Coach Bear Bryant said after Alabama completed its first perfect season, 12-0, since 1966. For Arkansas, 10-2, it was the worst setback in Lou Holtz' three years as head coach. Holtz had suffered four previous defeats by a total of 25 points.

"Little did I realize that the best football team in the country would play an almost perfect game," Holtz said. "We just got beat by a better football team. I don't think Alabama can play any better than they did today, and if they can, I sure don't want to be on the field with them. "I said it before and I said it now — I don't think there is anybody in the country who can beat Alabama."

Ogilvie's 22-yard dash at 8:23 of the first quarter wiped out a 3-0 Arkansas lead on Ish Ordonez' 34-yard field goal on the game's fourth play from scrimmage. Ogilvie then hurtled across from inside the 1-yard line less than three minutes later after Scanlon fumbled an exchange from center 'Bud' Alabama linebacker Thomas Boyd recovered at the loser's 22

McElroy's field goal made it 17-3 with 25 seconds left in the first half, five plays after Ogilvie fielded a punt and rambled down the left sideline from his 30 to the Arkansas 20.

It was Bryant's 296th victory in 35 years as a head coach and his 205th in 22 seasons at Alabama. That tied Ohio State's Woody Hayes for the No. 2 spot in triumphs at one major school. Amos Alonzo Stagg, who also holds the all-time mark of 314 victories, won 244 times at the University of Chicago.

The crowd of 77,486, a record for the Sugar Bowl since it moved to the Louisiana Superdome five years ago, sensed an upset when Alabama's Don McNeal fumbled the opening kickoff and George Hall recovered for Arkansas at the 25. But three plays gained only eight yards and the Razorbacks settled for Ordonez' field goal.

Their offense rarely had it that good again as the Alabama defense, ranked No. 2 nationally and first in scoring defense, overwhelmed the Razorbacks at almost every opportunity. The ring-leaders were end Wayne Hamilton and linebackers Randy Scott and Scott and Boyd teamed up to nail him a third time, all in the first half. He was sacked twice more in the second half.

"Neither Texas nor Houston hit as hard or as consistently as Alabama," said

Runs of 11 yards by Billy Jackson and 10 by Whitman, plus a face mask penalty against Arkansas, helped move the ball to the Razorbacks' 22 on Alabama's first touchdown drive. Ogilvie, getting key blocks from Jackson and guard Vince Boothe, took a pitchout around left end, broke a would-be tackle by Billy Ray Smith at the line of scrimmage and galloped into the end zone.

Arkansas had the ball for four plays on its next possession before Scanlon's costly fumble enabled Alabama to put the game out of reach. After Boyd's recovery, Jackson smashed for 11 yards. Three plays later, Ogilvie, who carried 14 times for 67 yards, leaped over to make it 14-3.

Tide: 'We're No. 1'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — One by one the Alabama players interrupted their dressing room celebration to answer the inevitable question. The response was always the same: "Yesir, there's no doubt in my mind. We're Number One."

Alabama, top-ranked through much of the season, was dropped to second in the national college football poll after a narrow victory over traditional rival Auburn.

To a man, the Alabama players felt that their 24-9 victory over sixth-ranked Arkansas in the Sugar Bowl entitled them to the top spot.

"There's a possibility we could play the (National Football League) Steelers, and they'd come out on top. Other than that, there's no doubt in my mind we're the best team in college football," said senior offensive tackle Jim Bunch.

Defensive tackle David Hannah said he felt his team deserved to be No. 1. "But I don't have a vote," he said. "I can say that I have a very strong desire to be national champion."

While players were being singled out for interviews, the rest of the squad was cheering "Roll Tide!" and doing imitations of squealing, injured pigs.

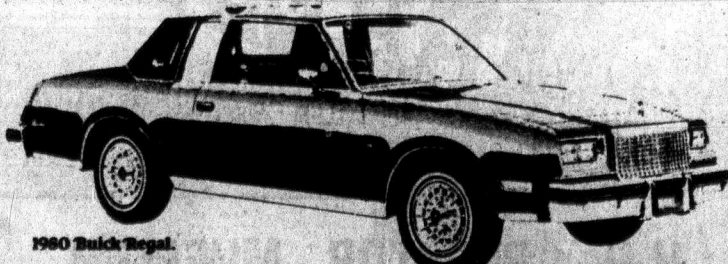

One by one, assistant coaches were carried — kicking and protesting mildly — into the shower rooms, fully clothed. The coaches emerged dripping and grinning.

Noll Impressed With Oiler 'Intensity'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Houston Oilers pose a familiar threat, but last weekend they were pure inspiration to Coach Chuck Noll of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"I like to see teams play real good football, inspired football," Noll said of the game last Saturday in which Houston overcame assorted hurts and heavily favored San Diego to win a berth in the American Football Conference championship.

"I was excited by it. I think it kind of fired me up a little bit," said Noll, whose Steelers went out the next day and beat Miami in their conference semifinal.

The title clash, a rematch of last

Selmon Readies For Rams

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Dewey Selmon, in charge of Tampa Bay's league-leading defense, says beating the Los Angeles Rams earlier this year may just make things tougher in Sunday's National Football Conference championship.

"We can't relax against them for two reasons," said Selmon. "One, we played them before. And two, we beat them."

The Bucs upset the Rams 21-6 at Tampa Stadium in a Sept. 23 regular season game. Their rematch Sunday decides who advances to Super Bowl XIV against the winner of the American Conference championship, to be decided when Houston goes against Pittsburgh later Sunday.

Selmon said the first Los Angeles loss means "You have to take that team very seriously the next time around. They will be fired-up. They will want revenge against you. And you tend to gear yourself for a harder battle."

By now, he said, the Rams have "an attitude 100 percent different than when we met earlier."

"This time they're hungry. They want it. So do we. We're both shooting for the same thing," he said. "Los Angeles is an experienced team. They have a lot more to gain — not only a shot at the Super Bowl, but revenge against us."

In the last five years the Rams have reached the NFC championship game four times and come away empty-handed. They haven't won a national title since 1951 when they beat Cleveland 24-17 at home.

The Rams have already tasted revenge by upsetting Dallas 21-19 last Sunday to win a trip to Tampa. It was the Cowboys last year who knocked Los Angeles out of the conference race with a humiliating 28-0 victory.

Tampa reached the title game by stopping Philadelphia 24-17.

"We're more uptight about this game than Philadelphia," said Selmon.

Los Angeles, he said, "is certainly one of the top offensive teams we face. They offer threats other teams don't have. You've got to play total sound defense to beat them. They have a good mix with the running of Cullen Bryant and Wendell Tyler and the pass receiving of Billy Waddy."

The Rams, NFC West champs, will be guided by reserve quarterback Vince Ferragamo, who replaced injured starter Pat Haden.

Haden started the September game in Tampa, completing 13 of 27 passes for only 64 yards. Ferragamo worked the final period, completing four of eight for 33 yards and was sacked twice for a total of 21 yards lost.

On Sunday, Ferragamo will have to deal the National Football League's No. 1 defense anchored by Selmon's baby brother Lee Roy.

year's game here between the two AFC Central Division rivals, will be played at Three Rivers Stadium Sunday.

Might the Steelers be lulled into a false sense of security by the injuries which kept Houston's Earl Campbell and Dan Pastorini on the sideline in San Diego?

"You've got to be kidding," Noll told reporters.

"San Diego probably fell into that same thing. I hope we don't, and I don't think our football team will. We have a great deal of respect for Houston. We had it before they beat San Diego, after and still."

Indeed, the Houston-Pittsburgh rivalry is one of roughhouse respect. Although the Steelers have taken the division title six years in a row, they've traditionally been tested by Houston — the only AFC Central team ever to win a game at Three Rivers.

In the last three years, the Oilers and Steelers have split their regular season games.

Most recently, the Oilers beat Pittsburgh 20-17 in Houston in the next-to-last game of the regular season.

"It was a close game," said Noll. "They were a physical football team, but we were physical too. And we'll probably be two physical teams again."

It is uncertain whether Campbell and Pastorini will return this Sunday. Both are nursing leg muscle pulls.

"I imagine the rest might help them, and they could well be ready to go," said

Noll. "In fact, we expect that. That's the way we will go into the game."

In the AFC championship last season, Pittsburgh beat Houston 35-7 here in freezing rain. Houston lost 38-7 here in the second week of this regular season.

Can the Oilers overcome the Steelers on their home turf, in possibly harsh weather, with a partisan Pittsburgh crowd fanning the breeze with thousands of Terrible Towels?

"One thing I have learned in my short tenure in the National Football League is that it is never decided until the last out," said Noll. "That's what makes the game so interesting, the unpredictability."

In Houston, Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini has forecast victory.

"I am not in the prediction business," says Noll. "I am in the competition business."

Bruce Regre Choic

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Nationally ranked Ohio State's Bruce second-guessed top-ranked Buckeyes Rose Bowl decision. California on New Year's Day.

"If I had it to do, I would have picked California to win the game," Bruce said.

Bruce was referring to a post-game press conference in which he said he was referring to the national championship game.

"I thought the way the game was played, I would have picked California to win the game," Bruce said.

Bruce, after his loss in twelve games, said he was referring to the national championship game.

Bruce Regrets Choice

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — An emotionally drained Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce second-guessed himself after the top-ranked Buckeyes dropped a 17-16 Rose Bowl decision to No. 3 Southern California on New Year's Day.

"If I had it to do over again," Bruce told a post-game press conference, "I'd sure go for that field goal."

Bruce was referring to a fourth down-and-one situation in front of the Trojans' goal line on the first play of the second quarter.

Southern California was nursing a 3-0 lead at the time.

Instead of a field goal attempt, Bruce had quarterback Art Schlichter run an option. The play was halted by Southern Cal linebacker Dennis Johnson and the Buckeyes came up empty.

Vlade Janakievski booted a Rose Bowl record three field goals and while Bruce second-guessed himself over not kicking early, he questioned his own wisdom for the decision to go for the other three pointers.

"Sometimes you go for too many field goals and not enough touchdowns," he said. "You always make decisions you regret. Hindsight is 100 percent. Twenty-five seconds can be deadly."

Bruce, after his team suffered its first loss in twelve games this season, threw his support behind the 11-0-1 Trojans for the national championship to be decided later this week.

"I thought the winner of this game should be the national champion although Alabama has a great football team," said Bruce. "I haven't seen Alabama, but I saw a lot of Southern Cal this afternoon."

"Our team was only two points away from the national championship."

Alabama, ranked No. 2, rolled to a 24-9 victory over Arkansas Tuesday in the Sugar Bowl.

Of Southern Cal's clinching touchdown drive in the fourth quarter, Bruce said, "I thought it was a fine job. I'd have to say they executed well because they scored. They went down there so fast in three plays that it made your head swim."

Schlichter, the Buckeye's sophomore quarterback who threw for 289 yards and one touchdown, said he also supports Southern Cal for the national title.

"I can't vote," he said, "but USC played a great game and deserves to be No. 1."

Broken Leg May Sideline Youngblood For Title Tilt

By The Associated Press
There is a hairline fracture in Jack Youngblood's left tibia, which is the same as saying the All-Pro defensive end of the Los Angeles Rams has a broken leg.

That sounds serious and because of it, Youngblood is listed as doubtful for Sunday's National Football Conference championship game against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. He's not out, you understand. Just doubtful.

Losing a player of Youngblood's ability would be devastating for most teams but for the Rams this season, it would almost seem routine. Los Angeles has learned to live with bumps and bruises and would go with Reggie Doss, a seldom-used backup, to replace Youngblood against Tampa Bay, if necessary.

Even though 18 Los Angeles players have missed one game or more because of injury and six have been sidelined for the season, the defensive line had been relatively healthy until Youngblood went down in the first half against Dallas. He had the leg taped and played on it in the second half, making one vital tackle of Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach.

The injuries were a major reason for the Rams' lackluster 9-7 regular season record — poorest of any of the NFL play-off team.

But that record and the depressing string of injuries were forgotten in the aftermath of the Rams' stunning upset of Dallas which propelled LA into the championship game.

The Rams' victory was one of three upsets which scrambled the NFL playoff picture. In the others, Tampa Bay stung Philadelphia and the crippled Houston Oilers topped San Diego. Only powerful Pittsburgh avoided an upset, mauling Miami as expected. That put the Steelers in the AFC title game against the Oilers while the Rams face the Bucs.

If the Rams are troubled about the condition of Youngblood, they could take solace from Houston.

The Oilers, after all, lost three important starters — rushing champion Earl Campbell, quarterback Dan Pastorini and wide receiver Ken Burroughs — and still survived against San Diego.

Houston hopes to have those three back for Sunday's game — their fourth meeting in the last year against the Steelers, their AFC Central neighbors.

A year ago, Pittsburgh destroyed Houston 34-5 in the title game and moved on to win its third Super Bowl crown. In an early season rematch, the Steelers prevailed 38-7. But last month, Houston gained a measure of revenge by beating the Steelers 20-17 in the Astrodome.

Tampa Bay and Los Angeles also have crossed paths earlier this season. The Bucs beat the Rams 21-6 in the season's fourth week but linebacker Dewey Selmon dismisses that game, saying Los Angeles has become tougher and more determined since then.

The Rams also have a new quarterback, Vince Ferragamo, who replaced Pat Haden, one of LA's host of casualties. Ferragamo will be starting only his seventh game Sunday. But that's five games more experience than Gifford Nielsen, Pastorini's replacement at Houston, has had.

Hogs Protest

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Arkansas football players wore red, white and blue for Tuesday's Sugar Bowl in silent recognition of the U.S. hostages being held in Iran.

The sixth-ranked Razorbacks created the red, white and blue effect by putting red and blue strips on the sleeves of their white jerseys.

Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz said the players came to him and asked to wear armbands in honor of the hostages.

He said they first wanted to wear U.S. flags and his initial reaction was negative.

"I didn't think there would be many Iranians watching the game," Holtz said.

"But the players were unanimous and it would have been awfully hard for me to say 'No' when I've tried to get our players to understand there are a lot of important things in life besides football," he said.

Sooners Bounce Seminoles 24-7

MIAMI (AP) — Fifth-ranked Oklahoma struck for two touchdowns in a 36-second span, the first on a 61-yard run by J.C. Watts and the other following one of three interceptions by Bud Hebert, and snapped fourth-ranked Florida State's 15-game winning streak with a 24-7 triumph in the Orange Bowl game Tuesday night.

Watts' long touchdown scamper in the first four minutes of the second quarter enabled the Big Eight Conference champions to draw even at 7-7, and Hebert's interception of a Jimmy Jordan pass came on the next play, setting up Stanley Wilson's five-yard scoring run that put Oklahoma ahead to stay.

The Sooners, 11-1, added a 24-yard field goal by Michael Keeling later in the quarter after Florida State's Rohn Stark shanked a 14-yard punt out of bounds at the Seminoles' 14.

The Sooners added a touchdown with just under two minutes left in the game when Watts dashed 12 yards around the right side and pitched out to All-American Billy Sims, who went the final 22 yards for the score.

Oklahoma thus prevented Florida State from becoming one of only two major college teams with a perfect record for the 1979 season, leaving Florida State with an 11-1 mark. It left second-ranked Alabama, which defeated Arkansas 24-9 in the Sugar Bowl earlier Tuesday, as the only unbeaten, untied major college team with a 12-0 record.

Florida State, fighting for national recognition against a perennial powerhouse, opened the scoring late in the first quarter on a 74-yard drive that ended on a 1-yard plunge by Mike Whitting.

The Seminoles then threatened to score again after Bobby Butler blocked Keeling's punt, giving Florida State possession at the Oklahoma 17.

The Seminoles reached the 2-yard line, where a delay of game infraction, followed by an incomplete pass, forced Florida State to go for a field goal. The Seminoles took another delay penalty on purpose, but Dave Cappelien was never able to get off a 29-yard kick because Rick Stockstill fumbled the snap.

Oklahoma took over at its 19 and immediately marched 81 yards for the tying score with Sims starting the drive on a 25-yard sprint to the 44. Two plays later, following a six-yard loss, Watts kept the ball on an option to the right side, found daylight and hit the sideline for his 61-yard touchdown run.

Hebert, named the most valuable defensive player in the game, claimed his first interception on the following play after the kickoff and returned the ball 25 yards to the Seminoles' 10.

An offside penalty on Florida State gave Oklahoma a first down at the 5, and on the next play Wilson was pushed back to the 12, where he escaped would-be tacklers and dashed into the end zone.

Both Watts, who was named the offensive MVP, and Sims rushed for more than 100 yards in the Sooners' awesome Wishbone attack.

Oklahoma's Basil Banks appeared headed for a touchdown on a long punt return in the first 90 seconds of the game, but he was tackled at the Florida State 10 and fumbled the ball into the end zone. Florida State's Ed Richardson recovered it for a touchback, giving the Seminoles the ball at their own 20.

Banks raced 59 yards before his fumble and broke into the clear near mid-field before Stark came up and made him cut back into the arms of Scott Warren, who forced the fumble.

Oklahoma — which kicked off to start the game — inexplicably elected to kick off to start off the third quarter. But it did not hurt the Sooners, who stopped Florida State on three plays and quickly staged a mild threat of their own when Sims bolted 26 yards to the Oklahoma 45.

Knicks Down Spurs

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Ray Richardson handed out a team record 10 assists and Ray Williams scored 17 points in a torrid 39-point third quarter that helped the New York Knicks beat the San Antonio Spurs 128-120 Tuesday night.

U.S. Netter In Trouble With Officials — Again

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Brash young American John Sadri was again in trouble with officials during his semifinal at the Australian Open tennis championships here Tuesday night.

Amid obscene gestures and calls Sadri's match at Kooyong against veteran Australian Colin Dibley was postponed because of fading light with the American leading 6-4, 7-6, 6-7.

The tournament umpire, Jim Entink, had turned down an earlier appeal by Sadri over the light.

Entink will consider a central umpire's report on Sadri's behavior Wednesday morning.

The umpire said the report was backed by several linesmen who had witnessed the American's performance on an outside court.

Sadri, a professional for only 18 months, could be fined for the second day running or even suspended.

The 23-year-old from Charlotte, N.C., already is to be fined about $200 for allegedly using obscene language in his quarter final win over Australian Rod Frawley Monday.

Dibley was unimpressed with the American's on-court performance.

He described Sadri as "the worst sport I have ever played against," saying the American was even more difficult to play than Romania's tempestuous Ilie Nastase.

The match between the volatile American and Dibley is due to resume Wednesday on the center court.

Sadri should know the outcome of the meeting to consider his behavior before then.

Sadri was handed an early break against Dibley when the Australian strained a stomach muscle in the first set. Dibley consulted a doctor about the injury Tuesday night.

New Year's Day Parade Marred By Violence

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — As thousands of persons lined the route of the 91st Tournament of Roses Parade Tuesday, one youth was shot to death, a man was critically stabbed and nearly a hundred people were arrested for drunk and disorderly conduct.

But for most of the estimated 1.4 million people who crowded elbow-to-elbow along the sidewalks, it was a morning of sunshine, color and music.

The morning air was warm, about 50 degrees, as parade watchers staked claims to vantage points along the five and one-half mile route.

The atmosphere was carnival-like. There were roller skaters, and Frisbee throwers, and some people settled in with portable television sets and radios, munching snacks.

Police said a 16-year-old youth, believed to be from Los Angeles, was shot in an alley near the main parade route, by another teen-ager who fled before anyone could summon officers. The motive for the shooting was not known.

Five minutes later, Bruce Morgan, 25, Covina, was attacked by two men and stabbed following an argument, detectives said. Paramedics reported that Morgan "died" medically twice but was revived both times while in the ambulance transporting him to Huntington Memorial Hospital. He was reported in critical condition following emergency surgery.

Daniel Mussey, 26, and his brother, William Mussey, 24, both of El Monte, were arrested at the scene and booked for investigation of attempted murder.

More than 90 persons were arrested in the early morning hours for being drunk and disorderly with an occasional arrest for suspicion of drug use.

The theme of the 91st annual parade was "Music of America," and singer Frank Sinatra, riding in a blue convertible with his wife, Barbara, was the Grand Marshal.

A total of 59 floats were entered from the United States, Mexico and Canada, and 17 major prizes were awarded. In addition, 24 musical groups with more than 4,000 musicians and 33 equestrian units were in the parade.

The University of Southern California and Ohio State, meeting later in the day in the Rose Bowl football game, were represented by their marching bands.

Environmentalist Artist Holds Meet In Hole To Discuss Art

NEW YORK (UPI) — On New Year's morning, a group of a dozen artists sat in a hole in a rubble-strewn lot in Manhattan's SoHo district and discussed art.

The idea was thought up by John Halpern, who was arrested last summer for planting explosives on top of the Brooklyn Bridge.

The artists started digging the hole, 10 feet in diameter and 4 feet deep, at 1 p.m. Monday. They spent New Year's Eve there and left at noon on Tuesday.

Halpern said the group wanted to discuss art in a "different environment."

"I still think it's a dumb idea," said his 15-year-old brother, Alexander. "My back hurts and I can hardly keep my eyes open."

As they sat around a fire in the center of the hole, Halpern and his friends offered various tongue-in-cheek reasons for what they had done.

"The physical experience of working became part of the dialogue," Halpern said. "The activity was part of the meaning. Language was a very superficial part of that activity."

"Digging was very satisfactory," said Jack Bashkow, a musician. "You felt you were digging into something."

"Why don't you tell him the real reason?" Alexander interrupted. "We want to get publicity to turn this lot into a park for the community."

He said the city had intended to build a school on the lot but killed the project because of a lack of funds.

"Yes, we wanted people to get their feet into the political process," said his brother, John.

Halpern describes himself as an environmentalist artist. Last August, he was arrested for planting an explosive device on top of a 200-foot tower of the Brooklyn Bridge.

Halpern said he had merely planted skyrocket and smoke bombs on the bridge and intended to set them off to make an environmental sculpture. The device failed to go off and the police had to carry it down a bridge cable.

"Why don't you tell him about the loose gunpowder?" said Alexander.

Halpern said that after his arrest, he spent a week in the Rikers Island prison. "I'm out on $10,000 bail and if I'm convicted, I could spend seven years in jail," he said.

"And if you go jail, I'm not going to visit you," said Alexander.

Why hadn't the artists decided to discuss art in the comfort of a living room?

"Do you know how many discussions of art there have been in overstuffed chairs in living rooms?" said Halpern. "It gets boring."

Village Dies At Stroke Of Midnight

SAVANNAH, N.Y. (UPI) — As the clock struck midnight, not only did a decade and 1979 end but a 112-year-old upstate New York village went out of existence.

The last tick on the clock meant the end for the Wayne County village of Savannah. The village government was dissolved and became part of the town of Savannah.

The decision to dissolve the village, which is about 35 miles west of Syracuse, was made in March 1978, when residents voted 134 to 75 to abolish their community.

Village trustees spent their final meeting last week transferring funds, paying bills and joking about the dissolution.

"Make sure we've got 50 cents in there for a death certificate," kidded Mayor Ed Williams.

Then the village fathers toasted the end of the community with a couple of bottles of wine before adjourning.

"Shall we be cremated or buried?" wondered Trustee Edwin Secor.

Officials said dissolution would save villagers money and eliminate duplication of services.

That put humans in third place among biters after dogs (22,076 reports) and cats (1,152). Other rodents, including squirrels and laboratory rats, caused several hundred other bites.

"Human bites are a serious medical and surgical problem," according to the study in the latest issue of Public Health Reports, a monthly magazine published by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. It was said to be the first study of a large series of human bites.

The authors are Dr. John S. Marr, an epidemiologist and assistant health commissioner for the city; Alan M. Beck, a former director of the city's Bureau of Animal Affairs and now a veterinary medicine professor at the University of Pennsylvania; and Joseph A. Lugo Jr., a researcher in the Bureau of Animal Affairs.

Nearly three-fourths of the human bites took place during some aggressive activity — fighting, mugging or resisting arrest. One-fourth of all bites were accidental, occurring during sports, roughhousing and the like.

Most people were bitten on the hands and fingers — 61 percent — but 15 per-

Study Places Human Beings Third Among Biters

WASHINGTON (AP) — More people in New York City are bitten by fellow human beings than by rats, according to a new study.

People were blamed for 892 of the bites reported to the New York City Department of Health in 1977, compared with only 229 bites from wild rats.

The authors said human bites "appear to have a definite seasonality," with the peak months in the spring and early summer. The fewest bites were reported in January and February.

Brooklyn's Fort Greene section had a rate of 61 bites per 100,000 residents — five times the citywide rate.

On the average day, 2.4 human bites were reported. For those 15 to 30 years old, Saturday was the worst day for bites.

Teen-agers and young adults were most frequently the victims, and more men were bitten than women except among 10- to 20-year-olds.

The authors said that more attention should be paid to tracking human bites "as a surveillance mechanism for aggressive and pathological behavior."

Brandy Labeling Rules Face Possible Revision

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government greeted the "morning after" Tuesday with an announcement it is considering modifications to permit fuller descriptions of bottle contents on the labels of grape brandies.

The industry wants to use labels which designate the specific variety of grape used and the year of the harvest. Current regulations allow the use only of such non-specific terms as "brandy" or "grape brandy."

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms statement said it is seeking advice and analytical data from the industry and consumers on possible changes in the labeling rules.

The industry would like to use such descriptive terms as "Flame Tokay Brandy" or "Cabernet Sauvignon Brandy 1972," the announcement said.

Such terms have been denied in the past on the grounds distilling tends to destroy the distinctive qualities that a variety of grape or a single year of harvest might lend to a brandy.

The announcement said the bureau "needs sufficient test data to confirm or refute its position."

The bureau published a proposed rule-making notice in Tuesday's Federal Register, saying it is asking industry to provide a wide range of samples for a determination on whether all or certain varietal grapes do, in fact, impart a distinctive quality to grape brandies.

Scientific analyses of the samples will bear on the bureau's final decision, it said.

Chrysler-UAW Pact Due Soon

DETROIT (UPI) — A top United Auto Workers union official says the union could reach agreement on a new, scaled-down contract with Chrysler Corp. "in a matter of a few days," with ratification completed by Jan. 20 if all goes well.

UAW negotiators planned to meet today to decide how they will cut nearly $260 million from the three-year contract reached with Chrysler in 1979. Negotiations to reopen the contract could begin as early as Thursday.

"It will depend on how much time we need to fashion a new proposal that will comply with the requirements placed on us by the Chrysler aid legislation," said UAW Vice President Marc Stepp, director of the union's Chrysler department.

Stepp met with his chief staff aides Monday to discuss possible contract concessions. Under the $3.5 billion Chrysler aid package passed by Congress last month, the UAW must renegotiate with Chrysler on an additional $259.9 million in concessions.

Those concessions will be in addition to provisions in the existing UAW contract with Chrysler that saved the ailing automaker about $203 million when compared with the economic pattern at Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp.

Stepp said the union's 13-member bargaining committee will meet this afternoon to "start fashioning a proposal to present to Chrysler." A meeting of the 256-member national Chrysler Council is tentatively scheduled Jan. 8.

The ratification process by rank-and-file workers conceivably could be completed by Jan. 20, Stepp said.

Stepp, like UAW President Douglas Fraser, said he is reluctant to make contract changes in such areas as cost-of-living, pensions and health care coverage.

"Cost-of-living, pensions and health care are the items most frequently mentioned by our members and their families as crucial," Stepp said. "Everything else is fair game."

The UAW vice president said he expects Chrysler to accept the UAW proposal "for the most part" because it was the UAW that helped Chrysler get the aid package it wanted from Congress.

Fog Bars Removal Of Deadly Cargo

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Thick fog blanketing the Golden Gate Tuesday prevented the Coast Guard from removing 35 tons of dangerous chlorine gas from a barge beached on the rocky Pacific coast.

Winter fog reduced visibility below 50 feet, making any approach to the stricken barge Agattu too hazardous to undertake. The 400-foot vessel was stuck among the rocks just north of the Golden Gate Bridge.

"Right now we are waiting for the weather to clear," a Coast Guard spokesman said at mid-morning.

The Coast Guard planned to remove the dangerous cargo of chlorine from the barge by helicopter, lifting each of the 35 one-ton containers from the deck of the vessel to a safe place on land.

The Agattu was resting firmly on the beach but apparently had suffered heavy hull damage from the battering it took in a series of squalls moving in on the coast from the Pacific.

Another barge, the 336-foot Kona, also drifted into the rocky graveyard of ships north of the Golden Gate and broke in half, spilling its cargo of lumber, pipe and other goods into the surf.

The two barges were being towed through the rough waters outside the bay early Monday, enroute to Hawaii, when they broke loose from their tug, the Sentinel.

The Coast Guard and several civilian tugs, fighting 25-foot waves and 30-knot winds, failed in efforts to restore towlines to the unmanned barges.

When it was learned the Agattu carried a huge quantity of chlorine gas and other chemicals, including explosives, emergency officials prepared to move quickly to evacuate residents from nearby areas of Marin County.

A few visitors hiking in the Marin Headlands area of Golden Gate National Recreation Area were sent home and the park was closed. Military personnel at Fort Barry, an army outpost on the beach, were told to be ready to leave on five minutes notice.

When winds diminished early Tuesday, the Coast Guard determined that the containers of chlorine appeared to be still secure on the deck of the barge.

Among debris and cargo washed ashore from the Agattu and the Kona was a container of nitro carbontriate, an explosive used in the manufacture of fertilizer.

The Coast Guard called in experts from Dow Chemical Co. and a spokesman said early Tuesday that the explosive had been thoroughly saturated by water and "it would take somebody with a lot of blasting caps" to set it off.

Debris in the water near the entrance of the bay posed a danger to shipping. The Coast Guard said it was warning vessels in the area.

The Crowley Maritime Corp., which owns the barges, is responsible for clearing the debris and wrecked barges from the beach after the cargo is taken off, the Coast Guard said.

Experts Mull Possible South African N-Blast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An expert panel named to determine whether an atomic explosion occurred near South Africa Sept. 22 has ruled out most other explanations for the mysterious blast, it was reported Tuesday.

A U.S. reconnaissance satellite picked up traces of the atomic explosion three months ago in an area bounded by the Indian Ocean, the southern Atlantic and the continent of Antarctica.

The State Department later made the satellite's finding public, but said it had no idea who could have been responsible for such an explosion. Speculation, however, centered on South Africa.

South Africa suggested that an accident on board a Soviet nuclear-powered submarine might have caused the blast, but Defense Department officials rejected that theory.

The Washington Post Tuesday said a seven-member board of outside experts, named by the White House to investigate whether an atomic blast had actually occurred, has ruled out almost every other explanation.

The panel concluded last month there was no reason to suspect that the Vela satellite which spotted the event had malfunctioned or that what the satellite saw was caused by an enormous strike of lightning, another theory.

"The signal the satellite saw still looks in every way like a nuclear explosion in the atmosphere," one White House source told the Post. "The trouble is, we still have absolutely no separate data that would corroborate that it was an atomic explosion."

There has been no firm evidence of radioactive fallout.

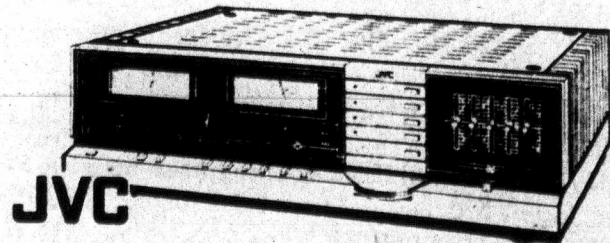

According to the Post, the White House Office of Science Policy will convene the panel at least once more after it has researched the remote possibility that the Vela satellite may have mistaken a double glint of sunlight off another satellite.
