Relatives, friends continue Iran vigil

By CHARLOTTE PORTER
Associated Press Writer

Friends and relatives waited by their telephones and televisions for news of the American hostages in Iran as protesters in several cities continued their bitter demonstrations against the siege at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

"Mom, I'm still alive. I'm still alive," shouted Kathy Gross in a fuzzy trans-Atlantic telephone call to her parents today.

Calling from a military hospital in Frankfurt, Germany, Miss Gross, 22, told her parents, Robert and May Gross of Cambridge Springs, Pa., she would meet them in Washington in time for Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Gross said her daughter told her she was in good health, but had been tied to a chair at the embassy for 16 hours every day of her 16-day ordeal.

She had called home earlier as her jet left Iran. "Tell everybody I miss them and I'll see them soon," she said.

The families of Ladell Maples of Earle, Ark., and William E. Quarles of Washington, D.C., also got phone calls confirming the release of the two black Marine sergeants.

"I have a very joyful feeling," said Quarles' mother, Laura Mae Reeder, after she learned from the State Department her 23-year-old son would likely be home by the end of the week.

After a tense vigil by the television and telephone Sunday, Jessie and Claude Maples say they expect to see their son within 48 hours. "I will feel more relief when I actually see him," Mrs. Maples said. "But knowing he has been released is helpful."

Ladell's sister, Claudia, said, "We're not going to be selfish with our prayers. We're not just praying for Ladell. We want all of them released."

There were reports that another 10 hostages, all blacks or women, held in the embassy since Nov. 4, would also be released. Other parents heard reports that the remaining hostages might be put on trial to answer charges of espionage. The Iranians demanded the deposed Shah, now in New York for cancer treatment, be returned for trial.

—Members of a Veterans of Foreign Wars post in Newport, Mich., burned two Iranian flags and hung the American flag upside down as a sign of distress. "When I sit there watching the TV, I want to kick the set in," said 41-year-old Ed Blair. "The disrespect they show for our flag is why I burned the Iranian flag."

—The Iranian-American Workers Solidarity Committee said it may sue Brown University for canceling a rally against the shah. Officials of the Rhode Island university said a meeting on such an explosive issue should have been better planned.

—In Denver, where an Iranian student has been charged in the death of a high school boy, 20 other students moved into one apartment for safety. Said an Iranian woman: "I don't sleep at home any more because I am scared they will come and hurt me. All night long young kids keep playing with my door, knocking on it and keeping me awake all night."

More hostage releases expected on Tuesday

By The Associated Press

The first three freed American hostages flew to West Germany today and hours later Iranian militants produced 10 more at a news conference in the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran and said they might be released Tuesday.

A White House statement said if Iran attempts to put any of the remaining 49 U.S. hostages on trial for espionage, as Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has threatened, it would be a "further flagrant violation" of international law.

An ABC-TV report from Tehran said the militants led 10 hostages — four women and six black men — before reporters at the embassy news conference.

One spokesman for the students occupying the embassy earlier had said four women and six black men due to be released would leave Tehran late tonight on a Swiss jetliner specifically ordered by the U.S. administration, and another spokesman said they would leave "within a few hours" after the end of an evening news conference.

One militant spokesman said the students have been studying files to determine who was involved in espionage, but said: "It is highly unlikely to find any evidence against" the 10.

There were conflicting reports from some Foreign Ministry sources who said they expected the hostages to be turned over to the ministry before they leave Tehran.

The Swiss government said Swissair, the national airline, has sent a DC-8 jetliner to Tehran to collect the 10 Americans when they are freed. ABC-TV's report from Tehran said the 10 were to go first to Zurich, then on to Wiesbaden, West Germany, where the first three were taken for medical checks and questioning.

Washington, D.C., and Ladell Maples, 23, of Earle, Ark.

The State Department said U.S. authorities in Germany would question them about the condition of the rest of the hostages. An official said those freed would be given "decompression time" to themselves during which reporters would be kept away from them.

The trio waved cheerfully to a crowd of reporters and photographers waiting at the Copenhagen airport, but U.S. Ambassador Warren D. Manshel rushed them into his limousine and drove them to the waiting U.S. Air Force DC-9. After boarding the military plane, they came back to the door to wave again to the reporters and photographers. But they shook their heads at questions shouted up to them.

Miss Gross was wearing tan slacks and a crisp white blouse. One Marine wore camouflage combat fatigues, and the other had on a black leather jacket and blue jeans.

The Air Force plane took off less than 20 minutes after the hostages arrived.

Miss Gross, Quarles and Maples were put on display at a news conference at the embassy Sunday and she told several hundred reporters:

"We haven't had any problems. We've been fed more than fairly. There haven't been any problems physically. Maybe people have been mentally upset, but other than that we haven't had any problems. The most difficult part was having to sit on hard chairs 16 hours a day with my hands tied."

Their captors said earlier that they would deliver a total of eight black men and five women to the Iranian Foreign Ministry today for expulsion from the country. Tehran Radio said the 13 had been absolved of espionage activities following Khomeini's instructions to free women and blacks who were cleared. But two women and two black men apparently were not being released, along with 45 white American men and eight non-Americans held in the embassy for two weeks.

Most districts record military cash flow loss

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 300 of the nation's 435 congressional districts pay more in taxes for the Pentagon than they receive in military spending, according to a private analysis of defense spending.

The study by Employment Research Associates of Lansing, Mich., indicates that more than half the congressional districts show a net loss in the military cash flow of at least $100 million a year.

Overall, the research concludes that only 130 districts receive more money from the U.S. military budget than local citizens pay to support the defense part of the federal budget.

The analysis, released Sunday, supports earlier studies that defense spending is concentrated in the South and Southwest.

"Military spending is a principal source of drastic imbalance and inequity in the federal tax burden and budget allocation," the study concluded.

The study was conducted by James R. Anderson for Employment Research Associates, a private consulting firm that specializes in analyzing military spending patterns.

Anderson, a professor at Michigan State University, said he considers military spending "an unproductive use and waste of a country's resources once you get beyond the sums needed to defend your shores and help allies."

Anderson calculated the amount of taxes from each congressional district that went to the Pentagon budget in fiscal 1978. He compared that with the amount of money the Pentagon spent in each district for payrolls, contracts, and other costs. Pentagon spending totaled $112.7 billion in that year, Anderson said.

Fully 95 of the 100 districts in the upper Midwest and 79 of the 104 districts in the Northeast have a net loss, the study concludes. In New York, 33 of the state's 39 districts are "losers." In Pennsylvania, 20 of 25 have a net loss, and in Illinois, all 24 have a net loss.

Sun Belt states fared far better, but still the majority were net losers, according to Anderson's data. He said 71 Sun Belt congressional districts had a net gain, while 89 districts experience net losses.

Overall, 220 districts suffer a net loss of $100 million or more, the study said. The hardest hit area of the country was the 10th District in Illinois, comprising the northern suburbs of Chicago, which was represented by Democratic Rep. Abner Mikva at the time of the survey. Mikva has since been appointed a federal judge. His district had a net loss of $409.2 million in 1978, the study said.

Close behind, with a net loss of $407.9 million, is the 7th district of Texas, represented by Republican Rep. Bill Archer.

The released Americans, a young woman secretary and two black Marine sergeants, looking fit and well, flew to Copenhagen on a Scandinavian airliner and were immediately transferred to a U.S. military plane. They were flown to Frankfurt, West Germany, and whisked away for a medical checkup at a military hospital in nearby Wiesbaden.

State Department officials in Frankfurt refused to say how long the three would remain, but in Washington officials said they were expected to stay at least two or three days for debriefings and tests.

The first hostages freed were Katherine Gross, 22, of Cambridge Springs, Pa., a secretary in the economics section of the embassy, and Sgts. William E. Quarles of

Sadat to make anniversary visit to Mount Sinai

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat journeys today to the heart of the Sinai Peninsula to celebrate the second anniversary of his peacemaking trip to Jerusalem at the mountain where Moses got the Ten Commandments.

Sadat was scheduled to raise the Egyptian flag, deliver an "address to the world" and visit the Greek Orthodox monastery at the foot of Mount Sinai, which the Arabs call Gebel Musa, or the Mount of Moses.

Robert Strauss, President Carter's outgoing special envoy for the Mideast, arrived Sunday with a delegation to attend the ceremonies. They included businessmen, congressmen and Lynda Robb, daughter of the late President Johnson.

Banker David Rockefeller, traveling separately, also was to attend.

Strauss at a meeting with Sadat Sunday told him: "Thousands of years from today, when the nations of this region are living as one, it will be recorded that it began Nov. 19, 1977, when you had the courage to take that great step forward."

Sadat praised Carter and the American people for their help and understanding and said the anniversary celebration was "something very sentimental... a happy moment."

He was expected to use the occasion to emphasize to the other Arab states — most of which broke relations with Egypt after the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty was signed in March — that negotiations are the surest way to recover territory occupied by Israel.

Israel, which captured the Sinai Desert in 1967, turned over the Mount Sinai portion of southern Sinai to Egypt last Thursday, two months ahead of schedule, so that Sadat could hold the anniversary celebration.

It was the fourth of six withdrawals that will return two-thirds of the peninsula to Egyptian control by early next year. Then the two countries are to establish diplomatic relations.

Despite improving Egyptian-Israeli relations, little headway has been made in the second phase of the peace effort — negotiations to formulate a plan for Palestinian self-government in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip.

Israel threw up new obstacles to the negotiations last week by arresting one of the leading Arab mayors in the West Bank prior to deporting him and by announcing plans to build more Jewish settlements in the territory. But Sadat indicated he still believes agreement on an autonomy plan will be reached before next May, the target date set in the peace agreement.

At GOP meeting, Clements criticizes energy policy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements accused President Carter today of letting the country fall into another energy bind by failing to have a national energy program in force when the Iranian crisis broke out.

Clements led off an attack on the administration's energy policy in the opening general session of the Republican Governors' Association annual meeting.

In preliminary sessions Sunday, three GOP presidential candidates also said Carter should do more for the Americans being held captive in Tehran.

Clements said the situation in Iran already "is directly impacting our oil supplies in the United States, although our country has been receiving only four percent of its full supplies from Iran."

"While I can appreciate and agree with the administration's decision to cut off our oil imports from Iran, I cannot excuse the fact that after nearly three years in office Mr. Carter has failed and is failing to develop a national energy policy which could free us from this kind of control by OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries)," he said.

"This recent turn of events is nothing but another chapter in what has happened with the oil embargo in 1973 and the Iranian turmoil this year and what will continue to happen unless we in the United States take the necessary steps to curtail our crippling dependence on imported oil and start producing our own.

The economy, already an issue in the 1980 race, was on today's program, however, with former President Gerald R. Ford expected to attack Carter on inflation.

Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee, former Texas Gov. John Connally, and Los Angeles businessman Benjamin Fernandez, all GOP presidential candidates, used the governors' forum Sunday to call for stronger action on behalf of Americans held captive in the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

Although the candidates declined to say exactly what Carter should do about the situation, they agreed he should do more in light of new threats by Iranians to try the Americans for espionage.

"It is totally unacceptable for those Americans to stand trial in Iranian courts for espionage or anything else," Baker said. "It is unacceptable to the American people and it should be unacceptable to the American government."

Connally also said trial of the Americans "would be unacceptable. I don't think there's any question about that."

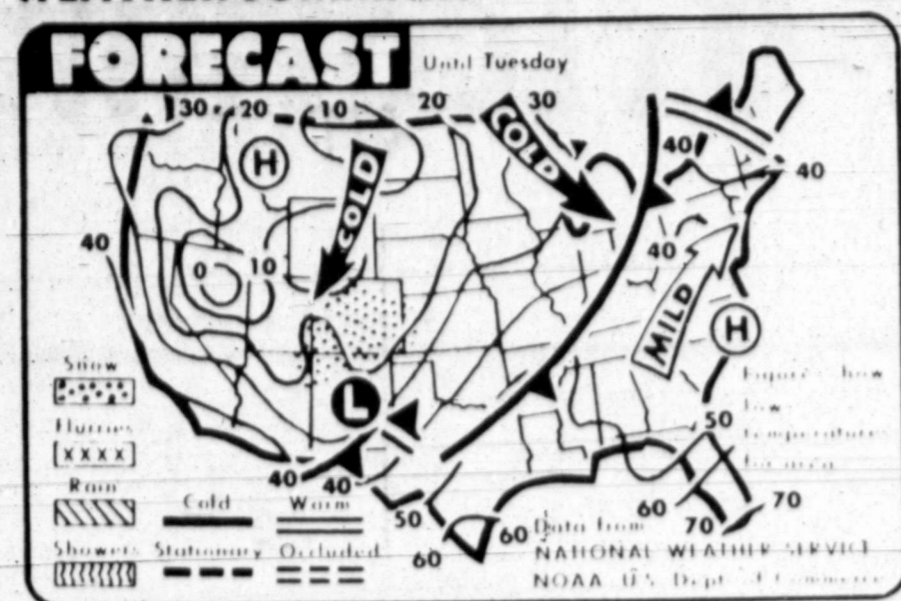

Baker, who is Senate minority leader, said he wanted to get his views on the record after talking with Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. But Connally complained that the other candidates were being asked to support Carter and not play politics with the situation without being briefed on it.

"What actions we could or should take, what options would be available to us, I would not want to try to spell out," Connally said. "Because I wouldn't have the information on which to base an informed judgment."

Baker said he discussed a variety of options with Carter and Vance, but would not say what his own recommendations were.

Victory in straw vote pleasing, although meaningless officially

By DAVID POWELL

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — In practical terms, the straw vote held at Florida's Democratic convention this weekend didn't mean a thing.

But supporters of the president — saying they're "exhilarated, excited and thrilled" — claim they're ready to beat the challenger from Massachusetts, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, in this southern state that helped put Jimmy Carter in the White House three years ago.

Both sides are bracing for a bruising battle for Florida's 100 delegates to the Democratic National Convention, to be held in New York City next summer. Those delegates will be chosen in the state primary March 11.

"We have to take our case for the president to every single voter in the state," said Jay Hakes, Carter's Florida campaign manager. "We'll have to have a much wider audience than we've had up to this point."

Carter's allies were pleased with the lopsided victory he scored over Kennedy on the straw ballot Sunday as the three-day convention came to a close with the atmosphere of a Carter campaign rally.

Carter won 1,114 delegates to 351 for Kennedy and nine with no preference, a showing Hakes called decisive. Kennedy supporters point out that most delegates were activists or office holders and that Kennedy has, strong supporter among ordinary voters.

Another Carter challenger, California Gov. Jerry Brown, was not on the ballot. Meanwhile, in Orlando, state Republicans gave ex-California Gov. Ronald Reagan the nod in a highly publicized straw ballot. Reagan picked up 38.4 percent of the ballots Saturday to 26.6 percent for his closest competitor, former Texas Gov. John Connally.

Ex-CIA director George Bush netted third place in the GOP race with 21.1 percent, followed by Illinois Rep. Philip Crane and Sen. Howard Baker trailing in last place.

At the Democratic convention, Kennedy forces also emphasized that the results had no official meaning and were heavily influenced by the Oct. 13 county caucuses in which about half the delegates were chosen, mainly by pro-Carter party officials.

The caucuses, with Carter winning about 500 delegates to 300 for a draft-Kennedy campaign, were a test of organizational skill, not the popularity of the candidates among Florida's 2.7 million Democrats.

Kennedy forces noted that the popular vote for the president and the senator in the caucuses was extremely close in several big counties, a fact obscured by the winner-take-all delegate selection rules.

Although Carter's showing was expected, his boosters touted it as proof the president has strong support among Florida Democrats. They said the straw ballot gives Carter a psychological edge.

"The momentum has definitely been captured by the president," said Gov. Bob Graham, a strong Carter supporter. "We're exhilarated, excited and thrilled."

Hakes said he was especially pleased with Carter's 76 percent showing in the straw poll. That margin was bigger than his two-thirds majority on a similar straw ballot in 1975, against no organized opposition. That win was viewed as an early sign of Carter strength and provided a big boost for his 1976 campaign.

The Florida primary will be held the same day as primaries in Georgia and Alabama and probably will become a must-win contest for the president. Hakes said Carter is the underdog in the New Hampshire and Massachusetts primaries several weeks before the Florida contest.

Clements hopes future Democrat will have same privilege he did

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements said today he hopes some Democrat in the far future has the same privilege Clements has at the National Governors Association.

"I hope that there will be a Democrat 104 years from now saying that he's glad to be standing up here as the first Democratic governor in 104 years," Clements told the first general session of the association.

Clements, elected in 1978 as Texas' first Republican governor in more than a century, welcomed the 16 other GOP governors to the first national governors' meeting ever held in Austin.

"I hope the next time we will have at least 40—or twice as many Republican governors as we now have," he said.

Sunday, former Texas Gov. John Connally, a Republican presidential candidate, commented on Clements' upset victory.

"I'd like to point out that this meeting in the capital city of Texas would not have been possible if you had not elected your first Republican governor in Texas in 104 years," said John B. Connally, former Texas governor who was one of five presidential prospects making appeals to GOP voters Sunday.

"This is a great tribute to Gov. Bill Clements, and his wife, Rita, and I hope the next time you meet here your members will have increased. ... A state is more influenced by its governor than anyone else."

Connally was just one of the presidential candidates taking note of the unusual gathering of Republican governors in Texas. Such meetings of the National Governors Association are usually held in the Northeast or Midwest.

Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, another presidential challenger, took notice of the fact that Texas has two prominent presidential candidates —

Connally and George Bush. "Between George Bush and John Connally, I was lucky to get my visa stamped even to come to this meeting, but this may change later," said Baker at a news conference.

Baker said the reason he was at the governors' meeting was primarily to follow the advice of "another great Texan, Lyndon B. Johnson. ... This is one of the greatest groups of opinion formers in this country and I intend to reason with them."

Former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen, another GOP presidential candidate, gave a boost to Clements' energy policy plan.

"The Texas energy policy is right," he said. "Great emphasis is placed on energy companies reinvesting their profits in development."

California businessman Benjamin Fernandez, still another presidential possibility, told the governors he had just talked with the president of Mexico about the same things Clements has discussed with President Jose Lopez Portillo.

"We laid the formation for future meetings on three subjects — 'illegal aliens, the need for a special oil deal with Mexico so we do not have to depend on an OPEC cartel, and the need for a special relationship between the United States and Mexico.'"

"We've got to get along with that country (Mexico)," Fernandez said. "I told President Lopez Portillo, 'Who is better in the White House than a Fernandez?'"

Thunderstorms may replace fog

The chill of early morning fog and zero visibility may be replaced tonight and Tuesday with showers and a few thunderstorms.

That's the word from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Probability of rainfall is 20 percent tonight and Tuesday.

The low temperature forecast for tonight is in the lower 40s, while Tuesday's high should reach the mid-50s.

The fog that cut visibility to zero this morning moved into the area about 4 a.m. and was dissipating by mid-morning. Some flights at Midland Regional Airport reportedly were delayed due to the fog.

Today's early morning low was 48 degrees, which was far off the record low of 22 degrees for the date in 1937. Sunday's high of 77 degrees was only three degrees short of tying the record high of 80 degrees for a Nov. 18 in 1966.

Winds tonight are expected to be southerly at 10 to 15 mph.

Shy, scholarly administrator elected AFL-CIO president

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lane Kirkland, organized labor's shy and scholarly administrator, won election as president of the 13.6-million-member AFL-CIO today, ending a quarter-century of leadership under George Meany.

Kirkland, 57, the ailing Meany's second in command and hand-picked successor, was elected without opposition by 1,000 delegates attending the labor organization's 13th convention.

It was the first change of leadership since Meany, 85, was installed as president after the birth 24 years ago of the merged American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Kirkland was nominated by Meany and elected without dissent to the thunderous applause of the convention.

Kirkland, a former member of the Merchant Marine, declared he would move immediately to enlarge the federation by inviting all unaffiliated unions into the AFL-CIO. He drew cheers when he declared in the new language he so frequently uses, "Full ahead, steady as she goes."

Without mentioning by name the Teamsters, United Auto Workers,

United Mine Workers and other independent unions, Kirkland said a united labor movement is the most important objective of the workers.

"All sinners belong in the church, all citizens owe allegiance to their country, all workers belong in a union and all true unions belong in the AFL-CIO," he declared in his acceptance speech.

Meany, in his nominating speech, hailed Kirkland as "a man of great integrity. He has the motivation; he has the dedication."

Kirkland, a South Carolinian who worked his way up the AFL-CIO staff during a 30-year career with the labor federation, emerges now not only as chief spokesman for unionized workers but also as a potent force in the nation's political, social and economic affairs.

Kirkland is a protégé and close friend of Meany, who is retiring after 12 two-year terms as AFL-CIO president because of poor health, and his eventual election to the top post had been anticipated for years.

Thomas R. Donahue, 51, a former Labor Department official who became Meany's executive assistant, also ran without opposition to succeed Kirkland as secretary-treasurer.

Galveston swimmers warned to avoid stinging oil sheen

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Coast Guard authorities warned swimmers surfers and other water sports enthusiasts to stay clear of stinging oil sheen expected to wash ashore off Galveston Island from a burning tanker for the next several days.

The oil is leaking from the flaming and grounded tanker Burmah Agate, whose 390,000-barrel crude oil cargo began spilling into the Gulf of Mexico Nov. 1 after the tanker collided with the freighter Mimosas.

"Swimmers have been reporting eye irritation after coming into contact with oil sheen," Coast Guard Lt. Ann Bennett said Sunday night.

Reports that the tanker was breaking up sent work crews to the vessel Sunday. Those crews reported some inward doubling of part of the deck, but said the ship was "not in any immediate danger of breaking up."

The collision near the mouth of the Galveston Ship Channel killed 32 sailors. The bodies of 17 crewmen have been recovered; 15 remain missing.

"Significant quantities of oil grounded in patches between East Beach and San Luis Pass Sunday, in an area one mile south of the Freeport jetties," Ms. Bennett said. "More patches are expected to come ashore during the next several days."

Analysis of wind and tidal data indicates that most of the oil due to wash ashore will do so on Galveston Island.

"These conditions increase the probability of oil entering the (Galveston) Bay," Ms. Bennett said. "But helicopters will patrol the channel and skimmers are standing by to recover any oil that might enter the bay."

Two hours pass before burning plane discovered to be harmless

By RON BARKER

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The manifest said the plane carried radioactive cargo, but it took the Air Force two hours to determine that the suspect military material in the crashed and burning aircraft was no more dangerous than a luminous watch.

Gov. Scott Matheson wants to know why.

All three crewmen died when the civilian Lockheed Electra turboprop, owned by Transamerica Airlines but carrying Air Force cargo, crashed into a cow pasture Sunday, just 10 minutes after taking off from Hill Air Force Base in Ogden, Utah, officials said.

For two hours after the plane burst into flames and plunged to the earth two miles west of an industrial park, military and civilian officials tried to find out how much radioactive material the plane carried and what type of substance it was.

They finally learned that the material was thorium, often used in making luminous watch dials. In this case, it had been used as a strengthening agent in an alloy used in a spare gear box and it posed no health hazard.

Officials had thought the material might be tritium, which could be hazardous if released in smoke from the burning plane.

However, Salt Lake City-County Health Director Dr. Harry Gibbons ordered urine tests and geiger counter scans for the more than 50 firefighters and rescue workers who surrounded the plane minutes after it nosed into the pasture. Health officials had completed 37 exams before learning that the radioactive material was harmless.

Al Britton, Salt Lake County's emergency services coordinator, said the vague manifest is a problem he runs into every day. "The information is not easily available," said Britton. "It's a nationwide problem."

There was also some question about explosives on board the plane. "We were told there were 1,500 pounds on board," said Sheriff Pete Hayward.

Britton said the Air Force later reduced that to 15 pounds of class-C explosive, a slow-burning substance.

Matheson said he wants to know why it was so difficult to learn what was on the plane and how to deal with it.

Another military plane crashed nearby earlier this year and Matheson said he wants to know why two military-related aircraft crashed so near each other in so short a period of time.

"I'd like to know if their flight paths puts dangerous cargo over populated areas and if those flight paths ought to be shifted," Matheson said.

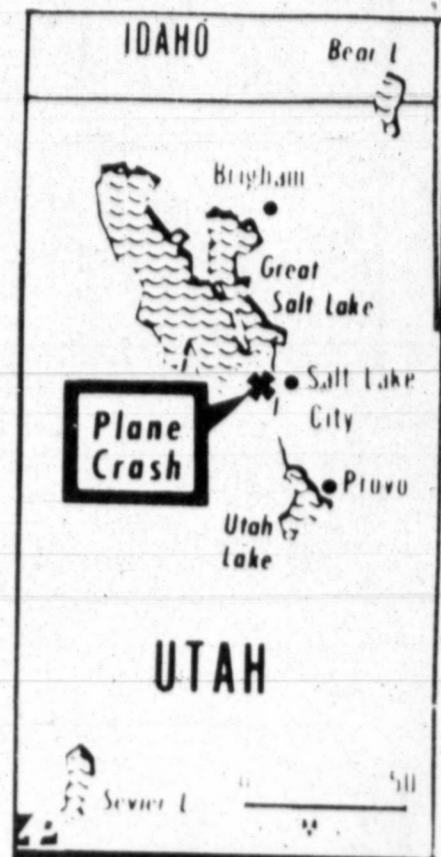

Witnesses reported hearing two explosions and seeing a bright flash and then a fireball that separated and fell to the ground.

"All we saw was that red light in the sky," said Martin Layne, a trucker from Marne, Iowa. "Couldn't figure out what it was. We thought it was a meteor. It looked like it just blew apart."

Rick Slakoff, a Transamerica spokesman in San Francisco, identified the dead crew as the pilot, Marvin Dick, 46, of Ogden; first officer Harry Gardiner, 35, of Layton, and flight engineer Jack Johnstone, 54, of Robins Air Force Base in Warner Robins, Ga.

Slakoff said Transamerica, a commercial cargo carrier, makes daily flights from Hill under contract with the Air Force.

The National Transportation Safety Board investigator began its investigation Sunday afternoon.

The rubble of a four-engine Lockheed Electra cargo plane carrying low-level radioactive material and 15 pounds of explosives for the Air Force is scattered over a three-block area in a thinly populated area west of Salt Lake Valley. Three persons died in the crash. (AP Laserphoto)

Nitroglycerin found in house moved to dump

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va. (AP) — A state police convoy transporting 2½ gallons of volatile nitroglycerin temporarily came to a halt early today when authorities learned residents of this small Ohio River community had not been notified of potential danger.

But after a 40-minute delay, the convoy resumed its journey when city officials decided not to evacuate any of the 6,122 residents, and the explosive was safely delivered to an ammunition dump in Mason County.

Many people living within 100 yards of the route were briefly evacuated as a state police cruiser modified with a blast shield, escorted by a half-dozen patrol cars, moved past on its 70-mile journey.

Officials said the nitroglycerin was found in a Putnam County house Sunday afternoon, but what it was doing there was not determined immediately.

said, state police asked people living along the route to be evacuated.

With the convoy so close and traffic already backed up, Musgrave said officials agreed it would be best to move carefully through town.

"Getting all of those people... out into the streets would have created 100 times the traffic problem," Musgrave said. "We certainly would have complicated a problem that went smoothly."

The convoy's destination was an active ammunition dump at the McClintic Game Preserve near Point Pleasant. The route cut through primarily rural areas of west-central West Virginia, but a section of Interstate 64 between Hurricane and Winfield was closed while the bomb truck crossed.

Mormon Church to try woman member for support of ERA

STERLING PARK, Va. (AP) — The Mormon Church will try one of its women members next month to determine whether her campaigning for the Equal Rights Amendment is harmful to the church.

Mrs. Sonia Johnson, 43, a founder of nationwide Mormons for ERA, won a two-week postponement Saturday of her trial on whether her actions hurt the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The charges to be heard Dec. 1 will center on whether her ERA activities hamper the church's missionary work, cause members to lose respect for their leaders or give outsiders a false idea of the church, she said.

Bishop Jeff Willis of the Sterling Park Ward will decide the trial's verdict, which could be excommunication, excommunication, disfellowship, probation or a decision the trial should not have been held.

Under disfellowship, an individual is allowed to remain in the church but cannot take part in sacraments or leadership activities.

Willis, a personnel officer for the Central Intelligence Agency, has refused to comment on the case.

"We spent four hours having what we kind of light-heartedly called a pre-trial planning session," Mrs. Johnson said Saturday after gaining the delay.

Mrs. Johnson, who had received a summons to the trial last Wednesday night, added that "we realized that none of us understood what the issues were and had to agree on them."

Despite her request for a delay when told of the trial, Mrs. Johnson had been ordered Friday night to appear the next day.

Rally protests the proposed dumping of radioactive water

BALTIMORE (AP) — An estimated 100 persons turned out for a rally to protest the possibility that water containing radioactive tritium will be dumped into the Susquehanna River by the owners of the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania.

The dumping, which is under consideration by the Metropolitan Edison Co., operator of the TMI facility, was the focal point of the protest held in Baltimore's Inner Harbor. The protest was called by the Chesapeake Energy Alliance, a local environmental group. The Susquehanna empties in the Chesapeake Bay.

The worst accident at a civilian nuclear power plant occurred last March-28 at the Three Mile Island plant, near Harrisburg, Pa.

A series of mechanical failures and human errors resulted in the loss of cooling water and the overheating of the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor core.

SALT may be rejected

The dovish Senate Foreign Relations Committee has marched obediently to the Carter administration's drum, recommending ratification of the SALT II treaty after protecting it from any amendment that would annoy the Soviet Union. In doing so, the committee alienated several moderates and the final vote on the treaty was 9-6, less than a two-thirds majority and hardly a resounding endorsement of SALT II's terms.

If the Carter administration pursues the same all-or-nothing strategy on the Senate floor, it may win the battles over amendments only to find itself without the minimum 67 votes required for ratification.

As for the treaty itself, all of its least defensible provisions are fully intact, thanks to the dominant Frank Church-George McGovern wing of the Foreign Relations Committee.

The Soviets' growing fleet of supersonic Backfire bombers remains exempt from treaty limits despite the recent testimony of a senior Defense Intelligence Agency official that this aircraft is capable of reaching "virtually all targets in the United States" without refueling. The committee's rejection of an amendment requiring that the Backfires be counted toward SALT limits also contradicts the unanimous view of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

No matter, the Carter administration and the Kremlin are as one in insisting that any change in treaty terms constitutes a "killer amendment" that would wreck SALT II and vastly diminish, if not preclude, chances for further Soviet-American arms negotiations.

The committee resisted even stronger pressure for an amendment granting the United States the right to possess the kind of super-heavy missiles specifically reserved for the Soviets under SALT II. In opposing this altogether-reasonable amendment, administration spokesmen argued lamely that, because the United States has no plans to build such a missile during SALT II's six year life span, nothing is lost by surrendering the right to do so. Aside from the unfortunate negotiating precedent thus established, no one from the White House has explained why the Soviet Union should be permitted the exclusive right to a force of 308 heavy ICBMs so powerful that it exceeds the aggregate deliverable megatonnage of the 1,054 U.S. land-based missiles.

The heavy-missile amendment died on an 8-7 vote, a margin that fortunately guarantees its re-appearance on the Senate floor.

An identical 8-7 vote turned back another amendment intended to close one of the treaty's most dangerous loopholes — its utter silence on the question of stockpiling ICBMs. The Soviets are known to have at least 1,000 reserve ICBMs not counted toward SALT limits because the treaty restricts only the numbers of conventional missile "launchers" and other strategic delivery systems, not the weapons themselves.

Thus, while the United States has only a minimum reserve of spare missiles and has closed its only Minuteman production line, the Soviet Union is free to continue turning out intercontinental ballistic missiles like sausages, to borrow the late Nikita Khrushchev's apt phrase.

Incredibly, the committee even rejected an amendment that would have denied the Soviets the right to keep some of their missile test data secret despite the fact that access to this information is critical to treaty verification. This was too much for the Senate's leading expert on verification, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio. He voted against the treaty on grounds that Soviet compliance could not be adequately monitored.

As a sop to treaty opponents, Sen. Church agreed to support a laundry list of mostly cosmetic "understandings, declarations, and reservations" tacked onto the ratification resolution. Only two of these 20 unilateral statements require Moscow's agreement. The rest either have nothing to do with the treaty itself or are not binding on the Soviet Union.

In sum, the treaty now presented to the full Senate is no better than the poor bargain signed by Jimmy Carter last June in Vienna. Its deficiencies, inequalities and loopholes are such that it can neither impose a stable nuclear balance nor significantly slow a strategic arms competition that the Soviet Union is clearly winning.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Trio in the U.S.-Iran debacle

WASHINGTON — Three unlikely boon companions — Henry Kissinger, David Rockefeller and the shah of Iran — have twice appeared together in the woodpile of an American catastrophe.

FIRST INCIDENT — In 1973, the shah was the driving force behind the astronomical leap in oil prices. Top-secret documents show that the Nixon administration could have stopped this ruinous oil gouge.

To an unusual degree, the American response lay in Kissinger's hands. His superiors during the period of response were immobilized — the outgoing Richard Nixon by Watergate, the incoming Gerald Ford by lack of information.

Saudi Arabia, possessing one-quarter of the world's oil reserves, could have thwarted the shah's rapacious price demands. The cautious Saudi rulers, indeed, offered to block the price rise if the Nixon administration would restrain the shah.

Even after prices soared over the moon, the Saudis offered to force them back down by flooding the world market with oil. But the Saudis refused to stand alone against the oil bloc; all they asked was that Washington use its enormous clout with the shah to get his cooperation.

Astonishingly, Kissinger opposed any interference with the shah, who, therefore, was left free to continue agitating for higher prices. This encouraged the other oil-selling nations to join happily in the price push. The disastrous increase stalled the U.S. economy and now threatens to plunge it into a tailspin.

The time for response passed, meanwhile, without any plan of resis-

White House.

But Kissinger and Rockefeller kept pressuring the Carter administration to welcome the shah. They had previously arranged temporary abodes for him first in Nassau, then in Mexico. One State Department document suggests that he could stay in Mexico "at least until October."

In October, Kissinger and Rockefeller notified the White House that the shah needed cancer treatment. The White House accepted the word of Rockefeller's physician, Dr. Benjamin H. Kean, that the necessary facilities were available only in the United States. There was nothing left for the State Department to do but alert the Iranian government on Oct. 21 that the shah would be hospitalized in the United States. Moderates in the shah's arrival could have serious consequences. But he was admitted anyhow, with the predicted results.

A high State Department official blamed Kissinger and Rockefeller for precipitating the crisis. "They have pressed for a year to bring the shah into this country," the official told us. "Now he's here, and all our worst warnings have come true."

What is the reason for the strong devotion of Kissinger and Rockefeller to the shah? The bond that holds these three disparate men together is pecuniary. Long before Kissinger joined the Nixon administration, he was a paid consultant to the Rockefeller brothers. Now he is back again on their payroll. They, in turn, had financial ties to the shah.

Their Chase Manhattan bank has always received the biggest share of the shah's banking business. A former high official of the Iranian National Oil Company told us, for example, that the shah personally ordered the company to channel oil purchases through Chase Manhattan.

The oil price increase, which Kissinger abetted, deluged the shah with petrodollars. Much of this money reached Iran by way of the Chase Manhattan bank.

Banking sources in New York City and Paris have told us that the shah escaped with an incredible $25 billion which he controls through a maze of corporate fronts, trust funds and bank accounts. Rockefeller and Kissinger advise the shah on how to invest this staggering fortune.

Footnote: Kissinger denied to us that his attitude toward the shah had ever been influenced by financial considerations. A spokesman for the Chase Manhattan Bank said he could not discuss the finances of a customer or the personal relationship between Rockefeller and the shah.

CHARLEY REESE U.S. defense capability must be restored promptly

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

Charley Reese

ORLANDO, Fla. — Maybe it isn't as bad now as it was during the Vietnam War, but the American military people are still having a rough time.

They are cursed by ill-informed people as having too soft a life, or if they have completed their military careers, accused of being double dipperers or some other form of public mooch.

The injustice of such charges to anybody who knows the facts almost boggles the mind. We are so stingy when it comes to our own defense that most military active duty people are on or below the poverty level; medical care and other services have been reduced, and line combat units are in many cases understrength and poorly equipped to do their job.

As for the military retiree, why should a healthy, competent individual who has faithfully completed his contract, sit around and become a vegetable? That would be a waste of human resources. He has earned his retirement pay and it's nobody's business what he does or doesn't do.

A lot of people work who have other financial resources like income from investments and nobody complains about them. The retired military man earned his retirement pay and is entitled to it. If he earns a paycheck on top of that, he is entitled to that. And if he works long enough to earn another form of retirement income, he is entitled to that. Only a petty, envious ingrate would even raise such a ridiculous issue.

I suppose it's human nature for civilians to ignore the military until the enemy is at the gate and they are scared out of their wits. Then, nothing's too good for the military man.

Intelligent people, however, should never make that mistake, most particularly Americans, for our tradition is one of a citizen army. In other words, the proper way to view our military people is as our fellow citizens who are performing a valuable service for all of us.

We spend less than six percent of our gross national product on defense. That amounts to about 24 percent of the federal budget. That's not too smart when you consider that national defense is any rational nation's number one priority.

Without a strong military capability, our diplomacy fails, for diplomacy is nothing more than the assertion of a nation's interests. Without the power to enforce those interests, the assertions become meaningless.

The most stupid thing a Congress can do is sacrifice military capability to fund some pet domestic project. Without the military power to protect the people and to defend their interests, all domestic questions become moot points. It is impossible to achieve a fair distribution of wealth, but very possible to achieve a fair distribution of death and destruction in war.

We live in hazardous times and we have already allowed our military power to deteriorate to a dangerously low level. It is in the self-interest of every one of us to do everything we can to restore our defense capability.

We can do this by voting out of office those politicians who have consistently voted to weaken our defenses. Almost every congressman and senator who is a member of an organization called "Members of Congress for Peace Through Law" falls into that category.

We can do this by writing letters to politicians and the news media urging a strong defense; by joining organizations, like the Navy League or the American Security Council which promote a strong defense; by vigorously opposing those organizations which oppose a strong defense.

We can do it by helping to create a climate in our own community which values and appreciates the role the military plays in preserving peace, freedom and life. If there is a base in your town, invite a young service person into your home for a holiday dinner. Never let an attack against our services go unanswered.

In short, stand up for your country and your countrymen.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reprogramming of Ronald Reagan is not easy assignment

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

BOSTON — Ronald Reagan's remarkable turnaround on oil profits during his first 24 hours as an announced presidential candidate followed an intense backstage power struggle over just what the front-running Republican ought to say to the voters.

In his taped television speech to the nation Tuesday night, Reagan appeared to say "maybe" on the oil profits tax in Congress. That reflected high strategy by campaign manager John Sears. But Wednesday afternoon at a labor union hall in Boston's Dorchester section, he was attacking "what is called the windfall profits tax." That reflected persistent urgings from his newly unveiled chief campaign spokesman: Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

This back-and-forth was part of maneuvering, negotiating and bickering behind the scenes for weeks before Reagan's announcement. It helps explain why Reagan, for 15 years a master of the political campaign platform, seemed off his form in a shaky start.

The fact that the Nov. 13 announcement was so late fits Sears' overall strategic premises: With Reagan likely to clinch the Republican nomination quickly, he should lie low as long as possible and, when he does announce, aim at winning over non-Republicans. That means convincing them that Reagan is for the common man.

For more than four years, Sears has tried to cool the enduring love affair between Reagan and corporate business. He never quite succeeded in 1976, but this time was determined to make his point in the announcement statement, whose drafting began back in July.

Sears also had another project: to enlist Kemp, perhaps the Republican party's most dynamic young figure. While Kemp's closest advisers were urging him to mobilize his business world following for his own presidential run, Sears courted him to jump aboard the Reagan bandwagon.

Kemp finally agreed in principle when Reagan endorsed Kemp's supply-side economics as exemplified by the Kemp-Roth tax reduction bill to restore incentive.

But agreement in principle was not the same as agreement in fact. The announcement statement was negotiated, paragraph by paragraph, over two months by Reagan and Kemp agents. What nearly prevented agreement was an ambivalent paragraph on oil profits. Kemp has assailed President Carter's tax as a menace equivalent to the depression-making Smoot-Hawley tariff. But Sears and other Reagan advisers worried that their man would become a front man for Exxon.

A bargain was struck in the final hours before the announcement. Reagan would keep this statement so obnoxious to the Kemp circle: "I don't believe we've been given all the information we need to make a judgment about this (oil profits). We should have that information. Government exists to protect us from each other." To Kemp's colleagues, Reagan was joining the demagogic oil-baiting of Carter, Kennedy and Howard Baker.

To accept that statement, Kemp exacted a heavy price: the decisive policy role in Reagan's campaign. He will dominate Reagan's economic policy speech. What's more, Reagan almost immediately began retreating from Tuesday night's muted oil-baiting.

Arriving in working class Dorchester here the next afternoon (though precious few local residents were present), Reagan attacked the windfall profits tax as something that would eventually cost the consumer ("You're going to pay it!"). Responding to our question, he said he would have voted against the tax approved by the Senate Finance Committee and supported by Senate Republicans.

Kemp's dominance in Reagan policymaking is widely interpreted as provoking the unexpected return to the Stanford University faculty of Dr. Martin Anderson, Reagan's research chief. Anderson does not go nearly so far as the Kemp circle toward supply-side economics and, though he will still support Reagan, would not be comfortable as a full-time staffer any longer.

The economic debate is not the only point of friction. The initiative for a "North American accord" between the U.S., Canada and Mexico fits Sears' quest for a more moderate image. But one key adviser argued until the end against it, contending that the American public wants the old Reagan demanding of Iran: "The embassy hostages alive, or the ayatollah dead."

Under these conditions, Reagan's third and most carefully prepared presidential campaign began with him off balance. His taped television speech was uncharacteristically bland. His Dorchester speech was more vintage Reagan but in its rousing moments dredged up outdated material from 1976 and earlier. Both John Sears and Jack Kemp might well heed warnings that Ronald Reagan is not easily reprogrammed.

Army recruiting fraud revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An investigation of the Army's worst recruiting scandal since the end of the draft shows that up to 12,700 soldiers were enlisted through fraud or other irregular practices over the last two years, officials said today.

Opening the books on a six-month investigation, the Army told Congress that 427 recruiters have been relieved of their duties in the last year because of malpractice.

Officials said there was more malpractice among seasoned recruiters than among newer recruiters. Many of those who lost their jobs had received awards for recruiting successes.

Seventy-five percent of the cases of fraudulent or irregular enlistments involved discrepancies in the educational records of potential recruits who had not graduated from high school, officials said.

Other cases involved illegal coaching for enlistment tests and concealment of police records, medical problems and dependents.

While readily acknowledging that recruiters are under pressure to meet recruiting goals, Army officials said the pressure is not overbearing.

"No one is forced to cheat in order to recruit for the Army," said Brig. Gen. Donald W. Connelly, head of a 55-member investigation task force set up last May.

Connelly, joined by Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Lt. Gen. Robert G. Yerks, the Army's top personnel official, testified on the recruiting scandal before the Senate Armed Services manpower subcommittee.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the panel's chairman and a skeptic about the all-volunteer military's ability to attract enough servicemen, said the administration is determined "to make the all-volunteer force work no matter what the cost or consequence."

Nunn noted that all branches of the service failed to meet their recruiting goals in the 12 months ending last Oct. 1, and said the Army and Navy are lowering the level of education needed for enlistment.

Alexander said the Army has never fallen more than 2 percent below its authorized manpower strength since the draft ended in 1973. It was 16,000 persons short of a goal of 158,7000 new recruits in a recent 12-month period.

"Overall results have been very good," said Alexander. He blamed the shortages on the failure "to commit the resources necessary to make military service attractive in today's economic environment."

Reviewing his investigation, Connelly said team members traveled to 40 military posts around the world and interviewed more than 7,300 soldiers and several hundred recruiting personnel.

The special investigation led to the removal from duty of 324 recruiters and supervisors in 41 of the Army's 57 recruiting districts, Connelly said. In addition, 103 other recruiters were relieved because of malpractice discovered in routine checks.

Connelly said investigators frequently "ran into a wall of silence which reflected the common belief that if a recruiter simply denied everything, he could never be found guilty of malpractice. However, this investigation has broken that chain, and to date 26 of the 324 relieved recruiters have admitted wrongdoing" and have implicated 82 others.

Connelly said seven recruiters have or will face court martial charges, 11 have accepted non-judicial punishment, 27 have received letters of reprimand and 20 other cases, which involved criminal activity, were referred to other authorities. Other cases also could result in action, he said.

Both Hensley and the doctor's ex-wife have testified Burkhalter tried to break up their relationship with money and threats. Mrs. Hensley said her former husband threatened to kill Hensley.

More defense witnesses have been called to testify today in the trial's 10th day.

The doctor's ex-wife, Laurita, married John Hensley four months before he was shot in the face outside their condominium. Hensley survived but was blinded by a rifle bullet fired less than 40 feet away.

Burkhalter is accused of hiring two men, S.J. Wilburn and Scott David Minnick, to kill Hensley.

Witnesses have said that after the Burkhalter were divorced in November 1977, they continued seeing each other and taking trips until she met Hensley.

Both Hensley and the doctor's ex-wife have testified Burkhalter tried to break up their relationship with money and threats. Mrs. Hensley said her former husband threatened to kill Hensley.

Burkhalter portrays 'family squabble'

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Defense tactics in the attempted capital murder trial of Dr. Archie Herman Burkhalter have included efforts to depict the doctor's legal problems as mainly a family squabble.

The doctor's lawyers, Warren Burnett and Joe Walsh, called Burkhalter's brother, sister-in-law and former mother-in-law last week as witnesses in an attempt to cast doubt on testimony from Burkhalter's ex-wife.

More defense witnesses have been called to testify today in the trial's 10th day.

Mrs. Hensley's mother testified her daughter has not been the same since falling off a horse in 1970 and being unconscious for 12 days. The doctor still supports his former mother-in-law and she lives in a house he built for her in Huntsville.

Burkhalter's brother and sister-in-law, O'Neil and Gloria Burkhalter of Pasadena, testified they tried to sell a 1977 Cadillac alleged by the state as part of the payoff in the alleged murder-for-hire plot.

Minnick was stopped driving the car the day of the shooting. It was registered to Burkhalter's Pasadena hospital, but Minnick's mother testified she bought the car legitimately and is still making car payments.

Wilburn was convicted in July as being the hit man in the case and sentenced to life imprisonment. He was arrested minutes after the shooting.

ing driving a Cadillac from which the back seat had been removed.

Police testified someone could have lain in the back of the car and fired a weapon through a gun flap cut into the trunk.

Wilburn and Minnick are longtime friends and patients of Burkhalter.

Bighorn rescue effort continues

By JANE SEAGRAVE

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — Pilot Tim Wallis skirted the cliffs of the desolate San Andres Mountains, looking for movement below. In the rear of the helicopter, Colin Yeates cocked his gun and fired, casting a billowing orange net over his target — one of the last surviving Desert Bighorn sheep in New Mexico.

"We got it," Yeates said in a guttural New Zealand accent.

Yeates and Wallis, another New Zealander, have donated expertise acquired from trapping red deer to what state Game and Fish Department officials are calling one of the most dramatic wildlife rescue operations in history.

The sheep are being captured for treatment of a mysterious scabies epidemic which is threatening to destroy New Mexico's largest herd of the majestic Desert Bighorns.

The epidemic is caused by mites that burrow under an animal's skin and feed off its blood serum. The hide will fester and peel off, making the animal susceptible to cold and disease.

The mites have been identified as a variety that officials thought was eradicated from the United States decades ago.

State decades ago. But the insects, the size of a grain of salt, reappeared in southern New Mexico to wipe out nearly 75 percent of the state's Bighorn herd.

GFD official Walt Snyder estimates only 70 sheep remain of the 250 that once roamed the cliffs. He said officials hope to capture up to 50 percent of the sheep before cold weather decimates the herd, one of several in the Southwest.

"Our vets looked at them and said if they were left alone they probably wouldn't survive more than a few weeks," he said Sunday.

But the treatment can be as fatal as the disease. Three sheep have died of the stress of capture.

"The whole rescue capture is stressful to the animals," said Snyder. "It's bound to have a traumatic effect on them."

The New Zealanders' part of the mission is to trap the sheep long enough for a second helicopter to swoop down, tranquilize the animals and airlift them out of the barren White Sands Missile Range for treatment.

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE
Make the Basic Play
By Alfred Sheinwold
Complications may earn your respect, but you pay off to the simple, basic play.
Declarer took the queen of hearts and ran three top spades, discarding a diamond from his hand. When West threw a club South tried three top clubs, hoping West had discarded from a four-card holding.
This time West discarded a diamond, and South tried the ace and a low diamond, hoping West had started with K-x of that suit.
GOOD TRY
It was a good attempt to recover, but it didn't work. East took the king of diamonds and two black jacks. Then he led a heart, and West took two hearts to defeat the contract.
After winning the first trick with the queen of hearts declarer should lead a low spade from dummy. When East follows suit with a low spade South plays the eight, giving the lead to the safe opponent.
With this simple, basic play, South gets four spade tricks and his contract.
DAILY QUESTION
Partner bids one club, you respond one heart, and he then bids two no trump. The opponents pass. You hold: ♠ 10 2 ♣ A J 9 6 2 ♢ Q 8 7 ♠ 8 5 2. What do you say?

Simplicity marks mid-season wear

NEW YORK — Straight and narrow are the names for resort and holiday wear this '79-'80 season.

According to designers Ted Saulino and Frank Tignino at the Jerry Silverman fashion house, "straight" and "narrow" are two different, equally emphatic ways to describe the new fun and party clothes.

"For instance," says Saulino, "the chemise dress with the unmarked waistline may have an optional belt or sash but it will be a 'must' for your resort and holiday travel wardrobe.

She gets worldwide recognition

By PATSY GORDON

A Midland woman has been recognized for her achievements by being named to "The World's Who's Who of Women." She recently received her parchment certificate from Cambridge, England, informing her of the honor.

Mrs. Opal Cramer, 1801 N. Midland Drive, Apt. 208, is an 82-year-old retired teacher who came to the Tall City in 1966 when she married the late Earl John Cramer, who was production manager in the Permian Basin for Standard Oil of Texas.

Her nomination for the honor was made through the National League of American Penwomen, an organization she was accepted into many years ago in San Francisco, Calif.

Mrs. Cramer, who has lived in Texas for 35 years, attended the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks. She received her bachelor of science, master of science and master of education degrees from Sul Ross State College at Alpine, now known as Sul Ross State University.

At Sul Ross, she was a member of Alpha Chi and Kappa Delta Pi sororities. She was "in the upper 5 percent of her class scholastically."

Mrs. Cramer taught grade schools in Hatton, N.D.; Carrington, N.D.; Glendive, Mont.; Rocky Ford, Colo.; Huron, S.D., and San Angelo.

She later served as principal of a school in Reno, Nev.

She taught art and exhibited it in San Angelo, and had basic training in painting at San Francisco and Reno. She also has had writings published and has authored a manuscript on her family tree.

"Midland is the first place I've been where people painted just for the enjoyment of it," said Mrs. Cramer. "When I came to Texas, people were hungry for art because they didn't have art in the schools here."

She also took art lessons from Elliott O'Hara in Corpus Christi.

Her water color works have been exhibited in Boston, Mass.; San Francisco and Washington, D.C., but so far, in Midland, her works hang only in her apartment. "I made up my mind when I came to Midland, I would retire," said the pleasant, attractive woman.

Mrs. Cramer, a member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, has one daughter, Mrs. Jack (Susan) Sproule Jowell of Tulsa, Okla.

She might have retired from painting and teaching, but she certainly has not retired from life.

Report due in 1980 on mental hospitals plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter says the government is "finally turning the spotlight on the problems of people who are chronically mentally ill" by starting work on a plan to phase out large mental hospitals.

The President's Commission on Mental Health recommended 18 months ago that the government devise such a plan. Mrs. Carter announced during a speech in Denver that Surgeon General Julius Richmond is heading the effort. A report is due in August 1980.

DEAR ABBY

Falls for his bedtime story

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm an 18-year-old girl with a problem I can't talk to anybody about. I am very shy, and just don't know how to say no to people.

About three months ago I went to bed with a guy I baby-sit for — I'll call him "Mr. M." He's divorced and has two little kids. Even though I knew it was wrong for me to go to bed with him, I didn't know how to turn him down without hurting his feelings.

"Mr. M." is a nice person, but he doesn't consider me in his class, or care about me as a person. He's dating a woman his age (35) who sometimes sleeps over.

Now that I've gone to bed with "Mr. M." five or six times, I don't know how to refuse him. I don't feel anything special for him, like I did for the guy I went steady with last year.

I want to quit baby-sitting for this man, but I really like his kids and they are crazy about me. Also, I'm too shy to tell him what's on my mind. What should I do? — CAN'T SAY NO

DEAR CAN'T: You CAN say no, and you MUST! Your problem is not "shyness," it's a very low self-esteem and lack of confidence. You need more help than I can give you in a letter. Please see a professional at your local mental health clinic. You must learn to assert yourself, and put an end to allowing yourself to be used.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 52-year-old divorcee in love with a charming, well-to-do 55-year-old widower I'll call Frank. He is delightful company and wants to marry me. Now for the problem.

Frank has two married daughters (whom I have never met) who want to run his life. They are so afraid that someone is going to take advantage of their father that they can't stand it. (His wife died two years ago and he's afraid to tell his daughters that he has been dating!)

When Frank takes me out, we have to go where his daughters will not find out about it. Also, when he comes to my home he takes a taxi so no one will see his car parked in front of my house!

How can I convince Frank that it's time he lived his own life and quit worrying about what his daughters think? — BACK STREET BONNIE

DEAR BONNIE: If you could meet his daughters and win them over it would be ideal. But a grown man who hides his lady friend from his daughters sounds like poor husband material to me.

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor across the way keeps standing in front of his window stark naked!

I do not catch accidental glimpses of him in this state. He actually stands by the window that way hoping to be noticed! I have reported him to the police, but they say he is in his own home and there is nothing they can do about it. He has a wife and children, but he does this while they are not at home.

Should I tell his wife? I don't know her very well, but I will speak to her if you think it will do some good. — NEW NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEW: The man needs help. Present the bare facts to his wife.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is thinking about buying a "hot" color television set and also a "hot" movie projector.

The man who wants to sell them got them from someone who steals to support his drug habit.

I told my husband I thought it would be wrong for us to buy these items even though we can get them way below cost, but my husband says if we don't buy them someone else will.

Abby, I don't want any part of a deal like this, but how can I convince my husband that it's wrong? — NO NAME OR TOWN, PLS.

DEAR NO: He KNOWS it's wrong. Just tell him that anyone who knowingly buys hot merchandise stands to share in the guilt of the theft — if caught.

The teen years are the questioning years. Abby has the answers to all your questions in her booklet, "What Teenagers Want to Know." Write Abby: in care of this newspaper. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope.

City plastic surgeon addresses junior club

Dr. T.D. Tubb recently presented a program on cosmetic surgery to members of the Junior Woman's Association.

Tubb discussed the various types of cosmetic surgery and pointed out considerations that should be made before deciding to have the surgery. He also suggested ideas on the selection of a plastic surgeon.

Terri Barnes was introduced as a new member of the association.

Monetary donations were made as a roll call item. These funds will be presented to Meals-On-Wheels.

Members volunteered to serve on committees to assist with the Cerebral Palsy Center's Christmas party, an annual project.

Members were reminded that the December program is to be a member "Show and Tell."

Naturally, he slows down aging process

By JACK WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

Products and schemes designed to take pounds off our bodies and years off our appearance flood our everyday lives, all of them emanating from some omnipotent fountain of youth that has sprung a leak in our imagination.

Skin creams ... potions ... vitamins ... diets ... facelifts ... wonder drugs ...

They are part and parcel of our youth culture, new wrinkles in an old game, summoned by a society that refuses to be inhibited by age.

Ah, perpetual youth. The American Dream. The National Obsession. Most of the prescriptions are superficial. Many are cosmetic.

But at San Diego

(Calif.) State University something scientific is going on, supervised by a 66-year-old exercise physiology professor who has documented evidence that the effects of aging can be forestalled and minimized through exercise.

Dr. Fred Kasch, a professor in the SDSU physical education department for 31 years, says his study is the most thorough of its nature in the United States. He knows of no other in the world that has followed its subjects for such a length of time and monitored them so closely.

Kasch has shown that regular cardiovascular exercise tailored to an individual's needs and stressing continuous running or swimming can produce marked improvement in physical work capacity. "Physical work capacity, he says, is based on maximal oxygen uptake, or the amount of oxygen a person's body can absorb as determined by a stress test on a bicycle ergometer.

In a published report on the physiology of aging, Dr. H. Shock wrote in 1962 that the most obvious result of aging is a decline in maximal oxygen uptake or physical work capacity.

Although more than 2,000 individuals have been monitored by Kasch in the Adult Fitness Program he operates at SDSU, the data on which his conclusions are based resulted from two studies.

One traced 36 middle-aged men for a 10-year period, the other followed 16 for a period of 15 years.

"Our studies showed that with a regular program of cardiovascular exercise there was no decline in maximal oxygen uptake in men from 45 to 55," said Kasch.

"After 60 there seems to be an irreversible decline, but the regular program of exercise reduced this to half of what it would normally be in a sedentary individual."

Kasch said a person's maximal oxygen uptake begins a natural decline of approximately 1 percent a year between the ages of 20 and 25. It accelerates to approximately 2 percent per year after the age of 55.

"Because the usual drop in physical work capacity didn't occur in the individuals tested," said Kasch, "we feel the results may point toward the prevention of ischemic (lack of blood supply in an organ or tissue) heart disease." Kasch said his original studies were confined to men with sedentary occupations because "our objective was to develop optimum health and forestall middle-age heart disease, which is primarily a male problem."

In addition to the increase and maintenance of maximal oxygen uptake levels, individuals in Kasch's 10- and 15-year studies showed a reduction in resting pulse and blood pressure.

Kasch said those who increased the frequency of their workouts generally showed more dramatic increases in work capacity. He also noted that those on a running program showed slightly more positive results than those who opted for swimming.

Three of those tested have since completed marathon runs (26 miles, 385 yards). One, Dr. Clifford Croom, an orthodontist, is a prize-winning competitive swimmer.

Kasch said the marathoners didn't necessarily show an edge in maximal oxygen uptake from the others tested.

"They showed the biggest increase in enzymes in their muscle cells," said Kasch. "Their work capacity didn't increase much after they trained for the marathon but their ability to sustain a certain level of performance did."

This, he explained, is because the enzymes they have developed in the muscle cells promote endurance.

Although Kasch's research indicates a definite decline in capacity around the age of 65, he is not satisfied that this also can't be arrested.

"We haven't closed the book on that yet," he said. "We'll know more in a few years."

A former athlete at the University of Illinois, Kasch is a trim 5 feet 8 inches and 140 pounds.

He has run regularly, although not competitively, for more than 30 years.

Kasch said one of the reasons he began his studies was that people he knew in their 40s and 50s "recognized themselves going downhill and accepted it as natural and irreversible."

He wanted to show — based on the assumption that exercise promotes health — that the middle-aged were not as bad off as they thought.

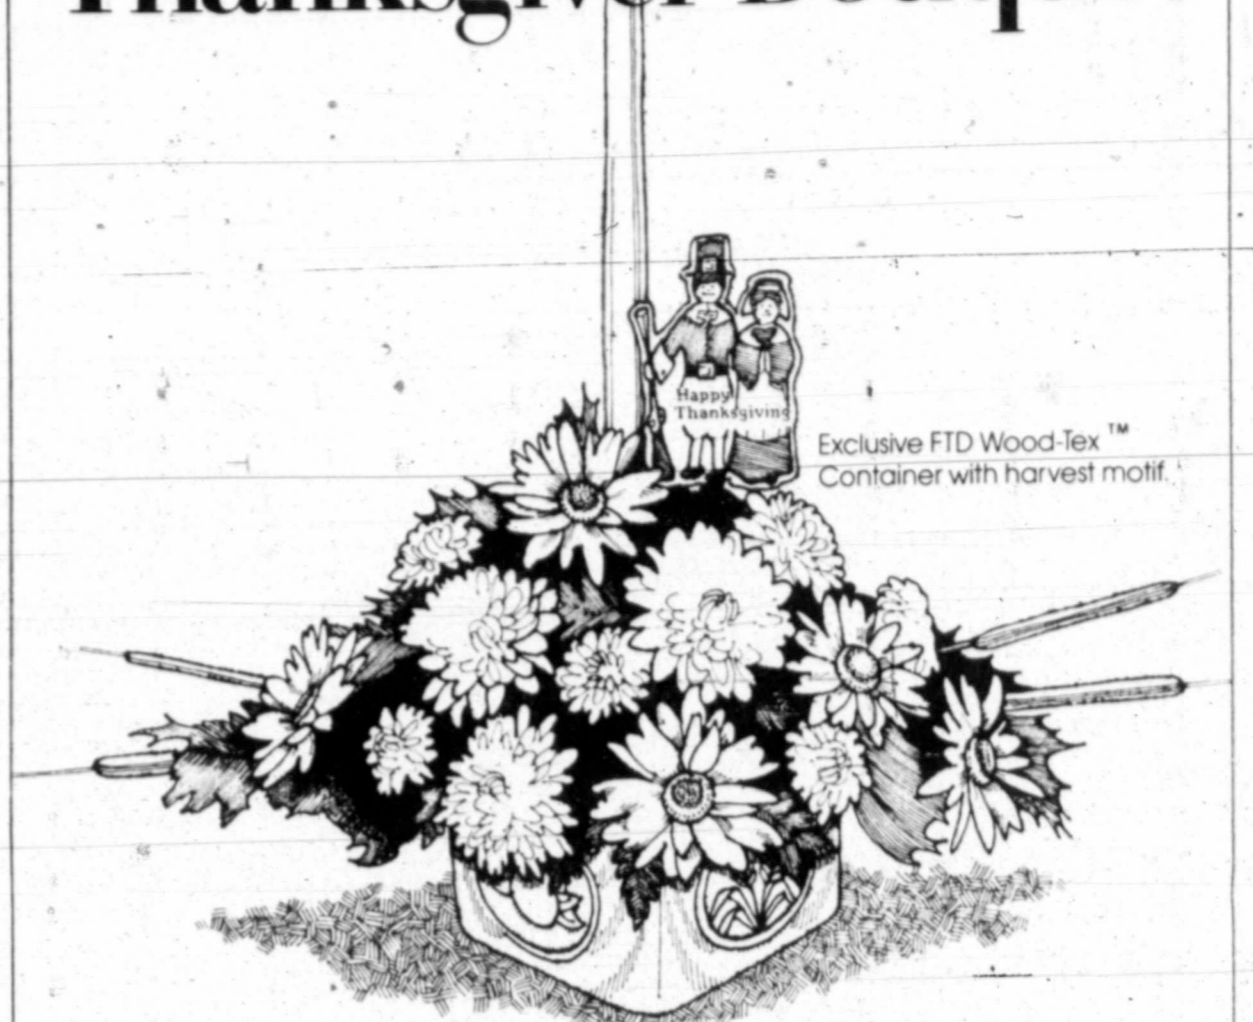

Kasch runs his subjects through a battery of tests that, in addition to measuring oxygen uptake, monitor functions and capacities of the lungs, test blood chemistries and blood pressure and determine total body fat.

For the latter, he submerges the subjects in water and weighs them, then measures skin folds in six body areas.

"Ideally, all men should have no more than 15 percent body fat and all women no more than 20," said Kasch. "If they are more linear (more slight in build), the figures are 10 percent for men and 15 percent for women."

The exercise phase begins with 20 minutes of stretching and warmups, followed by 40 minutes of walking, running or swimming. Pulse is taken immediately after exercise to determine if the individual is operating in his prescribed range of intensity.

Mrs. Cahoon portrayed characters such as Anna in "The King and I," Morales in "Chorus Line," Eliza Doolittle in "My Fair Lady," and Mame from the show of the same name. Entertainment included songs by Cole Porter, Stephen Sondheim, Lerner and Lowe, and Rodgers and Hammerstein.

Following the program, Patricia Allday conducted the business meeting in which the nominating committee was announced. Serving on that committee are Mary Beck, chairman; Sarah Neisig, Jenness Gilles and Kaye Franklin.

CHICAGO (AP) — Almost foretelling his death, Mayor William Hawkins of Phoenix scrawled a brief and chilling note a week before he was killed in the strike-plagued suburb south of Chicago, police say.

"I was to be executed Tuesday but I got a stay of sentence and I am now on probation," the note said.

On Tuesday, Oct. 16, Hawkins, 57, was cut down on the driveway of his modest suburban home by three of six bullets fired from an assassin's high-powered rifle.

Two days later, Hawkins died without having made a statement. Whatever threat he feared, he apparently kept to himself, investigators said. They have found no one in whom he confided, including his wife.

"I really can't figure why my husband was killed," Nancy Hawkins said. "He treated everyone alike, fair and to his face."

The note, found almost two weeks ago by Cook County Sheriff's police, and ballistics evidence identifying the rifle used in the shooting are the only solid clues investigators have.

"We're sure that whoever shot him wanted him dead by virtue of the number of shots fired," Sgt. Arthur Jackson, who found the letter among personal papers in Hawkins' village office, said Sunday. "It was definitely someone who knew the mayor's habits."

The shooting followed a four-day police strike over Hawkins' order to drop six officers from the 21-member police force. They were hired for the village of 3,000 with federal training grants.

Hawkins, a reformer serving his second term in the part-time job, cited the federal government's cutback on the training money for the reduction.

Less than an hour after announcing the cutbacks, a bullet from a .38-caliber pistol fired from a passing car shattered the front window of his home.

Hawkins, who worked as a steel plant foreman during the day, reacted by arming himself and starting negotiations with the police. Investigators said the talks, which eventually resulted in the rehiring of all the fired officers, were well along toward ending the dispute when Hawkins was gunned down.

"We are talking to all of the police officers as a matter of procedure," Jackson said. "But they are not suspects and we don't view them as such."

Another ongoing probe by sheriff's police into reputed gambling operations in the town led to speculation that Hawkins was ordered killed by a syndicate operator upset by police investigations.

90-year-old man gets diploma 62 years late

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Keith B. Merrill got his diploma this week from Iowa State University — 62 years after he completed college.

Merrill, 90, had enlisted in the air service a few days before he was scheduled to receive his diploma in 1917.

He returned home from World War I in 1918, got married on Christmas Day, and went on to become a draftsman for an engineering firm, a field engineer for a cement company and the owner of a surety business.

But the diploma never arrived. The notation that he had completed the graduation requirements was on the back of his records instead of the front.

Iowa State officials caught the error a year ago and on Monday, they gathered at Merrill's apartment for a surprise presentation.

Arizona and Mexico may get new private airline services soon

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP)—Southern Arizona and northern Mexico cities and some neighboring states may get a new private airline service, Douglas Chamber of Commerce manager Marvin Rivenburgh says.

Rivenburgh, who met Thursday with area business representatives as well as representatives of three Mexican cities, said a questionnaire has been sent to 500 area individuals and organizations to determine whether the air service is warranted.

If it appears there is sufficient freight and passenger business to support the service, it could begin as early as January, Rivenburgh said.

He said a group of three New York City pilots and three other New Yorkers is willing to put up the $3 million necessary to obtain two 19-passenger twin-engine turbo-prop aircraft if the response were strong enough. He declined to identify them.

After reorganizing, FCC still backlogged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has reorganized and improved its procedures but still faces a large backlog of applications and dozens of major policy decisions, its chairman said today.

Charles D. Ferris, testifying before the House communications subcommittee, sought to provide an overview of the commission's activities over the past six months.

He listed significant decisions in four important areas since the subcommittee last reviewed the FCC, but his list of pending issues was more than three times as long.

Following a similar hearing last April, Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., subcommittee chairman, expressed concern over the FCC's apparent inability to move with greater speed on such issues as deregulation of cable television. "As you know, the FCC is engaged in a searching re-examination of many of its existing rules and regulatory policies," Ferris said. "Advances in communications technologies are having a significant impact upon the structure and economics of the entire marketplace...."

The FCC has moved to improve its internal management to better handle the issues raised by technological advances, Ferris said, as well as "to correct longstanding organizational and planning deficiencies identified by the General Accounting Office."

But the role of competition in industries ranging from radio to cable TV to telephones is forcing a complete reassessment with an eye toward deregulation, and final decisions are still in the future, he said.

Elb Despain is 81, tall, lanky, in superb shape for his age and has been carrying the mail for 57 years, longer than any other mailman in the United States. He has done his job on horseback, by buggy, rail car, sleigh, skis, mail truck and station wagon in the high mountains of Utah. (Times Photo by Steve Fontanini)

Elb Despain, 81, still delivers mountain mail

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

SANDY, Utah — People living along the 18-mile stretch of Little Cottonwood Canyon leading to Snowbird and Alta ski resorts are quick to say:

"Do not despair, Elb Despain is there."

Despain, 81, tall, lanky and in superb shape for his age, is the canyon mailman. He has been on the job for 57 years.

He has carried the mail on horseback and by buggy, rail car, sleigh, skis, mail truck and station wagon.

He has been stuck in snowbanks, buried by avalanches, injured in train wrecks and bitten by dogs.

One time he spent six hours digging out two men buried under a snowslide inside a truck. He saved one man's life, but was unable to reach the other in time to save him.

Then he continued on his rounds and finished his route after dark.

Recently, Despain renewed his contract with the U.S. post office at Sandy to deliver the mail until he is 85.

"When I first started the route July 1, 1922, I was paid $1,800 a year. Now I get more than five times that — $10,543 a year," Elb said. "I can't quit now. I'm having too much fun. I've got many good friends to chew the fat with up and down the canyon and at the ski resorts. I get a thrill out of the beauty of the canyon every time I drive it and I still enjoy the challenge of getting the mail through..."

He married his wife, Miriam, five years after he started the route. They've been together 52 years.

"When I first took the job in 1922, there were no ski resorts on the mountain. There were only a bunch of silver, lead, zinc and gold mines up there," Despain said.

There were no roads leading to Alta. The miners got in and out by narrow-gauge railroad. I converted a truck into a my rail mail car and used for six years. Then one day the brakes went out and the car flew off the track."

One of the passengers was killed but Despain suffered only cuts and bruises. "Whenever I get bogged down in snowstorms I strap the mail on my back and finish the route on skis even to this day," he said.

His route winds its way up a steep grade to Snowbird and Alta above the 8,700-foot elevation mark.

Dancers reject ballet contract

NEW YORK (AP) — What was called a "final contract offer" by the American Ballet Theater has been rejected on economic grounds in a unanimous vote of 72 of the company's dancers.

The rejection last week of the proposed three-year contract could dash the last hope for salvaging a four-week season that had been scheduled to open Dec. 5 in Washington, D.C. That performance was to be the ABT debut of Soviet defector Alexander Godunov.

The ABT canceled rehearsals and locked out its ballet corps Oct. 29, charging the dancers, members of the American Guild of Musical Artists, with pressing demands far beyond the financial capabilities of the company.

Under federal mediation, the dancers reduced their demands from what management said had been a bid for a 75 percent pay and benefit increase in a two-year pact. Frank Smith, spokesman for the dancers, did not disclose the terms of the rejected offer. Earlier, the ABT offered a 22 percent wage increase.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Heart transplants effective but costly

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father suffered a heart attack almost 10 years ago, but has been doing well since then. He began watching his diet, lost weight and stopped smoking. He feels better now than he did before the attack. For people not that fortunate, I was wondering about the value of heart transplants. How effective are they? — Gina.

Dear Gina: Judging from your description, your father would not have been a candidate for a heart transplant, a procedure reserved for patients with end-stage cardiac disease. However, those for whom the operation is indicated now have a successful outcome three-fourths of the time.

Ten years ago the survival rates for patients undergoing heart transplant surgery were poor, and many surgeons gave up on the procedure. Today, says Dr. John Speer Schroeder, a cardiologist at the Stanford University School of Medicine, transplants potentially could extend the lives of 75,000 Americans each year. Not only is the survival rate high, but rehabilitation of the patient is excellent.

A major obstacle, however, lies in the difficulty of finding enough donor hearts. Some states have helped ease this problem by permitting doctors to declare a patient dead when the brain no longer functions, even though the heart and lungs may still be kept going by a machine. Another problem is the extremely high cost of the procedure — $50,000 for the first year at Stanford, only 50 percent of which is covered by insurance.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have low back pain, and my doctor told me that I was probably not sleeping correctly. But, he never told me how to sleep correctly. Any suggestions? — Mrs. T.W.

Dear Mrs. T.W.: I have found that in several of my patients, wrong sleep positions will cause low back pain. I recommend that those who have low back pain sleep lying on their side with both knees bent. Try it; it may help you sleep better and it may take the strain off your lower back. Call your physician first and see if this position is agreeable to him.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Your recent column on treating migraines was of specific interest to me because I have seen temporomandibular joint dysfunction as a cause of migraine. Patients with migraine have come to me after numerous visits to physicians' offices and hospital stays for brain scans and other diagnostic tests, only to continue having the pain of migraine.

I take a diagnostic test with the Mandibular Kinesiograph, which is an oscilloscope giving graph readings of mandibular (jaw) movements and muscle spasm. As a rule, a mandibular orthopedic appliance is made. This appliance is fitted over the lower teeth to orientate the mandible to the skull. After this treatment most of my patients have stopped taking many of the drugs you mentioned in your article. — Bernard S. Margolis, D.D.S., El Paso, Texas.

CHEVRON ANNOUNCES RECORD INVESTMENTS

Chevron's expenditures for energy in the U.S. for nine months 1979 were more than double Chevron's U.S. earnings.

You've heard a lot about Chevron's worldwide earnings. But, did you know our U.S. earnings for the first nine months this year were up only 18%... just modestly above background inflation?

And did you know that Chevron generated these earnings from a U.S. investment base of over six billion dollars... a return of only 10%?

Meanwhile, Chevron's U.S. capital and exploration expenditures for energy development were up 54%... to almost one billion dollars.

Historically, Chevron's reinvestment in U.S. energy projects has exceeded its U.S. profits.

And profits produce energy. For example, in the last three months Chevron has:

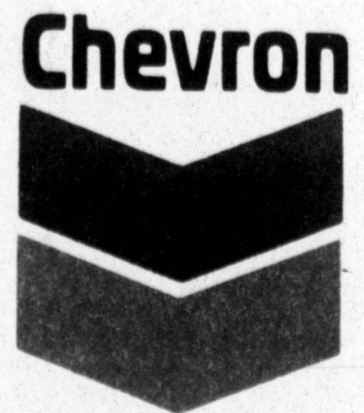

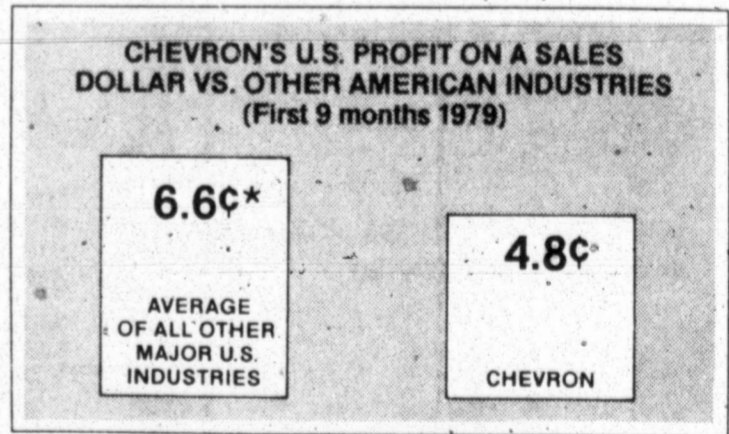

- Discovered new oil in California, Louisiana, Wyoming and Oklahoma and Texas
- Discovered new gas in Oklahoma and Texas
- Installed new offshore production platforms in Southern California and the Gulf of Mexico

Chevron is also investing in alternate energy sources... geothermal, oil shale, tar sands, coal gasification, uranium and solar energy.

America's energy problem is everybody's business. So it's important that you know how our earnings are used. Far from being a case for "punitive action," our energy investments are proof of Chevron's commitment to help make America more energy independent.

Thank you for listening.

Maestro Ormandy marks 80th birthday on Sunday

By TERRY TAYLOR

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Violinist Isaac Stern played "Happy Birthday" and congratulatory telegrams poured in from around the world.

Maestro Eugene Ormandy's 80th birthday was celebrated Sunday at an elegant dinner, where he was toasted by friends and members of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Fireworks crackled over the city's historic waterfront, and the All-Philadelphia Boys Choir serenaded the white-haired conductor and his wife, Gretel.

Birthday greetings came from Soviet, Chinese and West German officials, as well as from U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, Vice President Walter Mondale, Mayor Frank Rizzo, Gov. Dick Thornburgh and pianist Vladimir Horowitz.

"If this is 80, then it feels very good, but I only feel half as old," said Ormandy, who is stepping down after this, his 44th and final season, in favor of 39-year-old Riccardo Muti. Ormandy has promised to make frequent appearances as the orchestra's conductor emeritus.

"Forty-four years is a long time, but it never seemed a long time to me. Philadelphians love their orchestra and the world loves their orchestra," said Ormandy, who was kissed, hugged and patted by his well-wishers.

"It isn't the conductor in Philadelphia, it's the great audience," added the diminutive orchestra leader, who wore a gray suit and a white rosebud pinned in his lapel.

About 350 guests, including orchestra members, officials and their spouses turned out for the party.

A string quartet played as guests dined on Beethoven's loin of veal with sauce Pastorale, turbans of sole Debussy with sauce La Mer, and Chopin's cauliflower Polonaise.

Ormandy's blue eyes twinkled when he saw his birthday cake, a large violin-shaped torte, but what truly seemed to delight him was the "singing telegram" from the orchestra.

To the tune of "Can Can," Carole McLeigh and Molly Daly of The Singing Telegram Co., sang lines such as, "When rehearsing you've been known to ask for more. You're the only one they'd do it for."

Shells, shackle raised from sunken Confederate warship, CSS Georgia

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Ten high-explosive shells, a shackle and what may be part of a whiskey bottle have been raised from the sunken Confederate ironclad warship CSS Georgia, researchers say.

It was the first large group of artifacts recovered by U.S. Army Corps of Engineers divers.

"All the shells we recovered today were for the 6.4-inch Brooke rifle," a large naval cannon, archaeologist Rick Anuskiewicz said. "They all weigh 73 pounds, except one that was a bit smaller and weighed about 10 pounds less."

"All of them had (safety) pins in them and all of them had water in them, which neutralizes them," he said Sunday. "Water leeches out part of the gunpowder and renders the shell inert in terms of the explosive power."

The shells were found in the Savannah River shipping channel.

The other artifacts included "the base end of a spirits bottle, amber in color and very thick, with a lot of impurities in the glass," Anuskiewicz said.

"Also a device that looks like a set of shackles, a rod 10 to 11 inches long" with U-shaped brackets at each end. "To me it looks like a pair of ankle irons that you'd have in the brig."

The wreck of the Georgia, a 10-gun, 150-foot ironclad built in 1862 to defend Savannah from the Union Navy, lies on the edge of the channel in 30 feet of water about two miles downstream from the city.

The Georgia was scuttled by its crew when Union Gen. William T. Sherman's army captured Savannah at the end of Sherman's march to the sea from Atlanta in 1864.

It is a potential hazard to navigation and the corps is studying the possibility of raising and restoring it as part of a historical exhibit at Fort Jackson, which also was a part of Savannah's defenses.

In the twirling competition, Midland High School students receiving a I rating in solo competition included Darci Daehling, Gail Griggs, Lori Koeppen, Karen Kuykendall, Tammy Locklar, Angi Rasco, Laura Shelton and Gina Stumpf. Christi Squires received a II rating. Receiving a I rating in ensemble were Miss Daehling, Miss Griggs, Sheila Hibbits, Miss Koeppen, Miss Kuykendall, Miss Stumpf and Miss Locklar.

Saving energy—and energy dollars—in your home can be as simple as using energy wisely.

For example, make sure filters are kept clean in your furnace, air conditioner and clothes dryer. This ensures units are operating efficiently. And using less energy.

For additional savings on heating and cooling, keep drapes closed for extra insulation on overcast winter days and hot summer days. But on sunny winter days, open them to let the warm sunshine in.

And, turn off ALL appliances when you're not using them. When you stop and think of the many ways you use electricity, you'll see what an energy saver this can be!

For more information—and a lot more tips—get the TIPS booklet from Texas Electric. Just call Texas Electric or ask for the booklet on the comments section of your next electric bill.

At Texas Electric, we're trying to help you keep your electric bill down.

Rampaging Redskins ravage Dallas, 34-20

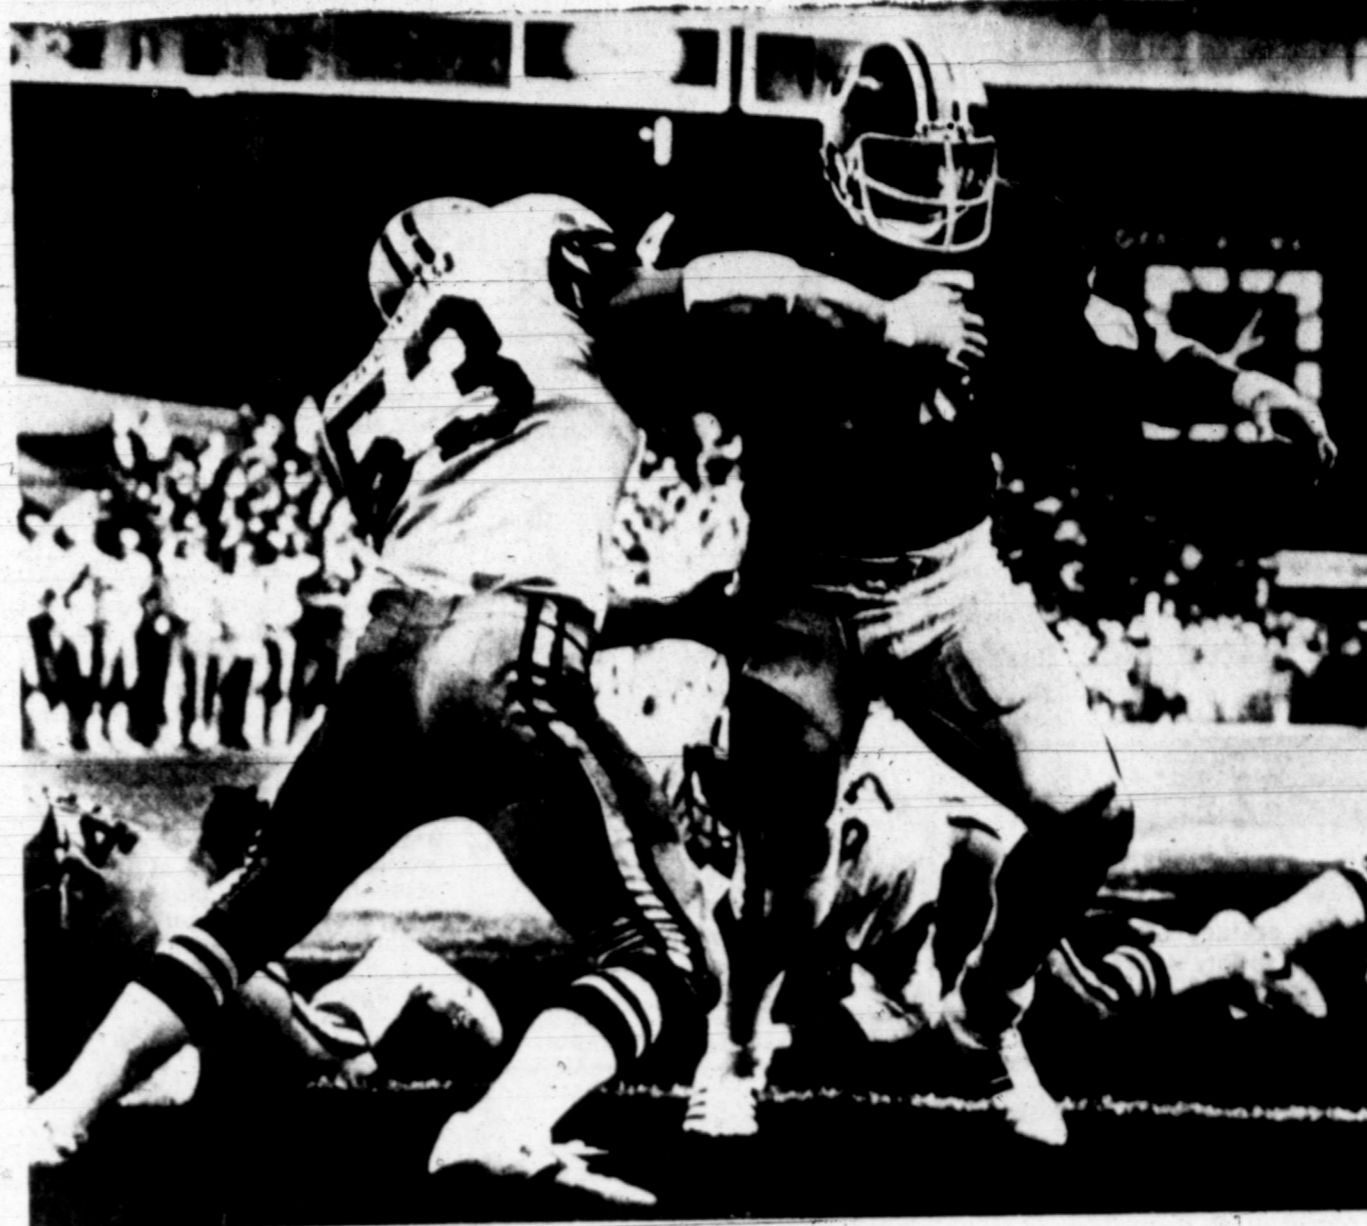

By TOM SEPPY WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins have made the National Football Conference East as tight as it can be...

Oilers charge into tie for 1st

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips hasn't gone to his bull pen too often this season...

Oilers to a 9-3 record, equal to Pittsburgh, which lost to San Diego 35-7.

Without any change in tempo, Nielsen shook off four games of inactivity, completing his first six passes and leading the Oilers to a 42-21 victory...

Then, with 3:45 to go in the half, Pastorini was poked in the eye and spent the rest of the game on the sidelines with a white patch over his right eye.

Look at bright side

If you think things are bad for the Dallas Cowboys, look at the silver lining. What, for instance, if the Cowboys had lost to the New York Giants...

After the loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers, the Cowboys' performances before the Giants and Eagles might be written off as the post-Pittsburgh doldrums...

The Cowboys were supposed to play better with their backs to the wall, but Sunday that wasn't the case. It looked more like a case of lingering complacency...

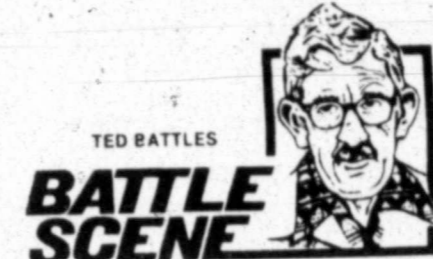

In fact, it would appear that the Cowboys are plain fat and lazy, unwilling to work for their yardage.

And to compound matters, the Cowboys continue to encourage opponents with deliberate and inexcusable mistakes...

After narrowing the gap to 17-6 against Washington in the third quarter, a couple of late hits on two little or no gain plays gave the Redskins first downs and kept alive the touchdown drives that insured Dallas' of its second straight defeat.

But the verdict may have been rendered in the first half when the Cowboys, trailing 14-3, reached the Washington 10 in the final two minutes...

Instead, quarterback Roger Staubach was blitzed so hard he fumbled and the opportunity to exert some pressure on the Redskins was frittered away. It was that way all afternoon. The Cowboys were decimated by the blitz, the Redskins laughed at Dallas' feeble attempts to put pressure on quarterback Joe Theismann...

The Cowboys abandoned their attempts to run the ball after falling behind 14-3, but even some of the Cowboys questioned the "surrender early" strategy.

That meant the Redskins were able to tee off on Staubach and despite the 23 for 38 day, the three interceptions the Skins forced Roger to throw were a far more significant statistic.

For years, the Cowboys' bottomless depth has been extolled by enraptured TV analysts, but put to the test, it hasn't turned out that way.

With the loss to Washington, the Cowboys find themselves in a three-way tie with Philadelphia and Washington for first place in the NFC East...

In fact, Dallas suddenly finds itself thinking in terms of a possible wild card ticket to the playoffs.

They rubbed our nose in it with the field goal," he said. "We will remember it. It will be something to remember in a couple of weeks and get us fired up."

With Charley Waters out for the season, opposing quarterbacks and wide receivers have found a happy hunting grounds in the Dallas secondary and have been swift to exploit it.

The Cowboys still have found an answer to the loss of Ed "Too Tall" Jones and Jethroe Pugh, longtime defensive stalwarts, and with Randy White out Sunday, Dallas' Doomsday defense looked like a refuge from the NFC Central.

Tony Dorsett may be a 100-yard runner, but he's no Preston Pearson. Those three muffed passes were a monkey wrench in the Cowboys' attack.

Sacrifice necessary, says Clements

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Decontrol of oil and gas prices is a sacrifice consumers must make to establish energy independence from the OPEC nations, Texas Gov. Bill Clements told his fellow Republican governors today.

Clements, who became a millionaire in the oil drilling business before being elected governor in 1978, took part in an energy panel at the Republican Governors' Association meeting here.

"Decontrol will increase prices for consumers, bringing them nearer the levels paid in other parts of the world, but those prices will also make available the capital necessary to establish energy independence and will make alternative energy source more economically competitive," Clements said.

He said any above-normal profits resulting from decontrol should be either put back into the search for and production of more energy or taxed at 100 percent.

He opposed the windfall profits legislation now before Congress, saying it would apply the money to such things as mass transit and helping the poor pay higher energy bills.

"I'm not opposed to these kinds of things, but I say to you, let's not get the money for these programs by taking it from energy industries and stripping them of the capital needed to solve our energy problem on a long term basis," he added.

In Sunday's session, coal ranked high as a topic during discussion among the governors and intergroup of candidates for the GOP presidential nomination.

"I assure you we will be listened to, because the people in Washington do not have the answers. They are engulfed in problems they don't understand," Rhodes told participants in the national Republican Governors Conference.

He spoke during a forum in which financial patrons of the conference got to rub elbows with governors in small group policy discussions, with governors reporting back on the consensus.

"With coal, we can stop all the imports," Rhodes said, adding that dependence on imported oil causes the United States to "bow and bend to the OPEC countries' every whim."

Rhodes also said the conference should go on record in favor of exploiting shale oil resources and other means to boost domestic oil production.

Gov. John Dalton of Virginia, who moderated the energy discussions, said inflation and energy are related problems.

"If we solve the energy problem, we go a long way in solving the inflation problem. By cutting our oil imports by 50 percent we can have a balance-of-payments surplus which would greatly help our inflation problem," Dalton said.

He, too, urged relaxation of federal environmental restraints against the burning of coal.

"The federal government should pay utility companies, commercial buildings and industry for their costs to convert oilers and generators back to coal," Dalton said.

He said delays in federal licensing of a Virginia nuclear reactor completed in June 1978 are costing Virginians $14 million a month — the difference between the cost of oil that is being burned and the uranium that would produce the same amount of electricity.

Gov. Lee Dreyfus of Wisconsin said it was "clear the public is getting ready to do something serious about conservation. The inconvenience of conservation will build the nation resolve to do something about producing energy."

He also spoke of the heavy impact of energy shortages on international relations.

"If there is a World War III, it will be over energy and not territory," he said.

In a discussion of defense issues, Texas Gov. Bill Clements, former deputy secretary of defense, said it was the unanimous view of people in a small group discussion he chaired that the news media do not report defense matters well.

Windfall profits tax one 'Christmas tree' ornament

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every year about this time, it seems, the Senate considers a tax bill. With almost the same regularity, senators turn the bill into a "Christmas tree."

The "ornaments" on that "tree" are amendments aimed at providing tax relief for one purpose or another. The tree-trimming ceremony this year is right on time.

The Senate is debating a slimmed-down version of the oil industry "windfall-profits" tax proposed by

ENERGY OIL & GAS

President Carter. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, is ready with the first ornament, and other senators are standing in line.

Bentsen wants to allow each person tax-free interest of up to $500 a year ($1,000 for a couple) from savings accounts. Present law taxes all such interest, although a $100 exemption for dividends is allowed.

The Senate was debating the tax bill today and Tuesday before adjourning for the holidays until next Monday. The House is taking off the full week.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., who is managing debate on the bill, agrees with Bentsen that taxpayers deserve some incentives for savings. But, he told colleagues on Friday, he's afraid what might happen if Bentsen's amendment is added to the bill.

"If this is going to be a Christmas tree bill, I don't see why we all shouldn't get a chance to put on a few ornaments," Long said. If there's going to be a big tax cut, he added, "why give it just to those persons with savings?"

Long noted that Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., already has proposed an amendment to earmark some of the revenues from the windfall tax for across-the-board income-tax reductions. Others are pressing amendments to give businesses a faster tax write-off for buildings and equipment.

Once the floodgates are opened, Long added, there's no way to say where the tax-cutting fever will end.

Bentsen said the nation's rate of savings has dropped so low — about 5 percent of income compared with 25 percent in Japan — that emergency action to correct it is necessary.

Inflation is worsened because Americans, fearful of ever-higher prices, are spending rather than saving, Bentsen said.

"People are buying things because they know the value ... is going up, up, up," added Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill. But there is no incentive to save, he added, because while a passbook savings account generally earns no more than 5 1/2 percent a year, inflation is more than wiping out any such earnings.

On top of that, Percy noted, a person must pay income taxes on the interest.

The Bentsen-Percy amendment would allow individuals a tax exemption for the first $100 ($200 for couples) of interest earned in 1981 from an account in a bank, credit union or savings and loan association. The exemption would rise gradually to $500 a year in 1985 ($1,000 for couples).

This would cost the government up to $1 billion in lost taxes in 1981 and $5 billion in 1985.

Although Long is fighting the addition of any unrelated amendments to the oil-bill, his Senate Finance Committee actually started the trim-the-tree exercise. By a unanimous vote, the panel attached to the bill an amendment repealing a major 1976 provision on inheritance taxes.

The oil tax itself can provide enough controversy to keep the Senate going for several weeks.

The committee's version would cost the oil industry an estimated $138 billion from 1980 through 1990. The new tax and existing state and federal income taxes would take about 66 percent of the additional revenue that will flow to the oil industry because of Carter's decision to phase out federal price controls on U.S. crude oil.

The House-passed bill, which is more to Carter's liking, would cost the industry $277 billion. The total tax take under that bill would be about 87 percent.

Despite the title, the Senate bill would tax not profits but a portion of future price increases above current levels.
