WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter, dedicating the national Christmas tree tonight, has decided to leave it unlit again to honor the 52 Americans who may have to spend their second Christmas as hostages in

But the president's action to keep the tree dark for a second straight year may not meet with universal approval from hostage families.

If it were up to her, said Louisa Kennedy, wife of hostage Moorehead Kennedy, the tree would be lit.

'I think it should be lit because it's there for many other reasons," she said Dec. 2, the day hostage wife Penne Laingen was hoisted in a crane and placed the crowning ornament atop the tree. Her husband is L. Bruce Laingen, who was charge d'affaires in Tehran when the embassy was seized.

"It's an institution that should go on the way all our institutions should go on, regardless of what takes place in Iran," Mrs. Kennedy said.

Hostage family members will participate in the ceremony de-dicating the living 30-foot blue spruce, which has served as the national Christmas tree since

It is on the Ellipse, a garden south of the White House. Smaller trees, for each state, territory and the District of Columbia, are nearby.

Bell ringers, bands, choral and gospel groups will perform every evening from Friday to next Tuesday near the base of the tree, an occasion which each year draws thousands of visitors to the site.

Chlorinated water linked with cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Chlorine, the chemical that keeps 80 percent of America's drinking water free of disease, has been linked to several types of cancer in a new study.

The report on "Drinking Water and Cancer," released Wednesday by the President's Council on Environmental Quality, found that death statistics in five states provided fresh evidence to support "an association between rectal, colon and bladder cancer" and chlorinated water.

But officials of the Environmental Protection Agency — which sets the country's drinking water standards said the new study did nothing to change their position that the benefits of chlorine far outweigh the risks.

Indeed, study researchers conceded the study did not take into account other factors that could alter cancer death rates, including smoking and

The use of chlorine in city water systems became widespread early in the century. The chemical kills a variety of disease-carrying organisms, including bacteria that carry cholera and typhoid germs. "Chlorine is a very effective disinfectant. It has saved countless thou-sands of lives," said Dr. Joseph Co-truvo of the EPA.

The Council on Environmental Quality study was a follow-up to a 1977 report by the National Academy of Sciences, which raised the first scientific questions of cancer threats from chlorinated water.

The new studies analyzed death statistics in Illinois, Louisiana, New York, North Carolina and Wisconsin to see if cancer rates differed between people who drank chlorinated water and those who did not.

The study said the chance of dying from rectal cancer rose between 13 percent and 97 percent and noted slightly lower increases for the other two types of cancer among groups that drank chlorinated water.

That would mean if 20 persons in a population of 100,000 that did not drink chlorinated water died of rectal cancer, the level of deaths among chlorine water drinkers could be expected to increase to between 22 and 38.

While the study found up to a twofold increase in cancer deaths among people who drank chlorinated water, by comparison, smokers have 10 times the chance of developing lung cancer as non-smokers.

Dr. Robert Harris, one of three members of the Council on Environmental Quality, said the study provides "significant evdence of increased cancer risks from drinking chlorinated water which should be of Assessing the study, EPA Assistant Administrator Victor Kim, in charge of its drinking water program, said the agency took steps in November to lessen risks from chlorine by requiring cities to reduce the level of chlorination by-products in water - known as trihalomethanes. The EPA has given cities à year to cut those levels to 100 parts per billion.

Harris said the new standard is a good start but he called on the agency to tighten the requirement. He said the public needs to find out the level of trihalomethanes in its drinking water and, if it is above the EPA limits, consider using bottled water or buying a filter.

Jury deliberating in McPeters trial

Patricia "Patty" McPeters, the Odessa widow who is accused of plotting the death of her husband last July, is holding steadfast to her con-tention that she had nothing to do with his stabbing death even as the jury was to begin deliberation on her guilt or innocence today.

Mrs. McPeters took the witness stand Tuesday and Wednesday in the final days of the trial that began Dec.

She contended that she left her husband following a marital quarrel in Abilene on July 19, took the couple's 31/2-year-old child, D.J, and linked up with a former high school acquaintance. Thus began a 10-day fling that culminated in the stabbing death of 46-year-old James David McPeters off a service road between Midland and Odessa on July 28. Mrs. McPeters, 27, testified that she and her husband had parting words at Abilene's Amvets Post barpool room, where she was more or less reunited with Rex Shanks, the high school acquintance, after her husband had forgotten to recognize her July 19th birthday. "I just felt neglected," she testified and allowed that in the four years she had lived with McPeters that he had abused her and their child. She said she was "unhappy" with her hus-

"Did that make you mad enough to kill him or to have him killed,' her defense attorney, Leonard Howell, asked.

'No, sir," she calmly replied. Throughout her testimony, Mrs. McPeters repeatedly maintained that she had nothing to do with the death of her husband.

Earlier testimony related that she and Shanks, 27, drove to Wichita Falls on July 26 and picked up Wayne Jennings, 19, and his wife, who then was his fiancee, and returned to Odessa by way of Abilene.

Jennings testified that Mrs. McPeters offered him $7,000 to help Shanks "get back at" - to kill - her

His 22-year-old wife, Tammy Karlic Jennings, a witness to the slaying, testified that Shanks offered her husband money to join in the killing of McPeters. Mrs. Jennings has been granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for her testimony.

Mrs. McPeters, Jennings and Shanks are all indicted for murder and, if convicted, could be sentenced from five years to 99 years or to life in Shanks, whom Howell had subpoenaed to testify on behalf of his client, declined to waive his rights and the Fifth Amendment for fear of self-incrimination. Jennings, however, waived his rights and testified for the prosecution. He said Mrs. McPeters had plotted her husband's death.

In subjecting herself to questioning Prosecutor David Joers, McPeters apparently contradicted herself in her "confession" to Sher-iff's Deputy Jim Atwater in early August and in her court testimony.

The defendant's statement indicated that she was aware that "Rex and Wayne were going to kill (her hus-band) David" but that she was "scared." Both men had been drinking heavily, her statement said.

On the witness stand, however, she said that she was not suspicious that something sinister was brewing when Shanks broke into her husband's house on July 27 and took a butcher knife and a smaller knife.

She said she thought nothing about Jennings placing a shotgun in the trunk of her car in Wichita Falls on

In Odessa, on Sunday, July 27, Mrs. McPeters said that she had telephoned her husband from a convenience store and said she wanted to talk to him about a divorce.

Later that day, she said that she was coerced by Jennings and Shanks to telephone her husband from the Warfield Truck Stop between Midland and Odessa and to set up McPeters for murder. She told her husband that her car had broken down and that Shanks was in Abilene; McPeters apparently was upset that his wife was with the Abilene man. Mrs. McPeters testified that she and her son were in the supposedly disabled car and that Shanks and Jennings were hiding when her husband drove up to help her.

Mrs. McPeters said Shanks and Jennings lurched at her husband. "I could hear a scuffle going on," she testified. "I wasn't looking out the window. I was scared. I was holding

Ms. Garner then stressed the urgency of the State Legislature in appropriating $300,000 for the Texas senior citizens. It would be used to obtain $7 million in federal funds to provide services for the aging. Ector County Judge Gary Watkins echoed the idea, pointing out that nutritional programs in the area would have to be stopped if the money isn't available.

Other ideas outlined by Ms. Garner included making the state pay fees of attorneys appointed by the court to represent indigent defendants, forcing the State Highway Department to cough up 25 to 50 percent of the cost of rights of way for FM road construction and emphasizing local community services by the Mental Health-Mental Retardation Association.

DALLAS (AP) - Mutual Southwest, a five-state regional radio network that was born three years ago and won a bidding war for broadcast rights to college and professional football is folding its news operations

Although the network has over 115 stations, Mutual officials say financial problems stemming from a lack of advertising revenues prompted the decision to pull the plug.

"The termination really (involves) the daily broadcasts of Texas and southwest regional news," said John charge of the Dallas-based operation. since the 1930s. 'The concept was really received well, but it didn't receive the enthusiasm of the advertisers.'

The network, a regional spinoff of the national Mutual Broadcasting System, was formed in early 1978 and quickly outbid long-established networks for the rights to Southwest Conference football and the professional Dallas Cowboys.

The Cowboys had been aired over

Butler, Mutual vice president in work had handled SWC broadcasts

Those lucrative contracts will not be affected by the shutdown, Butler said, and a regional sales office will be maintained in Dallas.

The Cowboy contract with Mutual has another year to run, while the SWC contract expires at the close of the 1982 season.

The football rights were a major factor in Mutual Southwest's growth, the Texas State Network, a long-established, 150-station network.

"I don't think there's any question that the rights to the Dallas Cowboys and the Southwest Conference had a lot to do with their growth," Craft said. "They didn't have a dozen affiliates until the got the rights ... We had affiliates who had had the Dallas Cowboys for a dozen years who didn't want to stop carrying them."

TSN picked up the Houston Oilers after Dallas jumped to Mutual Southwest and Craft refused to say if his network would try to get the Cowboy

"Let's just say my response was anything is possible," he said.

But Craft pointed out that the Cowboy nentworkd flagship station is owned by Metromedia, a broadcast conglomerate that purchased TSN earlier this year.

Metromedia President George Duncan does not think TSN will pick up a large number of affiliates because of Mutual Southwest's demise.

"If we get more affiliates it won't be because of this," Duncan said. "The basic product that Mutual

Southwest was providing was sports features. Those folks that want to continue receiving the sports features WASHINGTO

Carter papers also in transition

WASHINGTON (AP) - A week or two before President Carter ownership rights. leaves office, the first of 15 to 20 big moving vans will pull up to the White House to begin carting away the presidential papers of

The trucks will be locked and sealed under military guard on a base near Washington and, after Ronald Reagan's Jan. 20 inauguration, will leave by convoy for Atlanta, Ga.

There, government archivists working in the basement of an old Post Office building will begin the long process of sorting and indexing the papers, first for Carter's and his aides' exclusive use in writing books or memoirs and later for unveiling to scholars. In the meantime, aides throughout the White House and Executive Office Building are sorting through their files, making copies of documents they hope Carter will let them keep. Carter has told his staff they may not take any presidential papers out of the White House unless they first get permission and sign an agreement not to quote from any document without Carter's approval. If they sign, he has promised them access to any papers they received or wrote.

Aides say Carter, the last president to own the vast store of paper created during a presidential term, offered the deal to guard against premature disclosure of potentially embarassing materials that he thinks could make future aides reluctant to give a president frank but unpopular advice.

Deputy White House counsel Michael H. Cardozo denied that the unprecedented clearance procedures are designed to give Carter continuing control over what his aides may say or write about him. And guidelines sent all staff members by chief of staff Jack H. Watson Jr. and counsel Lloyd N. Cutler make the same

"These obligations are not intended to inhibit in any way your freedom to write or talk about this administration's policies or practices," the memo says. "The president's approval will be confined to the publication or disclosure of presidential papers and will not be conditioned on prior review or approval of any comment the staff member desires to make.'

Still, the procedures give Carter continuing control an estimated 12,000 cubic feet of documents. Even aides' private notes, memos they wrote to themselves and invitations to White House parties belong to Carter under the president's interpretation of his The 1978 Presidential Records Act, which takes effect when

Carter leaves office, will make the papers of Ronald Reagan and future presidents the property of the government. They will be subject to public disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act after 12 years under control of the president whose White House created them.

Carter defines presidential papers as any records "created in the transaction of governmental operations" or that originated or were received at the White House - whether they are originals or copies. That includes "practically every scrap of paper around here," said one aide who asked not to be identified. The aide was one of several contacted Wednesday who was going through files trying to decide what to request copies of. Cardozo said a special office will be set up in the next few days to review staff members'

That may prove to be a huge task. For example, Domestic affairs adviser Stuart Eizenstat is known to have kept copious notes from all staff meetings and the voluminous files. Several aides have cited the scholarly senior staffer as one who wants to keep materials for use in future writing projects.

Others expected to write books or articles about their White House years, in addition to Carter, include former chief of staff Hamilton Jordan, press secretary Jody Powell and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

The guidelines say Carter could seek to collect damages from violators of the guidelines, but aides said the more practical sanction is implied: that Carter could deny access to his papers while they are in storage and even for many years after they are moved into the future Carter library.

The Reagan White House also may want to see some Carter administration documents, and Cardozo predicted such access would be granted as a courtesy.

During his successful effort to have his own papers exempted from the new presidential records law, Carter promised to give his papers to the government before he leaves office, but he hasn't yet done so. Cardozo said the deed, which will reserve Carter's access to the papers and empower him to decide who may see them, is in preparation but may not be completed before Carter's term

Both Iran, Iraq report long-range tiring

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Iraq repored today that its troops and helicopter gunships turned back another Iranian attempt to break the siege of the Iranian oil center of Abadan and killed 53 Iranian troops

With the Persian Gulf war in its 88th day, both sides reported long-range artillery exchanges, but no changes in the static battlefront. Pope John Paul II made a new appeal for peace, and the Palestine Liberation Organization was reported ready to launch another diplomatic effort to end the war.

Iraq said its forces also knocked out six tanks in repulsing the overnight Iranian breakout attempt.

Iran said Abadan's long-range artillery blasted the southern Iraqi highway that links Iraq's Persian Gulf oil terminal at Fao with the Iraqi port city of Basra on the northern tip of the Shatt al-Arab waterway Abadan is Iran's last major stronghold on the waterway.

Iraq invaded Iran's Khuzistan province in the first three weeks of the war in an attempt to bring the entire waterway under Iraqi control. But a two-month siege of Abadan and dally artillery and helicopter gunship bombardment of its giant refining complex has failed so far to bring surrender of the city.

Eyewitness reports in the Lebanese press said the city's remaining 150,000 inhabitants have no gasoline for their cars because air raids and fires stopped refining operations. But food and arms supplies were being flown into the beleaguered city by helicopters from other Iranian bases, the reports said.

Iran's official P)rs news agency said 10 Iraqi tanks and three armored personnel carriers were demolished by helicopter gunship raids near Abadan and around the Khuzistan capital of Ahwaz, 70 miles to the north.

Pars claimed 33 Iraqi troops were killed in the Abadan fighting and in paratroop attacks against Iraqi positions in Iran's snow-covered western highlands, 300 miles north of Abadan

Iraq conceded only 12 fatalities and claimed 19 Iranian soldiers were killed in fresh fighting near Khuzistan's key highway junction at Sunsangerd, 85 miles north of Abadan, and in the oothills of the Zagros Mountains in western Iran.

War claims could not be independently verified because reporters are barred from battle zones. Western military analysts believe neither country will be able to break the current standoff during the winter.

At the Vatican, Pope John Paul II called on Iraq and Iran "to show real readiness" to reach a negotiated settlement. Receiving credentials from a new Iraqi envoy to the Vatican, the pontiff noted that "distinguished international statesmen are endeavoring to initiate such negotiations. "I trust that they will be successful," the pope said. "I pray that God will give them strength and wisdom and prepare the hearts of all those involved in the conflict to accept the great blessing that is

Speaking in English, the pope told Ambassador Anwar Sabri Abdul Razzak that negotiations should be based on justice and mutual respect. "All have the duty to work for peace with dignity but also with constancy and courage," he said.

A senior official of the Palestine Liberation Organization said in a newspaper interview published today that the PLO was undertaking a fresh effort to end the war.

Decision on hearing is upheld

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)

— The state's highest court has upheld a justice's decision to close a courtroom during a pretrial hearing for two alleged gun runners, one of whom has been identified as a former CIA

Without comment, the seven-judge Court of Appeals unanimously refused Wednesday to hear an appeal by the New York Daily News and the New York Times of Justice Thomas Gillgan's decision barring the press and the public from the courtroom. At issue was a pre-trial hearing for Frank Terpil, 40, of McLean, Va., and George Korkala, 38, of Nutley, N.J.

The two were indicted in January in connection with an alleged plot to supply 10,000 machine guns for $2.5 million to federal undercover agents posing as Latin American revolution-

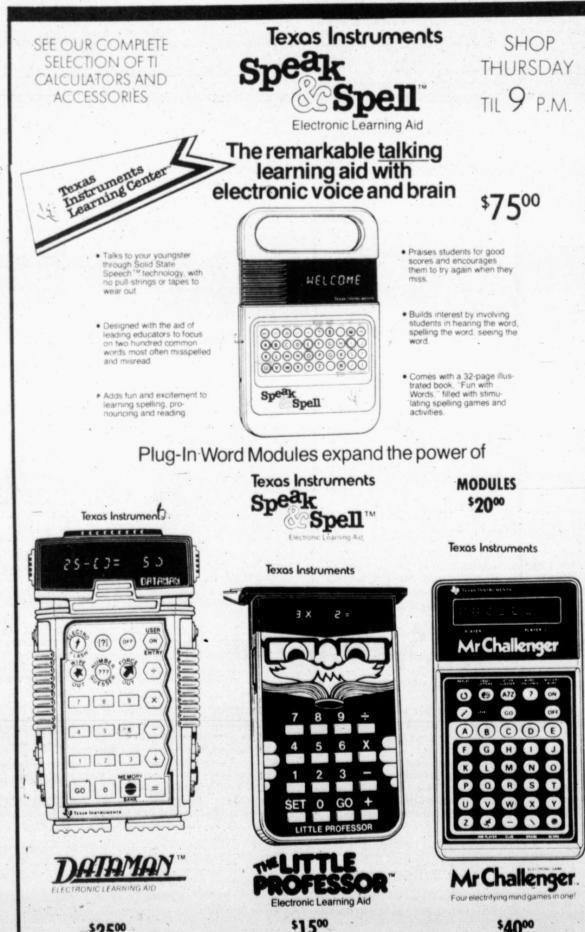

Agents contend the deal was struck last year in a London hotel room and allege that a down payment of $56,000 was made by the bogus revolutionaries.

Terpil has been identified as a former CIA agent.

At a Sept. 4 appearance before Galligan, attorneys for Terpil and Korkala said their clients' failure to appear with them in court was "involuntary."

In hearings into that allegation, the defense asked that a portion of the hearing be closed while they interrogated three assistant U.S. attorneys. The defense argued that testimony would "touch upon the security operations" of the United States and "might jeopardize" the life of one of the defen-

Galligan decided Oct. 7 to close that portion of the hearing. The newspapers appealed to the Appellate Division of state Supreme Court.

Poles given meat rationing cards

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Authorities began issuing meat rationing cards for the Christmas holidays this week, the first such cards seen here since the years immediately after World War II and a further sign of Poland's severe economic woes.

The cards will apparently apply only to meat purchased during the Christmas season and are not part of a previously announced rationing program that begins in February.

A government move to eliminate costly meat subsidies raised prices in July and prompted a wave of nationwide strikes that spawned a major union-government confrontation and brought the still-present possibility of Soviet intervention.

The strikers demanded a meat ra-

Total patient care plan adopted 'in concept' by MMH trustee board

By SUE FAHLGREN Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital's board of trustees voted to recommend adoption "in concept" of a total patient care plan Wednesday after hearing a 30-minute presentation of the plan by the Patient Support Service Com tee of the board and discussing the measure to provide other "emotional" services for the patients and their families.

The Committee recommended hiring a full-time social worker, a patient representative and a chaplain for the hospital within the next two years. In addition, it advocated setting up a "specialized volunteers program" in which trained volunteers would visit patients to help with their emotional well-being.

Trustees approved the plan "in concept," but asked for further research on specific parts of the plan and development of realistic time tables in implementing the programs. However, specific feelings of the trustees were mixed. Margaret Purvis, trustee and chairman of the Committee which has been conducting a study on these services for several months, reminded the board that to get local patients to come to the new Allison Cancer Center instead of M.D. Anderson in Austin, MMH would have to offer the patients exceptional care. "We have to offer them something more than M.D. Anderson in supporting our cancer patients," she said.

Mrs. Purvis said the Committee's plan would "enhance the care of the patient," and allow for an easier recovery period.

Trustee Gene Abbott was concerned about the cost of such a program. According to Operations Committee chairman Roy Campbell, the cost of the social worker and the patient representative for the remaining time under $29,000." Once the chaplain is added, the cost for the three new employees would be about $80,000 annually "If this is something we can afford, then I don't think there's anyone here that wouldn't want this," Abbott said. He explained, however, if such a plan would force increased rates, he would be opposed to its adoption. "Our rate: must be in line with everybody else,' he said.

George Veloz, another trustee, said he felt the charges would be justified "These kinds of projects help people understand why we charge them and what we're doing," he said.

Veloz said because the program would help the hospital's image and give patients a more positive reaction to their hospital stay, the patients would be more likely to pay their bills sooner. For that reason, Veloz said, the projects "will pay back a lot more than they cost us." He added rates would not have to be raised.

Campbell said, "If we reduced bad debts by 6 percent - and there were not another way to do this (provide funds) - that would fund this of this fiscal year would be "slightly

MMH directors urged to write off $120,972.30 for month

The Midland Memorial Hospital board of trustees were expected to recommend that directors write off $120,973.30 for the month of November this afternoon, in accordance with a vote taken Wednesday at the trustees regular monthly meeting.

According to John Grimland, chairman of that committee, the accounts being sent on to collection agencies currently represent 8.89 percent of the total hospital revenue.

Grimland also recommended the board ask the directors to transfer some $31,000 for indigent patients in November. Grimland said $11,687 of that figure would be transferred to a hospital in Lubbock where a Midland patient was sent for special care. The remaining amount would cover indigent expenses at Midland Memorial. Further, Robert Abernethy, assistant administrator of finance, reported a deficit for the month of November of $86,214. Compared to the budgeted $175,571 deficit for the month, the figures left a favorable variance Abernethy also reported accounts

In other trustee news, the board voted to recommend adoption of "the Baylor plan" for recruiting nursing staff for weekend work. According to Administrator Ray Branson, who suggested the plan, said it would pay nurses as full-time employees for working two 12-hours shifts on the weekend only.

The board also heard a report from Dr. Roberta Case on the implimentation of the quality assurance program for the medical staff.

Chen Boda pleads for lenient treatment

PEKING (AP) - A feeble Chen Boda, once Chairman Mao Tse-tung's political secretary and now called the "mad persecutor," threw himself on the mercy of the court today in the "Gang of Four" trial and pleaded: "I ask the party for lenient treatment."

Chen's plea came as the trial resumed after a four-day recess and the defense was given a chance to present arguments. The so-called gang was led by Mao's widow Jiang Qing, on trial for her life along with Chen and five former generals for alleged crimes committed during China's 1966-76 Cultural Revolution. "I plead guilty. I have nothing to say to defend myself," said Chen, 76, who had to be helped to a special padded chair in the dock. His voice was so weak that his words had to be repeated by a court announcer, whose voice was heard on the television broadcast of the trial session.

Two lawyers asked the court to spare the life of Chen, once No. 4 in the Chinese leadership. The lawyers argued leniency was warranted because Chen had demonstrated a good attitude by confessing.

They also said Chen shared responsibility for crimes of treason and persecution, but was not as guilty as Jiang Qing, official reports of the Chen, now labeled the "mad persecutor" by the press, confessed to all charges against him. He is accused of ordering actions aimed at former President Liu Shaoqi, who died in prison in 1969. Chen also is accused of ordering a frameup of thousands of persons in 1967 in Hebei province and almost 3,000 died as a result.

Defense lawyer Gan Yupei told the court Chen "cannot evade his responsibility," Peking Radio reported. He said Chen's actions alone did not directly cause the persecution of tens of thousands of persons.

"There were other factors which cannot be neglected," the lawyer said. Therefore Chen Boda should bear a certain degree of responsibility but not the entire respnsibility."

Chen was arrested and imprisoned in early 1971 after he opposed Mao The official Chinese news agency said Chen also told the court he learned that Jiang Qing wanted to command the army. Only gradually,

Chen said, did he see through her ambitions, the report said. In a parallel hearing, meanwhile, an ex-general also asked a military tribunal for mercy, Peking Radio reported. Wu Faxian, former air force commander, told the court he did not seek to defend himself or dispute

Ten members of the committee approved the report last Dec. 20, almost a year ago, but because of the presidential election it wasn't released until Wednesday. However, much of the report was made public through leaks to the press. Seven committee members abstained from voting on

The treaty, signed by President Carter and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev last year, is given no chance of passing the Senate in its current form.

Outgoing Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, one of those who abstained from voting, filed a statement saying, "A good agreement, a lasting and effective one, is one which each side finds in its own interest SALT II is such a fair and balanced document, which can be abandoned only at great risk, uncer-

He advocated "resuming negotiations with the Soviets to work out a revised SALT agreement which will be acceptable to the new administrato make it more favorable to the United States.

Another committee member who abstained, Sen. James J. Exon, D-Neb., said the original SALT II treaty "is indeed dead." "It is imperative that the new administration and Congress work more closely than ever before in establishing a new framework for relations with the Soviet Union," Exon added.

Others who abstained on the vote were Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the committee, and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C.

The members voting to submit the report were Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., Howard Cannon, D-Nev., Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind.-Va., John Tower, R-Texas, Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., John Warner, R-Va., Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., William Cohen, R-Maine, and Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa.

MC urges holiday season traffic safety

The holiday season is a time for family, friends and festivities - in other words, a time for caring. Midland College Traffic Safety Planning is suggesting it is a time we all show we care about one another by accepting greater responsiblity for traffic safety on streets and highways. In discussing holiday traffic fatalities, Sue Alford, dic education specialist with the program, emphasized that "the most precious gift any of us can give this season is the gift of life and by practicing good, safe driving habits, we can do just

Alford explained traffic accidents are the leading killer of Americans under 35 years old and are the leading cause of epilepsy and paraplegia. Also, one out of every 60 children born today will die in a traffic accident.

She added that a high concentration of these fatalities occur on holidays. To help people improve their driving and their friends' driving, Midland College has free traffic safety literature and information available to the

Some of the materials include "Party Guide," "Kids and Cars," "Symbol Scouts," "Traffic Safety Bingo," and various "Shell Answer Books."

"I am especially interested in seeing people read the 'Party Guide' and 'Kids and Cars' because if they would use that information, we could reduce two great highway losses - deaths caused by drunken drivers and deaths caused by unrestrained drivers and passengers," Alford said.

Since we all on the road at one time or another, traffic safety is, or should be, a concern of each of "The people who are dying on our streets and highways are our friends, neighbors and family; and we cannot stop this loss unless we all work to-

A shining reminder

Joe O'Neal was recognized and commended during Tuesday's meeting of the Midland City Council for his heroic rescue of four Midland children from a burning house here last week.

That's altogether fitting and proper. But while the commendation from the city is a noteworthy gesture, more needs to be said about O'Neal's courageous act.

Joe O'Neal may have been guided to that part of Midland last Friday by fate. He may have caught a glimpse of the fire by luck. But it was not fate or luck that compelled him to dash inside that burning house to save the four Williams children.

It was apparently with no thought for his own safety that O'Neil risked his life to save the children. Because of that commit-

O'Neal's willingness to get involved in the daily life around him is a reminder to us all of the difference our existence can make when we take an active role. It is a sad fact of today's society that all too often we don't get involved because we do not want to share the burdens and troubles of others.

Harassment really depends on who is harassing whom

ing the holiday season. Vandermeer told me about a party they held at Consolidated Grommets last week.

"I never saw anything like it," he said. "Zelda Blackstone slapped Harvey Firth in the kisser because she said he was harassing her.'

"Was he?" "I think so. But Zelda was really mad because Charlie Rollerdex in Sales wasn't harassing her instead.' "Then Zelda has nothing against office harassment per se? "No. If she doesn't like the guy, she calls it harassing. If she does like him, and he makes a pass at her, she calls it romance. The trouble is if the one guy she likes doesn't make a pass at her, then she gets sore at anyone else who does.

"So who was Charlie harassing?" "He was all over Clara Southworthy in Accounting, but I'm not sure he was harassing her. At least she didn't complain when he took off with her toward the mailroom.' 'Where were you?

"I was harassing a little blonde in the typing pool, but then Colfax joined us and she decided she'd rather be harassed by him. Colfax has a reputation for harassing anything in a found Miss Featherstone, the boss' secretary, on her fourth vodka. She was a different person from the one I had seen before. She said she hated harassment in the office, but she wouldn't mind if we went to her place after the party. Then she had another vodka and passed out.

"Lucky for you. She could have pressed charges with the Equal Employment Opportunities Commis-

"I thought of that. It's pretty tricky in a big company about who you harass and who you don't. George Kilbride thought he was getting signals from Lila Peabody in Research and Development. So he approached her at the party and asked her to dance, and she started screaming her head off. She said George just wanted to dance with her because she was a woman. She said he'd never treat a man in the office like that.

"He probably wouldn't. Did you calm her down?

"I think I did. I explained to her that people lose their heads at Christmas office parties and they'll dance with anybody. 'Did she accept that?"

Not really. She said she wanted to be promoted on her merits and not who she danced with. I told her if she danced with me, her reputation would be safe because I had nothing to do with promotions in Research and Development.' 'Did anyone else get harassed?'

"Lots of people, but as the evening wore on no one was making a big deal of it, except Mary Kelly in Computers. She was crying because she had been with the company five years and she had never been harassed once. Then she started taking off her clothes

'That must have livened up things.

"It had the opposite effect. Corngold in Personnel threw a tablecloth over her because he was afraid that when she sobered up she'd sue the company for a million dollars."

'But no one harassed her when she took off her clothes?'

'No, that's why he was afraid she'd civil defense planners. There are thousands of these "emergency operating centers" now in existence, dating back to the days following the Cuban missile crisis in 1962. These centers should be blast-resistant and equipped with reliable communications systems. But the FEMA report found that most of these centers are in pitiful condition, and would be useless in the event of nuclear attack.

GATHERING NUTS: Throughout its history, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has had to keep tabs on an incredible number of cuckoos, and until his death in 1972 Director J. Edgar Hoover wanted to be kept informed on all of them.

One far-out organization that drew the FBI's — and Hoover's — attention was the "Silver Shirts of America," a Nazi-like group founded by one William Pelley in Asheville, N.C. Anti-Semitic and anti-communist, it flourished in the 1930s and numbered thousands of adherents. Pelley made a comfortable living writing publications and selling uniforms.

According to a "personal and confidential" letter to Hoover from the Charlotte, N.C., FBI office in the early 1930s, an unidentified Oregonian had received a visionary "ray of light" some years previously, predicting that "first, a great national figure would (die) in a seeming air accident; second, a powerful figure in politics would be assassinated; third, a man would come forth and boldly enter the lists on a platform of Christ and the Constitution.

The first predictions conceivably came true: Humorist Will Rogers died in a plane crash in August 1935, and Sen. Huey Long was assassinated a month later.

Pelley, of course, viewed himself as the third man in the prediction. He died in the 1960s, still under J. Edgar Hoover's watchful eye.

THAT'S ITALIAN?: Italy has a socialist government, and it knows how to nip the competitive urge when capitalist tourists from America might profit by it. Banks offer exchange rates for the Yankee dollar that are well below par. Not only that, the rate varies from city to city. A Venetian banker explained why that city's exchange rate was so bad for visiting Americans: "Why, of course," he said, "because there are more tourists here.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

'Oh, what a tangled web' is being woven in El Salvador

The United States blundered in El Salvador from the start.

It encouraged younger, "progressive" officers in the Salvadoran armed forces to get rid of the elected "strong man" in 1979, and then found they couldn't run the country.

It encouraged the Christian Democrats to join the government in 1980, and then found that those who were willing were not very able. What comes next? Another Nicaragua? Another Iran? Another Vietnam? Another Cuba? Or another defeat for U.S. foreign policy?

The future looks bleak for the tiny Central American republic, just a little greater in area and population than Israel, about the same size as the state of Massachusetts. Obviously the United States doesn't know what to do. The situation worsens. The killings go on. The wanton murders of four U.S. Catholic missionaries - three nuns and a lay woman - probably were the work of the Marxist opponents of the beleaguered civilian-military govern-

For one thing, the top civilians in the junta are Christian Democrats, practicing Catholics, and actively engaged in seeking the support of Pope John Paul II for their regime. For another, Americans generally enjoy special dispensations in El Salvador and the rest of Latin America, particularly when the government in office depends heavily on U.S. aid for its survival.

The murders of the six Salvadoran revolutionary leaders, however, were another matter. Yet the junta had nothing to gain from their slaughter and presumably their killings were the work of extreme rightists beyond the control of the government.

That the junta suffers internal problems is no secret.

The prolonged feud between the two colonels - Adolfo Majano and Jaime Abdul Gutierrez - who led the coup that ousted Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero from the presidency Oct. 15, 1979, suggests that the junta was divided against itself from the very beginning. The Christian Democrats, too, were split from the start. Their profound differences have been evidenced in many ways. One was the continuing criticism of party leader Jose Napoleon Duarte for participating in the government. More dramatic was the case of Jose Antonio Morales Erlich, also a Christian Democrat on the junta. Two of Morales' sons joined the Marxist-led guerrillas and publicly called on their father to leave the government In a situation of that complexity, it is hardly any wonder that the United States would err. That President Romero was a harsh ruler there can be little doubt. Human rights activists allege that some 800 persons lost their lives in political violence in El Savador in the year and a half he was in office. Yet, in retrospect, his abbreviated presidency appears relatively enlightened. Estimates are that 8,000 or more have been killed in El Salvador in the 14 months since Romero's over-

But the United States did not limit itself to encouraging the "constructive change" that resulted in the ouster of Romero. It also had a hand in drafting the agrarian reform program and the decree under which the Salvadoran government seized control of the country's banks and other financial institutions.

The banking reforms ended "the oligarchy's monopoly of the financial system," according to the U.S. State Department. The agrarian reform program, described by one of its American authors as the most drastic ever carried out in Latin America, took some 2 million acres of El Salvador's best farmlands from their

Yet all of this only served to sharpen criticism of the United States from one side and the other.

The Marxists have been insisting that U.S. actions in El Salvador were designed to weaken the attraction (mediatizar) of the revolutionary POINT MUGU, Calif. (AP) — A parachute recovery system has been blamed by the Navy for the crash of a Tomahawk cruise missile into the ocean off San Clemente Island shortly after takeoff.

The cigar-shaped missile was fired from a submerged submarine Tuesday and was supposed to skim along above the water over the Pacific Missile Test Range off the Southern California coast, thus avoiding radar.

British won't give in to strikers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)

— British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has adamantly refused to give in to the demands of convicted Irish terrorists on a hunger strike "to the death" in a prison near Belfast.

"This government cannot and will not" give in to the hunger strikers' demands for political prisoner status, Mrs. Thatcher said Wednesday in a telegram to Cardinal Tomas O Fiach, the Roman Catholic primate of all Ireland, who asked her earlier this week to personally intervene to save the strikers.

"I believe there's now almost universal agreement in Ireland that men of violence can have no right to political status," Mrs. Thatcher said.

Her position was echoed today by the European Parliament, which rejected a request for an urgent debate on the hunger strike by a vote of 204 to

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A 17-year-old boy has been returned to Miami to face a murder charge in the slaying of a 13-year-old girl whose emergency call for help was classified as a routine disturbance.

Gerard Mainor was arrested by Orange County deputies Tuesday after they found him hiding in the bathroom of an apartment, police said.

Mainor was charged as an adult by a grand jury with first-degree murder, sexual battery and burglary, Dade Homicide Detective John Le-

A court hearing will be held to determine whether he will be tried as an adult or a juvenile.

Mainor is charged in the Nov. 28 slaying of 13-year-old Rena Pollard. Miss Pollard had telephoned Dade County's 911 emergency number to report that a youth was trying to break into her southwest Dade

The police dispatcher, saying the calmness of the girl's voice misled him, classified the call as a routine juvenile disturbance. Because all police units in the area were busy at the time, help was not immediately sent, officials said.

Coolly, the youngster, Dina Mizrahi, squeezed off three deafening rounds, ...boom! and her determined grimace melted into a wide satisfied grin. A short while later, 16 year-old John, who refused to give his last name, helped his baby-faced younger brother Eric to shoulder a powerful semi-automatic estimated that from 400 to 900 people have taken the BK 91 — the civilian version of the West German army's G3 assault rifle. With John helping him absorb the weapon's sharp recoil, Eric began eagerly blasting away at a neat row of human silhouettes printed on paper targets and embellished with bright white swastikas. Dina, John and Eric are three of perhaps hundreds of people here - ranging from pre-teen-agers to post-retirees - who have been trained at various locations in the nearby Santa Clarita Valley in the last decade by the militant Jewish Defense league to counter increasingly active neo-Nazi groups and the resurgent Ku Klux Klan.

Census shows Americans are moving to the South, West

WASHINGTON (AP) - The movement of Americans to the nation's south and west during the past 10 years is shown by preliminary population figures for 49 states.

The four states with the largest gains in population are Nevada, with a jump of 63.8 percent from 1970 to 1980; Arizona, with an increase of 52.9 percent; and Florida and Wyoming, with gains of 41.1 percent

The only two jurisdictions showing population losses were Rhode Island and the District of Columbia, according to the figures released Tuesday by the Census Bureau.

California stays the most populous state, with a 1980 count of 23,510,372, relecting an increase of 17.7

percent from 1970. The figures are subject to minor adjustments but are expected to be very close to the final figures for the states. Numbers for New York were not released because the head count, delayed by a fire in a census office, is still in progress. Bureau officials say they expect the final national count to total 226 million people. The 49 states reported so far total nearly 208 million. Census Director Vincent P. Barabba said last week that the population changes likely will result in 16 seats in the House of Representatives changing from one state to another. Without New York's totals the movement of all the seats cannot yet be calculated, but bureau officials have estimated how 14 of them will change.

Florida is expected to gain three seats with California and Texas to pick up two each. Gaining one seat will be Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Oregon, Tennessee, Utah and Washington.

New York is expected to lose four seats. Losing two each would be Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania, and losing one would be Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey and South Dakota.

Special military headquarters preparing for eventual Soviet operations in Poland

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN Hearst Special News

PARIS - The Soviets reportedly have established a special military headquarters, staffed by some of their crack generals, to prepare for eventual operations in Poland.

NATO sources told The Hearst Newspapers that the suspected base is in Vilna, Lithuania, not far from Poland's eastern campaign" lasting sevfrontier. Access to the city and surrounding region has been barred to foreign diplomats and journalists for more than a fortnight.

The informants stressed that reports concerning the headquarters and its purpose did not mean that Warsaw Pact armed intervention is imminent. Rather, they explained, it indicated the Russians are not under-estimating the difficulties that a

Fifth American killed in Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A U.S. civilian adviser to E Salvador's national police force was shot and killed by a wounded "subversive," authorities said. He was the fifth American slain in this violence-torn nation in two weeks.

The killing of the adviser, identified as Thomas Bracken of Las Vegas, Nev., came hours after the State Department announced it was resuming the aid it cut off to El Salvador after the murder of three U.S. nuns and a U.S. missionary Dec. 2.

The armed forces said Bracken was killed Wednesday on a street in a poor neighborhood of San Salvador. It was not known what happened to his killer. Elsewhere in the capital, a bomb exploded in the Bank of America office causing serious damage but no injuries.

No group claimed responsibility, and it was not known if the two attacks were related.

The U.S. Embassy said it did not know what Bracken was doing in the country. An embassy spokesman said he had no information that Bracken was in any way connected with the U.S. government. He added the embassy was advised Bracken was working under a private arrangement as a police consultant.

Press reports said Bracken was investigating the disappearance on Tuesday of the president of the National Coffee Institute, Rene Alejandro Machon Rivera, who was kidnapped at gunpoint in San Antonio Abad, a northern suburb.

The three American nuns and the woman missionary were killed Dec. 2. The government said they were victims of right-wing terrorists. Some 9,000 people have been killed in El Salvador this year in continuing violence between the left and right.

The State Department announced Wednesday that a $20 million economic assistance program "critically needed to maintain the Salvadoran economy and avoid food shortages" was resuming because the Carter administration considered the recent restructuring of El Salvador's junta a "positive development which can bring greater efficiency and a stronger, more unified civilian control over the government."

A $5 million U.S. military aid program remains suspended for an indefinite period, however. Officials say they will await the outcome of the investigation into the Americans' deaths and want to see a reduction Adolfo Arnoldo Majano, the most liberal member of the five-man junta and one of two military members, was dropped in a reorganization last week that reduced the membership of the junta to four. There was speculation Majano's dismissal was a trade for the resignations of rightists within the military.

Majano was a leader of the Oct. 15, 1979, coup that toppled the military government of Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero and brought a succession of civilian-military governments that ried without success to end the political violence. He had been gradually losing influence on the junta since last summer.

Under the new arrangement junta member Jose Napoleon Duarte became president and Col. Jaime Abdul Gutierrez will be vice president and in charge of the military.

In an interview Wednesday, Duarte blamed "international intervention from the extreme left" for El Salvador's violence. There have been published accusations in El Salvador that Nicaragua and Cuba have provided arms and training to Salvadoran leftists.

Former President Nixon files suit over presidential papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon on Wednesday filed suit in an effort to retain his right to any monetary compensation he may be owed because the government has custody of his personal and presidential papers.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court here was a "purely precautionary measure," said Nixon lawyer, R. Stan Mortenson

He said it was designed to protect any "rights and options in the future" that the former president may have under the 1974 Presidential Recordings and Materials Preservation Act. That act says money should be set aside to compensate a former president whose property is taken by the government.

The legal deadline for filing any such claim is Friday, said Morten-

In his suit, Nixon says materials have been withheld from him and he has been forced to incur "considerable expense" in an effort to resolve legal challenges to decisions made in connection with the act.

He also contends the government has denied him access to personal papers unrelated to his official duties as president. But, he says, the materials have been released to others without his consent. That, he argues, is a violation of his constitutional rights to privacy, free speech and association.

Doctor says Garwood suffered psychic trauma

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood suffered an "absolute psychic trauma" be cause of physical injuries, torture and deprivation in Vietnamese prison camps, and the trauma still leads to suicidal tendancies, a psychiatrist

"He felt killing himself wouldn't mean death, but meant he would be at peace," said Dr. Emmanuel Tanay.

Tanay, who was a POW in Germany during World War II, was the first witness called by the defense in Garwood's court-martial on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam. Tanay was undergoing cross-examination today.

Tanay said Wednesday his examination of Garwood and a review of records relating to the case convinced him that the 34-year-old Marine "suffered an absolute psychic trauma the kind of experience no human being, no matter how resistant or strong, could survive without suffering traumatic neurosis.'

Economic aid resumed to El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States is resuming economic aid to El Salvador after the appointment of a civilian president for that Central American nation and promises by Salvadoran authorities of a thorough investigation of the deaths of four American missionaries.

But the Carter administration will continue withholding military aid pending further developments. On Dec. 5, the United States suspended all forms of assistance to El Salvador after reports that Salva-

Hunger strike staged in protest of violence

CHICAGO (AP) - Officials of the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese say they have no intention of evicting protesters, many of them priests and nuns, staging a hunger strike in a cathedral to protest violence in El Salvador.

"There's maybe 15 people kneeling in the back of the church praying," the Rev. Timothy J. Lyne, rector of Holy Name Cathedral, said Wednesday. A spokesman for the church said it will treat the protesters with dignity.

Police reported no trouble at the cathedral. Lyne said the protesters were upset about the fatal shootings of three Roman Catholic nuns and a lay Catholic social worker, all Americans, whose bodies were found earlier this month in El Salvador.

He said the protesters were attempting to make a statement. "It's not a confrontation or anything like

Lyne said one of the leaders of the protest, the Rev. Roy Bourgeois, is a Maryknoll priest, the same order to which two of the slain women belonged.

Secundino Ramirez, a spokesman for the protesters, said they were staging a hunger strike to "protest U.S. support for the El Salvador regime, and protest the silence the (Chicago) archdiocese has kept over the murder.

"We're waiting for a response, for a sense of solidarity," said Ms. Golden.

Archdiocese spokesman Peter J. Foote said Cody has on several occasions offered prayers for the slain missionaries. He added that the archdiocesan newspaper had editorialized in favor of U.S. sanctions against El Salvador.

'In a way, they're just getting in with the program. You know what I mean?" Foote said of the protesters. "They are free to stay there as long as they wish.

Prosecution nears end in Kelly case

WASHINGTON (AP) - The prosecution has virtually completed its Abscam case against Rep. Richard Kelly after the testimony of a convicted swindler about how the Florida Republican was led to pocket $25,000 in cash from an FBI undercover

In a major surprise, U.S. attorneys decided late Wednesday to present no more witnesses after the federal jury heard from Melvin Weinberg, a paid FBI informant who openly admitted that he had been a con man "for the last 25 or 30 years," about his role in drawing Kelly and two co-defendants. both alleged middlemen, into the

The government, relying heavily on both video and audio recordings, earlier presented only one other major witness, undercover agent Anthony Amoroso. Several other agents had been expected to testify, as well as William Rosenberg, a third purported middleman who pleaded guilty earlier in the case and who had agreed to appear for the prosecution.

Though some procedural matters remained for the government to conclude today, the defense appeared caught off guard when Judge William Bryant was notified the prosecution would call no more witnesses.

The defense likely will be called upon to open its case today, despite the complaint by Kelly's attorney, Anthony Battaglia, that he barely had time to bring in his own witnesses. "Of my first five," he told Bryant, "all are from out of town except

That remark prompted speculation that Kelly himself might take the stand in his own behalf, perhaps late today. Neither man would say, but

Battaglia and Kelly huddled in long discussion outside the courtroom late

Wednesday While Weinberg was on the stand, the jury heard an audio recording in which co-defendant Eugene Robert Ciuzio balked at the idea of a direct payment to Kelly, but later agreed it could be done "one-on-one ... because there's no corroboration. The telephone discussion occurred between Weinberg, who recorded the call, and Ciuzio on Dec. 21, 1979, days before Kelly stuffed $25,000 into his pockets as it was handed him by a man who claimed to represent wealthy Arabs seeking special immigration legisaltion.

Weinberg and Ciuzio, a Longwood, Fla., businessman, agreed that the congressman would appear in a Washington townhouse on Jan. 8, and, in Weinberg's words, "the guy will walk away with 25 big ones ... and he'll be told there's 75 more in it for

But Weinberg insisted that the lawmaker meet with "Tony," the supposed operative for the Arabs, and ake the money directly.

In the Dec. 21 discussion, Ciuzio told Weinberg that one of the other middlemen, co-defendant Stanley Weisz, "doesn't go along with Tony at all meeting the congressman that way, ah, in the sense to, be that, ah, let's say open, to hand the guy money.' "That's the only way we'll do it," Weinberg shot back loudly. He went on to declare that he and the Arab interests wanted to make sure "he don't turn around and say I never got no money

Finally Ciuzio said, "Okay ... if Tony wants to go inside one-on-one, I don't really care. It's fine, because there's no corroboration.

Neither man specifically named Kelly in the conversation, referring to him only as "the congressman." However, Ciuzio had told Weinberg in a recorded discussion two days earlier that Kelly was the man he would bring into the deal.

The defense had indicated it planned to cross-examine Weinberg for days, but it cut that questioning off after several hours in which his memory and life of crime were attacked repeatedly. Attorneys for all three co-defendants have argued all along that the FBI's employment of Weinberg reflected excessive zeal in its effort to rope public officials and others into criminal acts. Moreover, Kelly himself has claimed he got involved only because he was conducting his own investigation of the bribery perpetra-

Young apologizes

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Mayor Coleman Young says he is sorry he called President-elect Ronald Reagan "pruneface.

A Young aide said the mayor issued the apology Wednesday when he told a breakfast meeting of 35 Detroit businessmen, "This is a good time to say I'm sorry. When I called him (Reagan) pruneface, it was campaign rhetoric."

The mayor was a staunch supporter of President Carter, and the Democratic administration sent a steady flow of federal dollars to the economically beleaguered city.

The mayor first used the term in October when he referred to Reagan as the "pruneface from the West." After the election, while addressing a group of University of Chicago students, Young upgraded his description.

"I'm sorry I called him 'pruneface from the West. I will now address him as President Pruneface, Young said then

A federal jury in San Antonio, Texas, found former Dade County officer Charles Veverka Jr. innocent of four civil rights charges. The verdict came one year to the day after the fatal beating of insurance executive Arthur McDuffie, a death which allegedly was covered up by police to make it appear McDuffie had died in a motorcycle accident.

Although jurors were convinced McDuffie had been beaten to death by police, "we couldn't in good conscience bring in a guilty verdict on Mr. Veverka as charged," said jury foreman Pat McNamara. The verdict, handed up after 16 hours of deliber

Reagan may declare an 'economic emergency'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ronald Reagan is "seriously considering" declaring an "economic emergency" shortly after he takes office on Jan. 20, one of the president-elect's top aides said Wednesday

James Baker, who will be Reagan's chief of staff, said Reagan and his advisers feel "it's extremely important to act quickly and decisively" on

The declaration of an "economic emergency" has been proposed by Rep. David Stockman, R-Mich., Reagan's choice to head the Office of Management and Budget, and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.

Stockman has called for Reagan to tell the next Congress to "clear the decks" for 100 days of work on an emergency program.

Among other things, Stockman's proposed emergency action calls for initiatives to spur economic growth, a reduction of federal regulations, monetary policy reform, and a cancellation of remaining controls on oil and other petroleum products.

The Washington Post, in Thursday's editions, said there is growing support in Reagan's inner circle for Stockman's 100-day plan.

The emergency proposal is one part of Stockman's economic plan for Reagan, called "Avoiding a GOP Economic Dunkirk."

Baker, talking to reporters Wednesday, also said the administration probably would seek changes in the fiscal 1981 budget, which has already peen approved by Congress. The 1981 fiscal year began Oct. 1.

ATT's profit biggest in U.S. history

NEW YORK (AP) - American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s reported 12-month profit of $6.04 billion has set a record for the most profitable year ever recorded by a U.S. corporation.

AT&T said it earned $6.04 billion, or $8.18 a share, in the 12 months ended Nov. 30. That was up 7.7 percent from $5.61 billion, or $7.98 a share, in the preceeding 12 months.

The previous record for earnings in a 12-month period also belonged to AT&T, which made $5.8 billion in the 12 months ended Aug. 31. Exxon Corp. reported profits of $5.7 billion for the 12 months ended Sept. 30.

AT&T also reported Wednesday that it had the largest quarterly gain in more than a year, but expressed concern over inflation and high interest rates

For the quarter ended Nov. 30, AT&T earned $1.6 billion, or $2.12 a share. That is up 11.1 percent from $1.4 billion, or $2.01 a share, in the same quarter last year.

Revenues for the latest quarter were $13.1 billion, up 12.6 percent from $11.7 billion a year earlier. The company said return on average total capital was 10ercent during the quarter, up from 9.76 percent.

AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown said quarterly earnings per share rose faster than at any time since the second quarter of 1979

Brown said it was not clear "whether our experience of increasing demand in the most recent quarter will be sustained."

'Economic signals are at best mixed," Borwn said. "Inflation remains our most troubling problem." For the 12 months, AT&T said revenues reached $50.2 billion, up 11.6 percent from $45 billion in the same period a year earlier. AT&T will later report earnings for the 1980 calendar

Results for the quarter showed long-distance calling volume was up 7.5 percent from the prior year. Bell companies added 1.25 million telephones and 932,000 lines during the quarter, compared with 1.58 million phones and 1.06 million lines during the same quarter last year.

Chrysler seeks more loan guarantees

DETROIT (AP) - Chrysler Corp. probably can make it through January, but after that it "has no future" without millions of dollars in new government-guaranteed loans, its hairman says.

Lee A. Iacocca predicted Wednesday that the beleaguered No. 3 automaker will "run out of cash at some point" next year unless it gets $400

Chrysler was going before the Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board to seek the guarantees at the board's meeting in Washington late today, a company spokesman said. A board of directors' meeting in New York today was expected to approve the applica-

The automaker already has received $800 million in loan guarantees out of the $1.5 billion Congress first authorized last year when the loan guarantee board was created. Each time Chrysler wants more loan guarantees, it must get approval from the

To get that approval for the $400 million, Chrysler has undertaken a far-ranging, money-saving survival

As part of that plan, Chrysler is asking the United Auto Workers to agree to a 22-month wage freeze that would hold the hourly wage at $17.50 through September 1982. The wage otherwise would rise to $22.11 an

"I haven't got much bargaining power. I have a choice for them: $17.50 or zero. Chrysler has lots of good jobs at $17.50 an hour; it doesn't have any at $22." If the company did fail, Michigan officials have estimated that some 100,000 people would be thrown out of work, both from Chrysler and industries dependent on the automaker. The survival plan also calls for a 1981 price freeze by suppliers with 5 percent price cuts in the first quarter and conversion of bank loans into preferred stock. All the measures would increase profits, or decrease losses, next year by $660 million, Ia-

The plan reportedly would save $1.5 billion in cash outlays next year, but Iacocca declined to give a figure other than to say it was "huge."

Iacocca said Chrysler had reached its 200 largest suppliers and "only one told us to drop dead" while the others are seeking approval from their boards and committees.

"They've come through in the past and I'm pretty certain they'll come through again" with freezes and firstquarter price cuts worth $90 million in the profit-and-loss column, Iacocca said. Sixty percent of the company's 20,000 suppliers have agreed to defer December bills into January.

Iacocca described the program as "our own internal version of wage and price controls" and suggested the nation adopt it for six months, coupled with steep reductions in the federal government's deficit, to bring

Ethiopia fights against illiteracy

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY The Washington Post

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia - At 61, Wozoro Fisseha Tessema, a portly, good-natured housewife and mother of three, seems an unlikely person to see coming out of a makeshift schoolroom with a pen and book in hand. But until last year, she, like 93 percent of all 32 million Ethiopians, never had a chance to see the inside of a school-

Now she has been swept up in a massive nationwide campaign that aims to eradicate illiteracy in the next six years from one of the world's most impoverished countries and one now in a hurry to overcome centuries of official indiffernce under the former monarchical system to the welfare of ordinary Ethiopians.

The six-year-old, military-led revolution here has always tended to take on its declared enemies - human or other - in Chinese-style "great-leapforward" zemachas, or war campaigns, and the attack on illiteracy has proven no exception.

The scope and initial success of the latest campaign have already gained outside acclaim. In September, the Delaware-based International Reading Association, a nongovernmental body affiliated with the United Nations Education$1, Scientific and Cultural Organization, gave Ethiopia its annual literacy award.

It praised in particular the "innovative literacy material" - more than 15 million copies of which were prepared in five languages by the government for the campaign - and noted the "achievement of impressive results" in the first stage.

"We have to strengthen what has already been done," said Gudetta Mammo, the chief executive officer for the campaign. "It is not new illiterates now. We are organizing evening classes in the kebeles, or neighborhood associations, and setting up small libraries with reading materials for those who have started reading."

The Ethiopian concern about such slippage was one reason the International Reading Association had such high praise for the campaign. It congratulated the government for its 'systematic planning" in linking the initial efforts to teach people how to read and use numbers with remedial and follow-up courses conceived within "a perspective of life-long educa-

The latter was a reference to the simply written books the Ethiopian government has devised and distributed as part of its follow-up program teaching hygiene, home economics, better farming techniques and other skills of interest to the rural and urban populations.

The importance of even the most basic knowledge of the three Rs was brought home in a response from Wozoro Fisseha to a question regarding how she felt about going to school at the age of 61.

"I wanted to come and learn. Before I had to ask other people the number on the bus I wanted to take, but now I can read it myself," she said. "I couldn't telephone to my friends before because I couldn't read the numbers

"Also, when I go to the hospital to visit a friend now, I can find the number of her bed without asking for Learning to read numbers was probably the easiest part of the program. The Amharic alphabet, also used to write the other main national languages, contains 33 basic letters, each of which has seven variations, for a total of 264 characters.

The Ethiopian campaign got off to an unexpectedly big start during the summer of 1979 when the government mobilized 240,000 literates - from civil servants and soldiers to sixth graders - and sent them out across the country to 34,600 centers with the aim of teaching the first 1 million

The basic strategy was to start with the urban and suburban centers and then work outward to cover progressively the entire population, giving 450 hours of instruction in a series of three-hour classes to each partici-

"We hesitated whether we could teach 1 million at once and had only prepared materials for this number. recalled Gudetta, a gray-haired Ministry of Education official who resembles nothing so much as a college professor. "Then after one month, we saw there was a shortage of materials and 3 million applicants.

"All the materials we had we gave out, and then we appealed to all those literate to teach with whatever they had available. They wrote alphabets on pieces of cloth, mats, rocks and the sides of tanks. This way we kept them all in the program."

Finally, the government found itself swamped with 5.4 millio participants, 73 percent of them females, the most neglected of the Ethiopian population. Only 60 percent of those who took the first literacy test passed and got certificates, reinforcing the government's basic conviction that strong remedial and follow-up programs were going to be essential.

Study shows less women using the Pill

By DAVID BEHRENS (c) 1980, Newsday

NEW YORK - In the early 1960s, the promise of the Pill was forever. Young women, on the threshold of their sexual lives, saw the birth control pill as a scientific miracle, a magic potion that would banish unwanted pregnancy for the rest of their reproductive lives.

So it seemed 20 years ago. It was too good to be true - and apparently it was not true.

Now it seems likely that the Pill will never again be perceived as a lifelong approach to the problem of unwanted pregnancy, at least not to women over

Despite the increase in the population and in teen sexual activity, the number of women using the Pill has dropped to between 8 and 9 million this year, according to Richard Lincoln, senior vice president of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, one of New York's oldest family planning agencies. The total on the Pill in 1970 had been estimated at 11 million, Lincoln

But among women over 35, Lincoln said, the use of the Pill this year is

Miss Bryant, a singer whose fame stems mostly from her orange juice commercials and campaigns against homosexual rights, had been voted most admired woman by the magazine's readers for each of the past two

This year she dropped to third behind former first lady Pat Nixon, the only person to place in the top 10 each year since the magazine's poll of its readers first was conducted in 1969. Rosalynn Carter moved from 6th to 4th place, and Phyllis Schlafly, a leading opponent of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, moved to 5th from 9th place.

Rounding out the top 10 were, in order, New York City Opera Director Beverly Sills, former first lady Betty Ford, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, former Texas Congresswoman Barbara Jordan and humorist Erma Bombeck.

even less. Estimated at 8 percent in 1976, Lincoln said, "we bet it's now down to about 4 percent."

It is in the over-30 age group that warnings about the Pill, especially about its relationship to heart attack, cancer and stroke, have been most alarming. And the drop in use by women over 30 probably will continue through the decade, Lincoln said.

The Pill still evokes high emotions. Many women still feel angry that oral contraceptives, which had promised to make sex so risk-free, turned out to be regarded as a health hazard.

One of the significant events that prompted women to begin to doubt their doctors' reassurances about the Pill came 10 years ago with the publication of "The Doctors' Case Against the Pill," authored by medical writer Barbara Seaman, a founder of the Women's Health Network, a feministoriented health organization based in

This fall, as the debate about the Pill continued, an update edition of the Seaman book has been reissued by Doubleday. Meanwhile, for the millions of women who are off the Pill, the impact on their sex lives has been striking.

For many, Seaman said in a recent interview, the change in sexual lifestyle has not been easy. "Among feminists, there's a lot of positive feelings - that women are no longer poisioning themselves. Some even feel the diaphragm itself can become 'part of love-making.' But this is certainly a small subgroup." The vast majority of married women under 45 using the of women, Seaman said, "feel sad and Pill in 1976 was 22.3, about three a little betrayed," that in many cases, sex must be less spontaneous.

Some are angry that "we can send a man to the moon but we can't come up with birth control methods that are neither dangerous nor a nuisance.' Some resent the fact that to become 'sexually liberated," women, not men, had to take all the risks in contraception. And "some resent having to go back to the greasy kid stuff of their college days, like the diaphragm," Seaman said. But for others, life off the Pill is happier, Seaman said. Many women have told her, for instance:

"Now I feel I'm more in control of my own body."

And one woman simply said, "I'm glad I'm off the Pill — I don't go to bed with men I don't like anymore." But the response to the Pill by older women, Seaman conceded, does not mean that oral contraception is a dead issue. While many older women are opting for sterilization and others are switching to IUDs, use of birth control pills remains high among married women under 25. Pill use in this age group has only slipped from 45 percent in 1973 to 42.9 percent in 1976 while the total percent percentage points less than in 1973, according to Lincoln. Meanwhile, the number of users in their teens rose from about 600,000 in 1971 to almost 1.6 million in 1979.

So despite adverse publicity, Lincoln noted, vast number of younger women have ignored the advice of the Women's Health Network to use "barrier" methods, such as the diaphragm, foam or the cervical cap.

But Seaman is still fighting it out with drug companies, clinics and doctors who prescribe the Pill, especially to poor women, young women and collegians. Users in their 20s also are taking health risks, she argues.

First European-Indian settlement in New World may have been found

MICCO, Fla. (AP) - Amateur archaeologist Homer Cato believes he's come across an important find: the remains of what may be the first European-Indian settlement in the New World.

He says that close by, in a sub-tropical hammock just off U.S. Highway 1, European survivors of offshore shipwrecks lived with a normally hostile Indian tribe, married and bred children years before the Spaniards established St. Augustine, America's oldest city, in 1565.

But unless money can be raised at the eleventh hour to continue profes-

The Ayz (pronounced "eyes") lived on the site which has yielded skeletons, pottery, jewelry, early Indian and Spanish artifacts and - most unusual of all - crucifixion symbols hinting at Christian interment.

He says he located the burial mound in 1966 on an outdated 19th century topographical map drawn by the U.S. Geodetic Survey. Obscure anthropological publications previously had referred to a possible village site in the area, but the presence of the mound and the European connection had been missed.

Though an amateur, Cato is an they died, they were accorded a "Christian" burial with a cross. Cato says this and findings of pottery and other artifacts made in Europe seemed to add up to one conclusion: this was the village mentioned in old Spanish records in which shipwrecked Europeans and Indians had lived, and died, together.

Earlier this year, Cato convinced the owners of the land to make an archaeological survey of the site. They brought in Cultural Resource Management, a private archeological

Teachers' affair gets flunking grade

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: As a teacher at a junior high school (no name or location, please) I am deeply concerned about a situation that exists here.

First, let me say I think a major aspect of teaching is to set a good example for the students to follow in terms of behavior. However, it is common knowledge that two teachers here (both married, but not to each other) are having an affair. It has progressed to a point where it is a' topic of discussion among students and other teachers.

I realize that what two adults do in private is their own business, but by being so open about it, our students might get the impression that all of us teachers condone such behavior, which is certainly not true. Thus I am truly concerned about the detrimental effect this example is having on our students.

The administration is aware of this problem, but I'm told they have taken the position that it is a private matter, and not within their jurisdiction.

I welcome your advice as to how this situation should be handled by both me and the administration.-NAMELESS, PLEASE

Traditional beef rib roast is more expensive this year than in past seasons roast of beef with Yorkshire pudding is apt to be considerably more expensive this year than it has been in seasons past. But that is not likely to dissuade those for whom tradition, at any price, is worth the price. Many of us will simply gulp, bite the bullet and go for it in spite of the expense.

Here, then, a few tips on

Cornish pasties good alternate

Cornish pasties are wonderful to have on hand during the holidays to alternate with sandwiches or dishes made from left-over turkey. You can bake the pasties ahead and have them on hand in the refrigerator or freezer to reheat or serve at room tempera-

The following recipe is a streamlined version of one brought to this country by Eileen Runyan, a native of northern England. There are many ways to make the filling for Cornish Pasties, the dish loved so well in its native southwest England as well as in other parts of Britain and the United States.

When we checked Eileen's recipe with "Traditional Dishes of Britain" by Philip Harben (published in the 1950s in London), we found Eileen stuck pretty closely to the original version. According to Harben, the filling should be raw cubed meat, onions and potatoes plus seasonings. Only one difference between the Harben and the Runyan pasties: the latter version calls for ground meat.

NEW YORK (AP) - Women who continue a program of regular exercise during pregnancy do not put any special strain on their babies' hearts, a new study concludes, adding further weight to evidence that such activity does not harm the unborn child.

Dr. Rudolph H. Dressendorfer and Dr. Robert C. Goodlin said their study shows that a healthy woman who is already in good physical shape can continue to work out during pregnancy with minimal risk to her baby's cardiovascular system.

"In this country, pregnancy is considered to be a time of fragility; everything should be done to keep the pregnant woman from being stressed," said Dressendorfer, a cardiovascular exercise specialist at William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak, Mich.

"I think that's a social attitude, and I don't think it's warranted," he added.

The study said moderate maternal exercise appears to raise the baby's heart rate slightly, but not above normal limits

Dressendorfer and Goodlin, an obstetrician at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha, published their work in The Physician and Sportsmedicine, a monthly magazine of McGraw-Hill.

The two researchers said they did their study because no guidelines now exist for whether to allow expecting mothers to exercise.

Subjects of the study were fivehealthy women between 26 and 30 years years old who swam 30 to 45 minutes a day at least three days a week before becoming pregnant.

In the tests, the women pedaled a bicycle-like device as the researchers increased the drag on the pedals until their heart rates rose to 150 beats per minute. They averaged 76 beats a minute before exercise.

Fetal heart rates - measured by an ultrasound probe - increased from an average of 142 beats a minute before exercise to 149 beats a minute during exercise, the researchers said. That's well within the normal fetal range of between 120 and 160 beats per minute, they said.

All five women later had normal labors and deliveries, they said.

Christmas in the U.S. Post Office

By ERMA BOMBECK

Need a shot of optimism to get you through the holidays? You're gonna love this. Most of us have never seen anyone smile in a post office. It's like a clinic for lower back pains. Well, I was in line yesterday when the door opened and in walked a lady with a big smile on her face weighted down with boxes for mailing. She held the door open for her three little girls who filed in, each one carrying a package. It was quite obvious they had never been in a post office in their entire

She bounded over to a man standing by a counter pasting on stamps and asked, "Are you a carrier?"

"Of what?" he snapped. Another one in line said, "To the back of the line, lady!"

Her eyes fairly danced with excitement as she announced to no one inparticular, "It certainly is a nice day, and just think, girls, Christmas is only one week away.'

'Will Granddad get his presents?" asked one child.

"Of course he will," said her moth-

Every eye in the post office turned to stare at this cross between Mary Poppins and Tiny Tim. Granddad would be lucky to get those packages while Reagan was still president. "Look, girls, doesn't the post office look like Santa is on his way?' We all looked around. With the exception of Santa pointing his finger at us and warning, "MAIL EARLY," the place had the spirit of a recovery room.

Finally, she got to the head of the line. "When will Dad get these packages?" she asked.

The postman shrugged. "Depends. Maybe by New Year's . . . or we could get 'em there in one day." 'One day would be wonderful!"

"It'll cost you," he said, scribbling down some figures, "$45.83."

The woman hesitated, then picked out one box and said, "This one must get there by Christmas Day, it's my father's birthday.'

NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Now, do you understand?

The farmer I talked about is anyone who brings God's message to others, trying to plant good seed within their lives.

The hard pathway, where some of the seed fell, represents the hard hearts of some of those who hear God's message; Satan comes at once to try to make them forget it.

The rocky soil represents the hearts of those who hear the message with joy,

But like young plants in such soil, their roots don't go very deep, and though at first they get along fine, as soon as persecution begins, they wilt.

The thorny ground represents the hearts of people who listen to the Good News and receive it,

But all too quickly the attractions of this world and the delights of wealth, and the search for success and lure of nice things come in and crowd out God's message from their hearts, so that no crop is produced.

But the good soil represents the hearts of those who truly accept God's message and produce a plentiful harvest for God-30, 60, or even 100 times as much as was planted in

Then He asked them, "When someone lights a lamp, does he put a box over it to shut out the light? Of course not! The light couldn't be seen or used. A lamp is placed on a stand to shine and be useful

> All that is now hidden will someday come to light. If you have ears, fisten!

And be sure to put into practice what you hear. The more you do this, the more you will understand what I tell you.

To him who has shall be given; from him who has not shall be taken away even what he has.

Nuclear waste called 'sociopolitical' problem

By TOM EASTHAM Hearst Special News Service

WASHINGTON - The Nuclear Energy Commission's top safety advisors have declared that the safe storage and disposal of nuclear wastes is no longer a technical problem but a "sociopolitical" one.

The term is loaded. It covers President Carter's opposition to reprocessing spent reactor fuel, the government's failure to set environmental standards for waste and the need for federal, state and local agreement

Controversies over those precise issues have proved stumbling blocks to the waste question for years, and are still raging.

Until those problems are resolved, trying to predict when a safe repository for nuclear waste will be available is futile, the Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards told NRC chairman John F. Ahearne, although technically it could be done by about the year 2000.

The committee of independent experts responded to Ahearne's request for comment. The NRC is taking a broad look into the question to determine what "degree of confidence" is warranted about nuclear waste dis-

After a thorough review, the committee concluded that the NRC is justified in having "a high degree of confidence" on the technical concerns, but that the sociopolitical ones "are in need of further atten-

Regarding the Department of Energy's estimate for completion of a permanent waste repository by 1997 to 2000, committee chairman Milton S. Plesset told the NRC:

"Until the issue of consultation and concurrence among federal, state and local authorities is better resolved and the licensing-litigation process as well as standards-setting by the Environmental Protection Agency and the NRC is better defined, we believe that trying to forecast a firm availability date for a repository is futile in the absence of action by

A bill providing a program for long-range storage of nuclear waste has been pending in Congress, but is not expected to pass this session.

From a purely technical standpoint, the advisory committee said, it believes safe disposal of radioactive wastes is "reasonably assurred" by the present state of knowledge.

Research in this country and abroad, notably by Sweden, has shown that specially-designed packages of waste can be expected to remain intact in geolgogic repositories for at least 1,000 years. And they probably would be safe for tens of thousands of years, Plesset

Since radioactivity decays significantly in the first 1,000 years, an accident after that would probably not poison the biosphere, Plesset indi-

Since Carter administration directives do not permit reprocessing, the committee's analysis was based on disposal of spent fuel - which is produced in larger amounts and is longer-lived than reprocessed fuel.

The committee also expressed assurance that spent fuel now in power plant swimming pools" around the country can be safely held in the water until a permanent disposal facility is in operation.

Superstitions enjoy renewed popularity in China

PEKING - Old wives' tales and superstitions snakes and frogs, which are enjoying renewed it was claimed would popularity in China.

Even city dwellers who have more or less been been attacking the wideleft out of this growing spread phenomenon of wave of superstition, mainly because of intense political indoctri- ing from the credulity of nation, are no longer an exception.

Recently a small pamphlet was distributed in Peking streets with 50 unusual remedies on how "to drink alcohol without getting drunk" or "how to keep teeth white" and "how to shave yourself without a razor.

The pamphlet, entitled "News About Scientific Discoveries," guarantees that the remedies will work. The pamphlet tells the reader how to become sterile - by drinking a mixture made from palm tree roots and pig's intestines.

Many remedies are made up of age-old Chinese herbal formulas. For instance, an infusion of fresh ginger will cure a cold and headaches and one with an ear of corn will lower the blood pressure.

An entire page is dovoted to predicting the sex of an unborn baby, an important topic here where couples are urged to have onl one child. The prediction is made after a rather complicated juggling with the mother's age and the month the child was conceived.

Other publications both official and underground - deal with the same topic. One claims that an expectant mother should eat salt if she wants a boy and sugar for a baby girl. Another describes various herbal

New exchange rates set

By MICHAEL PARKS The Los Angeles Times

PEKING — The Chinese government has established a sepahrate set of exchange rates to encourage its industries to increase their exports, even letting them sell their products abroad at howhat would now be a loss.

The move will have the effect of cutting imports by increasing their cost to Chinese customers, and this will further reduce the prospects of American, Japanese and West European firms to bincrease sales of industrial equipment and advanced technology to Chine.

nology to China.

Under the new system of so-called "parallel" exchange rates, foreign currencies used to buy Chinese goods for sale abroad will be worth more in exchange for renminbi (Chinese currency). In effect, that lowers the price of Chinese Chinese export. Meanwhile, imported goods purchased by the Chinese will cost more because renminbi is in effect devalued.

The current exchange rate is expected to remain the same for most other transactions, including tourism.

Developing nations often use parallel rates if they want to encourage the development of certain industries or if their reserves of foreign currencies are dwindling. For example, Brazil has used a range of various exchange rates to help infant industries gain strength and to prevent larger ones from becoming to dominant.

one Western financial expert said he considered the Chinese action "unusual for state-controlled economies" that usually rely on direct subsidies to help industries. But, he noted, the policy shift is consistent with recent efforts by China's government to rely, at least to some degree, on prices and other free market mechanisms in managing the economy.

Most of China's trade deals are already calculated in U.S. dollars, Japanese yen, Swiss francs or other hard currencies and negotiated on the basis of world prices. The official government statement emphasized that foreigners buying Chinese currency would continue to pay the official rate, now about 65 cents for 1 Chinese yuan. (Yuan is a specific unit of currency; renminbi refers to all Chinese currency.)

But the new system would pay exporting enterprises in China considerably more for their foreign earnings and charge those importing goods from abroad even more for the foreign exchange needed to pay for their purchases:

This would enable Chinese exporters to reduce their prices on products to meet or undercut those of more efficient competitors, since the manufacturing costs to the Chinese would be more than covered by their increase renminbi earnings.

While insisting that the new rate is simply a matter of internal accounting, the Chinese Foreign Exchange Control Administration acknowledged that a principal purpose of the change is to "help companies that make losses in the export trade."

"China intends to use the profits it makes (through the higher exchange rate for imports) to subsidize exporting enterprises that make a loss," the Chinese news agency said.

Although many other countries employ similar parallel rates of exchange, usually to encourage exports or bring in foreign investment, this could open China to charges of unfair trading practices, particularly the "dumping" of its products at lower prices than they sell for here or even at less than they cost to

China has been pushing hard to increase its exports in the past two years in order to finance purchases of foreign equipment and technology, and the prospect of a small but persistent deficit in total trade of about $35 billion a year has frightened the fiscally conservative Chinese leadership.

In terms of foreign sales to China, sales of industrial equipment will probably be hit hardest — and they have already been staggered by China's decision to reduce its capital construction program to a minimum of new projects.

They celebrate Christmas in traditional Cornish style

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

GRASS VALLEY, Calif. — Cousin Jacks and Cousin Jennys are everywhere on Mill Street these December nights, munching hot pasties, figgy duff and saffron cake bought from street vendors.

They wash these delicacies down with hot cider as they listen to street carolers sing old Christmas songs brought to this Mother Lode town in the 1860s by the first tin miners to arrive from Cornwall, England, to work the gold diggings.

The traditional Cornish Christmas celebration, rooted in the windswept moors of southwest England, has been kept alive here for more than a century by the descendants of those miners.

Mayor Frank Knuckey, 70, who is of Cornish descent, explained why Grass Valley's Cornish men and women have always been known as Cousin Jacks and Cousin Jennys: "When the miners first came to this country they would always ask their bosses if there was an opening for a Cousin Jack back in the old country.

"It seems every man from Cornwall was named Jack, either his first or middle name. The name for Cornish women — Jenny — just came naturally."

Hedley Corin, 55, whose people came from the town of Red Ruth in Cornwall, showed what a pasty is by taking a big bite out of one — a flaky baked shell rolled and crimped by hand and filled with vegetables and meat.

Figgy duff is the Cornish version of plum pud-

Taking a last swig from his mug of hot cider, Corin left Marie Marshall'sPastie Shoppe and stepped out into the crisp night air to join the street festivities.

He headed over to the 116-year-old red brick Union newspaper building to listen to John Baggett's 200voice Nevada Union High School Choir sing Cornish songs from the front steps.

Across the street from the Union building, Roy

Allen, 10, looking like a Dickens character with his cherubic face framed in long blond hair, sat at his vending stand.

"My mama made the cookies," Roy said. "My mama says whatever I make I can use to buy Christmas gifts."

Roy was selling the cookies for a nickel each. He also was dispensing homemade black cherry juice for 10 cents a cup. He said he had taken in about 60 cents so far.

Other young vendors were hawking hot chestnuts.

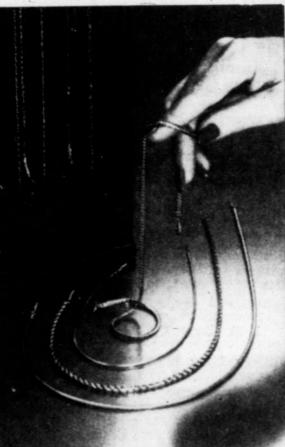

hot cider, hot coffee, Christmas ornaments, handcrafted goods, peanut brittle, pasties, figgy duff, saffron cake and cotton candy for various causes. School teachers Carla Nordstrom and Jayne Dwyer were selling Christmas novelties made by their students to earn money for a field trip.

Farther along the street, the Bethel Church Children's Choir performed the Christmas story, and the Nit-Wits, a dozen women totaling 875 years (average age 73), played gut buckets, rolling pins and plumb-ing pipes for the enjoyment of Cousin Jacks and Cousin Jennys.

One of the Cornish community's Christmas traditions, which originated in Grass Valley in 1883, is Donation Day, when every school child in town brings a gift of food for the poor.

DALLAS (AP) — Faced with the rapid growth of new residents and businesses in the Dallas area, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is trying to alleviate a shortage of telephone lines by putting disconnected lines back into service quicker.

The entire area has grown twice as fast as the phone company expected, so some disconnected residential telephone numbers are being put back into service just after two weeks and business numbers are being reassigned just after 90 days, said Bell spokesman Joe McNamara.

The metropolitan area system is expanding by 127 phones daily or 46,000 per year and a $1.3 billion construction budget has been laid out for Texas, McNamara said.

Texas, McNamara said.
"Next year, we fore-cast even more growth,"

McNamara said.

Bell tries to keep disconnected residential numbers out of service for 30 days and business numbers for 90 days, but the shortage makes that policy impossible in some areas, said residential service manager Tom Suggs.

Lebanese refugee camp like small, crowded town

It's also outpost for Palestinian Liberation Organization

By DOYLE MCMANUS The Los Angeles Times

RASHIDIYEH REFUGEE CAMP, Lebanon — The camp is more a crowded little town than a bivouac. Its narrow streets of gravel and mud contain almost 2,000 concrete houses, 16,000 people, flocks of children, shops, schools with playgrounds, gardens of bright purple flowers, chickens, sheep and a fine private beach.

The streets hold machine gun nests, guerrilla squads, surface-to-air missiles and underground bomb shelters, and outside the camp gates an aging tank occasionally clatters by. For Rashidiyeh is the Palestine Liberation Organization's southernmost position, only nine miles across a broad shining bay from Israel's northern border. It is home to thousands of civilian refugees, most of whom have never carried a gun, but it is also a frontline base in the almost forgotton war for the southern Lebanon hills.

That war, unnoticed, sputters on. A month ago, I raeli gunboats roared up the coast and fired everal cannon rounds at the Rashidiyeh camp, and Israeli F-4 phantom jets bombed the area around it. Two weeks ago, Israeli commandos landed boats on the coast south of Beirut, ambushed cars on the highway and killed three guerrillas. The Lebanese government charges that several civilians were also killed.

AT THE SAME TIME, PLO infiltration teams try several times a week to break through a U.N. buffer zone to attack Israel or Israel's south Lebanese allies, but they are outgunned and outmanned and rarely claim any

The PLO has announced a military mobilization, a total call-up under which every male Palestinian between the ages of 18 and 50 is supposed to undergo six months of military training. It has already begun recalling university students from Eastern Europe; of the-three guerrillas killed by the Israelis on the co$st highway, two were "mobilized" engineering students, one 19 years old, the other 22.

One reason for the mobilization, PLO officials say, is that the Palestinians feel vulnerable to Israeli attack in southern Lebanon. "They won't be going on any offensive operations," a Palestinian spokesman said. "The training isn't good enough. But they will form a kind of militia force that we can call on in an emergency.' There is no evidence at Rashidiyeh, however, that mobilization has reached the frontlines.

IN FRONT OF A small block house at the gate of the camp, three young guerrillas armed with Soviet AK-47 assault rifles inspect every car moving in or out. But inside, down an asphalt road that curves through an orange grove to the camp's beach-side center, only half a dozen guns are visible, and they are all at the headquarters of the Rashidiyeh "political committee," the semiofficial city council. Down a straight narrow street hemmed in by concrete walls, with an open drainage ditch full of rain water running down the middle, Fahed Said Assaad, 45, showed a visitor his home.

The light green house had two cold rooms, like concrete boxes, with windows open to the winter wind. Out of one of the rooms, with the number 9051 stenciled above the door, came Assaad's wife and four of their 10 children. "My son," Assaad said proudly, and brought forward his oldest boy, Suheil, 17.

Assaad, a construction laborer, said he makes no more than $350 in a good month but wants his son to go to college.

Suheil, a tall young man in corduroy pants and a flannel shirt, would not have looked out of place at an American high school. "I want to study mathematics," he said.

"He has already done military training, during his summer vacations," a PLO interpreter volunteered. "He is a good soldier.

"He is better at football (soccer)," Suheil's mother said hopefully.

Assaad said he fled from his home in Acre, in northern Palestine, with his parents when the state of Israel was proclaimed in 1948. He was 13. Now he, and his son with military training, and their house in Rashidiyeh pose a dilemma for Israel: Is the camp a legitimate military target, even when civilians make up most of its inhabitants?

THE ISRAELI GOVERNMENT of Prime Minister Menachem Begin says camps like Rashidiyeh are the bases from which attacks on Israel are launched. Begin has followed a policy of "pre-emptive strikes," meaning that Israeli forces attack Palestinian positions at will to weaken the PLO's ability to strike

'In order to prevent the terrorists from coming and killing Israeli citizens, we cannot wait for them to cross the border," Begin said after a raid in Assaad would not agree. "This is just a house," he said, pointing to the ruined home across the street from his own. "There is nothing military about that.

The Begin government has been sensitive to criticism of its strikes against camps where large numbers of civilians are likely to be hurt. After several attacks. Israeli military spokesmen have made a point of noting that their targets were strictly military.

U.N. OBSERVERS in the border area say that it appears that the Israelis have shifted their targeting in recent months, to concentrate on Palestinian positions with fewer civilians. One example, they said, is the 13th-Century castle at Beaufort, 20 miles east of Rashidiyeh, which was built by the Crusaders but is now a major Palestinian artillery position, only three miles from Israeli territory.

Israel's air force has pounded the castle repeatedly, but the Palestin ians - and the medieval battlements - have refused to yield. The United Nations has held a large buffer zone in between the Palestinians and the Israelis since 1978, when Israel invaded southern Lebanon to

There are, in fact, two or perhaps three buffer zones on Israel's northern border. One is the U.N. area, patrolled by soldiers from Fiji, Ireland, the Netherlands, Norway, Nigeria, Ghana and Senegal.

To the south of the U.N. area is a belt averaging four miles in width controlled by Maj. Saad H$ddad, a temperamental former officer in the Lebanese army. Haddad has raised his own anti-Palestinian militia of Lebanese Christians and placed it at Israel's service.

Within Haddad's border zone are half a dozen sections of Lebanese territory, mostly hilly ground overlooking Israeli settlements, in which the Israeli army has assumed protection.

The U.N. force was originally assembled to take over the entire area that Israel occupied in 1978, but Haddae - supported by the Israelis - had refused to allow the U.N. force into his area. In turn, the Palestinians and their leftist Lebanese allies have refused to recognize the legitimacy of the U.N. force unless it takes over the land held by Haddad.

As a result, the hapless U.N. troops are often accused by each side of protecting the other.

And on some occasions, they actually come under fire from both sides when they attempt to stop them from fighting. A few weeks ago, according to U.N. military reports, a PLO squad attempted to sneak through the Irish-patrolled zone to attack Haddad's men but were stopped by Irish soldiers.

The Palestinians opened fire on the Irish, who returned the compliment. At that point, Haddad's men opened up with a heavy machine gun - not against the Palestinians, but against the Irish. The U.N. troops finally calmed both sides after almost two hours, with no casualties.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Although mass murder is regarded as a rare crime, at least three mass murderers are known to be at large in the U.S. and Britain. This is a report on one of them.

> By MORT YOUNG Hearst Special News Service

He slips out of the shadows at night. From behind he brings down a ballpeen hammer repeatedly on his victim's head. Then he drags her into the dark to stab her again and again and again. They call him the Yorkshire Ripper. He is suspected of attacking 18 women, 13 of whom were killed, in a small area of Yorkshire in northeast England. After five long years of unpredictable murders, the Ripper has become a faceless horror.

Mass murder is a bizarre phenomenon. The killer strikes in random communities, at random victims. Yet each attack may be meticulously planned. Police confront an imposing task, for the mass murderer follows no rules but those laid down in his psychotic mind.

IT IS ALSO AN UNUSUAL crime. Nevertheless, at least three mass murderers are being sought in this country and Great Britain.

The mass murderer usually is a male whose victims are almost invariably women. But generalizations are of no help to the police - or to potential victims.

The Ripper is able to hide in plain sight.

becomes overwhelming, has to have an outburst," commented a British psychiatrist, Dr. Stephen Shaw. "Immediately after the killing, he goes back to his normal self again.'

Yorkshire police seem to know the most intimate details about the Ripper, except what they need to know most: who he is. They scoff at psychiatric profiles of the Ripper, unlike Marin County police who are searching for the suspected killer of seven people along California hiking trails during the

Nor do the British police put much stock in psychics, as did the police in Atlanta, Georgia, in their hunt for 15 missing black youngsters, 10 of whom are known to be dead. Yet a psychic predicted that the Ripper would strike either last November 17 or 27. The Ripper killed again on the 17th.

In all three cases, police so far have not come close to capturing the killers.

THE CALIFORNIA AND YORKSHIRE cases have certain similar features. The Ripper and the Marin County killer each got in touch with the police. Neither sexually molests his victims although both leave signs that killing stimulates them sexually.

Marin police said the killer makes his victims strip and kneel submissively, perhaps begging for their lives, before he shoots them. The Ripper conducts an elaborate and bloody ritual.

He invariably strikes at night, coming from behind his victims to bludgeon them with the hammer. After dragging them out of sight, he stabs them with a long, thin blade or screwdriver anywhere from two

The Ripper's signature is his method of stabbing and lashing and the particular manner in which he arranges the victim's underwear. From the first time he struck, on July 5, 1975, his victims have borne unmistakable signs police associate with Apparently he doesn't take any of his victims' possesions. At first he struck late at night at prostitutes. But his eighth victim, in 1977, was a 16year-old girl. He wrote to police, apologizing for the 'mistake." Even so, last year he murdered a 19-year-old college girl.

And it was early evening of last Nov. 5 when the Ripper may have tried to kill another 16-year-old girl as she returned home after shopping - less than two weeks before a 20-year-old Leeds University student was caught and killed within yards of her home the evening of Nov. 17.

THE INCONSISTENCIES ARE maddening. Why does the Ripper attack prostitutes, and then seem to track down the random, lone woman?

All the attacks, however, took place in the same general section of Yorkshire. Six women, prostitutes, were killed in the city of Leeds. Ten miles away, four prostitutes, were attacked in Bradford, three of whom died. Other murders occurred in Halifax, Manchester and Keighley. All the attacks were made within a 30-mile radius, except for one Ripper-associated killing in Preston, a seaport town 50 miles from Leeds.

That the Ripper might be a seaman or a serviceman has been discounted. That he lives among his victims has not. The thought that anyone might be living next door to the Ripper has had an unnerving effect.

MALE AND FEMALE STUDENTS from Leeds University have struck up conversations in taverns with strangers to hear their accents. From a taped phone call the Ripper is suspected of making to the police, he is said to have a Yorkshire accent and, possibly, a slight stammer he cannot quite hide.

The local police have shrugged off help from the public. George Oldfield, a West Yorkshire assistant chief constable, bluntly announced that the Ripper manhunt was "a personal thing between him and me." After supervising the case since it opened in 1975, Oldfield was taken off it last month.

Local authorities suggested a curfew to keep women safely off the streets after dusk, thus denying the Ripper victims. The response from women was immediate and categorical. As a female university professor pointed out, since the Ripper is male it would make more sense to impose a curfew on For a killer who marauds in the dark, the Ripper's description is tantalizingly detailed. Based on the testimony of survivors, on clues left at the scenes of the crimes, on three letters and the phone call allegedly from the Ripper to the police, the description could fit many men. Except for one item. The Ripper may have dark, wavy hair. He may stand between 5'6 and six feet tall. He is Caucasian and is perhaps between 25 and 56 years old. He may drive a Morris Oxford sedan. He wears a size seven shoe - unless, police conjecture, he is purposely squeezing into shoes too small for his feet. His foot size could be eight and a half, at most.

"If we had 20 to 30 suspects in one room. Constable Oldfield has commented, "we would know quickly which was the Ripper.

BUT THE RIPPER HAS NOT obliged by coming forward to participate in that kind of whodunnit solution, despite the pasting up of posters in Leeds calling him a coward. More is thought to be known about the Ripper. For instance, he has a gap between his front upper teeth, according to bite marks on the fourth victim's left Yorkshire Ripper still loose despite clues "He is a man who can control his impulse for breast. A semen sample taken from the corpse was writing samples. It has all cost nearly $7 million, and variable lengths of time but who, when the urge matched with the saliva taken from the three envelopes the Ripper may have licked shut and mailed to leading to the Ripper's arrest and conviction. police. Both were from a man with type B blood, common only to six per cent of British males.

But there are some catches to these apparently

That fourth victim, a 26-year-old prostitute, was not stabbed. Her watch and jewelry were stolen. The forbidden. killer performed a sexual act with her. The Ripper isn't supposed to do these things; they aren't parts of head and her underclothes were partly arranged as the Ripper is said to prefer.

If the Ripper really wrote those letters to the really his. If he didn't write the letters, there may be two killers each with the rare blood type B.

found out, the police are no closer to capturing the form. Ripper. The psychological overtones, which at least provide some behavioral clues, were ignored while Oldfield ran the case.

'We'll probably find out he's had too long on the left breast and not enough on the right," the constable complained, referring to suggestions offered by psychologists.

But Oldfield followed police routine with painstaking care. More than 200,000 people have been questioned, 172,000 cars checked out, 25,000 visited where the Ripper might live. The police have logged more than 5,000 phone calls and investigated 7,000 hand-

Nevertheless, one of the most obvious and important clues has not been checked by police.

They have been refused permission to go through British medical records to identify males with blood type B. It has been ruled an invasion of privacy, and

THE YORKSHIRE RIPPER remains at large, his ritual. On the other hand, she was struck on the awaiting as is everyone else in Yorkshire his next urge to kill. Now, however, one more terror has been added to the five years of fear.

That last straw is a possible clue the police chose police, then the fourth victim attributed to him is not to reveal. One of the women who survived the Ripper's attack thinks she saw someone hiding in a shadow before she was struck from behind. This No matter which turns out to be true, if it is ever woman thinks the man was wearing a police uni-

Rules set for suits on disclosure of secrets

 Taking a narrower view than the Supreme Court has, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti issued rules Friday limiting occasions in which the Justice Department can sue past or present government workers for publishing official secrets.

Justice Department sources, who asked not to be named, said Civiletti had rejected arguments from some U.S. intelligence agencies that the guidelines be drawn along the lines of a broad settled in June with Supreme Court decision Stockwell, who said he last February. That ruling came in the case of former CIA officer Frank W. Snepp III, who wrote a book called "Decent Interval" about the fall of South Vietnam to the communists.

Civiletti's guidelines, which took effect when he signed them on Tuesday, bar suits against employees who have not signed government-secrecy agreements except when their disclosures "will pose a serious and imminent threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States." The rules will affect all government agencies with such secrecy agreements, including the CIA, FBI, Defense Intelligence Agency and National Security Agency, because they must have Justice Department approval to

The Supreme Court ruled that Snepp had violated his secrecy agreement by not seeking advance clearance for his writing even though the government never contended that he disclosed any classified information. It ordered him to give the government all earnings from the book and he has turned over a $140,000 check.

But the Supreme Court also said the government could sue employees who had not signed secrecy agreements if they had "access to confidential sources" which put them in a trust relationship with the government.

Critics of the Snepp prosecution have stressed that he disclosed no secrets and claim that he was being sued for his criticisms of the CIA. Civiletti's guidelines forbid consideration of the political content of a disclosure or the political viewpoint of its author in government decisions on whether to

The guidelines also require government attorneys to weigh whether the disclosure contained secrets and how serious they were, although they do not absolutely bar suits involving non-claspublication of information but warn that such a suit is viewed "by the department as an exmatter that should be undertaken onl; after the most searching scrutiny of the strength of the government's case.'

Earlier this year, the Justice Department sued to prevent publication of a book called "Dirty Work II: The CIA in Africa" on which former CIA Agent Philip Agee had worked. The book purported to name CIA undercover agents in Africa, but it had already reached bookstores bethose vulnerable years.

Since the first hints connecting cigarette smoking with lung cancer -It is almost two years ago that Joe and subsequently linking smoking to Califano (then secretary of HEW) heart, lung, circulatory and such dispublicly hailed preliminary survey orders as early menopause and ill results that seemed to indicate a drop effects on fetuses - educators have in smoking among adolescent boys. tried to head off potential smokers. That worked wonderfully with the experts on adolesence have since dis-7-, 8- and 9-year-olds who often warned smoking parents, "You're gonna die!" But by the time the kids covered that it may be that teens were not smoking less at all. They simply may have been lying about it got to be about 14, fear had basically lost its deterrent effect. Nor did the Dr. Richard Evans, director of the threat of such instant smoking ills as University of Houston Department of yellow teeth, yellow nails, bad breath or acne have much effect. Finally, the Houston behaviorists, under Dr. Evans, began a program in conjunction with the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute. After a three-year trial, it is offering hope of an effectiveapproach. Their own surveys - backed carefully with the coroborating saliva tests — indicate a drop of about 6 percent in new smokers in the schools in which the programs operated. It is regarded as a landmark breakthrough and is being used, along with other techniques, in major experimental anti-smoking centers in this country. The Evans recipe is imaginative, but not complex. It uses both the strong peer-group orientation of the teen-ager and the Madison Avenue techniques which originally lent the aura of glamor or manliness to the smoker.

The subtle message and good filmmaking, rock-music background, no preaching, bright colors, genuine teen situations (from disco to girls room) and genuine teen actors give the films versimilitude and effectiveness. And with enough different films to avoid the "nag-effect" or the pure boredom of most of the hundreds of thousands of pieces of "educational material" hitherto available, the Evans films are good box office in Houston schools, and have beome the underpinningse of a number of other imaginative programs in other centers. They are popular with teachers because they are easily deliverable. In fact, Evans hopes they soon will be made available to schools and other groups nationwide. Inquiries may be sent to Dr. Evans at the University of Houston, Houston, Texas 77004.

Among the specific strategies,

Teens not truthful about smoking teens can learn: -Techniques for saying "no" to pro-smoking peer pressure, as in "My coach won't let me on the team," or "I thought you were my friend; why do you want me to smoke?" or "I'm —Techniques for psyching-out ads: Noticing how the surgeon general's warning is made inconspicuous by placement, shadowing, coloring. -The hard health facts from peer opinion leaders.

Another program, described by Dr. Gilbert Botvin of Cornell University, also tries to identify and utilize behav-iorial factors which tend to lead to smoking, for example, as an effort to improve self-esteem or as a reflection of impatience to grow up. He points out, too, that smoking is only one of the self-destructive behaviors to which adolescents are prone - alcohol and drugs being others.

Six killed in train crash

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) - Five Westerners and a Thai were killed in a train collision southwest of Bangkok, a spokesman for the Thai state railway announced today.

He said two Swiss and a Dutch national were among the dead, but the nationalities of the other two Westerners were not immediately available. Twelve passengers were reported injured.

The collision occurred in Petchawar province 60 miles southwest of Bangkok when a southbound train rammed another train that was stopped, the spokesman said.

Reagan's son gives comments

NEW YORK (AP) — The son of Presidentelect Ronald Reagan says marriage is nothing but a $7 license, believes his father may be the greatest president ever and contends President Carter "has the morals of a snake."

Ron Reagan, 22, said he will not shake hands with Carter in Washington on Inauguration

"There is no way I'll be ble to," Reagan said in an interview in New York magazine's Dec. 22 issue. "I will never for-give the way (Carter) called my father a racist and a warmonger over and over again. ...

"Carter would have sold his mother to get re-elected. He has the morals of a snake," Reaan charged.

There was no immedite comment from the White House. Young Reagan said in the interview that he recently married the 29year-old woman he had been living with in order to make things easier for

"I just knew with all the places we would be going and the people we would be seeing, it would be a lot easier," he said.

"Besides, marriage is nothing romantic to me. That's not where our romance comes from.

What is a wedding anyway, but a $7 license..."
Young Reagan, who dances with the Joffrey Ballet company, also dismissed suggestions that he is a homosexual.

"It's laughable, isn't it?" he said. "I mean, I just can't believe the level of stupidity of re-porters in this town. ... The idea that anyone would think dancing is effeminate. I'll tell you this, it's a lot more athletic than playing base-

Athlete's death raises questions on physicals

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

Death came to Midland High sophomore Theodore "Teddy" Terrazas in Snyder Dec. 6 while playing in a junior varsity basketball game, and it has raised many questions. Could it have been prevented? Should Terrazas have been playing sports in the first place? Is the Midland Independent School District following correct guidelines in terms of physical examinations for its ath-

An autopsy report released this week said Terrazas died of "ventricular fibrillation" and an enlarged heart. Terrazas thought he was hyperventilating during the game in Snyder and then came out of the contest. He later collapsed on the bench and was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital in Snyder where he died.

THE MISD has certian rules reguarding the physical elgibility of all athletes in the school system. Each athlete is required to fulfill four requirements before taking to practice or competi tion. 1). Each athlete must be certified by a physician to be physically fit for athletic competition. 2). Each athlete must have permission to play from a parent or guardian, 3) Parents or guardians must assume responsibility for medical expenses as a result of athletic injuries. Parents are asked to pay the premium for the school insurance policy or assume all responsibility for any athletic injury. 4). Athletes are asked for preference of family doctor, but may give permission to school officials to allow the use of a team physician.

The Midland schools athletic programs, as all organized schools competing in an organized district, is under the rules governed by the University Interscholastic League, headquartered in Austin. The UIL has set forth only one paragraph in its guidelines concerning permission to play or medical examinations.

There shall be on file in each school an annual medical certificate and a permit from the student's parents or guardian granting permission for him or her to play for each student who participates in practice, scrimmage or game," reads the UIL directive

THERE ARE no guidelines by the UIL on how extensive a physical has to be. Generally, all schools in the state rely on the communities' doctors to make that decision. Midland is no excep-

Terrazas had his physical prior to the start of football practices in August as required by the UIL and the MISD. His physical was given by Dr. Albert Courtney. Dr. Courtney signed his releese form. "He (Terrazas) received the same physical that we give all the athletes," Dr. Courtney said. "It's a pretty routine physical. We check the heart and lungs and for hernias. We also check joints and each is required to hop up and down 25 times before we again check the pulse rate."

Dr. Courtney found nothing wrong with Terrazas at the time. Asked if an enlarged heart could be found in this type of examination, he replied, "Yes, if it (the heart) is very enlarged."

Dr. Courtney also noted that no cardiograms or X-rays are performed unless something "abnormal" is detected from the examination.

DR. COURTNEY also pointed out that cardiograms and X-rays would be very expensive for the parents unless they were warranted. The school system would have a big financial burden if it had to pay for those expenses.

Marquette stuns Minnesota

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer

It was almost like opening night jitters for Coach Hank Raymonds and his Marquette basketball team.

He had his unranked and inexperienced Warriors on the road for the first time this season, facing a highly touted Minnesota team, and the butterflies were as big as basket-

"I'm elated, boy, I'll tell you," Raymonds said after his Warriors rallied to beat the Gophers 92-84 at Minneapolis. "I was scared coming up here, the first time on the road with an untested team.'

Trailing 65-55 with 12 minutes left in the game, Marquette finally got untracked. Guards Art Green and Mike Wilson led a nine-point surge that cut Minnesota's lead to one, and freshman Glenn Rivers, the third guard in Raymonds' fastbreak offense, hit two free throws to give the Warriors their

"They just outquicked us," Gophers Coach Jim Dutcher said. "When we had to have patience, we didn't have it. You don't give up 92 points. How are you going to win giving up

Oliver "Big O" Lee was the top scorer for Marquette, hitting a ca-reer-high 30 points. Minnesota's 7foot-1 center, Randy Breuer, scored 21 despite foul trouble that forced Dutcher to keep him on the bench part of the second half.

"When they took the big kid out of there, I was able to play the three guards," Raymonds said. "You've got to have the right matchups, and Rivers was the catalyst. You're going to be writing a lot about him in the

The victory left Marquette with a 3-1 record, the Warriors' only loss onship.

Nevada-Reno got 20 points from coming to 17th-ranked Illinois last center Greg Palm and coasted by Arkansas State 79-61 in the first game. In the late game, Portland "In the middle of January, this will all be forgotten," Dutcher said. "But outclassed McNeese 84-61 as Jose Singleton led the way with 19 points. In other college action Wednesday night, Kenny Matthews scored 16 points to lead North Carolina State past Appalachian State, 71-47. Sophomore Frank Poindexter's four free throws in the final 16 seconds gave Auburn a 78-74 victory over Florida

Doc Holden scored 15 points and led five starters in double figures as Cincinnati downed previously undefeated Bradley 76-64. Forward Jeff Malone, with 21 points, paced Mississippi State to an 87-62 victory over Tennessee-Martin. Joe Faine scored the winning basket with 50 seconds to play and wound up with 26 points in Bowling Green's 79-76 victory over Mississippi. Alvin Brooks hit two free throws with 12 seconds left to give Lamar an 80-79 victory over Oklahoma.

Happiness is Utica College

Ohio State center Herb Williams gets the old peekaboo treatment as he searches for a rebound in college basketball action.

Costello doesn't miss NBA

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) - Larry Costello tells the story now with something like a smile on his face. But there's no amusement in the eyes of the former National Basketball Association coach.

That was when I was still with the Bucks, but wasn't coach of the team anymore," Costello said. "We were playing a Friday night game.

"On Friday night, this player said he couldn't play because of an ankle injury. I saw him walk on it and he was limping terribly, you'd have thought his leg was going to fall off. He really looked like he was hurt."

'So he doesn't play that night. The next morning my wife and I went out to a tennis club in Milwaukee and the same guy was there, playing tennis," he said. "Here was a guy probably making $250,000 a year. and he just didn't feel like playing that night. I guess it was just the money that used to tee me off. They just didn't want to play hard all the

as head coach at Utica College, a small liberal arts school in central New York. The Division III team (which wants to go Division I in three years) hasn't a tradition of good basketball to go along with the winning reputation Costello brings to

But Costello, 49, seems at ease with the challenge of building a program at a place where the athletes play for fun and pride and not

"I'm learning now I was on a vacation in the NBA," said Costello from an office in the throes of remodeling. The Utica gym seats 2,200. "Back there, all I had to worry about was coaching 82 games a year and watching game films. Here I have to worry about recruiting, community relations and a whole range of other things. I really have to coach

Utica has won six of its nine games so far this season. Costello, who started at the school in September, thinks he can do even better once he recruits

Costello grew up in the Syracuse suburb of Minoa and began a successful playing career at Niagara University. He went on to play 12 years in the NBA with Syracuse and Philadelphia, and was picked six times as an All-Star

He returned to the NBA as a coach reputed to have the most complex playbook in the league. In 1970-71, Costello directed a Milwaukee team that included Oscar Robertson and Lew Alcindor to the NBA title.

After a season he describes as "fun" with the Milwaukee Does of the now-bankrupt Women's Professional Basketball League - "the girls came to play every single day" - Costello improbably took the Utica job when asked by a childhood friend, school president Thomas Sheldon.

"You don't even think of questioning his ability," said Utica senior Danny Ryan. "This guy has been involved in basketball his entire life. He's been at the top of his profession. You know what he's showing you is

Eagles pick over Bills

Computer forecasts Super Bowl foes

By JOHN NADEL

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Now hear this, football fans. The Philadelphia Eagles are going to beat the Buffalo Bills in Super Bowl XV at the Superdome in New Orleans next month by three points.

Who says so? Bud Goode and his faithful Univac 1100 computer, that's who. And while Goode is the first to admit that computers aren't flawless, 14 of the National Football League's 28 teams subscribe to his service including the Eagles and Bills - so he (or his computer) must know some-

Goode, 57, is a self-admitted statistics freak who has been involved in football stats for the past 15 years. He, and his computer, have a number of definite opinions concerning what it takes to win in the NFL.

'The most important statistic of this season is percentage of passing touchdowns to passes thrown," said Goode in an interview. "But the facts are that teams are winning with the

"I don't have any opinions. The numbers tell me the difference between winners and losers, what's important. It's a statistical philosophy.

"The drums are beating for a passing game this year but are teams winning with it? The answer is not nearly as much. The keys are number of running attempts and stopping the Goode began his service in 1975 with one team subscribing. It has accelerated greatly since then.

"It took me 15 years to prepare the program," he said. "It takes about three seconds for the computer to run a pre-game analysis, and about five minutes to print a book, which is about 60 pages. 'From the books, some teams build a game plan. Starting with the third week of the season, Goode's computer has predicted that the Eagles are the most likely NFC'team to go to the Super Bowl. The Bills have been the computer's AFC selection since the 11th week and still are, despite a 24-2 loss to New England last Sunday.

While Goode is convinced that running the football and stopping the run are keys to winning, he quickly points out that "stats don't win for you, people do.

'You don't need a big average: You only have to make better than 3.3 yards per carry, but you've got to do it regularly," he said. "You'd be smart to run the ball and that's especially true for teams who have no defense. Any time you run the ball 10 times more than your opponent at the championship level, you'll probably

"Good running backs are defensive ballplayers, they eat the clock and keep the ball away from the other team. The average Super Bowl team over the years has run the ball 33 times a game. The Eagles and Bills are near the top in both number of rushes and fewest rushing attempts allowed. At the top in both of those categories, plus percentage of touchdown passes per passes thrown, is the Los Angeles

Rams survive once

By Melvin Durslag ANAHEIM, CALIF. -- As a force advancing to the National Football League playoffs for the eighth year in a row, the Los Angeles Rams clearly reflect the virtues of strong leadership at the top.

In the Ram press guide, it says of President Georgia Frontiere, Georgia has proved to be a strong leader with the Rams.

And, indeed, that assessment is irrefutable when you consider that Georgia is completing her second season at the helm with a team that (a) has played in one Super Bowl, and (b) fosters hope of sneaking into an-

As they say on the Q.E. II, this one has been a smooth crossing. The season opened in the club's hub of happiness, Anaheim, with a ticket war in which customers demanded to know why they had lost their old locations.

They never found out. Important players on the team then failed to show up for work, arguing over salary. Bob Brudzinski, a prime linebacker, departed the club for keeps. In the tradition of La Scala, where divas for centuries have hurled their temperament at impresarios, quarterback Vince Ferragamo bickered with management.

And lately, of course, you have noted a disturbance growing out of an antitrust suit against the league. It involves Super Bowl ticket sales, and who did what hasn't yet been estab-

But, blissfully impervious to distraction, the Rams have rolled back to the playoffs, which have come to be their niche in December for so many years non

Cynics cry the Rams wouldn't have been so lucky if eight of their first 10 wins hadn't been achieved against the Packers, Cards, Giants, Jets and twice apiece against the Saints and REVIEWS of the foregoing teams this year have been less than rave.

But it hasn't been pointed out, either, that the Rams have suffered far more than an averge measure of injuries and still have been able to keep their composure. As a general rule, teams hurt that much wind up out of the playoffs, so, schedule and all, the success of Los Angeles can't be minimized If the club's recent habits in postseason are running to form, the Rams should start to get dangerous at this time. You may recall that they staggered home in their division last year with a record of 9-7, only to turn up unaccountably in the Super Bowl.

They are a pretty wily outfit, with a knowledge of how to play, and the young people brought onto the squad have drawn strength and wisdom from the old dogs who know the terri-

If the Rams have turned up with a winning season on the field, they have flourished, too, commercially, in their opening year at Anaheim, to where the club fled after 33 years in Los Angeles.

Ken Forsch still wants a trade

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston Astros pitcher Ken Forsch, one of eight possible starters on the roster, is ready to help Manager Bill Virdon in choosing his five-man rotation by saying he still wants to be

Forsch reacted sharply and quickly to the firing of Tal Smith on Oct. 27 by saying he wanted to be traded. Forsch still wants to leave, but under his own

"I've been here a long time and I've always thought about the team first," Forsch said. "Now it's time to think strictly about myself. If San Francisco doesn't want to pay that (extension) then I'm not going to approve the deal. That tells me I don't figure in their plans all that much."

Forsch referred to a proposed trade with the Giants that would have sent Forsch and outfielder Jeff Leonard to the Giants in exchange for outfielder Larry Herndon and an unnamed player.

DALLAS (AP) - Cotton Bowl officials have announced that the Jan. 1 classic between Alabama SPORTS WITH LIVING ROOM VIEW and Baylor is a sellout. A crowd of more than 73,000 is anticipated for the 1:10 p.m. kickoff, said Mike Justice, director of the ticket sales.

'The response has been overwhelming. Baylor has moved a record 25,000 plus, with Alabama around 10,000. We are returning orders received by the two institutions and our office for more than 9,000 seats." Justice said.

All mail order requests to the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association postmarked on or before Nov. 20 were accepted and tickets have been mailed, he added.

The CBAA created additional seats by moving bands to the playing field and into special constructed end zone bleachers to help meet the demands,

Ellenberger coaches gals

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) - Norm Ellenberger, the former University of New Mexico basketball coach who became the central figure in the recruiting scandal that shook the school last year, has returned to the coaching ranks.

Ellenberger, fired at New Mexico at the outset of the scandal which erupted just before the start of the 1979-80 season, is now coach of the new Albuquerque Energee professional women's team.

Wednesday was opening night for the fledgling team and Ellenberger.

The Energee lost the game, 100-98, to the Phoenix Flames, but it was apparent Ellenberger had lost none of his enthusiasm for the game he says he has never wanted to leave.

"I love it, it's just great," said Ellenberger in a post-game interview. "I got very good vibes from the

He doesn't pack barroom punch, but Gumbel big hit as TV host

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Sports Writer

As far as we know, Bryant Gumbel of NBC's "NFL 80" hasn't tried to punch anybody in the mouth lately, nor has he made any of the ladies cry.

He'll leave those well-publicized, off-the-set activities to CBS' Brent Musburger, Jimmy The Greek and hyllis George at the other pre-game National Football League show

After all, what kind of host would Gumbel be if he got into fights and tearful scenes with his colleagues on the show? Gumbel, you see, is the consummate host, making us feel welcome whether it's for a football Sunday, the World Series or this Saturday's Miami Dolphins-New York Jets no-announcer game. He'll provide periodic updates and be a fail-safe if NBC runs into technical difficulties on its graphics.

The sports host role is a TV-created job. Nobody in newspapers or magazines welcomes you to the sports section. But, then again, there wasn't much news pursuit on TV sports until recently. Enter Gumbel at NBC, Musburger at CBS and Jim McKay at ABC. They're the guys who inform the viewer about what's happening beyond the game.

GUMBEL, at 32, is the youngest of the three, but he performs his job as well as any of them. His work at the World Series, providing capsule updates of the game's flow and highlights, was informative and to the point. So were his locker room interviews following Philadelphia's sixth-game victory. Anybody who's ever worked that madhouse scene knows how difficult the assignment can be.

But Gumbel handled it with style and ease, which is the way he does everything, whether it's "Today" show assignments or the valuable NFL game updates that NBC cranks out with regularity on Sun-

Last Sunday, while dining on wonton soup from a carry-out container, Gumbel was seated in front of a half-dozen TV monitors showing NBC's 1 p.m., EST, games. When Cleveland scored against Minnesota, Gumbel sprung into action. Since only his voice is heard on the updates, Gumbel could stay at his private cafeteria and watch the action.

WITHIN minutes, NBC was inserting the TD into the markets receiving Kansas City at Pittsburgh, Houston at Green Bay and Buffalo at New England. Each time, Gumbel would ask the producer to put the play-by-play of the game in his ear. Then the game announcer would introduce Gumbel, who would describe the highlight, using different phrases each time. Without notes and without missing a

'That's why I love doing this type of show," said Gumbel, who is unique since he's never done playby-play or game commentary. "There's so much freedom to create. I much prefer talking on my feet than sticking to some play-by-play formula. I think I have a nice niche here. I believe play-by-play would

But for exposure, does he need the Olympics? Jim McKay has toiled on ABC's "Wide World of Sports," since 1961 but it's the several weeks at the Olympics the nation spends with him every four years that has made him the most popular host this side of Johnny Carson Gumbel's NBC contract expires in July of 1983. Musburger, who was negotiating to join McKay for ABC's expected 200-plus Olympic hours in 1984, just signed a new four-year deal with CBS.

"I've got enough to satisfy my work load, ego and bank account," said Gumbel, who writes poetry and half-finished novels in his off-hours. "I like to think I'm not a victim of blind ambition. I also think I'm honest enough to admit that somewhere down the road, the Olympics might mean more to me."

GUMBEL was supposed to have had his Olympics this year with NBC's 150 hours of planned coverage. But Gumbel's chance to get the whole nation's attention — and not just the sports fan's — faded in President Carter's boycott of the Moscow Games. "I shed my tears for that one," he said.

Many people may not know it, but Gumbel has been available this TV season to non-sports audiences as host of the silly stunt show "Games People Play." This is the baby of Don Ohlmeyer, executive producer of NBC Sports. Despite incessant promotionals on NBC's legitimate shows, "Games" is one of the big bombs of the season.

It would be unfair to criticize Gumbel for doing his job, no matter how meaningless the show is. And he's too honest to say he'd watch "Games" if he were on the other side of the camera. Still, he doesn't think it's harmed his credibility as a sports journalist.

Handwriting was on wall at Tech

Rex Dockery received a vote of confidence from the Texas Tech, but that "win or else" ultimatum tossed in along with the vote must have looked like handwriting on the wall to the likeable redhead from Tennes-

So while most people may wonder how Dockery could leave Texas Tech, a member of a prestige conference with yearly television dates, for Memphis State, a fringe major school, it was a case of exchanging a high risk prospect of snake eyes for a semblance of security, if there is such a thing beyond Houston or Alabama in college football.

Besides, Dockery is going home and the combination must have seemed

IF THINGS had continued the way they had that first year when Dockery was thrust into the sudden vacancy created by the departure of Steve Sloan for Mississippi, there would have been no ultimatum and Rex wouldn't have considered a change.

In 1978, everything Rex touched turned to touchdowns or interceptions. It was one of the most exciting campaigns in Red Raider annals.

While 7-4 may not seem like much, the Raider prospects at the season's start were so dismal that a winning record earned for the unknown Dockery SWC Coach of the Year and it looked like he was destined to enjoy and long and successful tenure in Lubbock

That year, 1978, started off with a 17-9 loss to USC on the coast, a game in which Tech was on the verge of an upset until the game's late stages. And if Tech had had any kind of offense to go with a gritty defense, it could have happened.

THEN, THE next week against Arizona, Dockery inserted freshman quarterback Ron Reeves into an apparent lost cause against Arizona and the season was saved. The Raiders rallied to beat the Wildcats 41-26 and pulled out a couple last gasp victories in late-season stunners against SMU and SWC champion Houston. A converted tight end, James Had-not, became a 1,000-yard rusher and by the season's end some guys who weren't even on the Tech preseason roster were rescuing games for the Raiders in the defensive secondary. It was that kind of year. By 1979, the honeymoon was over.

Some of those fleet-footed, glue-fingered receivers Reeves could count on in 1978 were gone and the Raiders slipped 3-6-2.

Rex Dockery...hug from friend

THIS SEASON the Raiders were on the threshold of reclaiming the old magic, coming oh-so-close against North Carolina and Baylor and scoring eye-buggers against Texas and SMU, but it was what happened in between, against Texas A&M, TCU and Arkansas...and yes, we suppose, against Houston, that caused unrest among the natives.

So when Memphis State came along, Dockery was receptive.

Rex's successor? After three straight coaches from SEC country, Jim Carlen, Sloan and Dockery, chances are the Raiders will look closer to home, unless it's someone like Mississippi State's Emory Bellard, whose heart may still be in Texas. However, after that win over Alabama and a highly successful season it may be hard to lure the onetime San Angelo and Aggie coach away from Starkville.

Other names mentioned include Abilene's John Paul Young, the ex-Texas and current Houston aide; A&M's Tom Wilson, a one-time Tech quarterback, and while he hasn't been mentioned, Hayden Fry, who is finding that winning at Iowa isn't all that easy, might be open to a change.

hope to gain some tarnished dignity. WAC teams have lost six of their last seven bowl appearances, including consecutive Holiday Bowl setbacks suffered by BYU. Since 1937, the WAC is 19-18-1 in bowl appear-

"Those bowl defeats are very bitter," said Cougar tight end Clay Brown. "You hear about it all winter and fall. We're going after this one." In an effort to halt its post-season frustrations, Brigham Young made some changes, Edwards said Wednesday during a press conference.

We've done some positive things. We played a game one game later (in the season) and we came down here on Sunday, one day earlier than last

For some reason, "our passing has never been as sharp in a bowl game,' said Edwards, who has a 74-30 record at the Utah school.

Because of a switch by oddsmakers, Southern Methodist is now favored by one point. Until Wednesday, BYU was a 11/2-point favorite. Mustang coach Ron Meyer said

Brigham Young enters the game as the nation's offensive leader for the second straight year, averaging almost 50 points per game over the last five outings.

CHUCK DAVIS OUTDOORS Sound sleep key to camping

There is little in life more miserable than sleeping cold on a camping trip. An adequate, comfortable warm night's sleep is dependent upon the sleeping bag you snuggle into. All of your camping activities--at least your attitude towards them--is dependent upon a good night's sleep.

Many sleeping bag fillers have evolved in our technological society. Good fillers are fiberfill, Dacron 88, polyurethane and the natural stuff that keeps wildfowl warm in extreme temperatures.

Goose down is still the best insulator known and a good down bag will nudge the #300 bracket. They're the ultimate in camp comfort but really not necessary unless you're determined to go first class or if you plan to spend lots of nights outdoors when the temperature is down near zero or below. In either case down is your

A GOOD night's sleep is often the difference between a happy camping trip and a miserable one. One night of tossing and turning, cold and shivering and trying to find a flat spot between rocks can be traumatic. Three or four nights can sour you on camping forever.

So the importance of a good, comfortable, warm bed cannot be overemphasized. You can overlook poor food or lousy fishing or unproductive hunting if only you can curl up in a comfortable sack and greet the next day with renewed enthusiasm.

To achieve this, you'll need something to go with that good sleeping bag-something to keep you away from that cold, bumpy ground. If you're watching money, consider a piece of polyfoam. In a 2x24x48 inch slab this makes a fine mattress. It's also cheaper, lighter and you don't have to worry about it springing a leak. In fact, for the warmest sleeping of all put down a tarp, then the foam, your sleeping bag then fold the other half of the tarp over all. That combination is much warmer than a cot with the same amount of coverssince the cot sleeper is like a hot dog from all directions

SO FOR something around a hundred bucks or a bit less, you can have the beginnings of a camp outfit. You've bought your camp stove, lantern and sleeping bag-enough to start with. Add sleeping bags for the rest of the family and you're ready to tackle the great outdoors. Your investment will last for something like twenty years-so assuming there are four of you-each year's camping will cost less than one night in a motel. And that's in cold cash--not counting the benefits of firelight and bright stars and tall trees and moonlight on the lake and that first cup of coffee in the morning-the things that make camping such a pleasure.

The next step up the line from bare ground camping is adding a tent. In recent years these have become so easy to erect, so lightweight and waterproof, so practical and efficient, it's a shame not to have one. Tents give you some privacy--and that becomes more important every year in developed campgrounds. They also keep out the weather-especially the wet kind, although they help in cold weather too. And a good tent with a floor and a door sill can also make you sleep without fear of those, creepy, crawly things.

FOR MOST families the cottage type tents are the best. These have supplanted the old faithful umbrella tents-since they have no center pole. Since most of us don't bother to cook and eat in the tent--unless it's been raining all day and that's very unusually-they're mostly for sleeping. To determine just what size will suit you best lay your families sleeping bags out on the living room floor, add a little space for extra gear and measure the floor space you'll need. Talk to friends who already have tents or visit a store that has them set-up on display for other ideas.

It's really easy to buy an excellent tent for less then $200 -one large enough for the average family. And again, this is a long term investment that makes camping cheaper than a

Athlete's death raises questions

James "Doc" Dodson, who has been the professional trainer at Midland High for the past 22 years and recently named National High School Trainer of the Year for the second time by the National Athletic Trainer's Association, said that Terrazas had been sent to "a doctor" on Aug. 19 for an eye injury received in football, but Dodson said he missed only one or two workouts because of the minor injury. "There are some rumors going around that Teddy had hyperveventilated before, but I can tell you that if he ever did, it was never at Midland High," Dodson said. "We never had any idea that Teddy had any kind of problem at all. He missed maybe one or two practices all fall. You couldn't keep him off the field.

THERE SEEMS to be two major approaches by high schools in the state for giving athletes physicals. One is the mass physical used by schools such as Odessa and San Angelo. The other, which Midland uses, is athletes are encouraged to use their family doctor at the doctor's office. There may be advantages and disadvantages to both.

In the mass physical, a team of physicians are brought in and several hundred physicals may be given at once. The advantage is that all athletes are given the same physical, but the disadvantage may be that the Army-style production line may not be as thorough Midland's approach has been to send each athlete to the doctor of his choice for the physical. This has an advantage in that the family doctor knows the athlete's medical history and the physical is done in a clinic.

The disadvantage, however, is that athletes, or their parents, have to pick up the bill and that may range anywhere from $20 to $80, depending on just how extensive the physical is. One question raised with this system is are all athletes getting the same physical? And the answer is probably

"I think our system is better than the mass physical concept," Gil Bartosh, MISD athletic director said. 'The doctors usually know the kids this way and I think we get a better physical overall.'

'The doctors in Midland have been great to see that the physicals are done in this way," Dodson stated. "Over a period of years, we have worked out a tremendous relationship with the doctors in town and they are always willing to bend over backwards for us.

HOWEVER, DR. Courtney doesn't see too much difference in the two approaches. "Five or six years ago, I participated in mass physicals at Carver and we gave just about the same physical as we do now. I think most of the doctors are giving the same type of physical." Dr. Courtney

The MISD has insured that all athletes in the Midland school system must have physicals as required by the UIL once a year. No physicals are required for different sports. Once an athlete takes his annual physical, he or she is covered for the school year.

The question seems to be are the physicals extensive enough? Perhaps not, but all Midland athletes are receiving at the very least the basic physical that athletes statewide are

The death of Teddy Terrazas is a shame and it may be only natural to point a finger somewhere along the line. But the MISD has done many things to keep incidents like this from happening. Both local schools have full-time, licensed trainers on hand. Carroll Shanks, the Lee trainer, and Dodson are well respected around West Texas and their advice is sought after by area schools who do not have trainers. They have done some amazing things with the rehabilitation of injuries in Midland

Texas high schools are not required to have fulltime trainers, but Texas is one of three states that says if you do have a trainer, he must be a licensened trainer.

Midland doctors seem to be more than willing to work with the city's high school athletes. Tragedies like this, however, make us take stock in our situation.

Besides Hawkins, the only other repeater was defensive end Pete Catan of Eastern Illinois.

Lomax, who was on the third team a year ago, completed 296 of 473 passes — a red-hot 62,6 per cent - for 4,094 yards and 37 touchdowns this season. He finishedhis career with a whopping 13,220 yards in 42 games and 106 touchdown passes. Of his 1,607 career passes, only 55 were intercepted and Lomax passed for 300 or more yards 28 times and went over 400 yards in 12 games

There's a new degree now hanging on my wall. I completed the Stren University Session. I'm now a "Master of Monofilament." That's monofilament fishing line.

Three weeks ago, I was invited to take part in the Stren University at their Wilmington, Delaware center, the master offices of the Du Pont Company, makers of fine Stren Monofilament fish-

Before I left I had no idea what pains and aches these chemists, marketing directors and salesmen go through to promote their product. And the chemist end of the monfilament fishing line business is still beyond some of my wildest imaginations.

We'll let Dr. John E. Hansen, Research manager for Stren Fishing Line Division, telly you what monafilament line actually is.

It was introduced commercially in 1939, and things have not been the same since-for the fish, for the angler, and for the fishing tackle industry.

The angler comes out ahead, because most monofilament brands are superior to the natural linen line which it to replace 40 years ago. It has better performance overall in the qualities vital to good fishing, and it is more reliable because it requires less of the TLC (tender loving care).

But confusion about fishing lines seems to reign in the tackle industry. The reason: monofilament line is a product of science, a product of the chemist's test tube. Just as rational people can disagree over all sorts of things, from political issues to baseball teams, they can disagree over which fish line is best. As the technology of fishing line reaches new heights in sophistication season after season-with chemists and fishermen both learning more and more about fishing line-those differences become more clear cut, more closely examined, more hotly disputed.

And it's a fact of consumer life that manufacturers must trumpet their differences rather than their similarities. If they didn't how could the consumer make an informed choice between the Ford and Chevy, McDonald's and Wendy's, Exxon or Mobil?

This column in a couple of series will undertake that task, however, because of the conviction that fishermen need some straight talk to understand what is happening. While this column will offer some conclusions of its own, its principal objective is to create the atmosphere and framework in which the reader can arrive at his own informed decision.

Rams dominate Pro Bowl picks

NEW YORK (AP) - Los Angeles dominates the National Conference Pro Bowl team announced today - but Steve Bartkowski, who helped Atlanta break the Rams' hold on first place in the NFC West, is the starting quarterback.

The Rams, who had won seven consecutive division titles before settling for a wild-card playoff berth behind the Falcons this year, put eight players on the 40-man unit (20 on offense; 17 on defense; 3 specialists) which will face the American Conference Feb. 1 in the National Football League's all-star game at Honolulu's Aloha Stadium.

Los Angeles' starters are guard Kent Hill, center Rich Saul, cornerback Pat Thomas and safety Nolan Cromwell. The Rams' reserves on the team are guard Dennis Harrah, defensive tackle Larry Brooks, middle linebacker Jack Reynolds and cornerback Rod Perry.

Dallas and Philadelphia, battling this Sunday for the East Division title (both already have clinched NFC wild card berths), placed four players apiece on the Pro Bowl team.

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Nebraska guard Randy Schleusener, a pre-med major who compiled a 3.9 grade point average, received the most votes from the nation's Sports Information Directors for the 1980 Academic All-America football team.

Only Nebraska and Notre Dame managed more than one player on the first team.

The highest grade point average on the squad was a perfect 4.0 by Georgia Tech linebacker Sheldon Fox, an electrical engineering major.

Senior civil servants may get raise almost $58,000 for GS 16s; just over $66,000 for GS 17 boost. By MIKE CAUSEY The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Senior-level federal civil servants could get pay raises of as much as $24,887.50 next year if the White House and Congress accept new high-level government pay scales proposed Tuesday by the blue-ribbon Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries. The commission - known as the Quad Com because it meets every four years to study top U.S. pay rates — made its report to President Carter. He is expected to make some downward modifications and then recommend raises for Congress, new appointees of the Reagan administration and for thousands of top bureaucrats. If the increases went into effect intact, the pay of a senator or representative would jump from $60,112.50 to $85,000. That, in turn, would raise the career-political pay ceiling, and give increases in varying amounts to more than 30,000 persons, the majority in the metropolitan Washing-

If the Quad Com recommendations were adopted without change, the pay for most members of the Senior Executive Service would jump from $50,-112.50 level to a maximum of $75,000. There are about 8,500 SES jobs in government, made of up career and political appointees from the old "supergrade" levels of Grades 16, 17 and 18. Persons still in the GS istration - as did the incoming Carter administra-16, 17 and 18 category - now similarly frozen at tion four years ago - is expected to go along with personnel and to $70,000 for the handful of GS

Although President Carter is expected to incorporate some of the Quad Com recommendations in his high and John Q. Public, as witness the last final budget to congress, and although the Reagan administration-to-be is eager to be able to pay top ment. dollar to its new personnel, it is unclear what action Congress will take on the proposals.

- The final weeks of the lame-duck Congress were spent bickering over - and finally rejecting more "modest" $10,000 raise for members. The Quad Com proposals would give members of Congress boosts of almost $25,000 a year, plus a $10,000 expense account. That may be what it takes to keep Congress from becoming a millionaires club, but it is also political dynamite.

Many top-level U.S. officials have not had a pay raise in four years. Congress has refused to let the career salary ceiling rise above the $50,112.50 mark, even though rank-and-file workers have had pay raises of 7.05 percent, 5.5 percent in 1977 and 1978 and got a 9.1 percent raise last October.

The next step is up to the president, and then congress. President Carter is expected to return the favor former President Gerald Ford did him four years ago and propose some sort of high-level raises in his final budget. And the incoming Reagan admin-$50,112.50 - could rise to a maximum salary of some sort of executive-legislative-judicial pay

Turkeys in this gallery don't have bad deal

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - A German, 30 television sets and five turkeys recently moved into the Los Angeles Institute of Contemporary Art in two concurrent exhibitions. The German, Wolf Vostell, stayed in the city only long enough to gather the TVs, partially cast them in concrete and install them with live fowl in a gal-

I'm happy to report Vostell's turkey show is not a turkey and the birds don't have a bad deal, actually. They haven't been roasted, pressed into salami or sliced in sandwiches, for one thing, and they seem quite content with their temporary accommodations Well, why not? They have food, water, room to roam and their choice of simultaneously running TV programs. Their screendoored gallery has a basic gray decor, cheered by one color set, the birds' marvelously irridescent feathers and their wrinkled heads and wattles that change from red to bl7e, depending on how the turkeys are felling. Bathroom facilities are rather primitive, but turkey droppings blend harmoniously with crumbling concrete, aesthetically speaking.

Vostell, an artist of international repute, has a history of casting expensive devices in concrete to "cancel their presence." Television sets are a favorite target, but he once sealed an entire Cadillac in cement in Chicago. At the institute, some of the sets are dead or completely covered in concrete, but most have at least part of their screens exposed. They drone on and on with soap operas, talk shows and afternoon Westerns.

The birds don't actually sit around watching TV, but, according to Bob Smith, institute director, they are much more placid when the sets are on than when they are extinguished. Apparently, the monotonous sound and flickering pictures have a calming effect - the same one that can be noted in suburban living rooms.

Aside from getting our attention in an art form partly inspired by earthquake photographs, Vostell means to contrast the sophistication of TVs and turkeys. The birds win handily. He also feels we can learn more from reputedly stupid turkeys than from television, but the comparison may not be a fair one.

Aliens to return to avocado groves

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A dozen fired farmworkers, illegal aliens from Mexico, will get their jobs back in Southern California's vast avocado groves, along with $33,000 in back pay and the minimum wage from growers in the future, a labor board lawyer says.

The owners signed an agreement Tuesday to comply with all state and federal labor laws, including a $3.10-an-hour minimum wage, said lawyer Nancy Kirk of the California Agricultural Labor Relations Board.

They also agreed to provide the workers with checks instead of cash payments, work breaks, accurate pay records, notices advising workers of their rights and a 24-hour phone number for emergencies.

The state labor relations board had filed suit on the workers' behalf after they were fired July 22 for complaining about working conditions and their treatment, Ms. Kirk said.

Each of the 12 will receive $2,750 in back pay and their old jobs, according to the agreement.

The agreement needs the approval of the state ALRB, which is expected to meet in Sacramento this weekend.

The agreement was signed by Anthony Paino, half-owner of James Paino & Sons, and Allyn Rosetta, half-owner of Western Agricultural Properties, Inc. Paino also is quarter-owner of Western.

Hundreds of Mexicans work long hours in the avocado groves and thousands more on other farmlands in two southern California counties, San Diego and Riverside. Some live in makeshift tents with dirt floors and no protection from bad weather.

Most of the 12 workers, who range in age from 18 to 40, worked in the Temecula area of southern Riverside County, but are residents of the Michoacan area of central Mexico.

Lawyers from California Rural Legal Assistance and the state ALRB were told the workers had been paid as little as $69 for a 69-hour work week.

Cable TV may revive school

Firm, agency join in educational experiment

By STEVEN R. CHURM Copley News Service

"Look around this school. Lockers are deteriorating. Buildings are dirty. The grass is yellow and gold. Gopherholes are everywhere. The football field is crumbling. You know what the best part of this school is? Leaving." — Gary Patterson, a junior at Morningside High School.

LOS ANGELES — To Patterson and other students there, Morningside High School in Inglewood is a decaying dream.

Pride, he claimed, is in short supply on the campus where 95 percent of the 1,500 students are black.

And communication with the community outside is equally poor, he said. "What we have is a gap, a big gap between the students and the community," Patterson recently warned the student body during a pair of school assembles.

"Cable television can bridge that gap, but you as students must get behind this project," he urged his peers. "We need you."

A Southern California cable company and a federal agency are betting close to $50,000 Patterson is right. The gamble is Patterson and 11 other Morningside students can go a long way to repair the frayed ties between the school and community through a unique cable television project launched recently.

If successful, the six-month pilot program could pay handsome dividends.

The project will work like this: Morningside students will submit ideas for cable television shows to a 12-member student board. Once the ideas are screened and a topic selected, the board members, assisted by three paid professionals, will write, produce, film and edit the shows, which will then be shown in the Inglewood area to subscribers of SixStar Cablevision.

New shows will be produced and aired every two to three weeks, and show topics will range from drug abuse in the community to street festivals.

SixStar, a Los Angeles-based firm, is partially underwriting the Morningside experiment. Under state law adopted a year ago when cable subscription prices were deregulated, cable operators must allow public access to at least one channel. Operators also must spend 50 cents per subscriber per year to set up and finance a foundation for community service television.

The significance of Morningside's program is twofold, said Craig Wilson, director of programming for SixStar.

"First, it will give the community of Inglewood access to cable television, something that has never existed before," he explained. "And secondly, the students will learn how to use video equipment — the communication tool of the future."

Industry and school officials claim the Morningside cable project is the first of its kind in the nation. And, they add, its success may determine the fate of similar high school programs in the future.

similar high school programs in the future.

"The potential for the program is unbelievable," said Mallory Matthews, Morningside's activities planning director. "It gives students a chance to focus on what's important to them, whether it be street violence, music or sports."

Morningside was selected for the project from a list of 180 high schools statewide because of Inglewood's economic, racial and housing makeup.

David Abel, executive director of the Foundation for Community Service Television, first contacted Morningside officials after his non-profit agency received money from SixStar and the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corp. in Washington, D.C.

To meet the public service requirements, SixStar, along with the NRC, approached Abel's agency, which eventually selected Morningside for the

"It's no secret that Inglewood has its share of troubles,"said Matthews.
"Community programming is aimed at making people aware of their problems and hopefully bringing them together to solve those problems.

"The bottom line is restoring pride in where we live. That's the key."

Another key to the program is the exposure Morningside students get to the field of video. With money from Abel's agency, school officials will buy a complete video taping system for use by students long after the cable experiment ends.

Bank denies charges

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)

— A spokesman for Great Western Bank denies federal charges that the bank discriminated against three Arizona Indian tribes by refusing to make housing loans on reservations.

The charges against Great Western, Arizona's fifth-largest bank, were contained in a Justice Department lawsuit filed Tuesday in federal court here. The suit accused the bank of discouraging Indians from applying for housing loans and of refusing to issue them loans secured by housing on reservations.

The Justice Department said the class action suit was the first against a commercial bank to allege redlining, the practice of refusing to make loans in specific areas.

The department also said the suit was its first credit case involving American Indians.

The bank has 34 branch offices and serves the Navajo, Fort Apache and Hopi reservations.

William Wingate, executive vice president of Great Western, said he could not comment on the particular allegations of the suit because he had not received a copy.

"The bank denies that it has engaged in any acts of discrimination and it points with pride to its longstanding record of providing loans and other financial services to individual members of the Navajo Tribe as well as to the tribe itself," he said.

The suit seeks a court order halting any action that "has the purpose or effect of denying or abridging any rights secured by the Equal Credit Opportunity Act...or the Fair Housing Act."

It also asks unspecified damages.

A bank official who asked not to be identified said Tuesday's action might stem from a law-suit filed against Great Western in June by DNA-People's Legal Services in Window Rock. Window Rock, in northeastern Arizona, is the headquarters of the Navajo Tribe.

In that suit, which is pending, Michael and Sally Nelson of Window Rock contended they sought a construction loan but were turned down by the bank, although Nelson has a full-time job.

They alleged they were denied a loan "due to the racial (Indian) composition of the neighborhood and the geographical location of the property."

Attorneys with the civil rights division of the Justice Department, which filed Tuesday's suit, were not available to elaborate on their statement.

Get to know Commercial Bank's Doughboy, your day and night banker.

Commercial Bank's Doughboy works day and night, weekends and holidays, whether the bank is open or not, providing almost every personal banking service available from a teller.

The Doughboy can accept deposits and help you make transfers, withdrawals and payments ... even tell you how much you have in your savings or checking accounts ... all in a matter of minutes, or even seconds.

And the Doughboy is conveniently located in the corridor between our bank lobby and the Commercial Tower, and is easily accessible from our Wall Avenue entrance, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

How The Doughboy Works

The Doughboy is a snap to operate! You need only two things your Commercial Bank Automatic Banking Card and your Personal Identification Number.

The Doughboy displays a logical sequence of easy-to-follow steps, guiding you through each transaction —

- 1) Insert your card.
- 2) Enter your Personal Identification Number.
- 3) Select the transaction you wish to complete by pressing one of the six function keys (any number of transactions can be completed).

4) Enter the dollar amount of your transaction.

Then, simply remove your transaction receipt, or money, if a cash withdrawal is being made, and your card. It's that simple!

Withdrawals

The Doughboy can make cash withdrawals from your savings account or your checking account in increments of $5, up to $300 a day, or the available balance in your account, if less than $300.

Deposits

The Doughboy will accept deposits (cash and/or endorsed checks) to your checking and savings accounts.

Balance Inquiries

The Doughboy will provide a printed record of the current balances in your checking and savings accounts.

Money Transfers

The Doughboy will transfer money between savings and checking at the touch of a button, and provide you a written receipt of the transactions.

Loan Payments

Doughboy can accept loan payments by transferring money from your savings or checking account, and provide you a transaction receipt for the payment.

To Our Savings Customers

And, you can have the opportunity to use our Doughboy to make savings deposits and withdrawals electronically, day and night, seven days a week, whether the bank is open or not.

If you also have a checking account at Commercial Bank, you can use this self-service banking terminal to transact an even greater number of personal banking functions automatically.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Your guesses count on nation's economy

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When the people who used to know are asking the questions now, you have to wonder and worry about where the economy is going. Guesses count today. Is there anything better? Q. Where is the prime rate, now 21 percent,

A. Current thinking is that it will reach at least 22 percent or 23 percent. However, these projections rise with every rise in the prime. Some published forecasts now go as high as 28 percent.

In listening to any forecaster today you must realize that they are as perplexed as anyone else. Some of them haven't yet finished mailing their 1981 forecasts, and yet those forecasts are already

A. The consumer price index is now at more than 12 percent, although the underlying inflation rate, which excepts volatile prices such as fuel and mort-gage interest costs, is closer to 9 percent.

Higher costs for oil are expected to push up both rates. Anticipating the recent OPEC action allowing oil prices to rise by about 10 percent, one big investment firm raised its underlying rate forecast one point. Most analyses from private sector economists project consumer prices as rising at about the same rate as they are now, which is about 1 percent a month. However, high interest rates, which in theory depress demand and lower prices, can contribute to them in the short run. The most extreme consumer inflation forecast seems to be by Bert Dohmen-Ramirez, editor of the Wellington Letter, an investment advisory service. He tells subscribers to expect a 30 percent peak by mid-1981

Q. Gold prices? A. You can find forecasts of any price to $2,000 or so in 1981. The gold market inovlves serious, informed investors, investors who are properly concerned about the security of their assets.

But it also attracts those who, like primitive man, tend to worship gold as a piece of the sun. Speculators flock to gold. So do those with neurotic fears, revelations and the desire to make a quick buck.

In recent days gold has fallen to $575, a 15 percent loss in less than three weeks. But isn't gold supposed to rise during times of economic and political instability? That's the theory, but it hasn't been so.

One explanation for the decline is that instability seems to have offered even more security. That is, U.S. interest rates have risen so much that gold has been dumped in favor of a guranteed interest yield.

Q. Home prices? A. Median home prices are falling. The National Association of Realtors says existing single-family houses sold for $62,700 in October, $1,500 than in the previous month.

Did the decline result from high interest rates, as many believe, or was it merely a seasonal factor the onset of bad weather? That question hasn't yet been resolved, but the guess is that, yes, those expensive buying terms have been at least a major cause of the decline. Q. What about stocks? A. It's confusing. The rule of thumb is that stocks fall as interest rates rise. True, the market has lost considerable ground in the past few weeks, but it remains higher on average than it was last Jan-

In addition, hundreds of individual stocks have doubled in the past year, and the reception for new issues have been good.

Where will stocks be going? You can take your ick. Some well-regarded analysts foresee the Dow Jones industrial average doubling over the next few years. Some well-regarded analyst see it falling sharply

Perhaps the short-term consensus thinking is that those high and rising interest rates will make a dent. Wright Investors' Service of Bridgeport, Conn., recently told clients that it believes "most common stocks are now more than fully priced in relation to current interest rates and that a downward correction is more likely than not.'

But when the so-called experts begin asking your opinion, and they are, you begin to appreciate that your guess may be as good as theirs.

Prime lending rate continues to climb

By JOHN M. BERRY The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Major banks across the country ifted their prime lending rate from 20 percent to a record 21 percent Tuesday, and there was no sign that interest rates have peaked. The sky-high rates are squeezing consumers and businesses alike, and most economic forecasters believe the credit crunch will plunge the nation into recession early in 1981. "This is a credit crunch, a crisis in the market," declared H. Erich Heinemann, an economist with

Morgan Stanley & Co., New York investment bankers. "We are going to have some corporate failures coming out of this. Chrysler Corp. could be one casualty of high rates. which have depressed new car sales in recent weeks. But many smaller businesses are in the red because of high borrowing costs and less-than-robust buying by consumers who themselves are being squeezed by

Many smaller commodity speculators are being hard hit, too, as they find themselves unable to get oans to cover large declines in the value of the contracts they hold for grain, gold and other commodities. At least one speculative commodity fund for small investors, ContiCommodity's McLean Fund 1. was dissolved last week with both the investors and ContiCommodity suffering losses.

Interest rates have soared because the demand for redit has run head-on into the determination of the Federal Reserve to slow the recent rapid growth of the money supply in order to fight inflation. The short-run result likely will be a declining economy in the first half of next year.

"This is the pattern you expect a few months ahead of a recession," economist Beryl Sprinkel of Chicago's Harris Bank said. "Mr. Reagan is inheriting a literal mess."

Heinemann, Sprinkel and a number of other analysts discounted in part reports Tuesday from two government agencies indicating continued strength n the economy. The Federal Reserve said that industrial production rose 1.4 percent in November, while the Commerce Department reported that new housing starts in November were running at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1,555,000 units, almost as many as in October, which was the highest figure for any month this year.

Most analysts believe output from the nation's factories had not been adjusted last month for a weaker sales outlook. One sign that such a change has begun to take place was a sharp jump in initial claims for unemployment benefits in the last week of November. Similarly, the strength of housing is expected to evaporate as mortgage commitments made earlier are used up.

Doctors find demand, need for more 'bedside manner'

By CHRIS ROBERTS Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Two doctors at Children's Hospital, convinced that modern medicine could use a dose of old-fashioned warmth and sensitivity, are studying their colleagues' "bedside

"The job of the doctor goes beyond simply seeing if all of the organs are functioning properly," Dr. Gordon Hodas, a child psychiatrist, said. "There's a need for a personal touch, a need to treat the whole person, to understand what really makes people

Hodas and Dr. Paul Honig, a pediatrician, have received a 2½-year, $78,328 grant from the William Penn Foundation to teach "interpersonal skills" to first-year residents, hoping to reduce patient anx-

The residents are videotaped in the hospital's Outpatient Clinic as they take medical histories and examine young patients in the presence of one or both parents. The tape is reviewed and critiqued, with Hodas and Honig later pointing out strengths and weaknesses to the resident pediatricians.

'No, you can't teach empathy. It has to be there," Honig said. "But if it's there you can teach people to make maximum use of it, to spread around personal warmth and understanding.'

The residents and the parents of the patients know about the experiment, and a television camera is quite visible in a corner of the examination room. Honig and Hodas watch a TV monitor in a room down

-The subject the other day was Bob Ross, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. Sallie Johnson had brought her 2-week-old daughter, Quetta, for her first physical. The camera rolled. A reporter watched with the two doctors.

After several minutes, Honig turned to the psychiatrist and noted, "I think you ought to mention that he really hasn't touched the kid. He asks about her, but he doesn't do this." He extended his

Residents vow to fight hazardous waste plan

BURNSIDE, La. (AP) - Some residents of this tiny Mississippi River community say they will keep fighting plans to put a large hazardous waste disposal plant here even though construction permits have been issued by the state.

A spokesman for IT Corp., the owner of the plant, said construction would begin immediately. The state Environmental Control Commission issued three permits Tuesday authorizing the California-based company to build the waste treatment and disposal plant, estimated to cost $84 million. The company said the plant would be the largest of its kind in the world. Steve Irving, lawyer for a group of residents fighting construction of the plant, said he would ask a court to overturn the decision.

"We're worried about the fumes," said Duke Mills. who runs a restaurant across the highway from the proposed site. "We're going to be neighbors." The site is adjacent to the 140-year-old Houmas

"He's strictly business. He knows he's being watched, and he doesn't feel free enough yet to be spontaneous. He feels like he has to follow the cookbook way of doing things."

"We feel that each doctor needs to be doing two things," Hodas added. "He needs to touch the mother, make contact with her, and he needs to touch the child. ... For an older child it's for the benefit of the child and the mother. For a young child it's for the benefit of the mother. We look for that, and we look

The history-taking was over. Ross began the examination.

"That's nice, he's talking to the baby," said the pediatrician. "He's talking through the kid to the Ross peeled off the infant's undershirt and placed a stethoscope on her bare chest. She bawled.

"Boy, she's really a fighter," Ross said. 'Good, good," said the psychiatrist. "He's saying things that will make the mother feel good about her baby. And look, he's examining the baby on the mother's lap (not on an examining table). They're working together. That's great." The two doctors have a rating sheet on which they record residents' behavior traits, noting such little things as whether they offer the mother a chair or leave the room without explanation. You know," said Honig, "there are some pediatricians who can do the most with the least amount of time, and the mother goes away thinking that that doctor gave her half an hour, wgen actually he gave her five minutes.

"And then there are those who could sit there and talk, and talk and talk and talk, and the mother will leave dissatisfied, thinking the doctor didn't do anything. A.lot depends on style."

Honig said some residents are recommended for research work because of their poor relationship with patients. A few, he said, are so shy they automatically take that route. "Others we can bring out," he said. "And then they feel very good about themselves.

At one of the once-a-week roundtable discussions the two doctors hold with residents, Hodas presented the resident pediatricians with a hypothetical patient a 3-month-old baby with colic. "Is this a first child, and if so is the mother maybe overreacting to the crying?" he said. "That's something you ask 'Is the mother's nervousness over a first-born, her anxiety, being transferred to the baby? Did she just read about crib death in the newspaper? 'Many times parents feel trapped," he said.

'They don't realize that sometimes bringing in someone (to babysit) for a few hours and getting out is great therapy. That's one thing I usually ask, especially with colic — 'Who helps out?' And often they say, 'Oh, I'd never leave a baby at this age. That's not being a good mother.'

'So you have to act as the prescriber. You have to give the mother the authority to take a break sometimes. You have to do more than dispense medi-

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE Moore has shoe problem

By JAMES GERSTENZANG Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - It seems that Frank Moore's problems will never end, as long as he is associated with Jimmy Carter's White House. Moore is Carter's congressional liaison chief, charged with overseeing contacts between the White House and Capitol Hill - a difficult job in the best of times. The best of times and the worst of times are nearly over for the Carter White House, and at one of the parties marking the end of the Carter years, Moore once again ran into a problem. But it was hardly of his own doing.

The fete was held at a Washington hotel to honor Robert Strauss, who was Carter's campaign chairman. A reporter covering the black-tie affair observed that Moore had slipped off his shoes during a speech. The reporter could not resist hooking one with the curved end of an umbrel-la and stealthily sliding it away, unbeknownst to Moore. When Moore discovered that the shoe was missing, he began a frantic search under the table, eventually aided by his wife. As he searched, it became apparent that he had a hole in one of his socks.

Eventually, the shoe was passed along to Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas. chairman of the House Government Operations Committee and an influential member of the House.

He appeared to take great delight in returning the shoe to its rightful owner, but not until he walked through the crowd calling out to Moore in a loud, Texas bray, and advertising to all within earshot that the White House official was semiSECTIO

Two members of the White House press office staff were commiserating the other day about their approaching unemployment. At that moment, a correspondent of Tass, the Soviet news agency, who visits the White House on occasion, chimed in. "If you were in the Soviet Union, you would have a job," said Evgeny S. Egorov, the correspondent, who rarely joins in the press room ban-

One of the staff members asked whether Egorov might be able to offer

When Rosalynn Carter put the White House Christmas tree and other holiday paraphernalia on public display, two of her grandchildren had to be restrained from attacking the fancy decorations. Five-year-old Jason Carter and his sister, Sarah, who will be 2 years old Friday, were so enamored with the gingerbread house set up in the state dining room that they were all ready to gobble it up.

Nazi concentration camps.

The Soviet military took Wallenberg into "protective custody" in January 1945, three weeks after the troops reached Budapest. Thrity-five years later, his fate remains unknown.

But now there is a growing international effort to solve the mystery of his disappearance.

One of the people working on the case of the missing Swede is Houston artist Alice Cahana, herself a survivor of Auschwitz and daughter of a man Wallenberg rescued.

Over the years, the Soviets have given three different responses to the questions about what happened to the Holocaust hero.

Fist, the Kremlin said steps had been taken to "protect" Wallenberg. Then the denied any knowledge of the man. Finally they admitted in 1957 that Wallenerg had been taken prisoner, apparently a victim of Stalinist excesses.

In a memorandum to the Swedish government, the Soviets claimed recently uncovered records showed he had died July 17, 1947, of heart failure in prison. But reports from former Soviet prison camp inmates have been heard in the West, strongly suggesting Wallenberg still is alive, Ms. Cahana said.

Ms. Cahana, who has lived in Sweden, is working with a committee there to try to win his release. By raising world awareness of his case, they hope to bring pressure on the Soviets to act.

She also has done an abstract painting, to be exhibited in several U.S. cities next year, commemorating Wallenberg's heroics.

"He is, to me, the greatest man of the 20th century," Ms. Cahana said.

The scion of a wealthy family often called "the Rockefellers of Sweden," Wallenberg had become a middle-level diplomat for Sweden, a nation that remained neutral during the war.

EDITION

The war appeared to be drawing to a close in 1944, but that year the Nazis still managed to ship about 500,000 Hungarian Jews to death camps, she said.

Wallenberg decided to put his life on the line, Ms. He bought and rented scores of houses around

Budapest and sheltered an estimated 13,000 Jews in the neutral residences which flew the Swedish flag, she said. He also issued at least 20,000 phony Swedish passports to Hungarians, including Ms. Cahana's father. Ms. Cahana, however, was in a village oustide Budapest, beyond the diplomat's help. "When I came back from the concentration camp to Budapest," she recalled, "everyone was talking about Raoul Wallenberg. Everybody had a different She said some told of being pulled off cattle cars bound for death camps by Wallenberg as he shouted in front of German soldiers, "No! You're Swedish. Don't you remember?"

The Germans were absolutely stunned at Wallenberg's audacious behavior, and Adolf Eichmann is said to have repeatedly threatened his life, Ms. Cahana said.

Wallenberg was considered a master at intimidating German officials, most of whom knew the war then was a lost cause. But when the Russians arrived, Wallenberg was a suspicious character, she said. Besides finding it impossible to understand what motivated the Swede to risk his life, the Soviets were alarmed by Wallenberg's links to the United States, she said. Wallenberg had attended the University of Michigan and was helping the U.S. War Refugee Board. The Russians may have considered Wallenberg an American spy, Ms. Cahana suggested. When they discovered he was not, she said, they could see no face-saving way to release him. If he still is alive, Wallenberg is 68, she said. What must he think? He could save thousands, and the entire free world cannot save him," she

South American drug link alleged

WACO, Texas (AP) - A Mesquite man was free on bond today after a grand jury is: indictments in connection with an alleged scheme to airlift illegal drugs from South America into Texas, authorities said.

A McLennan County grand jury Tuesday returned indictments against eight people alleging organized criminal activity, said District Attorney Felipe

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Chairman John Poerner of the Railroad Commission sent a message to the incoming national administration today that Texas is doing all it can to produce oil.

Poerner said an option that will be offered to President-elect Ronald Reagan will be for states to produce more oil than allowed by state regulatory agencies - extra output that is known as "surge capacity.

"Unfortunately, Mr. Presidentelect, we have none," said Poerner, who goes off the commission at the end of the year.

"If a call were made for Texas to respond to a need for increased production over and above the MER -

Coalfield 'unsuitable' Fletcher, Dallas, No. 1 for strip mining: Andrus

By BRYCE NELSON

The Los Angeles Times WASHINGTON - Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus ruled Tuesday that the part of the federally-owned Alton coalfield nearest Bryce Canyon

National Park in Utah was unsuitable for strip mining. But Andrus approved strip mining for the bulk of the coalfield, situated in the southern part of Utah, as an essential part of the proposed Allen-Warner Valley Energy System scheduled to produce 2,500 megawatts of electricity.

Andrus made his decision in response to a petition filed by the Sierra Club, the Environmental Defense Fund, Friends of the Earth and several individual landowners. They charged that proposed mining within five miles of the southern boundary of the national park would have many adverse effects, including noise, a decline in air quality, and scenic degradation of the park. Calling the decision unprecedented, a spokesman for the Department of the Interior said it was the first ever made under the 1977 Surface Mining Act, which allows petitioners to ask that federal lands be declared unsuitable for surface "Under this decision, mining will be no closer than about 25 miles from the park and out of sight of Yovimpa Point overlook and the rest of the park."

Harmon Kallman, the department spokesman, said. Kallman said that while Andrus' decision could be reversed in the courts, it could not be reversed by a future interior secretary. 'We have drawn a line which I feel confident everyone can live with...,' Andrus said. "The lands I have declared unsuitable for mining contain less than 10 percent of the coal in those federal leases proposed for development near Bryce Canyon. My decision leaves the mining industry free to develop more than 90 percent of the coal it originally intended to recover. Andrus said that "it would be unconsionable to allow strip mining" so near the national park with its "remarkable visual clarity" and "extraordinary distant Reaction from the environmental groups that filed the petition was mixed. 'We feel this is a very important decision in protecting the park, but we intend to try and stop the Alton mine with every legal means at our disposal." Ron Rudolph, national energy coordinator for Friends of the Earth, said.

wait for further comment until we see his final decision," said Jan Strobel, a spokesman for Nevada Power Company, the project manager for the proposed elaborate energy system. The system calls for development of the Alton coal mine near Bryce Canyon, the building of a 500-megawatt power plant 17 miles from Zion National Park in

Utah, the 2,000-megawatt Harry Allen plant near Las Vegas, Nev., and two coal

Next, tenor Thomas Roberts sang solo with the Chorale in presenting Selections from "Fanfares" by Daniel Pinkham. They were accompanied by a brass and percussion ensemble from the orchestra. The effect was quite nice; however, once again, this reviewer was reminded of how difficult it can be to hear a solo singer in Lee High's auditorium.

No reflection meant on the facility at Lee High - it was just not designed acoustically for this purpose. It seems such a shame that a town that prides itself on being in the top five in per capita income in the United States can't afford a performing arts facility. Such a building could provide a home for the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale as well as be

"For the creative society, producers and distributors, the next 20 years will be the golden era," said Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association. "All the stuff of technology will cry out for more and more programming to fill the endless caverns of the electronic landscape," Valenti said Tuesday at a forum at the Los Angeles World Affairs Council on the future of the motion picture industry.

'New technology offers opportunities so vast in this medium that we can look for an age of films unprecedented by anything in the past, said Franklin Schaffner, who won an Oscar for directing "Patton."

Actor Charlton Heston shared their optimism, but added, "The cost of making a film can be equaled or exceeded by the cost of selling and distributing it. The future will be shaped by these aspects as much as the talents of those making films."

Dennis Stanfill, board chairman of 20th Century-Fox, also cited the rising expenses of producing and releasing movies, predicting that if trends continue, the average cost of making a film in five years would amount to $25 million.

"And that makes even strong men tremble," he said.

The 1980 average was $16.5 million. Stanfill predicted studios would soon release films in theaters and on video cassettes almost simultaneously, thus reaching the 12-29 age group that goes out to movies and the over-40 group that stays home. Valenti said future technology could include three-dimensional projections and transmission of movies from satellites to theaters.

When the satellite sys tem evolves, one-third of the nation's 17,000 theater screens may disappear, Valenti said. That would occur because of the high cost of the new technology and of installing it, he said.

But the theater will survive, not because of

Kim Novak returns to screen

By BOB PORTER Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS - For a period, she was called the Garbo of her generation. In the mid '50s she was Hollywood's No. 1 box-ofof the Monterey peninsula a decade ago for a life in the country that included a menagerie of animals and a second, happy, marriage to a veterinarian escaping both the rigors of an era and a microscopic viewing of her personal life in the popular press.

Now in her late 40s, Kim Novak is still a lean strikingly beautiful woman. And she has re-emerged as a screen personality playing, in a sense, a parody of the sort of glamorous leading lady she once was herself on the screen. Along with other glamour-type movie stars of her generation - Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson and Tony Curtis — she is starring in "The Mirror Crack'd," the third in a series of films based on Agatha Christie mysteries. The reason she has been all but inactive in films the past 10 years involves a combination of factors, Novak explained.

"It has just not been there for me. I have not found the things I want to do (in films). I have not wanted to spend three months of my time making a film. It takes that long to make a film if you are doing the leading role," she said, curled on one end of a sofa in the living room of her hotel suite during a news conference. "The reason I did this film was because Agatha Christie was a great writer. It was a great role and it only took about three weeks to film my part. I was not away from home for any great length of time," she said.

She traces her break with Hollywood, and the mainstream of the film industry, to an accident she had while making a film titled "13" in England in the late '60s. A horse she was riding fell on her and broke her back. It took her a year to recover to the point where she could have resumed her career. By then she had developed other interests.

"During that time of inactivity I began to paint. I also got into other things that became important to me. Making films was just no longer as important to me as it once was," she said. She had, apparently saved enough money to live a lifestyle of her choosing. Movies became more or less incidental.

It was an accident, or luck, that got her into movies in the first place. A native of Chicago who had been a salesclerk and model, she was signed to a small role in "The French Liner" in 1954. Harry Cohn, the head

Datsun has belt recall

CARSON, Calif. (AP) Nissan U.S.A. has begun a voluntary recall of 72,407 new Datsun cars after tests showed some seat belt assemblies can unlatch by themselves.

The U.S. distributor of the Japanese automaker issued the recall Wednesday for 1980 Datsun 280ZX, 310 and 210 cars with NSK-Warner seat belts. It said tests show, under certain loading conditions, that the belts unlatch by themselves.

But the company added it had received no reports of any injuries or deaths in connection with the belts, the NSK 1020 through NSK 1022 se-

MX missile would cause 'severe but manageable' environmental damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force today released its long-awaited study of the impact on Utah and Nevada of deploying the proposed MX missile system, and described the effects as "manageable."

Air Force Undersecretary Antonia Chayes told reporters that, "while the impacts may appear severe when viewed from the perspective of a little-developed area of the country, from a national perspective - and MX is a national program - the impacts are not that large.

Briefing reporters in advance of the report's release, she called the impact statement a comprehensive and exhaustive study that can guide policymakers in their final decisions on

But congressional critics were less charitable, describing the 1,900-page report as "the same old euphemisms suggesting that there is no problem too large for the Air Force to solve."

The report reaffirms the Air Force's preference for the desert valleys of Utah and Nevada for deploying the planned $34 billion missile

The $17 million study envisons thousands of construction workers, their families and related workers flooding into Utah and Nevada during the peak MX construction years in the mid- to

The study says 85,000 people will be added to the region's population during that time, with a permanent population increase of about 31,000.

Ms. Chayes said that the predicted MX impact, while " not negligible," are "certainly ... manageable. The potential mitigation measures combined with good planning and man-agement by both the Air Force and state and local governments can reduce impacts measurably.

Communities will be hard pressed to provide necessary services, and will need federal assistance, the study says. Scarce water supplies will be stretched thin, with significant im-pact on groundwater levels possible in some areas. be Water may have to be imported from other regions, and the Air Force at the least will have to buy water rights from existing users while stressing conservation and recy-

But Ms. Chayes said none of the drawbacks is drastic enough to scuttle the project. And none, she asserted, is severe enough to overcome the strategic need for a new missile sys-

"Defense officials do not regard 'no action' as a serious alternative," she declared. "MX must be deployed somewhere, and therefore the focus is on selection among alternative deployment areas.'

The MX is touted by defense officials as the successor to the present Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile system. Defense experts say the Minuteman is becoming increasingly vulnerable to Soviet attack.

The MX system would consist of 200 missiles mounted on portable launchers that would shuttle among some 4,600 reinforced shelters in a massive 'shell game" intended to confuse Soviet missile targeters.

The MX may be scuttled by President-elect Ronald Reagan when he takes office. But Ms. Chayes said Carter administration defense planners are going ahead with the MX planning as far as possible and will "leave it up to them to make up their

While Ms. Chayes described the lengthy environmental study as complying "in spirit and in detail" with the National Environmental Policy Act, a Nevada congressman demanded a congressional investigation of what he said were the report's short-

"If private industry had prepared a document as inadequate as the Air Force's draft ..., it would be soundly rejected," said Rep. Jim Santini, D-Nev. "The (study) fleetingly casts aside some real problems and minimizes many others:"

Santini complained that the report was inadequate in describing energy requirements, effects on tourism, water overdrafts, housing shortages and problems of community ser-

Santini also noted that while the study put the overall population impact of the MX at a relatively insignificant 4.2 percent, it ignored major population impacts in rural areas.

The environmental study is now subject to public review for a 90-day period that begins officially Jan. 2.

Solon wants to halt benefits for people who quit jobs

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Roy Blake has introduced a bill that would keep people who quit their jobs from colnemployment compensa-

Blake, D-Nacogdoches, said Wednesday he was outraged that a Cuero teacher who quit his job to "seek other employment" was getting a total of $2,520.

Blake's bill would deprive "voluntary quits" of jobless benefits until they obtained new jobs and worked for at least six weeks.

Chairman Nolan Ward of the Texas Employment Commission opposes the bill because, he said, it would deny the TEC flexibility to award benefits to employees who quit for good reason and need money to live on while they start over. .Blake complained because a majority of the three-man TEC had voted to award benefits to the Cuero teacher. Like all school districts and most cities, the Cuero Independent School District pays unemployment benefits directly from its tax revenue.

The thing that galls me about the situation is the fact that TEC could have disqualified this person for 25 weeks, and the taxpayers of Cuero ISD would not be made to pay $2,520 to a teacher not to teach plus paying the salary of a replacement, Blake

Ward said the TEC does deny benefits for a period of time to persons who quit their jobs as a "punishment" but the time varies from case to case. The TEC can deny benefits for up to 25

"If someone quits because her husband is seriously injured or she has a child who is seriously injured, we tend to disqualify for four weeks on the average. If she quits to move with her husband, it's anywhere from one to seven weeks," Ward said.

He said under the present system, the commission can look at the facts in each case and render a decision that is fair for both employee and employer

"I think the law contemplates that everybody doesn't quit for the same reason. The ability to be flexible in 'punishing' is left to three reasonable people who are looking at the case rationally. The (Blake) bill would take that away," he said.

Antonia Handler Chayes, under-secretary of the Air Force, briefs reporters in Washington Wednesday on the draft environmental impact statement on the MX missile. (AP Laserphoto)

Savings said to be small from hospital consolidation

BOSTON (AP) — The federal government's plan to slash medical costs by consolidating hospital services and eliminating excess beds would actually save little, if any, money, a study concludes.

The survey calculated the effects of eliminating duplicate services and found that extra paperwork and inconvenience to patients would wipe out most of the savings.

The study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, was conducted by Dr. William B. Schwartz, a physician at Tufts Medical School, and Paul L. Joskow, an economist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The researchers figured out how much could be saved by following guidelines set by the federal Health Resource Administration for CATscanners, a kind of sophisticted X-ray machine; hospital beds and facilities for open-heart surgery, cardiac catheterization and radiation therapy. By closing hospitals and consolidating the other services, it is theoretically possible to save $1 billion, the study said. But this saving would be offset by the paperwork necessary to comply with state certificate-of-need laws as well as higher transportation costs and inconvenience to patients.

The real savings, they wrote, would be "perhaps a few hundred million dollars a year, but possibly noth-

Other efforts at cutting costs might be more effective, they said.

"Excessive use of laboratories, Xray procedures and surgery might be reduced," they wrote. "More outpa-tient care, pre-admission screening, shorter stays, more intensive use of hospital facilities during off-peak periods and other improvements in hospital management may also save resources without affecting the quality

Professor teaches disbelief in evolution

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Since Dean Kenyon began telling his biology class that "supernatural creation" brought the cosmos into being, a professorial controversy has raged at San Francisco State University.

Embarrassing, says one colleague. Entertaining, says another.

"It's very nice to shake the basket and see what goes on. I'm always in favor of controversy," said Charles Hagar, a physicist and astronomer. But another professor, Lawrence Swan, calls Kenyon's teaching "an aberrant misinterpretation" and "an intolerable representation of the truth.

"Do geologists allow a flat-earth advocate to teach?" he asks. "Would astronomers like astrologists? Does a professor have the right to teach anything he wants? Can society afford to deny sci-

Kenyon, 40, has taught a class on evolution here for 12 years and four years ago began lecturing on creationism, a theory close to the biblical account of

"In the relatively recent past, 10,000 to 20,000 years ago, the entire cosmos was brought into existence out of nothing at all by supernatural creation,"

26 To support his theory, he cites gaps in the Earth's fossil record and lack of proof of transmutation of species — the linchpin of the Darwinian theory of evolution.

That theory, accepted by most scientists, holds that all species of plants and animals developed from earlier forms by hereditary transmission of slight variations in successive generations over eons of

The theory of evolution is too full of "holes," he says. He also believes fossils and rock strata formed during a worldwide flood, not over billions of Swan dismissed Kenyon's contentions as a "You on't know, therefore God" argument.

Department Chairman William Wu has taken the Step of limiting the time Kenyon may spend on his theory in class. Kenyon's classes also are audited by another faculty member, Wu said.

"Whoever tries to take possession of Cuba will take back the dust of their land wet with blood, if they do not perish in the struggle," Castro said Wednesday at the end of a 10-hour speech inaugurating the second congress of the Cuban Communist Party.

Castro said the election of Reagan has caused "uncertainty and a sensation of danger" in Cuba and the rest of Latin America. He said Reagan appears to be attempting to return to "the policy of the big stick in Latin America, but added, "the people Latin America no longer fear anything or any-

During his presidential campaign, Reagan suggested a military blockade of Cuba might be the way to get the estimated 85,000 Soviet troops out of Afghanistan. The Soviets intervened in Afghanistan a year ago to fight Moslem rebels battling the communist regime.

Castro said Reagan has the mistaken idea that "to make war means to win it." He said if the U.S. government tries to send Marines into Central America or the Caribbean, "it will see the unloading of the coffins of soldiers from its own country."

"Those who go to kill Latin Americans will also die," Castro warned However, he said if
