Candidate wants to unite campus

by Kristi Rieken/UD

Texas Tech faculty, staff and students had the opportunity Tuesday to question and hear a brief presentation from the first of two finalists for Tech's provost position.

Jane Winer, dean of Tech's College of Arts and Sciences, made opening remarks to the group of about 50 people and then took questions for almost 45 minutes. A majority of the group was composed of faculty members, but some administrators and staff members also were in attendance.

Winer said one of her main goals, if chosen as provost, would be working to unite people all across the campus.

Winer

It is all one entity is important."

Interim Provost John Burns is the other candidate for the position, and he will be involved in a similar meeting today from 12:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the human sciences building room 169.

The provost's position is under a new name — before Tech adopted the chancellor system,

"All of the campus working together is very appealing to me," Winer said. "I like dealing with police, with grounds workers and with maintenance. Working across campus to make sure the position was titled academic vice president and is basically a senior vice president and academic officer for Tech, said Robert Ewalt, vice president for student affairs and chairman of the provost search committee.

The position was occupied by Tech President Donald Haragan before his appointment as interim president following former Tech President Robert Lawless' departure from the university.

During the question-and-answer session, Winer addressed a variety of issues, from post-tenure review to the possibility of a staff senate.

"I support the idea of a staff senate," she said. "It is remarkable that there are three distinct groups of people on this campus, and only two of them have representation."

Regarding post-tenure review, Winer said the university currently employs an adequate review system, but faculty need to watch for problems with the tenure system.

"I think it is important for administration and faculty to seriously address the abuses of tenure and continue to evaluate professors as we have been," Winer said. "We also need to address the underlying concerns of the public that are cause for the call for revocation of tenure."

The search committee has been working to fill the provost's position since last semester, and committee members hope their work will be finished in a couple of weeks.

"We started before Christmas, and we narrowed it down to two finalists," Ewalt said. "Following these open meetings and a check on the finalists references, we will make a recommendation to President Haragan. We hope to get that done in the next two weeks."

Winer also was questioned about the possibility of problems in increasing diversity at Tech in light of the recent Hopwood decision, which eliminates race as a factor in college admissions and financial aid in Texas, Louisiana.

Students urge budget passage

by Tomi Rodgers/UD

Texas Tech students from the two major political parties expressed differing opinions about the balanced budget amendment President Clinton still refuses to sign, despite pressure from U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

If Congress passes the balanced budget amendment, state legislatures will be given the opportunity to approve it. At a recent Capitol Hill conference, Senate leaders set forth a grassroots effort to pass the amendment.

By not passing the amendment, Congress would be ignoring the will of the American people, said Chamber Senior Vice President Bruce Josten.

"Chamber members across America consider balancing the budget the single most important step the government can take to create jobs, economic growth and prosperity," Josten said. "It's time for Congress to end this debate and send the amendment to the states, giving the American people an opportunity to decide the issue."

However, Clinton has opposed and vetoed previous amendments made by Congress.

"Balancing the budget does not require us to rewrite our Constitution," Clinton said in his State of the Union Address Feb. 4.

Clinton's plans for balancing the budget include efforts to strengthen education, welfare reform, campaign finance reform and improvements to Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid.

In his address, Clinton said he would propose a plan to balance the budget by 2002.

"We will balance the budget and invest in the people," Clinton said.

Cameron Graham, chairman of Tech's College Republicans and a junior history major from Lubbock, said he strongly favors a balanced budget amendment.

"An amendment is necessary because it will give Congress a firm directive," Graham said. "There has to come a time when people say, 'We have to do this now.'"

Graham said that if the president and Congress come to some sort of a consensus, the amendment would receive the support of the states, which would give the amendment more validity.

"The American people will see it as a sign of trying to accomplish something, and they will support the amendment," Graham said. "The only way I can see to make the White House and Congress responsible is to put it into writing and make it the law of the land, and into an amendment."

Jesus Sanchez, a representative of Tech's University Democrats and a senior history major from Lubbock, said he supports the amendment, as long as certain provisions are made.

"We must maintain a safety net for the poor and cut back on corporate welfare," Sanchez

Teaching Experience

Montford instructs political science

by Kristi Rieken/UD

It is often said that experience is the best teacher. So it stands to reason that a former senator would be the best person to teach a political science class.

Chancellor John T. Montford has taken to the classrooms this semester to teach an honors political science course. He shares teaching duties with Tech political science professor John Burnett. Montford teaches the class Tuesdays from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. — Burnett has the same time slot on Thursdays.

"He (Montford) brings a view to the class that we might not otherwise see," said Imo Jean Douglas, a junior nursing major from Lubbock. "He puts a different spin on things."

Montford employs an aggressive and interactive style of teaching that helps the class be more attentive, his students said.

"It's nice not to just go and sit through another boring lecture," Douglas said. "I prefer that dynamic style of lecture."

During a recent class meeting, Montford discussed the possibility of amending the Texas Constitution.

When one student made a comment, the chancellor instructed the student to rise from the chair and invited another student with an opposing view to stand and debate the issue.

At one point during the debate, a student added a comment while sitting down, and Montford told the student to "stand up and get into the fight."

The students in the class have plenty of praise for Montford, but he said he is impressed with them.

"The first day of class, I asked the class to recite some legislative bills and they got up and did it," Montford said. "I was blown away. They are a very bright group — they keep me on my toes."

One tactic Montford uses to keep the class's attention is drawing on the wealth of knowledge he gained during his 14-year tenure in the state Senate. When discussing a particular topic, he often cites a situation he was in when the issue came up.

In Tuesday's lecture, he relayed interesting quotes used by former governors and judges dealing with the Texas Legislature.

"He has so many stories and insights into how the whole process works," said John Collins, a sophomore undecided major from Clovis,

N.M., who said the main reason he signed up for this course is because of the teacher. "He is really good, and I have learned a lot."

Montford said this class is basically like any other class and that in addition to having tests, they keep journals as well. Montford said this is a difficult class

Albright proposes joint NATO-Russia brigade

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Trying to ease concerns in Moscow, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright proposed Tuesday that NATO form a joint military brigade with Russia for peacekeeping operations in Europe.

Based on successful cooperation in implementing the Dayton peace accords in Bosnia, Albright said Russian and NATO troops could also train together under the concept she presented to allied foreign ministers in Brussels.

She will take the new idea to Moscow Thursday for meetings with President Boris Yeltsin, Foreign Minister Yevgeny

Primakov and other Kremlin officials who take a skeptical and also anxious view of NATO's planned expansion to Russia's western border by 1999.

Albright, who is also working with the allies on a charter linking Russia to NATO, said in a speech, "We will be steadfast in offering Russia our respect, our friendship and an appropriate partnership."

"We cannot realize our shared vision of a united, secure and democratic Europe without Russia," she said.

With the 16-nation NATO primed to offer membership at a summit in July to former Soviet allies — most likely Poland, the Czech Republic and Hungary — the United States, France and other allies are searching for ways to allay Russia's anxieties. NATO is increasingly finding ways to link Russia more tightly to the Western alliance, while denying it membership.

Albright explained that "we are trying to include Russia as much as possible," but the allies also want to avoid giving Moscow a veto over military actions that membership would provide.

In such instances, she said, "we will act as the alliance" — without Russia's approval. The foreign ministers did not act on the proposal for a brigade, an idea that originated two years ago in NATO's military headquarters.

"We are just beginning to think about it," Secretary-General Javier Solana told reporters.

Albright also called for a meeting in the spring with prospective new NATO members "to give every ally a chance for direct discussion" before the July summit in Madrid, Spain.

Turkey has threatened to block NATO expansion if it does not gain membership in the European Union.

A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Foreign Minister Tansu Ciller "did not in any way threaten a veto" at Tuesday's meeting, and, in fact, voiced strong support.

F-16 was shadowing airliner in encounter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fighter jet involved in a close encounter with a Nations Air plane two weeks ago followed proper procedure, the Air Force said Tuesday.

A civilian investigation found that the fighter stayed on the airliner's tail even as the big jet maneuvered to avoid a collision.

A report by the National Transportation Safety Board described how the Nations Air Boeing 727 went into a dive, then a steep climb, when its collision alert warned that another plane was too close. The incident occurred off the coast of New Jersey on Feb. 5.

The Air National Guard plane approached the airliner to identify it, said Greg Feith, an NTSB investigator.

"It was a controlled procedure; it was done in a methodical manner," Feith said.

In a Pentagon news conference, Air Force Maj. Gen. Donald L. Peterson concurred with the NTSB report and defended the actions of the Air National Guard pilot.

ACLU official takes back threat to expose gay lawmakers

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — The head of the American Civil Liberties Union in the Dakotas withdrew a threat to expose gay lawmakers who vote to ban homosexual marriages after the national ACLU director refused to back him.

"I made a mistake, and it will not happen again," Keith Elston said in a statement released late Tuesday. "The ACLU does not 'out' people, nor threaten to out people."

Earlier in the day, Elston, who is gay, had said he would 'out' lawmakers he believes are gay if they supported the proposal.

"If they're going to be hypocritical, then they need to have that hypocrisy exposed."

After hearing about the threat from a state senator, national ACLU director Ira Glasser faxed a quick apology.

"Mr. Elston understands his mistake," Glasser wrote to state Sen. Wayne Stenehjem, who had complained about Elston's "unprofessional behavior."

The legislation would deny recognition of same-sex marriages performed in other states and explicitly define a marriage as a union between a man and a woman. Elston said he knows of a couple of legislators who are homosexual. He initially made the threat in a column last week in a weekly arts and entertainment guide published in Grand Forks.

"He is absolutely off the wall," said Senate Majority Leader Gary Nelson, a Republican. "I'm going to support my people when they start suing him, if he's idiotic enough to do anything about it."

Their View

Conversations do not need real intellectual point

Julie Mitchell/columnist

You say that you think Plato is a clay that kids play with, that Aristotle is the first Russian to visit outer space or that Sigmund Freud (a.k.a. Sigmund the Sea Monster) is a character in your favorite children's show? Well, you too can seem to be an intellectual just by questioning everything, answering nothing and (at all costs) keeping conversation to one minute or less.

I have compiled examples of possible conversational situations and their solutions so that everyone can learn to, very smoothly, kill conversation either by pretending to be on a higher level of thinking than the person one is speaking to or by scaring the person out of a conversation.

If you want to save yourself the embarrassment of giving a wrong answer, simply counter any question asked of you with another question sort of related to the original question but with a wicked twist. For example, if your English teacher asks you what scared little Ms. Muffet away, you just say, "Well, that depends. Is Ms. Muffet a prostitute?"

If you feel everyone in the class tense, you have succeeded. You didn't answer the question, but you didn't not answer the question. You freaked out the teacher who has read the poem for 20 years and has never noticed any sexual innuendos in its contents, and, further, he or she doesn't want to know what innuendos you might have found and will never call on you again. So, that's an example of scaring someone out of conversation and being on a higher level of thought.

OK, next example: you are sitting all alone on a bench when someone comes up and asks you for the time, and you think, "Oh, this person wants to start a conversation. What do I do?" Well, don't freak out. Simply sit for a few moments still looking straight ahead as if you didn't hear the question, then turn your head slightly toward the person, furrow your brow, and say, "I used to wear a watch, but, then I thought, what is time, anyway? And why am I wasting my time looking for time, you know what I mean?" Then just sigh as if you are really disturbed by that thought, and look ahead again. That ought to stop a conversation and talk about a different level of thinking.

Now if smart pants try to show off their intellect by attempting to make you show your lack of knowledge, the best thing to use is the scare tactic. The scare tactic has many possibilities and that's why it's my favorite. You can just say the first thing that pops into your head (because that's usually pretty scary) or you can act like the question really angers you and you can't talk about it. If all else fails, you can resort to Dr. Seuss quotes.

Here are some quick examples:

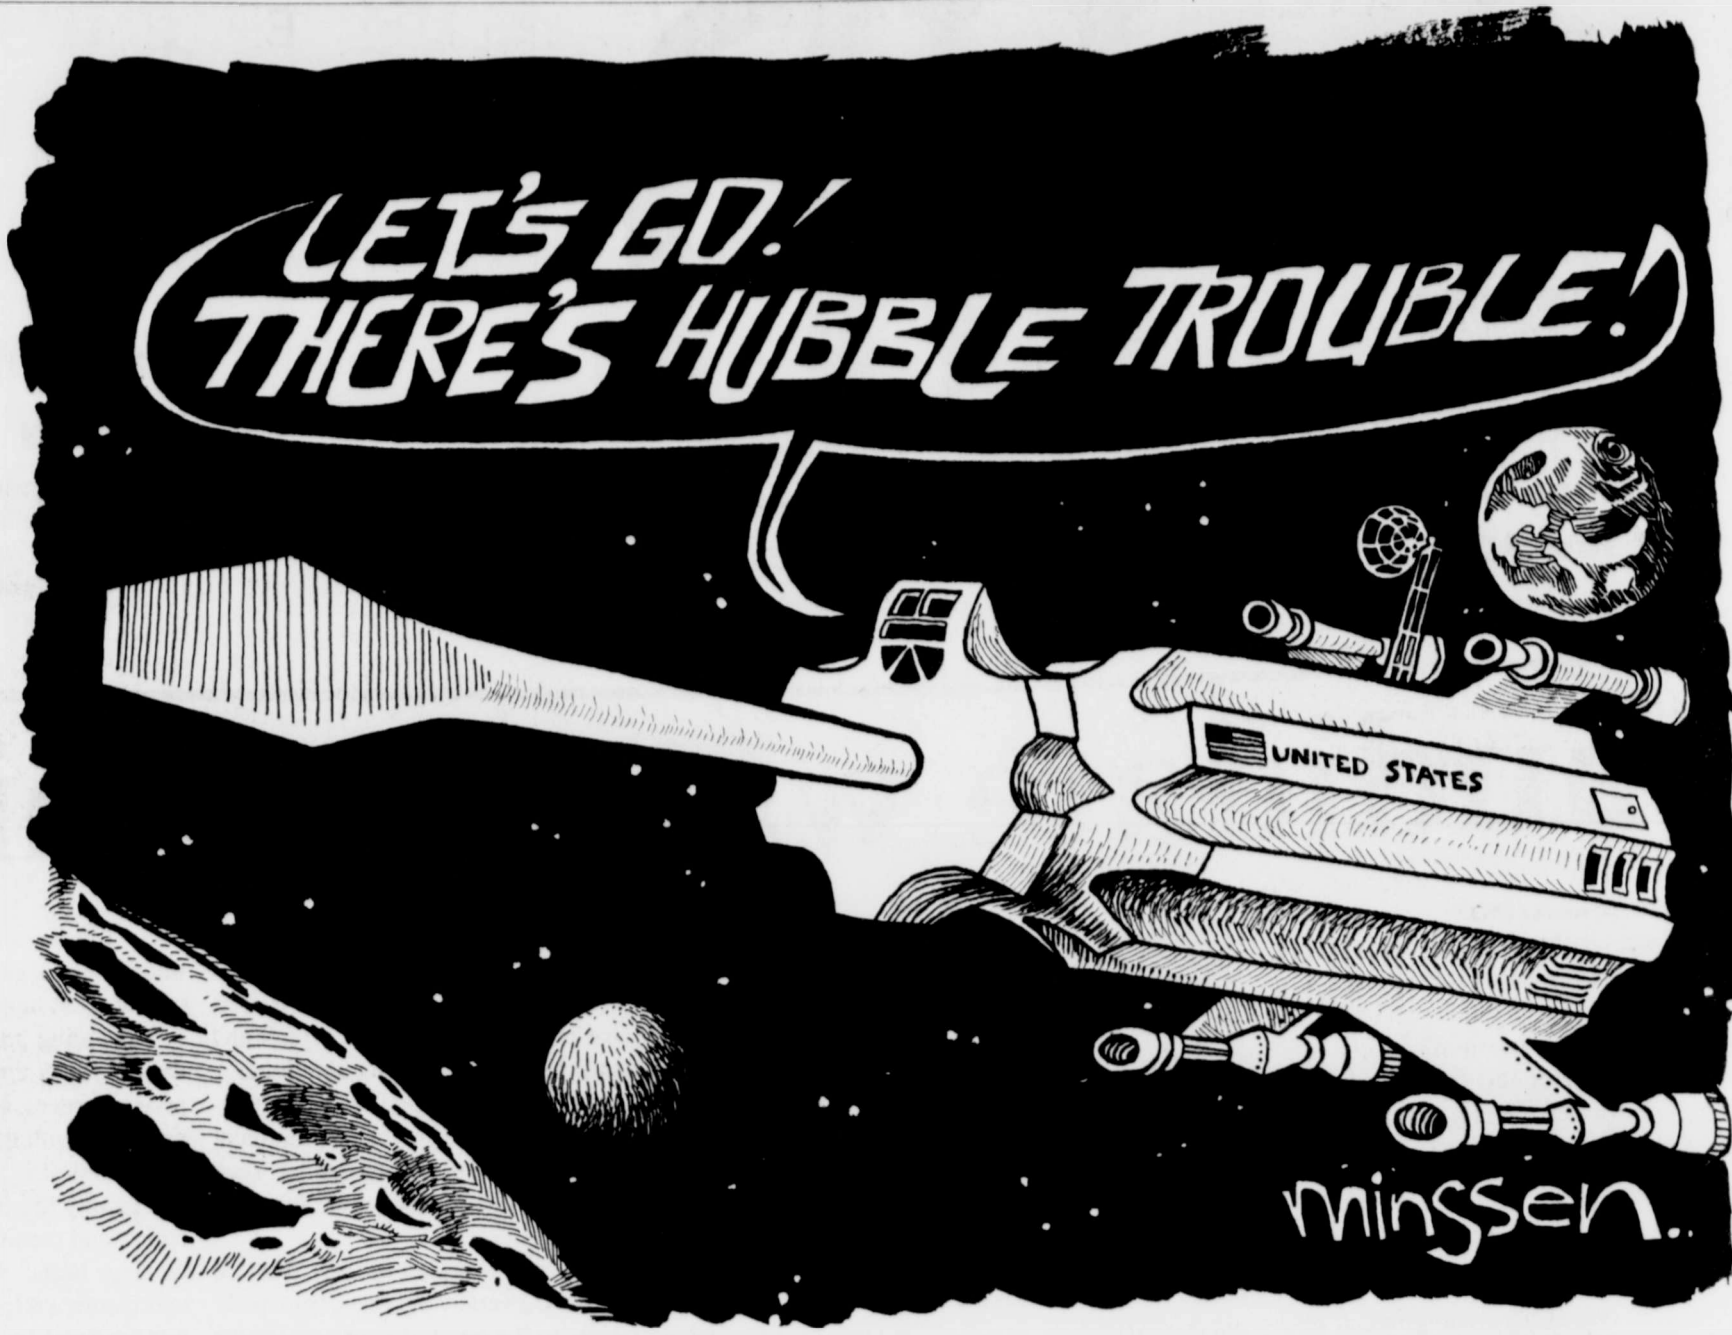

If some guy asks what you thought of that new French film, you say the first thing in your head like, "Do you know what the sentence is for murder?" Or you could just yell, "I thought it stunk. Can we please stop talking about it?" And if you can do nothing else, just smirk and whisper, "Green eggs and Ham, Sam I Am?"

So, that's my advice for idiot's conversation. And for those of you who may ask me what the point of this column is, my answer is, "There isn't one, but isn't that a point in itself?"

Your View

Texas Tech system full of users who seek benefits

To the editor: I have spent the past eight semesters at Tech and I believed that I should write a letter to the editor on the average of two or three times a week. Well, now there is something that I really feel adamant about.

Sunday night I watched the news on an Odessa station and the lead story was about Byron Hanspard and Casey Jones (Tech football players). They finished the season (fall semester) with 0.0 GPAs. I arrived at Tech Monday morning and the front page story in The University Daily also was about the two players.

I listened to all the comments on the television and read all of the stories in The UD and the Odessa American newspaper. What I have gathered from the stories is this: Shame on Tech for allowing it to happen; this is bad publicity for the school; everyone that goes to Texas Tech should be ashamed because of a few bad apples in the barrel; and (the best one) "It happens, and I'm not proud of it," said Tech football coach Spike Dykes. "But it also happens at every other university that I know of." Hogwash.

Americans have become complacent. If there are no rules against such behavior and everyone else is doing it, then it should be OK to do it also.

What is sad is that this whole story points out the fact that people at Tech have become a group of users.

Hanspard and Jones are users. They used Tech as a vehicle to showcase their football ability and to further their chances of getting a job in the NFL. The Tech athletics department and coaches, including the new Athletic Director Gerald Myers and Dykes are users. Tech president, Don Haragan, the new chancellor, John T. Montford and the Board of Regents also are users. It looks wonderful for a school to have winning sports teams — this might help influence someone or a corporation to give money to Tech to build a building or two that can be used for the advancement of some more sports teams.

I have not read or heard anywhere that Tech is one of the best in academia — this is something that I would rather see than the stories that have been printed in the last few days.

The general public are users. They just want to go to games and see Tech win.

So who are the losers in this whole mess? Everyone. The world is content to see gifted athletes make it big at whatever cost, and no one cares that they did not receive an education while they were at school.

Students at Tech are losers, as the powers that be would rather spend money on athletics and not on what the university should be spending money on (i.e., there is a need for all kinds of building repair, improved parking, better educators and, most of all, the best educated students that graduate).

I am thankful that I am not going to school for the purpose that the two athletes were "going for." I am furthering my education so that I may help someone who is less fortunate than myself. I am not doing this on scholarship, but paying for it out of my own pocket. I also drive 160 miles a day, three days a week to come to Tech, and I have a full-time job in Denver City. I have two children still at home and a husband also to take care of. I feel that there have to be stories out there about people going to Tech who care and who will make a difference once they have gotten out into the real world.

Donita Trice, senior history and psychology major

Ham worthy candidate to represent Texas Tech

To the editor: The Texas Tech University Division of Continuing Education wishes to extend an official response to the editorial column by Megan Clark, editor of The University Daily.

Whereas it is true that the Division of Continuing Education used a photo of former Texas Tech basketball player Darvin Ham for the cover of its Guided Study course listing, it would not be fair to list him as our "poster boy." The Ham cover was done in an effort to help effectively promote our courses by using a scene that most people in the nation could recognize (not to mention the fact that it was very eye catching).

As you may or may not know, it is sometimes very difficult to come up with ideas that are different; so when presented with the opportunity of the Ham cover, we decided to run with it. We do not apologize for including Ham on our cover.

Yes, it is true that Darvin Ham left school early to pursue a career in the NBA, it should be noted that he has made plans to return and complete his studies at Texas Tech. The image of Darvin Ham shattering the backboard was merely an emblem and part of a thematic campaign that imparted the slogan "Breaking Barriers." Our program is marketed worldwide, competing against hundreds of continuing education departments across the nation. It is essential that we develop a ubiquitous presence and imperative that we promote our program using eye-catching images.

The ultimate aim of our guided study course bulletin is to attract attention, invite further inquiry and cultivate enrollments.

With regard to Sports Illustrated, this publication has long been known for its indifference to Texas Tech, and they failed to check out the fact that Darvin Ham's picture appeared on the front of a Guided Study catalog and not the catalog of classes for those matriculating at Tech. Clark, Sports Illustrated and their swipes at Tech are hardly an appropriate measure of the "educational aptitude" of hundreds of student-athletes who attend Tech. There is evidence to show that of the beginning freshmen at Texas Tech, the graduation rate of student-athletes is roughly 69 percent, comparing quite favorably with the graduation rate of regular students.

There are more student athletes here at Texas Tech than just football players, many not on a full scholarship. Almost all that attend their classes and stay on course to graduate.

It should also be noted that the release of a student's grades is a violation of federal law, as per the Buckley Amendment, which calls for a student's right to privacy.

This includes student-athletes as well. In addition, making light of it in a campus newspaper may not be a violation of law, but it certainly is in poor taste.

The Division of Continuing Education works hard to promote Tech on a local, regional, national and international scale. We have labored many hours to build a reputation of high quality programming that is worthwhile and useful, as well as convenient, for the community, professionals and students.

Tech academics should outweigh athletics

To the editor: Once again I see that our university has its priorities misaligned. I read the front page article in The University Daily on the two athletes who allegedly made 0.0 GPAs and I'm just wondering where Tech gets these people.

I think it's shameful that on one hand our university all but ignores the many people who come out of this university with good grades and valuable degrees, and on the other, spends so much time and attention on a pack of students who can't even make a halfway decent academic effort. I'd say we're focusing too much on the wrong people. It's a sad day when the athletes of our university fall below the gaming club in academic performance. I think it's time that our university turned around as well. If we spent half the effort recruiting UIL champions and high test scorers as we do recruiting some of these jocks, our university would finally be noted for the academic excellence that we are intended to deliver. OK, granted, the article did state "allegedly" earned zero GPAs. I suppose I should give the two athletes in question the benefit of the doubt; but still, we shouldn't even have to have rumors like this. And what if it is true? Other universities are already laughing at us for our (possible) existing athletic scandals, a few more and we'll cultivate a reputation as a "degree mill." We need to start asking ourselves, which is more important: academics or athletics? If we can keep both, that's great, but we shouldn't sacrifice learning (the primary purpose of a university) in favor of simple games.

Tech fraternities institute drug policies

by Ginger Pope/UD

A drug policy implemented by Texas Tech fraternity Kappa Sigma Feb. 10 may lead to new standards for other Tech fraternities and sororities.

"It seemed like the right thing to do," said Kappa Sigma President Logan Spence, a junior agricultural communications major from Lewisville. "Drug-free policies have been the latest thing in the media, and a lot of businesses are doing it, so we thought we should do it."

The new policy allows random testing of drug use to be performed on any member of the fraternity at any time. If individuals test positive, they are tested again.

If the second test is positive, the member is ousted from the fraternity, and after a six-month period they can petition to get back into the fraternity. Members also can go through an appeals process.

Patricia Honacki, Tech assistant dean of students, said she would like to see every fraternity and sorority impose the same policy Kappa Sigma has.

"The use and abuse of drugs and alcohol are never a part of what fraternities and sororities stand for," Honacki said. "But it is a part of this generation, and if it affects this generation, it will affect them (Greek organizations) too."

The new drug policy was not implemented because of any problems within the fraternity, but because it had seen drug use at Tech, Spence said.

Trudy Putteet, Tech associate dean of students, said she has been at Tech for more than 18 years and does not recall any situations when a fraternity or sorority was suspended through the Dean of Students Office on drug charges.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon also has a similar drug policy to Kappa Sigma, said Taylor Tassos, an SAE member and a junior restaurant, hotel and institutional management from San Antonio.

"Our goal is to have a drug-free chapter," Tassos said. "This issue is taken very seriously. Two bad seeds can spoil the whole chapter."

Sigma Alpha Epsilon implemented its policy in the spring of 1993 and, like Kappa Sigma's policy, it also calls for random drug testing, Tassos said.

After a member or pledge is tested positive, the individual has to go before a judicial committee and is then tested again and expelled if the second test is positive.

Honacki said the Dean of Students Office does not set any special guidelines for fraternities and sororities.

However, like other Tech students, Greek organizations have to abide by the Code of Student Conduct, which states the use, possession, sale or distribution of drugs is a violation, Honacki said.

"If a student or an organization is in violation of the code we (Dean of Students Office) will handle it," she said regarding the drug policy.

Almost every Greek organization is nationally affiliated, but each chapter is responsible for their own drug policy, she said.

"It is impossible for the national offices to police all their chapters," Honacki said.

"Many organizations have their own standards or judicial committee within their chapter. It depends on each chapter."

Many sororities and fraternities do follow a basic guideline designed by the Fraternity Insurance Purchasing Group, which carries most chapters as clients, according to information from the Dean of Students Office.

The policy prohibits the use, sale and possession of any illegal or controlled substances.

Panhellenic President Stacy Sawyer, a senior family studies major from Midland, said she is not aware of a sorority with the same policies as Kappa Sigma or Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

"Neither the Interfraternity Council or Panhellenic has a drug policy for sororities and fraternities because they have not had problems with it," Sawyer said. "We do have policies for alcohol use because we have more problems with that."

"The use and abuse of drugs and alcohol are never a part of what fraternities and sororities stand for."

Iranian man divorces wife for snoring

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A newlywed Iranian whose wife acknowledges secretly drugging him so he wouldn't hear her snore has filed for divorce.

Without the sleeping pills, the man told a judge that his wife's snoring keeps him awake, the Iran News reported Tuesday. So, he's "ready to divorce her on whatever legal grounds she wishes."

The English-language newspaper identified the couple — married just 40 days — only by first names. It said Gholam, suspicious Farzaneh was drugging his dinner, learned of her snoring after skipping his evening meal.

Gholam was quoted as telling the judge that he told Farzaneh to consult a doctor, but it did not help. "I have not been able to sleep at all and feel very bad now," he said.

Farzaneh acknowledged drugging Gholam, the paper said, and told the judge she would sleep during the day and stay awake at night to save her marriage. Gholam reportedly rejected the idea.

Death toll in Borneo riots rises to 300

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — An army general says about 300 people were killed in ethnic riots last month in Borneo, contradicting a government claim that the death toll was about 30, an Indonesian newspaper said Tuesday.

An army spokesman, Brig. Gen. Amir Syarifuddin, denied the report, insisting that "only some have died."

The daily Kompas quoted Maj. Gen. Zacky Anwar Makarim as saying victims of the violence in Kalimantan were from both sides — the indigenous Dayak tribesmen who are Christians and the Muslim Madurese immigrants from East Java.

Jury continues deliberations in du Pont murder trial

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — Jurors began deliberating Tuesday in multimillionaire John E. du Pont's murder trial after a defense lawyer urged them to view the killing of an Olympic wrestler through a "prism of psychosis."

"You have been an eyewitness to insanity," Thomas Bergstrom said. "You have been a spectator to a kaleidoscope of madness."

Bergstrom asked the jury to find the chemical fortune heir innocent by reason of insanity in the shooting of David Schultz on his suburban Philadelphia estate.

In his closing argument, Assistant District Attorney Joseph McGettigan called du Pont an arrogant, jealous man who killed when he "saw his narcissistic life dissolving."

He said du Pont should be convicted of murder and jailed for life.

Du Pont, 58, sat expressionless throughout, his long hair matted and greasy, wearing one of his many blue sweat suits.

Jurors deliberated for about 2 1/2 hours Tuesday before recessing for the night. They will resume deliberations today.

Du Pont shot Schultz three times Jan. 26, 1996, in the driveway of his Philadelphia estate. Schultz, 36, and his family lived on the estate. The 1984 Olympic gold medalist was training for a comeback with du Pont's world-class wrestling team, Team Foxcatcher.

After the shooting, du Pont sped back to his mansion and held police at bay for two days.

All six psychiatric experts who testified for both sides concluded du Pont is mentally ill, but only those hired by the defense concluded he was insane. The defense experts said du Pont was a paranoid schizophrenic who believed Schultz was part of an international conspiracy to kill him.

Witnesses testified that du Pont had delusions of being the Dalai Lama, the Christ Child, the last Russian czar and other grandiose figures. "You have to look at this evidence through the prism of psychosis," Bergstrom said, saying that his client needs treatment.

McGettigan said du Pont was an arrogant tyrant who killed his friend because he believed Schultz was trying to discredit him in the international wrestling community.

"He was someone whose loyalty the defendant no longer commanded," McGettigan said of Schultz.

Jurors can either find du Pont guilty, innocent by reason of insanity or guilty but mentally ill.

Du Pont could face life in prison if convicted of murder and up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

said.

Sanchez said he hopes Clinton's plans for balancing the budget without the use of a constitutional amendment will include greater emphasis on spending for education.

Michael Turner, president of the University Democrats and a senior political science and history from Austin, agreed with Sanchez, emphasizing the importance of including safeguards in the amendment, should it be passed.

For example, if the country experiences an economic crisis for which emergency spending is necessary, the amendment should not block the president's power to do so, Turner said.

Craig Emmert, a Tech assistant professor of political science, said an amendment could be harmful if the economy were to fall into turmoil.

"Potentially it might have a negative effect — if we were forced to cut spending or raise taxes, it may not have all the effects we anticipate," Emmert said about the amendment. "We potentially could be being forced against what might be needed."

Detectives follow leads in Ramsey case

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Police investigating JonBenet Ramsey's death completed a second trip to Georgia before traveling to another location that was not disclosed.

The detectives left the Atlanta area Monday night after interviewing 20 people, city spokeswoman Leslie Aaholm said Tuesday. She said they were still out of state, but would not give any details.

She also said police were still not prepared to name any suspects in the slaying of the 6-year-old beauty queen in her Boulder home.

The weekend trip to Atlanta, where the Ramsey family lived before moving to Boulder, produced about 35 hours of taped interviews, Aaholm said.

The Ramseys, who were in Atlanta over the weekend visiting relatives, were not interviewed. Ramsey stayed behind; his wife, Patricia, and their 10-year-old son, Burke, returned to Boulder.

JonBenet, the 1995 Little Miss Colorado, was found strangled in the basement of her family's home Dec. 26. A partial autopsy released last week indicated she could have been sexually assaulted.

Her body was found several hours after her mother said she found a handwritten note demanding a ransom for her return.

Americans top list of Nobel nominees

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Former President Carter, Bosnian peace envoy Richard Holbrooke and Balkan peace activists are among this year's nominees for the Nobel Peace Prize.

So far, 100 individuals and 25 organizations have been nominated, Geir Lundestad, secretary of the prize awards committee, said Tuesday.

"But nominations are still coming in, and we expect this to be the first year we exceed 130 nominations," he said.

This year's prize, worth $1.03 million, will be announced in mid-October, Lundestad said. The committee meets Feb. 25 to begin reviewing candidates.

The committee refuses to disclose the name of candidates, although those making the nominations often announce them.

For example, the American Friends Service Committee announced its nomination of Carter for his globe-trotting peace efforts. This is the eighth time he has been nominated.

Last year, many anticipated that the prize would honor peace efforts for Bosnia-Herzegovina, particularly those of Richard Holbrooke, the U.S. envoy who brokered the 1995 Dayton peace accord that ended Bosnia's fighting. The prize instead went to Jose Ramos Horta and Roman Catholic Bishop Carlos Filipe Ximenes Belo for their resistance to Indonesia's occupation of their native East Timor.

However, Bosnia and its troubled Balkan neighbors remain in focus this year, with nominees from the region including Selim Beslagic, mayor of the Bosnian town of Tuzla, Croatian peace activist Vesna Terseclic and Vesna Pestic, a Serbian opposition leader.

Other nominees include Chinese pro-democracy campaigner Wei Jingsheng, the Salvation Army and Ibrahim Rugova, president of Yugoslavia's Kosovo province.

The Nobel Prizes are presented Dec. 10, the anniversary of the death of Alfred Nobel, the Swede who invented dynamite and endowed the prizes in his will. The peace prize is awarded in Oslo, and the literature, medicine, chemistry, economics and physics prizes in Stockholm, Sweden.

Financial planning organization leads students to financial success

by Hollye Hodges/UD

Texas Tech students associated with the International Association of Financial Planning say it is the best kept secret on campus.

Students majoring in financial planning take courses in finance, accounting, economics, mathematics, sociology, family relations and management. Financial planning graduates work with clients to plan their finances and ensure future funds for retirement or their children's education.

IAFP, the financial planning business organization at Tech, is part of a growing field that has job opportunities available to students around the globe. However, at Tech, involvement in IAFP is inversely representative of the organization's growing international popularity.

"In the '80s, personal finances became very complicated," said Jerry Mason, associate professor of merchandizing, environmental design and consumer economics and IAFP co-sponsor. "That's when financial planning started growing."

This growth has spurred an increase in financial planning jobs available, and financial planning students at Tech say the program is a great springboard into the business world.

"Dr. Mason is a highly regarded professional in the financial planning field," said Stacy Kellams, a junior financial planning major from Snyder and IAFP vice president. "Everyone knows the quality of students that he turns out."

The reputation of Mason's students has helped them get jobs straight out of college, his students say.

"Our graduates have jobs before they walk across the stage," Kellams said. "Most grads have to turn down job offers."

IAFP students also attend the yearly International Association of Financial Planners meeting every fall. Because of Mason's influence in the international organization, Tech is the only university from which students are invited. Students assist the organizers of the conference and meet financial planners from around the globe.

"The convention is the highlight of our year," Kellams said. "This is where we network and find internships that can lead to jobs."

Seven of the eight December financial planning graduates had jobs offered them in August, six months before graduation, Mason said.

"Networking is a very important thing," Mason said. "Unfortunately, it's who you know, not what you know."

IAFP meet at 6 p.m. Thursday in the human sciences building room 169. Lee Pennington, founder of the Lubbock financial planning firm Pennington, Bass and Associates, will be the guest speaker. He recently co-authored a book, Making the Money Last, Financial Clarity for the Surviving Spouse. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Mason attributes the success of his students in the business world to the in-class training they receive at Tech.

"We try to build bridges to the real world," Mason said. "They are exposed to creating things on campus they will use in their careers."

Lawmakers band together for child protection laws

AUSTIN (AP) — Bills meant to protect young people by expanding health care coverage, making tobacco less accessible and instituting "zero tolerance" for juveniles who drink and drive were filed Tuesday.

The bills "are a clear indication that we're looking out for the future of Texas and that we must continue to press forward to fulfill that mission," said Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, one of several sponsors of the legislative package.

The package, billed as a "triple threat," includes a House bill that would make children's health care coverage more available; a Senate bill that would lower the allowable blood alcohol content for drivers under age 21 from 0.07 to zero; and a Senate bill that would, among other things, require tobacco retailers to verify the age of purchasers younger than 27.

Some of the measures have failed in previous legislative sessions. The Senate bill to control tobacco sales is in its third legislative round, but sponsors, such as Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-

Laredo, say the timing is right.

"This bill is overdue in terms of passing," Zaffirini said.

In addition to requiring identification, the tobacco bill would:

- Restrict vending machines to places inaccessible to minors;

- Prohibit the distribution of free samples or coupons redeemable for free or discounted tobacco products.

- Prohibit outdoor advertising of tobacco products except at facilities leased or owned by a professional sports franchise.

The "zero tolerance" bill would punish non-driving alcohol offenses by minors, such as possession, with sanctions such as driver's license suspension and community service.

The "Healthy Kids" bill would create a non-profit corporation to administer low-cost insurance for children who don't qualify for Medicaid.

"I don't think anyone can (oppose the legislation)," Berlanga said. "I want someone who's opposed to children having insurance in Texas to come forth and to tell me why."

and admitted he was a "book and paper freak." In a recent class, he handed out copies of the United States Constitution, the Texas Constitution and a new tax plan by Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

This is not Montford's first journey into the realm of teaching. He has taught before, but it was almost two decades ago. When on active duty with the Marine Corps, he taught a political science course at East Carolina University.

"It would be great if he taught all of our classes," Douglas said. "Chancellor Montford has a lot of resources — if he wants some thing done, he gets it done."

Because he is the chancellor of the university, some students initially thought he would drop in periodically, not actually teach the class.

"I figured he would show up a couple of times," Collins said. "But he has shown that he is committed to this class. He is there every Tuesday teaching, and he has done a good job."

If Montford has his way, more students could be seeing people from the administration building moving into their classrooms in the future.

"I would like everyone in my administration to teach at some point," Montford said.

ana and Mississippi.

"Clearly the Hopwood decision has eliminated a major application which could work even if in the old days we were outbid," she said of attracting minority students with scholarships.

"Even if we didn't win, at least we were in the competition."

Winer has spent her entire professional career at Tech since coming to the university in 1975 after earning her doctoral degree in psychology from Ohio State University.

Winer, who began her career at Tech as a psychology professor, has served as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences since 1991. Before that she worked as associate dean for four years.

Coffee House showcases student talent, adds atmosphere

by Sebastian Kitchen/UD
Texas Tech students may not realize an eclectic atmosphere can be found on campus.

Tech's University Center Programs will give students a chance to enjoy a coffeehouse atmosphere while showcasing their talent at the Tech Talent Coffee House at 7 p.m. today in the UC Matador Room.

"This is to give students a chance to perform in front of other students," said Blake Houser, co-project leader for the Tech Talent Coffee House and a freshman mass communications major from Fort Worth. "This is a casual place they can perform."

UC Programs hosts several coffee houses a year, but the format is different. Tech students will compete against each other in a talent competition.

Among the competitors are three bands, a female vocalist playing guitar, a male vocalist playing the piano and a comedian.

A panel of three judges will use criteria to rate how they believe each performer has done. The performers will be rated on a scale from one to 10 on talent, originality, content, showmanship and overall impression.

The first and second place winners will have a chance to perform again at their own coffee house March 13.

The other talent show performers will be given gift certificates and a variety of other prizes for participation, Houser said.

"A lot of the groups will be performing original material for the coffee house," he said.

"Some already had original material, but others came up with some for this event."

Some of the performers also performed at the Mastercard Acts Talent Show at Tech in the fall, Houser said.

The two coffee houses last semester did not showcase Tech students. The first was a Tejano singer during Hispanic Heritage month, and the other was a seasonal celebration — people were able to share how they celebrated holidays.

"This is the first one with Tech talent," Houser said.

"This is the first one that has not been cultural."

The coffeehouse is intended to be a place to get away from everything else, said Wesley Vice, a co-project leader and a freshman mass communications major from Greenville.

"I think the coffee house is a great relaxing atmosphere," Vice said. "I think this will be a good time — a good way to get away from everything else."

The event is free and open to all Tech students.

"I think this will be really successful," Houser said. "Many of the people are bringing their friends."

"This is new at Tech, and there will be free coffee and dessert."

'Star Wars' on top as 'Empire' waits in wings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The re-released "Star Wars," lord of the box office for the past three weeks, is about to go into battle against its own offspring "The Empire Strikes Back."

The staying power of the 20-year-old space adventure has confounded even its studio, which planned to release "Star Wars" and its two sequels in succession but didn't expect them to be fighting for the top spot at the box office.

But "Star Wars" will remain in theaters as "The Empire Strikes Back" strikes again on Friday. And the pair are certain to be showing when the last of the George Lucas trilogy, "Return of the Jedi," is re-issued March 7.

Over the four-day holiday weekend, "Star Wars" took in $21.4 million, easily topping Clint Eastwood's "Absolute Power" and its second-place take of $16.8 million, Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc. said Tuesday.

"Dante's Peak" dropped to third with $13.7 million following a record February opening last week. Chevy Chase's "Vegas Vacation" was fourth with $12.8 million, while "Friends" TV star Matthew Perry helped "Fools Rush In" gross $9.7 million for fifth place.

Other weekend box-office winners included "The English Patient" and "Shine," which took advantage of the raft of Oscar nominations they received last week. "English Patient" added just a few screens but increased its gross 105 percent, while "Shine" expanded into wider release to push up its take 241 percent.

Returning wallet earns cabbie high life

LAS VEGAS (AP) — David Hacker had just finished his 10-hour shift driving a cab when he spotted a bulging alligator-skin wallet on the back seat.

It held $25,000 — what Hacker normally makes in a year.

"This is it," Hacker thought, considering it a test from above.

A few years earlier, Hacker had made a promise to return the favor if God would help him through some health problems.

Hacker tracked down the owner and was rewarded with $5,000 in cash, food and clothes, and a whole week living the high life.

Credit cards in the wallet bore the name of Lance Dykes.

Hacker believed it could have been a passenger he picked up from Bally's.

Sure enough, he found Dykes at one of the casino's roulette wheels.

Dykes, 38, from Hinesville, Ga., said he had realized the wallet was missing but figured it was long gone.

"In Las Vegas, I just couldn't believe someone would turn it in," Dykes said Tuesday of his Feb. 11 encounter.

"I was almost speechless. I must have told him 'thank you' a 150 times."

He also handed Hacker a wad of reward cash.

"Take the rest of the week off," Hacker said Dykes told him. "You're my guest."

Hacker, 45, spent last week with Dykes, gambling with the high rollers and eating lobster in an expensive suite.

"It was the first time for me," he said. "I'd never eaten lobster before."

Hacker and his girlfriend were also treated to shopping, another gourmet meal and front-row seats at a Las Vegas show.

After Dykes left town Saturday, Hacker went back to his cab.

"It was a wild weekend," he said. "I enjoyed the good life, but it's nice to get back to reality."

Softball opens home season with bang

by Christy Apple/UD

The Texas Tech softball team improved its record to 10-4 after beating Abilene Christian, 8-0, and, 10-0, Tuesday at the Berl Huffman Complex.

In the first game, starting pitcher Emily Hayes struck out six in five innings of work. In the second game, junior Danielle Brady started for the Red Raiders with junior Jenny Cannon relieving Brady in the fourth inning.

Tuesday's game was the first home contest for Tech after starting off the season with 13 games on the road.

The nervousness caused by playing in front of friends and family never fazed the Red Raiders as they finished the game errorless, said Tech coach Renee Luers-Gillispie.

"We needed to finally play at home," Luers-Gillispie said. "The girls were nervous and so were the coaches. We had to prove we could play at home."

Freshman shortstop Paula Workman said it was nice to play in familiar surroundings.

"I was excited because we have never had a home-field advantage this year," Workman said. "It is good for us to play where we practice and for the whole team to come together and play."

Workman said the Red Raiders have really come together as a team and that can be seen in the fact that Tech has already doubled its win total from last season.

Luers-Gillispie said Tech's bats have been coming around since the second day of the Texas-Arlington tournament.

"It all started Sunday in the tournament," Luers-Gillispie said. "The top of the lineup was not doing their job, so we changed it up, and now it has proven it works."

Workman, who went 5-for-6 Tuesday and hit one home run, is adapting quickly to her new role as the lead-off hitter.

"Workman did a great job and that is what you need with a leadoff hitter," Luers-Gillispie said.

Workman largely contributed to the two shutouts of ACU when, in the second inning of the second game, she turned a double play to end one of the Wildcats' only scoring threats.

Following Workman in the lineup is third baseman Kim Martinez, who hit a home run in each of Tuesday's games. Martinez was 4-of-5 for the afternoon and hit in three RBIs.

Luers-Gillispie said she is pleased with the turnaround of her team from last year and that the team is maturing with each game.

"As long as we see improvement,

I know we are doing something right," Luers-Gillispie said. "The girls know game in and game out they can win."

Lady Raiders begin three-game road trip with OU

by Heath Robinson/UD

The No. 14 Texas Tech Lady Raiders begin a three-game road trip against the Oklahoma Sooners at 7 p.m. today at the Lloyd Noble Center in Norman, Okla.

Tech (16-6 overall, 8-4 Big 12 Conference) defeated the Sooners, 67-55, in the first meeting Jan. 15. Alicia Thompson and Rene Hanebutt led the Lady Raiders with 22 points and 19 points, respectively.

When Texas defeated Nebraska Monday in Austin, 71-70, Tech moved into sole possession of fourth place in the Big 12, one game ahead of Nebraska and Kansas State. The top four teams in the conference will receive a bye into the second round of the Big 12 tournament, a goal Tech coach Marsha Sharp has pointed to all season.

"I think it's going to really help teams advance in the tournament," Sharp said. "It is certainly easier to win three games in a row than it is to win four in a row."

The Lady Raiders, 2-3 on the road in conference play, must find a way to win away from Lubbock as they play consecutive road games against Oklahoma, Texas and Texas A&M.

"There's no question that it has been proven in the Big 12 that winning on the road is extremely difficult," Sharp said. "It takes a different mentality."

Hanebutt said winning on the road simply requires focus.

"I think for us to win these games, we'll need to come out ready to play from the very start," Hanebutt said.

"If we can keep together for both halves, we can be all right."

Winning anywhere for Oklahoma (5-17 overall, 1-11 Big 12) has proven difficult. The Sooners won their conference opener over Texas A&M, but have lost 11 straight games.

The Sooners are led by freshman Phylesha Whaley, a 5-10 forward from Slaton, at 13.1 points and 7.2 rebounds a game.

Sooner forwards Tina Taylor and Michele Workman average 12 and 10.5 points per game, respectively.

Baseball team finds offense in 17-2 rout

by Brent Dirks/UD

The Texas Tech baseball team won its third game of the season in spectacular fashion as the Red Raiders pummeled Eastern New Mexico State 17-2 Wednesday at Dan Law Field.

After Tech's starting pitcher Shane Wright (1-0) gave up one run to the Greyhounds (0-5 overall) in the top of the second inning, the Red Raiders (3-1 overall) exploded in the bottom of the inning with seven runs.

With the first three Tech batters on base, senior first baseman Chris Shuffield hit a grand slam to give the Red Raiders a 4-1 lead.

"We executed good, we played well, we played good defense, good hitting as well as good pitching," Shuffield said. "So when you put that all together it comes out to a good day."

Shuffield said he does not know how many grand slams he has hit in his career, but the shot Wednesday will be one he will never forget.

"I was just looking to put the ball in play and drive home some runs for the team," Shuffield said. "And what do you know, it comes out to be a grand slam."

Spurred by senior designated hitter Joe Dillon's two-run home run, three more Red Raiders crossed the plate in the second, and Tech never looked back.

Tech coach Larry Hays said he was happy with the Red Raiders' play against ENMSU, except for the slow start.

"I thought our pitching threw

well, we swung the bat and did some things," Hays said.

"But we've got to get ready to play at the beginning of the game. We're not going to get where we want to go until we get where we can play when the game starts."

Hays said he has been expecting production from the offense, and the Red Raiders finally produced against the Greyhounds.

"I've been expecting all season, but we just haven't done it," Hays said of the Red Raiders' offense. "This should be a good hitting club. We caught them down on their pitching a little bit. Hopefully, we'll get to the point where we will score some runs."

Runs is exactly what the Red Raiders produced after the seven-run second inning. Tech got four more runs in the fourth and then tallied five more runs in the fifth inning.

Tech got its second grand slam in the game as junior right fielder Rick Nadeau's home run to left field made the score 16-1 and gave the Red Raiders room to cruise comfortably to the victory.

Even with the easy victory, Hays said, there is much for the Red Raiders to learn.

"We don't know who we are, and we're out just trying to have a little success in play and feel good about ourselves," Hays said. "We get a lot out of a game like this."

Tech sports 30 selections to classroom champions list

Thirty Texas Tech athletes, including nine with GPAs of 3.9 or better, were named Tuesday to the inaugural Big 12 Conference Phillips 66 Classroom Champions list for the 1996-97 season.

"We have so many positive academic stories in college athletics and at Texas Tech," said Gerald Myers, Tech athletic director. "It is great to see the Big 12 Conference and Phillips 66 recognize the 'student' in the student-athlete."

The football team led with eight selections, including Reagan Bownds, Keith Cockram, Jaret Greaser, Jeremy Hernandez, Rob Peters, Zac Potter, Tony Rogers and Field Scovell.

The track and field teams followed with five selections, including Tandra Brillhart, Bobbi Crill, Rebecca Graf, Lori Spurlin and Craig Vaughn.

The Tech baseball team received four selections, including Jimmy Frush, Jacob Rinehart, Kirk Ulrich and Monty Ward.

The Red Raider soccer program had three selections, including Jennifer Benat, Jennifer Wood and Katy Woodburn.

The Tech women's basketball team, volleyball team, softball team and cross country teams each sported two selections. The Lady Raiders had Amber Tate and Elesha Walker selected; the volleyball team had Jill Burness and Courtney Thames selected; the softball team had Danielle Brady and Emily Hayes selected; and the cross country teams had Neil Crouch and Shannon Keel selected.

The men's golf team with Thomas Baldwin and the women's tennis team with Misty Meyer closed out the selections for the Red Raiders.

Tech begins push for NCAA tourney

by Brent Dirks/UD

The Texas Tech men's basketball team, after losing four of its last six games, tries to get back on track as the Red Raiders battle Oklahoma at 7 p.m. today at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Tech coach James Dickey said the Sooners (14-8 overall, 6-6 Big 12 Conference) have changed since the Red Raiders (15-7 overall, 7-5 Big 12) defeated Oklahoma 67-62 Jan. 15, in Norman, Okla.

Oklahoma led for much of the game, but a second half Red Raider surge led by forward Cory Carr gave Tech the victory.

"I think everyone is better," Dickey said. "They certainly have two great guards in (Corey) Brewer and (Nate) Erdman. Their big guys are rebounding well. When you beat Colorado by 25 points you're doing something right."

Along with the 91-66 upset victory of No. 15 Colorado last week, the Sooners have beaten Nebraska and Big 12 South Division leader Texas this season.

Oklahoma, one game behind Tech in the Big 12 South Division race, lost to Missouri 80-73 Saturday. Erdman scored 26 points while Brewer added 21, but a poor 37.9 percent shooting percentage from the field cost Oklahoma the game.

The Sooners are paced by Erdman (20.5 points and 4.3 rebounds per game) and Brewer (16.7 points and 4.4 rebounds per game).

Dickey said he is impressed with the Sooners, who the Red Raiders have beaten three-straight games.

"They've got skilled players, they've played hard, and they're big and strong," Dickey said of the Sooners. "It will be a challenge for us."

Going into the Oklahoma contest, the Red Raiders are still only one game behind South Division-leading Texas after the Longhorns were defeated by Nebraska 79-67 Sunday.

Even with the card dealt to Tech by the Longhorns, Dickey said he does not feel good about Tech's standing after the 77-76 overtime loss to Baylor Saturday.

"I feel sick about Saturday," Dickey said. "You get by beat by a team you should have beat, and you have a chance to go a game up."

"You just have to find a way to win those games under those circumstances."

Dickey said he would rather Tech be in control of its own destiny than having other teams help the Red Raiders in the conference standings.

"You take care of your own business, and we haven't done that four out of the last six," Dickey said of the Red Raiders.

"And I know we're the only team in the league that had to play Iowa State, Kansas and Texas in a three-game stretch."

Junior center Tony Battie, who comes into today's contest averaging 20 points and 12 rebounds a game, said even though the Baylor loss was tough for the Red Raiders, Tech must be fired up against the Sooners.

"We know it's going to be a tough ballgame," Battie said. "Oklahoma is doing some good things. They whipped a couple of teams last week. So they're playing real good right now."

The Red Raiders, who have three of their last four regular season games at home, must play to win for the rest of the season, Battie said.

Wes Underwood/UD

Hangin' with Mr. Cooper: Texas Tech's Gionet Cooper scores two against Nebraska Feb. 8. Cooper is averaging 7.4 points and 8.7 boards per game.

"At the end of February and March, we can't lose games this late in the season," Battie said. "It's a must-win situation for us. Our backs are against the walls, and there is nothing to do but rise to the occasion or lay down in a corner. Personally, myself, I don't plan to lay down."

Women's tennis returns to court after hiatus

After an extended hiatus, the Texas Tech women's tennis team is back in action as it battles West Texas A&M at 2 p.m. today at the Athletic Training Center.

Tech Director of Tennis Tim Siegel said the match against the Buffaloes should be one the Red Raiders win.

"This is a certainly a match that if we all compete and play hard, we should take care of business," Siegel said.

Tech has not played since a 7-2 loss to Houston in Albuquerque,

Siegel

N.M., Feb. 9. The extended rest is important for the Red Raiders as the major part of the season is approaching, Siegel said.

"We needed to step back," he said.

"We took a couple of days off last week. The real stretch for this team starts March 1. The season is so long that it is kind of good to have some time off to rest injuries and mentally take a little of a break."

But now as the Red Raiders start the meat of their season, it is important for Tech to get back in focus, Siegel said.

"We haven't played now in a week and a half, and it's important we get back to the basic things well and competing hard," he said.

Like with other matches, the main thing for the Red Raiders is solid play from the start of the match, he said.

"The main thing is coming out and playing hard from the very beginning because this is one of the few matches we are going to be favored to win," Siegel said.

Even though Siegel said the women's tennis program at West Texas A&M is not as strong as the men's program, the Buffaloes will be a test for the Red Raiders.

"Every match we play is going to be difficult," he said.

"There is a fine line between going out and playing hard and competing poorly. It's all attitude and effort, and we'll get back to that today."

Basketball parking changed

Fans attending tonight's Texas Tech vs. Oklahoma basketball game will not be able to park in the southern part of the parking lot east of the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

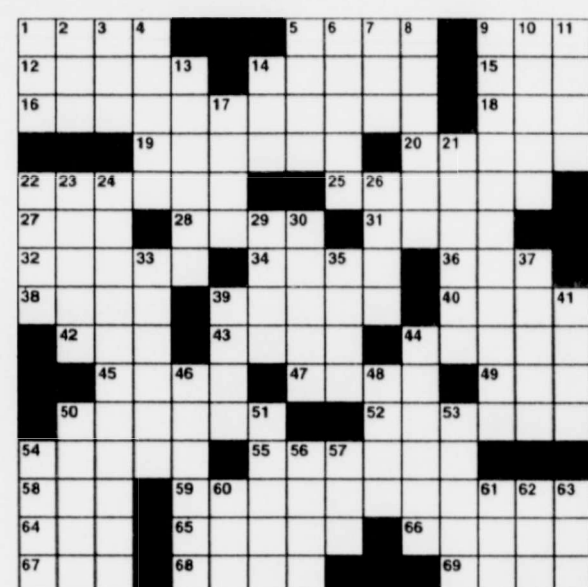

Those parking spaces will be reserved for individuals attending the tonight's performance of "Hello Dolly" in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium.

To offset the lost spaces, Tech and the City of Lubbock will provide free bus service from the Student Recreation Center to the west entrance of the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. The bus service will begin running at 5:30 p.m. and continue through 9:30 p.m.

Parking east of the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum will return to normal for Saturday's Texas game.

Intramural events —

Innertube Water Polo registration

Intramural innertube Water Polo for men, along with Co-Rec sign ups will be the highlight sports for intramurals next week. Entries for these activities will be accepted Feb. 24 through Feb. 26 in SRC 202. Teams wishing to enter are reminded that the earlier they enter, the better their chance of selecting a favorable playing time. Team managers should bring a list of players' names, addresses and numbers to SRC 202 during the entry period along with their refundable $25 forfeit fee to select their regular season playing time. Play will begin Sunday, March 2.

Spring softball begins soon

Intramural softball entries will be accepted this from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. week, Feb. 18-20, in SRC 203. Copies of the available leagues can be picked up now in the SRC. Plan to enter as early as possible in order to secure your most favorable playing time and/or location.

In order to enter a team, simply bring your roster with team members' names, addresses and phone numbers to SRC 203 during the entry period. A refundable $35 forfeit fee also is required. The intramural staff is anticipating more than 260 teams, so plan to enter early.

Softball free agents meeting tonight

Individuals wishing to play Intramural Softball but are without a team on which to play are encouraged to attend the Softball Free Agents' Meeting at 5:30 p.m. today in SRC 205. Teams looking for a couple of extra players also are encouraged to attend.

9-ball entries accepted now

The 9-Ball pool singles championship offered through the Recreational Sports and Texas Tech's University Center is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the UC Games Room. Play will begin at 6:45 p.m. after brackets are drawn. Entries are being accepted from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and tomorrow in SRC 202.

ACUI rules will govern all play. Depending on registration, a single elimination tournament will follow the Round Robin Pool play format.

For additional information, call 742-3351, or come by the SRC 202.

Seasoned: Spring cannot be far behind with sign-ups for intramural softball set for today and tomorrow in the Student Rec Center. League play begins March 2 for men's, women's and co-rec teams.

Indoor Triathlon Saturday

Endurance fitness enthusiasts should note that the third annual Indoor Triathlon will be at 9 a.m. Saturday. Each participant will ride the Windracer, row the Concept II and run on the treadmill for 15 minutes each.

The person who accumulates the most miles wins. There is no entry fee and no prizes — just fun. Register now in the Fit/Well Center. For more info, call 742-3828.

Walking Clinic Sunday

Walking is an excellent aerobic exercise because it requires little equipment, is easily accessible and most of us already know how to perform it. Learn how to make it your aerobic activity at the hour-long seminar at 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

Come prepared to walk and leave with a 12-week personalized walking program. No fees, just come Sunday to SRC 201.

Spring break Rio Grande canoeing trip planned

It is not too late to sign up for the whitewater canoeing trip over Spring Break.

The cost is $150 and includes transportation, camping and canoeing equipment, permits and fees.

This is a great trip. The group will canoe the Rio Grande River between the United States and Mexico.

Camping on the beaches, exploring the adventure. This Spring Break get away is just for you.

Sign up now. For more information, please call 742-2949.

Lifeguarding

Become a certified American Red Cross lifeguard. The course includes Lifeguarding, Standard First Aid and CPR for the professional rescuer. Cost is $50 for Tech students and $60 for the community. Session 2 is from 6 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, March 25 through April 24. Session 3 is from 6 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from April 7 through 30.

Water Safety Instructor

Become certified to teach American Red Cross swimming classes. The cost is $60 for Tech students and $70 for the community. Session 1 is from 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays from March 4 to April 15.

Community First Aid and Safety

The course provides the latest information on Standard First Aid, and adult, child and infant CPR as set by the American Red Cross. Those who pass the course will receive both a Standard First Aid and Community CPR. The cost is $25 for Tech students and $35 for the general public.

Session 1 is from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, March 8.

Stroke Mechanics

Something wrong with your stroke? Cannot quite get that flip turn, but don't know why? Come to our stroke mechanics clinic and let our instructor help you. The dates are: from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. Feb. 22 and from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. every Tuesday night.

5000-Meter Swim

The 5000 meter is a long course event that requires the swimmer to swim 100 lengths of the pool. Register Jan. 15 through Feb. 28. The swim is free, and there will be T-shirts available for purchase. The event is from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, March 1.
