Democrats lose sheriff candidate Price

APU NAIKUD Staff Writer

Just when the Lubbock County Democrats thought they had a nominee for November's sheriff elections, a violation of state law will keep their candidate from running.

Floyd Price, a 32-year Lubbock Police Department veteran, was the No. 1 choice for the job until Friday when the State of Texas informed Lubbock County Democrats that they will need another candidate.

In March, Price voted in the Republican primary which will ultimately prevent him from earning a Democratic bid to run for sheriff.

According to state law, someone who voted in the Republican primary cannot run for office as a Democrat in the next general election.

Price, who voted for Criminal District Attorney Bill Sowder in the Republican primary, is an officer of the Lubbock Police Department's crime prevention unit.

Price had hoped to fill the position left vacant following the death of Sheriff D.L. "Sonny" Keese in June.

The Republican Party already has a candidate in Dusty Dowgar, and since the deadline to list as an independent candidate has passed, Price will be forced to sit the election out.

The Democratic Party will continue to make considerations for the nomination said Democratic chairman Tommy Jones.

"Our stance will not change because of this misfortune," Jones said.

"Anyone interested in the job will receive full consideration."

As for whether the party has any prospective candidates, Jones said no one else has shown any interest.

Anne Davidson, Lubbock County Clerk, said the Democratic Party has until September 4 to declare a candidate or else not have one for the November elections.

Arena to be open by spring

ANJELA ANAYAUD Staff Writer

Although construction is behind schedule on the new United Spirit Arena, Texas Tech administrators say it should still be open in time for next spring's commencement ceremony.

Doug Mann, vice chancellor for facilities, planning and construction, said the arena completion date is set for April 15, 1999.

"We'd like to get spring commencement in there," he said. "They're (Centex Construction Company) showing 30 days behind schedule, but they've told us they feel like they can make up that time."

Mann said Centex, based in Dallas, is probably one of the top five construction contractors in the nation.

The budget for the arena is $51.7 million and the first two phases of construction have been completed.

Since funds for Phase I and Phase II were left over, they will offset the over-the-budget-amounts for Phase III, the last phase in arena construction.

"We had balances of $80,000 for Phase I and $60,000 for Phase II," Mann said. "Phase III is the actual building. We would anticipate using those balances that were carried over on the Phase III."

About half of the arena funding comes from the students, he said. The rest comes from donations and seat licensing.

The arena will be primarily used for basketball and volleyball games. Other projected uses for the arena include concerts and conventions.

Marsha Sharp, Lady Raider basketball coach, said the team is looking forward to playing in the arena.

"We're really excited to play in it after next season," she said. "It's already impacted our recruiting."

The team currently plays on a portable floor in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

"I think there will be a huge difference between playing in the arena and the coliseum," she said. "It has a permanent floor."

Sharp said the arena experience will be spectacular.

"I think it has the potential to be the best on-campus basketball facility in the nation," she said.

Human sciences site of new Goodacre sculpture

ANJELA ANAYAUD Staff Writer

Texas Tech students soon walking on campus will soon see people gathering at a new seating area in front of the human sciences building. The people are not Tech students: they are bronze.

The sculpture, "Park Place" by Glenna Goodacre, is a series of bronze people of various ages in lifelike poses on and around a serpentine structure sculpted. A semi-circular concrete seating area will face the sculpture as part of the project.

College of Human Sciences Dean Elizabeth Haley said the college has actively campaigned to have the sculpture in front of the building.

"Our college proposed that we have the sculpture, so we're very pleased," she said. "It was clarified that this was our project. We had been involved in the fund raising and development of the project along with Mrs. Montford and initially from Dr. Fran Scott."

They made a proposal to long-time friends of the university, the College of Human Sciences and to J. T. and Margaret Talkington. Haley said the Talkingtons have agreed to fund a large portion of the project.

Although most of the project has been funded, it is not yet completely paid for. They will determine what needs to be done when they know the total price of the project, she said.

Tech needs priorities in funding programs

James Walker
UD Editor

It occurred to me today that I have yet to write a column this summer that seriously takes issue with much of anything.

I start to feel I am remiss in my duties if I'm not ranting about something.

So, what should it be? I could talk about the new United Spirit Arena, which gives Tech the distinction of spending more money on our basketball arena than any other school in the Big 12. At least we're No. 1 at something, right?

I've done that to death, though. I remember in the fall of 1996, when The UD editorial board first voted not to endorse arena funding. Since that fateful "vote," I've written pages on how Tech could better spend more than $50 million.

The arena is a reality, and it's here to stay, and those of us who thought it was ill-conceived from the start might as well start dealing with it.

But here's something I can rant about. The idea that athletic and academic success are somehow connected. They are not connected. Quit trying to argue it.

People who choose a university based on their athletic success are too stupid to survive at a university to begin with, unless they plan on being an athlete themselves.

The athletic department should not be a fund-raising priority for the administration. Tech's Big 12 record is not going to get me a job, and unless you are on the team, it isn't going to get you one either.

Here's a news flash for everyone: sports are for fun. They are just games. Games. Say it with me. G-A-M-E-S.

That's not to say I don't like sports. But the reason why so many people like college sports better than pro is that, supposedly, college sports aren't as corrupted by the politics of money. What a joke.

James Walker has less than a month left of the single life.

Albright confronts China, Myanmar on civil rights

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright confronted several Asian nations at a conference Monday, criticizing Myanmar for blocking the movements of opposition leader Ang San Suu Kyi and China for jailing dissidents after President Clinton's visit.

She said turmoil in Myanmar, still called Burma by U.S. officials, was posing "a threat to the stability of the region."

As ministers of 20 Asian and Western countries and the European Union met at the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Regional Forum, Nobel laureate Suu Kyi spent a fourth day Monday stuck in a car on a rural Myanmar highway surrounded by government security personnel. She was arrested Friday on her way to a meeting with supporters.

In denouncing the military-ruled government of Myanmar Albright said the United States would hold it "directly responsible" for the health and welfare of Suu Kyi.

Albright went public with her complaints after Myanmar Foreign Minister Ohn Gyaw defended his nation's actions in a closed-door session with participants.

Ohn Gyaw was asked by The Associated Press to comment on Albright's concerns for Suu Kyi. "Nothing will happen to her," he said of the opposition leader.

The conference host, Philippine Foreign Secretary Domingo Siazon, said later that Albright's statement of concern was "just too vague" for the rest of the group to adopt.

Recounting her conversation with Chinese Foreign Minister Tang Jiaxuan, Albright told reporters she noted that China had released some prisoners, but "I made ... quite clear that arresting people is not the way that we see follow through."

A senior Clinton administration official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that Albright was concerned about the arrests of about 20 dissidents after Clinton returned from 10 days in China earlier this month. The Chinese delegation didn't respond directly to her concerns, but "they couldn't miss it" as criticism, the official said.

Texas meteorite sells for $23,000

Seven boys split cash after battling city hall for the space rock

MONAHANS (AP) — The seven boys who found a meteorite and fought the city for the right to keep it now have $23,000 to show for the space rock.

Mike Craddock, who lives in Midland and works in Big Spring, bought the rock during an Internet auction Sunday. He met the boys at a local bank Monday and gave them a cashier's check for the right to take the soccer ball-sized meteorite home.

Craddock said he was elated to have the meteorite, which he calls "a piece of West Texas history."

"It was also very important to me that the boys got the money. One of them said that he had never had more than $5 dollars, so to walk out of a bank with almost $3,000 is pretty neat."

The boys, Flavio Armendariz, Eron Hernandez, Javier Juarez, Patrick Lyles, Alvaro Lyles, Jose Felan and Neri Armendariz — will share equally in the proceeds, said Orlando Lyles, father of two of the youths who found the stone while playing basketball.

He said his sons would put their share away for college.

Firefighters took it for analysis and promised it would be returned as long as NASA determined it was not radioactive.

Days later, the Lyles family telephone began ringing off the hook.

Some university science departments offered to buy the meteorite, with bids reaching as high as $31,000.

But when the family asked the city to return it, the mayor sent a letter politely declining. The meteorite, he wrote, was city property.

After a hearing in May, city council members ruled "finders, keepers," giving the rock to the seven boys.

Clinton talks on Social Security future

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — President Clinton skeptically led a debate Monday on whether part of the Social Security trust fund should take a ride on the stock market and warned Americans they'd be risking shrunken retirement savings.

"Basically, your investments might lose money and you might not be so well-off," Clinton said.

"Regardless of the gyrations of the markets, there must be at least a dependable foundation of retirement security."

Still, he conceded that he was open to winning the trust fund a higher rate of return "in some fashion," rather than increasing payroll taxes or cutting benefits.

He and several members of Congress were at the University of New Mexico for a half-day "town hall" on keeping Social Security alive after the baby boomers' retirement next century.

Their focus: Republican-championed proposals to divert a portion of the Social Security trust fund, which is now invested in safe but low-yielding government bonds, into potentially higher yielding private stocks.

Welcome Freshmen

Well, the hard part is over. You found a date for the prom, you aced the SAT. You graduated from high school — it was a breeze. If you conquered that, you can conquer anything.

Now all you have to do is show your parents you can survive without them, be away from home and your friends, living in that cramped dorm room and being No. 523 in that huge lecture hall.

Yeah, you can do it. After all you're not alone — there are 4,000 more just like you.

Four years of memories, friends and parties await you and what better way to remember those memories than buying a copy of the La Ventana yearbook and ¡Amigos! New Student and Freshman Directory.

The La Ventana documents your life as a Texas Tech student. The award-winning publication has garnered numerous national awards like the prestigious Pacemaker award and the Gold Crown award — the highest honors a collegiate yearbook can receive.

We've already begun making plans for the 1999 yearbook, and we're excited that you will be a part of it. When you purchase a La Ventana yearbook, you're not just buying a record of memories, but a piece of history steeped in tradition.

La Ventana, translated means "The Window" in Spanish. The name was chosen in 1925 to go along with the Spanish motif of the school. Around 400 pages long, the All-American yearbook is staffed by approximately 30 students — students just like you.

The ¡Amigos! New Student and Freshman Directory also is a publication new students can't live without. Geared, of course, toward the incoming students, ¡Amigos! is a photographic directory of all new students on campus and contains features and tips on how to survive in this place we so affectionately call Raiderland.

The 1999 La Ventana and ¡Amigos! New Student and Freshman Directory can be purchased as a package during orientation at the Student Publications table in the University Center Ballroom for $48. That's two records documenting your life at Texas Tech in one package. What better way to show your Tech pride than by purchasing a tradition in itself.

So freshmen and new students, welcome to new experiences, to 25,000 other Red Raiders, to living on your own and on your own terms, to all-nighters, to many acquaintances and a few good friends, to organizations for every Dick and Jane, to a town that screams Red and Black.

Welcome to your life ... welcome to Texas Tech.

Wayne Hodgin, editor

the human sciences building because it represents different stages of the life cycle, Haley said.

"One of the themes of human science is that as we follow people across the life cycle we are better able to meet their needs and serve them," she said. "We're always changing as individuals. We grow and mature."

The building is also a good location because it is so close to the university entrance, Haley said.

"That particular site will have high visibility," she said. "It's an excellent place."

Doug Mann, vice chancellor for facilities, planning and construction, said the project will cost $250,000 and will be installed sometime in the fall semester.

The Talkingtons have always admired Goodacre's work, he said.

Accused bank robber sues teller for defamation, slander

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — It just doesn't pay to be held up.

Mortimer Hetsberger, in jail on pending trial on a bank robbery charge, filed a defamation and slander lawsuit against Laura Gonzalez, the Fleet Bank teller who waited on him June 11, 1997.

The handwritten suit claims Gonzalez lied to police in her account of the holdup, causing him to face a more serious charge.

The suit, filed last month by Hetsberger, seeks $1.5 million in damages.

Jarchow helps creation of Saudi Arabia college

GRETCHEN VERRY
UD Staff Writer

Jarchow

Elaine Jarchow wants to help open up opportunities for women in the Middle East, where tradition, such as requirements for women to wear veils in public, and forbidding them to drive, are still the law of the land.

Jarchow, Dean of the College of Education, will take a leave of absence for a year starting Aug. 13 to assist in the establishment of a private women's college in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia.

The purpose of the university is to offer higher education to women, in a culture where women are not allowed much freedom, she said.

The college will be the first private institution in Saudi Arabia, as well as the first all-women university.

It was a challenge finding majors for women in a culture that does not allow women to work with the general public, Jarchow said.

Women will be able to earn bachelor's and associate's degrees in interior design, special education and business information systems.

"Our purpose is to create an environment where women can be themselves," Jarchow said.

All the instructors and administrators at the university will be women, because Saudi Arabian women must wear veils when in public, and are not allowed to speak alone with men to whom they are not related, she said. Males will not be allowed at the school, and male instructors will teach only through closed-circuit television.

Jarchow was first approached with the project when Bill Franklin of the Texas International Education Consortium contacted her last summer, after a group of Saudi Arabian businessmen had enlisted his help in establishing an all-women, private university.

"I think that it is exciting that men have conceived of the idea and are funding it," Jarchow said. "They know that the world is changing and these women demand a quality institution."

Fall 1998 will signify a preparation phase for the university, where 200 women will study English, Arabic and mathematics.

"We plan to start out with 300 freshman women, and eventually have 1500 women in all stages," Jarchow said. "Five or 10 years from now, this might be a very different operation."

Jarchow said that her purpose is to mentor the women administrators for the first year. Initially, they will consist of half Saudi Arabians and half Americans, although they would like to eventually involve an almost totally Saudi Arabian faculty.

"The goal of this first year is to get more Saudi Arabians ready to take over leadership roles," Jarchow said.

Taking over as interim dean of the College of Education will be Larry Hovey, associate dean of curriculum and instruction.

'Private Ryan' takes top spot at box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite warnings of gut-wrenching battle scenes and delays in the delivery of the film to some theaters, "Saving Private Ryan" charged into the No. 1 box office slot in its weekend debut, according to industry estimates Sunday.

Steven Spielberg's graphic World War II film grossed $30.1 million, becoming the seventh movie this summer to top $30 million in its opening weekend.

Sales were firm even though at least several dozen prints weren't delivered in time for early Friday shows at some Arizona and California theaters.

"The Mask of Zorro" was pushed to No. 2 slot in its second week with about $13.7 million in ticket sales. The romance-adventure, starring Antonio Banderas as the masked hero, had $22.7 million last weekend.

"Lethal Weapon 4" was bumped to No. 3 with $13.2 million.

Co-produced by DreamWorks Pictures and Paramount, "Saving Private Ryan" stars Tom Hanks as a captain ordered to find and send home a private whose three brothers have been killed in action.

During recent promotional tours, Spielberg has warned audiences that the war scenes might be inappropriate for youngsters and said his own 13-year-old son is not permitted to see the film.

Those warnings may have only enticed moviegoers, said Paul Dergarabedian, vice president of Exhibitor Relations, Inc., which tracks box office.

"It's like a roller coaster," he said. "If you're told it's the wildest ride around, you're going to want to go. It intrigued people. It was the 'must see' movie of the weekend. Everyone was talking about it."

While movie audiences may have become numb to violence in films in recent years, Dergarabedian said "Saving Private Ryan" may re-sensitize people.

"It's not gratuitous," he said. "They get to see what violence really does to people."

The big surprise in top movie rankings was "There's Something About Mary." The raunchy comedy grossed $12.7 million to retain the No. 4 spot in its second week.

"Mary" was a really strong holdover," Dergarabedian said. "It only dropped 8 percent from last week. That's tremendous, considering the amount of competition there is. Word of mouth boosted that film big."

"Armageddon" slipped to No. 5 with $10.9 million.

Searchers find part of pirate ship

BOSTON (AP) — Legend has it that "Black Sam" Bellamy was on his way to rendezvous with a lover when his pirate ship was destroyed by a ferocious storm off Cape Cod in 1717.

Since then, the wreckage of his ship — the Whydah — and most of its five-ton cargo of gold and silver have eluded archeologists.

But last week, a tantalizing underwater trail of gold bars, coins, guns and skeletons led Massachusetts researcher Barry Clifford to a perfectly preserved chunk of what appears to be the ship's hull.

In a telephone interview Sunday, Clifford said the July 19 find came on the final day of a three-day expedition at a site located a quarter-mile off the coast of Wellfleet.

"We found wood and I thought, 'Oh my God!'" said Clifford, 53. "We got our (scuba gear) on in double-time. I'd never seen anything like it before."

Clifford said the 30-foot piece of wood discovered about 10 feet below surface of the ocean floor appeared to be a section of the Whydah's powder room, covered with tin to keep explosives dry.

The discovery marked the most meaningful Whydah find since 1984, when Clifford discovered artifacts that indicated the ship sailed by English sailor Samuel "Black Sam" Bellamy was buried somewhere off the coast of Provincetown at the end of Cape Cod.

Since then, explorers have uncovered the ship's bell inscribed with "The Whydah Gally 1716," along with more than 100,000 artifacts from the site, including a sword-sharpening wheel, cannons, lead shot and tens of thousands of coins.

Gailey teaching old dog Cowboys new tricks

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — It was a bizarre play call not seen on a Dallas practice field since Tom Landry installed the throwback pass to quarterback Danny White.

Wide receiver Michael Irvin lined up in the backfield out of the shotgun formation with quarterback Troy Aikman.

As the defense rushed Aikman, he lobbed the ball to Irvin on a the offensive imagination of new coach Chan Gailey.

Gailey is trying everything he screen pass. The play went for only five yards or so but it showed can think of to defeat double coverage on Irvin this season. "I love it," Irvin said. "They've got me in the slot, in motion, in the backfield and all around the town."

With the Cowboys' four-wide receiver set, it will be dangerous for other teams to consistently double-team the Cowboys' top receiver. Even with double coverage, Irvin caught 75 passes for 1,180 yards last year.

"This year could really be good," Irvin said. "Teams are going to bust coverages trying to keep up with me. And we have three other receivers who can hurt them. Getting Ernie Mills was big and we have other receivers who are looking good."

Irvin said he can't wait for games to start.

"I'm looking forward to sitting down to this big buffet and eating a different meal," Irvin said. "It's going to be a different taste."

Irvin admitted he was concerned when Barry Switzer was asked to leave.

"I was a little worried when Chan first came because I wasn't sure where he was coming from," Irvin said. "But I'm comfortable with my assignments now and I can see what this offense can do. Chan has quite an imagination for offensive plays."

The Cowboys open the pre-season on July 31 against Seattle in Texas Stadium and Irvin said "most of the veterans will be playing more than usual. We've got to get the offense down. We'll have plenty of work. We've got five exhibition games and two of those Jerry Jones scrimmages."

Irvin said the Cowboys are working hard to erase the memories of last season's 6-10 disaster that cost Switzer his job.

"You have to be ignorant not to realize we didn't get the job done last year," Irvin said.
