Financial aid fiasco termed foul

By Misty Dawn Reed
 and Gretchen Verry
 Staff Writers

Texas Tech student Andrae Simpson came to pick up his loan check Tuesday, armed with books, snacks drinks and even dinner, anticipating the worst. When he arrived, he faced lines trailing out of Drane and West Halls, as students awaiting financial aid were delayed, even denied, due to a computer glitch.

see related story page 6

"Saying that it's a pain doesn't even describe this line, it's much worse than that," said Simpson, a sophomore pre-med major from Lubbock.

Vice President of Financial Affairs Jim Brunjes said internal computer problems led to the delay of many need-based loans. Many students did not receive loan checks Monday as a result of the glitch.

"It's my understanding that the financial affairs office has not had the chance to sit down and analyze the causes of this problem," said Robert Ewalt, vice president for student affairs. "They have, however, found the problem and expect to correct it tonight."

No registration late charges will be assessed, and no students will be dropped from their classes as a result of the delay, Brunjes said.

Brunjes said the office plans to have checks available for all students by noon tomorrow. In the meantime, the office plans to remain open until 8 p.m. each night this week, as well as from 8 a.m. until noon on Saturday to get the checks out more efficiently.

"The lines are always bad in the spring because it seems that students are all returning at the same time. They are more spread out in the fall semester," Brunjes said.

Sgt. Dan Hale, public information officer for University Police Department, said officers had only seen one incident where a student, enraged by the situation, was asked to leave the building.

"We have been quite fortunate that no significant disturbances occurred today, given the number of students that have been upset over various issues. We are hoping for this to continue in the next couple of days," Hale said.

Numerous students expressed their anger over the situation.

Senior environmental conservation major from Austin, Jerry Tidwell, said his day began in the Bursar's office in Drane Hall at 7:30 a.m., only to be told to go to West Hall, where he arrived at 11 a.m. At 2 p.m., he was still four spots away from reaching the front desk at financial aid.

"I came here last Wednesday to make sure everything was all right and was told everything would be ready to go the first day of classes," Tidwell said. "I missed classes to wait here. Montford brings in $3 million and we still can't get a computer system that works."

Other students expressed their concern over the way the situation was handled by the office.

"There is only one worker, and he leaves the desk a lot," said Roger Weiselogel, sophomore electrical engineering major from Wichita Falls. "The staff took a long break for pizza. People can't understand why they were told they'd get their checks today, and they didn't. The problem is blamed on computers and technical difficulties, but there is only one worker."

Brunjes said students can avoid the hassles of waiting in line for financial aid checks by checking that they wish to receive their checks electronically.

Sculpture deeply rooted

Construction begun on human sciences artwork

By Melody Ragland
 Staff Writer

Park Place is a new art work being constructed at Texas Tech's College of Human Sciences, Talkington Plaza.

The five-piece, seven-person, bronze sculpture was designed by renowned artist Glenna Goodacre.

"It is a public piece that shows people from several groups of life," Goodacre said.

Holly Vinson, coordinator of College Development and External Relations in Human Sciences, said the sculpture is a visual picture of what the college is about.

"The figures represent different stages of the life span, which is what the College of Human Sciences focuses on," Vinson said.

The construction and funding of Park Place was funded in full by Tech alumni.

"J.T. and Margaret Talkington donated the sculpture itself," Vinson said.

Goodacre said she already had sculpted the piece when the Talkington's purchased it.

"I've known the Talkingtons since I was a small child," Goodacre said.

Goodacre has art work displayed all over the country including several works in Lubbock.

She designed the Vietnam Women's Memorial at the Vietnam Wall in Washington, D.C.

Most recently Goodacre created a 7 1/2-foot bronze sculpture of President Ronald Reagan for the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City and the Reagan Presidential Library in Los Angeles.

In a Dec. 17, 1998, letter to Goodacre, Nancy Reagan wrote, "Everyone who comes to the Library stops and raves at your magnificent bronze—what a great addition!

Cleaning Up: The site at human sciences' Talkington Plaza is being cleared away to make room for world-renowned sculptor Glenna Goodacre's artwork.

Wade Kennedy/The University Daily

Thank you for the bronze figure of Ronnie — I was sure we were at the ranch and he was coming in from chopping wood."

Goodacre's designs also will be displayed on the new gold-colored dollar coin due out in 2000.

Goodacre has a history with Lubbock and her family's roots run deep at Tech.

She grew up in Lubbock and her mother, Melba Tatom Maxey is a 1933 alumnus, and her father, Homer Maxey is a 1931 alumnus.

Bert Moffit, project manager of Facilities Planning and Construction said the project is an interactive park where people will be able to sit and

He said the project will be finished in late February.

"It is a great honor to have the Talkington's place this piece at Tech," Goodacre said.

The Park Place dedication will take place March 1 to help begin Human Sciences week.

Delts put on hiatus

The Texas Tech chapter of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity has been suspended indefinitely from campus and the fraternity's international headquarters Tuesday, said Dean of Students Michael Shonrock.

The punishment was the result of hazing violations at a pledge retreat Saturday. Thirty members were arrested and given citations for hazing and alleged minor-in-possession offenses.

Delt President Scott McGee said he was unaware of the suspension the international fraternity had placed on them.

"We are not a hazing fraternity," said McGee, a senior restaurant, hotel and institutional management major from Plano.

"The only thing I feel right now is that the media has misrepresented everything and that our fraternity was not recognized fairly ..."

Greg Elkins, associate dean of students, was notified Sunday night about the incident and from there the Delta Tau Delta international headquarters were informed. The fraternity's headquarters took immediate action and suspended them indefinitely.

President Clinton addresses nation Students voice opinions on issues, impeachment

By Apu Naik
 Staff Writer

As the president delivered his State of the Union speech to a divided American public Tuesday night, Tech students reflected on their thoughts about the state of the union and how it might influence the outcome of the president's Senate impeachment trial.

see also Clinton page 3

The president's speech outlined an extensive list of proposals, including plans to increase the minimum wage, build new schools, impose a national settlement on the tobacco industry, reform the campaign finance system, strengthen social security, increase Pentagon spending by $110 million over 6 years and allow Americans as young as 55 years old to buy in to the Medicare program.

"I knew he probably wouldn't bring up anything about the trial because he wants to sway the attention of the public away from impeachment," said Micah Miller, a junior petroleum and land management major from Rockwall.

"I know they are important issues, but he knows how to divert attention."

Clinton delivered the State of the Union Address in the same House chamber in which only the second vote ever was made to impeach the president of the United States a month ago Tuesday.

The other House impeachment vote was when Andrew Johnson was impeached in 1868 and went on to survive conviction by only one vote in a Senate impeachment trial.

Other Tech students who were watching the speech believed the president focused on initiatives of action rather than address the impeachment trial because he is focused on moving past the complications surrounding his office.

"If you look at his State of the Union addresses in the past and compare them to his speech tonight, you'll see that they don't differ much because he has always been focused on issues and proposals," said Tammy Barr, a senior marketing major from Lubbock.

"He's done a great job as president, and I hope that they won't convict him, but rather allow him to do the great job that he has done."

But supporters of impeachment, such as College Republicans Vice Chairman of Committee Relations Cameron Graham, were not surprised by the president's speech.

"Clinton's speech was just another predictable campaign speech aimed at telling the American people what a great president he's been," Graham said.

"The people who were interesting to watch were the members of Congress who responded to the president's speech. Every time Clinton said anything even remotely applaudable, the Democrats cheered as if he was the showcase showdown winner on 'The Price is Right.'"

Senators will continue to hear opening statements by Clinton's defense team today and throughout the day Thursday, before they begin questioning House managers Friday and Saturday.

Bush sworn in for second term

By Apu Naik
 Staff Writer

Gov. George W. Bush made history Tuesday as he was sworn in for a second term, making him the first Texas governor to serve a second time.

Bush, in his speech, called for a Texas that is open, diverse, educated and places a high value on moral character.

Many Tech students watched the inauguration, and some felt that the beginning of Bush's second term marked a positive new chapter in Texas politics.

"I voted for Gov. Bush both in 1994 and last year because he is the kind of leader we need to push Texas," said Lee Jackson, a junior mechanical engineering major from Amarillo. "I definitely think he'll run for the presidency in 2000, and I hope he does because it would be beneficial for the whole country. It will take some support, and he will have to decide pretty soon. But I think he would do very well, especially with all the controversy surrounding the president."

Bush, an undeclared front-runner among prospective 2000 GOP presidential candidates, made no mention of Clinton.

One Tech student who did not share the celebration of inauguration was Vivian Vernon, a Tech graduate student of education, who said she was not pleased with Bush's second election because the governor has taken away from programs. Vernon, who works for a state chemical dependency therapy clinic, said she has seen the first-hand effects of tax

SGA workshop given to help organizations apply for aid

By Misty Dawn Reed
Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Student Government Association will sponsor a Budget and Finance workshop for campus organizations at 7 p.m. Jan. 26 in the University Center Lubbock Room.

Ryan Lunsford, internal vice president of SGA, said this is another chance for organizations to appear before a committee to request funds. Organization leaders who did not attend the meeting on Dec. 3 must attend one of the next two meetings to be considered for financial aid. The president and treasurer of each organization are encouraged to attend, but Lunsford suggested no more than four representatives be present.

Lunsford said organizations who fail to attend one of the workshops will not be considered for funding.

"It's usually not a problem getting everyone to come to the meetings," Lunsford said. "But we are offering these other workshops because we don't want anyone to miss one because they were in class."

Austin McWilliams, chairman of the Committee on Budget and Finance, said the SGA sponsored workshops will go over the instruction manual with groups, distribute packets and forms to be completed and review what the groups can and cannot spend money on. McWilliams also said he will review common mistakes and remind applicants of the deadlines. McWilliams said the workshops are important because he does not want minor errors to eliminate groups from the running. The committee will stay after the meeting to answer questions as long as needed.

A new budget spreadsheet is now available and easier to use, Lunsford said. Copies are available on disk at the Advanced Technology Learning Center help desk, in the basement of the library, and online at www.sga.ttu.edu.

Lunsford said organizations can submit their information to the Budget and finance committee at the workshop and can continue to submit until 5 p.m. Feb. 5 in the SGA office, 230 University Center.

The committee will begin conducting individual interviews Feb. 8 with the organizations that attended a workshop. Sign-ups for interview spots are available from now until 5 p.m. Feb. 5. The interview dates are Feb. 8-18, Lunsford said.

Lunsford also included that during the 15-minute interview, each student president will give an opening statement about the organization's plans for the semester and how he or she anticipates the money will be spent. Groups should inform the budget and finance committee of past fundraisers and travel plans and meetings, especially those that have brought positive publicity to Tech. After the interviews are conducted, the committee will review the applicants over a period of two weeks to decide who will receive financial support.

McWilliams said because the money is coming from the student service fees, it is important for the committee to allocate funds wisely.

Any further questions can be answered by calling the SGA office, at 742-3631, or by logging on to the SGA web page.

If an organization is unable to attend the Jan. 26 meeting, another is scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 3 in the UC Ballroom.

Tech reacts to impeachment trial

Presidential hearings lead to mixed feelings in public's mind

By Apu Naik
Staff Writer

As the entire country watches the impeachment trial of President Clinton, many Lubbock residents and Texas Tech students share mixed feelings concerning its outcome.

And even while national polls concerning the president's approval rating continue to soar, a campus poll conducted by Tech management professor John Hughes shows students are divided between their belief of whether they feel the president will be convicted by the senate and whether he deserves to be convicted.

A national poll from Pew Research Center, provided by the Associated Press, confirmed the senate trial has not changed the public's mind, with 53 percent of Americans indicating they are satisfied with the state of the country, and 63 percent of Americans approving of the president's performance in office.

But a similar poll conducted on 154 Tech students showed differing opinions than those of the majority of the American public.

When asked whether the Senate impeachment trial will result in the conviction of Clinton, 61 percent of the students said they did not believe the president would lose his office.

But, an overwhelming 73 percent said they do not approve of the president's actions and would vote for his removal from the oval of office.

Stephanie Hoffman, a junior accounting major from Midland, said although she did not think the Senate would convict the president, she strongly feels impeachment of Clinton is necessary.

"He has an extremely important position and has brought shame to that position. Because of the negative reactions he has received, instead of taking care of his country and responsibilities, he is concentrating on cleaning his name," Hoffman said. "I have no respect for the president anymore, and I feel that if he cannot respect his own family, how can he respect his second family — the U.S."

The trial resumed Tuesday, a few hours before Clinton delivered the State of the Union Address to Congress. White House lawyers defended the president saying that even if he did lie about his relationship with Monica Lewinsky, the offense is not grave enough to be removed from office.

But, others say the offense is serious enough to convict the president.

Courtney Clayton, a freshman business major from Houston, said the president's adultery and perjury convinced her that Clinton's term should be relieved.

"I thought his relationship with Monica Lewinsky was serious enough to impeach, but the fact that he lied about it to a grand jury and committed perjury is even worse," Clayton said.

Tech College Republican's Vice Chairman for Committee Relations Cameron Graham said the trial needs to be focused on the evidence presented, and the Democratic process will do the rest.

"Whether you like it or not, the Constitution is still the blueprinted layout of our government, and during a trial, it is designed to do a job, regardless of what opinion polls might say," Graham said. "This trial has to be focused on the evidence shown, and if the vote were to go on strict party lines, the president would definitely be convicted. But at this time, I think it could go either way."

At least 12 Democrats would have to join the 55 Senate Republicans to get the two-thirds vote needed to convict.

dents, said he has been in contact with the international headquarters and McGee.

"I have contacted the president (Delta Tau Delta) to understand the situation and gather correct information," Shonrock said. "We are doing the best of our ability to investigate the information."

Based on the information about the incident, Shonrock is pleased about the response of the Delta Tau Delta international headquarters to take direct and immediate action.

"We will still be working in partnership with them (international headquarters)," Shonrock said.

Shonrock acknowledges that the fraternity's international headquarters and Lubbock are disappointed with the apparent behavior of the fraternity members.

"The university must take steps to take control of the organizations," Shonrock said.

"There are good and bad points of the story, like the fraternity's involvement serving several hundred hours at the food bank. Most of all, I am concerned for the individual students, and at this point there is a lot of emotion"

In response to most recent fraternity downfall, Shonrock said, "Take what you have a turn it to success."

Other members of the fraternity could not be reached for comment on the situation.

cuts on government institutions.

"I know the governor has a lot of support with Texans, but personally, I've haven't been as pleased with him," Vernon said. "I know tax cuts are popular with the public, but I've seen patients being cut off so that he can increase approval ratings. I'm sure he does a lot of great things and that he'll probably even run for president, but he won't get my vote."

Bush, who won re-election in November with a staggering 69 percent of the vote, leads a state government that's dominated almost entirely by Republicans for the first time since Reconstruction.

One Tech student, Jennifer Jolly, a junior pre-veterinarian major from Lubbock and an admitted democrat, said she has seen good things from Bush even though his views do not run parallel to her own.

"He's done a good job as governor, and he's done an excellent job gaining the support of the public," Jolly said. "I definitely can see him running for the office of president in 2000."

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

Mass Comm opens center

By Tara Nishimura
Staff Writer

The School of Mass Communications Career Planning and Placement Center opened this semester. The center's goal is to help mass communications students locate internships and jobs.

Several years ago, the school had a part-time employee who handled internships and placement.

After she retired, the department lacked enough money to fund the position, according to Jerry Hudson, Director of the School of Mass Communications.

"It's our responsibility to provide opportunities showing where jobs are," Hudson said. "The administration assisted us to find money for that position."

Although mass communications faculty will help in the center, the new director of the center, Christye Marez, will be able to work on career and internship planning full-time.

"Some of it was the accreditation, there were not enough faculty and career advisers," Hudson said.

"To be truthful, with the workload we had, we couldn't provide anyone from the faculty, we need a person with time and relations to develop."

The School of Mass Communications lost accreditation for several reasons, including students not completing internships and students not being placed in internships, Marez said.

"I was approached by Tech because of lack of internship possibilities," Marez said.

"They were cited (losing secondary accreditation) and felt a need for the School of Mass Communications Career Planning and Placement Center (to be established)."

According to Hudson, the School of Mass Communications started work for the center at the beginning of last semester and hired Marez.

"The department did a lot of research prior to my hiring," Marez said.

"We just have to put it together and work out a system."

Unlike most professional majors, such as business and engineering, most media representatives do not visit a campus to recruit.

"They, the employers, haven't seen a need to go to college campuses because of the amount of resumes coming in," Hudson said.

Marez wants to take a proactive approach to her duties.

"We're going to try to attract more opportunities for recruiters to visit our campus. It will probably be the central form of contact for all forms of media and businesses looking for graduates to hire," Marez said.

The center is a service more than an employment agency, Hudson said.

"I'll teach workshops for resume writing and interview skills, and we'll conduct mock interviews," Marez said.

"I think historically students don't care about their jobs until they're fixing to graduate and they realize they don't have a job."

In addition to the workshops, the center will have computers to aid students in web-based job searches.

"We're going full steam ahead to put computers in there," Hudson said.

"The new career person will make contacts with people in industry to secure appropriate internships for students."

Marez said she will work with the students to find what they need.

"I will largely be responsible for finding internships and placing students in internships," Marez said.

"I have a lot of connections as do a lot of our professors and alumnus, which broaden internship possibilities locally."

According to Hudson, the center will be fully running at the end of the semester. Presently, there is an open-door-policy.

"There has never been any set policy to work with students," Marez said.

"Right now we have an open-door-policy. You come in and tell me what you're interested in, what your skills are and we'll try and hook you up."

The School of Mass Communications is currently on probation pending a review at the end of the spring semester of 1999.

Students get tax relief on loans

By Christi Biddy
Staff Writer

Texas Tech students will be able to enjoy some new changes regarding their loans in the coming year because of both local and national changes.

Recently, on a national level, several tax changes were proposed and passed. One of these changes is higher education tax relief for students.

Now, students who have paid interest on qualified loans will be able to deduct a higher portion of the interest paid from their income taxes.

Qualified loans usually apply to tuition, fees, room, board and other related expenses.

In 1998, the maximum deduction was $1,000. This amount increased to $1,500 for 1999.

Nathan Hennessey, a junior history major from Abilene, is happy about the tax relief.

He said college students will go on to create a more valuable and productive work force. "I think it is a good idea for the government to give a break to those people," Hennessey said.

He also said it may make a perspective college student more willing to attend college if he knows he will be getting a break on his taxes.

This new tax change also will affect many people who are already students at Tech.

Earl Hudgins, director of student financial aid, said during the last fiscal year there were about 12,000 to 13,000 students at Tech who are currently on loans.

These loans total out to be almost $70 million per year.

This change is especially important for students who are fully supporting themselves.

There also are changes on the local level as well.

These new changes are due to Tech's current default rate on student loans. "The default rate is only about 8 to 9 percent," Hudgins said.

This means 92 to 93 percent of all students pay back their loans.

"Loans get lots of bad press because people don't pay them back," Hudgins said.

Tech's low rate, however, means new things for both freshmen and transfer students.

Beginning next year, Tech will no longer require incoming freshmen to wait 30 days after the start of school before being able to pick up their loan checks.

Additionally, transfer students will no longer have to wait to receive their loan money.

Previously, transfer students received the first half of their money at the beginning of the semester, and the remaining amount in the middle of the semester.

McBeath joins Tech

and patients in rural areas.

"McBeath's experience with county health care policies, and city and county governments will help us in our expansions," Laible said.

Because tele-medicine and rural health care are relatively new issues, the HSC has to be aware of government regulations that would restrict or allow further action in this area of medicine, he said.

While McBeath did not give up politics on his own freewill, he is eager to make progress in his new job.

"I loved being a county judge. It was a great pulpit to help people and to get things done, and there was great diversity. But as with all politics, you take risks of losing, and right now it is time for me to focus on this job," he said.

Even though McBeath suffered defeat in November, he has not closed the door to politics and is keeping his campaign fund alive, a thought Kenny Maines likes to hear.

Maines, Lubbock county commissioner for Precinct 1, has worked with McBeath for six years and said McBeath will be missed.

"Don was a great manager with administrative expertise and a great spirit for public service," he said.

Maines said his only worry about the idea of McBeath returning to politics is if he were not to represent Lubbock or the West Texas area.

On the first day of 1999, former Lubbock County Judge Don McBeath traded his gavel for a cubicle in the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center.

McBeath, who lost his re-election to Tom Head in November, began his new job Jan. 1 as a director of HSC operations for telehealth, rural health care and special projects.

"I feel confident that I will be able to get things done here, and my background experience with telecommunications and government will help," McBeath said.

McBeath graduated from Tech with a mass communications degree in 1977, and he was first elected Lubbock County judge in 1990. Before his tenure as judge, he was office administrator for the Lubbock County District Attorney's office for about nine years.

Plans to create the director's position began about a year ago, said Jim Laible, associate vice president for HSC Managed Health Care. McBeath was one of four candidates interviewed.

McBeath will be responsible for expanding Tech's role to become a leader in tele-medicine and rural health care, Laible said.

Tele-medicine has become more popular with new technology. Physicians can diagnose and treat patients through video, similar to video conferencing, he said.

Regarding rural health care, Laible said McBeath should be able to help the HSC provide research and treatments for doctors

UPD purchases new bus for late-nighters

By Matt Green
Staff Writer

The Texas Tech University Police Department recently purchased a new mini-bus to be used for late night and after hours student transport.

The mini-bus, similar to the ones used for special purposes by Citibus, provides numerous features not available on the vans currently used by the school. The mini-bus features wrap-around seating as opposed to the standard bench seats in the vans. This increases both passenger capacity and rider comfort.

The bus, which complies with all of the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act, uses a different style of ramp than the vans. The ramp makes wheelchair access more convenient and faster for passengers and is considerably easier for drivers to operate.

Sgt. Dan Hale said the UPD purchased the bus after studying the cost efficiency of the vans.

"The vans were not designed to constantly operate at a low speed in stop and go traffic, so we were seeing a lot of wear and tear on them," Hale said.

The new diesel-powered bus is designed to perform better under these conditions and will require less maintenance.

"We were looking to improve convenience, quality and rider comfort, and this is an ideal vehicle for those purposes," Hale said.

Because of the size of the bus, it will not be able to maneuver through parking lots. Pickup sites for the new bus will be on the main streets in front of buildings at scheduled times.

Notices posted in the residence halls give information about the new bus, which will run on the standard campus route beginning at 8 p.m. and run throughout the night.

From the times of 8 p.m. to 1 a.m., the shuttle will run along with one of the vans.

"We've increased the availability of the vans, which will allow more people to be safely transported from one place to the other," Hale said.

The bus, like the vans, will be driven by a police employee equipped with a police radio and will add to the current level of security on campus. Both the vans and the new shuttle can be identified by the flashing blue lights on their roofs.

Karen Rutherford, a senior theatre arts major from Abilene, is happy with the UPD's newest security measure.

"This has been a successful program for many years and we look forward to continuing that way," Hale said.

Courts revoke $2 million

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court reversed a $2 million judgment for a former Connecticut lottery director on Tuesday, deciding he was fired justly in 1989 for criticizing a change that made the Lotto jackpot harder to win.

J. Blaine Lewis Jr., 78, of Glastonbury, Conn., had claimed his dismissal violated the First Amendment. But the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said he was fired for what amounted to insubordination.

"A high-ranking policy-making employee does not have, and never has had, a First Amendment right to refuse his employer's directive to promote agency policy," the court ruled.

It said an employee may be forced to choose between supporting supervisors' programs and "voicing his personal opinion and perhaps losing his job. That is what has happened here," the court said.

As head of the state's lottery, Lewis was ordered by a state board to oversee an increase in the field of Lotto numbers from 40 to 44, thus making it harder to pick six correct numbers but theoretically creating bigger purses and more publicity.

Lewis refused to keep his objections quiet, sued the board that dismissed him and a jury awarded him $2 million. The court said Lewis was not entitled to any of the money.

The Nixons part of Hub lineup

By Sebastian Kitchen
Staff Writer

The Nixons have spent little time on the road recently, but lead singer and rhythm guitar player Zac Maloy can't stay away from the music.

Maloy said he should put down the guitar and take some time away, but just couldn't do it.

"I have guitars all over my house," Maloy said on his mobile phone while driving to his home in Dallas. "I usually have a guitar in my hands."

Maloy spends much of his time rehearsing with fellow band members and driving to rehearsal. Two band members live in Oklahoma City and two live in Dallas. The band splits rehearsal time between the two cities.

During his free time, Maloy spends time at home with his new wife, his chocolate-colored labrador and with his other love — the guitar.

The Nixons have been rehearsing and writing new music for an upcoming album. Maloy said the band has about 50 songs.

The band members will try those new songs on audiences when they hit the road this week for a short 10 day tour.

"We want to try it on people during this tour," Maloy said.

One of those stops will be in Lubbock Friday at the KFMX-94.5 FM

18th Annual Birthday Bash. The Nixons will be joined by Jackyl, Monster Magnet, Dee Snider (formerly of Twisted Sister), Kid Rock, Hed PE, The Quitters, Crabtree, the Grand Street Cryers and Failing Jupiter. Doors will open at 6 p.m., and Failing Jupiter will take the stage at 7 p.m.

Tickets cost $18 and are available at University Records, 2414 Broadway, and both locations of Ralph's Records, 909 University and 3322 82nd St.

The Nixons headlined last year's FMX Birthday Bash and will return Friday for the first time since. Maloy said fans should expect a lot of new material Friday.

"We still play the favorites, but we'll probably play 70 percent new material," he said. "Some people will dig and some won't. It is something we feel we need to do. I love the new material. It would be OK with me if we played all new material at these shows."

Maloy said there is a definite high the first time the band plays a new song live.

"It is still us," Maloy said. "There is still the same intensity and melody, Even the slow songs will be as anything we've ever done. I'm not a great songwriter, but I feel more comfortable doing it."

At this time last year, the band was touring in support of its self-titled sophomore CD. In the numbers column, the album did not fair as well as the band's first album Foma, but the band took steps forward musically, he said.

"I'm proud of everything we've written and released," Maloy said. "Albums are like kids. I feel strong about both albums."

Another CD recently was released by The Nixons entitled Scrapbook. The CD contains an assortment of music Nixons' fans cannot pick up anywhere else. It contains an acoustic version of the band's hit song "Sister," "Rocket Man" and a live version of "Happy Song."

"These are songs that have never made it on an album but felt strong about," Maloy said.

"We wanted to get it into fans hands."

After this short tour, the band will return to the studio to work on its next album.

Once the album is finished, The Nixons will return to the road, where Maloy and his bandmates feel most comfortable.

"We live on the stage," he said. "We're at home on the stage. We enjoy doing what we do."

Texas couple's home designed as a historical replica of the Alamo

HOLIDAY LAKES (AP) — In this blink-and-you-miss-it kind of town, sits a tribute to Texas history — Brazoria County's version of the Alamo.

The replica just west of Angleton is not a museum but the home of Ken and Debbie Freeman. Freeman built the house in 1989 to prove to his hunting buddies that he could. And within eight months, the Alamo was reborn in rural Holiday Lakes.

Freeman has been told his home is only the fourth Alamo. But no one lives in those replicas, making Freeman's Alamo one-of-a-kind.

By Laura Hensley
Staff Writer

A special student discount will be offered at this weekend's performances of the touring Broadway production of "Fiddler on the Roof." Two for one ticket prices will be offered to students with a valid student ID. "It's a really great deal," said Deana McCormack of Celebrity Attractions. "You get a chance to see a quality Broadway production at half price. Just take a friend and you're set."

All remaining seats will be available to purchase at the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium ticket booth one hour prior to each show. Tickets can be purchased with cash only. As part of the "Give Your Regards to Broadway" season, "Fiddler on the Roof" is celebrating its 35th anniversary as a popular hit musical. In its 35 years, "Fiddler on the Roof" has won 10 Tony Awards and has been acclaimed as a "deeply uplifting experience." The musical was made famous by the songs "Sunrise, Sunset," "If I Were a Rich Man," "Matchmaker" and "Tradition." Its inspirational story also has made "Fiddler on the Roof" a favorite. The play tells the story of a poor Russian struggling to raise three defiant daughters in a rapidly changing world. Performances are 7:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday. There also will be a matinee performance Saturday at 2 p.m. Tickets cost $35, $30, $25 and $14 and are available by calling Select-A-Seat at 770-2000.

Texas vs. Oklahoma, does hate exist?

John Davis
Staff Writer

Texas — what a state. Since moving here from Oklahoma about seven years ago, I certainly have learned to appreciate what wonderful country and fascinating people live here.

There is one thing, however, that I have never come to understand about how Texans think and that is the deep hatred they have for us "Okies." Texans absolutely despise us.

I never knew this until I moved here my junior year in high school. My first experience was excruciating. I walked into my first class, and people immediately wanted to know who I was and where I was from. Confidently, well, as confidently as a new student could be, I told them I was from Tulsa. Big mistake. They reacted to me like I had just told them I had leprosy, and could out how to work the ice machine at a fast food restaurant.

"That's good," I thought. "Base your negative judgment of an entire state on workers at a Burger King restaurant. That's a real cross-section of culture."

Another time, a friend told me on a family vacation that his dad carried him into a gas station bathroom because he didn't want his son's feet to touch Oklahoman soil.

This, to me, sounded totally neurotic, but he swore it was true.

But I later found that Texans are hated just as deeply by their neighbors to the west. New Mexicans hate y'all too.

We went to Ruidoso to go skiing last semester. It was my first time, and I had a blast, even though I skied more on my chin than on the skis.

When we went into town, we were either invisible or people were rude and obnoxious the whole time.

I asked one of my friends why this was, and he explained they probably saw our Texas license plate. "They hate Texans here," he said.

I guess I just don't get the hatred that exists between people in the Southwest. When you really look at it, there isn't a dime of difference between all of us. We all say, "y'all," and we all eat biscuits and gravy in the morning.

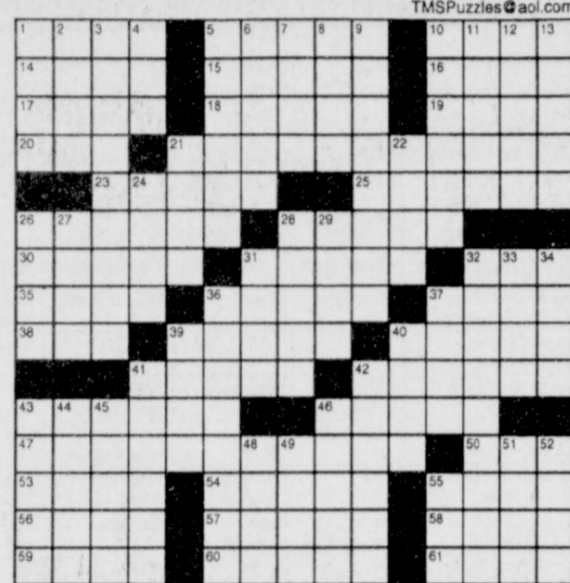

I truly do not see how a state line defines where all the stupid people live, unless you're talking about Arkansas.

Tech battles for supremacy

By Brent Dirks
Staff Writer

When Iowa State comes to Lubbock to play the Texas Tech Lady Raiders in a battle for Big 12 supremacy at 7 p.m. today, the Cyclones will have to deal with a deadly inside-outside punch — guard Rene Hanebutt and post Angie Braziel.

"When they play us pretty tough on the inside, we look for the outside," said Braziel, who is topping the Big 12 averaging 20.6 points per game. "When they try to stop us on the outside, we go to the inside. We just work together to be a better team right now."

While Braziel has been a big force in solidifying the No. 6 Lady Raiders (16-1 overall, 5-0 Big 12) inside, Hanebutt has been as big a force on the perimeter averaging 14.1 points per game.

The senior from Bowie tops the Big 12 in three-pointers made with 50 this season. In a 93-69 win over Oklahoma Jan. 9 Hanebutt made a school-record seven shots from behind the arc en route to a career high 30 points.

"Always in a zone you're going to give up some shots, it's just where you give them up," Hanebutt said. "We're probably going to get a lot of looks at the three-point shot, and hopefully we can knock those down."

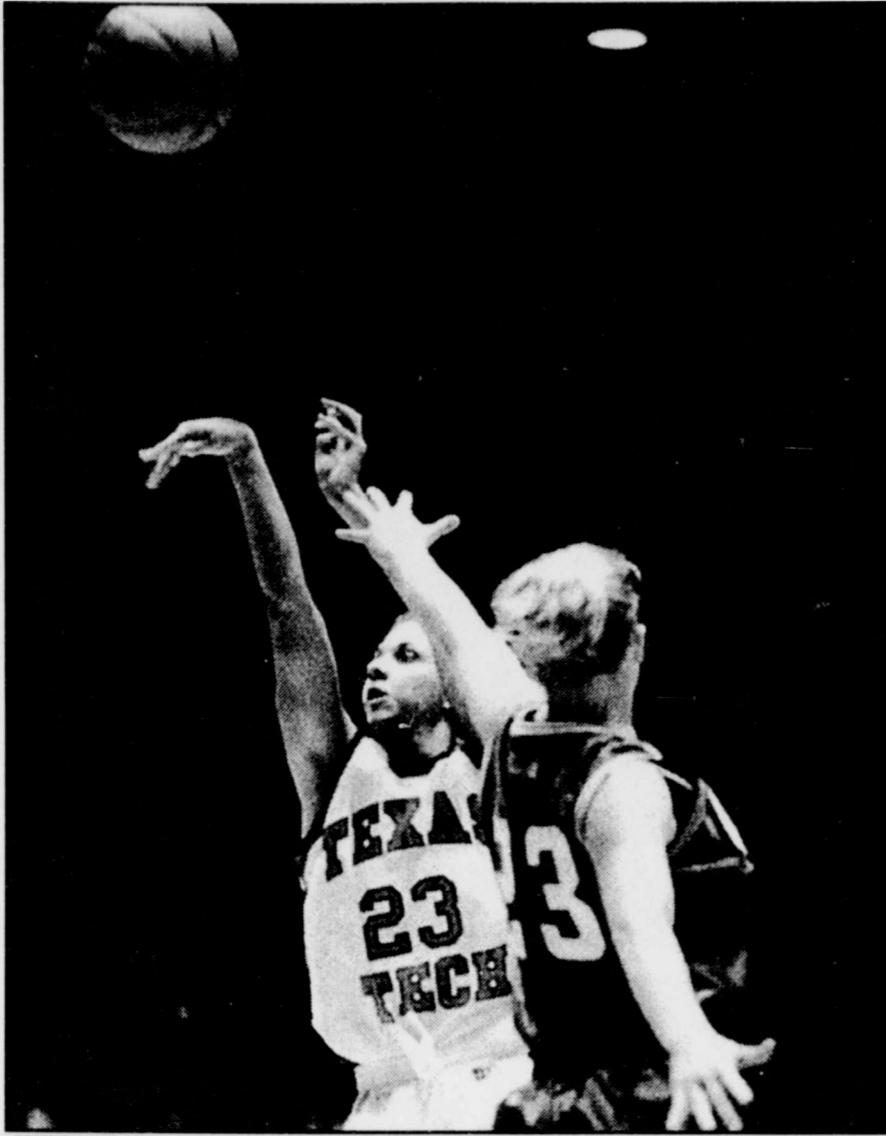

"They're probably going to double our post players real hard and make somebody else beat them. I think the way everybody has been shooting the basketball, if we get that chance, we'll pull the trigger and it will fall for us."

While Braziel and Hanebutt try continue the inside-outside game on offense, the Lady Raiders will have to defend against a formidable Iowa State offense.

The Cyclones (13-1 overall, 5-0 Big 12) come into Lubbock with the Big 12 lead in field goal percentage, field goal defense, rebounding, rebounding margin and three-point field goals made.

Iowa State is led by guard Megan Taylor who leads the team with 17 points and 8.4 rebounds per game. Guard Stacy Frese leads the Big 12 with a 50.9 percent accuracy behind the three-point stripe.

Frese's three-point abilities are not unfamiliar to the Lady Raiders.

The junior knocked down seven of the Cyclones' 14 long balls in a 64-58 upset victory of Tech last season in Ames, Iowa. The loss was Tech's only blotch on a 15-1 regular season Big 12 record, while it propelled Iowa State to a national ranking for the first time in school history.

"We're going to defend them a little bit different way and try to get up under them and try to get them to score a little different way," Sharp said.

While Frese and Taylor propose threats for the Lady Raiders on the perimeter, Iowa State does have some scoring punch inside with center Angie Welle. The 6-foot-4-inch freshman is averaging 10.8 points and 5.8 rebounds per contest.

"It's kind of a repeat of last year," Braziel said.

"As the games go on they get bigger and taller, but that's something I worked on this summer to try to be physical as well as get in there and just play strong."

As of late Tuesday, the Tech ticket office had a limited number of tickets for the contest at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

"There's no question we hope to have a great crowd," Sharp said. "We had a great crowd last year when we were up there, and we hope to return the favor. We hope to have a lot of students come out there and fill that south end and that we'll have a lot of excitement and positive support."

Texas Tech men's basketball coach James Dickey announced Moses Malone, Jr. will be joining the practice squad as a transfer. He will be eligible to participate in regular season action following final exams next fall. Malone averaged 3.4 points per game this season for the University of Houston before transferring to Tech.

crazy," she recalls. "But I figured the worst thing that could happen would be that the business wouldn't fly and I'd end up being a lawyer after all."

As President of her class at law school, Christy already possessed the leadership skills that entrepreneurs need.

Her publishing experience, however, was limited to editing the Stanford women's magazine aimed at African-Americans.

Christy convinced the magazine's president to meet with her, and his company agreed to help fund her start-up. Christy launched Latina magazine in 1996, and it was an immediate hit. Today, it has an impressive circulation of almost 200,000, but it wasn't easy getting there. One of the hardest things about being a young entrepreneur is simply the fact that you are young.

Potential business partners often assume you are inexperienced. "Nobody saw me walk into a meeting and thought they were looking at a magazine publisher. But I persevered. You have to be prepared to get over your pride and fake your confidence when you need to."

While there is a certain glamour associated with being the publisher of a major magazine, Christy still relishes the role of underdog. "Each milestone means so much more when you're a start-up," she says. "A major retailer just advertised with us for the first time. To a larger publication, it wouldn't be such a big deal. But when they agreed to be in our magazine, we jumped up and down and cried and hugged. Then, she laughs, "we ate ice cream."

As an owner of a growing company and Publisher of Latina, Christy has continued to nurture her dream magazine into a leading lifestyle publication, read by thousands of dynamic, educated young women just like herself. She says that she hopes to inspire other young women to pursue their dreams as well.

Law Review. Still, she figured she could learn what she needed to know pretty quickly. "If you take any reasonably smart person and tell them to spend a year researching an industry, they can become an expert if they work at it," she says. "All the data I needed was in the public library. Census data, information about the magazine industry, books on how to write a business plan, it was all there." In the meantime, she lived on the cheap in San Francisco's Mission District and did legal research to pay the bills.

Once Christy's business plan was done, she started to show it to people who might be willing to invest the millions of dollars she would need to launch a glossy publication. "192 people told me no. I counted," she says. "But most of them didn't slam the door in my face, and I was able to learn a lot by asking them how I could improve my business pitch."

Eventually, some good old-fashioned networking led her to her first big investor. "If you don't believe that stuff about using all of your contacts, you should," she says. Turns out that Christy's classmate's aunt's neighbor (follow that?) knew the editor of Essence, a

For someone who is only 30 years old, magazine magnate Christy Haubegger has already put together a pretty impressive resume. She's won an award from the Ms.

Foundation (also given to Oprah Winfrey and Madeleine Albright), and Tom Brokaw named her one of the "most influential people of the year" in 1996.

So how did she end up in company like that? Turns out it all started with one simple question. "I took a few business classes in school with some great professors, and they always talked about the search for that mythical big idea," she recalls. "As a Mexican-American, I'd always wondered why no one had ever produced a magazine for Latina women. Then I wondered if I could do it myself."

Christy graduated from the University of Texas in 1989 with a philosophy degree and immediately headed off to Stanford University Law School. But as law school graduation approached, she couldn't shake the magazine idea from her head, so she decided to devote a year to chasing her dream. "My friends thought I was

Baseball back in swing

By Jason Bernstein
Sports Editor

With practices underway, the Texas Tech baseball team has its sight set on another competitive regular season.

Tech finished last season as the 1998 Big 12 Tournament champions with a 44-20 overall record, 18-11 in Big 12 play.

The Red Raiders are ranked as high as No. 13 in one of the many pre-season baseball polls, as they are ranked ahead of Texas A&M (17), Oklahoma State (19), Baylor (22) and Texas (32).

But preseason rankings aside, many players are ready to prove themselves on the field rather than on paper.

"I think last year the rankings may have gotten to us a bit," said senior second baseman Jason Huth. "This year I think that the guys that we have, new and old, know what it takes to get the job done. You can't really pay attention to those polls. You've got to go out and do your job every day and not worry about what's going to happen down the road."

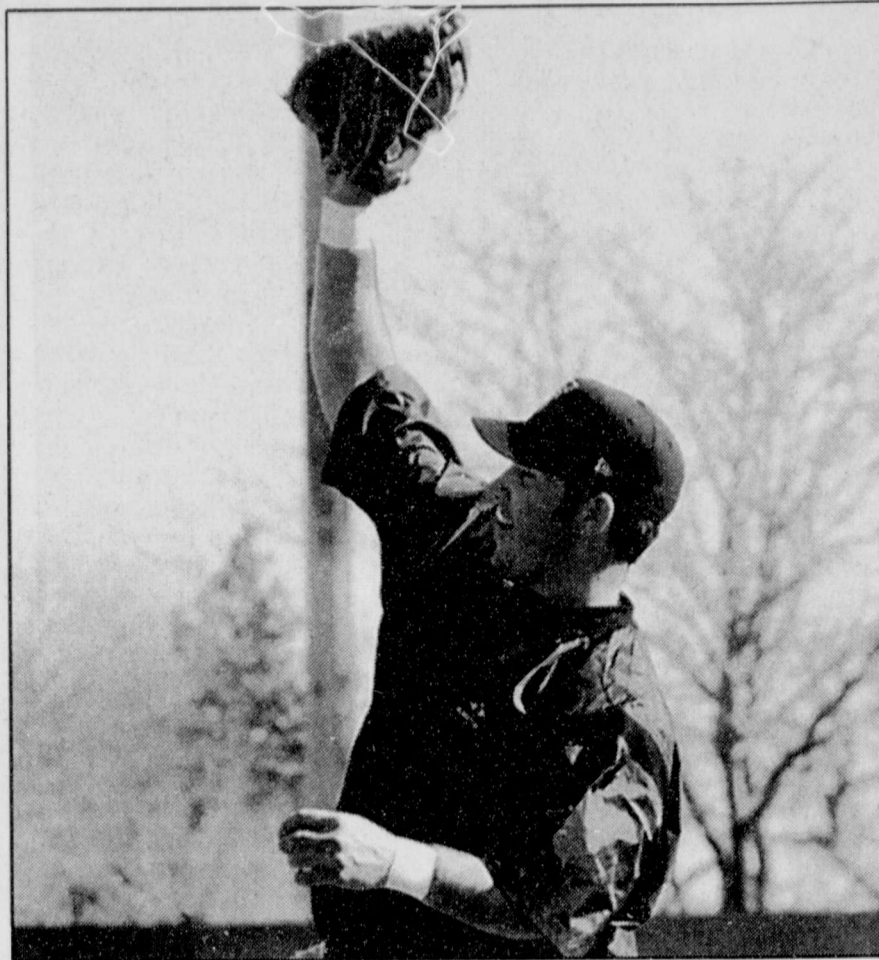

Huth is one of 11 returning letterwinners this season, as Tech is sporting 18 newcomers to a squad that finished the 1998 campaign ranked as high as No. 24.

Junior catcher Josh Bard returns for his third year at Tech after compiling an All-American season a year ago.

Bard finished the season with 17 home runs, 71 RBIs and a .383 average. His .674 slugging percentage was a key factor in Tech's 44-win season, and he will once again be looked upon to carry some of the offensive load.

But Bard and the returnees have been left with bitter tastes in their mouths, as they were ousted from postseason play in the regional round of the NCAA Tournament.

"I think the thing that was really frustrating for us was that we killed ourselves," Bard said. "We had guys that were ineligible and that's our own fault. We didn't have guys take care of business last year. Hopefully we can turn that around and do the things we need to do to be successful this season."

But with the successes in years past, the issue of team chemistry always arises at the start of every season, said Tech coach Larry Hays.

"This has been our problem every year," Hays said. "It's always going to be this way. We're always going to have a lot of new people. That's just the way it's going to be. We've learned to take it a year at a time, and that's just what we have to do."

Aside from the returning players, the Red Raiders may have one of their deepest teams in recent years, as they added 14 transfers to round out the

'99 club.

"On paper we might be a deeper team than last year," Hays said. "But where we ended up last year, we were pretty thin. We thought that we were in pretty good shape, but injuries really hurt us."

Tech takes the field in the annual alumni game Jan. 31 before opening regular season play with a four-game set at Dan Law Field against Howard University.

"I don't think we really have an identity as a team at this point in the season," Bard said. "That can be a good thing or a bad thing. We've got to get to know what kind of guys we've got. But we definitely have some talented guys out here so we're excited about the season."

Rockets to get Pippen

HOUSTON (AP) — Scottie Pippen, a six-time NBA champion with the Chicago Bulls, had talked to the Houston Rockets about signing with them as a free agent. It was not immediately clear why he agreed to a sign-and-trade deal, but other teams were known to be discussing other sign-and-trade deals with Bulls general manager Jerry Krause.

The acquisition of Pippen, which won't be finalized until the lockout is lifted Wednesday or Thursday, should clear the way for Charles Barkley, Pippen and Hakeem Olajuwon.

"We're not going to confirm anything," Rockets spokesman Tim Frank said. "The lockout is technically not over. We're still under lockout restrictions. No deal can officially be done until that cloak is lifted."

Pippen, 33, has been with Chicago since the 1987-88 season when he was drafted out of Central Arkansas. Last year, the forward averaged 19.1 points and 5.2 rebounds per game.

The seven-time All-star is considered one of the top three free agents up for grabs as NBA teams prepare to open training camps delayed by the 6 1/2-month lockout.

Pippen should be in uniform for the Rockets when they play an exhibition game against San Antonio Saturday.

Falcons on the rise

Nineteen Ninety-Nine is less than a month old, and the sports world has already been shocked with mind-boggling upsets.

First, Tennessee upsets Florida State to win the national championship in college football. Then, the Cardinals beat the Cowboys in the NFL playoffs. Then, the Falcons upset the Vikings to go to their first ever Super Bowl. With all of this madness, I can't wait to see what happens next.

Jeff Keller
Sports Reporter

I think that the Falcons will win the Super Bowl. I believe this for many reasons. One reason is that the Falcons went on the road and defeated the Vikings, who had the best record in football and the most powerful offense in the history of the NFL. Beating the Vikings in the Metrodome, in front of a hostile crowd with that stupid Vikings' horn blowing every time the Vikings make a tackle, speaks volumes about the heart of the Falcons.

The second reason the Falcons will win the Super Bowl is close-game experience. Both teams finished the regular season 14-2, but the Falcons were involved in much more close-games than the Broncos. The Broncos blew a lot of people out but that doesn't help a team build character. The Vikings blew almost everybody out, and the Falcons went up to Minneapolis and when the game got close, the Falcons had what it took to win.

An area where the Falcons are parallel with the Broncos is coaching. You would be hard-pressed to find two better coaches than Dan Reeves for the Falcons and Mike Shanahan for the Broncos. Both are Super Bowl tested, and both can prepare their teams for the big game. Reeves hired Shanahan when Reeves was with the Broncos, so it is kind of like the teacher versus the student. It is like "Rocky V," and we all know who won that fight.

Both teams are even in the running game, but the Falcons have a more potent passing attack. The Falcons will win the Super Bowl on the defensive side of the ball. They held the Vikings under 30 points. If they can shut down the Vikings, they can shut down anyone.

The Falcons have one thing working against them and that is lack of Super Bowl experience. The Broncos have been there, and they have won it. But every great team has got to start somewhere. The Falcon's youth is the only reason they are underdogs in this game. The Falcons' core group of young, talented players will pave the way for them to become dominant powers in the NFC West and the NFL in the years to come. I pick the Falcons 35-24 in the Super Bowl.

NBA set for Spree of movement

NEWYORK (AP) — The NBA lock-out will last at least another day longer, meaning the upcoming trades of Scottie Pippen and Latrell Sprewell — along with all other league business — will be on hold until today at the earliest.

The lack of a written agreement didn't keep teams from pulling off deals.

The Chicago Bulls agreed to a sign-and-trade deal sending Pippen to the Houston Rockets for Roy Rogers and a second-round draft pick, and the New York Knicks were expected to Latrell Sprewell from Golden State, numerous league sources told The Associated Press.

Also, top free agent Antonio McDyess narrowed his choices to Denver and Phoenix.

A number of other deals being discussed, including:

— Minnesota, Toronto and Denver reaching agreement on a three-way trade sending Chauncey Billups to the Nuggets, Dean Garrett and Bobby Jackson to the Timberwolves and Micheal Williams and two No. 1 picks to the Raptors.

— The Los Angeles Lakers sending forward Tony Battie to the Boston Celtics for center Travis Knight.

— The Bulls signing and trading Steve Kerr to the San Antonio Spurs.

The biggest disagreement between the sides concerns the new average salary exception, which allows teams already over the salary cap to sign an extra free agent.

The union wants the exception to be used for six-year contracts; the league wants it limited to three-year deals.

The Bulls will sign Pippen to a deal worth $67.2 million for five years — with another $15 million in incentives — before trading him, and get forward Roy Rogers and a second-round draft pick in return, said league sources.

Although the salaries for Pippen and Rogers do not match, the deal is allowable under NBA rules because Houston will have enough salary cap room to fit in Pippen's contract. His salary for this season will be $10.6 million.

Pippen, a six-time champion with the Bulls, talked to the Rockets about signing with them as a free agent. It was not immediately clear why he agreed to a sign-and-trade deal, but other teams also were discussing similar deals involving Pippen.

"I am excited about my new career in Houston, and even though everything seems to be changing, I hope Bulls fans everywhere will understand that it is time for a new era to begin in Chicago," Pippen said. "Chicago has been my home for nearly half my life, and with family and friends here I will always treat the city as home. I only hope the city of Chicago will continue to treat me as one of their own. Thanks for all the great memories."

The acquisition of Pippen should clear the way for Charles Barkley to re-sign with Houston for the $1 million minimum, giving the Rockets a formidable front line of Barkley, Pippen and Hakeem Olajuwon, and allowing Barkley to keep his Larry Bird rights for another year.

The Knicks apparently won the Sprewell sweepstakes after Golden State Warriors general manager Garry St. Jean told all the interested teams to make their best offers by 4 p.m. EST Monday.

Sprewell, a three-time All-Star, drew the longest non drug-related suspension in league history last season for choking his coach, P.J. Carlesimo.

It was not immediately clear who the Knicks would send to the Warriors. New York was believed to be offering forward Chris Mills and guard Chris Childs, with Golden State general manager Garry St. Jean asking for John Starks.

The Knicks, Heat and Pacers had been known to be the leading bidders, and the AP learned that a complicated four-team trade involving Golden State, Miami, Cleveland and Boston also was discussed.

In that scenario, Sprewell would have gone to the Heat along with Bimbo Coles and Clarence Weatherspoon, with Golden State getting Brent Barry, Dan Majerle and Bobby Sura. Boston would have received Jamal Mashburn and Vitaly Potapenko, and Cleveland would have received Paul Pierce and Andrew DeClercq.

Former college star dead after apparent suicide

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — Katrina Price, a former basketball star at Stephen F. Austin whose professional career was set back when the ABL folded last month, apparently committed suicide Monday.

Police responding to a 911 call just before 7 a.m. found her dead of an apparent gunshot wound in the hallway of her sister Lucy's apartment. Police said the younger Price is not considered a suspect.

Police Sgt. Paul Peterson said that the case is being investigated as a homicide because there were no witnesses, but officers believe it will be ruled a suicide.

"There were no signs of a struggle and there appeared to be a shotgun lying under the body, which would tend to lead us toward that conclusion," Peterson said.

Price, 23, was a third-team All-American last season when she averaged 22.1 points and 5.3 rebounds per game. The 5-foot-10 guard was the Ladyjacks' all-time leading scorer with 2,278 points and she's among the SFA's top 10 in seven other categories.

"There were no signs of struggle and there appeared to be a shotgun lying under the body..."

Paul Peterson
Police Sgt.

The game Monday night between Stephen F. Austin and Sam Houston State in Huntsville was postponed because of Price's death. University counselors worked with the players and coaches Monday to help cope with the loss.

"We are all devastated," said SFA athletics director Steve McCarty. "Every member on that team either played with Katrina last season or knew of her."

Basketball sign-ups next week

Teams wishing to sign up their intramural basketball teams are reminded that entries open Tuesday at 8 p.m.

The earlier you register the better your chances for selecting your preferable playing time.

The entries close Jan. 28 at 5 p.m. Make sure your form a team for the march to the All-U tournament.

To register, a team simply needs to bring a list of players' names, addresses and phone numbers to room 203 of the Student Rec Center along with a refundable $30 forfeit fee (residence hall teams may charge their forfeit fee to their hall account.)

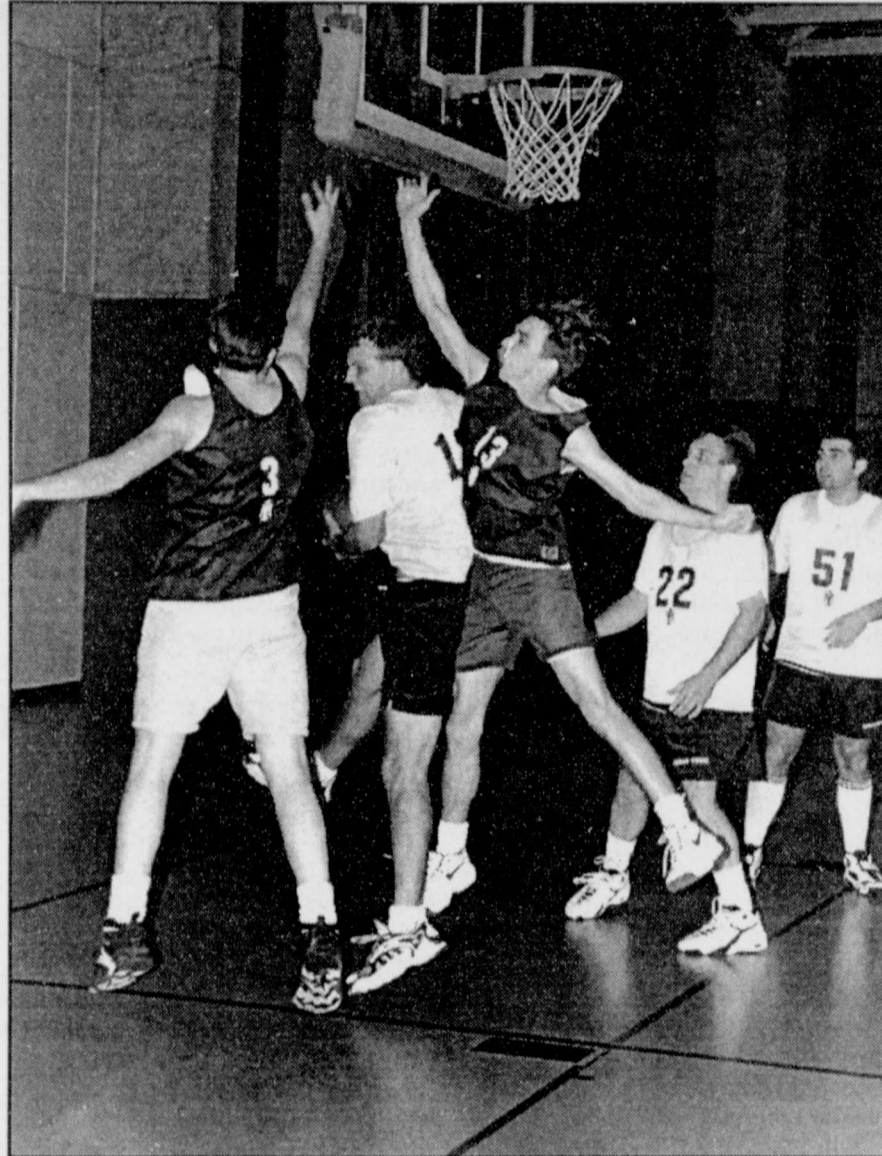

Also, be sure to have several preferable playing times in mind in case your first choice is already full.

Officials needed

An excellent opportunity to make extra money is here as the Recreational Sports Department is training officials for the intramural basketball program. On top of a $10 per game fee, you will be paid $5.15 for all clinics and scrimmages. What a deal!

The first training clinic is set for tomorrow evening from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the Rec Center, room 201.

The intramural staff will be on hand to discuss hiring procedures, basic policies and rules of the game and set other clinics and scrimmages. Prior experience in playing or officiating the game is not needed. Questions concerning the basketball program should be directed to the intramural staff by calling 742-3351 or by coming by the administrative offices located in the recreation center.

On The Back! Intramural basketball players enjoy the competition during a scheduled game played at the Student Rec Center. Intramural basketball sign-ups for men's and women's teams are Tuesday through Thursday of next week.
