ARTISTS' FUSE TALENTS FOR CHARITY

By Laura Hensley
Staff Writer

Brandon White takes a step back from his tedious work, sighs deeply and rubs his tired eyes.

"I think I'm going to be cross-eyed," said this junior design communications major from Dallas.

White is one of 53 Texas Tech art design students who have been busying themselves for three weeks with the time-consuming task of pasting thousands of tiny tidbits of paper, felt and various other materials to four panels of foam board.

"This has been a lot of hard work, but it has turned out to be something great," White said.

Take a step back from the work and a colorful mosaic of famous people, animals and cartoons can be seen. The class used found media to complete the project, ranging from torn pieces of magazines and marbles to feathers and moss.

The students' tedious and time-consuming work will pay off the weeks of March 6-12 when this huge project will be used as a backdrop for the annual fund raiser of KTX-TV, Lubbock's PBS affiliate.

"We can't be happier with their work," said James Harris, KTX-TV manager of programming. "I think they've done a fantastic job."

Harris said each year the station looks to have a different set design for its fund raiser. He first approached assistant art professor Carol Fitzgerald with the idea of using students to create a backdrop. The students then created the concept of the mosaic, and Fitzgerald agreed to help and reorganized her syllabi to make time for the project.

"We were happy to help," Fitzgerald said. "It's very exciting and has created a new level of intensity because their work will be seen on TV."

Considering the time and the quality of the project, Harris said the station never would have been able to pay for the backdrop.

"They have worked about 72 hours on this," he said. "At the station, we rely heavily upon volunteers, and without their help, we would have never been able to pull this off."

Three of Fitzgerald's classes worked together on each panel. One student was assigned to a small portion of the panel and had to communicate with other students to create a finished product.

"It's been hard communicating with people in other sections," said John Packard, a junior political science major from Lake Jackson. "Communication has probably been the most challenging aspect of the project."

Each panel represents a different theme of the channel's programming.

Pictures from the channel's programs about nature, drama and the arts, children's programming and history were used in the collage.

Enrollment lowest in 11-year span

Decline credited to university's increased admission standards

By Apu Naik
Staff Writer

Texas Tech's spring 1999 enrollment is the lowest student total the university has seen in 11 years.

The 734 students the university lost in enrollment between now and last spring also is the most since 1988.

This spring, Tech has a total of 22,040 students, the lowest the university has had for any spring or fall semester since spring of 1988, when only 21,600 students were enrolled at the university.

The last time Tech's fall enrollment fell below 22,000 was 25 years ago in 1974, when the school tallied a total of 21,927 students.

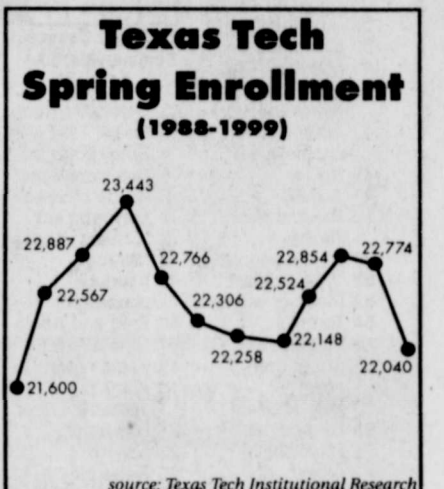

Tech officials attributed the loss of enrollment to several factors including increased admission standards, lower graduation rates among high school seniors and an increase in the number of Tech graduates.

"In actuality, we were up by 30 percent in freshman applications this Spring compared to last," said Michael Heintze, vice president of enrollment management.

"The nature of the (university's) admission standards has definitely caused a decline in enrollment, as we are beginning to demand a higher quality of student."

Assistant Vice Provost of the Honors College Gary Bell confirmed the notion that Tech is beginning to see more academically inclined students.

"We had a record number of Honors College applications last year with about 600 applications and then again this year," Bell said. "When we started in 1993, the average SAT score of our applicants was about 1290, whereas now, the average score is about 1346."

The figures, which were released one week later than is required by state law because of a computer glitch, showed that Tech is continuing to lose students while other state universities are expanding their campuses.

During that same period of time, Texas A&M University increased its enrollment by a total of 1,152 students, and the University of Texas at Austin gained 31 students.

Tech Dean of Students Michael Shonrock said loss of enrollment is the price any university must pay when demanding a higher caliber of students.

"You should see a decrease...we have come to the point where our standards for admission are not only as high as A&M and UT, but in some cases, they are higher," Shonrock said.

In addition, 680 students were withdrawn within a period of eight days this month. Twelfth-class-day preliminary figures showed there were 22,720 students enrolled, but the 20th-day final figures left Tech with only 22,040 of those students.

Seniors convene to discuss tickets

By Gretchen Verry
Staff Writer

Texas Tech seniors met Tuesday to develop a unified suggestion to present to the Office of the Provost that would amend recent graduation policies.

The current graduation plan involves issuing all graduating seniors four tickets to May's graduation ceremony. The remaining seats, about 1/2 of the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, will remain open seating and will be determined on a first come-first serve basis.

Tech student Eric Castillo-Wilson, a senior international business and business economics major from Lancaster, called for seniors to speak out against the plan and formed an action group called the Class of '99.

"We are not going to find a perfect solution," Castillo-Wilson said. "The best we can hope to do is find one that serves seniors fairly."

The group found opposition to the number of tickets issued to students and suggested that students sign up for the number of tickets that they plan on using.

Castillo-Wilson said input from seniors is essential in getting recognition to the group's petition. Students can e-mail the group at SpeakTTU@aol.com.

Provost John Burns said overcrowding has been a problem at past graduations and is likely to cause even more problems with the notoriety of this year's speaker.

Former President George Bush is scheduled to speak at both May ceremonies.

Man convicted in dragging death

JASPER (AP) — A white supremacist whose vengeful writings and racist tattoos were used to prove he despised blacks was convicted Tuesday of chaining a black man to a pickup and dragging him to his death.

Courtroom spectators applauded and relatives of the victim wiped away tears as John William King was found guilty of the capital murder of James Byrd Jr., the heinous June 7 slaying that shocked the nation.

The 11 white jurors and the black foreman began hearing testimony in the punishment phase Tuesday afternoon to decide whether King should be given a life prison sentence or executed. Testimony will continue

Wednesday morning. King sat stone-faced when the verdict was read. He leaned forward, apparently trying to shield himself with his attorneys from courtroom TV cameras.

After the verdict was announced, he reclined in his chair, folded his hands and brought his forefingers to his lips.

Jasper Sheriff Billy Rowles, one of the chief investigators in the murder, silently blew a kiss to the victim's family after the verdict was read.

"I'm very satisfied," said Byrd's sister Clara Taylor, one of about a dozen family members who braved five days of graphic testimony detailing how her brother was alive and conscious for at least two miles of the dragging.

If sent to death row, the 24-year-old would become the first white person in Texas to be sentenced to lethal injection for killing a black person since the state resumed imposing the death penalty in the mid-1970s.

Byrd's daughter Renee Mullins, dabbed her nose and eyes with a tissue as she called the verdict "a breath of fresh air." Said his son, Ross Byrd: "All I know is that there's one down and two to go."

"That's all we wanted, was justice," said Ste'la Brumley, another of Byrd's sisters. "We wanted to see the justice system to work."

King, a laborer, was the first of three white men to be tried for the slaying. The body of the 49-year-old Byrd was torn apart — his head and right arm severed from his torso — when he was pulled nearly three miles while tied by his ankles with a 24 1/2-foot logging chain.

The murder thrust Jasper into a national spotlight as members of the Ku Klux Klan and New Black Panthers descended on the timber town of 8,000 people.

President Clinton said he was heartened by the public's reaction of outrage to Byrd's murder, which demonstrated "an act of evil like this is not what our country is all about."

Student battles eating disorder with help from friends

By Greg Okuhara
Staff Writer

There is no cure for this disease. This disease does not know boundaries of race, color or religion. The disease can destroy the body from the inside without anyone noticing. Eating disorders are silent killers. Many times the person is not aware of the problem. If the problem is left untreated, death is inevitable. Amy, who requested The University Daily not publish her last name, is an example of how damaging eating disorders can be.

Amy said her disorder began when she was 12 years old. When she was younger, she was a cheerleader. Amy wanted to stay a certain weight and size and was willing to do whatever it took to stay there.

"If you put on a pound, people noticed it. I wanted to make sure I maintained a weight," Amy said. "I had a huge fear of being obese. I thought if I was perfect on the outside, it would look like everything was OK on the inside."

A coach caught her and a friend taking diet pills when she was 12, but the disorder only progressed from there. Amy said no one else knew about her disorder until college. She said bulimics have an easier time hiding their problem because others cannot see the damage being done to the inside of the body. When Amy was anorexic, the problem was more noticeable.

A roommate at Texas Tech finally brought the disorder to Amy's attention, which got the ball rolling for Amy's recovery.

"I had a roommate who busted me throwing up in the bathroom," Amy said. "She just confronted me about it, and that's when I decided I needed help. That was an eye-opener for me."

Amy said the causes for her eating disorder were depression and low self-esteem, but there are other reasons.

"I think it is genetic, but I think a lot of it was low self-esteem. I remember looking at my grandmothers who were not obese but large. And I remember telling myself 'I would kill myself before I get that big,'" Amy said.

Amy attends a support group held at Tech for those who think they have an eating disorder. She said this group is unique because they accept people with all types of eating disorders and is open to all students.

"We have the anorexics, the bulimics, the compulsive overeaters. Some groups only take certain ones (disorders)," Amy said.

Marty Mefford, the counselor who leads the group, said there are many reasons why people do not get help for their disorder.

"If someone has bulimia, people around them don't know, and they're not encouraging them to get help," Mefford said. "For an exercise addict, the exercising is their purge. People see how much they exercise and are jealous, and that is their (the person with the disorder) reward."

Mefford said those suffering from eating disorders need to come to group therapy to help them cope.

"The important thing is people are there with the same experience," Mefford said. "The eating disorder isolates you. You become consumed in the behavior. The group helps you break out of that isolation."

Despite the help that she has gotten, Amy said there is no full recovery for those with eating disorders, and support is necessary for assistance.

"I wouldn't say I have to battle it, but I really have to watch it forever," Amy said. "If I don't pay attention to it, it can get out of control like that, overnight. If you don't have support, you won't make it."

As a part of Body Awareness Week, Student Health Services is providing free eating disorder screenings this week. Call SHS at 743-2860 for more information.

Professor receives award, continues research

By Melody Ragland
Staff Writer

So-hyun Joo has been at Texas Tech less than a year and is already making great strides for the College of Human Sciences and family financial planning. Joo is a visiting assistant professor concentrating on research. She was recently offered a job and will be an assistant professor of family financial planning at Tech. Joo graduated from Virginia Tech last May, and she came to Lubbock in July. Originally from South Korea, Joo came to the United States in 1995. As a student, she researched the effects that financial worries can have on an employees' job performance. Joo received her doctoral in consumer economics at Virginia Tech and based her research on her dissertation. "Those who have financial worries cannot concentrate on work," Joo said. "The need for financial education is a huge issue." She said workers need to be educated on financial planning and employers should provide it to their workers. In November, Joo won an award at the Association for Financial Planning Education's annual conference. "I was really surprised," Joo said. "I just started my career. I'm in the beginning stages." She submitted her research and was chosen by her peers to receive the Outstanding Conference Paper award. "It makes you feel good and more confident about yourself," Joo said. "It drives you to do more work."

Joo is doing exactly that — more work. She designed the web page for the Tech Center for Financial Responsibility and is still involved in research. Her newest project is researching how financial worries affect college students. She will survey financial practices of students, like their use of credit cards. Joo said she concentrates 100 percent on research for the CFR. She also would like to see Tech begin services for students that have financial worries. "I wanted to learn more and do more to help consumers," Joo said. Jerry Mason, associate professor of family financial planning, said Joo is someone who shows a lot of potential and works very hard. "She's real pleasant and easy to work with," Mason said. "All of her research will make her recognized."

Students still need TLC from parents

Isn't college life great? You are finally out of your parents house. You have your own place. No one is around to tell you to clean your room or take out the garbage. You can play your stereo as loud as you want. You and your friends can stay out late and not have to worry about going to class the next day.

You have total freedom, and no one to answer to except yourself. Independence is a great feeling.

In the four years that I have been away from home, I have never looked back. Who needs advice from home? I know everything that I need to know already.

All and all, I think I have done pretty good for myself. I think I have turned into a fairly responsible young man. I say fairly because I don't think you can call any college student totally responsible, and if you can, then you are probably not a very fun person.

But to get to my point, I think that my college career had gone pretty smoothly, that is, until last week when I came down with the flu. I'm not talking about any flu. I think I had the worst case of the flu ever known to man (or at least that was how it felt).

I was instantly transformed from a well-rounded, semi-responsible college senior who was 10-foot tall and bullet proof into a whimpering 7 year old who wanted his mommy to take care of him. Sound familiar to anyone else out there?

I had a fever and then the chills, the night sweats and all the aches and pains that come with the flu.

See, I had never been that sick away from home, and let me tell you, it was no fun. I didn't know what to do. I had to take care of myself and even worse, there was no one around to give me any sympathy. So, I took actions in to my own hands and took a trip to Walgreens. I also made what I like to call a LDSC (Long Distance Sympathy Call) home.

You would be amazed at how well it worked. All it took to get me better were a few kind words from mom (and a bunch of drugs).

In about a week, I was back on my feet again and ready to take on the world.

I think the moral of my story is that as college students, we sometimes get too caught up in our own independence and forget that we still have parents at home to help us.

Remember that you don't have to get through this whole college experience alone.

Sometimes a few kind words from home is all you need to get back on your feet.

So, don't take mom and dad for granted.

Kevin Preas is a senior public relations major from Plano.

TRAFFIC AND PARKING UPDATE

We've been receiving a lot of questions about what will happen with the faculty/staff parking around the art/architecture buildings when construction begins on the new English/Philosophy/Education Complex. We'll share with you what we know at this time and try to keep you updated as this project progresses.

Two parking lots will be impacted by this project: R06 southeast of art/architecture and R10 behind the University Theatre. The Office of Facilities Planning and Construction has planned to replace these two lots with one large temporary lot (at 18th Street and Flint Avenue) and three other small lots between this temporary lot and the lot south of the library. Facilities Planning and Construction plans to award a contract soon to construct these lots and plans to complete them before the R06 lot has to be removed. We are recommending that, at least during the construction phase, some or all of these lots be made "area reserved." Once some of these decisions have been made, we'll keep people informed. If these lots are changed to "area reserved," the users will — of course — receive any refund due to them (or payroll deduction adjustments will be made).

Parking around the Administration Building

Many people have noticed and commented on the stricter parking on the curb south of the administration building. During construction/renovation of the west wing of the administration building, we began to allow vehicles to park along the curb to the south of the building. Now that the construction is completed, we again will begin parking enforcement along that curb. There are a few spaces on either end designated for guests to the chancellor's office and the president's office (a special pass is required), as well as two spaces for customers to the credit union. Other than these spaces, no parking will be permitted. The administration has asked we begin strict enforcement of this area.

Student Senate Resolution 34.14

This past November, the Traffic and Parking Coordinating Committee received a copy of Student Senate Resolution 34.14 regarding the traffic lights on Flint Avenue and 18th Street. After considering the resolution, the committee agreed to change these stoplights to flashing lights from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. weekdays and 10 p.m. Friday to 7 a.m. Monday.

These changes were made prior to the end of the fall semester. If the changes result in major unanticipated traffic problems, the committee will have to reconsider the policy. Hopefully, those using the campus during these hours will find the change advantageous.

We urge you to share your concerns, questions, suggestions and other input with us. Information gained through this input may be used to correct inefficiencies and promote positive customer relations. We look forward to your input. Please contact us:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Students do face more problems than parents

To the editor: I am writing in response to another letter to the editor, which was written by Sean Reed in response to Brandon Formby's column. I strongly disagree with Mr. Reed. I believe that college students today face more severe problems than our parents faced during their college years.

Mr. Reed makes a reference to the "affluent confines of Plano". I am sorry to tell you Mr. Reed, but not everyone in Plano is part of a wealthy family. Know this Mr. Reed: there are two high schools in Plano, which can be likened to Park Avenue and Harlem. Today, college students do not have the Vietnam War hanging over our heads. My father did not have to worry about the draft either. Generally, college students were exempt from the draft.

No national guardsmen have killed any of my friends lately. Citizens with handguns have. On a lighter note, do you recall the riots in Los Angeles several years ago Mr. Reed?

It is much harder for college students today to deal with drugs, sex and alcohol. I would much rather be told that I have syphilis or herpes than AIDS. I would much rather suffer a bad trip, than die because I used cocaine that was partially cut with strychnine.

I live in Sneed. Out of the ten people in my inner circle, only two own cars. I am from an area that looks down on the wealthier parts of Plano. In my neighborhood, people my age drive new cars because they worked during the summer and after school to buy them. Mr. Formby is trying to earn what adults have. He is in college, just like you. Mr. Formby is trying to solve these greater problems that we face today. Awareness is the first step. To fight a successful war, you must first rally a few troops.

I admire Mr. Reed's rage. I encourage Mr. Reed to get his facts straight and employ reason. If he does this, he might just be able to knock Brandon Formby off of his "great soapbox."

Roach problem needs immediate attention

To the editor: Shortly after returning from Winter Break, I asked the building maintenance office be called to request that the shower facility in the men's gym be sprayed for insects, as there were a large number of roaches present when we showered in the men's locker area. After waiting several weeks, I inquired about the status of my request, and I was told that when the call was made that spraying for insects was on a schedule (obviously a rigid one), and that it was not time for the men's gym to be scheduled. Almost two months have now passed and apparently the men's gym has still not reached the top of the schedule. When showering today (Feb. 22), I counted no less than 10 roaches trying to dodge my soap and hot water, and it would seem that they are enjoying the period between the scheduled time for the men's gym (I am not).

While I realize that there are appropriate times for various activities, I wonder what needs to be done to have a study of whether or not it would be possible to alter this obviously sacred schedule. Perhaps if we caught some of the friendly creatures (lets not upset the animal rights crowd) and mailed them to the chancellor or perhaps to Dr. Jo Ann Shroyer (wife of building maintenance director) it would then be possible to alter the schedule. Maybe sending some to the office of SERVICEplus would help (I just noted that the plus is lower case, hum). Maybe we could have a "Turn out the lights on the roaches" contest and give a prize if someone could figure out a way to solve this obviously difficult problem. Hopefully solving the problem will not have to wait until we become a flagship university. What if we are waiting until they die of old age (what is that for a roach)? If anyone has any suggestions, send me your ideas.

Dance troupe to enrich Tech campus

By Shan Hampton
Contributing Writer

Several Texas Tech students moved to the sounds of harmonious drums as they made waves with Afro-Cuban dance Tuesday in the University Center Allen Theatre.

A special, modern dance workshop was hosted by the Urban Bush Women to introduce students to the rhythmic nature of popular Cuban dances.

The Urban Bush Women will perform at 8 p.m. today in the UC Allen Theatre.

Tickets cost $8.50 for Tech students and $17 for the general public. For more information, call the University Center Programs at 742-3621.

Carolina Garcia, who is a member of the dance troupe, taught students popular dances like the Cha Cha Cha and the Mambo.

She uses a mixture of African and Cuban origins to produce spiritual energy.

The Urban Bush Women is more than just a dance company, said

Trina Brown, UC Programs member and senior arts and sciences major from Slaton. The dancers are women who serve as educators by exploring the human spirit.

"We incorporate singing, text, silent movements and a selection of funk rhythms," said group member Michelle Dorant.

"We are a modern dance company who explore the movement of the African diaspora."

Jawola Zollar is the founder and choreographer of the Urban Bush Women.

She established the dance troupe in 1984 when she decided to bring a combination of black history, folklore and spiritual traditions through formal dancing.

Her work with the company has allowed her to be honored by the National Endowment for the Arts and receive a 1992 New York Dance and Performance award for her work from "River Songs" and "Praise House."

Zollar's company also has performed in New York at the Brooklyn Academy of Music Next Wave Festival and the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theatre.

She uses her spiritual upbringing to guide her when creating certain dances for the Urban Bush Women dance troupe.

One of the pieces that will be performed has to do with female relationships. The name of the creative dance is "Girlfriend."

"This is one of my favorite pieces to perform because it explains how sisters should support one another in a time of crisis," said performer Francine Sheffield.

"This particular dance is expressed through movement gestures only. I feel this dance will have a greater affect on the audience because it will allow them to come up with their own story."

Poetic eulogy proposed for old Texas flags

AUSTIN (AP) — A state lawmaker says old Texas flags deserve not just a retirement ceremony but some kind words as well. Rep. Bob Hunter, R-Abilene, has introduced a bill to create a flowery, 387-word eulogy to be said before burial or burning of flags that have flown for the last time.

"I am your Texas flag! I was born Dec. 10, 1836," it begins. "I am the only flag of an American state that has also served as the symbol of an independent nation — The Republic of Texas. ... From the expanse of the Big Bend to the Riverwalk of San Antonio — all of Texas is my home!"

Hunter, a native Kansan, said a flag retirement was needed after hearing from Texans who did not know how to dispose of a flag. The bill, which now heads to committee for consideration, says flag burnings or burials should occur in public ceremonies, when feasible.

Loomis heist defendants sentenced

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Six people were given sentences ranging from probation to nearly 13 years in prison Tuesday for their part in a $17 million heist from a vault at the Loomis, Fargo armored car company.

The theft was one of the biggest of its kind in U.S. history. More than $2 million is still missing.

Eric Scott Grant, one of the plotters of the heist, was sentenced to 12 years and nine months. He was ordered to pay $26,000 in restitution.

Michael McKinney was sentenced to 11 years and three months in prison and ordered to pay $120,000 in restitution. He was accused of money laundering and participating in a plot to kill David Scott Ghatt.

Ghatt is a former Loomis employee who was videotaped stealing money and is awaiting sentencing. Eric Payne, described by prosecutors as one of the heist's "big six," drew 6 1/2 years in prison for money laundering and larceny and ordered to pay $292,000 in restitution.

HOW TO LAND YOUR DREAM INTERNSHIP (Even the one you didn't know existed)

If you're starting to think about your career, even just an inkling, it may be time to focus on finding a summer internship. Following are some "insider" insights about how to land your dream internship in some of today's fast-forward industries like media, entertainment, fashion and high-tech, that likely don't recruit on campus.

WHAT TURNS YOU ON?

Not the typical first question you might think of when plotting your first career experience, but you really should think about it. The best places to work are often the places that make or do things that already interest you. And who wrote the rule that work shouldn't be fun? "It helps to start by thinking about which classroom topics interest you the most and what hobbies get you excited," says Samer Hamadeh, President of Vaultreports.com and the co-author of "America's Top Internships" and "The Internship Bible," two of the most useful books on the subject. Take his advice and ask yourself some questions. Do you spend a lot of time listening to music and going to concerts? Maybe you should check out working for a local radio station, a record label or a music publishing company. Are you a devoted athlete? Try contacting a fun sporting goods company, a fitness magazine, or a sports talent agency.

CREATE YOUR OWN JOB

After you've asked yourself what you like, and thought of some of your favorite products and activities, you may find that many of your choices lead to smaller or less structured companies that likely don't recruit on campus, or that don't have a formal internship program. Don't get discouraged!! In fact, think of it as a huge opportunity because you can potentially create your own job! There's nothing wrong with calling or writing a company out of the blue and letting them know who you are and what you're interested in. Many of the smaller companies will be thrilled to have been approached and more than likely can use the extra hands for the summer. One of Hamadeh's favorite stories is about a college student who was interested in sports law. The guy figured that Michael Jordan's lawyer must be pretty good at it, so he read a bunch of newspaper articles until he found the guy's name, then he wrote him a letter explaining why he wanted to work for him. "The lawyer had never received a letter like that from anyone before," Hamadeh says. "So he brought him in for an interview and was so impressed that he hired him for the summer."

SELL YOURSELF, NOT YOUR NUMBERS

Just because you may not graduate cum laude doesn't mean you won't qualify for some of the most selective internship programs. "You have to make yourself sound interesting," says Price Hicks, who hooks students up with summer jobs at places like Warner Brothers as part of her work with the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. "The guy who wrote about growing up on a dairy farm is the one we remember best." The people, who may have the best grades, but drone on and on about why they want to be television directors all tend to blend together, she says.

SCIENTISTS CAN BE JOURNALISTS

Remember that the purpose of an internship is to gain experience. The idea is to "test drive" career options that you think might interest you for your future. And what interests you for a career may have nothing to do with what interests you in school (How many psych majors actually become psychologists? How many history majors become historians? You get the point.) You never really know what someone might be looking for, so don't feel intimidated by internships that aren't directly in your field of study. Case in point, a biology major beat out a slew of journalism majors for one of three highly coveted internships at the Center for Investigative Reporting. Out of approximately 90 applicants, she was among those with the least direct experience. "It just so happened we were working on a project about chemicals in the environment, so her skills came in handy and she ended up playing a big role in the reporting," said Maryann Sargent, who is the internship coordinator at the Center.

REMEMBER THAT SMALL CAN BE BIG

Sometimes, you really may be better off going to work for a company where the duties of an intern aren't well defined. In small but super fast-growing internet companies, for instance, there's always a lot going on, so interns can often show up on day one and pick the things that interest them the most. "Our interns will always be working on several different projects," says Jeff Daniel, who runs a cool new service called CollegeHire.com that helps match up undergrads with high-tech and internet-related internships and entry-level jobs. "We look for people who can adapt well to the culture of fast-moving companies and can excel in an environment that's changing rapidly." Big change means new opportunities, and that's where a hungry intern can step into new, exciting areas and make a big contribution.

Sharp, Tech go for milestones

By Brent Dirks
Staff Writer

When the Texas Tech Lady Raiders battle Colorado at 8 p.m. today in Boulder, Colo., point guard Melinda Schmucker will quietly be looking to lead No. 11 Tech to another victory.

Lady Raider coach Marsha Sharp said Schmucker was a key for the Lady Raiders that helped them pick up an important 75-62 win over Nebraska Sunday in Lincoln.

"Let me say this about Schmucker," Sharp said.

"Everything that that kid did (Sunday) will never show up in a stat sheet, but it was imperative that she play as well as she played to give us a chance to win ... I thought she was instrumental."

The 5-foot-11 junior from Nazareth averages about six points per game for the Lady Raiders (23-3 overall, 12-2 Big 12). But more importantly, her presence can be felt with her average of 5.4 assists per game.

Coupled with just 46 turnovers this season, Schmucker leads the Big 12 with a 3.07 turnover/assist ratio with two regular season games remaining.

"I think that's the biggest thing for me being the point guard," Schmucker said. "To get out there and do something that will help the team regardless of whether it shows up or not."

And when Tech hits the floor with the Buffaloes at the Coors Event Center, Schmucker and the rest of the Lady Raiders squad will look to carry over the momentum from Sunday's victory.

The Lady Raiders have won four of their last five games. A win against Colorado would help the Lady Raiders clinch at least a tie for the Big 12 regular season championship.

"We're kind of at our peak," Schmucker said. "Hopefully we'll continue to just grow on what we are doing now. Every game we just continue to play and give it our all."

Tech post Angie Brazier, who was recently named to the Women's Basketball News Service first-team All-American squad, said the Lady Raiders are continuing to improve as the season goes on.

"We worked hard, and we're improving in a lot of places on both ends of the court," Brazier said.

"Everyone seems to be giving a 110 percent. Everyone is playing real hard right now knowing that we're going to have to play hard to finish it off and to be successful for the rest of the season."

Colorado (13-11 overall, 6-8 Big 12) is led in scoring by Linda Lappe, who averages 10.7 points per game. Ten other Buffaloes average at least five points per ball game.

In Boulder this season, the Buffs are 9-4 overall, notching wins against conference foes Kansas and Nebraska.

"It will be very important for us to maintain some semblance of the mentality that we had in Nebraska when we go to Colorado on Wednesday," said Sharp, who also will be looking to pick up her 400th all-time career victory against Colorado.

"That was an emotional win for us. We were really fired up after the game, probably as emotional as I've seen those players in a while. We're going to have to turn around and come back down and go back up again to get ready to play at Colorado."

And Schmucker said the Lady Raiders need to continue to play well to come out with a victory against the Buffs.

"We just need to continue to go out and capitalize on everything we've been doing — rebounding, pressure, defense," Schmucker said.

"I think our offense will fall into place if we just never give up on the defensive end."

Red Raiders expecting Buffalo charge

Staff Writer

The Texas Tech men's basketball squad (13-14 overall, 5-9 Big 12) will take to the floor for the last time at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum at 7 p.m. today when they battle Colorado (14-13 overall, 5-9 Big 12).

The Red Raiders are 10-4 at home this season and will try to pick up their 11th win at home against the Buffaloes.

Colorado holds an 11-3 advantage in the all-time series including a 91-80 double-overtime victory over Tech last season in Boulder, Colo.

The last time the Buffaloes visited the Coliseum, they left with an 80-78 win that ended Tech's 35-game home winning streak.

Both teams are 3-1 in their past four games and center Andy Ellis said this game will be crucial for the Red Raiders.

"This will be a big game and we're kind of on a roll," Ellis said. "We've won three-of-four and we just have to keep it up here. We need to close this place out in a good way, and a win will be a good way to do that."

Senior guard Stan Bonewitz will play his last home game against the Buffaloes and said that it will be important for Tech to stay focused.

"This will be significant because it is the last game in the Coliseum," Bonewitz said. "This place is very historic. Many great teams and players have played here, and many great games have taken place here. But we want to make sure that we focus on the game and not think about everything else too much. Colorado is coming in here in a situation where they want to get a win. So we need to keep our focus on Colorado and play as well as we can."

Tech has not been out-rebounded in its last four games and is averaging five blocks per game over the four game stretch.

Guard Rayford Young has averaged 24 points a game over the last four games and said he is looking forward to the contest with Colorado.

"It's going to be really special,"

Young said. "I'm very excited about playing. I want to put on a good showcase for our last game here in front of our fans, and I'm sure our team wants to do the same. We just need to come out and play hard and be ready to play an all-around game."

After the Colorado contest, Tech will close the regular season at Oklahoma State on Saturday.

The Big 12 Tournament will begin March 4, and Bonewitz said the Red Raiders are playing well down the stretch heading into the tournament.

"I think we're playing better," Bonewitz said. "We're starting to get the momentum. I think we're starting to pick it up a little bit and starting to put some wins together."

Men's rugby ready for Baylor

As is the case with many club sports at Texas Tech, the men's rugby team is enjoying recent successes.

"We have a three-game winning streak, and we're really stoked about it," said Andrew Rowland, Tech rugby club vice president.

Tech defeated New Mexico State 22-5 and San Angelo State 19-0 last Saturday.

The Red Raiders will travel to Baylor for a 2 p.m. clash with the Bears on Saturday before returning home for a 2 p.m. battle with Southwest Texas on March 6.
