Prison trustee found after six month run

AUSTIN (AP) — The second of two prison trustees who walked away from a job site outside their San Antonio prison was captured Thursday almost six months after his escape and more than 1,000 miles away in Florida.

Alex Maddox, 25, was arrested about noon Thursday in a mobile home in Key West, Fla., by FBI agents and officers of the Florida Fugitive Task Force.

Maddox and David Eversole, 24, who was arrested May 1, escaped while performing community service at Government Canyon State Park, about 15 miles northwest of San Antonio, April 28. Both were inmates at the Dominguez Unit in San Antonio.

Maddox began serving a two-year sentence in November 1999 for three counts of cocaine possession.

Eversole began serving an eight-year sentence in January on charges of burglary of a building, burglary of a car, theft and unauthorized use of a car.

Both men were convicted in Harris County.

Maddox will be returned to Texas where he will face prosecution for felony escape.

Airport worker lost after tunnel collapse

DULLES, Va. (AP) — Rescuers trying to find a worker trapped in a collapsed tunnel he had been digging at Dulles International Airport worried Thursday as the ground grew more unstable.

Crews at the construction site did not know if the man was still alive.

"We're treating this as a rescue operation," said Tara Hamilton, spokeswoman for the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority.

Workers were attempting to install supports and then planned to excavate by hand to avoid vibrations that would further weaken the tunnel.

The tunnel, about 15 feet underground, collapsed at about 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Three other workers escaped without injury, according to the tunnel contractor, Kiewit Construction.

The tunnel, part of a $3.4 billion airport expansion, is to become a walkway for passengers between the main terminal and Concourse B.

Oldest woman dead after 114 years alive

LONDON (AP) — The world's oldest woman, who attributed her longevity to whisky and boiled onions, died Thursday — six days short of her 115th birthday.

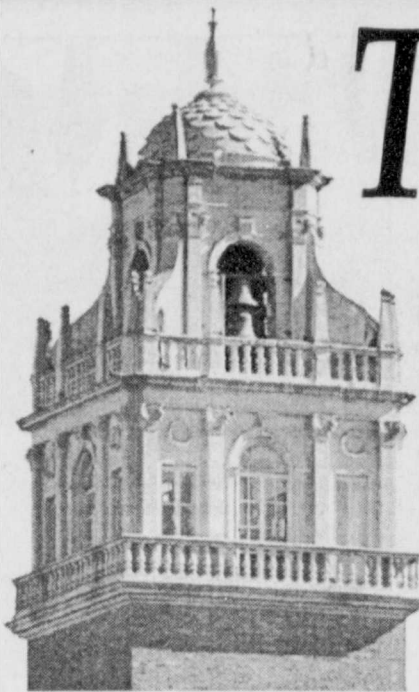

Eva Morris died peacefully in her sleep at a nursing home in the central England town of Stone, staff said.

"She was a grand old lady," said Lesley Powell, the matron of the home. "She was well right up until last night. She was her normal self. I'd spoken to her about a week ago and told her she was going to be 115. She just said 'Oh, really?'"

Morris was recognized as the oldest woman in the world by the "Guinness Book of Records" in March.

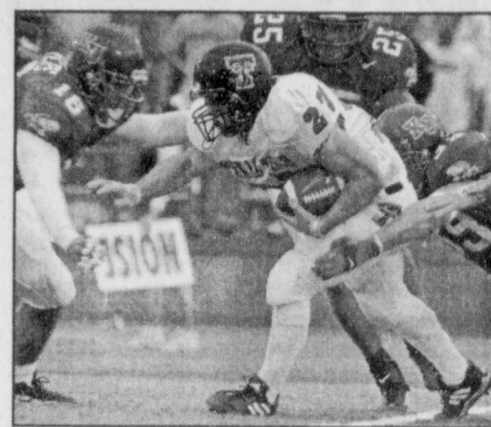

Born in Newcastle-under-Lyme in 1885, Morris was widowed in the 1930s. She lived in her own flat until she was 107, when she moved to the nursing home after a chest infection.

Her only child, Winnie, died of cancer in 1975 at age 62.

Senate passes tragedy resolutions

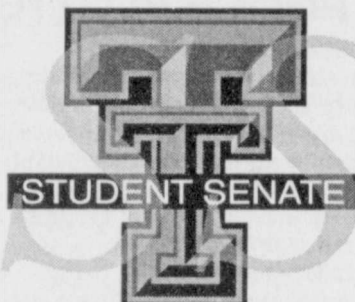

By Pam Smith Staff Writer

During the Texas Tech Student Senate meeting Thursday night, many senators wanted to turn tragedy into triumph.

Two resolutions passed by the Senate concerned two tragedies that have affected college students both at home and statewide — the death of Texas Tech student and the collapse of the bonfire at Texas A&M University in November 1999.

"On Sept. 20, the Texas A&M Student Senate passed a resolution in support of Texas A&M president Ray Bowen against renegade bonfires," said Tech Sen. Sean McMullen, of the College of Arts and Sciences. "Since then, they have been getting a lot of heat about their decision. This resolution does nothing but show our support for them."

McMullen said Senate Resolution 36.05, which discussed the A&M bonfire, was designed to help the Texas A&M Student Senate uphold their ruling to discourage renegade bonfires.

College of Business Administration Senator-at-Large Tammy Dickie, whose brother serves on the Student Senate at Texas A&M, said it was the Tech Senate's desire to look out after the interests of the students.

"My brother lost two friends in the bonfire accident," she said. "The administration chose this because it is in the best interest of the students, and we should respect that."

Regents set to discuss hot topics

Budget and facility planning are among the key items waiting for approval today.

By Angel Wolfe Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Board of Regents will meet today to discuss and take action on several proposals that include a planning budget for a new facility of fine arts and a park and ride facility.

The planning budget for the College of Fine Arts/Performing Arts Center consists of building a facility on campus. The building would provide space for the School of Music, Department of Theatre Arts and the Department of Art, according to background information given to the Board of Regents.

Mike Ellicott, vice chancellor of Facilities Planning and Construction, said the budget would include planning for two phases of construction.

"Phase one would be an academic portion," he said. "It would include classrooms, studios, practice rooms and offices."

Phase two would involve building an additional theater with 3,000 seats and along with a smaller 400-seat theater. The project has not been assigned a location for construction, Ellicott said. "That's part of the planning, to come up with three or four locations of where it can be built."

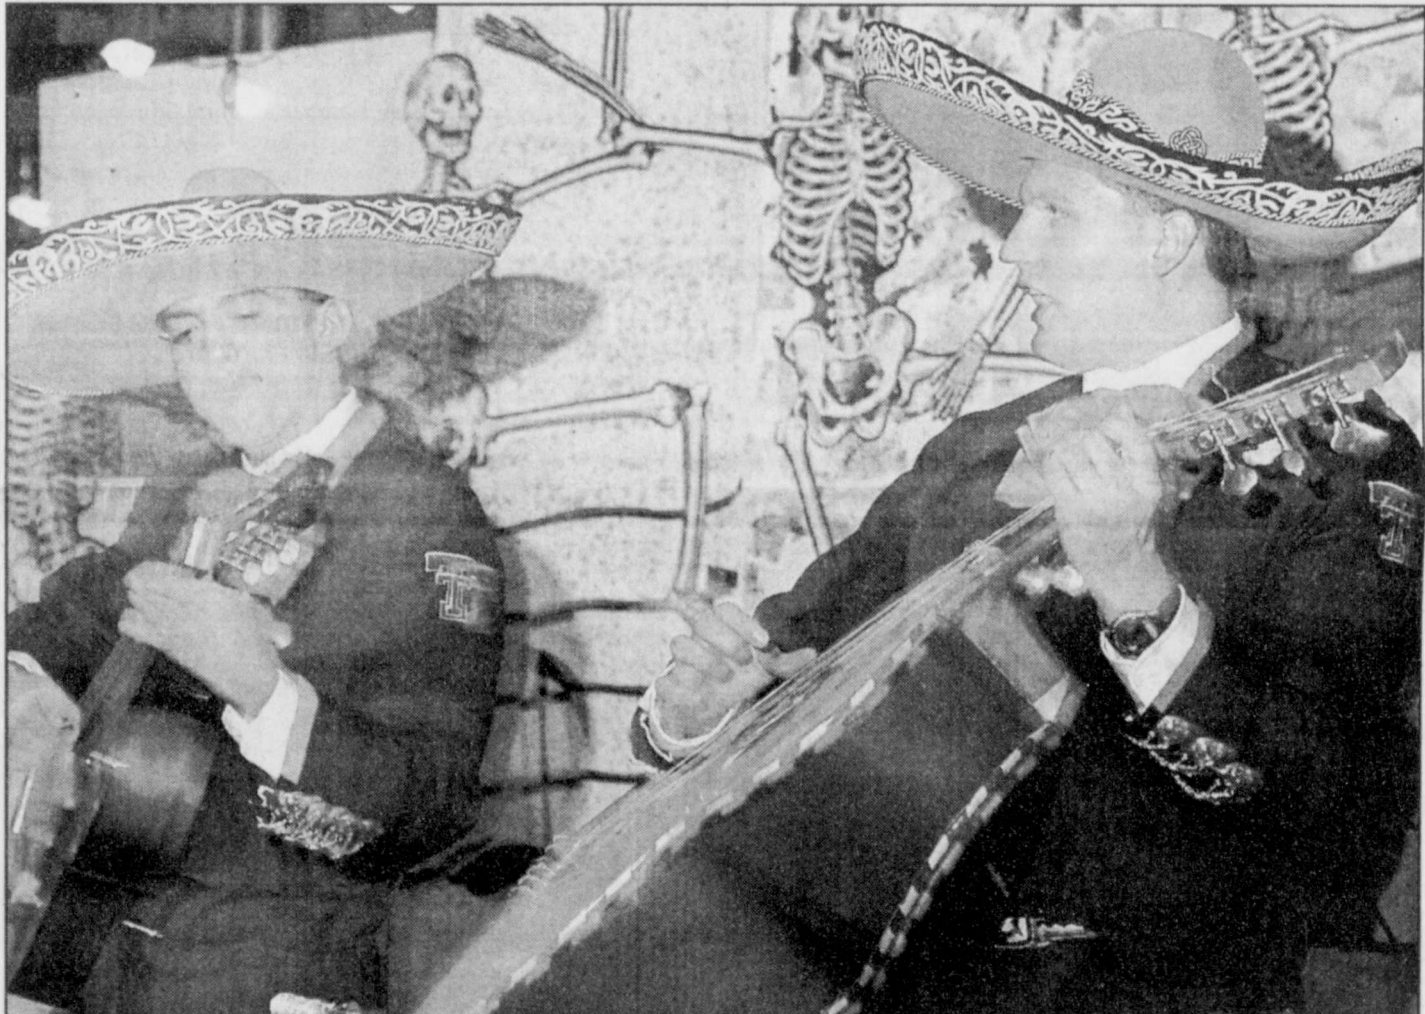

Gene West, vice president of operations, said the park and ride facility is a collaborative effort with Citibus.

"We're working with the folks over at Citibus to get a Federal Transportation Agency grant to build a park and ride facility," he said. "(Citibus) has already asked for the money. It looks like they may get some."

In the meantime, West said, university officials are trying to find locations where the

Banners disappear at Tech bus stops

By Jeff Lehr Staff Writer

An unknown culprit or culprits have stolen seven of the 10 Texas Tech tradition banners located in the bus stop shelters around campus.

Andrew Schoppe, president of the Student Government Association, said he noticed one of the signs missing two weeks ago and has since counted six more missing.

He said he still does not know who is responsible for the string of thefts, but is asking whoever is responsible to return the signs.

"We just want the dang things back," he said.

The vinyl signs are designed by the creative design studio in the Mass Communications building and cost $300 a piece, totaling $2,100.

Schoppe said the banners were created to help students and non-students know where they are on campus and to involve everyone in the traditions of Tech by including the Fight Song and Matador Song on the signs.

Sgt. Bryan Roberts, Tech police department spokesman, said nobody has come forward to return the signs; however, police are looking into the thefts.

"We were informed of the thefts Oct. 25, and currently the matter is still under investigation," he said.

Schoppe said he has sent a letter to ev-

Bush admits to drunken driving

WEST ALLIS, Wis. (AP) — Texas Gov. George W. Bush said Thursday he was arrested and pleaded guilty nearly 25 years ago to driving while under the influence of alcohol. "I'm not proud of that," he said.

Confirming reports that surfaced in the media five days before Election Day, the GOP presidential nominee said in a hurriedly arranged news conference, "I've often times said that years ago I made some mistakes. I occasionally drank too much, and I did on that night. I regret that it happened."

The incident was first reported by Fox News, based on a report prepared by a local affiliate in Maine. Bush said he had chosen to keep the incident private, but his hand was forced by the news outlets.

Suggesting that politics may have played a role in the incident, Bush said, "I think that's an interesting question. Why now? — (five) days before the election."

"I've got my suspicions," said Bush, not sharing them with a crowd of reporters surrounding him.

For months, the GOP nominee has refused to answer questions about any "youthful indiscretions," including whether he used illegal drugs in the 1960s and early 1970s. He stuck with the answer Thursday night, saying he has "been straight" with voters about his stance.

Chris Lehane, spokesman for the Gore campaign, said, "We're not commenting on it. It literally is something that is still developing."

Bush, who was 30 years old at the time, was pulled over near his family's Kennebunkport, Maine, summer home after visiting a bar with friends and a family member during the Labor Day weekend, aides said.

Bush's campaign staff jumped into action after the news broke, tracking down the arresting officer and quickly arranging a rare news conference — his first in a month.

Spokeswoman Mindy Tucker said Bush, who had been drinking beer, paid a $150 fine and had his driving privileges revoked in the state of Maine for a short period. His drivers' license in Texas, where Bush lived at the time, was not revoked or suspended, she said.

"I didn't want to talk about this in front of my daughters," said Bush, who is father of 18-year-old twins.

Calvin Bridges, identified as the arresting officer by the Bush campaign and documents made available by the Bush campaign, said in a telephone interview that he recalls driving home from work after midnight and spotting a car slipping briefly onto the shoulder before getting back on the road.

Bush, the driver, failed a road sobriety test and a second test in the police station, registering a 0.10 blood-alcohol level — the legal limit at the time, Bridges said.

Tech gives kids a head start

By Lindsay Roberts
Contributing Writer

Texas Tech and Early Head Start have developed a new program to benefit the university and the Lubbock community.

Last year, Tech applied for a grant to fund a Head Start program. Tech received the grant in June 1999 and has been developing the program ever since.

Tech Early Head Start Parkway/Chery Point has been opened since September.

Tech wanted to get involved with the Early Head Start program for various reasons, Ethridge said.

The program provides an additional lab site for early childhood majors, who are taking the human development class 3311.

This class is a lab class allowing students to practice teacher interactions with young children and gain knowledge on developmentally appropriate programs.

"Early Head Start has taken the burden off of the Child Development Research Center by providing an additional lab site for early childhood majors," said Stacy Johnson, instructor of human development at Tech.

"This additional lab site allows students the opportunity to work with a different population of children than what they would see in the labs on campus."

The EHS program offers the same opportunities to Tech students along with the opportunity to work with a diverse population of children.

"It has been a great experience to work with the children at Early Head Start," said Aretha Ross, a senior human development major from Lubbock. "I enjoy working with the children."

The program accepts children from the age of six weeks to three years old.

The childcare center has two classrooms, which have eight children in each room.

The teachers at EHS are certified. They have four certified teachers in addition to many assistants working every day. The ratio for EHS is one teacher to every four children, Ethridge said.

The EHS program works with the college work-study program on campus.

Students who qualify for work-study have the opportunity to work at the EHS center, Ethridge said.

"Early Head Start provides quality childcare for children and families who otherwise would not be able to afford programs like the Child Development Research Center at Texas Tech," said Johnny Castro, a child life specialist at Tech.

"High quality programs for infants and toddlers are far fewer to find. Early Head Start is an excellent program now available to children and families of Lubbock."

Early Head Start not only provides opportunities for early childhood majors, but also for food and nutrition graduate students, Ethridge said.

The graduate students are helping develop nutritious meals and snacks for the children.

"Starting this program has been very challenging. It was hard to start brand new from scratch and produce a quality childcare center," Ethridge said. "It satisfies my need to bring education to a population that does not often see how Tech can benefit the community."

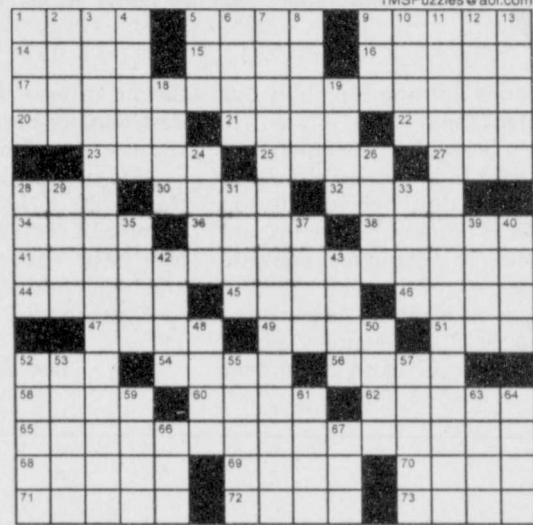

Stacy Johnson, assistant director for the CDRC at Texas Tech, reads nursery rhymes to two-year-old DaNazha Welford during playtime Thursday afternoon.

Students get Washington, D.C., experience

By Jeff Lehr
Staff Writer

Several Texas Tech students are gaining valuable experience this fall working for U.S. representatives in Washington, D.C.

U.S. Reps. Larry Combest, R-19th District, and Lamar Smith, R-21st District, both represent Texas and employ a number of students as part of the President's Congressional Internship Program.

Kendra Campbell, a senior history major from Ransom Canyon, began her internship in Combest's office in September and will continue working through mid-December. So far, she said the experience has been something she will never forget.

"It has really shaped my future for me and has given me the opportunity to better reach my goals," she said.

Campbell hopes to one day work in Washington, performing public services in international relations.

She already attended school overseas where she studied international public policy.

Elly Gonzales works for Smith and said she has an interest in immigration issues — a topic Smith has made one of his top priorities.

Gonzales, a communication studies maior from Puerto Rico, said she would like to pursue a career in international communications and thinks her internship will help immensely.

"It's a lot of fun, and you get to meet some pretty famous people," she said.

Both Campbell and Gonzales attended an education fund raiser earlier this semester where they met Stevie Wonder.

Among other people the two interns have met are Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and House Speaker Dennis Hastert. "I'll be walking down the hall of the Capitol building and see (Sen.) Ted Kennedy," Campbell said. "It's just such an opportunity that you don't feel overwhelmed. You just feel excited to be there."

Gonzales said she even got the opportunity, along with Campbell and several others, to attend an event on the south lawn of the White House, where the prime minister of India was present.

Ron Phillips, special assistant to Tech President David Schmidly, coordinates the internship program and said the interns from Tech have somewhat of an edge over other participating schools.

"We have higher scholarships for our students and more accessible living quarters in Washington," he said.

Each of the six interns from Tech received a $4,000 scholarship for the program.

"We've also located an apartment about a block and a half away from the Capitol building," Schmidly said.

Gonzales said the apartment that houses the Tech interns is convenient for them.

"It takes only three minutes to get to work, while the other interns from A&M and UT have to pay to take a bus or a cab," she said.

With Nov. 7 right around the corner, Campbell said the atmosphere in the Capitol building is very exciting.

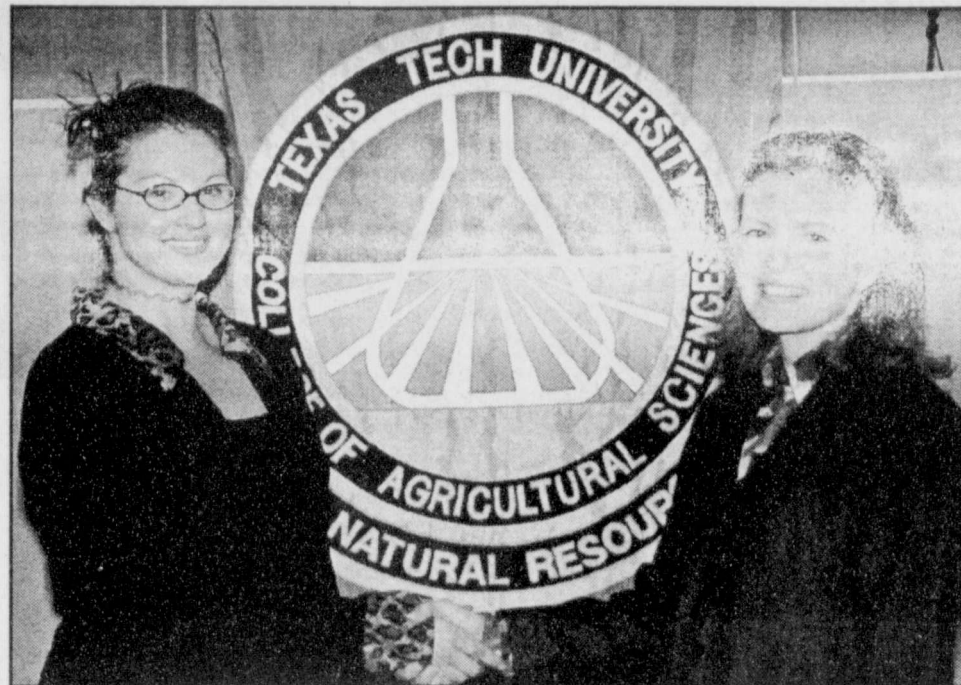

"Things are a little more partisan this close to Election Day, but it just makes you understand what it means to be involved this closely," she said.

Campbell also said that since she arrived in Washington, she and her roommates have become "CSPAN junkies."

The internship program, which has been operative for two years, usually receives around 40-50 applicants each semester; an estimate that Phillips said varies every year.

Applicants are required to write an essay, along with their applications, that describes why they think the internship will be valuable to them.

Phillips said many of the students who have interned have gone on to hold various government positions.

Lorenzo Einspörne/The University Daily

volved around whether or not the Senate at Texas Tech should begin commenting on the actions and traditions at other universities.

"I don't feel like it is the place of our Student Senate to comment on their actions," said College of Arts and Sciences Senator-at-Large John Dorff. "It will be embarrassing to our Senate to start commenting on the traditions of other universities."

Another resolution, which was not on the agenda for the meeting, focusing on bringing out awareness of a tragedy concerned the death of a Tech student Stefanie Hill.

Hill was murdered June 29 in her apartment. While Lubbock Police Department officials have followed several leads, no suspects have been identified in the case.

Sigma Phi Lambda representative Kari Markgraf distributed white ribbons at the meeting signifying the life and memory of Hill.

She said she hoped the ribbons would remind people about Hill and the fact that her murder remains unsolved.

"These ribbons signify the memory of Stefanie Hill and her life," she said. "I would ask you to wear them on your backpacks and tell people about them when they ask."

Arts and Sciences Sen. Jeremy

Granger said the resolution supporting the wearing of white ribbons both celebrated Hill's life and endorsed the university's desire to aid in the investigation. Earlier this semester, the administration donated $9,000 to police to aid them in receiving information about the murder.

"We want to celebrate Stefanie Hill's life and keep her memory fresh in people's minds, especially while the investigation is still ongoing," he said. "We also want to support the administration's donations."

Other measures taken by the Senate included the approval of a resolution to combine the Student Recreation Center construction fee and the money allotted to the Rec Center from the student service fee. The Senate also passed a resolution to re-implement the Contact-a-Senator program, which is geared toward increasing communication between student organizations and the Senate.

Six new senators also were sworn in to replace many of the members who have resigned this fall. Other members of the Senate who had missed the first meeting were also sworn in.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In Thursday's UD, it was erroneously reported that the Senate has declined by 6 percent of its members, the figure is actually 13 percent.)

North parking lot to be closed on Monday

Beginning Monday morning, a portion of the north commuter lot next to Jones SBC Stadium will be closed off to Texas Tech students.

City officials will close the lot for the entire day Monday because of a Lubbock Independent School District function at the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium. The lot will reopen Tuesday morning.

The portion of the lot that will be closed is in the northern half of the parking lot from aisle A, next to the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, to aisle G.

Eric Crouch, manager of Traffic and Parking Operations at Tech, said students will have no problem parking in the west commuter lot on Indiana Avenue.

Long live Napster

Boo hoo for the music industry. The poor rich executives pouted and pouted until they finally got what they want. Profits from Napster.

Now Lars Ulrich and Dr. Dre can quit whining about the free music sharing community utilized by more than 38 million users. C'mon guys, we've seen your houses on "MTV Cribs," and it's pretty obvious business is not suffering because of file sharing on the Internet. Or do you mean to tell me you want to add another car to your six-car garage full of automobiles that cost more than I'll probably make in my life? Please.

Greg Okuhara

Well, it now seems the capitalism bug has bitten Shawn Fanning. The creator of Napster finally succumbed to the legal pressure from the five major labels: Sony, EMI, Universal, Warner and BMG. Officials from Napster and Bertelsmann AG, the parent company of BMG, announced Tuesday they would convert the free service into a subscription-based community offering music from artists under the BMG label. Artists under BMG's catalog include Christina Aguilera, Santana and the Dave Matthews Band.

Although the logistics of the deal have yet to be hammered out, subscribers to the service can expect a monthly fee of about $4.95. BMG will, in turn, lend Napster money to develop the new software, and once the service is up and running, they will drop their lawsuit against them. I don't blame Fanning at all for what he did, he'll probably become a billionaire as a result of the deal. Now he can live like the rock stars who hate him and his software.

The downside to this agreement is users only will have access to BMG musicians, which boasts only the fourth-largest list of artists. Oh yeah, and there's also that fee thing.

The two sides both agree that for the venture to be successful, they'll need the support and allegiance of the other four major record labels. Obviously, one thing that made Napster so popular was you could find virtually any artist on the server. This won't be the case unless the others jump on the bandwagon. Sony officials didn't seem to be enthusiastic about the deal Tuesday.

"This alliance does nothing to address the millions of past acts of copyright infringement by Napster, or those being committed by the company on an ongoing basis," said one Sony spokesman.

Excuse me, let me grab my violin and play a teary song for you.

Here's what I don't understand about the music industry's beef with Napster. Why single out Napster? Why aren't the companies of CD burners being slapped with lawsuits? Or makers of cassette tapes? What about all those years of people taping songs they liked when they heard them on the radio?

Here, I have an idea. Let's just halt the production of all CD players, burners, MiniDiscs, tapes and tape players. That should slow or stop the piracy of artists' music. Better yet, let's just quit listening to any devices that play music.

In case you couldn't tell, I'm not happy with the whole situation involving Napster. This was an extremely innovative idea by Fanning when he started the company a couple of years ago. Since the majority of MTV's programming now involves little or no music, fans had to get their fix somewhere else. Even when MTV did play videos, it was polluted with teen-bopper music and Ricky Martin. Commercial radio is just as bad. College students don't want to hear 98% or "Who Let the Dogs Out" every 10 minutes.

Then along comes a music file-sharing company where you can download any song you want to, even Britney Spears' music. No more commercials to listen to between songs. No more annoying disc jockeys. No more reruns of the "Real World" from 1993. Now it's no more free music.

The record labels argue that Napster is infringing on copyright freedoms. They released figures that say they are losing millions of dollars because people won't buy the CDs if they can just download the songs.

I don't think that's the case. I think you'll find that the majority of heavy users of Napster are college students. We don't have the discretionary income to purchase CDs all the time. Experts agree that the purchasing power these days lies with the adolescents — the prepubescent kids who by 18 billion copies of the new 'NSync album. But college students will still flock to concerts and live shows, which is what ultimately will help generate album sales for an artist.

My point is that it seems like Napster is selling out. It's a smart move from a business point, but kind of hypocritical of the company that was labeled as the rebel for standing up to the big bad record labels a couple of months ago.

So, once Napster turns into a subscription-based service, I'm going to use my $4.95 per month to purchase blank CDs so I can rip off the record labels some other way.

Greg Okuhara is a senior journalism major from The Woodlands. He just remembered he doesn't have a CD burner to complete his rip off scheme.

Libertarian Party a growing populous in West Texas

Texas Republicans used to take the votes of conservatives for granted — much like how the Democratic Party has taken the votes of blacks for granted for so many years.

But, that may be changing — at least in West Texas. The aftermath of the losing 1998 Texas Democratic campaign — which saw a clean sweep by Republicans for all statewide elected offices from the governor on down — has left only two Democrats running for statewide office this year.

Sandeep Rao

But, even more surprising than the Democratic downturn is the upswing of third parties — specifically, the Libertarian Party — as the primary force to challenge Republican strongholds.

Commentators on the national level have been preoccupied with the third party challenge of the Green Party to the Democratic Party. But, lost in the mix, is the challenge to Republicans from Libertarians on the local level.

No longer content with the third party title, Libertarians offer the sole challenge to Republicans for most Lubbock countywide offices and run far more candidates than the receding Democrats for statewide positions.

"Most West Texas conservatives want smaller government, and that is what the Libertarian Party is about," said David DeLamar, Lubbock County's Libertarian Party chairman. "We have never had an elected Libertarian, numbering over 700, support a tax increase or expansion of government."

Fiscal conservatives appear to be at a loss with the front men for both major parties with Vice President Al Gore, who favors the largest peacetime expansion of the federal government, and Gov. George W. Bush, who runs on a watered-down Republican platform that does not propose cuts in any government programs or departments.

With fiscal conservatism giving way to more moderate "compassionate conservatism" within the Republican Party, Libertarian candidates, who refuse to accept taxpayer money on principle, have the opportunity to attract disenfranchised conservatives by seriously tackling bread-and-butter Republican issues of smaller government and tax cuts.

Gore has given lip service to the notion of smaller government in his race to the center. To keep up, Bush has also had to make promises on spending a portion of the fictional budget surplus in order to match the image of a friendlier government.

When payments exceed services received at the local grocer, a vendor is typically expected to give the customer a refund for overpayment. But in Washington the two leading candidates have argued over what to do with excessive payments by calling it a surplus.

Fortunately, in Texas, fiscal conservatives intent on voting their conscience have the option of turning their backs on both, knowing that the governor will easily win his home state on Tuesday.

In Texas erstwhile, blue dog Democrats only had to masquerade as moderate Republicans in order to gain votes off straight ticket Republican voters. Democratic defections to the Republican Party in the name of political survival only helped to further the GOP's move away from the right.

As a result, West Texas conservatives often had to hold their nose and vote for the closest approximation of representation of their beliefs. But, with Libertarian candidates challenging Republican candidates for many Lubbock countywide offices, grass roots conservatives may no longer have to take the moderate tendencies and political expediency of country club Republicans in stride.

If anything, a stronger Libertarian Party should free the GOP from the complacency of easily receiving the conservative vote by default. Just like in the marketplace, competition for a valuable commodity — here, conservative votes — should help spur greater attention to issues of interest to conservatives.

It may take awhile for religious conservatives to become entirely accepting of free market-based solutions offered by Libertarian candidates. Nonetheless, the threat of third party competition with the allure of smaller government offers fiscal conservatives greater choice at election time.

A rapidly growing Libertarian membership combined with a feeble Democratic Party has the potential to turn the face of Texas politics from once purely Democrat-Republican battles to ideologically closer Libertarian-Republican challenges.

Next Tuesday, West Texas may serve as a fertile proving ground to break the two-party hegemony of Republicans and Democrats with competition for a new home for disillusioned conservatives.

Tech Red Raiders get rowdy at third pep rally

By J.T. Leeson
Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Student Government Association will host its Rowdy Raider Rally today at 6 p.m. The rally is the third of four planned for the 2000 football season and will take place behind the university seal at the Broadway entrance of the Tech campus.

The rally's theme is "Mask the Horns." Several hundred masks are to be given away to rally attendees.

The rallies are new this year and Tech SGA President Andrew Schoppe has anticipated the rallies and is ushering them in as a Tech tradition.

"This has been a great joint effort with the Spirit Coordinating Committee," Schoppe said.

"I hope that we will have a high turnout at the rally, and the rally will get everyone excited about the UT game."

The Goin' Band from Raiderland, Saddle Tramps, High Riders, cheerleaders and pom squads as well as the Gunfire Kickline are all scheduled to attend the rally.

Tech President David Schmidly, Athletic Director Gerald Myers, Red Raider football coach Mike Leach and several players are expected as well, Schoppe said.

To engage campus and community spirit, the Tech Spirit Coordinating Committee will award Tech spirit trophies.

The trophies will be presented to the most-spirited residence hall, University Avenue business located from fourth to 19th streets and Lubbock school group.

"The trophy presentations and crowd's enthusiasm ought to give coach Leach and the players something to feed off and get us ready to whoop up on UT Saturday," Schoppe said.

After changing the initial plans for the location of the rally, it was moved to the university seal to be coupled with the Saddle Tramp tradition of guarding the seal.

The tradition is upheld from sunset on Friday until 8 a.m. Monday every year on Texas A&M and UT weekends to preserve vandalism on the campus by the opposing universities.

"It's not like we'll be sitting out guarding the seal, the fountain and Soapsuds with guns and rifles — it's grown into a tradition," says Saddle Tramp President Chris Keith.

"This rally ought to be a great opportunity for Tech students to take part in the Tech traditions, as well as our tradition of guarding the seal."

Keith, like Schoppe, believes the rallies will permeate into Tech traditions for years to come.

"These rallies will give students the opportunity to understand and learn traditions and then practice them so that they'll be honored and respected," Keith said.

"These rallies run hand-and-hand with President Schmidly's pride and pageantry campaign."

Like the campaign, Keith said the rally will get students excited about the Tech tradition as well as the football game.

The final rally will be in preparation for the OSU game, Nov. 10. The time and location have yet to be announced.

Biblical age wooden ship found; researchers amazed by find

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team led by underwater explorer Robert Ballard has discovered an "absolutely astounding" wooden ship — perhaps 1,500 years old — in the Black Sea off the coast of Turkey.

Artifacts recovered nearby that scientists hoped would date back to the time of the biblical flood turned out to be disappointingly modern. But the site itself may still show human habitation from that ancient date.

"What we saw was absolutely astounding," said nautical archaeologist Cheryl Ward. The ship's mast is still standing and stanchions rest nearby, held together with wooden pegs.

"No archaeologist has even been able to study anything like this," she said in a news conference at the National Geographic Society. "We have never been able to look at the deck of an ancient ship."

The unique oxygen-free deep water of the Black Sea allowed the ship to be preserved without the normal worm damage that affects wooden vessels, and Ballard said they expect other such treasures to be found.

The researchers plan to return to the area near Sinop, Turkey next year and work in the sea off the coast of Bulgaria.

Dealing with such a well-preserved ship presents a problem, Ballard said. In the past, shipwrecks of that age had all the wood eaten away and only the contents remained.

ery resident assistant in the residence halls around campus in case the responsible person or persons lives in the dorms.

"The letter just informed the RAs about the thefts and asked them to report anyone who they know might be involved," he said.

Since a police report has already been filed with the Tech police department, Schoppe said if one person is responsible, it could result in 180 days to two years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

However, if one person is responsible for the theft of only one sign, that person could face a class B misdemeanor, resulting in up to 180 days in jail and/or a $2,000 fine.

Schoppe is asking those responsible to return the signs, which may be done anonymously, to the door of the SGA office, 230 University Center at anytime.

He said he hopes he does not have to replace the signs with new ones but instead put the old ones back where they belong.

"They can take their chances with the options they have, or they can be however risky they want," he said.

Kalf Fry arrives tonight

Annual fund raiser celebrates 20th year

By Angel Wolfe and Leslie Folmar
Staff Writers

Football season, which brings with it hopes for a bowl game for our beloved Red Raiders, also brings the annual fund-raising event of Kalf Fry.

Kalf Fry, which is in its 20th year, is a combined effort from Kappa Alpha and Phi Delta Theta in their annual philanthropy event.

This year's concert will include local band Cooder Graw, Jerry Jeff Walker and headlining artist Willie Nelson. Kalf Fry starts today at 8:30 p.m. The doors will open at 7:30 p.m. at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

The fraternities will be raising money for their charity, the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Lubbock.

Tickets to the event sold out yesterday at 1:30 p.m. This year marks the fourth consecutive year tickets have sold out the day before the concert.

A.J. Lipka, a junior public relations major from Katy and the KA chairman for Kalf Fry, said last year's Kalf Fry brought an impressive amount of money to their donation.

"Last year we gave a $10,000 donation that was the biggest Greek organization donation ever," Lipka said.

Both fraternities are expecting the same results from this year's event. Between Jerry Jeff Walker and Willie Nelson's stage change, a $7,500 check will be donated to MDA, an average of the past two donations.

"Our original line-up was Cooder Graw, Chris LeDeux and Willie Nelson," Lipka said. "We found out about three weeks ago that Chris LeDeux was scheduled for a liver transplant and would not be able to perform for six months."

Chris LeDeux is guaranteed a full recovery, Lipka said.

By rearranging some money, Phi Delta and KA were able to get Jerry Jeff Walker, but all the advertisements had to be redone.

Corby Jastrow, a senior public relations major from Marble Falls and the Phi Delta chairman for Kalf Fry, said he is especially excited about this year's Kalf Fry.

"This year our goal is $13,500," Jastrow said. "I'm most excited this year, one, because it's the 20th year and also because Willie (Nelson) hasn't been in Lubbock in three or four years, and (I'm) also excited about Tech beating Texas on Saturday."

MUSICIAN WILLIE NELSON WILL HEADLINE THE 20TH ANNUAL KALF FRY TONIGHT AT LUBBOCK MUNICIPAL COLISEUM.

Kathie Lee not let on "Live!" set

NEW YORK (AP) — "Live with Regis" is apparently a Kathie Lee-free zone.

Executives at the syndicated talk show have banned Kathie Lee Gifford, who is promoting a new album, from appearing and even advertising on the show she co-starred on for 15 years until July.

Their explanation is they want to give the guest hosts who have been working with Regis Philbin the chance to make an impression without the distraction of Gifford.

Gifford made a lengthy appearance on the "Today" show last Friday, chatting with Katie Couric and Matt Lauer and singing, directly competing with her former show.

Asked by Lauer why she had no plans to sing for Philbin, Gifford said, "I'd love to. I think they got a little angry when we booked the 'Today' show so soon."

Gifford's record company, Universal Records, made a 30-second advertisement for her album, "Heart of a Woman," and wanted to place it on her former show. The ads were run locally twice in Los Angeles.

Then the word came down: No more Kathie Lee. "We need to gain some physical and commercial separation from Kathie Lee during the search for her replacement," said Tom Kane, president and general manager of WABC-TV in New York, which produces the show.

"We can all see a day when she'll appear on the show again as a guest and when her commercial endeavors are promoted during the show — but only after we've been able to reestablish ourselves with a new co-host," he said.

Producers seem no closer to hiring a new co-host for Philbin since Gifford left on July 28. There's been little motive to hurry, either, since ratings have gone up and "Live with Regis" has firmly established itself as the second most popular syndicated talk show, behind "Oprah."

The show's executive producer, Michael Gelman, has partly attributed the ratings jump to Gifford's absence, saying she was a polarizing force for many viewers.

Clinton era brought president movies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Harrison Ford and Bill Pullman played him as an action hero. Jack Nicholson depicted him as a sniveling Martian appeaser. Michael Douglas portrayed him as the world's most powerful boyfriend.

There's John Travolta's Clinton clone in "Primary Colors," Jeff Bridges' zesty chief executive in the current "The Contender" and Martin Sheen's non-nonsense boss on television's "The West Wing," among dozens of portrayals.

Whatever the reason — saturation news coverage, an obsession with celebrity, President Clinton's personality, White House scandals — the past eight years have been a fertile time for Hollywood explorations of the presidency.

"Clinton seems more accessible to Hollywood and clearly, he is showbiz charismatic himself," says screenwriter Joe Eszterhas, who wrote last summer's best seller "American Rhapsody," a ribald musing on Clinton's sex life and show-business connections.

Public fascination with the presidency probably has been fed by the growth of cable-TV news channels and their detailed White House coverage.

"When you get all that news coverage, some of it is like soap operas in itself," said Gilbert Robinson, chief operating officer of the Center for the Study of the Presidency.

And Clinton's earthy, regular-guy image made the office seem less remote.

Lurid details of his sexual indiscretions further eroded the loftiness of the job, opening up more flawed and human takes on the president.

Smashing Pumpkins prepare to give final tunes away

■ Despite group's break up, fans have the chance to own final albums.

By Andrew Howard
Staff Writer

Smashing Pumpkins fans may be saddened by the fact that the band is breaking up, but they have a chance to own the Smashing Pumpkins' newest and final album. The only problem is that fans cannot go out and buy it. The record will never be officially released.

After fairly disappointing sales of their last two albums, Adore and MACHINA/the machines of god, and several line-up changes, the Smashing Pumpkins planned to break up after their 2000 Sacred + Profane world tour and release an album of previously unavailable songs recorded last year.

Virgin, the band's record label, thought the new album would be even less commercially successful and would not release it.

So what's the answer? They could let Virgin have their way and discontinue their thousands of die-hard fans, try their luck with another unappreciative label or just give the music away.

The answer is Machina II: the friends and enemies of modern music.

Billy Corgan, lead singer and guitarist of the Pumpkins, made 25 vinyl copies of the new album, gave them to a few friends and told them to put it on the Internet as soon as possible.

They worked overnight, encoding the entire album into MP3 format, and put them up on their Web sites for anyone to download for free.

Machina II consists of 25 songs and clocks in at about 1 1/2 hours, making it a double album on CD.

While the album features some of the band's best work, it is definitely a fan's record.

Included are alternate versions of recent B-sides and songs from MACHINA, as well as completely unheard material.

Also featured on Machina II are "Dross," "Speed Kills," and two versions of "Glass Theme" and "If There is a God" and others that were debuted during the band's 1999 Arising tour.

The songs are much more hard rock than the techno styles that dominated the last two SP albums.

Hardcore fans have been trading bootlegs of the tour, which was the first and last tour to feature all of the original members since drummer Jimmy Chamberlain left the band in 1996.

Bassist D'arcy quit after recording the Machina sessions, to be replaced by former Hole bassist Melissa Auf Der Maur.

The very Napster-friendly stand against the record companies that Corgan and the Pumpkins took will help to revolutionize the way the world gets its music.

The hard-core Pumpkinheads across the Internet have already taken the original 25 sources and spread them all across the web.

There are innumerable sites offering the album in mp3s, and many have the original vinyl artwork, as well as artwork submitted by fans.

Some good Web sites look on to find the album are machina2.cjb.net, lost-vortex.com, and spf.org.

Nun disciplined by church

BOSTON (AP) — A nun who was fired for helping perform baptism rites reserved for priests won't receive a Jesuit center's highest honor this year — if ever.

Sister Jeannette Normandin was to receive the annual Imago Dei "in the image of God" award from Boston's Jesuit Urban Center during a Nov. 17 ceremony.

But Jesuit officials decided to postpone the dinner after Normandin was fired last week for violating a church law by anointing children during their baptisms.

Her punishment sparked a furor in the community. That prompted the center to postpone the dinner until next spring.

"It's simply to have the event in a peaceful time," the Rev. Thomas Carroll, director of the center, said Thursday.

Carroll said Normandin hasn't been stripped of the award.

"So far, that is not the issue," he said.

But her fitness for the award may be in question after her violation of church law. Carroll refused to comment on that.

"We reflect on many things in weekly staff meetings," he said. "I'm sure we will talk about these things."

Church officials believe Normandin was making a political statement when she helped baptize the adoptive sons of two gay couples Oct. 22. Under church law, baptisms can only be performed by ordained ministers, except in an emergency. Normandin has said women should be ordained as priests.

Normandin and the Rev. George

Winchester, who watched as she performed the baptisms, were both fired and were ordered to move out of the Jesuit center.

Normandin said Thursday she doesn't believe her actions were wrong.

"In my heart, I don't think I'm out of sync with God and have done a horrible thing," she said.

Normandin, a member of the Sisters of Saint Anne, is known in the city for her work with women in prison, homeless women and women with AIDS. She had worked on the center's pastoral staff for 11 years.

She said she understood why the ceremony has been delayed.

"I'm not disappointed," she said. "I think it might give us some time to settle down."

Anna Nicole Smith was going to be adopted by late husband

HOUSTON (AP) — The millionaire oilman who married Anna Nicole Smith had earlier considered adopting the Playboy Playmate, according to the businessman's former estate lawyer.

Harvey Sorensen testified

Wednesday at Smith's inheritance trial in Harris County Probate Court that the late J. Howard Marshall II weighed the options of marriage and adoption while taking into account how each would affect his taxes.

But in the end, Sorensen said, the tycoon — then 89 years old — really wanted to marry the 26-year-old former stripper and Guess? jeans model. The two married in 1994.

Patrick Kennedy in hot water over boat rental damages

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A boat charter company says Rep. Patrick Kennedy owes it $28,000 for damaging and abandoning a 42-foot yacht he rented over the summer.

Kennedy, 33, burned out an engine, damaged a sail, ran down the batteries and left the boat strewn with clothes and food before abandoning it on Martha's Vineyard in August, Atlantic Navigation Co. of Mystic, Conn., said Thursday.

Kennedy said he wasn't responsible for the damage. "It was a lemon," the Rhode Island Democrat said.

His chief of staff, Tony Marcella, said the congressman repeatedly called Atlantic Navigation to make repairs, then left the boat with a shipyard that works with the company.

Kennedy offered to pay the $450 cleaning charge only. Marcella said the congressman has referred the case to his insurance company.

"We're not going to bow to them and their threats," Marcella said.

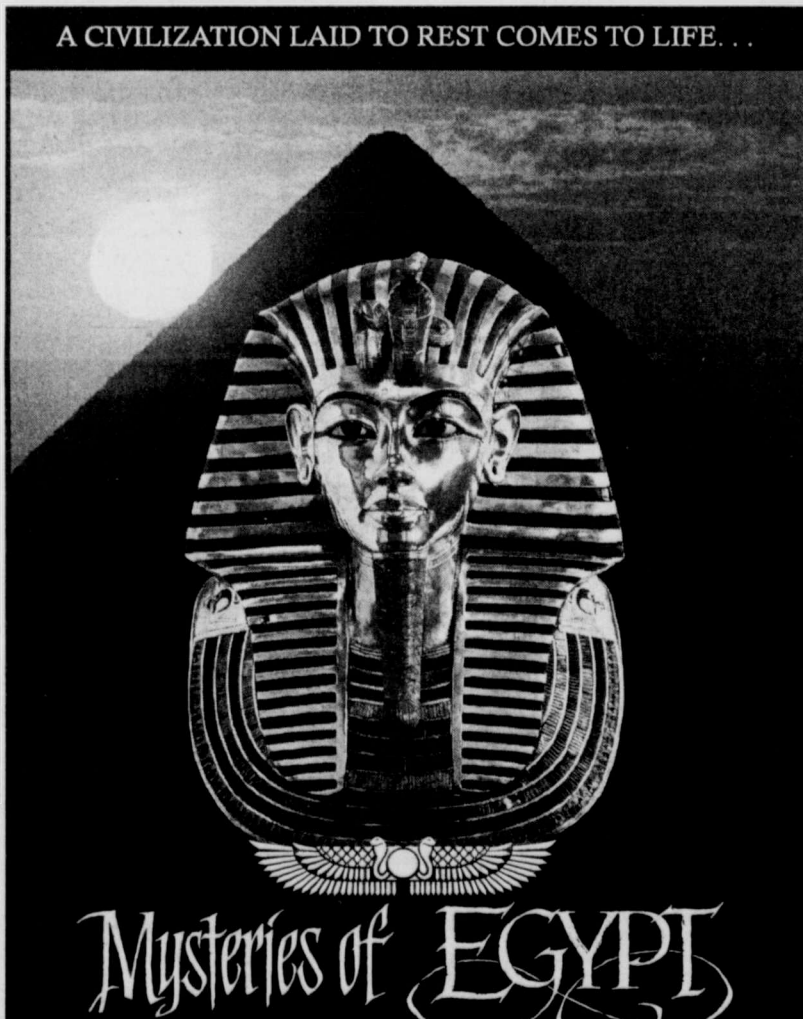

Atlantic Navigation owner Bill Shilson said Kennedy's insurer offered to pay only half the repair and towing costs.

Women's tennis close season

By Tamara Metcalfe
Contributing Writer

The Texas Tech women's tennis team is on a mission.

After an upsetting season last year, the squad has bounced back this fall and improved. They will set out this weekend for the final tournament of the fall season, and freshman Kendall Brooks said the team is ready to take care of business.

"This is definitely a huge tournament for us, and this is where we can get our rankings," said Brooks, who will compete in singles and doubles action.

"We have been working hard all year, and we are ready to get a few wins in."

Six Red Raiders will travel to this weekend's 2000 ITA Regional Tournament in College Station, and Tech coach Virginia Brown said she can't wait.

"I feel this weekend that we will make a marking and show people that we have a good team," said Brown, who is in her second year as head coach at Tech. "The people running the tournament know we have a good team this year, so they are allowing us to play more athletes."

The tournament begins today and runs through Monday. Twenty-eight universities will compete, including all of the Big 12 schools in Texas.

The tournament will consist of the main singles draw of 128 players. A consolation draw consisting of 64 players will begin following the round of 128, and a second-round consolation will begin following the main round of 64. There will also be a doubles draw of 64 with a first-round consolation.

Tech doubles have had strong performances this season and look to continue their performance this weekend. Brooks and sophomore Beverly Dawson will team up in search of their third straight victory as they head into the weekend 2-0.

Dawson said the pair is improving each tournament as they learn to play with each other.

"We are still fairly new and trying to get to know each other," said Dawson, who is a junior college transfer. "The fact that we are good friends on and off the court helps us tremendously. I think we will do well."

Senior Alenka Ovin and sophomore Barbara Schraml, ranked No. 1 and 2 on the Tech women's tennis team, will also compete in doubles. This is the third time they have teamed up this fall. Brooks, Dawson, Ovin, Schraml, sophomore Sonnia Orellana and junior co-captain Noel Ruiz will be competing for the singles title at the tournament. Orellana is looking to better her 7-3 record on the trip.

Brown said the greatest contribution to the fall squad is the team unity.

"When you stick many girls together for so long, it can get really tough," Brown said. "But, our team is really laid back and relaxed. They constantly cheer and compliment each other. The fact they are playing like a team will help us the most."

Cunningham returns to Philadelphia

IRVING (AP) — Focusing only on good memories, Randall Cunningham is actually looking forward to his return to Veterans Stadium, where he spent the first 11 years of his NFL career.

Whether Philadelphia fans will be happy to see him is another question.

"I really don't know," Cunningham said. "Of course, everybody wants to be welcomed. But it's not always how you want it."

Cunningham's love hate relationship with Philadelphia fans ended on a high note with a standing ovation in his final game three years ago. He sat out the 1996 seasons, then never made it there during three years with the Minnesota Vikings.

Tech volleyball looks to cage Tigers

By Matt Muench
Staff Writer

Playing on the road may be the toughest thing to do in the Big 12 Conference.

Averaging the second biggest crowds in the nation and posting three squads in the Top 25 poll, Texas Tech coach Jeff Nelson said playing away from home in the Big 12 is always rough and something that must be dealt with.

Nelson and the Red Raiders will try to deal with this task when they travel to Missouri for a 7 p.m. duel with the Tigers on Saturday.

"It is about having mental strength when you go on the road," Nelson said. "We have to deal with fans and Missouri will bring in a good crowd. We just have to stay focused."

The Raiders will go for their second season sweep of an opponent this weekend after beating rival Texas in three games on Wednesday to notch their first season sweep of the Longhorns in school history.

The last time the Raiders (20-5 overall, 8-5 Big 12) and Tigers battled, Tech won the match in five games at the United Spirit Arena.

Outside hitter Ann Romjue said revenge will be on the mind of the Tigers and added it would be nice to get a second consecutive season sweep.

"They will want to win and try and split with us," she said. "We have to just take care of our side of the net and keep rolling from our win against Texas."

The Tigers (19-4 overall, 10-4 Big 12) are ranked 24th in the American Volleyball Coaches Association and since their loss to Tech in September, have won seven of their last nine matches.

The two losses were to Texas A&M and Nebraska who are the top two teams in the conference.

"Missouri is a good team that is playing real well," Romjue said. "It is going to be a great match because the last time we met it was close. Because of that, it opens great thoughts for this one."

Although Romjue said playing on the road is a grueling task for squads in the Big 12, the Raiders have a 3-3 record away from the United Spirit Arena in conference play.

Their last defeat was a five-game loss to Kansas State in front of over 1,500 fans.

Tech will have to fight off more fans in Missouri, as the Tigers are drawing more than 2,000 fans at the Hearnes Center this center.

Romjue said the crowd and noise level are something the Red Raiders can't think about.

"We don't try and worry about our surroundings," she said. "We just want to go out on the court and play good volleyball."

Nelson said to win on Saturday, his squad must play with the same energy Tech had in the win over the Longhorns.

He said Tech has to stay consistent with emotion when they are on the court.

"I feel that if we can maintain a level of success, we can maintain our level of energy," he said. "I think if we can be successful up there, it will help out for the rest of our season."

Nelson said the Tech defense will have to contain Tiger outside hitter Lisa Morris.

Morris is the Tigers leading hitter and will get the most sets according to Nelson.

"We have been blocking real well and playing good defense," said Nelson, whose squad is second in the conference in blocking. "The defense has carried us the whole season, but I hope our offense can pick it up a little."

Romjue said she believes the win over Texas will not go to her head because it was the first match in weeks that she felt like Tech played a complete match.

"Right now I think we are playing well and we are at the top of our game," Romjue said. "I think because we played so well against Texas, we will not forget it, and we won't let the win get to our heads."

Following the match with Missouri, the Red Raiders will have six matches left on their regular season schedule.

Three of the matches will be at home and three of the matches will be on the road.

Will Clark calls it quits

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "The Thrill" is gone.

St. Louis Cardinals first baseman Will Clark, known for his intense stare and sweet left-handed swing, retired Thursday, ending a 15-year career that began in San Francisco and included stops in Texas and Baltimore.

The announcement was a surprise considering the way Clark played over the final two months of the season after coming to the Cardinals in a trade and subbing for the injured Mark McGwire.

"In every player's career, sooner or later, you're going to have to make a decision to move on," Clark said. "The first part of my life was based on being a baseball player. The second part of my life is going to be based on being a daddy and a husband."

Tech hopes to return favor to UT

By Patrick Gonzales
Staff Writer

Sure it was embarrassing, and sure it would be nice to get some revenge, but Texas Tech receiver Tim Baker has other goals in mind when his team faces No. 20 Texas at 6 p.m. Saturday at Jones SBC Stadium.

Last season, the Longhorns (6-2 overall, 4-1 Big 12) handed Tech its second worst loss in school history, a 58-7 demolishing in Austin.

But somehow, Baker and the Red Raiders (6-3 overall, 2-3 Big 12) seemed to have forgotten the loss and have only one mission Saturday.

"I've told people this entire season that last year seems like it was a millennium ago because there were so many changes that went on in this program," Baker said. "We do want a little revenge because of what happened last year, but this is a new season and a new team."

The new-look Red Raiders defeated Kansas 45-39 last week, and now are one victory from becoming bowl eligible.

Against the Jayhawks, Tech had one of its best offensive performances, totaling 489 yards and a season high 45 points.

Tech coach Mike Leach said he feels like his offensive unit is gelling more and more every week.

"Each week that they're together in practice, I think they get better," Leach said.

Helping the offense's success has been the improved play of Tech receivers.

The Red Raiders' receiving combo of Derek Dorris and Baker rank No. 1 and 2, respectively, in the conference.

Also pitching in is Tech receiver Darrell Jones, who has tallied 25 catches for 342 yards this season.

"We've got to come out every play and execute the way we're supposed to," Jones said. "We've had really good practices, and now we just have to make Saturday our best practice."

The Red Raiders should have their work cut out for them against the Longhorns, who rank fifth in defense nationally, surrendering 268.5 yards-per-game.

Defensively, the Red Raiders are coming out of one of their worst performances in defending the pass.

Against Kansas, the Tech defense surrendered a season high 327 yards through the air.

A repeat defensive performance could cause the Red Raiders trouble, as the Longhorns enter the game ranked 10th in the nation in pass offense.

Leading the way is Texas quarterback Major Applewhite, who is averaging 250 yards-per-contest this season.

Applewhite, who was the Big 12 Conference's Player of the Year last season, burned the Red Raiders for 241 yards and three touchdowns in last year's battle.

"We need to tighten our coverage a lot more than we've been doing," Tech cornerback Antwan Alexander said.

"(Last week) was a reality check, letting us know that we could be passed on and give us just another initiative to work on in practice."

Texas leads the all-time series 35-13, but the Red Raiders have won two out of the last three contests against the Longhorns.

Tech running back Wes Welker reels off yardage against Kansas last weekend. The Red Raiders will face Texas this weekend at 6 p.m. Saturday at Jones SBC Stadium.

The contest against the Longhorns will mark the Red Raiders' first home game in two weeks after being on the road in Kansas for two straight weeks.

ends. "We do take one game at a time, but a team like Texas coming into our house - it is a big game for us, and we're looking forward to it," Baker said. "Personally, this is going to be my last time playing UT for the rest of my life, so I want to go out on the right foot."

Cross-country athletes keep making grade

By Phil Riddle
Staff Writer

Texas Tech senior George Odom and junior Chris Thomas made their second appearances on the Academic Big 12 Cross-country team, leading a group of six Red Raiders honored.

Joining Odom and Thomas on the Academic Big 12 Cross-country team are women runners senior Leigh Daniel and sophomore Shannon Spaulding.

Redshirt freshmen Jeremy Granger and Brian Wade, also made the team from the men's squad.

Student-athletes must maintain at least a 3.0 GPA and must have participated in 60 percent of his or her team's scheduled competitions to be eligible for the Academic Big 12 Cross-country team.

Freshmen and transfers are not eligible to be a part Academic Big 12 Cross-country squad in their first year of academic residence.

"I'm real proud of all of them," Tech cross-country coach David Smith said.

"I'm especially proud of the ones that made it the first time. Kids like Shannon Spaulding. It was her first time eligible and her first time on the team."

"It really impressed me to see the amount of work they put into their athletics, how hard they work every day, then to do this well in their academics."

Curtis coming up big in clutch situations for Red Raider football

By Blair Cunningham
Contributing Writer

If you had not heard of Red Raider defensive back Kevin Curtis prior to the Tech-North Texas game this season, chances are, you have heard of him by now. It was Curtis that caused the fumble late in the game that all but put away UNT and sealed the victory for Tech.

Those who follow Curtis know that he has been big for the Red Raider defense on a fairly consistent basis. Last year he garnered All-Big 12 honors, as well as leading the team and conference in total tackles with 153.

Curtis, a junior restaurant hotel management major, recorded 20 tackles in two contests last year.

Curtis averaged 13.9 tackles a game and his 93 solo tackles led the squad. He earned the Bronco Nagurski National Defensive Player of the Week award, as well as Big 12 Defensive Player of the Week for his 20 tackles and interception against Colorado.

Many people know that Curtis is from Lubbock and he played high school football at Lubbock Coronado. However, many people do not know he was born in Frankfurt, Germany. His father, Charles, was in the United States Military and was stationed overseas before moving to Lubbock.

While at Coronado, Curtis played mostly quarterback and was named the district 3-5A MVP, as well as being named First Team All-District. Curtis played sparingly on the Coronado defense, playing situational third downs. Division I teams took notice of his play, as five recruiters offered him scholarships to play for their programs. Despite being offered scholarships to play at TCU, New Mexico, Kansas and UNT, Curtis decided to play at Tech.

"Ever since I was a little kid, I wanted to play for Tech," Curtis said.

"I've always wanted to play here."

Curtis, like many other Red Raider defensive players, said he loves playing under new defensive coordinator Greg McMackin. McMackin, the former defensive coordinator for the Seattle Seahawks, has a different style of defense that has Curtis and the other players fired up about playing in his system.

"Under Coach McMackin, we run a 4-3 defense," Curtis said. "Last year we ran a 4-4 defense that put a lot of pressure on our corners since we were running man-to-man coverage."

Curtis said the main reason he is able to perform under pressure is the fact that he is able to stay relaxed in even the most tense of situations. He maintains his relaxed state by joking around with his teammates. He said his ability to stay relaxed aids him in making good decisions and ultimately, great plays. Against UNT, it was Curtis' play that was the decisive factor in overcoming the troublesome Eagles.

"Curtis gives us a lot of options because he excels in a variety of defenses," defensive coordinator Greg McMackin said. "He can cover well, and if we need him to stop the run, he can do that also."

After a shaky performance against Kansas in which the Red Raider offense carried the squad to an eventual 45-39 victory, the defense hopes to improve against Texas this weekend.

Curtis said he has set a goal of playing every game to the best of his ability and to improve his performance with each outing. McMackin said if Curtis continues to improve, he could be playing on Sundays in the NFL before long.

"If Kevin continues to learn his position like he has and continues to improve at the rate he has, there will be a place for him at the NFL level," McMackin said.

Curtis is the second-leading tack-

Tech safety Kevin Curtis helps make a stop against K-State earlier this season.

ler on the team with 68 total tackles for the season behind Lawrence Flugence.

According to McMackin, it is Curtis' versatility and ability to learn new schemes that allows him to excel on the defensive side of the ball. Other than his dreams of one day playing in the NFL, Curtis hopes to put his degree to use and open a resort.
