Haig Declares U.S. Interested In Talks Nuclear Force Would Be Topic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said, Monday, that the United States is ready to "proceed rapidly" toward a resumption of negotiations with the Soviet Union aimed at reducing medium-range nuclear force levels in Europe.

Haig made the statement after lengthy discussions with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, whose government has expressed strong interest in a reopening of the superpower talks, which were suspended late last year.

With Genscher standing at his side at a White House news conference, Haig endorsed the December 1979 decision under which the NATO allies agreed to the deployment of U.S. theater nuclear forces in Western Europe. That decision was coupled with a U.S. pledge to seek simultaneously a nuclear force reduction agreement with the Soviets.

No Interest

Haig reaffirmed that the United States has no interest in Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's call for a moratorium on nuclear weapons deployment in Europe because this would preserve the advantage Moscow now has in this area.

Brezhnev's proposal, made at the recent Communist Party Congress in Moscow, was reaffirmed in a letter he sent, Saturday, to President Reagan and heads of government of other allied countries.

In endorsing a resumption of arms limitation talks with the Soviets, Haig said, "The problem now is to proceed rapidly in consultation with our allies with respect to how these talks can be carried forward at Geneva or elsewhere if necessary."

The Brezhnev letter, the first direct communication between the two leaders, elaborated on Brezhnev's proposals to improve East-West relations, including a summit meeting, it was learned Monday.

"The tone is matter-of-fact," said one source who read the letter. "It's certainly not a hostile communication. It's devoid of polemics."

Kremlin Campaign

One interpretation of the letter was that it is part of a Kremlin campaign to make it appear that the Soviets are pursuing peace in the face of Reagan administration saber-rattling.

Sources said the letter to Reagan "breaks no new ground in a substantive sense, but does lay out in a somewhat more personal and direct way some issues raised by Brezhnev" at the Soviet Communist Party's 26th Congress, two weeks ago.

Brezhnev also sent letters to leaders of other NATO countries, including German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

The source said the letter to Reagan, while presumably similar to the others, was not identical because it mentions matters of particular interest to the two nations. However, the source said it did not deal in a significant way with El Salvador or Poland.

While Brezhnev's proposal for a summit meeting was raised, it was not the point of the letter, the source said. "I'd describe it in the nature of a report to Reagan on the decisions of the party Congress and some general language on the nature of the relationships."

He said the letter also restated Soviet proposals for a moratorium on deployment of medium-range missiles in Europe and extending boundaries for so-called mutual-confidence building measures.

"It is accurate to say it really doesn't break any new ground," he said.

The issue has been an extraordinarily sensitive one for West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who has come under heavy pressure from the left wing of his Social Democratic Party to dissociate himself from the NATO decision to deploy the U.S. warheads, starting in 1983.

Western European leaders have been telling the Reagan administration that it may be politically impossible for them to agree to the deployment unless there is a parallel effort by Washington and Moscow to seek an arms limitation accord.

Haig and Genscher have an official relationship dating back to Haig's tenure as commander of NATO forces in Europe. It was their first meeting since Haig became secretary of state, and both leaders agreed that the relationship between the two allies is sound.

After a morning meeting and a luncheon with Haig, Genscher went to the See HAIG Page 14

Sheriff Denied Travel Expenses For Spouse

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

COUNTY commissioners offered legal questions but no money Monday to Sheriff D.L. "Sonny" Keesee when he appealed to them to pay travel expenses for his wife whom he deputized and took on a recent trip to return a prisoner from Missouri.

According to some county officials, Keesee may not be able to legally recoup the travel expenses for his wife because of the state's nepotism laws.

Mrs. Keesee accompanied the sheriff on a 1,600-mile trip to Wynesville, Mo., to pick up a male prisoner being held for Lubbock County. County financial records indicated that trip occurred Feb. 20-25.

When Keesee returned from that trip, County Auditor Dale Gallimore refused to reimburse him for the $104.60 in travel expenses estimated to have been Mrs. Keesee's share of lodging and meals.

So, Keesee took the matter before the commissioners court and requested full reimbursement.

"She (Mrs. Keesee) is deputized whenever she goes with me," the sheriff told commissioners. Keesee noted that his wife normally carries a gun when she assists him.

The wives of deputies frequently are asked to accompany their husbands on trips to pick up prisoners, Keesee said. When he was a deputy, Keesee said, his wife traveled with him to Carson City, Nev., on one trip to transport an inmate.

Using the wives on prisoner transportation assignments cuts down on the number of deputies that must be temporarily taken away from their duties, Keesee explained. He said it normally takes two deputies to transport a prisoner, but a wife can fill one of the deputy positions.

But Gallimore told commissioners that paying Mrs. Keesee's travel expenses may violate the nepotism statutes.

"I would be hesitant to pay it," Gallimore said. "In fact, I would have to require an opinion (from the county's legal counsel) to pay it."

Assistant Criminal District Attorney Yvonne Faulks said she was inclined to agree with Gallimore. Under the state nepotism laws, she noted, elected officials cannot hire relatives. This statutory requirement also may prohibit Keesee from deputizing his wife, Mrs. Faulks explained.

According to Mrs. Faulks, the nepotism law would not prevent the sheriff's department from deputizing the wives of deputies. She noted that the law only applies to elected officials.

To settle the reimbursement issue, commissioners asked Mrs. Faulks to research state statutes on nepotism.

Keesee said he never considered deputizing his wife as a possible violation of the nepotism laws. "It never entered my mind," he said. "I never thought of her as an employee."

Commissioners also turned down Keesee's request for a $50 monthly car allowance for his chief administrator, Don Stapleton.

The sheriff noted that Stapleton does not have access to a county vehicle and must drive his own car to conduct county business for the sheriff's department.

However, Commissioner Coy Biggs expressed fear that granting a car allowance to an employee in the sheriff's office might cause a "domino effect" in other county departments.

Commissioner Boyd Roberts recommended that the group postpone action on the car allowance request until the See SHERIFF Page 14

Skyjackers Claimed Sworn To Blow Up Plane, If Thwarted

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A freed stewardess said three Pakistani air pirates, holding more than 100 hostages Tuesday in the longest-ever hijack ordeal, have vowed to blow up the aircraft if Pakistan's military government does not free jailed dissidents.

Three Americans and two other U.S. residents were aboard the plane at Damascus airport. As it entered its ninth day, the hijacking that began over Pakistan surpassed the 1976 Entebbe incident in duration.

Truckloads of Syrian soldiers moved onto the airport grounds, Monday night. Fog shrouded the area, early Tuesday, and it was impossible to see where they were stationed — or to see the green and white Pakistan International Airways Boeing 720, parked far from the terminal with its lights off.

The reason for the soldiers' presence was unclear. The troops were clad in green combat fatigues and equipped with automatic rifles and radios.

Officials were observing strict silence — "for the sake of the hostages' lives," one said.

On Monday, Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq had telephoned Syrian President Hafez Assad, reportedly giving him a free hand to deal with the grenade and pistol-wielding hijackers. Assad vowed to take "every possible effort to safeguard the lives of the passengers," a source said.

Stewardess Farzana Sharif, 22, of Lahore, Pakistan, set free Monday night, reported that "the psychological situation of the passengers is extremely difficult ... especially since they all know the hijackers will blow up the entire plane," she told reporters.

An earlier report, which could not be confirmed, said one person aboard the plane had become hysterical.

When they flew the PIA jet to Damascus from Kabul, Afghanistan, before dawn Monday, the gunmen warned they would take an "extremely drastic measure" if their demands were not met. They set no deadline and offered no elaboration.

Diplomat Killed

The hijackers killed a Pakistani diplomat on Friday.

Zia appealed to several heads of state, including President Reagan and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, to intervene to end the ordeal.

Retired Maj. Gen. Rahim Khan, secretary general of the Pakistani defense ministry, said in Islamabad that Pakistan would not hesitate to approve a Syrian rescue attempt to free the hostages.

The hijackers told Syrian government negotiators at the airport control tower that they were armed with two time bombs, several hand grenades, pistols and submachine guns with "plenty of ammunition," an airport spokesman said.

The spokesman said there were 116 passengers and seven crew members sitting in the aircraft, 500 yards from the control tower. But Rahim Khan, who also is chairman of the airline, said in Islamabad that the hijackers held 94 passengers and 10 crew members.

Cavazos Plans To Revise Tech System Of Faculty Evaluation

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PRESIDENT Lauro Cavazos says the Texas Tech School of Medicine lacks an effective system for evaluating faculty members for tenure and promotion and he is developing a procedure to change that.

The new evaluation format will begin this spring in the medical school and Cavazos says he expects to adapt it for use university-wide by next fall.

Termining the existing evaluation procedure as too subjective, he noted. "I'm too much of a scientist to do things in an ad hoc way."

Cavazos noted that when the most recent crop of medical school faculty members' files were presented to him for consideration of tenure and promotion, a typical comment on an individual would be, "He's a great teacher."

But that in and of itself is subjective opinion, and Cavazos says he replied to such comments with the response, "Show me the data."

Under the new evaluation format being developed, faculty members will be rated on a points system. Categories will include student evaluation of teachers.

Cavazos noted that at Tufts University School of Medicine, where he was dean before becoming president of Tech, "We had almost every lecture evaluated by students. I think we should be willing to stand that scrutiny."

Although medical students do evaluate faculty members in about half of the departments at the medical school under the existing evaluation system, the students' comments are considered only at the department level. Under the new system, students' comments will be an integral part of the entire evaluation folder on a faculty member — the file that eventually reaches the president.

One upset medical school faculty member who recently contacted The Avalanche-Journal complained that the existing tenure and promotion procedure at the school is riddled with loopholes for favoritism.

"Tenure at the Texas Tech medical school is not a privilege earned, not a distinction granted, not a recognition for ex-

Area Rainfall Still Possible

GRAY SKIES fed by moist easterly winds and at least a slim chance of rainfall are expected to remain with the South Plains today.

Late Monday scattered showers which have pestered the area for four days cropped up in the Midland area, but were diminishing as they moved to the northeast about 10 p.m. Forecasters set rain chances in the Lubbock area at 20 percent today.

If the South Plains does receive measurable rainfall today it is expected to be in amounts generally less than a quarter of an inch, although heavy showers could produce totals of near half an inch.

In far West Texas, a travelers' advisory was posted for an area extending from the Guadalupe Pass to the Big Bend area. Two to four inches of snow was expected today from El Paso County to Jeff Davis County.

Today's high on the South Plains should be about 50 degrees with winds continuing from the east at 5 to 10 mph.

No relief is expected from the cloud cover until at least Wednesday.

Man Still Sought Here In Bizarre Holdup Try; Companion Silent

By RICHIE D. REECER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A DAPPER, Bible-toting gunman who apparently planned to rob a Lubbock family Sunday morning continued to elude lawmen late Monday while his alleged partner in the foiled crime sat in the Lubbock County Jail, refusing to identify the other man or provide detectives with information on the bizarre incident.

Franklin H. Payne, 41, of Forney, was jailed Sunday morning after he allegedly fired a machine gun at a Lubbock policeman and held lawmen at bay for an hour following the unsuccessful robbery attempt at the 3506 37th St. home of Betty Jean Hensley, 56, and her 20-year-old daughter, Lisa.

He is charged with attempted capital murder, attempted aggravated robbery, carrying a prohibited weapon and possession of a firearm by a felon. Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy has denied bond for Payne, who has been convicted of at least six felony offenses.

The second man being sought by authorities is described as a handsome white man with dark brown hair, 30 to 35 years old, wearing a suit and sporting a neat beard. The man may be driving a faded orange or red Datsun or Toyota pickup, police said.

Detectives have talked several times with Payne, who is described as cooperative and friendly until questions turn to the incident for which he is incarcerated.

"When you get down to the nitty-gritty, he just grins at you and says, 'Man, I've heard this all my life,'" one detective said.

Detectives said Payne refuses to identify the other man because he faces a possible life prison sentence and does not want to be known as one who informs on his friends.

Indignant Woman, 76, Describes Futile Fight With Young Thieves

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MARGUERITE BROWN didn't like it when a young woman shoved her way into her 19th Street home.

But, the 76-year-old woman indicated, she reached her boiling point when the intruder threatened her with a gun.

"Well, that was the wrong thing to say," Mrs. Brown said adamantly in courtroom testimony Monday. "I went berserk...I jumped on her."

Mrs. Brown took the witness stand in 137th District Court Monday to describe how two young people forced their way into her 19th Street home March 1, robbing her of jewelry and silver. Her testimony came in a hearing called to hear the Criminal District Attorney's motion that bond be denied for Vincent Maurice Lundberg, one of the suspects in that robbery.

Mrs. Brown walked slowly to the witness stand and sat down, folding her gloved hands over her purse. Her face was only partially visible under a brightly flowered yellow hat as First Assistant District Attorney Jim Bob Darnell questioned her about the incident.

The woman explained in a clear, steady voice that she answered her front door at about 9 p.m. to find a petite young woman asking to use the telephone. Mrs. Brown declined to let the woman in and suggested that she use the phone at the University City Club next door, but the young woman pushed her way into the house.

The young woman said she had a gun, Mrs. Brown testified, and she could see the weapon in the intruder's hands.

That's when Mrs. Brown chose to fight.

The two struggled, Mrs. Brown told the court, and the young woman threatened to shoot her.

"I said you just shoot and be damned. I wasn't scared, I was mad," Mrs. Brown continued, adding that the intruder had no right to come into her house.

Mrs. Brown quit struggling, however, when the young woman struck her over the back of the head with a brass candleholder. "You know, I was more afraid of that candleholder than the gun," Mrs. Brown mused.

The young woman instructed Mrs. Brown to let her accompany into the house through the back. Mrs. Brown followed the instructions, she said, and let a young man wearing a stocking over his face — allegedly Lundberg — in through the garage entrance. She described him as not really knowing what he was doing and walking around the house "like a zombie."

Mrs. Brown said the young woman asked her where she kept her silver.

"I said 'Well, stupid — in the dining room,'" Mrs. Brown See BOND DENIED Page 14

Bentsen Promises To Support I-27 Completion

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

U. S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen Monday promised his assistance in the effort to get Interstate 27 completed through Lubbock but said the project may be further delayed by budget cuts recommended by the Reagan administration.

Pressed by former Lubbock County Commissioner Arch Lamb in an afternoon meeting here, the two-term Democrat from Houston said he would lend his influence to getting the project under contract by the 1986 deadline.

"We need your help on this," Lamb told Bentsen in a meeting at the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce. Lamb noted that federal law calls for all interstate highway construction projects either to be begun by 1986 or dropped.

In Lubbock apparently to begin laying groundwork for his re-election campaign next year, the senator said federal highway appropriations to Texas will remain approximately the same this year and in 1982. "The option is up to the state," he said, on how the money is spent.

But he said more and more money will be spent on interstate highway maintenance in coming years with the national highway system 95 percent complete. "It is going to be more difficult to fund new highways," he said.

Bentsen arrived in Lubbock Sunday and spoke to a gathering of Mexican-Americans. He spoke at a chamber luncheon Monday and met with several chamber committees Monday afternoon.

Attorney James Milam organized a private meeting of Bentsen supporters here Monday morning at the Lubbock Club to plan a fund-raising dinner in Bentsen's behalf. Details of the function had not been announced.

He left here Monday afternoon for Dallas, where he arrived from Washington last Friday to begin a series of apparent campaign-building activities.

Bentsen said at an afternoon news conference that he will not announce for re-election until possibly later this year and that he has had no clear indication of whom his opponent or opponents might be. It has been speculated, however, that former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach will oppose him as a Republican.

Political observers do not expect Bentsen to have a primary opponent.

He reportedly has collected about $500,000 to finance the 1982 campaign.

Bentsen is chairman of the congressional Joint Economic Committee, and he announced Monday that the committee will meet in Lubbock "sometime late this year" to discuss West Texas water problems.

Bentsen aides said details of the committee meeting will be announced later.

Asked if he agrees with President Reagan's analysis that national defenses are critically vulnerable and must be increased immediately, the senator said, "I think we should add to our defenses. In many ways, we have fallen behind the Russians."

"It's always serious when you have a nation as expansionist as the Soviet Union."

Bentsen called a study of "split-basing" the proposed MX missile system in Nevada-Utah and Texas-New Mexico "a stupid proposal" because it would cost an additional $3 1/2 billion to install part of the system in this area.

Asked if there is a serious possibility that the system will be scrapped because of the time, an estimated seven or eight years, that it would take to be deployed, he said he expects it to be deployed in Nevada and Utah as originally planned. "But we don't have a final determination," he added.

Bentsen said he opposes a lower minimum wage for teen-age workers, which Reagan has proposed, and said the draft may have to be reinstated because the volunteer system "is not working."

Using a line he has employed frequently during this visit to his home state, he said, "I don't want to see us get in a position where we have a Job Corps with tanks."

He said a reinstated draft should offer some alternative non-combatant service such as work in government hospitals for conscientious objectors.

Bentsen offered several solutions to what he described as stagnating American industry.

He said corporate heads usually are reluctant to be experimental when they finally reach the top in late-career, and he said companies typically operate on a year-to-year basis rather than taking a more long-term view.

The senator said government should give new tax incentives to encourage research and development. Corporate executives should be given the chance to buy stock so that they will be more interested in the long-term success of the company and will stay longer, he added.

Bentsen said some worldwide standards should be developed, perhaps in the United Nations, on world business ethics.

As it is, he said, American businessmen are often at a disadvantage because they must adhere to the American Corrupt Practices Act, which puts them under more restrictions than most of the foreign businessmen with whom they deal. "Don't you think the Germans and the Japanese love that?" he asked.

Chamber President Lee Stafford, a longtime Bentsen supporter, presented the senator with a chamber resolution commending him for service in the Senate. Mayor Bill McAlister presented him with a certificate honoring him as an honorary citizen of Lubbock.

Bentsen said in a Monday morning interview with The Avalanche-Journal that he does not expect his 1978 vote in favor of the Panama Canal treaty to be a major liability in his re-election campaign.

"I rarely hear of it," he said. "In the last 20 public meetings I have held, I have heard of it only one time."

He said he voted for the treaty mainly to prevent anti-American violence in Panama and the possible advance of communism in Latin America.

As chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, he said, he supports the Reagan proposal to make federal agencies function on the basis of cost-effectiveness. "We have had too many of the agencies who said cost was of no concern to them," he said.

Bentsen said he favors restricting Japanese automobile imports to aid the American automobile industry.

"We have an extraordinary situation in the automobile industry," he said. "Management has made some serious mistakes in judging what the American people wanted."

Car manufacturers are faced with having to spend money to design more competitive cars while operating at a loss, he said, and limiting foreign imports "would give us time to turn this thing around."

Bentsen is in favor of supporting the beleaguered government in El Salvador, he said, because the Latin American country is "next door" to the United States and is in danger of being taken over by communists.

"There is a risk involved," he said, referring to the supplying of arms and American military advisors to El Salvador. "But there is more risk in turning our backs and doing nothing."

Asked if Democrats in the House and Senate will not try to block the Reagan economic program, he said congressional Democrats should take a stance like that used by House Speaker Sam Rayburn and then Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson when Republican President Eisenhower came into office in 1952 — "constructive and not opposed just for the sake of opposition."

Witness Testifies Defendant Fatally Shot Driver Of Car

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Byron Johnson Smith Jr. levelled a rifle at a car carrying two men and a small child for several minutes before fatally shooting the driver during an argument over a firecracker, a witness testified Monday.

Smith, 59, is charged with murder in connection with the July 5 slaying of his neighbor, Amador Gutierrez, 23. Both the victim and the defendant lived in the 2000 block of East Seventh Street.

The dead man's brother-in-law, Lewis Hernandez, testified in 140th District Court Monday afternoon that he noticed Smith aiming a rifle at him, Gutierrez and Hernandez's son Jose as they first started to drive away from Gutierrez's house. They circled back to near where Smith was standing, and Gutierrez got out of the car, Hernandez told the court.

Hernandez testified that his brother-in-law was standing with one hand on the roof of the car and one hand on the car door during the argument, which only lasted about 20 seconds. Smith accused Gutierrez of setting off firecrackers and the victim denied it repeatedly before Smith allegedly fired a single gunshot into Gutierrez's shoulder.

The bullet passed through the shoulder and into the chest cavity where it severed Gutierrez' aorta.

Hernandez testified under questioning by prosecutor Travis Ware that he pushed his 7-year-old son onto the floor of the back seat and put the car into reverse as he crawled to the drivers side and backed away from Smith's yard. He saw Gutierrez run from the car to his house and back out again before collapsing on the front lawn, Hernandez testified.

Det. Bill Gabriel told the court that he and two other Lubbock police officers went to Smith's 2009 E. Seventh Street residence to talk to Smith. Gabriel testified that he observed Smith being read his rights before asking him where the gun was which had been involved in the shooting.

"Behind the refrigerator," Smith reportedly said. Officers retrieved a .22 caliber rifle.

The state rested its case at 5 p.m. Monday and Presiding Judge William Shaver recessed the court until 9 a.m., when defense attorney Lane Arthur was expected to begin presenting testimony for his client, who considers himself a specialist in outdoor cooking. Smith is the author of "A Roundup of Western Outdoor Cooking."

Polish Talks Aborted;

Warning Strike Due

WARSAW (Tuesday) (AP) — Talks aimed at averting a strike in the textile center of Lodz broke down early today despite efforts of the government and national leaders of the independent union Solidarity to preserve Poland's fragile labor truce.

"Unfortunately, we have a complete deadlock," said Lodz Solidarity leader Jerzy Kropiwnicki, adding that today's one-hour warning strike by some 500,000 workers in 1,300 plants and enterprises would begin as planned at 10 a.m.

Kropiwnicki said he hoped "some decision on the highest level would make it possible to turn back our plans" for a subsequent province-wide general strike beginning in stages Thursday.

Boston Man Convicted Of Raping Estranged Wife

BOSTON (AP) — The state Supreme Court, ruling on the first case in which Massachusetts' rape statute was applied to a married couple, on Monday upheld the conviction of James K. Chretien for raping his estranged wife.

The unanimous decision held that "a person who forces intercourse in nonconsensual intercourse is no longer free from criminal responsibility."

Chretien had been sentenced to three to five years in state prison and three years' probation for breaking into his wife's apartment Feb. 9, 1979, two months before their divorce was to become final.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Turkish Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen will make an official visit to Washington March 31-April 2 for talks with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and other officials, the State Department announced Monday.

County Plans Use Of New Jail To Train Before Completion

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The new $4.8 million Lubbock County Jail will not be completed for at least another 60 to 90 days, commissioners were told Monday.

But the sheriff's department probably will gain access to the 90-inmate B-section of the jail for training purposes within the next two or three weeks.

"We anticipate that we will be able to turn over the area they want to use for training sometime by the end of this month," said Arnold Maeker, supervisor of the jail construction project.

Still to be completed in the B-section, Maeker said, is the installation of security cameras.

In phase II, Maeker said, workers still must complete the installation of plumbing fixtures, controls in the alarm system, fire alarms and painting.

The jail's second phase also needs the application of an epoxy floor covering in its detention areas. Commissioners Monday authorized a change order of more than $26,000 to cover the cost for the epoxy covering.

Even though the jail still is not completed, however, the facility will house its first inmates tonight.

Sheriff D.L. "Sonny" Keesee advised commissioners that a Texas Department of Corrections bus containing about 30 inmates en route to state prison facilities will arrive in Lubbock sometime today and will require overnight housing.

As of Monday morning, Keesee said, the old jail contained 243 inmates. "We've run out of room to put them (TDC prisoners) in the old jail," the sheriff added.

Commissioners authorized the use of the new jail's holding area as a temporary quarters for the TDC prisoners.

Some members of the commissioners' court also chastised Keesee for discussing potential problems with prisoners in the new jail with reporters before bringing the issue to the court.

Commissioner Coy Biggs noted recent reports indicating Keesee wants to keep female inmates on the fifth floor of the old jail.

According to Keesee, housing the women in the new jail will "be a constant thorn for us." He claimed that female prisoners often are "loosely dressed" and cause problems when male guards or inmates must move through those cellblock areas.

"I would like to hear about it before seeing it on television or reading it in the newspaper," Biggs said.

In other business, commissioners agreed to contract with the Texas Tech University medical school for physicians' services to residents at Lubbock County Youth Center.

Commissioners also approved contracts with four psychology students from Tech to administer psychological tests to youths housed at the center.

Funding for both programs will be provided by Criminal Justice Division

Area Convicts Given Paroles

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements, acting on the recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Paroles, has authorized the release from prison of four persons convicted of crimes in the Lubbock area.

Joe H. Beeman was paroled to New Mexico officials after serving and earning two years and two months of a five-year sentence.

Roscoe Lee Johnson was paroled to Lubbock County officials after serving and earning three years of a five-year term.

David Martinez was paroled to Castro County officials after serving and earning three years and two months of a five-year term.

Roger Dale Massey was released under mandatory supervision to Lubbock County officials after serving and earning all of a four-year term.

REAGAN, TRUDEAU MEETING

More Hands Across Border

ANOTHER TEST of "border relations" gets underway today, this time with the United States' northern neighbor.

When President Reagan arrives in Ottawa today for two days of meetings with Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, it will be the first small test of relations between the new Republican administration and Trudeau's Liberal government.

Mark MacGuigan, Canada's external affairs minister, has described Mr. Reagan's visit, the first by a U.S. President since then President Nixon came to Ottawa in April 1972, as a "get-acquainted meeting." However, he said "all of the principal bilateral and multilateral issues will be covered."

THE CANADIAN official recently said he was delighted by Mr. Reagan's desire for the U.S. to establish closer ties with both Canada and Mexico.

But, he added "it's too soon to judge the impact." President Reagan met with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo Jan. 5 before he took the oath of office.

High on the list of Canadian concerns is the U.S. Senate's delay in ratifying East Coast fisheries treaties signed by the two governments two years ago. "Any amendments by the Senate would reopen the whole treaty question," MacGuigan recently said.

High on the list of American concerns is the Canadian government's controversial new energy policy.

ANNOUNCED LAST October, the National Energy Program expands the role of Petrocan, the government-owned oil company, and contains financial incentives to "restructure" the oil industry so that it will be 50 percent owned by Canadian companies by 1990.

Currently, the oil and gas industry is about 75 percent foreign-owned, mostly by U.S. oil companies.

Trudeau has said that no nation would tolerate so much of its oil industry in foreign control. Thus, he expects Americans to be tolerant of the Canadian energy policies. However, the policy runs counter to Mr. Reagan's interest in a "continental" energy-sharing plan.

THE TWO leaders also are likely to discuss "acid rain," which the Canadian government has called its No. 1 pollution problem.

Acid rain from power plants in eastern states of the U.S. threatens many Canadian lakes and farms.

Both nations have pledged to work on a trans-border pollution agreement by June of this year. But with the new emphasis on coal power in the U.S., the deal could hit a snag.

So, as is the case with Mexico on the south, which also is deeply involved with the U.S. need for energy sources, Canada will have its say. In the past, relations between the two countries and their peoples have been excellent. It is to both nations' advantage to keep it that way.

FUNDS SPENT UNWORTHILY

Artistic Three-Ring Circus

SINCE THE National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities were founded in 1965, their appropriations have grown from $2.5 million each to $158 million for the arts and $151 million for the humanities. The two agencies have become a major cultural force.

They have done some fine things during these 15 years. The Endowment for the Arts has financed museum exhibitions and catalogues that would have been impossible without it. The Endowment for the Humanities has aided educational programs connected with exhibits.

Yet both agencies have also been sailing dangerously off course. With the appointment of new directors by the Reagan administration, there is a chance to change more than personnel.

The aims and standards outlined in the original legislation have been steadily compromised. Grants to artists, writers, composers and scholars have become minimal.

THE ENDOWMENTS' programs are increasingly used to serve social and political policy first. More and more grants are dispersed according to geographical and ethnic formulas.

The NEH for instance has stretched the concept of humanistic research to pay for classes in films on the struggle of women office workers to improve their lot. The Expansion Arts Program of the NEA—described as "a point of entry" to minority, blue collar and rural cultures—plainly has more political than esthetic significance. Such policies undermine the meaning of arts and humanities. They should be reversed.

A report on the endowments prepared by the Heritage Foundation, and a recent report of the Rockefeller Foundation's Commission on the Humanities, agree: the focus should be on arts and humanities programs in the elementary and secondary schools as well as on support for leading cultural institutions. In short, de-emphasize artistic circuses, reaffirm quality and competence.

THE ARGUMENT against "elitism," which has been used to justify the current trend, is misleading. To suggest that excellence is an unworthy standard attacks the essence of art and scholarship. It serves only to cover up the politicization of programs.

It is not possible, politically, to spend every endowment dollar on only the worthiest projects; to get approval for spending a dollar on excellence may require spending another 20 cents on some compensating political objective.

But at the moment, alas, 40 cents, 80 cents (more and more every year) is being spent unworthily. Such wastefulness gains a spurious respectability as it becomes entrenched. The answer is not to eliminate the endowments, but to redeploy their funds.

M. STANTON EVANS

Tax Cut Plan Makes Good Economic Sense

WASHINGTON—The Reagan economic program is being defended, and attacked, in a blizzard of statistics—most of which may safely be discounted.

Not that such figures are unimportant; just unknowable. In the nature of the case, nobody can really predict the exact effects of the Reagan tax cuts in terms of aggregate revenue, foresee how future income will mesh with the proposed spending cutbacks, project the size of the Federal deficit two years hence, or anticipate inflation rates resulting from Federal monetary and fiscal policies yet to be adopted.

The scenario on those matters set forth in the Reagan plan is plausible but totally uncertain, as are attempted refutations of it.

UNDERLYING CONCEPTS, not guessing games on statistical minutiae, must be used to gauge the likelihood of its succeeding.

Looked at in this fashion, the program seems not only sensible, but almost unavoidable. It has four main components, each aimed at correcting a specific evil caused by present public policies.

All of the evils are quite real, and all of the remedies are clearly needed. How they will mesh together is the source of the uncertainty.

The feature of the program that has received the most attention is the projected cutback in the rate of Federal spending growth.

Disagreements and pressures arise as constituencies battle to preserve specific programs. And the task is complicated by the desire of the administration to increase the level of outlays for national defense.

THE SECOND part of the program, which to date seems more controversial than the idea of spending cutbacks, is the projected reduction in individual income tax rates by 30 percent across a three-year period, together with new encouragement to capital investment by business.

The point of this reduction is not to "stimulate" the economy through "increased purchasing power" a la Lord Keynes, but to cut back on rising marginal tax rates that are disincentives to work and savings.

Part three of the program is to lighten the massive burden of regulation that diverts resources from productive investment to compliance with governmental fiat.

THIS BURDEN is already estimated at better than $100 billion a year, and would get even bigger with new regulations imposed by the outgoing Carter administration.

It is hardly a coincidence that productivity in American industry has been declining precisely as Federal programs have mandated massive outlays for nonproductive environmental, safety and other such programs—many without demonstrable benefit to anyone.

Finally, the Reagan program seeks to encourage stable, limited monetary growth, rather than the hyper-inflationary, stop-and-go policies pursued by the Federal Reserve in recent years in a futile effort to control interest rates.

IT IS now clear to most observers that runaway monetary growth is the source of constantly rising prices, and that until it is brought under control, double digit inflation is inescapable.

And while this matter is governed by the Fed, the encouragement of the administration for a policy of stable growth should strengthen the hand of Chairman Paul Volcker in pursuing such a policy.

Viewed in this way, the Reagan program is an exercise in economic common sense. All too clearly, our economy is suffering from the effects of too much government—too much spending, too much taxing, too many regulations, and too much monetary growth.

'War Of Words' Seen As Deterrent To Goodwill

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
"First things first," is the axiom that I more-or-less grew up by, and as a nation struggling to get along with other nations in the world, I think that we ought to observe as nearly as possible the formula as set down in this principle.

If you will, I'd like to make a point in regard to diplomacy, an important ingredient of goodwill, applicable in this instance, I believe.

Let us say that I have a neighbor by the name of John Brown! Okay, for the sake of harmony, whether I agree with Brown's views or not, whenever we chance to meet I make it a point to address Brown as either John or else Mr. Brown—preferably the latter (my mother advised me when I was in knee-pants that familiarity breeds contempt). Not—repeat not—some such scurrilous handle as, say Rusty, or maybe Buster, or something like this.

Thus, henceforth I propose, nay, beseech, that our vaunted free press make it a habit that whenever referring to the Russian people in the future, Communism or the Communist Party aside, to do so in a befitting, conciliatory manner.

Terms such as Reds and Bolsheviks, the Bear, and other frequently used terms employed by the press to describe events inside Russia is indignant language and thus, inadvertently or not, tends to stir up anger rather than promote goodwill.

My dictionary defines Russia as, loosely, the Soviet Union. What's wrong with using this term?

How would you like it if the media in the Soviet Union suddenly set in calling us Honkies, Bohunks and Afros instead of Americans?

Ace Lambert, 406 Hub Homes

(EDITOR'S NOTE: To answer your last question, how about imperialists, capitalists, warmongers, hoodlums, provocateurs, all words used by Moscow to describe Americans when in a mean mood. However, you do have a point.)

Tech Professor Takes Issue With Comment On Salaries

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
Kenneth May's recent article on the meeting between President Cavazos and the Texas Tech chapter of the A.A.U.P. was rather flippant and lacked one needed ingredient, truth.

Instead of Mr. May wasting his time writing drizzle on what he thinks is going on at Tech, he can better spend his day by acquainting himself with broader viewpoints than he is apparently hearing.

Kenneth, come on over to Tech and meet some of the teaching faculty, and hear their side of the argument. Why, they may even be better sources of the news than your neighbor twice removed. Anyway, you have nothing to lose but your illusions. Or, are you one of those men for whom the truth does not make free but ashamed?

John Miller, 3804 53rd

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The column to which you refer merely quoted Dr. Lauro Cavazos, president of Texas Tech. Are you saying he does not know the truth?)

Proposal To Sell Coliseum Is Questioned By Reader

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
After reading your editorial Tuesday morning March 3, concerning the Coliseum, I wonder why the Coliseum was built if the City of Lubbock didn't have a use for it. If Texas Tech had been charged appropriate fees for the use of the Coliseum, repairs could have been kept up.

There is a public law signed by former Gov. John Connally, years ago when the Coliseum was built, which states it will not be sold without a vote of the people. This hasn't been mentioned by the Mayor and Council.

Could some deal have been made for right-of-way on University heretofore not available to the city?

Let's get all the facts to the public before we sacrifice the Coliseum. Next sale: The Civic Center.

Robert L. Isom, Jr., 2016 69th St.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

A Toast To Nancy

DALLAS—Let's hope that before our venerable congressmen start to chew up Ronald Reagan's budget they will, in their infinite wisdom, call upon the First Lady for a little practical advice.

The President has done what he can, but it's Nancy who knows how to squeeze a budget like a veteran economist. She's already saved us $200,000, and who knows what other little tricks she has up her couturier sleeve?

Haven't heard about that $200,000? Well, that's what the Reagans figure it will cost to pretty up their private living quarters in the White House. Let's face it, previous tenants over the years just didn't keep the old place up.

The last occupant who painted, papered and reupholstered everything in sight was Jackie Kennedy, so obviously a major renovation is No. 1 on Nancy's agenda.

BUT IS she going to tap the taxpayers for the tab? Not on your 1040; she's going to rattle her tin cup at all the rich folks she knows would hate to see her grub through four years in undecorated digs.

Actually, there's $50,000 in the federal kitty to fancy things up on a limited scale. And another, bigger fund, she could dip into for drapes, etc.

But Mrs. Reagan has decided not to use public money for the work she has in mind. Instead, she's going to ask for contributions to the White House Historical Association.

Donors will be able to take their gifts off their income tax, and a good thing, too, because they'll get no reflected glory in the newspapers. Their names will not be made public, according to Mrs. Reagan's press secretary.

TED GRABER will collect a few Brownie points, though. He's Nancy's interior decorator who has been anointed to select the fabrics, colors and furnishings, and he's agreed to do the job for nothing.

The First Lady has saved us a few more bucks by not ordering up any new beds, tables or sofas for the private quarters.

Like any thrifty housewife, she's making do with the furniture she brought with her from her home in Pacific Palisades.

Apparently she's been poking around the White House attic and storage basements, too, where she's dug up a lot of historic old pieces she plans to have restored and put on display in the guest rooms.

You know what antiques cost these days? Drop her a note of thanks.

BUT THERE'S more to it than that. If Nancy can get all that work done for free, think what she might accomplish if she turned her loose on the federal budget. For she surely has stumbled on a secret nobody else has thought of yet.

Instead of paying out all that money to make the government work, maybe we could ask people to donate their goods and services.

Beginning, one would hope, with those thousands and thousands of "consultants" who cost us billions of dollars each year.

And how about the banks and individuals who are holding a trillion dollars in notes from Uncle Sam? They could write them off as bad debts, uncollectable from a business that's running $80 billion in the red for the year.

Moving right along, we could ask each of the defense plants to donate a couple of submarines, destroyers, fighter planes, nuclear bombs and defense missiles as sort of a "free sample" in gratitude for the rest of the business they get from the government.

Then if the doctors across the land would agree to treat the elderly and the poor as part of the charity work any compassionate physician does in the name of good works, we could wipe out Medicare and Medicaid and save billions.

MAYBE EVEN families could start to look out for each other more, and there goes welfare and Social Security and unemployment insurance. More billions we don't have to spend.

And how about calling on Chrysler and all the other corporate biggies to sink or swim on their own without begging Big Brother to bail them out of bankruptcy?

Maybe the food conglomerates could get together and provide hot lunches and milk for poor kids out of what they collect every time we check out at the supermarket.

Perhaps the oil industry could be persuaded, as a patriotic gesture, to donate the millions of gallons of fuel the presidential jet fleet guzzles every year. Or maybe the President could fly commercial when he goes home to chop wood.

It wouldn't hurt to ask. And if it works, well...the least we could do is make Mr. Reagan director of the national budget. She'd have it balanced before Thanksgiving...or I'm going to stop believing in the Great Pumpkin.

Pass It On...

IT WAS in St. Petersburg, Fla., where the renowned Russian prima ballerina Anna Pavlova first danced that classic, "The Dying Swan." In 1907, it was. Made quite an impression on the world of arts. On Anna, too, clearly. Her dying words in 1931 were: "Bring me my swan costume."

A pipe smoker who plays a lot of golf may appear to be a distinguished citizen, but it's not likely he gets much work done. That's the opinion of the productivity specialists. You can figure he'll burn at least an hour a day in filling, tamping, re-lighting and cleaning his pipe. And who knows how many hours a week on the fairways? Claim is the retired pipe-smoking golfer would go bankrupt in a hurry, if he were operating on his own money. Maybe so. It is a fact, anyhow, that few self-made millionaires either smoke pipes or play amateur golf.

Understand there's a 10-week camp in San Jose, Calif., where paying guests are taught how to build their own homes. Intriguing notion, what?

One out of every four apartments for rent advertises "No Children Allowed."

Q. Louie, what's your stand on compulsory military service?

A. Am not commissioned to take a stand on such matters, sir. Good thing. At this age, I don't believe in compulsory anything. Do you recall when Marie Wilson played the lead in "My Friend Irma"? That query was put to her, too, likewise inappropriately. She said, "A girl shouldn't have to go out with a sailor unless she wants to."

Convicted Indiana Killer Almost Changed Mind

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. (AP) — Seventy-one minutes before he was strapped into the electric chair Monday, condemned killer Steven T. Judy almost changed his mind about the execution he had wanted so much, his attorney said.

"If you ever have another client that wants to be electrocuted, talk him out of it," attorney Steven L. Harris quoted the 24-year-old murderer as saying when he was summoned to Judy's cell at the Indiana State Prison at 10:54 p.m. Sunday. Behind a curtain in the cell the freshly varnished black oak chair was ready for Judy's appointment with death just after midnight.

"He (Judy) said it was almost too much, the pressure building toward the execution," Harris said.

"When I first saw him, he was like a little bitty kid in a cell," the attorney said. "It was sad because I could tell he felt scared, he was almost to the panic stage."

But Judy, calmed with the help of Valium, remained firm in his resolve to die rather than spend his life in prison for the slayings of a young mother and her three small children in April 1979. He became the first person executed in Indiana in two decades, and only the fourth in the United States in more than 13 years.

Judy's body was taken to a Michigan City funeral home Monday, and prison officials said it would be shipped to Indianapolis on Wednesday to be prepared for the funeral his foster mother plans Thursday.

Within a short time after the execution, bands of pro-and anti-capital punishment demonstrators had left the prison gates, and authorities said life was back to normal at the maximum-security institution. Extra city, county and state police who had helped patrol the grounds were sent home.

Psychic's Aid Helps Little In Search

AMARILLO (UPI) — A police captain said Monday a message that a California psychic reportedly helped officers find scrawled in the dirt near the Texas-New Mexico state line had proved to be of little aid in locating a missing Oklahoma man.

"There was nothing there but the date and what looked like the word 'Minnesota,'" said Capt. Jim Davis of the Amarillo Police Department.

He said a crime lab technicians Sunday took a plaster cast of the message, which included the date 12-27-80, the day after Tom Corbitt, 26, left his home in Bartlesville, Okla., for a vacation trip to Vancouver, Wash.

Corbitt, son of a Phillip Petroleum Co. executive, has been the object of a search by law enforcement officers from four states since his car was found in Stanton, Calif., Dec. 30. His wallet, glasses and bloody clothing were inside the vehicle. A man standing beside the car was arrested.

A psychic in California reportedly called authorities to report a revelation that came in a seance, telling the location of the message written in the dirt and supposedly the location of the man's body, a source in California said.

The psychic said the man had fought for his life and had scratched the message on the ground before he died.

Officers in Texas and Oklahoma would not acknowledge that a psychic supplied information leading to discovery of the message.

Amarillo authorities became involved in the search late last week, and the quest intensified along the Texas-New Mexico border when "Oldham County (sheriff's officers) found what we're looking for: a message written in the dirt, Davis said.

The man arrested by Stanton police was identified as William F. de la Garza, reportedly from Wichita, Kan. Officers made the arrest after they observed "suspicious acts in a highcrime area," said Detective Jerry Martin of the Oklahoma City Police Department's homicide division.

De la Garza was charged with larceny of an automobile and was extradited to Oklahoma, where he was being held in Oklahoma County jail.

Wheelchair Booth Planned At Mall

Persons confined to wheelchairs or those who want to know more about wheelchairs will find answers to many of their questions Saturday at South Plains Mall.

Becky Woodward, an officer in the West Texas chapter of the American Physical Therapy Association, said representatives from her organization will sponsor a booth at the mall from 10:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday.

"We will be there to answer questions about safety, proper fit, maintenance and other questions," she said, noting that this is the first time the organization has sponsored such an event but that similar booths will be offered at shopping centers across the state.

Harris described Judy's cell as equipped with "a toilet that didn't flush, a sink that had no water and a bed with a striped mattress and some sheets on it. I sat on the mattress and he squatted down while I talked to him."

He said Judy told him he wanted to reach a former girl friend in Texas named Jeannie. Neither Harris nor prison officials would identify her further.

"He had received a telegram from her and wanted to make a telephone call to her," the attorney said. "He told me, 'If she wants to marry me, I may ask for a stay.'"

"Jeannie," was described by Judy's foster mother, Mary Carr, as "the only girl he ever truly loved."

Harris said Judy was taken from the cell to speak with Jeannie in an emotional conversation, and when he returned, Clويد Shuler, executive director of the adult authority for the Department of Correction, asked if he wanted a sedative. "He said yes."

"I told him, 'Before you take that, let me call and ask for a stay.' He said, 'No, I want to go ahead with this.'"

A doctor then entered the tiny cell and gave Judy an injection of 10 milligrams of Valium, a tranquilizer and muscle relaxant.

"The doctor said, 'Tell me when you've had enough. If I start to look good to you, you know you've had enough,'" Harris said.

"He felt much more relaxed after that," Harris added.

Harris said Judy then "asked me to feel his head," which had been shaved in preparation for the execution.

"He seemed to want to show it off. I said it felt like a cone-head. I was trying to keep from getting mushy because I knew I couldn't handle it," the lawyer continued.

Jan Powell, press secretary to Gov. Robert D. Orr, said in Indianapolis that the decision to give Valium was "a professional decision made on the scene by the two physicians present."

Asked why he was given a tranquilizer after being refused beer with his last meal, she said, "It was for medicinal reasons and beer isn't used for medicinal reasons."

Judy said that as his last request, he wanted to have some pictures taken. A guard was sent in search of an instant color camera, and returned a short time later. About eight pictures were taken, showing the bald-headed Judy wearing a white T-shirt, blue shirt and jeans, and holding a cigarette. He gave the photographer a half-smile. Harris said the foster parents had the pictures and were not making them public.

"I think it was just a spontaneous decision, and he wanted the Carrs (his foster parents) to see how he looked."

Extension Focus

By Linda Pittman
County Extension Agent,
Home Economics

As warmer weather approaches, you may be interested in getting involved in an exciting new program.

The Extension Service has several opportunities scheduled for you in the near future. These countywide programs are open to the public and may be just what you're looking for.

STRETCH AND SEW CLASSES: "Stretch and Sew" classes will be taught in Lubbock if we can get enough to register. We must have 25 in each class. The cost for four sessions is $25. The seminar sessions will include T-shirts, slacks, skirt with waistband, lab front blouse, jacket and a V-neck blouse. You may register for an afternoon (1-2 p.m.) or evening (7-9 p.m.) class. Classes are arranged for April 7, 14, 21 and 28. Call the Extension Office at 741-8084 to register.

SOLAR HOME TOUR: Be sure to put March 20 on your calendar and plan to attend. We will tour a local solar home, the Crosbyton solar home, the Crosbyton solar plant, gift and antique shops and a museum. The tour will be from 8:30 a.m. - 6 p.m. March 20. The tour is limited to 40 people. Call 741-8084 to register by March 13.

Do you fall for supermarket gimmicks?

Have you ever gone to the store for strawberries, and gone home with the little shortcake package and whipped cream too?

Do your children find great delight in picking out all the sugar-coated cereals the store has to offer?

All that is fun, occasionally — but not if you sacrifice family nutrition with frequent gimmick buying — impulse buying.

To avoid this, take time to plan purchases. Shop with a list so you aren't vulnerable to "point-of-purchase" influences at the supermarket. Read labels and study food advertisements. Understand as much as possible about nutrition and needed serving sizes. Also, learn about the "cost per pound" or "cost per ounce" and then figure how many servings that pound will make or how many ounces will make a serving.

In addition, seek information from your County Extension Office about food buying and nutrition. Many booklets and pamphlets are available to the public at no charge. Come by the Lubbock County Office at 800 Broadway and pick up a variety of pamphlets.

Finally, be aware of supermarket gimmicks, such as the strawberry shortcake displays, and the sugar-coated cereal placed at child's eye-level. Other gimmicks include colorful banners, slogans and marketing products themselves — all of which induce a mid-hypnotic-trance in many consumers, according to one study.

Remember, unless you're careful, these gimmicks can lead to the purchase of more high-profit, eye-appealing, self-gratifying — and less nutritious — buying.

Preventing Poisonings Begins With Knowledge

DALLAS (Special) — March 15-22 is national poison prevention week, and attention is focused on preventing accidental poisonings, which endanger the lives of people, especially children, each year.

How do accidental poisonings occur? Test your knowledge with the following quiz from Kindergard Corporation. What you don't know unnecessarily endangers your child's safety, and could even cost a life. Answer true or false:

1. The most common age of children who are accidentally poisoned is 3 to 5, when they are coordinated enough to climb up to medicine cabinets.
2. The best way to prevent small children from being poisoned is to discipline them every time they try to touch a container of anything that could be dangerous.
3. A child with a history of pica (the desire to eat non-foods) is more likely to eat poisons.
4. Children do not eat poison because they are hungry.

Answers to quiz:

1. False. Children between the ages of one and four are more likely to eat poisons, and the parents of victims were usually unaware of their ability to get to and eat hazardous household products and medicines.

2. False. Very young children need parental protection, not warnings. Their judgment is not developed enough to be trusted in what could be as life and death situation.

3. True. One study showed at least 50 percent of the poisoning incidents they studied to be related to a history of pica.

4. False. Studies show that the majority of all accidents, including poisonings, occur when a child is either overdue for a meal or in the hour just before the evening meal.

If you answered two or more right, you probably know more about poison prevention than most people. Poisons are present in almost every home. Yet other factors are at work that create a greatly increased probability of accidental child poisoning. Here is a list of conditions that are common in actual poisonings that were studied:

The accidental poisoning victim is likely to be:

- Hyperactive, the parent has a hard time managing child's energy
- One to three years old
- The youngest or only child
- Low in stress tolerance
- Overtired at time of accident
- Extremely hungry at time of accident
- With a history of eating non-foods

The life situation of a child who becomes a poison victim is likely to display these characteristics:

•A current disturbance of child's normal supervision

•The loss of parental contact through divorce or death

•Current illness of the parent who does the "mothering"

•Severe or continued family stress

•Accidental injuries or death in the family during the past year

•Lack of parent awareness of a young child's abilities and limitations

•Lack of parent awareness of hazards in the home.

When even one of these conditions exists, the possibility of an accidental child poisoning increases. In combination they can be deadly. All parents experience stress and times of impaired ability to supervise a small, active child. The danger of child poisoning exists even with a normally attentive and protective parent.

Poisoning can occur in seconds, and back-up security is essential to protect small children in moments when the parent is distracted. Extremely hazardous products such as drain cleaners containing lye, bleach, insecticides and medicines should be kept in out-of-the-way cabinets installed with a child protective device.

Studies show that families who have experienced the tragedy of child poisoning failed to understand the dangers of household poisons, and often did not take steps to protect their children from these products in the home. Such an environment is a silent menace waiting for an unguarded moment, a parent distracted due to illness or stress, and one more innocent child becomes a statistic with very real pain, disfigurement or death.

ANN LANDERS

Second Opinion From Doctor Preferable

Dear Ann Landers: I am not anti-doctor, but I am beginning to wonder about them. Here's why:

1. When our daughter was a few months old, a pediatrician suggested that we put her leg in a cast to straighten it. My husband and I decided against it. The girl is now 15 and her leg is perfect.

2. When another daughter was five, a different pediatrician recommended surgery as a solution to her bed-wetting problem. We ignored his recommendation. At the age of seven, she stopped wetting the bed.

3. In 1969, my gynecologist told me I ought to have a hysterectomy as a preventive measure. When I asked if anything was wrong with me NOW, he said, "No, but you will need this operation within five years. You are better off to have it done before you are in bad shape."

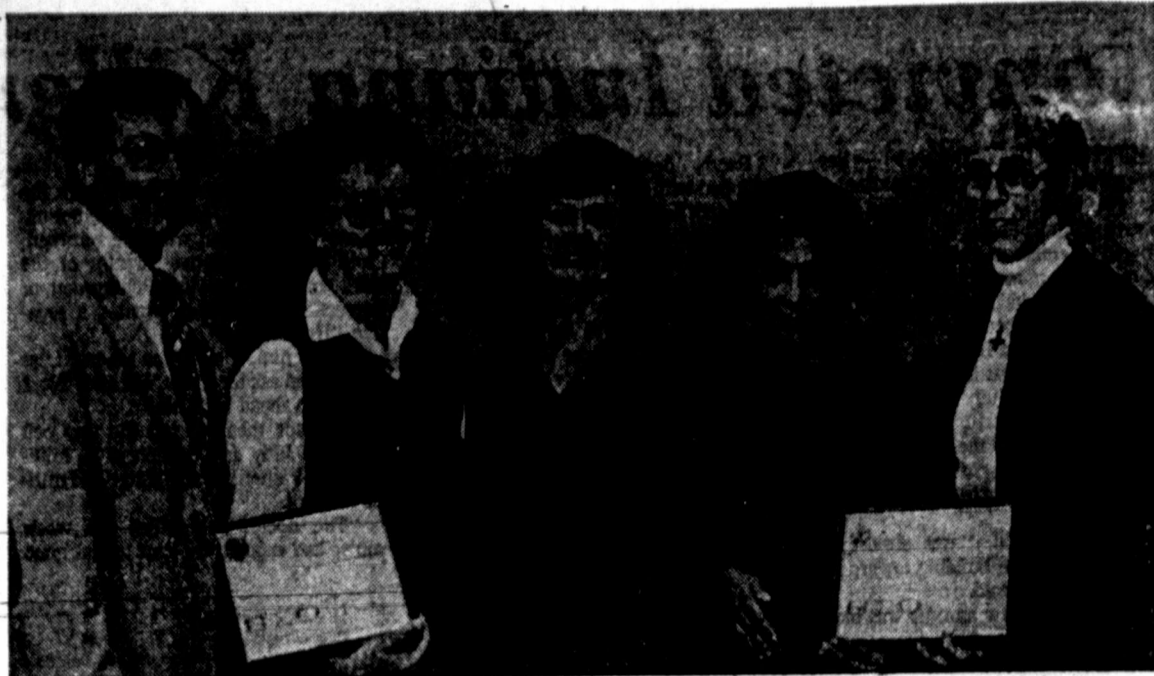

4. Our son was hyperkinetic from the day he was born. The doctor suggested Ritalin. He said the child would never function normally without it. A friend whose child had the same problem was given the same advice. She went to another doctor and he said, "I stopped using Ritalin a long time ago. You can accomplish the same thing by changing your child's diet."

5. We decided to take our child to that doctor, and the results were terrific. Our youngster is functioning beautifully both at home and in school. We thank the Lord every day we didn't put him on drugs.

I know you are pro-doctor, so I don't expect to see this letter in print — but I had to write it anyhow. — A.G.F. From Houston

Dear A.G.F.: My response can be found in your letter. It is in example No. 5. The message: GET A SECOND OPINION.

I am delighted that you wrote. You

PEOPLE WHO HELP — Alpha Epsilon Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi recently awarded its "People Helping People" award to these Lubbock citizens for their contributions to the

Five Honored For Contributions

Beta Sigma Phi has recently honored five outstanding citizens of the local community for their contributions to the well being of Lubbock.

Beta Sigma Phi is an international organization founded in 1931. Its purpose is to provide cultural and social activities for women. Members also experience the opportunity to help others through service projects of various kinds. The organization now has more than 250,000 members in nearly 12,000 chapters.

The International Office of Beta Sigma Phi has created a special award in conjunction with the Golden Anniversary of the organization. The "People Helping People" award was created so that individual chapters around the country could recognize and honor special people in their communities.

Alpha Epsilon Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi recognized Sister Phyllis Tallero, Gene and Imogene Sorley, and Marta Zermeno.

Sister Tallero serves on the Pastoral Care Ministry at St. Mary's Hospital. She works with patients and their families who are experiencing death and dying. In presenting the award, Lynn Cook, president of Beta Sigma Phi, commented that "her quiet and comforting ways have eliminated much confusion and provided comfort and solace for those she works with."

A native of San Francisco, Sister Tallero has taught music, history and Girl's Glee, worked as a missionary in the Solomon Islands, and served as administrator of St. Luke's Hospital, and the Queen of the Valley Hospital.

Gene and Imogene Sorley are the parents of five children, and active members of the community. He is an individual, marriage and family therapist, a Methodist minister and part-time chaplain at Methodist Hospital. Mrs. Sorley has authored five books, and is a teacher at Parsons Elementary School. The pair have worked with CONTACT-Lubbock in various positions, and he has served on its board. They are members of St. John's United Methodist Church, and have conducted workshops and groups for many different agencies and groups.

Marta Zermeno, a native of Mexico, is a naturalized citizen of the U.S., who has lived in Lubbock for 20 years. She has worked at the Lubbock State School for 11 years, for the past eight years as a teacher of autistic children.

After being widowed, she reared her three children and attended college. She has increased her family to include two foster children.

Mrs. Pittman joined the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in April, 1972, as assistant county agent in Hockley County. She became Extension Home Economics Program leader in September 1975, and served there until transferred to Lubbock County.

A native of Quannah, she graduated from Hereford High School and received her bachelor and master of science degrees from Texas Tech University. She is a member of the American Home Economics Association, Texas Home Economics Association, National Association of Extension Home Economists, Texas Association of Extension Home Economists and Texas State Nutrition Council. She was named Outstanding Young Woman of America in 1979.

She is a member of the Women's Division of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and serves on the insurance committee of the Better Business Bureau of the South Plains, Inc. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.G. Lynch Jr., of Lubbock and married to Larry E. Pittman, formerly of Kress.

HINTS FROM HELOISE:

Gum Eraser Removes Spot From Leather

DEAR HELOISE:
I have a beautiful suede leather coat which is stained and soiled looking. Can you recommend a way I can clean it myself? — Lisa Copeland

For simple stains, try rubbing an art gum eraser on the stain. The fine side of an emery board can also be gently rubbed on the spot. Many times this is all that is needed.

However, since you probably have a rather substantial investment in the coat, you may be wise to send it to a professional cleaner.

The International Fabricare Institute (IFI) tells me that genuine suede and other leathers require special processing to maintain their beautiful finish, feel, and color.

One of the problems in cleaning leather, suede included, is that defects in the skin are often masked by the manufacturer by treating them with oils, dyes, or pigments. These masking dyes are not always colorfast and may fade during processing. If this happens, the skin defects become noticeable as a light area on suede and a dark area on leather.

To help your cleaner do a better job for you in cleaning suede clothing, here are some tips IFI suggests you follow at the time you take your garment in.

Point out to your cleaner all spots and stains and their causes, if possible, in order that he may best know how to handle them.

All pieces of a multi-piece outfit should be cleaned at the same time to help insure that colors will match afterwards.

You can help to prolong a garment's good looks by careful brushing with a good suede brush. When storing, do not place in a plastic bag. Leather must have air circulation to keep it from drying out.

Thanks to IFI for their tips on suede care. While I know professional cleaning of any leather may sound expensive at the time, in the long run it could be the cheaper route to take. — Hugs, Heloise

MINI COAT HANGERS

DEAR HELOISE:
Since manufacturers probably heed your advice, would you mention that there is a crying need to have clothes hangers in sizes both for children and adults.

What fits a size 3 child doesn't hold an adult size 8 coat etc. — Jean O'Connor

True! But did you know that some of the larger department stores will gladly give you their excess plastic hangers from their infant and toddler clothing?

Might pay you to check with some of your local stores — it doesn't hurt to ask! The store I checked with was more than willing to give customers whatever they had on hand. — Heloise

"Haste makes waste" certainly is a good adage for declarer to follow when he is in a slam contract.

South wasted no time in hastening to lose his slam. As he explained slowly and carefully after the ace fell, it was really bad luck, but somehow or other the explanation fell on deaf ears as far as North was concerned. East and West accepted it gracefully.

South won the club lead, cashed his queen and jack of spades. He then entered dummy with the queen of hearts, discarded his queen-ten of diamonds on the ace-king of spades and started on the rest of the heart suit.

East held four hearts and the last spade and had to get those two tricks.

Do you see how South could have made the slam?

Fairly easy. At trick four he should have played low hearts from both the North and South hands. This would have cost him a 30 point overtrick against a 3-3 heart break, but given him 1440 points for making a slam against the five spade-four heart combination he was up against.

TIRE TRACTION

DEAR HELOISE:

During a recent severe snow storm, we were lucky to make our way home. But getting the car up a slightly inclined driveway and into the garage stopped us cold.

We couldn't think of anything to provide traction for the tires as we didn't have any sand until I thought of some rock salt used in our water softener.

We sprinkled it on the snow and ice and five minutes later we were safely inside, away from the howling winds. — L.S.

DEAR HELOISE:

Can't keep up with your scarf when you take it off your head or neck?

Sew a small loop to the inside of your coat pocket, then run the scarf through the loop.

It won't crawl out of your pocket and disappear just when you need it the most. — Sandy Morris

DEFROSTING TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of using a sponge mop when defrosting a chest-type freezer, just put several thirsty bath towels in the bottom, walk off and do something interesting.

The couple plans to be married March 21 in Trinity Baptist Church.

Vegetarians Should Take Care To Get All Required Nutrients

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — Vegetarians, as well as everyone else, should bear in mind the four-food-group approach to good nutrition. Recommended servings for each of the basic four (meat, milk, vegetable/fruit, bread/cereal) can be geared to include non-meat foods.

For instance, within the meat group are foods such as nuts, legumes, fish and meat substitutes usually made from soybeans. Daily servings should include two for children, teenagers and adults.

The recommended daily number of servings from the milk group is three for children, four for teenagers and two for adults. Each age group should receive four servings from the fruit/vegetable group as well as the bread/cereal group each day.

Vegetarians need to make certain their diets provide sufficient quantities of crucial nutrients, including complete protein and essential vitamins and minerals.

If an individual is a strict vegetarian and does not consume any dairy products, eggs, fish or meat, he will have a more difficult time of insuring an adequate intake of essential nutrients found in these foods.

Nutrients posing specific problems for the strict vegetarian are protein, calcium, riboflavin, iron, and vitamin D. For example, we usually obtain 75% of our daily calcium intake from milk group foods.

When utilizing foods of plant origin as your primary source of calcium, the quantity one must consume is often many times that of a normal serving. For example, to equal the calcium in 1 ounce of milk or 1 1/2 ounces cheese, one would need to consume either 10 eggs, 1 1/2 pounds of carrots, 7 oranges, 7 pounds of potatoes or 1 1/2 pounds of cabbage.

Practicing vegetarianism and being well-nourished requires special care in choosing a variety of foods from the basic four food groups.

Severe Anemia Has No Cure

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.
Dear Dr. Donohue: My doctor told me I had thalassemia minor and that nothing can be done about it. I am always tired. I am 59 years old. Please explain thalassemia. — A.B.

Thalassemia is an inherited hemolytic anemia. Hemolytic means that the anemia is not due to either bleeding or iron deficiency, but to the fact that the red blood cells are not living out their normal lives.

Thalassemia major is the quite severe form. The red blood cell count gets dangerously low, less than half the normal level. If it becomes life-threatening, transfusions are given. This is not what you have.

You have thalassemia minor, the more common type. It is mild, with the blood count getting only to about 15 percent low normal. Only rarely do people with this have symptoms that need treatment. So your doctor didn't mean that nothing can be done, but that nothing NEED be done.

Your kind of thalassemia usually is discovered later in life, without it having given the person trouble. I don't know if your fatigue is related to your thalassemia. You don't mention your blood count. Unless it is very low, there's no real point in giving transfusions.

You might ask, why not one little transfusion to make me feel better? The answer is that one transfusion would do no permanent good. The transfused red blood cells would be gone in a few months and you would need more transfusions. Besides, other factors may be causing your fatigue.

This anemia is prevalent among the people who live near the Mediterranean Sea or in their descendants. In Southern Italy, 10 percent of the people have thalassemia. Most people don't know it. You will sometimes hear it called Cooley's anemia or Mediterranean anemia.

Dear Dr. Donohue: You seem to be a patient man. I hope you can put up with another letter on the thyroid gland. What are the tests T 3 and T 4? When thyroid medication is given does it make any difference what time of the day it is taken? How long before the symptoms for which a person is taking it subside? — Mrs. N.V.

(1) T-3 and T-4 are abbreviations for two thyroid hormones in the blood. They can be measured to see if the thyroid gland is producing them in sufficient quantity. (2) It does not matter what time of day you decide to schedule your medicine because it lasts 24 hours. (3) It is better to take it at the same time each day. (4) The effects of the medicine should be noticed in from two to three weeks. See the booklet, "Your Thyroid: How It Works for You." To get a copy, write Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Here's my solution for the child who is carsick. Our daughter was under two years of age and she would get carsick only in the daytime. We used motion sickness medicine until we found the real answer. She needed glasses. Her two eyes were not working together to focus properly during trips. She has not been carsick since, and that has been seven years. — C.S.

A good example of how blurred images can bring on car sickness.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a heavy smoker, but noticed that since I have been pregnant the desire to smoke has left. In fact, the idea of a cigarette almost nauseates me. Is this common? — Mrs. T.P.

No, some women report this. Unfortunately, the aversion disappears in a few months. It can be a good time to kick the habit, though. Besides, smoking during pregnancy is harmful to the developing baby.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have always heard and read positive-negative answers to this question: Can a female in good health in her mid-60s exercise to rid herself of midriff fat? I am under the impression that all errors have a correction. Am I wrong? — Mrs. M.E.V.

If the female in her mid-60s is in good health and physically able to exercise, there's no reason in the world why she should not do it. Exercises help strengthen abdominal muscles to provide a natural girdle — the best kind. Don't expect any exercise to take off fat locally, though. That is impossible.

So if your body weight is too much, dieting has to be considered in any program to lose the bulge. Note: Sometimes, what appears to be a bulging abdomen turns out to be a sagging or swaying of the lower back. If that is the problem, then exercises to strengthen the lower back muscles (to straighten the sway) will correct what appears to be a bulging middle. That's the positive part.

Doctors are cautious about suggesting exercise for older women. As you have probably also read, women's bones tend to thin with age, and injudicious stress can cause great problems for them.

So there is the negative part of the answer again. Sorry.

To learn about the major categories of prostate trouble — symptoms, treatment, how to speed recovery — read the booklet, "The Pesky Prostate." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Iowa Antique Clothing Collection Has Items From Early 1800s

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — "Sunbonnet, worn for dress occasions and church about 1900."

This is the description in a card catalog for one of the items in the collection of antique clothing belonging to the Department of Home Economics at the University of Iowa.

Begun in the early 1930s by Lula E. Smith, now an associate professor emerita living in Flint, Mich., the collection includes clothing ranging back to the first decade of the 1800s.

Donated by descendants of early Iowa families and by faculty members or their spouses, the garments include a number of wedding dresses — among them a black silk gown worn around 1830 before white had become traditional for brides.

Men's clothing among the garments packed away in metal cabinets includes a gabardine suit coat from the early 1800s and two three-piece suits worn to a wedding in 1942.

Among baby clothes donated to the collection over the years is a christening dress worn in 1828 by an infant who grew up to become the first dean of the university's law school. Of fine batiste, it is all handmade.

Underwear in the collection includes lingerie from the trousseau of an 1856 bride, and nightgowns, net and linen nightcaps, corsets, pantalettes and pantaloons from throughout the 1800s.

Many of the garments in the collection came from the days before "ready-made" clothing was available and are fine examples of the sewing skills developed by the mothers and aunts and grandmothers who were the seamstresses for their families.

Also included are clothes made by fine dressmakers, among them a "modiste" from Kansas City, Mo., who created many costumes for the late Mrs. William Rohlf, the wife of an early Waverly, Iowa, surgeon who was a University of Iowa medical graduate. This modiste made periodic trips to Paris to bring back gowns and make modified copies for her customers.

After Mrs. Rohlf's death in 1965, a friend who knew of the collection because she had been a home-economics student at the university brought a carload of clothing from the attic of the Rohlf home to the campus.

Gowns in the collection include one bought in Paris before 1920 and another purchased in Vienna around 1910, both by wives of University of Iowa professors.

Among accessories are vellum and organdy fans, hoops, bustles, a cashmere shawl, an 1890 umbrella, hat pins and a black velvet muff. Another unusual item is a silver-handled shoe buttoner.

Garments from the collection have come out of storage on a number of occasions. Home-economics students modeled selected costumes in a fashion show of antique clothing in Old Capitol on the campus in the 1930s, Lula Smith recalls.

Old Capitol was restored in the early 1970s to reflect the years it served as the last capitol of the Territory of Iowa from 1842-46 and the first capitol of the state from 1846-57. It housed university administrative offices from 1857 until work on its restoration was begun in 1970.

Three costumes from the 1800s are on display on mannequins in a case in Old Capitol, now a National Historic Landmark. Clothing from the 1880s was on display in the Department of Home Economics for three months in connection with the opening of Old Capitol to the public in 1976 after its restoration.

A complete costume from the 1960s was contrasted with 1970s' styles in a department display case recently to spotlight the return to favor of 1950s' fashions in current styles.

Other uses which have been made of the collection: —Department stores borrow items for window displays. —Researchers come to the campus to study early costumes. One contrasted urban and rural dress at the turn of the century for a master's thesis.

—Faculty members have checked details of early garments for the Iowa State Historical Society.

—Students in a course in the identification and development of Western costume have referred to the collection when studying deterioration of fabrics and restoration techniques.

A goal of the Department of Home Economics is to provide storage on hangers, allowing "breathing space" between, for a number of garments in its collection, according to Dr. Margaret Keyes, professor of home economics who has directed the preservation of antiques at the university since Miss Smith retired.

"When clothes are stored folded, fabric will deteriorate along any creases," Dr. Keyes explains.

"When space becomes available after remodeling of the building housing the Department of Home Economics, we hope to display costumes from the collection on a rotating basis," says Dr. Sara Wolfson, who now chairs the department.

As an adjunct to the collection, Dr. Betty Kelly is saving catalogs from four major pattern manufacturers each year. Students use the catalogs in studying such details as the evolution of hem widths and the lengths of skirts.

Christian Church Open House Set For Tonight

First Christian Church will open house and registration for its fall 1981 preschool and kindergarten programs Tuesday from 7 until 8 p.m.

Classrooms will be open and staff members on hand to answer questions and talk with parents. Samples of teaching materials and curriculum will be on display for viewing. Child care will be available for those who make reservations by calling 763-1995.

A schedule is offered for children from three through five, varying from two to five days a week, and with tuition ranging from $26 to $46 per month. A bus is available, for an additional fee, for children needing it. A $30 pre-registration fee will be due at the time of registration.

Fertility Dependent On Economy

AUSTIN (Special) — Family planning programs may not always have much impact on declines in fertility rates, a University of Texas sociologist has concluded after a three-year study in Colombia.

Dr. Frank D. Bean, chairman of the Sociology Department, presented his findings recently at a population control seminar at the Brookings Institute in Washington, D.C. He conducted the research in collaboration with Dr. Michael Conroy, UT associate professor of economics.

Their study, Bean said, determined that fertility is more dependent on economic development than family planning programs, a conclusion he acknowledged "is at odds with some other research."

Nevertheless, he cautioned policy makers that direct expenditures on family planning activities may be less likely to affect fertility than expenditures on programs more directly addressed to increasing female status.

Using the 1973 Colombian census, the researchers concluded that female status plays a "crucial role" in the determination of fertility levels.

"Higher levels of any of the major dimensions of female status (education, labor force participation, income and freedom from unemployment) are strongly and consistently related to lower levels of fertility," the study said.

Population experts, policy makers, private agency and academic representatives joined Bean at the seminar entitled "Measures of Modernity and Contraceptive Use: Policy Implications of Research from Two Latin American Countries."

Costa Rica was the other country discussed, although Bean was responsible only for the research in Colombia.

The research was the focal point of the seminar, Bean explained.

"People charged with making policy wanted to know to what extent have family planning programs been responsible for reductions in fertility," he said.

In the introduction of their 200-page report, Drs. Bean and Conroy said, "It appears to be unmistakable that something important has happened" demographically in Colombia.

They point out that the crude birth rate in that country fell from 47.2 in the early 1950s to 31.0 by the mid 1970s. (The crude birth rate is the number of children born per thousand population.)

An analysis of the census data suggests, said the study, that those decreases in fertility levels have been the most important component of a decrease in overall growth from 3.2 percent per year to 2.64 percent.

There also is evidence that the fertility decline in Colombia has been characteristic of women of all ages and regions, Bean said.

The decline is one of the sharpest in the world, he added, and the causes of such a drop in a country with per capita income still below $700 per year had not been studied really rigorously until now.

He noted that Colombia is in the midst of one of the most rapid socioeconomic transformations in Latin America and the world.

"On the other hand, Colombia has had one of the most widely spread programs of public and private family planning services among any of the larger, high-fertility countries in Latin America," he said.

The research conducted by Bean and Conroy was funded by the Agency for International Development of the U.S. State Department.

Bean believes the study will help in planning programs in Latin America countries pertaining to development and population control. "It's just one more piece of the puzzle," he said.

The professor, who has done extensive research on fertility including fertility variation among Mexican migrants to the U.S., said the fertility rate in Colombia is still moderately high.

"If the goal is to diminish fertility, the government may want to know what it should do — set up more family planning programs or increase education and economic opportunities," he said. "Our research suggests that family planning programs in the absence of economic development may not have much impact."

Fresh Fruit Salad Adds Color To Winter Menus

NEW YORK (Special) — What better way to put color into winter menus than with bright fresh fruit salads. Many popular fruits, especially citrus from California-Arizona, are in excellent supplies during the winter months. Salads such as Waldorf and fruited slaw make excellent menu additions, as do citrus salads of orange and grapefruit slices and segments of tangerines.

For a luncheon or entree salad, why not combine the three most popular fruits — crisp apples, mellow flavored bananas and sweet, juicy oranges. Add additional color with any of the winter varieties of grapes and salad greens. To accent this fruit entree salad, try a thick, creamy pineapple-sour cream dressing, desserts and many baked goods.

Lemon Cake Muffins acquire their lemony goodness with both fresh lemon juice and grated peel. These are especially good served with any luncheon fresh fruit salad — light, lemony and luscious!

WINTER FRUIT SALAD WITH PINEAPPLE DRESSING

- 1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple, well drained
- 2/3 cup dairy sour cream
- 2 tbsps. honey grated peel of 1/2 fresh orange
- 1/4 cup chopped nuts
- 3 California-Arizona oranges, peeled, cut in cartwheels
- 2 red apples, unpeeled, sliced
- 2 bananas, sliced
- Green and red grape clusters
- Salad greens

To make salad dressing, combine drained pineapple, sour cream, honey and orange peel; chill. To serve, stir in nuts. On four individual serving plates, arrange fruit on salad greens. Serve with salad dressing. Makes 4 serving.

LEMON CAKE MUFFINS

- 1 cup flour
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened

'Dogs Of War' Has Bark, Also Bite

"The Dogs Of War." Screenplay by Gary DeVore and George Malko; based on the novel by Frederick Forsythe. Photographed by Jack Cardiff. Edited by Antony Gibbs. Music by Geoffrey Burgon. Directed by John Irvin. Stars Christopher Walken, Colin Blakely and Tom Berenger. Rated R. At the Fox Fourplex on a double bill with "Any Which Way You Can."

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Boasting both a loud bark and an occasionally nasty bite, not to mention the shadowy mystery of a Christopher Walken performance, John Irvin's film translation of Frederick Forsythe's novel "The Dogs Of War" certainly isn't going to bore anyone.

A tale of mercenaries — professional soldiers hiring out to the highest bidder — planning and undertaking a violent one-night takeover of a fictitious African dictatorship, it succeeds quite well as a thriller and an action film. And yet one can't help but leave feeling at least a little bothered by individual scenes. Indeed, it is the film's expression of self-importance and relevance, as well as Irvin's totally out-of-character slips into cliché, which nag at the viewer.

The picture opens with a group of mercenaries beating a hasty retreat from an assignment in central America, after which the cameras zero in for a more personal look at their leader, an American named Jamie Shannon. One wonders why he fights these battles, what satisfaction he gets and what he does with the money he earns. He lives in a ratty apartment, his television's picture constantly rolling silently as the newscasters discuss world affairs (symbolic perhaps?) and each dresser drawer and room concealing a firearm.

No matter how intriguing Shannon may be — and he expresses his loner status well when asked to name his insurance beneficiary — we can't help but want more. We want to know more about his past, more about his failed marriage (an attempted reconciliation is the corniest scene in the film), and his supposedly non-existent family. We know he doesn't believe in begging or handouts (he'll hire a begging neighborhood kid to carry his groceries), but we never really learn why he prefers such a dangerous line of work.

Even more important is the fact that, no matter how mysterious Shannon may be, no matter how much we are affected by the same wide, pain-filled eyes Christopher Walken exposed in "The Deer Hunter," we simply cannot buy a mercenary with morals, a hired killer who cares about leadership in a foreign land. After all, if a businessman or company can hire mercenaries, either can certainly afford to have those same mercenaries silently killed when they return home — so why would Walken risk his life and those of his friends in a fit of moral conscience?

But I'm getting ahead of myself. The setting for this bit of violence and decision-making is an African nation called Zambara. (If this is fiction, why does the villain so much resemble Idi Amin?) Walken is first hired to do reconnaissance there, discovering the hard way that a mad man sits on the throne. Beaten and tortured almost beyond recognition, Walken is finally deported, only to be sent back to initiate a coup d'état.

Irvin used a central American location, but it certainly fits the bill. Indeed, he ably juxtaposes the land and his extras to create a mood of poverty and fear. The torture is brutally believable. And while it certainly wasn't necessary to introduce the gimmick of a unique weapon which fires rockets, gas pellets and bullets, it was still gratifying to notice the planning of the mission given as much time and detail as the violence it must involve.

The gun is treated like something out of "Dirty Harry," a good gimmick for the ads, and the night of romance serves as the cornball last straw which propels Walken towards another mission. These are old-hat movie clichés, and Irvin should have known better than to include them. Also, during his battle scenes, one mercenary is killed when he assumes a woman poses no threat. Now come on guys, you're telling me a killer for hire, in the middle of a fire fight, is going to start sparing the women in an enemy compound?

The scene brought back memories of Pike Bishop turning his back in "The Wild Bunch," but at least Pike had more pressing problems on his flank and director Sam Peckinpah still created a dramatic effect. In "The Dogs Of War," it's just a cheap trick tossed in to make us feel sympathy for the mercenaries.

While the explosions and pacing and general havoc are entertaining, it also becomes obvious that Irvin is aware of his visuals. Too much so. In one scene, the four mercenaries stand together, firing from the hip, illuminated only by firelight — and one can almost hear Irvin saying, "That'll make a great lobby card."

Mind you, while the movie does run hot and cold, the positive values do dominate. Irvin instills a sense of cold menace in those buying and selling lives and countries. In fact, the most eerie scene in the film could very well be one in which Walken's financial contact finds the brutally murdered body of an underling in his den, yet continues his phone conversation as though nothing had happened.

Tom Berenger, who may be forever remembered as Diane Keaton's killer in "Looking For Mister Goodbar," is totally wasted as Drew, the more anxious mercenary. But Walken, despite his character's lack of revelation, keeps us enthralled.

The photography by Jack Cardiff is superb, and not enough can be said about the cynical humor injected by Colin Blakely as a television reporter confined in Zambara. He steals every scene he's in.

But on the whole, Irvin's flaws, his unnecessary reliance upon cliché, keeps "The Dogs Of War" from attaining any sort of memorable stature. Sure, as an action film, a glimpse into the dark world of mercenary soldiers, it remains terrific entertainment. But then there is, after all, always a market for guns and bullets on screen.

Shuttle Flight Could End Prematurely

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The astronauts who will fly the first space shuttle said Monday that failure of any major system could lead to an early end to the maiden flight of the "Columbia" next month.

"The way we designed the mission, now we will probably come home early," astronaut Robert Crippen said at a news conference. "Just about anything can break and we'll decide to go ahead and terminate it."

The launch of the reusable spacecraft tentatively is scheduled for April 7. The first flight is to last 54½ hours with Crippen and Commander John Young at the controls.

Young expressed some doubt that the scheduled landing site, the Mojave Desert lakebed at Edwards Air Force Base in California, will be dry enough for the Columbia's use. Recent rains have flooded large areas of the landing site. If it is deemed unusable, the shuttle would land at White Sands, N.M.

Work has begun at the Cape Canaveral launch site to remove, repair and replace 17 insulating panels that loosened from the shuttle's huge external fuel tank recently. The reworking operation began Sunday and is expected to take about two weeks.

After that, a definite launching date will be set. Space officials now are saying only that they're aiming for the week of April 5.

"If we get a couple of significant failures, we will come home on the first day, probably on the fifth revolution" of Earth, Crippen said. The full mission is 36 orbits long, but Young said just getting the shuttle into space and back will satisfy most of the flight's objectives.

He called Columbia's flight "a conservative mission."

Young said the flight is planned so that the astronauts could come back to Earth and land at any time.

"On almost every orbit, we can get home," he said.

In addition to landing sites at Edwards, White Sands and Cape Canaveral, there are contingency sites at Rota, Spain, Okinawa and Hickam Field in Hawaii.

For instance, the Columbia would land at Rota if two of its three engines failed during liftoff and Young said that would be "the fastest trans-Atlantic flight ever." With the failure of one engine, the astronauts still could get into orbit.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until mid-afternoon there will be obstacles and delays in your path of progress. Think about expansion you wish in the future and less about the present. Be more optimistic.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Attending to routine chores early in the day will give you more time to be with congenials later. Cooperate more with others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your hunches are not good early in the day but later they are most helpful. Join good friends for recreational purposes.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make plans to have more income in the days ahead. Take time to improve your appearance and you can easily impress others.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can now plan how to have added abundance in the future. A wiser attitude toward loved one brings excellent results.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study the amount of effort needed to gain an important goal. Show that you will go to any length to please the one you love.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Handle any civic duties ahead of you early in the day and later you can enjoy the social side of life. Be active and happy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Look over your surroundings and make plans for improvement. Be sure to control your temper at all times today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan how to complete your regular chores with fewer interruptions and more efficiency. Study statements for possible errors.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You could easily make a costly mistake where finances are concerned so be on the alert. Engage in favorite hobby.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may find it hard to get things done early in the day, but later you can make up for lost time. Strive for increased happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get an early start on that work you have to do instead of complaining and you get fine benefits from it. Be logical.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Others around you may seem pessimistic about the future, but don't let this influence you. Maintain a cheerful manner.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be good at understanding anything of a psychological nature and should have the education directed along such lines for best results in lifetime. There is musical talent in this chart. Religious training is a must.

COMPLETE STOCK MARKET ANALYSIS, AMEX

Stock Mart Posts Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices surged Monday, amid optimism over prospects for further declines in interest rates and chances for curbing the rate of inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which lost 9.96 points last week, soared 11.80 to end the day at 976.42.

Advances outnumbered declines by a better than 3-2 margin on the New York Stock Exchange. Gains were widespread among blue-chip stocks and encompassed a broad range of other issues, including airline, chemical, oil, metal, retail and financial stocks.

Big Board volume totaled 46.18 million shares, against 43.94 million in the previous session.

Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp. said despite last week's setback, the market has been slowly gaining ground since the Dow Jones industrials average plunged to 931.57 on Feb. 13.

Monday's gains "confirm what has been building in the minds of investors — an improved sense of optimism," Gordon said.

Late Friday, the Federal Reserve reported a decline in the most closely watched measure of the nation's money supply. The Fed was taken as a sign that the news is gaining better control over monetary growth in the fight against inflation.

NEW YORK (AP) — Monday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of 10:30 a.m. are listed below. Volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Budget Slash Proposals Ready For Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan wrapped up his proposals, Monday, for an unprecedented budget-cutting blitz that delves into more than 300 federal programs to trim $6.4 billion from government spending this year and $48.6 billion in 1982.

Accompanied by several dozen officials from his budget office, Reagan signed the package in the White House Rose Garden and declared he would not hesitate to ask for more cuts if they are necessary to keep within the spending limits he seeks.

"These are unprecedented cuts to meet an unprecedented situation," Reagan said of his proposals, which will be submitted formally to Congress on Tuesday. "They mark the end of an old era and the beginning of a new one."

Tax Cut Details
Reagan also planned to submit to Congress on Tuesday the details of his tax-cut proposals, which he unveiled last month when he outlined his economic recovery plan.

Reagan's spending cuts have drawn cheers from most business groups and fiscal conservatives and outcry from the pained defenders of dozens of affected social programs. Even as his raised his pen, for example, thousands of coal miners were massed in the capital's streets to protest a cutback in the black lung program.

Reagan said he considers special interest groups the biggest threat to his legislative package. "We must see to it that the voice of the average American, not that of special interests or full-time lobbyists, is the dominant one," he said.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the president turned to his budget director, David Stockman, who had been standing behind him, and presented the signed original of a political cartoon drawn by Dwane Powell of the Raleigh, N.C., News and Observer.

Used Cement Blocks
The cartoon showed Reagan in the Oval Office, bare to the walls except for a desk made from an old door resting on concrete blocks, with the president shouting: "Stockman!"

On the back of the framed drawing, Reagan had written: "Dear Dave, I hope you used second-hand cement blocks; the price of concrete is out of sight."

The administration also revealed for the first time, Monday, that a good chunk of the proposed budget cuts were borrowed from recommendations left by Reagan's Democratic predecessor, Jimmy Carter.

Some $300 million of the cuts for 1981 and $8.2 billion in cuts for 1982 were proposed by the Carter administration, administration officials said.

The tax proposals include a 10 percent annual reduction in personal income tax rates in each of the next three years, and a business tax cut in the form of accelerated depreciation schedules.

The administration contends that its program of budget and tax cuts, roll-backs in federal regulation and federal lending and restricted growth of the nation's money supply will bring inflation down sharply and stimulate increased economic growth. At that, Reagan cautioned last week it could be a year before the economy takes an upward swing.

Budgets "Locked Up"
Edwin Dale, a spokesman for Reagan's budget office, said the revised budgets for fiscal 1981, which ends Sept. 30, and fiscal 1982 were "locked up" Monday morning.

Reagan outlined most of his economic plan in a Feb. 18 appearance before Congress. However, he detailed only $34.8 billion of the 1982 budget cuts he wants.

Tuesday's package will disclose the $13.8 billion in remaining cuts he is seeking. Some of the additional cuts will come in programs already affected by the first round announced last month, while others will hit programs previously spared the budget ax.

White House Press Secretary James Brady also said the budget plan will propose a $2.6 billion increase in user fees for federally maintained facilities. Reagan previously proposed a $2 billion increase in user fees.

Administration officials have confirmed that programs affected by the new round of cuts will include veterans' programs, farm subsidies, water projects, subsidized loans, employment training and legal services.

In addition, an administration official confirmed, Monday, that the new round of cuts will include a proposal to reduce federal subsidies to the federal Railroad Retirement Board, which oversees pensions for some one million retirees.

"This thing (program) is way out of balance and something has to be done," said the official, who did not want to be identified by name.

The railroad retirement system is the equivalent of Social Security for railroad workers.

The official declined to detail the proposed railroad retirement cuts, but the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, quoting retirement board sources, said the administration plans to ask Congress to reduce scheduled cost-of-living increases for pensioners and reduce the government's annual subsidy to the pension fund. President Carter had proposed a $350 million subsidy to the fund.

More than 80 programs were targeted for budget cuts in Reagan's Feb. 18 package, including food stamps, dairy price supports, Medicaid, student benefit programs, welfare, a variety of health and social service benefits, public housing, alternative energy development, public service jobs, mass transportation, the arts and humanities, subsidies to the Postal Service and federal employee retirement.

At the same time, the president is calling for a $4.3 billion increase in outlays for defense spending in 1982.

Reagan's revised budget would limit spending this year to $654.7 billion, with a $54.5 billion deficit. Spending in 1982 would be limited to $695.5 billion, with a $45 billion deficit.

The administration's program also calls for reducing new federal loans and loan guarantees over the next 1 1/2 years by 11 percent, or nearly $35 billion, from the levels proposed by Carter.

Under Reagan's lending plan, new loans, loan guarantees and mortgage insurance funds would be reduced from $154 billion to $140 billion in 1981 and from $149 billion to $128 billion in 1982.

Haig Declares U.S. Interest In Negotiating

White House with Haig for a brief meeting with Reagan.

Based on his discussions, Genscher said the Reagan administration appears to favor talks with the Soviets in all fields and at all levels.

As for the possibility of a U.S.-Soviet summit meeting, Genscher said any such meeting would require careful preparation but that West Germany is interested in seeing one take place.

He said the United States and West Germany agreed to "continue close and friendly cooperation, which we consider the key to a smooth functioning western alliance."

Asked about West Germany's proposed cutbacks in its defense modernization program, Genscher said his government will be able to meet its responsibilities under NATO.

Before the meeting, some analysts suggested the reductions could cause friction in Bonn's relationship with Washington, but Haig declined to criticize the West German decision.

Haig said the views of the two countries on major issues are identical or "at least sufficiently aligned so that I could not be more satisfied with the state of the relationship."

El Salvador Fighting Reported; Advisers Arrive From U.S.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Salvadoran army on Monday rushed reinforcements to Suchitoto, a small town 27 miles north of the capital, where fighting was reported between leftist guerrillas and government soldiers, an army source said.

About 20 U.S. military advisers, promised by the Reagan administration to help the governing junta in its fight against the guerrillas, arrived in San Salvador over the weekend, according to reliable sources who asked not to be identified.

That brought the number of U.S. military advisers in this Central American country to about 50, the sources said and added: "They are on non-combat missions, limited only to training and maintenance."

Increased Aid
President Reagan announced increased aid in support of the embattled civilian-military junta after U.S. intelligence reports said the leftists were being armed by the Soviet Union via Cuba and Nicaragua.

An army source, who asked anonymously, said Salvadoran troop reinforcements were sent from the army's 1st Infantry Brigade, headquartered in San Salvador, "with the purpose of annihilating some centers of insurrection in the area" north of the capital. No details were available.

Travelers from the countryside reported sharp firefights since Thursday between army patrols and guerrillas in Suchitoto, the nearby city of San Lorenzo and the northern town of Arcatao, near the Honduran border.

One witness said most of the fighting in San Lorenzo and Arcatao had died down Monday.

Since the guerrillas failed in what they had called a final offensive, Jan. 10, army spokesmen repeatedly claimed the military had succeeded in dominating the guerrillas. But new fighting has broken out in the past two months.

Another Offensive
Security officials said a captured guerrilla told them another offensive to overthrow the junta was being planned by the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front — a federation of five of the six guerrilla groups active in the country.

But they claimed the captured guerrilla, 28-year-old Sergio Antonio Salinas, also said there was sharp disagreement among the front's leaders. They said he described the Jan. 10 offensive as a failure.

"They destroyed our principal camps. But they (the guerrillas) still have strength in the central and western part of the country and they're preparing new actions" as big or bigger than those of Jan. 10, the security officials quoted Salinas as saying.

In the streets of the capital, authorities found seven more bodies of people killed during the night. Small squads of guerrillas seized two city buses in different areas, forced passengers off at gunpoint, and set the vehicles ablaze, a police spokesman said.

Many Killed
More than 16,000 people, mostly civilians, have been killed in the leftist-rightist fighting since the junta took power Oct. 15, 1979, after a military coup brought down Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero's rightist regime.

The junta — an army colonel and three civilians, dominated by the "centrist" Christian Democratic Party — has been unable to check the growing violence.

Sunday, the head of the Roman Catholic Church in El Salvador appealed for a "dialogue for peace" between the warring factions and said "the people are waiting for elections soon."

Cavazos Maps Revision Of Faculty Evaluation

tion, these are my reasons."

He says the objective format will ensure each faculty member is evaluated "critically and fairly."

Dr. Robert O'Reilly, director of Educational Research, Evaluation and Development at Health Sciences Center, is helping develop the new evaluation format.

To explain some of the ideas he is suggesting for the new system, he noted, as an example, that a faculty member who publishes only one article per year and uses in-house funds for research might receive one point on the rating scale. But a faculty member who publishes in perhaps 10 "recognized publications" per year and receives continuous research funding from outside sources could score perhaps five points.

O'Reilly noted that adaptations will be made for individual departments. He said, for example, that in the art department, ment, exhibits or pieces of artwork produced might be a more equitable criteria than publication.

Some faculty members in liberal arts already are gearing up to oppose certain aspects of the new system. Some argue that outside funding is not available in some fields and that the points system will favor faculty members in booming departments such as engineering, who can more easily obtain research grants.

But O'Reilly says there is plenty of room for individuality in the new format and a faculty member who is not heavily involved in research could make up the difference in points by excelling in other areas, including teaching. "It will allow different strokes for different folks," he said.

Among the changes O'Reilly will suggest is a more detailed evaluation of department chairmen. He outlined five areas of evaluation, encompassing administrative ability, decision making ability, interpersonal competence, group maintenance and task development ability.

He noted that in the category of interpersonal competence, a low point rating would be given to a chairman whose department exhibited closed, protective or defensive communication. He said such a department probably would include faculty members with a mutual distrust. A high point rating, however, would be given to a chairman who inspired cooperation, teamwork and open, non-manipulative communication among faculty members.

A chairman with an ability to organize tasks or identify department goals would score poorly in task development. But a chairman who developed "systematic procedures" for tasks, formulated goals and assigned roles of responsibility for various faculty members could earn high marks.

When asked if the evaluation changes will make some faculty members nervous, O'Reilly replied, "It takes people time to get used to the idea that evaluation can be a creative process." He says the new system will "facilitate the institution's objectives" and help faculty members "set more appropriate goals."

Cavazos says it's crucial for Texas Tech to develop more effective methods of evaluating faculty members, adding, "People have to be willing to be judged."

During the day, Monday, the rear door of the plane opened a crack frequently as an airline bus drove past the secluded parking place in a remote section of the airport. The bus made no stops and no one was seen coming out of the plane since supply cars served food and drinks to those on board in the morning.

One supplier who declined to be named later said the sole woman aboard was in hysterics. But he could not determine whether she was a passenger or a stewardess. He said the hijackers offered during radio negotiations with the airport tower to set her free if reporters and photographers present at the airport were allowed to get to the plane to meet her. But he said Syrian authorities turned down the offer.

Journalists were kept outside an airport gate at about a 900-yard distance from the plane throughout the day.

One caterer described the three pirates as younger men "who puzzled me by looking so clean-shaven, healthy and sober after seven days in the plane."

MINERS HAVE SAY — Hundreds of United Mine Workers union members gather outside union headquarters in Washington to begin a daylong protest against the administration's proposed cuts in black lung benefits. (AP Laserphoto)

Miners Blast Change In 'Black Lung' Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coal miners shut down hundreds of mines and marched on the White House, 6,000 strong, with chants of "Black lung kills!" Monday to protest President Reagan's proposed cutbacks in benefits for victims of the dread respiratory disease.

The march was the focal point of a two-day walkout, organized by the United Mine Workers, that closed virtually all of the nation's major coal mines.

UMW President Sam Church called for the two-day "memorial period" as labor's response to President Reagan's claim last month that the black lung benefits fund was in shaky condition because of alleged award abuses. The president called for tighter eligibility standards and a "reasonable" coal tax increase on mine operators.

Fight Promised
Church vowed a bitter fight by the union, which has 160,000 active members.

"I respect the office of the president, but I don't respect what he's trying to do to you," he told a cheering crowd.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland joined the ensuing half-mile march to the White House. As he passed the White House, many shouted, "Down with the jellybean!" referring to the president via his sweet tooth.

"I want you to know your brothers and sisters in the AFL-CIO are behind you in this," Kirkland declared. "This is just one of the fights we are going to have, but it symbolizes all the others because anyone who would take away benefits from disabled coal miners would stop at nothing."

There was no reaction from Reagan, but an administration official repeated Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan's assertion of last weekend that his aim is to make the black lung program solvent, not to deprive deserving claimants.

Monday's protesters descended on the nation's capitol in cars and dozens of chartered buses from Appalachia and other coal-producing areas. Among the protesters were dozens of elderly victims of black lung, a crippling disease caused by prolonged inhalation of coal dust.

350,000 Checks
According to the Labor Department, some 350,000 miners or their widows now receive monthly black lung checks ranging from $254 to $508 for a miner with three children.

"I don't know of any miners who are getting black lung benefits and shouldn't be," said Church, who accused the administration of trying to "hack away at a program that took decades to build."

"We all know the dread disease of black lung," he added. "We all know we work in one of the most dangerous industrial occupations in the country. But, to me, black lung is not statistics or percentages; to me, it's a wife without a husband or, today, a husband without a wife. It's misery. It's pain. And, finally, it's lungs that won't take oxygen."

"People don't realize that 4,000 people die every year from black lung disease. That translates to 11 people a day who, after agonizing years of gasping and wheezing, finally breathe their last to end their suffering," Church said.

One union official, Cecil Roberts of West Virginia, declared that Reagan's position marks the "end of the honeymoon" as far as the union is concerned.

Worsened Problem
Dave Cooper, a 70-year-old retired miner from Cabin Creek, W. Va., said "I've got black lung so bad I can hardly breathe, and yet it took me three years" to get his benefit award. He suggested that Reagan's proposed changes would make the process worse.

All union mines were shut down for the walkout, which Church legally called under terms of the union's current contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

The walkout came 19 days before the end of the UMW's current contract with the BCOA.

Maury Feibusch, a BCOA spokesman in Washington, said the walkout was aimed at the Reagan administration and not at the coal operators.

LIBERTY (UPI) — Sources close to Vickie Daniel said Monday that her claim that she was defending herself the night she killed her husband, former House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., will be based on her contention that Daniel became violent because she flushed away a stash of marijuana that he owned. "That wasn't even paid for," Mrs. Brown said, glaring. "That's what made me mad."

Mrs. Brown was hospitalized overnight for the injuries she received at the hands of the candlestick-wielding woman. But, according to Mrs. Brown, she left before the hospital employees wished her to because she simply didn't want to stay.

Presiding Judge Robert C. Wright ruled in favor of the state's motion, ordering that Lundberg remain in jail without bond until his case comes to trial. Accused of participating in the robbery with him are Lisa Lynn Davis, 19, and registered nurse Lynda Head, who allegedly planned the robbery.

Lundberg was out of jail on a $3,000 bond for another offense at the time Mrs. Brown was robbed. He was indicted during the January grand jury for burglary of a building in connection with the burglary of an Idalou gin.

Possible Sniping Investigated

Lubbock County Sheriff's deputies Monday were investigating yet another possible sniping incident after a Wolf-orth man reported his pickup window was shattered by an unknown object as he was driving southwest of the city.

Trinidad Santos, 61, and his wife said they were driving to Wolf-orth on the Brownfield Highway about 2:30 p.m. when the rear cab window of their pickup suddenly shattered, said Deputy Ernest Rector.

Santos said he heard a loud noise, possibly a gunshot, just before the window broke. Rector said he searched the vehicle and could find no bullets, shotgun pellets or other projectiles that may have broken the glass.

Neither the man nor the woman was injured in the incident.

Santos told Rector he had just passed an oncoming light blue Ford pickup before the window broke. The 1976-77 vehicle was believed to be occupied by two persons, Rector said.

The deputy said the object that broke the window may have ricocheted off and away from the glass.

In other activity, police were investigating the possible kidnapping of a 7-year-old girl from Roscoe Wilson Elementary School Monday morning.

School officials told police a woman identifying herself as the mother of Charman Carrasco took the child from school about 9 a.m. Monday.

The woman told the girl's teacher she wanted to talk with her daughter. The girl came out into the hallway, and she began crying after talking with the woman for a short time, police said.

The woman then took the child outside and forced her into a car, which also was occupied by an unidentified man, witnesses told police. The man, woman and girl were last seen traveling west on 26th Street in a tan Opel or Volkswagen station wagon bearing Arizona license plates.

Police initially believed the apparent kidnapping was a domestic situation, but the girl's father, 26-year-old Stephen Dale Carrasco, told officers the description of the woman at the school does not fit his ex-wife.

The woman was described as 5 feet 5, weighing 120 pounds, with blond hair. Carrasco said his former wife, Teresa, is 5 feet 9 and weighs about 180 pounds, but she too is blonde.

Reports show the girl's natural mother has legal custody of her, but she has been living for the past six months with her father and stepmother.

In other activity, 40 football helmet plaques were stolen during the weekend from the Red Raider Inn, 6025 Ave. A, police said.

Manager Hulene Pointer told police the plaques, consisting of a helmet attached to a wooden base, were stolen from the motel lobby between 5:15 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Sunday. The theft was reported to police Monday.

Also stolen were three paintings of mascots from various universities, reports show. The loss was estimated at $3,900.

The manager told officers each of the missing helmets represented a different college or university.

A woman living in Southwest Lubbock said she was raped about 6 a.m. Monday by a man who attacked her in her bed.

The 18-year-old victim told police she was asleep when startled by the intruder, who was wearing a ski mask. She said when she began screaming, the man held a knife to her throat and told her to be quiet.

Following the rape, the assailant left through the front door, according to reports. The woman said the man apparently entered through an unlocked window in an adjoining room.

The teen-ager, who police said appeared to be in mild shock, was treated at Highland Hospital.

The attacker was described as a white man of medium build, wearing a mask which possibly was brown.

In other activity, a 17-year-old Tampa, Fla., man was arrested about 3 a.m. Monday after he allegedly broke into Tommy's Hamburgers at 117 N. University Ave.

Police said they answered an alarm at the business and spotted the suspect running. Following a brief chase, the teen-ager was tackled by an officer.

Reports show the fast-food restaurant's window had been broken and chewing gum and cigarettes stolen from the business. Officers said the cigarettes and gum were found on the suspect.

Police said they were told by the man that he waited outside the drive-in while a companion rummaged through the building. However, investigators at the scene said they suspect the teen-ager acted alone in the break-in.

A 14-year-old boy was treated at Methodist Hospital about 2 a.m. Monday after he was hit in the ribs by a brick thrown by a passerby.

Lincoln Westmoreland of 407 36th St. told police he was walking in an alley near the 3700-block of Ute Street when one of two men traveling in a white and gold Oldsmobile threw a brick at him.

Westmoreland, who was not seriously hurt, said the men appeared to be black, between 18 and 25, both wearing black coats and blue pants.

Police said a man apparently was stabbed Monday morning before ramming his car into a parked vehicle in the 3700-block of 37th Street, but would not name his assailant or say what happened.

Doctors at Lubbock General Hospital told police the man suffered a puncture wound and cut on the arm, but that it did not appear the injuries were suffered in the collision. After being treated at the hospital, the man was jailed on suspicion of being drunk and involved in an accident.

A road grader, estimated to be worth $46,500, reportedly was stolen from a construction site at East 34th Street and Elm Avenue.

Melvin Ray Chandler, owner of the grader, said the heavy vehicle apparently was driven away between 7 a.m. Saturday and 5 p.m. Sunday.

Jeffrey Whiting Mead of 2212 21st St., No. 1, said about $1,000 worth of guns was stolen in a burglary at his residence between 6 p.m. Sunday and 1:30 a.m. Monday.

Two shotguns and a television, totaling about $785, were the reported loot taken in a break-in at Weldon E. Brothers' residence at 6114 22nd St. between 12:30 a.m. and 3:30 a.m. today.

Paul Bradford Braswell of 4702 Fourth St., Space 123, said $2,775 in stereo equipment was taken when his home was burglarized early Monday morning.

Manuel Pena of 314 Ave. W said a television and stereo were taken from his residence in a break-in between 1:30 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. Sunday.

Your Personal Biorhythms

by Bernard Gittelson

Figure your numbers here — For your own permanent biorhythm number for the Physical (P), Emotional (E), and Intellectual (I) cycles, just follow these steps:

STEP 1 — YEAR OF BIRTH

P	E	I

STEP 2 — A-B MONTH OF BIRTH

A	B

STEP 3 — DAY OF BIRTH

TOTALS

BIORHYTHMS FOR MAR. 10, 1981

PHYSICAL:
 Cycles: 9, 23, 37, 43, 55, 66
 High: 10:18, 33:42, 56:05
 Low: 1:8, 21:31, 44:54, 67:75
 Do not take a rest! You can do better as much. Down time physically.

EMOTIONAL:
 Cycles: 1, 17, 31, 45, 59, 73
 High: 4:16, 32:44, 60:72
 Low: 1:2, 18:36, 45:58, 74:40
 Can be rational. Your day emotional. Not smiling day.

INTELLECTUAL:
 Cycles: 17, 33, 50, 66, 83
 High: 19:32, 51:45, 84:05
 Low: 1:16, 34:49, 67:42
 Beware, reserve decision. Make new paths today. Indecisive day.

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B, this will be used for Step 2.

McAlister Renews Exchange With HUD

By MARC FLAKE
 Avalanche-Journal Staff

Mayor Bill McAlister has fired off another scathing letter to The Department of Housing and Urban Development, this time critical of duplication of effort and lack of communication between different divisions of the federal agency.

Last April, less than a week after he took office, McAlister issued the first letter which criticized HUD for not considering local input in the selection of a public housing project.

The federal agency picked the fourth most desirable location, at 24th Street and Frankford Avenue, from a list of 16 sites provided by the Lubbock Housing Authority board of directors.

In his latest criticism, dated March 5, McAlister said the apparent lack of coordination and communication between the Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity divisions and other divisions of HUD resulted in the city being falsely accused of not responding to questions from the agency's regional office.

"Within two months, December to February, HUD representatives made two monitoring visits to Lubbock to review the same equal opportunity subjects," wrote McAlister.

Following one of the visits, the city received a letter from a HUD official that the city had failed to respond to equal opportunity questions raised in a letter written to the city in December.

In his letter, McAlister pointed out that a letter had been sent to the agency about a month prior to the official's allegations. Also, the monitoring official in the city had been shown a copy of the response.

"It's a case of the left hand not knowing what the right hand is doing," McAlister said Monday. "I'm upset we have been accused of not doing what is proper. We went into great detail to answer their questions."

According to correspondence released by the mayor Monday, HUD had asked the city to provide a list of recruitment and other actions taken to improve representation of minorities and women within the middle and upper level jobs at city hall.

About the end of January, the city replied in a letter to the director of the Community Planning and Development Division of the agency which showed that 20 women and two minorities were among 41 new persons hired by the city.

Five of the women hired were in the officials/administrators classification and 15 were in the professionals classification.

The letter said that the majority of positions in the "upper salary ranges," including directors, superintendents and planning, zoning and building officials, are predominantly occupied by individuals whose average tenure is more than 15 years.

It said the limited number of available qualified minority and female applicants in the local and regional labor market are limited.

Recruiting efforts included advertising in local minority-based newspapers, college and university job announcements and the distribution of flyers to social action organizations, it said.

HUD officials could not be reached for comment.

Railroads Reach Accord On Line Into Amarillo

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A state transportation official has confirmed that two railroads competing to reopen the Rock Island transcontinental mainline have tentatively agreed to jointly operate the 760-mile route from Memphis to Amarillo.

"The Santa Fe and Katy have agreed in principle, and we expect something to be signed soon," said Jerry Chambers, state planning engineer. "This is a very promising step in restoring rail service to several dozen communities and strengthening the operation of the north-south Rock Island mainline."

He said the two railroads reached an "unpublicized verbal agreement" on the operation earlier this month.

The line serves 48 Oklahoma communities, including Oklahoma City, Shawnee and McAlester. The plan would restore rail service to 29 towns on now-closed segments of the line.

Although railroad spokesmen acknowledged the plan, they skirted further comment. Santa Fe officials said more talks are slated later this month.

Late last year, the Katy announced interest in operating the El Reno to Memphis segment, and interest by the Santa Fe in the entire line was disclosed last week.

Under the new proposal, Chambers said, the Katy would continue to handle shipments between El Reno and McAlester, as it has for the 11 months since the Rock Island folded. The Santa Fe would operate through trains between Memphis and Amarillo and handle local service between Elk City and Amarillo and McAlester and Memphis.

State officials are now negotiating a similar joint-operating pact with Farm Rail Industries.

Tech Gridders Await Practice, Facelift

THE PRELIMINARIES ARE OUT OF THE WAY. The footwork has been accomplished.

The coaching staff has been hired. The new philosophies have been introduced. Recruiting is over with. And the returning veterans have been running, lifting and stretching for some four weeks. Sounds like it's time to play a little football.

In less than two weeks (March 23 to be precise) spring training begins at Texas Tech. Because the Red Raiders enter the new year with a new coach

Norval Pollard

(Jerry Moore) a new offensive outlook (good-bye veer, hello I) and a new optimism (thanks in part to Moore's recruiting success), the five weeks of spring practice promise to be interesting and exciting. These are five crucial weeks of learning for the Raider gridders.

No one is more anxious to get the show on the road than Moore and his staff. They have purposely avoided viewing game films of the 1980 Raiders to make sure they wouldn't get any preconceived notions (good or bad) about Tech's returning personnel. While the Raiders must adapt to new faces and new techniques, Moore and staff begin spring practice literally in the dark as far as personnel is concerned. They know Ron Reeves can throw, Rennie Baker can catch and Gabriel Rivera can put Wimpy to shame in a hamburger-eating contest.

"I CAN'T WAIT TO GET OUT ON THE PRACTICE FIELD," declared offensive coordinator Richard Ritchie. "We're all kind of anxious to see just what everyone can do when they put the pads on."

Ritchie, who quarterbacked Texas A&I to three consecutive NAIA football crowns during the late 1970s, is itching to begin work with his quarterbacks.

"We've got a lot of work to do and we're really anxious to begin," added Moore. "We want to take it slow at first so everyone fully understands what we're talking about. We don't want anyone to miss anything."

Contact, the life blood of football, will certainly not take a backseat during Tech's five weeks of training, but the chalkboards will see as much action as the Jones Stadium carpet once the workouts begin.

Much of the transition from veer attack to I offense will take place before the hitting starts. The learning of new terminology, new assignments and new plays will be stressed before practice during team meetings. Moore wants to use the time on the field for practice and not more chalk talk.

The change from veer to I won't be the only switch Moore and the Raiders undertake during spring. Tech will also receive a defensive facelift.

The Raiders return only one defensive line starter from 1980's 5-6 squad. Gone from Tech's 52 defense are starting tackles Jamie Giles and Jim Verden and capable reserves Dane Kerns and Hans Bischof. With the exception of Rivera, the Raiders don't have an ounce of varsity experience in the defensive trenches.

THAT SHORTCOMING HAS FORCED MOORE AND defensive coordinator Jim Bates to consider using an even-front defense, basically the 43 defense used by most National Football League teams.

"We were thinking about it (switching defenses) before Rex (former Tech coach Rex Dockery) left," acknowledged Bates, one of two Dockery coaching assistants who remained at Tech. "We're short on defensive linemen, so the switch to the even front is only natural at this point."

The Raiders have an abundance of outside linebackers (Lewis Washington, Jeff McCowan, C.M. Pier and David Smith to name the top four) and are also long on inside linebackers (Terry Baer, Stan Williams, Dwayne Jiles and Bryan Lambert). The switch would give Tech three inside linebackers and, in essence, two down defensive tackles. Rivera would be one of the tackles. The other spot remains up for grabs, although junior college transfer Hasson Arzubakarr (6-5, 240 with 4.7 speed) will surely have the opportunity to secure the other starting position.

Tech's weakest defensive area before the start of last season was the secondary. Ironically, it appears to be the area of strength as spring training nears. Five players who started in the defensive backfield return, but Bates may have to let one of them — cornerback Jim Hart — go back to his old position.

HART, WHO STARTED 10 GAMES AT CORNERBACK for the Raiders as a sophomore in 1980 after being switched from quarterback midway through spring training last March, will work out with the quarterbacks again come March 23.

The departure of Mark James, who left the team at midterm because of a lack of playing time, leaves Moore with one experienced signal-caller — Reeves.

Aguirre Tops AP Squad

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Aguirre of DePaul, college basketball player of the year last season, Monday was named to The Associated Press' 1980-81 first-team All-America squad for the second consecutive year.

Aguirre, a 6-foot-7 junior forward, was joined on the first team by 7-4 sophomore Ralph Sampson of Virginia; 6-8 junior Kevin Magee of California-Irvine; 6-5 senior Danny Ainge of Brigham Young; and 6-1 sophomore Isiah Thomas of Indiana.

The team was one of the youngest in history of the AP All-Americans, first picked in 1948, with two sophomores, two juniors and one senior. The team was chosen by a panel of AP sports writers.

Aguirre averaged 23.5 points per game during the season and still managed to hand out 130 assists, an average of 4.6 per game. Expected to accept a professional contract next season, Aguirre has made Ray Meyer's DePaul

Blue Demons one of the pre-tournament favorites in the upcoming NCAA playoffs.

Although he was unimpressive in Virginia's 95-62 loss to Maryland in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, Sampson was an overwhelming choice for the center spot, averaging 18.4 points and 11.8 rebounds a game.

The towering Sampson, one of basketball's tallest men, was a driving force in the Cavaliers' 28-game winning streak that stretched over two seasons before ending Feb. 22 with a 57-56 loss to Notre Dame in Chicago. Sampson was an honorable mention as a freshman.

Magee, a transfer from Saddleback

Junior College in Mission Viejo, Calif., led the nation in scoring for much of the year, winding up third after the regular season with an average of 27.5. He hit 67.1 percent of his field goal attempts this season, second best in the nation, and averaged 12.5 rebounds a game, fifth best in the country.

Considered a top pro prospect, UC-Irvine's basketball people expect Magee to stick around for his senior year.

Ainge already has gone pro — as an infielder with the Toronto Blue Jays of baseball's American League — but over the past four seasons, he has been the nation's most consistent scorer. He averaged 25 points a game this season, and he has scored in double figures in an NCAA record 108 consecutive games.

Ainge has scored 2,384 points in his career, including 35 in BYU's 95-76 upset of Utah last Saturday. Ainge was an honorable mention last season.

Thomas got off to a slow start this season, but as he gained momentum, so did the Hoosiers, who won the Big Ten Conference title. Thomas, a prototype point guard, had 154 assists this season, an average of 5.3 a game, and 64 steals.

Thomas' scoring average was 15.7 a game, and he had 92 rebounds from the guard position, fourth best on the team. Thomas made honorable mention as a freshman.

Selected to the second team were 6-6 senior Al Wood of North Carolina; 6-7 senior Danny Vranes of Utah; 6-10 1/2 senior Steve Johnson of Oregon State; 6-3 junior Eric "Sleepy" Floyd of Georgetown, and 6-2 senior Darnell Valentine of Kansas.

Lewis Lloyd, a 6-6 senior from Drake; 6-8 senior Jay Vincent of Michigan State; 7-1 sophomore Sam Bowie of Kentucky; 6-6 senior Jeff Lamp of Virginia; and 6-2 sophomore Rob Williams of Houston were named to the third team.

Albert King, a senior forward from Maryland, was the obvious absentee from this year's first three teams. He made honorable mention after being selected to the first team last season, when he scored 21.7 points and grabbed 6.7 rebounds a game. King had an off season in 1980-81, however, when he averaged 17.7 points and 5.7 rebounds a game.

Wood averaged 17.5 points a game and grabbed 18.5 rebounds during the season for the Tar Heels, who won the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament for the ninth time last week. Vranes scored at a clip of 17.4 points per game while grabbing 20.4 rebounds for Utah.

Johnson averaged 21.2 points a game while playing just 67.9 minutes, an average of 25 minutes per game, because of a tendency to get into foul trouble. The big Oregon State senior drew 106 personal fouls this season and fouled out of seven games.

Floyd averaged 18.9 points, and, with 1,663 points in his career, needed only 11 to become Georgetown's all-time leading scorer, passing Derrick Jackson, who played from 1974-78. Valentine led the Big Eight Conference for the fourth consecutive year with 83 steals, and his 151 assists was also a league best. Scoring at a clip of 15.4 per game, he was named MVP of the Big Eight Tournament.

In his second year at Drake after two years at New Mexico Military Junior College, Lloyd has scored 1,549 points in his career. He averaged 26.2 points, fourth best in the nation, and 9.9 rebounds a game this year. Vincent averaged 22.6 points a game for Michigan State while grabbing 22.9 rebounds, 8.5 per game.

Bowie's scoring average of 17.8 does not tell his story. He has blocked 77 shots this season and had 250 rebounds (9.3 a game) while playing an average of 32.4 minutes a game, making him an iron man among centers.

Lamp, one of the best pure shooters in the country, hit 56.9 percent of his attempts from the floor this year and had a scoring average of 18.2 with 108 rebounds from his guard position. Williams was sixth in scoring in the country with an average of 25.1, and he scored 30 or more points nine times this season. He also had 145 assists, or five a game.

Broncos Fire Coach, GM, Reeves To Grab Reins

DENVER (AP) — Red Miller will be replaced as head coach of the Denver Broncos football team by Dan Reeves, offensive coordinator for the Dallas Cowboys. Cowboys coach Tom Landry said Monday.

Miller was fired Monday afternoon, along with Fred Gehrke, general manager of the National Football League team, unidentified sources on the Broncos team said.

Gehrke reportedly was replaced by Grady Alderman, director of planning and development for the Minnesota Vikings.

Neither Gehrke nor Miller could be reached by telephone Monday night.

Jim Saccomano, a spokesman for the Broncos, said a news conference was scheduled at 9 a.m. today at the Broncos office, but declined to say whether officials had called it to announce changes in the coaching staff or team.

Landry said in an interview with The Associated Press in Dallas. "It is true. It happened today, and they'll announce it tomorrow. Dan met with Mr. Kaiser over the weekend."

"Dan came in today from Denver and informed me, then flew back to Denver tonight. We're delighted that he has the opportunity to become a head coach."

Miller's replacement as head coach was the first major change to take place since the Broncos' ownership changed hands last month.

The team's sale was announced Feb. 26 by major owner Gerald Phipps of Denver. The new owner, 38-year-old Edgar F. Kaiser Jr. of Vancouver, British Columbia, is chairman and chief executive officer of both Kaiser Resources Ltd. of Vancouver and Kaiser Oil.

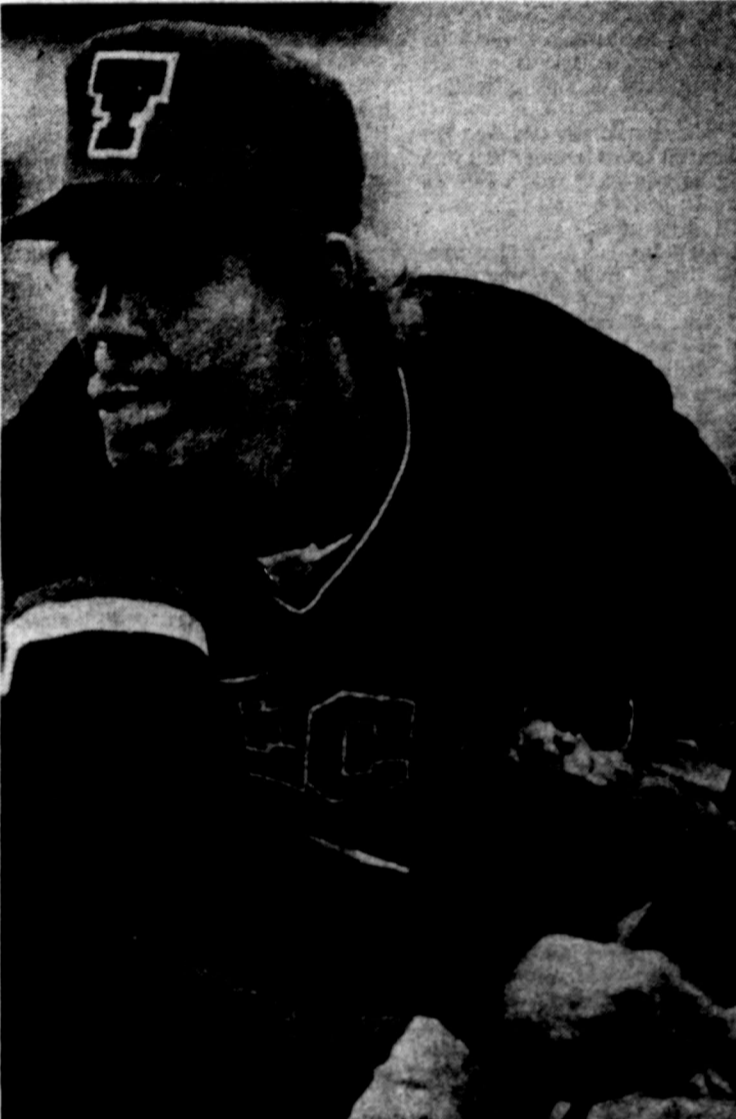

No sale price was announced, but sources indicated it was in excess of $30 million.

Miller, 53, has been coaching the Broncos for the past four years. A former offensive coordinator for the New England Patriots, Miller succeeded John Ralston as the team's head coach in February 1977.

The following season, Miller led the Broncos to the Super Bowl, where the team bowed to the Cowboys, 27-10.

This season the Broncos, 8-8, tied with Kansas City for third place in the American Conference's Western Division. But the Chiefs' two victories over Denver gave Kansas City third place, and the Broncos dropped to fourth place for scheduling purposes.

Reeves, 37, became offensive coordinator for the Cowboys in 1977, after serving as backfield coach for four years. Reeves was a running back for the Cowboys for eight seasons — until 1972, when he became a player-coach. He finished his career as the Cowboys' fifth all-time leading rusher.

Raiders, Chaps Split Twinbill

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Texas Tech enrolled Lubbock Christian College in the school of hard knocks during a 9-5 victory in the first game of a double-header Monday at Chaparral Stadium.

The Red Raiders, however, were enrolled in umpire's school in the second game, which was won by LCC 6-5 with the aid of two runs on five walks during the Chaps' final at-bat in the seventh inning.

Hard knocks, hard feelings.
"It's hard to forget that second game," Tech coach Kai Segrist said. "We felt like we were hurt by a number of questionable calls. Our pitchers (Matt Dean and Robert Bryant) threw at least 10 strikes that were called balls in that last inning. I don't ever like to get beat, but I really hate to lose on questionable calls at any time."

LCC trailed 5-4 entering the final inning of the second game. Dean walked four consecutive Chaps to tie the score, then gave way to Bryant, who retired Jeff Craig on a force at the plate for the inning's second out. Pinch-hitter Gary Hix proceeded to work the count to three-and-one before Bryant's next — and last — pitch was ruled high. Ball four. Chaps win.

"The last pitch of the game was right down the middle," Segrist said. "I hate to see those kind of balls."

LCC coach Larry Hays offered an explanation of the umpiring. "Umpires everywhere are going to these umpiring clinics, listening to the pro umps, and they're getting the idea to narrow the strike zone," Hays said. "It's happening on all levels, and it's messing up some pitchers."

The incredible shrinking strike zone failed to discourage Tech's Bobby Kohler in the opening game. He stretched pitches by Bo Hargrove and Frank Davalos into conspicuously long home runs. Those blasts accounted for five of the eight runs scored by the Raiders during the crucial third and fourth innings when they overcame a 1-0 LCC lead.

Rusty Laughlin also homered for Tech, but it was Kohler who drew praise from Hays as "one of the two best hitters we've faced this year. He's a super hitter."

LCC led 4-1 entering the sixth inning

Sisters, Cousins Land Spots On State All-Tourney Teams

AUSTIN (AP) — High-scoring sisters and cousins claimed 10 of the 32 places Monday on the girls' high school basketball all-tournament teams.

The Class 5A all-star team included Kamie Ethridge, a 5-foot-5 junior guard from Monterey who led all scorers with 63 points in two games, and her sister, Kriss, a 5-5 senior, who tallied 28 points.

Duncanville, a 72-71 loser to Monterey in the 5A finals, placed Cathy Nixon, a 14-year-old freshman, and Kay Murphy on the team. The fifth selection was Sherry Markert of San Antonio Lee.

It was the second year in a row for Kamie Ethridge to make the all-tournament team. She, sister Kriss and Miss Nixon were unanimous choices this year.

Nazareth, which won an unprecedented fifth straight championship by burying Colmesneil 83-49, dominated the Class 1A all-tournament team with cousins Lori and Sharon Gerber getting the votes of all sports writer and broadcaster covering the tourney.

Lori also made the all-tournament team in 1979, and Sharon was an all-star in 1980.

Cousins Sharon and Roxanne Birkenfeld of Nazareth also made this year's team along with Gloria Spann of Colmesneil. Roxane was a 1980 all-tournament selection.

Teri Mayfield of Canyon, the second-leading tournament scorer with 56 points, and Annette Smith of Bay City were unanimous selections in Class 4A. Annette's sister, Audrey, also made the team, which was completed with the selection of Terri Baughman and Carla Schmidt of Canyon and Danielle Wright of Dallas Madison. Miss Schmidt and Miss Wright tied for the fifth spot on the 4A squad.

Unanimous choices Ramona Irlbeck of Abernathy and Millie Bivens of Sweeny headed the Class 3A team, which included Darla McGuire of Abernathy, Cheryl Chambers of Brownsboro and Tracy Turner of Kountze.

Charlotte Reescano and her cousin, Laurie Reescano, of Hardin made the 2A all-tournament team, along with Vickie Teal of New Deal, Lee Ann Galbreath of Sanger and Yancy Toran of Hardin and Sherri Skidmore of Grapeland, who tied for the fifth spot.

Laurie Reescano was a repeat choice from 1980. Charlotte Reescano, the leading rebounder in the tournament with 35, and Miss Teal were unanimous selections.

Canyon, Abernathy and Hardin joined Monterey and Nazareth as 1981 champions. Canyon whipped Bay City 64-53; Abernathy rallied to defeat Sweeny 61-59; and Hardin turned back New Deal 61-46.

NIT Waits To Complete Bracket

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Invitation Tournament is awaiting the outcome of Monday night's San Francisco-Pepperdine, played on the West Coast, and tonight's Penn-Princeton playoffs before completing its 32-team field.

San Francisco and Pepperdine are competing for the West Coast Athletic Conference title. Penn and Princeton are shooting for the Ivy League crown. The two winners will complete the mammoth 48-team field for the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament, whose winner will be crowned national champion March 30 in Philadelphia.

And, as is the case with many of the conferences around the country, if the runner-up (and other lower-down teams) doesn't get an invitation to the NCAAs, it often gets one from the NIT.

That's how Duke and Clemson of the Atlantic Coast Conference wound up in the NIT (while Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia and Wake Forest of the ACC are NCAA-bound). Or how Michigan, Minnesota and Purdue of the Big Ten are in the NIT (while Indiana, Illinois and Iowa of the conference are in the NCAAs).

And that's why the NIT is holding off on picking its final two teams — to see who wins the WCAC and Ivy titles.

"It would be logical to assume that. That's pretty much the way it is," Paul Munick, Madison Square Garden's director of amateur athletics, said Monday.

But the San Francisco-Pepperdine and Penn-Princeton losers won't automatically be headed for the NIT, which opens tonight with Fordham at Dayton and crowns its champ March 25 in the Garden. "It could happen, but not necessarily," Munick said. "It depends on who the losers are. Those two, and a few other teams, will be considered."

How many is a few?

"I'd say three others would be a ballpark figure," Munick replied.

Whoever makes it will be joining an NIT field which includes Syracuse's disgruntled Orangemen.

Syracuse, 18-11, finished sixth in the Big East standings but won the conference tournament under its Carrier Dome with home-court victories over Georgetown and Villanova, only to find itself out in the cold while its two tourney victims were tendered NCAA invitations.

Among the teams with impressive records in the NIT field are South Alabama, 23-5; American, 24-5; North Carolina A&T, Tulsa and Rhode Island, each 21-7; San Jose State, 21-8; Southern Mississippi, 20-6; Texas-Arlington, 20-7; West Virginia, 20-8; Duquesne and Toledo, 20-9; and Clemson, 20-10.

"The NIT field may be almost as strong as the NCAA," said Minnesota coach Jim Dutcher.

"It appears to be a pretty strong field," added coach Hank Raymond of 19-10 Marquette, an NIT entry this time and the NCAA champ in 1977.

Old Dominion, 18-9 also is in the field. The Monarchs are the only team this year to beat DePaul (likely to begin the NCAA tourney as the nation's No.1 team). The NIT is no doubt licking its chops over the prospect of championships by DePaul and Old Dominion. That would give the NIT, once the most prestigious tourney in the nation, a winner with a victory over the national champ.

Gridder Testifies At Kush Trial

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Arizona State University punter Kevin Rutledge and his father decided to take legal action against ex-Sun Devil football Coach Frank Kush within a week after an alleged punching incident in a 1978 game, an Arizona State player testified Monday.

Steve Bratkowski also told the court that university sports booster Rick Lynch told him he "had Kush" and "to keep my mouth shut or I'd be in trouble when Coach Kush was gone."

Kush is named in a $2.2 million damage suit filed by Rutledge, who claims Kush split his lower lip with a "knuckle-punch" after a 26-yard punt in the Sun Devils' 41-7 loss to Washington Oct. 28, 1978, in Seattle.

It was the most lopsided loss in Kush's 22-year career as head football coach at Arizona State.

Rutledge, who now attends the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, also contends Kush and ex-Sun Devil assistant coach Bill Maskill harassed him into quitting the team in 1979 and forfeiting his scholarship.

Kush has denied both charges.

Maskill has yet to testify although portions of his October 1980 deposition were read to the jury Monday, as were parts from the November 1979 deposition of ex-assistant coach Don Baker.

The trial is in its sixth week.

Bratkowski, a senior-to-be Sun Devil quarterback and Rutledge's roommate in 1978, said he overheard a telephone conversation between Rutledge and his father, Gordon, concerning pending litigation "the first part of the following week" after the Washington game.

"I heard a piece of the conversation and I asked Kevin about it when he hung up," Bratkowski told the court. "He said they were going to sue or bring some action against Coach Kush."

Bratkowski said he thought the suit was aimed at a newspaper article quoting Kush as saying "that kid (Kevin Rutledge) will never kick another ball for ASU" after "a sorry effort" in the Washington game.

"Kevin told me he was going to take action for defamation of name. I never saw the article," said Bratkowski. "About a week after that, he told me Coach Kush had punched him."

After the Rutledge lawsuit became public in September 1979, Bratkowski said Lynch "called me to say the calvary is on the hill."

Kush has said Lynch "orchestrated a conspiracy to get me fired" by "stirring things up with the players."

At the request of Arizona State's football recruiting coordinator, Gary Horton, Bratkowski said he filled out two statements on Rutledge's character. Bratkowski said the first statement was rejected by Horton because "it wasn't what he wanted."

"All I said was that Kevin was a shy, sensitive guy. I said Coach Kush was a disciplinary-type coach who did a lot of yelling and used verbal abuse," Bratkowski told the court. "I said Kevin might have taken a lot of things personally that weren't intended to be personal."

Earlier Monday, Baker's deposition revealed that Kush instructed his aides "to show loyalty to me" and lie if necessary to retain their jobs. Baker also said Kush often used derogatory terms when he referred to Rutledge, Lynch and ex-Sun Devil linebacker Gary Bouck.

Bouck testified last week that he saw Kush "throw an uppercut" at Rutledge in the Washington game. Three other players have offered similar testimony.

Lynch, a Phoenix-area drag strip operator, testified for 3½ hours behind closed chambers last Thursday and the videotape of that testimony was supposed to be played back for the jury of 10 women and three men Monday morning.

But Judge Thomas Kleinschmidt said that "at this stage of the case, we're not quite ready to present it yet."

Lynch has filed a $50 million defamation suit against Kush and a number of Arizona reporters and news organizations. Additionally, he has filed a $2.45 million suit against three Phoenix-area newsmen and three members of the 1979 Arizona State football team — including Bratkowski.

Lynch charges the six defendants with invasion of privacy, negligence and intentional infliction of emotional distress and conspiracy.

The suits also said Lynch is suffering from incurable cancer caused by the emotional stress.

A CHANGE OF SOX — Former Boston Red Sox catcher Carlton Fisk, right, smiles while being introduced to sports writers in Chicago Monday by Chicago White Sox general manager Roland Hemond. Fisk, a free agent, has apparently reached agreement with the Sox and will formally join the team later this week. (AP Laserphoto)

White Sox Introduce Fisk To Reporters

By The Associated Press

Carlton Fisk technically remains a free agent, but the All-Star catcher's imminent change of Sox was felt in two of baseball's spring training camps Monday.

Fisk said he was very close to signing with the Chicago White Sox, a move that would end his nine years with the Boston Red Sox, who failed in their efforts to get him to agree to a new contract.

Fisk appeared at a White Sox press conference Monday but officially has not yet signed a contract.

Jerry Reinsdorf, chairman of the board of the White Sox, said, "I'll be very, very surprised if a contract were not executed by the end of the week."

The announcement by Fisk at a Chicago news conference spread rapidly through both the White Sox camp at Sarasota, Fla., and the Red Sox camp at Winter Haven, Fla.

"We got Carlton Fisk? Oh, boy, that's fantastic!" said Chicago pitcher Francisco Barrios. Even Jim Essian, who could lose his starting catcher's job to Fisk, was pleased.

"Selfishly, I'd rather catch all the games," he said, "but I don't want to be selfish about it and I won't be selfish about it. The pitchers have got to love it."

At Winter Haven, the Red Sox players seemed resigned to the fact that the New Hampshire woodsman with the nickname "Pudge" would not be with them this summer.

"We're going to miss him... he knew all the hitters around the league," said pitcher Bob Stanley. "But (Gary) Allen will do just as well behind the plate."

Fisk was declared a free agent last month when an arbitrator ruled that the Red Sox had failed to mail the catcher a contract on time.

"No one feels bad about the Fisk thing," said Boston manager Ralph Houk. "It's over and that's it."

While Fisk seemed on the verge of signing with a new club, two other players recently thought to be on their way elsewhere appeared to be closer to staying where they were.

Greg Luzinski, the Philadelphia Phillies' disgruntled outfielder, had a 20-minute meeting with manager Dallas Green in the outfield of the world champions' Clearwater, Fla., base.

Afterward, neither Luzinski, who said last week it might be best if he were traded, nor Green would say what they talked about. But Green said Luzinski was making progress in camp and hoped he was headed for a good year.

In West Palm Beach, Fla., Atlanta outfielder Gary Matthews looked to be on the verge of returning to the Braves lineup — on the strength of his performance so far in the Braves' camp.

Ted Turner, the Braves' owner, had threatened to bench Matthews if he couldn't trade him. A deal that would have sent him to Cincinnati fell through. But Turner told the Atlanta Constitution that "there's always a chance" Matthews will play for the Braves, and manager Bobby Cox said: "It we can't (trade Matthews), we are going to have to take another look at him and see how our best club shapes up."

Most teams again held intrasquad games Monday, preparing for the start of exhibition games later this week. But four clubs had contests against outsiders.

Lou Whitaker singled home Lance Parrish with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning as the Detroit Tigers beat the Minnesota Twins 4-3 at Lakeland, Fla. Steve Kemp and Richie Hebner homered for the Tigers, who were playing the Twins for the third day in a row. The clubs wind up their series today in Orlando, Fla.

The Chicago Cubs beat the Taiyo Whales, one of the Japanese clubs training with major league teams this spring. Bill Buckner, the National League batting champion last season, had a three-run homer and a single for Chicago.

Dave Winfield made his first appearance in a game for the New York Yankees, collecting a single in a 6-1 victory over the University of Florida. Winfield, signed as a free agent for baseball's richest contract, played three innings in left field in the game, played at Gainesville, Fla.

Mustangs Survive Errors, Top Steers 6-4

Coronado survived three errors in the final two innings and used a three-base Big Spring error in the top of the seventh to down the Steers 6-4 Monday on a wind-swept Lowrey Field diamond.

Miscues by Mustang catcher Jay Lindstrom, first baseman Allen Harp and shortstop Don Ewing allowed Big Spring to tie the game at 4-4 in the top of the sixth inning and put three runners on base in the final two frames.

But pinch-hitter Dean Jackson ignited a sixth-inning Coronado rally with a leadoff double over the glove of rightfielder Dickey Wrightsil. Jerry Foster drew a walk and Lindstrom made up for his throwing error with a perfect sacrifice bunt, moving the runners to second and third.

Ewing smashed a Moe Rubio fastball to deep center field and, when it bounced off Mark Warren's glove, Jackson and Foster scampered home and Ewing wound up on third.

The Steers rallied in the top of the seventh, threatening to score with runners on second and third. Marcus Armentariz opened the frame with a double down the leftfield foul line. With one out, Warren hit a routine grounder to the left side of the infield. But Ewing threw high into first base and Big Spring had runners on first and second.

Lupe Ontiveros lifted a sacrifice fly to left field to move both runners into scoring position before Mustang pitcher Terry Richardson induced Tracy Spence to hit into the final out with a ground ball to second baseman Mark Gilham.

Richardson went the distance for the victory, scattering six hits while striking out two and walking one. Rubio took the loss for Big Spring, giving up only four hits but walking six while fighting five errors behind him.

Coronado, now 4-1, has won four consecutive games including three and the championship in the Roswell (N.M.) tournament over the weekend.

The Mustangs jumped on Rubio early in the game but could not finish him off. They scored three runs in the second and one more in the third but stranded five runners in those innings.

Harp opened the second inning with a double and moved to third on Russ Young's single. With one out, Gilham walked to load the bases before Gary Beard's RBI single and error by Spence brought home Harp and Young.

Foster drew a walk to reload the sacks and Lindstrom also gained a free pass to bring home Gilham. In the third inning, Young scored on a fielder's choice and a pair of errors.

Wrightsil got the Steers back in the contest in the fourth. Ontiveros walked to open the frame and Spence's double put runners and second and third and Wrightsil followed with a two-run single.

He scored to make the score 4-3 on Rusty Hayworth's sacrifice fly.

Big Spring deadlocked the game in the sixth as Wrightsil forced catcher Lindstrom into a mistake. With one out the rightfielder singled. He stole second and stole third. Lindstrom's throw to third sailed into leftfield and Wrightsil dashed home with the tying run.

Coronado will be one of four city squads resuming action today. The Mustangs travel to Midland for a 4 p.m. contest with Midland High.

Monterey, which defeated Midland 9-0 and 18-2 Saturday, will be the only team playing at home today when it hosts Midland Lee at 4 p.m. at Lowrey Field.

Lubbock High will travel to Brownfield while Dunbar will be in Andrews in other action. Estacado is idle today but will be back in action Thursday on the road against Odessa Actor.

The Plainsmen enter today's single contest with a perfect 4-0 record. They defeated Lee last Friday in Midland 7-4.

The Westerners, 1-2, had its opener rained out and it's been gloomy ever since. They lost a 6-5 decision to Tascosa last Thursday and, after dropping the first game of their double-header with Snyder Saturday by a 7-3 count, stormed back to take a 14-5 victory.

Dunbar, only 1-22 last year, is enjoying a 3-0 start under new coach Jerry Lee. The Panthers opened the season with a 5-2 win over Andrews at home and topped Lamesa 3-0 and 12-8 on the road Saturday.

Monterey and Lubbock High have rescheduled games which were rained out last week for Wednesday. The Plainsmen will host Big Spring at Lowrey Field at 4 p.m., and the Westerners will travel to Amarillo for a 4 p.m. game with Palo Duro.

of the second game, but a four-run Raider outburst promptly gave LCC its momentary 5-4 deficit.

LCC, which scored its first victory over Tech in four tries this season, is 9-12. These two teams meet again in a double-header at 1 p.m. today at Chaparral Stadium. Tech, 10-2, will start Bryant and Kyle Fahrenthold, while LCC will pitch Rod Cline and Jamey Lanahan.

"The way we've been playing, it helps anytime we win a game," Hays said. "It would've killed us — it would've killed me. I don't know about our players — if we'd have lost that second game. We've been so lousy that we're doing everything we can to turn things around."

Segriss, meanwhile, was anxious to resume the series today. "My players will certainly come back and play hard," he said. "This team comes from behind and doesn't give up. That's something we try to work on. You have to do that to win consistently."

Wisconsin-Eau Claire Nips St. Mary's In OT

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Second-seeded Wisconsin-Eau Claire wiped out an 11-point second-half deficit to send the game into overtime, then held on for a 61-59 victory over unseeded St. Mary's of Texas in the first round of the NAIA Basketball Tournament Monday night.

In earlier first-round games, Alabama-Huntsville romped to a 105-75 victory over Norfolk State (Va.); Bethany Nazarene (Okla.) downed Chicago State 69-63; Kearney State (Neb.) whipped Campbellsville (Ky.) 108-96; Huron (S.D.) edged Gardner-Webb (N.C.) 59-52 and Hillsdale (Mich.) knocked Dominican (N.Y.) out of the tournament 70-64.

In later games Monday, Fort Hays

State (Kan.), 30-3, played Hanover (Ind.), 24-7, and Western New Mexico, 26-3, squared off against Midwestern State (Texas), 23-17.

Field goals by Jim Behnke and Joe Merten and a free throw by Tony Carr gave Eau Claire a 60-55 lead in overtime before a field goal by Jai Mahone of St. Mary's and a pair of free throws by Ricky Hooker closed the gap to one point with 44 seconds left.

Position Changes Mark UT Practice

AUSTIN (AP) — The start of Texas Longhorn spring football training Monday saw numerous lineup changes.

The most publicized has been the shift of quarterback Donnie Little to split end.

Three highly touted freshmen also are moving. Mike Ruether, who trained at center and right tackle last fall, will work at left tackle. Middle linebacker Jeff Leiding will shift to weakside linebacker, and Ed Williams is moving from weakside linebacker to right defensive end.

Coach Fred Akers is coaching the offensive backfield in the absence of assistant Bobby Warmack, who is recovering from a back operation.

Texas Tech Netters Nip Angelo State

The Texas Tech men's tennis team scrambled to a 5-4 victory Monday over Angelo State at the Tech courts.

The Raiders picked up singles victories from Mark Thompson, David Earhart and Jeff Bramlett. Bramlett and Zahid Maniya teamed up to defeat Chas Hostick and Rene Trevino in one doubles match, and Fred Viancos and Lane Carroll defeated Mitch Nichols and Randy Gardner in the deciding doubles match.

Bi-District Tilts On Tap Tonight

By RICHARD DAY
Avalanche Journal Sports Staff
Five slots in the Region 1 Class 1A, 2A and 3A tournament brackets will be on the line tonight when area boys' basketball teams wind up bi-district play.

In 2A action, Vega and Shallowater will meet in Hutcherson Center on the campus of Wayland Baptist College at 8 p.m., and Morton will take on Marfa in the Odessa Permian gym at 8 p.m.

In 1A, Nazareth will tangle with Whiteface in the Texas Dome on the campus of South Plains College in Levelland beginning at 8 p.m., and Motley County and Smyer will square off in Lorenzo at 8 p.m.

The 3A bi-district game pits Coahoma against Kermit in Crane, also at 8 p.m.

The Vega-Shallowater clash will be a rematch of last year's bi-district battle. Vega won that one and went on to the regional tourney where it lost to Panhandle in the finals.

Both Shallowater and Vega have most of the same players back from last year, so tonight's game will have revenge added to it.

"I think Shallowater's a stronger team this year," Vega coach Wayne Potter said. "Willie Johnson has improved a great deal, and Robert Sanders is still a fine player. They have a very physical team. They're much stronger than we are."

Johnson, a senior post player at 6-4 and 220 pounds, is averaging 14 points per game this year. Sanders, a returning all-district performer, is averaging 21 points per outing.

Shallowater, coached by former Texas Tech star Keith Kitchens, goes into tonight's bi-district battle with a 21-6 record, which includes a perfect 14-0 slate in District 4-2A play.

Vega's Longhorns live and die with fitness. They have come out on the short end of the score only five times in 35 games this season, so they obviously know how to out-finesse almost anybody.

Vega is led by one of the area's most prolific scorers in Scotty Cook. Cook is considered one of the best outside shooters in the state and for good reason. He averages 23 points a game, with most of them coming from the 20-foot range. Bobby Arnold, the Longhorns' second-leading scorer, is also among the area leaders, averaging 18.5 points per game.

Morton, which is ranked fourth in the state Class 2A ratings, will take its balanced scoring attack into battle against District 6-2A champion Marfa.

The Indians won the 5-2A title by dropping only one district game, that to Seagraves, and have a 25-10 record going into tonight's game.

Morton has four players averaging in double figures. Bruce Johnson is averaging 14 points. Billy Cadenhead 11, Jerry Williams 11 and Todd Willingham 11 al-

SO. The Nazareth Swifts, ranked fourth in the state Class 1A rankings, will be gunning for a return trip to Austin, where they lost in last year's state finals.

The Swifts walked through their District 5-1A schedule with a 12-0 record and have a 28-3 overall mark. They are led by the high-scoring pair of Calvin Schulte and Brian Huseman. Schulte is averaging 16 points per game while Huseman is hitting 17 per outing.

Whiteface, which won the District 6-1A championship with a 7-0 record, also has a pair of high scorers. Joe Don Elemen averages 17.6 points and Randy Richardson 17.5 points per game for the Antelopes. Whiteface takes a 20-6 record into tonight's game.

The state's fifth-ranked 1A team, Motley County, will go against 10th-ranked Smyer in what is expected to be a tight struggle.

Motley County, 26-3, has a balanced scoring attack led by junior Harvey Lee. Smyer, 25-3, is balanced as well, with four players averaging more than 10 points per outing. William Mosely has a 12-point average, Kerry Rackler a 13-point average, Choyr Gilbert a 12.5 average and Brian Fowler a 13-point mark.

Both teams had no trouble winning their respective district titles. Both went undefeated, Motley County 5-0 and Smyer 8-0.

District 6-3A, by far the area's tightest league, finally determined a champion last week when Coahoma defeated Seminole 54-50 to break a three-way tie for the leadership. Denver City, Seminole and Coahoma all tied for the first and second-half championships with 4-2 records and had to play a mini-tournament to determine a bi-district representative.

Wellman, the District 9-1A champion with an 18-5 record, received a bye into this weekend's Region 1 Class 1A tourney in the Texas Dome in Levelland. It will play the winner of the Smyer-Motley County bi-district game in the first round at 4 p.m. Friday.

In other bi-district games involving area teams, District 1-4A champion Canyon meets 2-4A titlist Snyder today at 8 p.m. in the Levelland High School gym. The Eagles, 25-8, have won 14 consecutive games and went through league play this season without a loss. Snyder is 20-12, riding a 17-game win streak and hasn't lost since Dec. 19.

Plainview, the District 4-5A champ, and Pampa, the 3-5A representative, meet today at 8 p.m. in the Canyon High School gym. The Bulldogs are 19-15 coming off a victory in the title game of the first-ever league post-season tournament. Plainview edged Lubbock High 53-48 Friday for the district crown. Pampa is 21-11 after winning a share of both first and second-half 3-3A titles, thus claiming the overall championship.

Slaton Advances By Downing Childress

PLAINVIEW — The Slaton Tigers evened the score with the Childress Bobcats Monday night.

The Tigers had four months to grieve over their 22-15 loss to Childress in their bi-district football clash before holding on for a 55-51 victory in their basketball rematch here in Hutcherson Center to earn a berth in the Region 1 Class 3A Tournament.

Slaton, now 20-11, will play the winner of tonight's Coahoma-Kermit bi-district game Friday at 8 p.m. in the Coronado High School gym. This is the first time the Slaton boys have reached regional play. The loss snaps a nine-game winning streak for Childress, 30-5.

"We've always been proud of the girls (winning state championships)," Slaton coach Rick Tiffin said as he tried to fight back his tears of joy. "We were overdue, and now we're getting what we deserve."

The Tigers led from the opening tap until the final buzzer, but in the waning seconds of the game Tiffin wasn't sure he'd be coaching again this year.

"This is the biggest win for us in a long time," said Tiffin, who saw his team come back from a 4-10 start this season. "We played a great first half but fell asleep in the third quarter like we always do."

The Tigers turned an early seasaw battle into a one-sided game as early as the end of the first quarter. Using lightning quickness, the Tigers broke the Bobcats' full-court press with ease.

Lonnie Phenix, a 6-foot-5 sophomore, led the Tigers' first-half charge by scoring eight points and dominating the boards. He finished the game with 11 points. Slaton's Ronald Nedd tied Childress' Barry Thompson and David Tucker for game-high scoring honors with 12 points. Michael Whaley added 11 for the Tigers.

The Bobcats outscored Slaton 17-11 in the third quarter to pull within five points, 40-35. An inside bucket and free throw by Tucker cut the Tiger lead to two points at 49-47 with 2:03 to play in the game but Whaley, who scored five points in the final seven minutes, drove the lane for a layin to give Slaton some breathing room.

Childress' Rice Nippert hit a baseline layup with 21 seconds to play to make it 53-51 but Barry Johnson fouled Slaton's Graig Wright with four seconds to go.

Wright, who led the Slaton fastbreak all night long, calmly hit both ends of a one-and-one situation to ice the game for Slaton.

Perryton Sinks Dimmitt 59-58

PAMPANA (Special) — District 1-3A champion Perryton rallied for 28 fourth-period points to sneak by Dimmitt 59-58 in a bi-district playoff game here Monday night.

The Bobcats, titlists from District 2-3A, led by 17 points, 48-31, entering the final eight minutes, but Perryton outscored them 28-10 over the final period to pull out the victory.

Jeff Greenway tossed in 20 points to lead Perryton, now 29-4. Gary Rinker and Lance Simpson added 10 points apiece.

Phil King scored 19 points for Dimmitt, which finished the season at 34-3. Randy Washington added 16 but Perryton limited Kevin Cleveland, the Bobcats' leading scorer averaging 21 points a game, to only eight points on two field goals and four foul shots.

Dimmitt managed a 16-15 lead after the opening quarter but moved out to a 30-21 halftime lead and increased the margin to 48-31 after the third period.

TECH WHIPS SAN ANTONIO
The Texas Tech Lacrosse Club defeated the previously unbeaten San Antonio Lacrosse Club 10-4 Sunday on the Tech campus. Bill Nottumo scored four goals and added an assist to lead the Raiders, now 5-2 for the season. Scott Chittenden added a pair of goals and one assist, John Suter had two goals and Jeff Stansburg and Jamey Ryan tallied a goal apiece for Tech. San Antonio is now 5-1.

"We want to take a look at Jim to see if he can help us at quarterback," Moore said. "We're a little short in experience at that position, and it sure won't hurt to let Jim practice with the quarterbacks. If we feel Jim can help us more at cornerback, a position he has proven himself at, then we'll move him back to defense."
Moore and Ritchie will also be looking at sophomore-to-be Perry Morren and senior Richy Ethridge, neither of whom have varsity playing experience. There is also a new face in Tech's QB derby — that of Layne Walker, a 6-2, 210-pounder who played one season at SMU after leading Clovis, N.M., to back-to-back state titles. Walker transferred to Tech last fall.
There also appears to be a shortage of experience at the tight end position. Junior Kevin Kolbye, who started most of the time last fall, has apparently decided to drop football. That leaves the position at this time to sophomore Curt Cole.

Lubbock Pony League and Lubbock Colt League are conducting player sign-ups simultaneously. Pony baseball is for 13 & 14 year olds born between August 1, 1966 & July 31, 1968. Colt baseball is for 15 & 16 year olds born between August 1, 1964 & July 31, 1966. The Pony League is the natural growth and progression of a boy in his baseball development. He starts as a Pee-Wee player, then moves to Major-Minor League level, and then to Pony League and finally on to Colt League and beyond. At each step he moves to a little larger playing field that is suited to his running, hitting, and most importantly, his throwing ability. The Pony League's 80 foot base paths and 54 foot pitching distance are ideally suited to the 13 & 14 year old physical and playing ability. Following his two years in the Pony League Program, a boy will be well prepared to move to the regulation baseball diamond when he is 15 years old and eligible to play Colt baseball. The Pony League Board recommends participation by 15 year olds in the Colt Program. The Pony League has been in Lubbock for many years and is an established respected and competitive baseball league. Most of the outstanding high school baseball players in this city have come through this program. Here are a couple of quotes about the Pony League in Lubbock. "I believe a transitional league, like Lubbock Pony League, which provides 80 foot base paths and competition for junior-high ball players with an age difference of only one year, is a highly beneficial program serving Lubbock's 7th and 8th graders." Bobby Moegle, Monterey High School Baseball Coach. "Winner of the Texas High School Baseball Coach of the Year Award." "Speaking as a baseball coach, I like the age structure of Pony League (13 and 14 year olds) because I believe it provides the most equitable competitive arrangements for those ages. I believe that the majority of youngsters at that age can perform better on an intermediate size diamond than a full size diamond." John Dudley, Coronado High School Baseball Coach. "1980 4-AAAA District Baseball Champion. The twelve team Lubbock Pony League uses a mandatory play rule and play their games at Maxey Park."

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

NOW IT'S ONLY SIX WEEKS UNTIL first notice day for May cotton. And so the intrigue — after the expiration of March on Monday — deepens in what obviously is a very big gamble on the direction of this market, says a cotton futures analyst.

Can a group of traders take about 40,000 bales that no one else can sell and dispose of the cotton with a comfortable profit, along with their other positions?

Will these stocks prove to be marketable at a price, despite the unhealthy consumption trends? "There's no doubt what the big news is in our markets these days," the analyst said, "and it certainly enlivens what could otherwise be a dreadfully dull winter."

Can anybody trade the market profitably from the long side in the face of this major bearish atmosphere for commodities?

"This trend is far older than the Reagan administration," the analyst pointed out.

FOR EXAMPLE, HERE'S HOW PRICES for the March option at last week's closes compare with those of a year ago (with 1980 prices listed first and 1981 prices listed last):

- Cocoa — $1.32 in 1980 and 0.88 in 1981.
- Coffee — $1.84 and $1.22.
- Copper — $1.09 and 0.80.
- Corn — $2.64 and $3.49.
- Cotton — 82½ cents and 88½ cents.
- Gold — $608 and $465.
- Lumber — $2.15 and $1.51.
- Silver — $33.10 and $31.74.
- Soybeans — $8.32 and $7.09.
- Sugar — 24½ cents and 22 cents.
- Wheat — $4.38 and $4.28.

Any specialist can well reason that these changes reflect the internal supply-demand factors in his particular field, the cotton market analyst observed.

"Undoubtedly, the American markets are still paying the price for the record-breaking summer weather," he added.

However, he said, the price of gold seems to be the key note to him.

"I AM NOT SMART ENOUGH TO ARGUE that it represents a store of value," the analyst said, "but almost everyone will agree that it is a barometer of sentiments."

"To me, the barometer is saying that perhaps this country has reached a watershed in its political and economic development as significant as the New Deal in 1933 and that there is some chance to return to the stability and sense that we once thought were part of our lives."

"That's bullish on the dollar, bearish on gold, and bearish on commodity prices — whether willing. It certainly is bearish on speculative fever."

"We don't think speculators are leaving the market from high interest rates. Those rates never dampened the enthusiasm of a trader who saw a good opportunity."

"We think speculators have left our market because they don't feel like speculating and don't see the promise of it right now."

Even capturing this small carryover, the analyst suggested, might prove a hollow victory.

DOMESTIC MILL BUYING OF COTTON remained slow last week, according to a weekly review of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Most mills have sufficient supplies of raw cotton to run into early summer and are limiting purchases to filling gaps in stocks. Inquiries increased for central and western new-crop cotton and resulted in a light volume of new business.

Interest centered on the medium and higher white and light spotted grades. Concern for rising overhead costs and softness in a number of areas of the textile market encouraged more caution for limiting stocks of both raw cotton and finished products.

Some mills shortened work schedules to hold down product inventories. Denim orders slowed and corduroy remained a very slow mover.

Combed all-cotton yarn, selected bottomweights, industrials and some household products were sluggish on the market. Print cloth, some blended yarns and fabrics for athletic wear remained in fair to good demand, with sales registered into third quarter months and beyond.

FORWARD CONTRACTING OF 1981-CROP cotton by growers beltwide through the end of February was less active than for any corresponding period since records were begun in 1976.

At the end of February, the USDA says, about 4 percent of the January prospective plantings had been booked, down from 17 percent a year earlier.

Forward contracting this season has been most active in the south central states, where about 12 percent of the crop has been booked. A year earlier, about 44 percent of the crop was under contract.

Growers in the southeastern states had contracted around 5 percent of their expected crop, compared with 15 percent a year earlier. In the western states, growers had contracted about 3 percent of their crop, the smallest percentage on record and down from 14 percent a year ago.

Southwestern growers had contracted about 2 percent of their crop, against 9 percent a year ago. In Texas, growers had booked 2 percent, against 10 percent in a year earlier.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED A FAIRLY QUIET session Monday just a shade above the day's lows with pared gains of 11 to 80 points.

Near May added the least at 89.02 cents and December gained the most at 82.32 cents. Spot March expired quietly at 11:30 a. m., Texas time, at 88.50 cents, up 25 points, and settled at 87.72 cents.

Market sources said prices rose on early short covering as well as light trade and speculative support in brisk trading. Upside stops were triggered starting at about 89.20 cents, basis May.

However, when near May failed to reach 90 cents, stopping instead at 89.80, the market ran into local long liquidation, which combined with speculative and commission house selling to send prices to the day's lows in late trading, they said.

Action had turned quiet after the early upward move and prices had fallen off the highs on selling by a large Chicago-based commission house, dealers said.

Eleven notices were issued and March's major receiver-stopper got all of them after having stopped 10 of the 11 notices issued Friday.

THE COMMODITY CREDIT CORP. HAS established up to $25 million in credit guarantees for sales of U. S. cotton to Thailand, the USDA said Monday. Exports under the three-year coverage must be completed by Sept. 30.

The guarantee rates include a charge to provide for a per annum interest rate of up to 8 percent on the guaranteed value. Exporters may apply for a coverage up to a maximum of 98 percent of the port value.

The Soviet news agency Tass was said to have reported last week that the U. S. S. R., after harvesting a record cotton crop of 9.96 million metric tons in 1980, is planning to expand cotton plantings in a desert area of Kazakhstan.

About 12,000 hectares (one hectare equals 2.471 acres) are to be added to the 115,000 hectares already set aside for cotton in Kazakhstan, the report said.

Australia is expected to harvest a record crop of 400,000 bales in 1981, according to the Australian Cotton Foundation.

U. S. COTTON PRICE SUPPORT LOANS on 1,468,570 bales were outstanding as of the week ended Feb. 25, up 49,243 bales from the previous week. The total included 3,657 bales of 1979-80 cotton and 1,464,913 bales from the 1980-81 crop.

A strike by 41 members of the Teamsters Union of Phoenix is underway and all cotton movement at Federal Complex in Picacho, Ariz., has been stopped since Feb. 14.

Unfixed call sales as of the week ended Feb. 27 totaled 1,216,600 bales, up 116,000 from the previous week. Unfixed call purchases totaled 635,400 bales, up 53,800.

Trading on Telcel Monday totaled 4,661 bales on an average price of 65.54 cents, an average of 2,647 points over the loan. The market difference ended up 25 points after having been up 50 points at one time.

Sorghum Seed Company To Change Name

HEREFORD (Special) — WAC Seed, Inc., a forerunner in the commercial production and marketing of hybrid sorghum seed, will change its name to SeedTec International, Inc., announced Armon Lauterback, vice president and general manager of SeedTec operations here.

In 1976, WAC was purchased by Pacific Oilseeds, Inc. of Woodland, Calif. From the Hereford office, the firm serves growers in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado and Nebraska. In addition to the domestic operations, SeedTec has two foreign subsidiaries.

Citrus Shippers Against Quarantine Lift

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Texas citrus shippers voiced dismay Monday over the lifting of a quarantine imposed on California fruit and vegetables because of a Mediterranean fruit fly outbreak.

"Naturally, we're disappointed," said Charles Rogers, a shipper in Donna. "We feel the problem is still there and must be watched closely. It's not over with yet."

Texas began a ban March 1 on California produce shipments which could contain the highly destructive pest. The insect lays eggs in many types of California officials protested the ban as unnecessary and illegal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

On Saturday, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said the ban had been lifted in a settlement with California avocado growers.

In an "after-the-fact" decision Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court ordered Texas to halt the quarantine that had held up shipments unless they were fumigated or kept in cold storage.

The Medfly was discovered last June in a non-commercial, 50-square mile area of Santa Clara and Alameda counties in California. Agriculture officials stripped trees of fruit in infested areas, used ground spraying and released sterile Medflies to interfere with the insect's breeding.

A 500-square-mile area around the infested section also was quarantined. However, Texas officials complained California should have begun immediate aerial spraying. Local governments have refused to allow low-altitude spraying in the suburban infested areas.

"It took Texas 44 days to beat the Medfly in 1967 with aerial spraying. California has had it over eight months and they still cannot tell you that it's been eradicated," complained Robert Schupp of Pride O'Texas Citrus in Mission.

Under the settlement announced over the weekend, California will put a Texas representative on the committee that directs eradication efforts. The western state also will conduct hearings with the U.S. Department of Agriculture across Texas to reduce fears of local growers and shippers.

"It's not totally the way we would like it," said Mike Wallace, general manager of Texas Citrus Mutual, a growers' organization.

"The quarantine wasn't totally safe but it gave some protection," he said.

Bentsen Addresses Ag Panelists

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

The Russian grain embargo, water importation, farm policy and inflation dominated discussion Monday as U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen addressed members of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce's Agriculture Committee.

Speaking to about 60 agriculturists at Plains Co-Op Oil Mill, Bentsen said he generally opposes the grain embargo despite claims from proponents that the Soviet Union is hurting by paying "hard cash" for wheat purchases in Argentina.

"I would like our farmers to have the hard cash instead of Argentina," the two-term senator said. "We should sell them (the Soviet Union) the grain, but not extend any credit to them."

Constructing a canal to flow water into the moisture-short Texas High Plains faces a hard battle, Bentsen said. The senator compared the issue to past controversy on how to divide water in the Colorado River, which he said was one of the "meanest, toughest fights" he has been involved in.

Though Secretary of Agriculture John Block is "truly concerned about farmers and wants to be an advocate of agriculture," Bentsen said, other top ranking governmental officials may play decisive roles in the development of farm policy.

Office of Management and Budget director David Stockman's testifying before the Agriculture Committee prior to Block's testimony broke a tradition of hearing from the secretary of agriculture first, Bentsen noted, which may signal that others may have a "very big hand in what the policy will be."

Bentsen voiced general support for President Reagan's proposed tax cut totals, saying inflation must be turned around for the benefit of everyone.

Seminar To Focus On Sandy Counties Cotton

BROWNFIELD (Special) — Cotton production in six sandyland counties of the South Plains will be the focal point of a one-day seminar in here Thursday.

Beginning at 9 a. m. in the American Legion Hall on Seagraves Avenue in West Brownfield, the educational program is especially tailored for producers in Gaines, Dawson, Yoakum, Terry, Cochran and Hockley counties.

It will provide producers detailed information on marketing, irrigation efficiency, and mechanical classing, as well as cotton production in that area, Billy C. Gunter, district extension director, said.

The seminar is being conducted by the cotton committee of the South Plains Development Program and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. SPD is a regional organization of Extension and is devoted to development of agriculture, industry and family living in the area.

Klugman Takes Quincy Crusade To Congress In Plea For Drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Playing Quincy, the crusading medical examiner, actor Jack Klugman converted last week's television show into real life Monday as he pleaded with Congress to spur the development of so-called orphan drugs for rare diseases.

"I'm, not trying to legislate morality, just encourage it," he declared. Klugman testified alongside Adam Seligman, a 19-year-old victim of Tourette Syndrome, in a crowded hearing of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health. Both sought federal help in making new drugs available to comparatively few sufferers.

Klugman's testimony was a textbook example of life imitating art.

Last week's episode of NBC's "Quincy" program concerned the life of a young sufferer of Tourette Syndrome and a pharmaceutical company's decision to drop research into a treatment drug. Quincy and the patient eventually testified before a congressional committee looking into "orphan drug" legislation.

Legislator's Husband Running For Office

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Reuben Spellman officially entered the race Monday for the Democratic nomination for the congressional seat formerly held by his ailing wife, Gladys.

Spellman, 71, paid his filing fee at the state election board in Annapolis, becoming the 8th Democrat to enter the race. Seven Republicans also have filed, and more candidates are certain to enter the race before the March 18 deadline.

Mrs. Spellman suffered a severe heart attack the weekend before the general election last November, but still was re-elected by a margin of about four to one over Republican Kevin Igoe. Her seat was declared vacant by the House of Representatives when she failed to recover from a coma.

Airline Buys Stock Of Competitive Carrier

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas International Airlines said Monday it has acquired about 40 percent of the common stock of Continental Airlines in its effort to prevent a merger between the larger carrier and Western Airlines and to acquire Continental itself.

Texas International's tender offer of $13 a share for 6 million shares, or nearly 49 percent of Continental, runs until March 16, unless it is extended.

The Houston-based carrier said it had purchased 4,773,989 shares as of Monday. Those shares, added to the 1,452,200 shares previously bought by the Houston-based airline, gives Texas International control of about 40 percent of Continental's outstanding stock.

Continental shareholders are to decide Thursday whether to merge with Western Airlines, based in Los Angeles. The Continental-Western merger must be approved by most of Continental's outstanding shares, and Texas International, which has been urging Continental shareholders to vote against the transaction, feels confident that with 49 percent of the shares, it could defeat the proposal.
