

Gale-Force Winds Shriek Over Region; Damage, Injuries Heavy

Area Shrouded In Blinding Dust

WINDSTORM DAMAGE — Winds of near hurricane force that lashed the Texas High Plains Tuesday afternoon inflicted heavy damage all across the area. Among the worst was this grain storage tank six miles west of Lubbock, in northern Bailey County. The 80-foot-high, 500,000-bushel facility owned by Farmers Cooperative Grain Co. was demolished. In Lubbock (below) gales that peaked at 62 mph blew in northwest-facing windows in the airport passenger boarding area and spread papers and debris through much of the huge terminal's interior. AN UNEXPECTED BLAST of hurricane-force winds moved eastward out of New Mexico and across the South Plains late Tuesday, leaving a multi-million dollar trail of damage and reports of numerous injuries, most involving motorists hurt in dust-shrouded accidents.

Law enforcement agencies in Clovis, where damages are expected to climb well past $1 million, were still assessing the impact of the storm Tuesday night. Gusts which were believed to have topped 90 mph there toppled the roof of an airport hangar onto nine privately owned aircraft and collapsed a grain elevator north of town.

In Hereford, the winds lifted the roof from a block-long building being used as a school for children of migrant farmworkers only minutes after the students had been released for the day. A school secretary who was trapped briefly in the debris suffered minor injuries.

Electrical, Telephone Service Interrupted

Power and telephone outages continued through the afternoon and early evening in a number of towns with Hale Center area residents without power for more than four hours.

Winds were clocked at approximately 100 mph in several areas and the soil kicked up by the blast triggered a dust storm that was termed "probably the most intense since December of 1977," according to a researcher at Lubbock's National Weather Service.

Warm temperatures combined with a low pressure system over Kansas to form "just the right ingredients for a storm of this magnitude," said Ken Wigner of the NWS.

Visibility Zero Across Broad Area

The storm extend from about 50 miles south of Lubbock to the Hereford area and into eastern New Mexico. At one point visibility was reported officially at 3/8 of a mile but an NWS spokesman in Lubbock said zero visibility was probably more accurate in many areas.

Wigner said recent rains across the South Plains contributed to the severity of the dust in that a fine crust of top soil was formed from the is light and easily picked up by the wind.

Although dust was a contributing factor in dozens of traffic accidents it was the brutal wind that caused the greatest amount of physical damage.

Clovis Fire Chief Jerry Carter said damage just at the Clovis Municipal Airport may reach half a million dollars.

Nine airplanes, valued in excess of $350,000, were beneath the roof of Clovis Aviation Inc. hangar when the structure collapsed.

Dan Burkhalter, the owner of Clovis Aviation, said the wind hit 90 mph as the large rear doors of the hangar caved in and the roof came down. "After that we don't know what the wind speed was, because the wind gauge blew away," Burkhalter said.

Mobile Homes Overturned

Clovis police reported thousands of dollars in damage to signs, windows, roofs, and small buildings. One 40-foot sign belonging to Gibson's Discount Center, was twisted "like a pretzel" according to a policeman.

Two mobile homes were overturned and numerous power outages were reported in Clovis because of the high winds.

Carter said five traffic accidents in the city resulted in minor injuries.

One large grain elevator storage bin was reported destroyed by the high winds could had no estimate Tuesday on the damage to the structure.

In Hereford, a secretary for the Texas Migrant Council Head Start suffered back injuries when the entire roof of the single-story, block-long building was lifted by the wind and dumped about 25 yards east of the building.

Estela Sanchez was struck by plywood and masonry in the accident and was found under a desk by Arnold Lopez,

Seven Hurt In Wrecks During Gale

By EVIE DAVIS

SEVEN persons were injured, one critically, Tuesday afternoon in three related West Fourth Street traffic accidents that police blamed on zero visibility caused by blowing sand.

All four members of the Rickey McKennon family — including 8-year-old Travis McKennon, who was in critical condition late Tuesday at Lubbock General Hospital — were injured in the first accident at 4:45 p.m. in the 6600 block of West Fourth Street.

And as police and Emergency Medical Services personnel worked on the injured family, two ensuing traffic mishaps sent a Lubbock police sergeant and two Air Force officers to Methodist Hospital for treatment.

Police said McKennon, 33, of 2518 63rd St. had stopped his Ford Mustang at a stop sign facing north on Ironton Avenue and, believing the road was clear, was attempting a left turn onto Fourth Street when his vehicle collided with a Plymouth Duster headed east on Fourth.

The McKennon boy suffered multiple injuries in the wreck, while his mother, 28-year-old Judy McKennon, suffered a broken arm and leg. She, too, was admitted to Lubbock General and was in serious condition late Tuesday.

McKennon and the couple's 5-year-old daughter, Jennifer, also were injured, but were in satisfactory condition late Tuesday at the same hospital. The driver of the Duster was not hurt.

However, while police were investigating the wreck, the dust and debris tossed about by the more than 60 mph

Airport Patrons Escape Injury As Winds Rend Concourse Glass

THE MOST SEVERE dust storm to strike Lubbock in four years halted air traffic here Tuesday when a massive portion of the airport terminal glass collapsed and also was blamed for numerous traffic accidents, power outages and damage to innumerable homes, businesses and cars.

Two sections of windows on the upper level of the Lubbock International Airport blew out when a gust of wind hit the north side of the building, according to Aviation Director Marvin Coffee. Ten or more 10-by-8-foot panels of glass shattered and covered the floor, Coffee said, but no one was injured.

He said the area had been evacuated about 20 minutes earlier when airport employees noticed vibrations in the windows.

Several airlines canceled afternoon flights but planned to resume scheduled arrivals and departures later in the evening, Coffee said, adding flights would be funneled through gates 1, 2, 5 and 6 to avoid the area where the damage occurred.

Repairs on the windows may take from six to eight weeks, according to Coffee, and temporary materials will be placed over the panels until then.

Meanwhile, Lubbock motorists were facing severe problems of their own because of the storm, which worsened over the city just before the evening rush hour at 5 p.m.

Limited visibility, which one Emergency Medical Services ambulance driver described as "worse than zero," caused several accidents, police said, including three related collisions along West Fourth Street in which seven persons were hurt.

Adding to motorists' woes were fallen branches and roofing material which was strewn across city streets, slowing and sometimes completely blocking vehicles' paths.

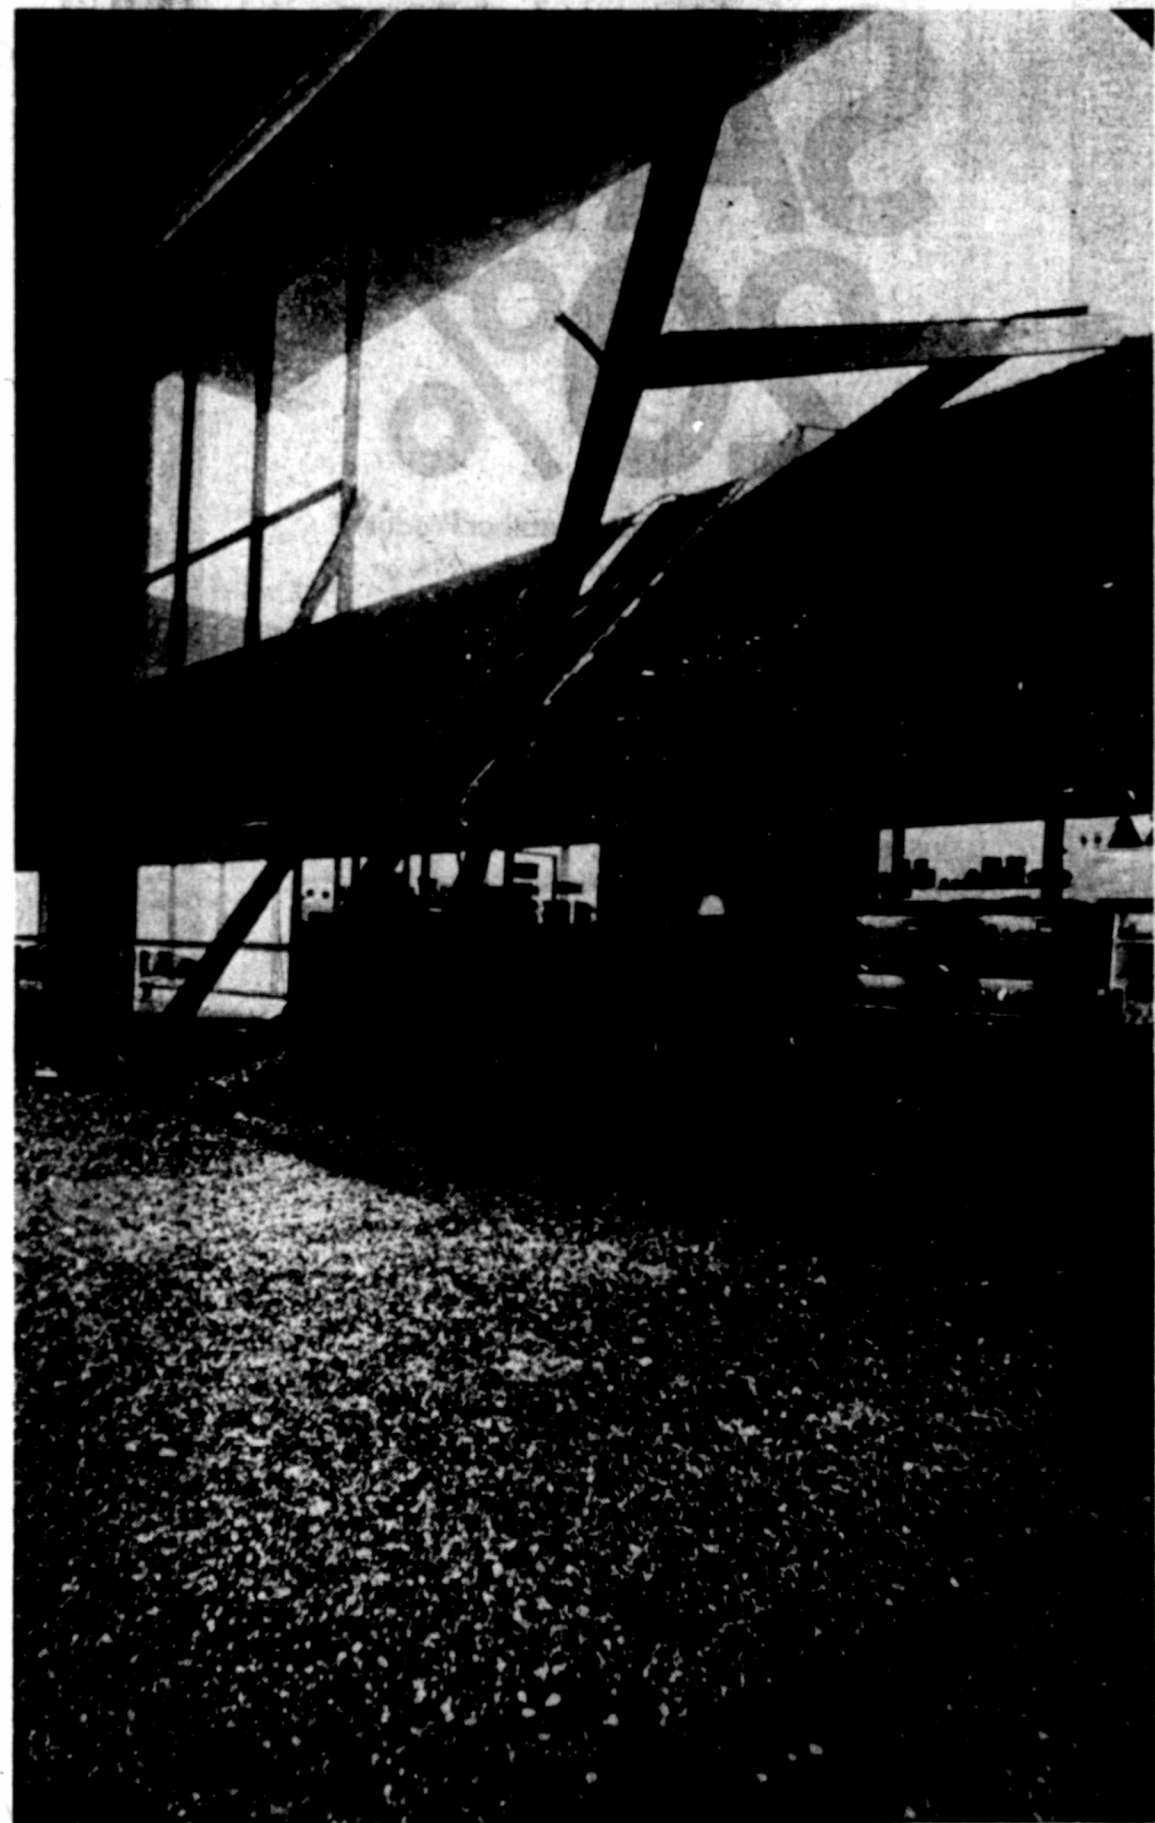

Parked cars in many cases fared little better than moving vehicles, with police also receiving a flurry of reports of vehicle damages by the force of the winds and the debris which they carried.

Power lines also fell prey to the winds, and police were tied up much of the afternoon keeping an eye on the live wires, which posed possible fire hazards to several structures.

Lubbock fire officials responded to 14 calls after the storm hit. The worst $1,000 fire damage was caused by downed electrical wires, a department spokesman said.

Most of the calls were grass and dumpster fires caused by

Nation Turns Green For St. Pat's Day

By The Associated Press
The Irish legions marched through the cities of America on Tuesday in a glorification of St. Patrick, the patron saint of the Emerald Isle. There were green grits in Georgia, a green mink in Chicago and an airlift of shamrocks for parades in five cities.

In Manhattan, a million people cheered as Mayor Edward I. Koch and Gov. Hugh L. Carey — both wearing the colors of the Irish flag — led 100,000 people marching to the drums of 196 bands in a parade up Fifth Avenue.

In Chicago, Mayor Jane Byrne showed up wearing a green, three-quarter-length mink coat to lead that city's parade while the Chicago River (with a mammoth dose of dye) flowed Kelly green.

St. Paul, Minn., which has been celebrating St. Pat's Day off and on for about 100 years, fielded 110 marching units to challenge the big cities of the East, and 101 other parades were held in 31 states.

"New York's got the big one, but we're darn near tied for second place with Chicago, I'd say," said Bob Gallivan of Gallivan's Restaurant, who helped revive the parade tradition in St. Paul in 1967.

You might say that neighboring Minneapolis, which put on a much smaller show, turned green with envy. They got down to some serious drinking early in Memphis, Tenn., with the Fifth Annual St. Patrick's Day Pub Crawl and Marching Ensemble, beginning with the traditional blessing of the keg presided over by restaurateur Silky Sullivan.

A veritable mass of Irishmen, both hereditary and honorary, marched two miles from downtown Memphis to Overton Square, stopping to slake their thirst at 19 bars and other public houses along the way. A beer truck equipped with outside spigots followed the procession to take care of emergencies.

Iranians Put Former Official On Trial

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An Iranian court put a former official of the revolutionary government on trial Tuesday as an alleged CIA collaborator who conspired against the Islamic revolution in Iran, the Iranian news agency Pars reported.

The defendant, former Deputy Prime Minister Amir Abbas Entezam, was a close associate of former Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan, a leading liberal secular voice in the revolution.

Entezam's trial could fuel the confrontation between Iran's two major political factions, although supreme leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Monday convened a summit of top officials to try to head off a showdown.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's liberal, more Western-oriented and secular followers — a faction that includes Bazargan — have been in a power struggle with a harder-line revolutionary faction that is led by Islamic clergymen and supports Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai. The two sides have argued over the conduct of the war and the direction of the revolution.

After the high-level meeting Monday at his Tehran home, Khomeini issued a gag order on speechmaking by top officials until the end of the Iran-Iraq war.

On Tuesday, Iranian state television, heeding Khomeini's orders, canceled plans for a television debate between Bani-Sadr and his opponents.

Entezam, who had also been the official spokesman for the Bazargan government, was arrested a few days after Iranian militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4, 1979. He was accused of collusion with the Central Intelligence Agency.

Pars said Bazargan appeared at the opening court session Tuesday at Tehran's Evin Prison and defended the actions of his former subordinate, calling the charges "baseless allegations."

The Bazargan government, the first revolutionary administration following the fall of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, resigned two days after the embassy takeover. Bazargan is a member of the Iranian Parliament.

Arson Conspiracy Charge Filed

An Amarillo man recently charged in connection with an alleged scheme to sell counterfeit gold coins was charged in Lubbock Tuesday with conspiracy to commit arson.

Sidney James Heard was charged here in connection with an alleged conspiracy last November to inflate the value of and then burn down a Lubbock florist shop.

Heard, charged early this month in an alleged scheme in which counterfeit gold Kruggerand coins were used to obtain bank loans, Tuesday remained in Randall County Jail at Canyon on charges of possession of a controlled substance.

The Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney's Office recommended his bond be set at $150,000 on the Lubbock County charge. Heard is accused of conspiring with a Lubbock man to inflate the value of the florist shop with false invoices prior to burning it. The scheme was not carried out and additional charges may be filed in the case, Assistant District Attorney Mark McBride said.

Board Votes To Submit Capital Improvements

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
 Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Civic Centers Board voted unanimously Tuesday to submit nearly $55,000 in requests for capital improvements to the City Council for consideration during this month's General Revenue Sharing hearings.

However, most board members seemed in agreement their requests for improvements at the Memorial Civic Center and the Municipal Auditorium-Coliseum probably will not receive the council's serious consideration until next fall.

One of the major problems with the board's funding requests is that more than half of the money would go to improve the auditorium-coliseum complex, the future of which has not been determined by city officials.

The city has been discussing the possible sale of the auditorium-coliseum buildings to Texas Tech University. But those negotiations still are in the preliminary stages.

Board chairman Al Couch said city officials have indicated "it might be a premature action" to make improvements at the auditorium-coliseum. If Tech purchases the facility, he said, university officials might not agree with the improvements deemed necessary by the board.

The improvements proposed by the board calls for the expenditure of $29,000 to paint the coliseum's floors in the seating area and on the walkaround concourse. Couch explained cracks have developed in the concrete floors in those areas. He said food and beverages often are spilled in the cracks, making the cleaning of the coliseum much more difficult.

The remainder of the funding requests would go for improvements at the civic center, Couch said. About $20,000 is being requested to provide fluorescent and halide lighting in the center's exhibit hall and about $5,500 for plaza fountain and planter lights.

Board vice chairman Bill Armstrong will present the requests to the council at a March 26 public hearing on the revenue sharing program.

John Anderson, another member of the board, said he thinks it's unlikely the council will approve the requests for funding "in this go-around, but we will receive consideration in October."

In other business Tuesday, board members approved a contract between the city and Tech officials for a joint effort to provide a series of musical programs this summer.

Mayor Bill McAlister and Tech President Dr. Lauro Cavazos attended the board's meeting to officially sign the contract, marking the beginning of the joint production effort.

Civic Lubbock, Inc., and the Tech music and theater departments will co-sponsor the musical productions, which will be staged on four consecutive weekends between June 19 and July 11. Musicals planned for the project are

"Oklahoma!," "110 In The Shade" and "Robber Bridegroom."

Showing The Flag In El Salvador?

JAY HARRIS: It's Your Right...

THIS PAST Monday was a special day in the history of this nation. And freedom-loving peoples everywhere.
It was on March 16 that James Madison was born. The man who became the fourth President of the United States is honored not so much for that fact as what he did in helping frame the Constitution.

LAXITY IN TEXAS VOTING LAW

Ballot Box Integrity In Doubt

EVIDENCE continues to mount that the integrity of the ballot box in Texas is threatened—through "honest mistakes" and otherwise.

But the Texas Legislature, which would be the body responsible for tightening the election laws, seems to be getting a big fat yawn out of the situation.

Even if elections aren't stolen outright as a result of voting irregularities, however, public confidence in the process can be eroded to the point that the whole democratic system becomes suspect.

IN LUBBOCK and elsewhere across Texas, election judges feel pressure from state election officials to bend over backwards to make certain that no person is denied the right to vote.

As a result, the rules are bent. In Dallas, for example, reporters Sam Atlesley, formerly of The A-J, and Christy Hoppe have revealed in The Dallas Morning News that 102 persons who weren't registered were allowed to vote last November in 20 predominantly Republican precincts.

That study was prompted by outcries in predominantly black, Democratic South Dallas that earlier revelations about widespread voting irregularities there were discriminatory.

Cases of nursing home patients, including one who was dead, being signed up to vote by workers for a Democratic congressman in Dallas also have been alleged.

Although the probes have been centered for the most part in Dallas, there is enough smoke elsewhere to suggest that it is a fairly common practice for hurried election judges to let almost anyone vote who shows up at the polls and says he's entitled to do so.

In many instances, "honest mistakes" are made—but, then, a lot of lawbreaking, from speeding to homicide, is done unintentionally.

THE ANSWER, before any real damage is done, is for election laws and procedures to be tightened.

Election officials who make "honest mistakes" may have to be hauled into court on appropriate charges, along with any person who votes without being registered to do so, in order to bring home to all the severity of the offense.

Voting must not become so casual an activity that any person can get a sudden "urge" on election day to go cast a ballot if he hasn't been interested enough to register and get himself on the polling lists a month or so in advance.

That's the only way that Texans, and all Americans, can be certain that the ballot box is not being stuffed. Laxity in the administration of voting laws undermines the very foundations of honest, representative government.

GEORGE F. WILL:

Death Penalty Trap

WASHINGTON—According to his lawyer, Steven Judy was intelligent, witty and kind in conversation but had "this thing about beating up women."

The story of how Judy did his thing should stir doubts in those opponents of capital punishment whose minds are not closed as tight as eggs.

Judy, who was executed March 9 by Indiana, committed his first rape when he was 13.

Pretending to be selling Boy Scout raffle tickets, he forced his way into a woman's house, raped her, stabbed her more than 40 times (hard enough to break his knife), smashed her on the head several times with a hatchet, and cut off her thumb. Miraculously, she survived.

Such is the criminal incompetence of America's criminal justice system, Judy was on parole in Illinois (he had served just 20 months for viciously beating a stranger—a woman) and was free on bond in Indiana (the offense was armed robbery; the bond was just $750, in spite of his lurid record) when he committed what he says was his 13th rape. It certainly was his last.

Pretending that his car was disabled, he got a passing motorist to stop. He raped her, killed her, then drowned her three small children in a creek.

He never expressed remorse, and advised the jury to impose the death sentence, lest he someday be released and kill again.

UNTIL RECENTLY I opposed capital punishment, categorically, in writing and actions. (I initiated the campaign that culminated in Connecticut's first commutation of a death sentence.)

However, the categorical nature of my position—I believed that evidence was irrelevant—certainly was wrong. And I may have been wrong on the issue itself.

One of two serious arguments for capital punishment is that it almost certainly can be a significant deterrent of significant crimes.

If that is so, then refusing to execute killers in certain kinds of cases amounts to refusing to prevent the deaths of innocent persons, and is clearly immoral.

There now is sophisticated research that strongly suggests a deterrent effect. Furthermore, the principal argument against the deterrent effect is weak.

THE ARGUMENT is that in most jurisdictions where capital punishment has been abolished there has been no immediate, sharp increase in what had been capital crimes.

But in those jurisdictions, the actual act of abolition was an insignificant event because for years the death penalty had been imposed rarely, if at all.

Common sense—which deserves deference until it is refuted—suggests that the fear of death can deter some premeditated crimes, including some murders.

The second powerful argument for capital punishment concerns a need for moral symmetry between crime and punishment.

A society practices self-indulgent humanitarianism when it spares the likes of Judy in order to spare itself the unpleasantness of contemplating and administering capital punishment.

THE VISCERAL reaction most humane people have against capital punishment actually is relevant to the case for that punishment.

Capital punishment is indeed horrible. That is why it can deter, and why, deterrence aside, it is a proper expression of virtuous sentiments. In his book, "For Capital Punishment," Walter Berns argues that the purpose of punishment and dramatic poetry can be similar.

"Capital punishment, like Shakespeare's dramatic and Lincoln's political poetry...serves to remind us of the majesty of the moral order that is embodied in our law and of the terrible consequences of its breach..."

"The criminal law must be made awful, by which I mean, awe-inspiring, or commanding profound respect or reverential fear." It must remind us of the moral order by which alone we can live as human beings, and in our day the only punishment that can do this is capital punishment."

WHETHER THE authority to impose the ultimate punishment serves to the expressive and teaching function that Berns correctly assigns to the law suggests an empirical question.

But his position is plausible. And in a society suffering an epidemic of murder and other serious crime, the burden of proof is on opponents of capital punishment.

Rather than dispatch that burden with evidence and argument, many opponents simply assert the impropriety of the sentiments that Berns wants the law to teach by expressing.

TIMING IS PERFECT

New Look At Old Problems

THERE ARE some things about his new job that President Reagan isn't going to like. And one of them is on his desk right now in the form of a select commission report on immigration policy.

It is a new look at an old problem, a 453-page tome, two years in the compiling, that among other things calls for the expenditure of additional federal dollars to deal with an influx of illegal immigration that it finds out of control.

How many dollars is not specified, but it would take quite a few to get even a good start on a recommended strengthening of personnel ranks and equipment systems.

At least, it's timing could not be more exquisite—in the midst of the new administration's Operation Budget Trimming.

NONE OF what the commission reports, of course, is by any means news. The problem of illegal immigration and the inadequacy of the understaffed immigration system and arbitrary laws under which it operates are well-known and much-advertised.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Apologists Gloss Over Gun-Running Episodes

WASHINGTON—One byproduct of the recent debate about El Salvador is new insight into the deceptive practices of our own government.

A major revelation of the Reagan State Department's white paper on El Salvador is the degree to which the Sandinista government in Nicaragua has acted as a conduit for arms flowing to the Salvadoran rebels.

For the past year, on this evidence, the Sandinistas have been working hand in glove with Cuba and other Communist nations to help spread Marxist terror in El Salvador.

This disclosure goes directly contrary to the certification made last fall by the Carter administration when it authorized shipment of American aid to the Sandinista government.

ONE OF the conditions attached by Congress was that the President had to determine the Sandinistas were not exporting terror before the aid could be freed up. President Carter made such a certification last Sept. 12.

This stipulation occurred despite the fact that the Carter administration knew the Sandinistas were involved in gun-running to El Salvador.

Much of the intelligence data showing Sandinista involvement in this activity was made available to Ambassador Lawrence Pezzullo and Deputy Assistant Sec. of State James Cheek (both of whom are still in the State Department) by the CIA.

The existence of this data was pointed out at the time by Rep. Bill Young, R-Fla., a member of the House Intelligence Committee. After President Carter certified the innocence of the Sandinistas, Young vehemently protested.

IN AN interview with the Washington weekly, Human Events, Young said Carter officials deliberately turned a blind eye to the evidence.

"I talked to Jim Cheek many times about this," Young said. "He did not deny the information that I had and he didn't attempt to change my mind. Actually, there were times when off the record he was willing to acknowledge that I was right and that, yes, these things were happening."

Cheek's response to this is that the information at the time was inconclusive.

However, the evidence in the Reagan white paper indicates the Carter State Department knew about the gun-running, brought it to the attention of the Sandinistas, and got it temporarily suspended so that the President's September certification was at least technically true for a few weeks. The white paper says:

AT THE end of September, despite appeals from the guerrillas, the Sandinistas suspend their weapons deliveries to El Salvador for one month, after the U.S. government lodges a protest to Nicaragua on the arms trafficking.

"When the shipments resume in October... Nicaragua—with Cuban support—begins airlifting arms from Nicaragua into El Salvador."

If the statements in the white paper are true, it is hard to interpret the behavior of the Carter State Department as other than a deliberate deception of the American people, in which the administration connived with a foreign power to cover up the facts about Communist aggression.

The Carter officials knew the Sandinistas had been engaged in arms traffic, but said nothing about it to the U.S. public, while the President was officially certifying the opposite.

THIS WAS not the first time that such an official coverup occurred in order to protect the Sandinistas by concealing their connection to external Marxist forces.

Another such coverup, also involving gun-running, occurred in 1979. In May of that year, a CIA memo revealed that Fidel Castro and Panama's Omar Torrijos were funneling arms to the Sandinistas as they battled against the anti-Communist Somoza government. This information, too, was withheld from the American people by the Carter administration.

The defense of the Sandinistas now being offered by their apologists in this country is that while gun-running may have occurred from Nicaraguan territory, the government is not responsible for it.

Funny, if that is true, then the Carter administration was able to get it temporarily suspended by that government last September.

ANDREW TULLY:

Dibs On St. Pat

WASHINGTON—For the True Believer, the most annoying aspect of St. Patrick's Day is the flood of prose turned out by researchers, amateurs as well as professional, who would better spend their time bemoaning the low quality of trash collection.

As the clans gathered for the Great Day, The Washington Star gave precious space to letters from readers who shamelessly cast doubt on Patrick's authentic Irishness.

One claimed the good saint was born in Scotland, a second that he was the son of Roman parents who moved to Wales in time for his birth in that irascible province of the Sassenach.

AH, THE mischief of the misguided! This is no time for the cunning devilry of latter-day scholarship. No matter the testimony of aged, yellowing manuscripts, the True Believer knows that St. Patrick was born on the Ould Sod.

Because the Irishman is a soft-spoken lad whose voice can barely be heard in the next county, Englishmen, Scots and even the French have spread the heresy that theirs is the soil that gave St. Patrick to a theretofore uncivilized world.

The fact is, of course—and it is a flattering one—that these broadcasters of heterodoxy want in on the Great Day.

At least the Scots can claim a common relationship with Patrick. As is well known in educated circles, the Scots are merely poor Irish cousins who happen to live in Scotland.

THEY ARE there because in the misty dawn of history some brave Irishmen agreed to marry Scottish girls so the Scots would be strong enough to fight the English.

The Irish even sent the bagpipe over to Scotland as a gag, and the Scots took it seriously. An Irishman made amends for this hoax by inventing a marvelous malt-based potion which he permitted the Scots to call Scotch whisky.

It is also true that St. Patrick was a distinguished scholar. Besides converting the pagans, he codified the ancient Irish law and developed a highly intellectual, sophisticated and civil society on the island.

The English claim they civilized the Celtic race, which shows how much they know.

TO BE sure, St. Patrick spent some time in both Britain and Gaul, or France. Somebody had to teach those people how to eat with a knife and fork.

Some who pretend to scholarship have written that Patrick's father was a medium-ranking civil servant.

The devil take them and run away with them in the shape of a wild horse! Every Irishman's father was a king—for the simple reason that no Irishman would do what he was told. Where do you think all those castles in Ireland came from?

IN KEEPING with the occasion, Henry L. Stevenson, editor and vice president of United Press International, has posed some thoughts on what a Free Press means to America...

What if newspapers, radio and television stations had to submit stories to censors appointed by the government before printing or broadcasting them, Stevenson asks. In Cuba and other nations, a government-approved official checks the headlines and content of the official newspapers as the pages are made up.

"What if reporters were barred from meetings of City Councils, state agencies, Congress and other official bodies? Decisions would be reported by official communique, which is the way it is in many places.

"What if Woodward and Bernstein had been forbidden to write about Watergate? Anything that smacks of criticism of those in power is banned in dozens of countries around the world."

"AND WHAT if Pentagon and State Department reporters were forbidden to write about arms shipments or the sending of U.S. military advisers to El Salvador?"

Military news is specifically censored in many nations, including the Soviet Union and Israel. Russian citizens, for instance, know only what their leaders wish to tell them about Afghanistan. And must make up their minds about what their country is doing based on just what they are told.

And closer home, what if reporters were barred from all courtrooms where justice is dispensed? Newsmen have been banned in Texas for what seems like a whim. And numerous pretrial hearings are routinely closed in the U.S. despite vigorous objections.

"What if law enforcement officials entered newsrooms to search desks and files for confidential material? It happens overseas and, in a dozen or so instances in recent years in the U.S.

"And what if the tolls of dead and missing and other details of Mount St. Helens volcano, the MGM fire and the string of murders in Atlanta were never reported? News of this type is never disseminated within some countries."

WE HAVE COME to expect news from any place in the world as reported by U.S. and other correspondents.

"What if foreign reporters were met in New York or Washington, given an official government position paper, and told they could not enter the U.S. to observe or report?"

"It happens somewhere in the world virtually every day an American correspondent arrives at the border.

"What if reporters were forbidden to write about shortages of food and consumer goods, inflationary prices or anything that might lead to speculation about these products? In Nicaragua, Decrees 511 and 512 forbid just that unless the news comes from officialdom.

"What if terrorists routinely kidnapped, tortured and killed journalists in an attempt to silence them? It has happened with regularity during 1980 in Bolivia, Guatemala, Lebanon, El Salvador, Syria and Turkey."

WHAT IF a political cartoonist were fined for poking fun at Ronald Reagan?

In Portugal, a cartoonist was fined $5,000 last year for lampooning the president of that country.

What if the government controlled the distribution of newsprint, as is the case in Nicaragua? "I wouldn't be in business very long if I printed critical stories," a prominent publisher in another country says.

What if American journalism schools were closed for "purification of the faculty?" It happened in Iran last year—for "purification and Islamization of the faculty."

"What if Washington decided to appoint the key editor of a local newspaper to a federal post in an attempt to curb criticism? It happened in Ghana the past year.

"And what if public records were sealed away and newsmen were told they could not be inspected? It is done routinely overseas, and hardly a day passes in the U.S. when a newspaper or broadcast station doesn't have to fight for access to such documents."

THAT LITANY of things that could happen and often do isn't in the final analysis so much directed at newsmen as at the citizen.

From the moment this nation started its search for freedom, a Free Press has been one of its main bulwarks.

But, the guarantee of a Free Press was not some special privilege granted to newsmen. It was a guarantee that the people themselves would know the truth. It is no small matter that it is not newsmen who seek to hide the news, but politicians, officials, those with something to hide from the public.

As UPI's Stevenson notes: "The First Amendment guarantees your right to know. Speak up for it."

The day a Free Press is bound by "rules" or edicts handed down by courts or bureaucrats or officials, no matter where, that is the day the first step toward thought control of the masses starts, and Freedom ends...

McAllen Settles In Police Brutality Lawsuits

BROWNSVILLE (UPI)—The City of McAllen Tuesday agreed to pay $250,000 to 17 persons who claimed city police officers subjected them to brutality, illegal arrests and malicious prosecution.

American Civil Liberties Union attorney James C. Harrington said the city agreed to pay the plaintiffs, who already had received settlement on 10 of 11 lawsuits they filed against individual police officers, after an all-night negotiating session which ended minutes before court testimony was to begin Tuesday.

"With the individual settlements, that makes about $410,000 we've collected for the injured people," Harrington said. "I only regret we didn't have the chance to go to trial to expose the cover-up by the city commission and Mayor Orphal Bramb."

Bramb's attorney denied any cover-up existed in the McAllen brutality cases.

U.S. District Judge James De Anda

abruptly dismissed a six-member jury Tuesday which was about to hear testimony in the massive civil rights litigation. Attorneys for both sides had delivered their opening arguments Monday.

The money which the city agreed to pay would be split among the plaintiffs, ACLU officials said.

The plaintiffs, mostly Hispanic citizens of McAllen, had filed 11 federal lawsuits, claiming they were beaten and harassed by city police. Ten of those lawsuits were settled in favor of the citizens, resulting in damage awards exceeding $100,000.

The settlement was considered culmination of five years of litigation against the City of McAllen and 24 city police officers, 14 of whom are no longer employed by the city.

The federal lawsuit, which asked for nearly $400,000 damages and a federal court order forcing the City of McAllen to better train its officers and to discontinue a pattern of police abuses, was a class action filed on behalf of the 17 individuals.

"McAllen is going to continue to have problems until they pay (police officers) better and train better," said Harrington.

He added that some reforms sought by the ACLU have been instituted by the City of McAllen, especially "substantial improvements" in the police complaint review processes.

McAllen city attorney Ted Calisi said the settlement does not grant an injunction against the city because "the rule changes they (ACLU) wanted were already in effect."

"I'm emphatically stating there was no cover-up by the city or the mayor," Calisi said.

Former Administrator Attacks Reagan Food Stamp Cutbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's proposals to cut $1.8 billion from the food stamp program would hurt some of the nation's poorest families, the former chief of the government's nutrition programs said Tuesday.

"The overwhelming bulk of the savings (from the administration's proposals) comes from persons below the poverty line itself," said Robert Greenstein, who was administrator of the Food and Nutrition Service in the Agriculture Department in the Carter administration.

Greenstein, testifying before the House Agriculture subcommittee on domestic marketing, consumer relations and nutrition, argued against the administration's proposal to deduct the amount of free school meals a child receives from his family's overall food stamp benefits. That would reduce food stamp benefits an estimated $12 per month per child.

Describing that as the "most severe" of the proposals, Greenstein said those who would be most affected would be single mothers receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children — "among the poorest food stamp households."

The Reagan administration has recommended that the fiscal 1982 food stamp program be about $1.8 billion less than the $12.5 billion sought by former President Jimmy Carter.

The reductions would be made primarily by the school meals deduction in overall benefits and by lopping off about 1.2 million people from the upper end of the income scale of those now eligible for food stamps. About 22 million Americans participate in the program.

Hearings on the program, up for reauthorization this year in the national farm and food-aid bill, began Monday in the Senate Agriculture Committee, where panel chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he was "committed to limiting" the program to the "truly needy citizens of this country who are unable to provide for themselves."

The hearings shifted to the House subcommittee Tuesday with its chairman, Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., acknowledging he was not a "neutral observer" of the program.

"I ... believe that the program cuts proposed by the Reagan administration will do irreparable harm to millions of needy Americans," Richmond said in his opening statement.

He cautioned against cuts that would "unleash the spectre of hunger, malnutrition, disease and death among our fellow citizens."

Seven Hurt In Storm-Linked Accidents

 gusts led to two more collisions.
 Police had parked a patrol car, its emergency lights flashing, west of the McKenna accident but low visibility apparently obscured the vision of Air Force Capt. David Martin Eiband of 8613 Kenosha.

Eiband's 1974-model Dodge Dart slammed into the rear of the patrol car shortly after 5 p.m. and pushed the police car toward officials administering aid to the McKenna, police said.

Cpl. Greg Cagle was able to jump into the moving patrol car and slam on the brakes before it reached the injured, police said, but Eiband was hurt slightly and his wife, 28-year-old Lt. Kay Eiband, suffered head and back injuries.

Eiband was treated at Methodist Hospital and released. Mrs. Eiband was undergoing treatment late Tuesday at the hospital's emergency room.

Following that accident, Lubbock Police Sgt. Ronnie Sowell left the 6600 block of Fourth Street in front of an Aid Ambulance transporting one of the injured to the hospital, according to police.

Sowell slowed at Fourth Street and Toledo Avenue to warn oncoming traffic he was moving into the intersection when the brakes on the ambulance reportedly locked. The two vehicles collided and Sowell suffered neck injuries.

An ambulance at the scene of the second accident was sent to Fourth Street and Toledo Avenue to take the police officer to Methodist Hospital, where he was being treated late Tuesday.

Police were hampered in their efforts to help the injured by extremely strong winds, sand blowing from a nearby construction area and reports that lines serving newly constructed homes near the first and second accidents were down and live.

However, representatives from Southwestern Public Service were sent to the area to repair the lines, police said, adding the injured were a safe distance from the hot lines.

Eastern New Mexico Police Courier Hit In $30,000 Robbery

A-J Correspondent
PORTALES — Area police are looking for two men who took almost $30,000 from an Eastern New Mexico University police officer Tuesday morning.
 Officer David Schmidt had just left the university administration building about 9:30 a.m. and was carrying three bank bags to deposit in city banks when he was struck from behind by someone hiding in his vehicle, police said.
 University officials said the bank bags contained both cash and checks from Monday's collections at the administrative offices of the school.
 Schmidt told Portales police that after he was struck, the robbers ordered him to drive to a gravel pit northwest of here. Once there, he said, his eyes were taped and the microphone was removed from his police car radio.
 In addition to taking the money bags, Schmidt said his assailants also took his car's ignition keys when they fled. His service revolver was found in the gravel pit.
 Road blocks were set up in the area after Schmidt walked to a nearby farm home and reported the robbery, but late Tuesday no arrests had been made.

Area Losses Heavy From Hurricane-Like Winds

 director at the school, who crawled on hands and knees from the kitchen area to find her.
 The wind removed the roof just 25 minutes after 42 students had left the school at the close of the day. Only three persons were 5/8 time of the incident.
 No damage estimate had been made Tuesday but local fire fighters said one wall blew down and they pushed another wall down as a safety measure.
 Traffic accidents during the blinding surge of dust were reported in almost every county of the South Plains.
 A 45-year-old man was listed in critical condition at Methodist Hospital following a one-car rollover near Smyer on Highway 114. Billy Gibson, whose address was unknown Tuesday, was injured in the 5 p.m. accident.
 Separate six-car pile-ups were reported on U.S. 87 north of O'Donnell and on the same highway six miles south of Tulia in Swisher County but they resulted in only minor injuries.
 In Lubbock, a bizarre chain of three accidents triggered by an initial crash sent seven persons to city hospitals.
 Lynn County officials reported at least four multi-vehicle accidents.
 A five-car pileup on FM 6282 about 5 p.m. near Ropesville sent three persons to Lubbock's Methodist Hospital. A spokesman at the hospital, which was inundated with wreck victims, said the three did not appear to be seriously injured.

 A three-vehicle accident was reported near Amherst.
 In Morton, an airplane owned by Jim Cunningham was overturned and then blown back into the hangar, causing heavy damage to the tail section of the aircraft.
 Electrical outages of varying lengths were reported in Hale Center, Crosbyton, Brownfield, Paducah, Levelland, Tulla, Littlefield, Muleshoe, Post, Ralls, and Lockney.
 Carports, trailer homes, cotton trailers, porches, television antennae and irrigation systems were all victims of the wind in almost every town on the South Plains.
 Winds estimated at 50 mph crushed an empty metal corn storage tank like an eggshell 11 miles north of Muleshoe at the intersection of Texas 214 and FM 145 about 3 p.m.

 The tank, which was 80 feet tall and had a capacity of 500,000 bushels, was owned by the Muleshoe Farmer's Co-op Elevators.
 The top of a second tank, filled with corn, also collapsed in the high winds. Nearby fixtures and adjacent structures also sustained damage with the loss estimated $100,000 by a Farmer's Co-op representative.
 The tank was resting dangerously on electrical wiring from an electrical transformer but repairs arrived by about 4 p.m. to remedy that problem.
 Telephone service and electrical service was interrupted for several minutes by that problem.
 Several highway signs were blown down by the high winds.

Testimony Heard On Bullets Used In Murder

By BARRY CASEBOLT
A-J Correspondent
CARLSBAD, N.M. — The wife of Carlsbad Mayor Pro Tem Johnny Volpato was shot four times with two different types of bullets, according to testimony given Tuesday in the second day of a preliminary hearing here.

Volpato, 43, has been charged with first degree murder in the shooting death of his wife, Elaine, 36, on Feb. 5, 1980, at the Corner Drugstore. Volpato is a partner in the business.

Testimony is expected to continue for two more days with a special two-hour session set for tonight. The prosecutor, Ernest Carroll, of Midland, has called 36 witnesses but only 13 had testified by the close of the hearing Tuesday afternoon.

Volpato was arrested last month, more than a year after his wife was killed. Volpato has contended his wife was shot by two bandits when she accompanied him to the store to fill a prescription after the business had closed. Marilyn Sullivan, deputy medical examiner for Carlsbad, and Dr. H. B. Beighley, a Hobbs physician who specializes in pathology, offered conflicting testimony Tuesday on the path of one of the bullets.

Mrs. Sullivan said she that during the autopsy she was handed three bullets that were taken from Mrs. Volpato's body, but that a fourth bullet was not found in the body.

That bullet was reportedly found at the scene of the shooting.

Mrs. Sullivan had earlier told Carroll that Mrs. Volpato had one hand in her pocket and was clutching a Kleenex.

She told defense attorney Dick Blenden it appeared three bullets entered the woman's back while the fourth bullet entered from the front.

Beighley, however, testified that the frontal wound near the shoulder could have been either an entry or exit wound.

The victim was shot four times, but three of the wounds would not have necessarily killed her, he said. The fourth wound, which went through the lungs and heart, probably would have killed her instantly, he said. The fourth wound was the one on which the experts disagreed.

Carroll asked if there would be fewer reflexes such as a hand moving to a pocket and clutching something if a person died quickly. Beighley concurred that the quicker a person died, the less likelihood there would be of a reflex movement of a hand to a pocket.

On cross-examination, Beighley said everything would stop when the spine was first hit, adding a victim would fall when hit in the spine by a bullet. He said there would only be forward momentum if the person were running at the time.

"All I can say is she dropped in her tracks," he said.

Captain Paul Mallory, chief criminal investigator for the Lea County Sheriff, identified bullets used in the murder. He said one "lead type" bullet struck something hard after passing through her heart, indicating there was "something behind the body" when it was fired.

He also said he has never known an armed robbery suspect who inflicted multiple gunshot wounds to more than one kind of bullet. The manner of Mrs. Volpato used both lead-type and expanding-type bullets, Mallory said.

Star Takes Stand In Lawsuit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An emotional Carol Burnett told jurors Tuesday in her libel suit against the National Enquirer how she cried and "got very, very angry" when she first heard of the paper's story accusing her of boisterous behavior at a restaurant in Washington, D.C.

Miss Burnett, who said she felt the article portrayed her as being intoxicated, gave a detailed account of her childhood with two alcoholic parents, her crusade against alcoholism and her fear that the Enquirer had destroyed her credibility.

She is suing for $10 million in general and punitive damages.

"I got very, very angry. I started to cry. I started to shake," she said of her reaction after being told of the gossip column item.

"Then I calmed down and I called my lawyer," she said. "I said, 'I'm going to sue. These are bad guys.'"

She said that same day, as she walked down the street, a cab driver shouted to her. "Hey, Carol, I didn't know you liked to get into fights." She said she assumed he meant the Enquirer article, "and my spontaneous reaction was I started to cry again."

Hobbs Policeman Seeking Damages From Assailants

A-J Correspondent
HOBBS, N.M. — A Hobbs policeman, Sgt. Richard Baum, has filed a $50,000 personal injury lawsuit against two Hobbs men as a result of injuries the officer allegedly received during the attempted arrests of two men involved in a disturbance at a drag strip here Feb. 15.

The suit, filed in district court in Lovington, alleges Joe L. Oroscos Sr., 47, and his 23-year-old son, Richard, hit the officer during the incident at Hobbs Industrial Park. Baum's suit also contends the elder Oroscos prevented the officer from making arrests.

Baum, along with other police officers, were called to the drag strip in reference to a fight where, according to a police report, approximately 150 to 175 persons were gathered around the timing tower watching an altercation two men and officials at the timing tower. Baum alleges he was injured while trying to arrest the two subjects for disorderly conduct.

Wave Of Fires Gives TCU Campus War Zone Atmosphere

FORT WORTH (AP) — A nervous silence has settled like fog over Texas Christian University, where charred buildings dot the live oak-lined campus and grim-faced fire fighters patrol the streets 24 hours.

Although the university's 6,000 students are on spring break this week, the campus security force has been more than doubled. Federal agents and citizen volunteers guard buildings on and off campus, and identification is required from people on campus after dark.

The atmosphere is that of a war zone — but at TCU no one knows who the enemy is. Two men have been questioned about a string of five fires in the area the past nine days, but neither is a firm suspect.

Visitation in dormitories has been suspended and lights burn all night in academic buildings, which are locked at 5 p.m. Posted in every building are signs offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of the arsonists.

"No one can get any work done because we're all eyeballing every sneaky character that walks by," said Sally Bohon, secretary of the university's honors program. "I didn't realize how we are all dependent, one upon the other, for rational behavior."

Deliberately-set blazes have erupted in the science building, the art and music buildings, and the Baptist Student Union on campus and University Christian Church and University Baptist Church across the street. Investigators believe more than one arsonist set the fires.

No one has been injured — with the exception of some highly trained laboratory rats killed in the science building — and no building has been destroyed, but the fires have caused more than $1 million in damage.

A 24-year-old TCU student failed a lie detector test after the first two fires, but he was in police custody Sunday morning when the Baptist church burned.

A Chicago man arrested after the University Christian fire has not been linked to any of the blazes, but he was charged with two counts of escape after jumping from a patrol car at the scene of the fire and leaping through a municipal courtroom window while awaiting arraignment.

The man, 29-year-old Michael Odell, remains in Tarrant County jail under $3,000 bond.

"He's awfully jumpy for some reason, and we intend to find out why," said Deputy Fire Chief Don Peacock.

Meanwhile, investigators are following leads from 50 people questioned over the weekend.

Because three of the fires were in church buildings and TCU is affiliated with the Disciples of Christ denomination, investigators are speculating the arsonists have a vendetta against religious institutions, Peacock said.

Some TCU-area churches fear the same thing. "We'll have people here around the clock," said the Rev. John Stanley, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church just south of campus.

At University United Methodist Church, east of TCU, all outside doors will be locked but one, and a guard will be posted there, said the Rev. Michael Patison, senior minister.

He said all-night guards and smoke detectors also would be installed at the Methodist Student Center.

Employees of TCU-area businesses are keeping a lookout for suspicious people.

"We've called the police on a couple of occasions," said Jesse Sosa, assistant manager of the TCU Theater. "We just saw people that were doing things we didn't like."

Alarmed parents of Alice Carlson Elementary School students are volunteering as schoolyard monitors, and will be supported next week by school district employees, said principal Elene Ono. The school is just west of the Baptist church, and the pattern of fires appears to be heading that way.

"I wouldn't say people are really fearful; they're looking at it very logically. But there is the realization that we're dealing with someone who is not rational," she said.

Libby Proffer, TCU dean of students, has checked recently suspended students and traditional subjects of student complaints.

"No matter which lead you take, it hits a dead end," she said. "The psychological orientation of these guys could be anything. It could be revenge, someone doing it for kicks, anything."

Gunmen Hit American Embassy In Salvador

Attack Follows U.S. Solon's Visit

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — In the second such attack in as many weeks, two gunmen sprayed the U.S. Embassy here with automatic rifle fire Tuesday just a half-hour after an American congressman ended a news conference in the heavily guarded building.

An embassy spokesman said the attackers, firing from the back of a small pickup truck, hit the outer walls with about 10 bullets. No one was injured.

The gunmen were not identified. U.S. officials blamed the earlier attack, which occurred March 4, on extreme rightists who want to bring down the U.S.-supported junta that governs El Salvador.

Earlier Tuesday in nearby Costa Rica, unidentified assailants rocketed a U.S. government van carrying Marines to guard duty at the American Embassy in San Jose, wounding five people. No one claimed responsibility for that attack.

At the San Salvador news conference, Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., told reporters he opposes the sending of U.S. military advisers to El Salvador to train government troops in the war against leftist guerrillas. Long suggested that Salvadoran soldiers instead be sent to the United States for training.

Long is chairman of a House subcommittee that next week will take up President Reagan's request for an additional $5 million in military aid for El Salvador.

The Reagan administration supports the junta, led by President Jose Napoleon Duarte, as an alternative between leftist guerrillas and rightists in the military who oppose the junta's land redistribution and nationalization programs.

Political violence and the guerrilla war have taken an estimated 16,000 lives over the past 17 months in this Central American nation.

The embassy spokesman said he was not sure whether Long, wrapping up a two-day visit to El Salvador, was still in the embassy at the time of the early-afternoon attack, or had already left on a helicopter visit to a government agrarian reform project in the countryside.

When the burst of shots was heard, the spokesman said, embassy personnel stopped working and rushed to a secure area in the middle of the building, interrupting work for about 10 minutes.

In the March 4 attack, unidentified gunmen riding in a utility vehicle raked the front of the embassy building with automatic weapons fire and fled. No one was injured.

Last October, attackers believed to be leftists fired a Chinese-made anti-tank rocket at the embassy, causing serious damage but no injuries.

Considers Aid Package

Next week, Long's foreign operations subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee will consider the final $5 million of a $25 million U.S. military aid package for El Salvador. He told reporters he would recommend that the panel ban use of any of the $5 million for U.S. military advisers here or for training of Salvadoran troops here.

In his talks with Duarte and other Salvadoran leaders, Long said, he found they were "receptive" to his idea that Salvadorans could be trained in the United States.

"The advisory and training work can be done easily outside El Salvador. That might make it more expensive but it would have the advantage of giving the Salvadorans the better perception that they are doing the job," Long said.

54 U.S. Advisers

Fifty-four American military advisers are in El Salvador and are scheduled to arrive here shortly. They are training infantry troops, helicopter pilots and mechanics.

Long said much of his conversation with Duarte dealt with the murders last Dec. 2 of four American Roman Catholic missionaries here — three nuns and a woman lay worker. He said he, U.S. Embassy staff members and members of the Salvadoran government believe the four were killed by Salvadoran security forces "and the right wing." He declined to elaborate.

CHOPPERS FOR EL SALVADOR — Air Force personnel at Corpus Christi Naval Air Station load Huey helicopters aboard an Air Force C-130 transport plane for transfer to El Salvador, where they will be used by government forces in their fight against guerrilla insurgents believed being supplied with arms by Communist bloc nations. Coal Strike Virtually Assured; Talks Bog On Work Schedule

WASHINGTON (AP) — A March 27 strike by 160,000 United Mine Workers was virtually assured Tuesday after union negotiators headed for home when contract talks with coal mine operators bogged down over working schedules.

Union spokesman Eldon Callen announced UMW President Sam Church's decision to send the bargaining council home, saying Church was "aware that this means we cannot avoid a strike at this time, even a short one."

Callen said that the union had been willing to give the mine operators an extra day and telescope the UMW ratification process in an attempt to avoid a strike.

However, he said it became apparent to Church "and the union negotiators that the operators didn't — or apparently didn't — have the same goal. At 5 o'clock this morning it became apparent that they didn't want that extra day."

Wait Until Deadline

Callen said, however, that since Church had promised industry negotiators an extra day, the union president would wait until near the midnight Tuesday deadline before himself making a formal announcement.

Callen said the "tough issues ... industry refused to budge on" were pensions and scheduling that would allow operators to keep their mines working seven days a week.

The announcement came about a half-hour after a deadline passed that Church had set for sending union bargainers home unless he heard from the industry side.

Asked if such an action would mean a strike, Church said: "Yes. If we don't meet today, ..."

B.R. Brown, head of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association negotiators, said his side had bargained in good faith and was not seeking a strike.

Creationist Bill Wins Approval

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas schools would be required to give balanced treatment in public schools to theories of evolution and so-called scientific creation under a bill approved Tuesday by the Legislature.

The bill now goes to Gov. Frank White.

Under the bill, balanced treatment would be required in terms of lectures, textbooks and other teaching materials. The bill specifically prohibits the teaching of religion and reference to religious writings.

Neither the creationist nor evolutionist view would be required to be taught, but the bill says that if one view is taught, balanced treatment must be given to the other.

The bill expressly forbids religious instruction in the schools, limiting both views to scientific evidence.

Evolutionists believe the earth is billions of years old, and that scientific data show man evolved over long ages from creatures of lower order, which in turn developed from the first organism that came into existence in a lifeless world.

The creationist view holds that data show the earth to be much younger, perhaps 10,000 to 500 million years old, and that man came into existence suddenly and fully formed.

"We are ready to negotiate any time the UMW indicates it's ready to negotiate key issues," he said.

However, a spokesman for the BCOA said the industry negotiators planned to leave Washington on Tuesday night.

A coal miners strike would have little immediate effect on the economy since utilities have large stockpiles of coal with the winter heating season ending.

Earlier, Church left little doubt the miners and the industry remained far apart.

"From the very start the union has not wanted a strike, but at this time it appears the operators do," he said.

The talks had continued past the Monday midnight deadline that the union had insisted be met if the UMW's lengthy ratification process was to be completed before the contract expires March 27. Tuesday morning, union spokesman Callen said ratification might yet be accomplished in time to avert a strike but added, "It's going to be tough."

February's Figures Suggest Economy Slowing Down; Recession Doubted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production by U.S. industry fell in February for the first time in seven months, and Americans recorded their smallest personal income gain since last summer, the government reported Tuesday.

Economists inside and outside government said the new figures indicate the national economy will continue to slow in coming months, but they stopped short of predicting a new recession.

"These are certainly unencouraging numbers," said David Ernst, a vice president of Evans Economics Inc., a private Washington firm. But he added that a decline in interest rates — already under way — "will avert any return to recession."

National industrial production declined 0.5 percent in February after showing smaller and smaller gains in recent months, including 0.4 percent in January, the Federal Reserve Board reported.

And the Commerce Department reported that February's 0.7 percent personal income gain, down from 1 percent the previous month, was outstripped by rising personal spending for the second month in a row.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department also reported that housing starts plunged 25 percent in February, confirming the dire reports industry spokesmen have been making for some time.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders, said of the new report, "I'm not happy about it, obviously, but we have expected that for quite a while."

The Commerce Department also reported a 6.9 percent drop in building permits for future construction, a discouraging indication that further housing declines can be expected.

Sumichrast said no real recovery can be expected until mortgage interest rates drop from present levels above 15 percent. Substantial recovery won't occur until late this year or early next year, he predicted.

William Cox, Commerce's deputy chief economist, said part of the production decline could be due to bad weather in some parts of the nation last month. But he said it has been clear a production slowdown was due after expansion at "a break-neck pace" following last year's recession.

"This may be kind of a pause as the production machinery shifts gears downward," he said.

The administration and most private economists have been predicting generally sluggish growth in the first part of this year.

The new production figures showed a broad-based output decline, including decreases of 0.7 percent for products and 0.3 percent for materials, according to the Federal Reserve Board. Overall production was down about 1.2 percent from February 1980.

Last month's decline in output of products would have been greater except for a moderate increase in automotive products as auto assemblies increased nearly 7.5 percent to an annual rate of 5.8 million units from the very low January rate," the report said.

The overall January increase, reported earlier at 0.6 percent, was revised downward in the new report, and the preliminary February figure also is subject to later revision.

Commerce's personal income report showed February income was up $15 billion.

The government reached an agreement late Tuesday with independent unionists in Radom, but faced a new strike threat by timber workers and a continuing sit-in by militant farmers seeking agricultural reforms.

The government prepared to discuss more Western credits to ease this Communist nation's hard-hit economy.

In Moscow, the Czechoslovak foreign minister warned of "historical parallels" between the situation in Poland and the conditions that led to the Soviet bloc invasion of his homeland in 1968.

Following a day of talks here, Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski agreed to send a commission to study the grievances of independent unionists in Radom, 50 miles south of Warsaw, who proposed by dropping plans for further threats of strikes, the Polish news agency PAP reported.

On Monday, the Radom unionists called off a warning strike, scheduled for today, after the government accepted the resignations of three local officials. The unionists also were warned by Lech Walesa, leader of the national independent union Solidarity, that more strikes could imperil the union's existence.

Local union leaders agreed Tuesday to forego further strike threats while the government commission studies other demands, including providing government funds for housing and social projects and investigation of officials allegedly responsible for suppression of 1976 riots in Radom.

Reagan Rejects Congress Data, Relies On Own Budget Estimate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan declared Tuesday he will ignore the "phony" figures of the Congressional Budget Office, which portrayed his spending estimates as $25 billion short and suggested Congress trim further or ease his proposed tax cuts if the budget is to be balanced.

Later, the president said he shouldn't have used the word "phony," but stuck by his own projections nevertheless.

Reagan commented on the forecast of the nonpartisan budget office as he walked up the steps of the Capitol for a breakfast meeting with Republican congressional leaders.

"The figures are phony," he said. "We are going to ignore them because they are not speaking the truth. Their estimates are based on continuing things the way they have run them for the last 30 years."

But as he left the Capitol about an hour later, Reagan sought to soften his rhetoric while making it clear he intended to stick with his own, more optimistic, figures.

He said phony "probably wasn't the proper word to use," but added that he did not plan to look for an extra $25 billion in spending cuts. "We believe our assumptions or projections are correct," he said.

Reagan said the congressional budget office used different assumptions "and I think their assumptions are based on the continuing curve of decline in the economy. In other words, that our program is not going to have any effect on the economy."

The congressional study said Reagan's proposed fiscal year 1982 budget will cost up to $720 billion. Reagan says it will cost $695 billion.

While the budget office didn't project a deficit based on its figures, Democrats on the Budget Committee said it would be $5 billion to $15 billion higher than the administration's estimate of $45 billion. And it said the administration underestimated inflation, interest rates and unemployment.

The budget office report said spending could be $25 billion more than the administration figured in 1982 and $50 billion more in 1984, Reagan's target year for balancing the budget. If accurate, that would require more budget cuts or smaller tax cuts for Reagan to meet his goal.

Fearful of adverse reaction from financial markets and the public, Reagan and budget director David Stockman reacted quickly to the congressional analysis. The administration's economic package of nearly $50 billion in spending cuts and a 10 percent cut in income taxes for each of three successive years rests heavily on changing public expectations about inflation and the economy.

Stockman called the budget office report a "day wonder" that will not have "any serious impact on the administration's program."

He criticized the budget office for registering what he termed the notion that "the most drastic policy change in postwar history ... will register on the economy like a falling tree in an empty forest."

Reagan made his second trip to Capitol Hill since the inauguration to meet with the Republican congressional leadership and hear a report on the progress of his economic program.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the president received a "very optimistic" forecast of how the leaders expect the plan to fare in Congress.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker of Tennessee told Reagan that the nation backs his plan "and we're going to pass it."

House Minority Leader Bob Michel of Illinois, mindful of the Democratic majority in his chamber, predicted: "It isn't going to be an easy road and we're going to have some pitfalls along the way."

Reagan declared, "You have not only been cooperative, you have put it on a fast track."

Leaders of the House and Senate are trying for final action on the administration's plan by the end of July.

After the meeting, Baker said they had discussed the method used to adjust Social Security and other benefits for inflation, and Reagan wanted to keep the system as it is.

Stockman accompanied Reagan to the Capitol and briefed reporters afterward on the congressional analysis.

Budget Cuts Begun By Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate budget writers began wielding their ax against federal spending Tuesday, recommending nearly $12.5 billion dollars in cuts from programs ranging from Amtrak to the Peace Corps and the Postal Service.

Beginning its review of President Reagan's call for $48.6 billion in 1982 spending reductions, the Budget Committee showed an eagerness to back the administration virtually down the line.

It voted to support Reagan's proposal to reduce federal subsidies to the Postal Service by nearly $1 billion in 1982 and to recommend implementation of the president's revised federal pay system at a savings estimated at nearly $3.7 billion next year alone.

Decisions Faced

When it adjourned for the night, the committee still faced decisions about billions of dollars in additional cuts in social programs such as Social Security, Medicaid, public service employment and food stamps. The chairman, Sen. Peter Domenici, R-N.M., said he believed the committee could complete its work by tonight.

Before recessing after an 11-hour work day, committee members also voted to Before recessing after an 11-hour work day, committee members also voted to adjust retirement benefits for civilian and military pensioners once a year instead of the current two times, a cut estimated at about $800 million.

Attempt Rebuffed

The panel rebuffed an attempt to eliminate Saturday mail service and also voted against a proposal to freeze federal civilian pay for a year, positions in keeping with the administration's recommendations.

But the committee voted to cut spending by $3 billion more than Reagan recommended when it called for private financing of the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

The plan would require major oil importers to pump 125 million barrels a year into the stockpile.

Polish Reach One Agreement, Face Timber, Farm Threats

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government reached an agreement late Tuesday with independent unionists in Radom, but faced a new strike threat by timber workers and a continuing sit-in by militant farmers seeking agricultural reforms.

The government prepared to discuss more Western credits to ease this Communist nation's hard-hit economy.

In Moscow, the Czechoslovak foreign minister warned of "historical parallels" between the situation in Poland and the conditions that led to the Soviet bloc invasion of his homeland in 1968.

Following a day of talks here, Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski agreed to send a commission to study the grievances of independent unionists in Radom, 50 miles south of Warsaw, who proposed by dropping plans for further threats of strikes, the Polish news agency PAP reported.

On Monday, the Radom unionists called off a warning strike, scheduled for today, after the government accepted the resignations of three local officials. The unionists also were warned by Lech Walesa, leader of the national independent union Solidarity, that more strikes could imperil the union's existence.

Local union leaders agreed Tuesday to forego further strike threats while the government commission studies other demands, including providing government funds for housing and social projects and investigation of officials allegedly responsible for suppression of 1976 riots in Radom.

Timber workers in southern Poland near the Czech border, angry over failure of local managers to implement agreements signed following the end of last summer's strike wave, announced a strike readiness, according to a Wroclaw radio report Tuesday.

The radio said the timber workers threatened a one-hour warning strike Monday and a general strike March 25 if the government failed to implement the accord.

The strike decision came at a meeting Monday of timber industry workers and members of Solidarity, according to the radio report. It did not give specific demands of the timber workers, whose spokesman could not be reached for immediate comment.

Poland has some 100,000 timber workers scattered around the country, but the new protest was centered in Gorlice, about 20 miles from Czechoslovakia.

Talks began between rival farm groups in Bydgoszcz, 170 miles northwest of Warsaw, where some 150 farmers occupied the headquarters of the United Peasant's Party for a second day.

The sit-in involved a complex dispute between rival factions of the so-called agricultural circles, in the Bydgoszcz region. Such circles are government-sponsored groups of farmers originally chartered to provide technical assistance.

Over the years, however, the circles have evolved into a means of bringing collectivization to the countryside where most farms are in private hands. Private farmers produce 78 percent of the nation's food.

War Against Drugs Under Way

AUSTIN (AP) — The war on drugs is going to be fought in public school classrooms, with the PTA the most "action-oriented" soldiers in the battle, the organization announced Tuesday.

PTA officers joined politicians and a representative of electronics multi-millionaire H. Ross Perot, head of Gov. Bill Clements' War on Drugs, in an often noisy news conference.

Militant rhetoric and enthusiastic applause filled the packed Capitol lobby where hundreds of PTA members watched the proceedings.

The PTA will "enable us to organize every school in Texas on a classroom-by-classroom basis," said Perot spokesman Richard Salwen.

"Today, one out of eight high school seniors in our state is a daily marijuana user," Salwen said. "Four out of 100 12-year-olds have experimented with marijuana in the past month."

The PTA will "provide Texas children with a drug-free environment by making PTA members the best informed and Safety reports.

Cochran County Justice of the Peace Carl Kernell of Morton pronounced Sheek dead at the scene and ruled his death accidental.

The Levelland native had lived in Hockley County all his life and graduated from Levelland High School in 1976. He attended South Plains College for a year and a half. He was a farmer, scoutmaster of Levelland Boy Scout Troop 625 and a member of College Avenue Baptist Church.

Man Reports Home Damaged In Theft

A Lubbock man told police Tuesday a home under construction at 5403 87th St. was damaged during a burglary of the residence sometime Monday.

Carl E. Holmes of Route 5, Lubbock, said a microwave oven and several light fixtures were taken in the break-in. Total value of the stolen items and damage done to the home were given at $2,345, police said.

Police said a door through which burglars entered was damaged, along with a stove, window and several light fixtures. Two sets of footprints were found near the back door, police said.

In other activity, a 23-year-old nurse reported she was assaulted by her employer's wife when the victim told her husband she was going to quit work.

The victim told police the incident erupted when the man's wife started throwing things around the room and tearing up books. Then, the suspect allegedly grabbed the victim by the arms and shoulders and began to shake and push her, police said.

Police said the suspect struck the victim several times on the chest and threw her against a wall. The victim required medical attention at a physician's office, police said.

Peter Wainscott reported the seats in three Jeep CJ-5 vehicles parked at 1010 Avenue Q were ripped and cut beyond repair. Total damages were estimated at $700.

A 49-year-old Lubbock man told police he was assaulted when he got into an argument in his front yard with a neighbor over a set of jumper cables and $3 the neighbor said was owed to him by the victim.

The victim said the suspect said he would not return the cables until the victim paid him the money. The pair first had words then the suspect allegedly slapped the victim, police said.

A Lubbock man said a convenience store operator pointed a gun at him and his small granddaughter late Monday after telling the girl to get out of the business.

Thomas C. Martinez of 3001 Emory St. told police his granddaughter was at the candy counter about 9:15 p.m. when the teen-age clerk told her to hurry up and get out of the store. Martinez said he told the attendant she was doing nothing wrong and that she could take her time.

Reports allege the employee, about 17, then pulled back his smock, pulled out a pistol and said, "Get out, both of you, or else."

Martinez said he picked up two rolls of toilet paper and threw it at the suspect, prompting the teen-ager to grab a club and jump over the counter. Police were told the two men wrestled and Martinez suffered a minor head injury.

Martinez said that after taking the club away from the clerk, he and his granddaughter left. Police gave no motive for the altercation.

In a separate incident, a 19-year-old Lubbock woman said she escaped two knife-wielding females and a man egging them on about 12:15 a.m. today after she fled out the back door of the Arduus Tea Room in the 200-block of 18th Street.

Cynthia Watson said she was playing pool when an argument erupted between her and the two women. She told investigators she attempted to call for a ride home, but that one of the women snatched the receiver away from her, hit her and flashed a knife.

Reports state she ran behind the bar where she was confronted by the second woman who also displayed a knife. Mrs. Watson said a man in the nightspot repeatedly told the armed females to "beat her up." Police said a cook at the club opened a back door and the victim fled.

A Lubbock boy was taken into custody, along with his 19-year-old girlfriend, Monday after they allegedly burglarized the juvenile's grandmother's East Lubbock house.

The 54-year-old woman said she arrived home about 5:30 p.m. Monday to find her place burglarized and about $200 in jewelry and tableware missing. The victim's neighbor, according to reports, told police he saw the woman's grandson sneaking about the house while she was gone.

The boy was apprehended and taken to the police station, where authorities said he admitted the break-in and named his girlfriend as an accomplice. He also reportedly said they had sold part of the loot — a ring and four spoons — for $15 at a "headshop" at 34th Street and Flint Avenue.

Police arrested the girlfriend about 9 p.m. at her mother's house.

Two 10-year-old girls told police a man whistled at them, then pulled down his pajama bottoms in the 2300-block of 47th Street about 4:20 p.m. The man was described as white, in his 30's, with dark hair and wearing sunglasses and pale-colored pajamas.

Wind Damage Heavy As Storm Hits City

downed power lines, officials noted.

But even when the threat of damage from the wires was over, nu 09.45 city residents were forced to cope with the ensuing power outages.

Jake Webb, district manager for Southwestern Public Service, said power outages were scattered throughout the city. He said there was no isolated area of damage and that no major power outage had occurred.

Lubbock Power and Light Director Carroll McDonald said several poles were Lubbock Power and Light Director Carroll McDonald said several poles were hit by cars during the rush hour and that the company had received hundreds of calls about power losses.

Other wind damage to structures, officials said, ranged from an overturned mobile home to antennae which were blown down by the storm.

Police said a trailer house was blown over three miles east of town on the Idalou Highway, but no injuries were reported. Several city residents also lost much of their roofing, police added.

Several city businesses also suffered serious damage, and in at least one case the loss directly attributable to the wind was aggravated by looters. Police said only moments after a Clovis Road businessman left his shop to find plywood with which to patch the front plate glass that had been blown out, a car of youths entered through the missing window and began removing items.

Police also were besieged with reports of billboards, signs, TV and radio antennae and numerous traffic signals which fell victim to the vicious winds.

Spokesman Jim Goodwin of Southwestern Bell said no major damage was reported by the phone company.

A few poles and drop wires leading in to homes were downed, Goodwin said, with one cable reported out in east Lubbock. But, he added, "We don't have many more trouble reports than on a normal work day."

A phone company official said a window from the downtown Southwestern Bell Today, officials should be able to sort through the damage under somewhat better conditions. National Weather Service officials say winds will continue out of the north, but should gust only to 20 mph.

The northerly winds also are expected to bring cooler temperatures to the area, with the high today forecast in the low 50s and tonight's low expected in the upper 20s.

Yellowhouse Water Unit Votes To Withhold Taxes

Officials for one of Lubbock County's smallest taxing entities say they won't participate in the countywide tax appraisal district because it constitutes "taxation without representation."

Directors for the Yellowhouse Canyon Water Control and Improvement District voted unanimously Tuesday night to deny payment to the tax appraisal district, even though participation is mandated by state law.

The water district already is delinquent in its first quarter payment of $633 owed to the appraisal district. And board chairman Fred Jones strongly recommended to fellow directors that no payment ever be made.

Jones described the statute that created the new appraisal district system as "the biggest bunch of gobbledegook I've ever tried to understand."

But according to Jones, forced participation in the appraisal district is "taxation without representation."

Jones noted that the water district has no say about the election of board members for the tax appraisal district. "And we have no say about what that board does," he added.

The total amount the water district is expected to pay the tax appraisal district this year is $2,393. Paying that amount would force the water district to increase taxes by 2.6 percent, Jones claimed.

Local School Board Applauds Reagan Cutbacks

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

While big city schools are bemoaning the threat of cuts in federal assistance, conservative Lubbock school board members are applauding President Reagan's proposed budget slashes in hopes they will signal a return to local control of schools.

Several of the local trustees said the board will examine any programs hurt by the cuts, and predicted board members would vote to supplement the programs from local funds if it is deemed necessary.

School officials from 28 of the country's largest cities complained Monday at the Council of Great City Schools meeting in Washington, D.C., about Reagan's proposed cutbacks that they said would devastate their systems.

They also lashed out at the Reagan-backed proposals for tuition tax credits that would be given to families who send their youngsters to private schools.

The metropolitan city school officials supplied estimates of the losses they claimed would be felt through cuts in programs for the handicapped, Title I assistance to disadvantaged youths and other programs. Those estimates included $7.5 million for Dallas, $123.4 million for New York City and $47.2 million for Chicago.

Local school officials have not worked up any loss estimates for the school system here, but trustee Buddy Forbess said the effect of the budget slashes would be minimal. He noted that direct federal funds, as opposed to federal aid that is channeled through the state, amounted only to $441,870 this year.

"That's only about a half million dollars," Forbess said, "and when you're talking about a $58 billion budget, you're not talking about that much. But the control they (the federal government) exercise over us is great," he added.

He said that many of the programs that have been mandated by the federal government "have not necessarily been according to our needs, but to those that arise in New York and Chicago and Detroit."

He added that he believes the government continues programs whether or not they are necessary. "There are programs on top of programs on top of programs," he said.

Trustee Liz Sisco also said that programs appear to duplicate and overlap one another. "They don't really go to the problem. I would much rather see education funded at the local level because nobody else can know what our problems and needs are."

Mrs. Sisco said that "the parents of the children here do have an influence on us. When parents voice their concerns, attention is paid to it although they may not like how it's handled. But there is no real input at the national level. I want the federal government off our backs and I welcome the budget cuts."

But if children are going to lose out on any educational needs the board feels are necessary, Mrs. Sisco said, the local level would make up the lost funding. "This board is dedicated to quality education for every child."

"If they took every single nickel of that (direct federal amount) away and we (trustees) put every single nickel back in, it's not going to blow us out of the sky," Mrs. Sisco said.

Board member Deaton Rigby said he does not feel "the overall educational process in Lubbock" is going to suffer because of Reagan's proposals. He said the board is committed to provide a "good education" for youngsters and that "we are going to look at" any programs affected by the cuts.

Forbess attacked some of the programs targeted for budget cuts, complaining that they either waste money or command excessive financing.

He zeroed in on Title I funds for the educationally and financially disadvantaged, noting that the money and teachers do not follow the students that need the assistance when they are bused to non-Title I schools. Guadalupe Elementary, for instance, is a Title I school, Forbess said. "All of a sudden those students are being bused out and the Title I teacher is still at Guadalupe."

Forbess also said he does not believe handicapped students will suffer from budget cuts. Noting that criticizing aid for the handicapped is "like talking against mothers or apple pie," the trustee said, "There is a place for handicapped children in the public schools," but added that facilities should not have to be totally reconverted for their convenience.

"We do want to educate them," he said, but noted that school boards cannot be expected to spend excessive amounts of money to put in ramps, elevators and other devices at every school.

The trustees polled also said they do not fear tuition tax credits, at least in this part of the country. Mrs. Sisco said she believes people in West Texas still have not given up on making the public school system one that provides quality education, despite the barbs that are aimed at the institution. She also noted that Lubbock does not have the established system of parochial and private schools that other cities have.

Tuition tax credits would create competition for the public schools, Mrs. Sisco and Forbess noted. "Competition is healthy," Mrs. Sisco said, adding that "I don't think the public schools can ever hope to meet the needs of every child." But she said she can foresee a barrier being erected between the two systems nationwide. "If the public schools are considered inferior, I think we need to be concerned."

Trustees also said that while the government is doing its own brand of chopping, the local school board must trim excess fat from its own expenses. "We can't ask the federal government to make cuts without making some cuts of our own," said board president Monte Hasie.

Forbess said he anticipates no drastic cuts in the local budget, but "I think you'll continue to see us keep a watchful eye on all our expenditures."

ROUNDUP

Chamber Banquet Planned

A-J Correspondent

LITTLEFIELD — "Agriculture: It's Your Heartbeat America!" is the theme for Thursday night's Littlefield Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture banquet.

The 7 p.m. banquet will be held in the Lamb County Ag and Community Center.

The banquet's theme is part of Littlefield's observance of National Agriculture Day, March 19, when the agricultural industry here is recognized. Messages being delivered throughout the nation will focus on the contributions agriculture makes to the nation's economy.

Bob Hale will be master of ceremonies and the featured speaker will be Dr. W.C. Newberry, humorist from San Marcos.

The Outstanding Man, Woman and Farm Family of the year will be honored, as will the officers and directors of the Chamber.

Hance To View Oil Proposals

A-J Correspondent

LEVELLAND — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance will be featured speaker at the South Plains Chapter of the American Petroleum Institutes meeting Friday night.

Hance will discuss pending oil industry legislation in Washington during the API meeting and dinner, which begins at 7:30 p.m. in South Plains College's Texan Dome.

"We're expecting 500 guests at the evening meal in the Dome," said API Secretary-Treasurer Mickey McClure of the Brownfield Amoco office. "Last year at our March meeting Eddie Childers was the guest speaker and we had an excellent crowd."

Tickets for the event may be purchased from the College Relations office at South Plains College or from the Brownfield or Levelland Amoco Oil Company offices.

Banquet Slated In Lockney

A-J Correspondent

LOCKNEY — Spencer Guimarin of San Marcos will be guest speaker at the Thursday Chamber of Commerce banquet in Lockney elementary school cafeteria.

The dinner begins at 7:30 p.m. Also scheduled at the banquet is announcement of the outstanding man and woman of 1980. A committee of representatives of civic groups is to choose the winners.

New chamber officers and directors will be installed at the banquet. The new officers are Gail Kring, president; Roy Holly, vice president; June Bybee, secretary and J.D. Copeland, treasurer.

The banquet speaker is director of the Health Resources Center of Southwest Texas State University at San Marcos. He also is senior vice president of Southwest Texas Health Systems, a consulting and management company.

He also is an entertainer and musician. He will provide musical entertainment and a short humorous talk on self-motivation.

For 25 years he played the role of Dr. U. Skim in the "Old Time Medicine Show" at Pioneer Town near Austin. Guimarin was a Floydada resident during the 1930's.

Tickets for the banquet are $6 and may be purchased from any director or by calling new president Gail Kring at 652-3377.

Plainview To Hold Round-Up

PLAINVIEW (Special) — "Heritage of the Plains" is the theme of the 53rd annual Pioneer Round-Up May 16 in Plainview.

Sponsored by the Plainview Business and Professional Women's Club, the event serves as both a way to honor pioneers of the area and as an entertainment feature for persons of all ages in Plainview, Hale County and surrounding areas.

Activities of the day will be held in the Hale County Agriculture Center on the south edge of Plainview, according to Dorothy Morton, president of the sponsoring club. A reception in the meeting room of the center will start the day's activities at 10 a.m.

The traditional Pioneer Round-Up parade will roll at 2:30 p.m. The evening program will begin with the chuck wagon supper at 6 p.m. in the large assembly room, followed by a special program and a square dance to conclude the day's activities.

Ballenger Girls Win

Basketball Title

The Ballenger School girls' basketball team has captured the state championship at the state Special Olympics Basketball Tournament in Abilene.

The Ballenger boys' team took the fourth place consolation trophy.

The girls team won the championship by defeating Abilene State School in the finals. Fifty-three teams competed in the tournament.

Members of the girls' team are Rena McGuire, Linda Richards, Vonda Washington, Joni Rogers, Rachel DeLeon, Maria Guerra, Estella Hernandez and Georgia Green.

Members of the boys' team are Tony Abney, Willie Hamilton, Jody Branch, Cecil Salazar, Joe Garza, Greg Hawkins, Darrin Holt, Steve Lucio and Ezequiel Rodriguez.

Coaches for the teams are head coach Joe Porras and assistants Missy Dyer, Laura Kirby and Dan Hamre.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I don't expect anyone to get too choked up about this, but I just completed my "15 x 20 STAMPED FOR BEGINNERS-ON PURE IRISH LINEN-TOMORROW'S HEIRLOOM-COLONIAL LADY AT WHITE HOUSE."

It has a $35 frame on it and if I do say so myself, it has qualities I've seen only in tapestries on museum walls.

I started to embroider Colonial Lady at White House in 1967... the very night I bought it. It had been one of those days where the most creative thing I had done was to witness/assist at/applaud a b.m. from a child who thought a bathroom was God's playroom.

As soon as I started it, I knew in my heart that I wanted to dedicate my entire life to embroidery. I didn't go to bed that night until I had finished stitching the Colonial Lady's face, skirt, parasol and dog.

The next morning at breakfast, I was at it again, driven by some strange creative curse. Someone bled toward the end of the week and I stopped working on it temporarily... and then I was on a phone committee... and went to the store a few times... and made a few beds, and the next thing you know, it was 1973.

Every time I discovered it among the sewing supplies, I would do a few more stitches and renew my vows to finish it in my lifetime. After awhile, it got to be quite depressing. It was like a conscience that shouted, "You never finish anything!" As I saw it tucked away among an unfinished needlepoint glass case, a couple of squares of a granny Afghan, a half-done crewel pillow top, and an unfinished Christmas wreath, I knew it was right.

In 1976, I was sick for a couple of weeks and dragged out "Colonial Lady at White House." A friend of mine was visiting and observed, "If handiworks and crafts could only talk... what a story they could tell."

I looked at the crumpled, gray piece of pure Irish linen, tomorrow's heirloom, in my hand and knew there was only one way to silence her. But I couldn't help but wonder what would happen on the day I finished it. Would the clocks stop? Would my heart stop beating? Would this end an era?

Last Monday, I brought Colonial Lady at White House home... framed and ready to hang... exactly 14 years in the making. "What do you think?" I asked my husband.

"What's the matter with the tree? I think you forgot to stitch it!"

I leaned in closer for a better look. I had missed it. "Are you crazy? It's March," I said. "Trees don't have leaves in March."

What's such a big deal about finishing something?

Bridge

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

At both tables in a Swiss team match the bidding was identical. North's two-heart call was a Jacoby transfer to ask South to bid two spades. After South complied, each North jumped to game and both Wests opened the four of clubs to East's king.

At table one South took his ace, played two rounds of trumps and led a low diamond. West's nine held the trick and he led the eight of hearts. Dummy and East played low and South took his queen. Now he played ace and another diamond. West was in with the king and led a second heart to give East two heart tricks and 100 points plus.

At table two, South ducked the first club. East led back a diamond. South ducked. West took his nine and led that same eight of hearts to South's queen. Now South drew trumps, discarded a diamond on the ace of clubs and played ace and another diamond. The suit broke, so after ruffing in dummy, South came to his hand with a trump and got to discard one of dummy's hearts on the last diamond to wind up with 10 tricks and 620 points.

South number one was unlucky. West had to be able to win both diamond tricks and East had to hold the heart jack, but the diamonds broke 3-3 and that gave South number two an extra chance that was the winner.

ANN LANDERS

Women May Cause Sexual Frustration

Dear Ann Landers: Of late you have been printing letters from a number of sexually frustrated wives. As a man who admires and respects women (I have been married for 25 years), may I offer a point of view that will probably be resented by the majority of your female readers?

We men, for all our vaunted masculinity and self-reliance, can be extremely sensitive to a woman's conduct. What a woman perceives as a man's sexual inadequacy may be caused by her behavior.

Does she nag or complain? Does she talk too much? Is she critical? Demanding? Extravagant? When he is tired and worried does she insist he go places of her choosing? If all or any of the above is true, he can be turned off so completely that sexual activity is physically impossible.

So, ladies, with all due respect, if the man in your life can't deliver satisfaction, consider the possibility that you may not be the victim but the cause. — Know Whereof I Speak in Modesto

Dear Mod: Any woman with half a working brain cell would have to agree that you have made an excellent point.

Usually I hear from women complaining about inconsiderate, unaffectionate (not to mention unshaven and unshowered) husbands who expect instant lovemaking at the drop of a verb. Thanks for reminding us that men need to be "conditioned," too.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is friendly with two guys at work. Their wives are OK, but not the kind I would pick as chums on my own.

Buddy likes to go out every Friday and Saturday night. We have a standing arrangement with these two men and their wives. Usually we go to a combination restaurant-tavern that serves good food at a reasonable price. There's a three-piece combo in the cocktail lounge. After dinner the men talk business and the two women dance with each other. I sit there like a dummy because I don't like to dance with another woman.

Men cut in and they will dance with anybody who asks. I told Buddy I think it's cheap. He says it is perfectly OK because their husbands are there.

When I complain about the boring weekends, Buddy says I should shut my trap and be happy he doesn't go out alone and cheat. What do you think? — Open Mind In Wyoming

Dear Open: Don't you people have homes? Why must you spend all those hours in a tavern? Break the pattern by inviting them over for a meal next week. Include another couple, somebody YOU like, for a change. The routine you describe sounds deadly.

Dear Ann Landers: We named our son after my grandfather, who was a distinguished judge. When the boy was about six months old my husband started to call him "Stinky." The name stuck. He's now four, too old for a name like that. How can I put a stop to it? — Lone Voice In O. City

Dear Voice: When the boy starts school the teachers will call him by his given name. So will his classmates. If his given name is stiff and formal, make up another nickname, and I'll bet "Stinky" bites the dust.

What's prudish? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

HINTS FROM HELOISE:

Full Freezer Saves Money

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband and I never miss your column. Your readers have saved us money, as well as headaches. If one needs an answer to a problem, it usually shows up in your column sooner or later.

To express our thanks we would like to pass on an energy-saving must if you own a chest or upright freezer.

Most manuals don't relate the full truth about operating your unit for the most efficiency and saving of electricity.

Our repairman advised me to defrost it as soon as the frost gets 1/4-inch thick on the shelves. Keep the temperature at 0 degree, and keep those shelves and doors full, even if you have to use sacks of ice cubes, boxes of staples, or empty gallon milk jugs.

Keep the coils dusted and clean too. If possible, plan a week's menus and transfer your meals from the freezer to the refrigerator once a week. If these easy rules are followed faithfully, your freezer will give you excellent service for many years...and your utility bill won't turn your hair gray each month. — Two Fans

I'm touched by your kind words, as well as your words of wisdom.

You're absolutely right. That freezer will end up costing you more than you can possibly save on food if you don't keep it full and clean.

Thanks for reminding us! — Heloise

News items for daily pages must be in our office two days before publication. Sunday deadlines are 5 p.m. Tuesday, for material with pictures, or noon Wednesday, for material without pictures. News items should be submitted in writing.

Engagement announcements must appear at least one month before the wedding. Wedding stories must appear within five days of the event. Only Friday and Saturday weddings are printed on Sunday.

We will accept pictures of brides, couples celebrating anniversaries over 50 years, and speakers. (Snapshots are generally not suitable.) We will take pictures of club officers and events; please call in advance for an appointment.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living in Lubbock. Please mail material to P.O. Box 491, Lubbock 79408. For more information call 762-8844.

having difficulty stuffing pillows and toy animals with that fly-away shredded foam rubber.

Being in the business of making stuffed animals and dolls, I have solved the difficulty by cutting an old nylon stocking or pantyhose into lengths about twice as long as my hand.

I put my hand into a length of stocking and then put the hand into the bag of foam, grabbing a handful through the stocking.

The top of the length of stocking is then pulled over my clenched fist, enclosing the foam inside the stocking. I don't let go of the foam until I have my hand stuffed inside the toy. If you can let go of the foam and retrieve the stocking, fine; otherwise, leave the stocking and all inside. The stocking is small and will just add that much more stuffing.

No mess and no frustration. — Minnie Johnson

Sounds like we've got the old foam-stuffing job licked! — Heloise

DISH DRAINER MAT

DEAR HELOISE:

My rubber dish drainer mat is becoming unsightly with a chalky buildup. How do I remove it? — Mary B.

That chalky buildup is lime caused by water standing on the mat.

Layer the mat with paper towels and then pour on vinegar full-strength until the towels are saturated.

Mid-Life Crisis: Time For Looking Back

By ANNE EVANS
Family News Staff

A mid-life identity crisis may be a time of reviewing goals in life and coming to grips with how far a person has come in reaching those goals. It can be similar to an adolescent's identity crisis in that the person comes to know himself better, according to Richard L. Weddige, M.D., associate professor of psychiatry at Texas Tech University.

"It is healthy to go through mid-life and have a mild identity crisis to review what has been done in life," said Weddige. "However, mid-life is not necessarily a bad time for some people. All people don't have a crisis when they hit middle age."

The age at which such a crisis occurs varies. Weddige said the average time when a crisis happens is in the 40's and 50's.

More is written about men having crises, although women may experience them, too. "The time of reappraisal and looking back is a normal phase," he said.

Physical changes can trigger a crisis, although they are not the sole cause. "If a person has arthritic pains, is losing hair, or is not as pretty — these are all hints at mortality," said Weddige.

Mid-life crisis is thought to happen more often to persons working in fast-moving, fast-paced professions. People who are under a lot of stress, rigid deadlines and job structure seem to be more prone to have a crisis.

"However, this is not always true," he said. "Some people are happy in jobs such as this."

If such a crisis does occur, what should the people in the person's life do?

"One's family can be very helpful by simply letting themselves be a sounding board," explained Weddige. "They wouldn't want to agree on major drastic changes if the person wanted to make them; they need to make the person consider the impact of major changes such as a move across country, a divorce, etc. The person needs to realize that he's not just talking about the next few weeks — he's talking about changes for the next few years."

One possible deterrent to mid-life crisis is planning an early retirement. "For some people, this is a positive thing," said Weddige. "Persons who have had to work hard all their lives to support a family look forward to retirement. They have not had a choice of free time before."

Weddige pointed out that all people do not look forward to retirement. "Many people who thrive on business are not as happy if forced to leave their job. We all meet needs in different ways, and some people have their needs met by positive feedback on a job well done. If the scale is tipped, and the job is so important, to give it up is too much of a void to fill."

Weddige suggested that these people not retire completely, that they should find something to do part time such as volunteer work at a hospital.

"In mid-life you don't have to prove yourself every day. Your past record can be relied upon," said Weddige.

This is one positive aspect of middle life that should be remembered. Weddige quoted Salton, a Greek poet, who said, "Ages 42-56 are when the tongue and the mind are at their best."

Patient Must Tolerate Drug

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.
Dear Dr. Donohue: I hope you can help me. I have been sick for some time and have had many doctors trying to help. The doctor I have now diagnosed my trouble as polymyalgia rheumatica, and I believe he is right. I am somewhat better, but he is treating me with prednisone and insists there is no other medication that has been at all successful.

This may be so, but I would like you to tell me if you know of any other, because the side effects of prednisone are extremely bad for me, and if I could take anything else I would. My doctor said I might be on this medicine for even two years. — Mrs. H.H.H.

Your doctor is using the standard treatment for polymyalgia rheumatica, a condition featuring pain and stiffness in the neck and shoulder muscles, sometimes of the arms and thighs.

Other medicines, such as aspirin, indomethacin and phenylbutazone, may help relieve some of the symptoms, but are not too helpful in controlling a condition that accompanies them — a form of arthritis (inflamed arteries). The prednisone does produce remarkable results for that.

There are, indeed, unpleasant potential side effects to prednisone, but those have to be tolerated when the medicine is deemed the most effective treatment. As soon as your illness is under control, the dose of prednisone can be lowered. Perhaps you can talk to your doctor about the possibility of taking alternate-day doses. You will notice then that the side effects will begin to disappear — the facial fullness, the weight gain, the acne, for examples.

The drug may have to be used for an extended period, but your doctor will reduce the dosage gradually over that time. When the drug can be completely discontinued, most of the unpleasant side effects will leave. That takes time, but it does happen. Whatever you do, do not discontinue this medicine on your own. A sudden discontinuation of it might produce problems for you. It must be discontinued gradually.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I read the article about Stein-Leventhal syndrome. I am writing to you because I have many of the same symptoms. I have only three or four periods a year. I get a lot of hairs under my chin and on my upper lip. I also have hair at the side of my head, where sideburns would be. I wish you would suggest someone I might be able to call about investigating the question of Stein-Leventhal syndrome. — C.A.B.

Any gynecologist will be able to tell you if you have Stein-Leventhal syndrome.

Dear Dr. Donohue: The doctor has ordered me to drink decaffeinated coffee. Would you please tell me why caffeine is so bad? — C.F.K.

Moderate amounts of caffeine are not bad for most people. But they may be for you. Caffeine is a stimulant. It can cause tremulousness and palpitations. Perhaps because of these stimulant effects your doctor feels it is not good for you.

Dear Dr. Donohue: In reference to the person (C.H.) who had a problem with her legs twitching at night before sleep, so did I. I found a hot bath before bed and a pair of tube socks up to the knees relieved it. Maybe she'd like to try this if no other course is found. — D.H.

The world is still awaiting a universal cure for restless legs, and if this works it is safe and harmless enough to warrant a try.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I recently became the mother of a beautiful blue-eyed, black-haired baby girl. I have a two-year-old son who has dark hair and brown eyes, and everyone (including us) are wondering how our little girl got blue eyes, or will they change? There are blue eyes on my side, but none on my husband's. — Mrs. W.L.

At birth, there is little or no pigment in the iris, the colored circle of the eye. Most infants' eyes, therefore, are bluish. As pigment begins to appear, the iris develops its lifelong color. I'll bet your blue-eyed infant will be a brown-eyed toddler, but there's no absolute assurance.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple — write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of the booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Clip 'N' Cook

ZWIEBACK TORTE

- 1/2 zwieback (from a 6-oz. package)
- 1/2 cup walnuts
- 1/2 tsp. baking powder
- 6 large eggs, separated
- 2 cups sugar

Crumble zwieback and pulverize in a food processor with the steel blade — there should be about 2/3 very fine fine crumbs, remove blade and turn crumbs into a large bowl. Return blade to processor and add the walnuts; using rapid on-off turns, chop until medium-fine, remove blade and stir nuts into zwieback with the baking powder. Return blade to processor and through the feed tube gradually add the sugar, processing until blended; remove blade and add yolk mixture to zwieback mixture; use your hands to combine. Beat the egg whites until stiff and add to zwieback mixture, using one of your hands as you would a spatula, fold in the whites until blended. Turn into two 9-inch round layer-cake pans whose bottoms have been lined with wax paper and the paper greased and floured. Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 25-30 minutes. Loosen edges and turn out on wire racks; remove paper; cool completely; layers will be on the thin side. Tightly cover each layer separately and refrigerate overnight. Before serving, lightly sprinkle bottom layer with orange liqueur, then sandwich layers together, filling and frosting them with whipped cream flavored with orange liqueur.

Q. How can I add color to my spring/summer wardrobe?

A. Try a canvas espadrille in one of the harmonious new mid-brights! Canvas combined with a rope wedge and bow works wonderfully with skirts, dresses, even pants. And you'll love the comfort of the cushiony crepe sole and soft foam lining. Choose several colors to brighten up your wardrobe.

Mart Drops In Trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average dropped off its perch above the 1,000 level Tuesday as an afternoon round of selling hit the stock market. The widely recognized average of 30 blue chips, which had climbed 17.02 points on Monday, retreated 10.26 to 992.53 in heavy trading. Other indicators posted much smaller percentage losses, however. The latest reduction in the prime lending rate, from 18 to 17 1/2 percent, spread rapidly through the banking industry during the day. But despite growing evidence of a downward trend in interest rates, analysts said, the market still seemed to be confronted with "formula" selling at the Dow 1,000 level. Each time the average has reached that level in the past several years, it has quickly turned back. Early in Tuesday's session, it hovered between 1,000 and 1,004 as buyers and sellers struggled for dominance. But at mid-day it began retreating. Once that was apparent, the selling intensified until the final moments of the session, when the market steadied again.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

SEN. ROGER JEPSSEN, R-IOWA, IS PUSHING FOR Congress to take a major step toward a significant boost in U. S. farm exports, his office reported.

"The future of our agricultural economy and our economy in general rests heavily on our success in the world marketplace," Jepsen said in a statement. "This is especially important today when the United States is suffering from a large balance of trade deficit."

Jepsen has introduced a bill to establish the framework for a revolving credit fund within the Commodity Credit Corporation to help finance agricultural exports.

A similar bill has been introduced in the House by Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford. Such a plan has wide support among cotton and grain commodity groups.

The revolving fund would allow one of the CCC's most successful programs to recycle its loan money, Jepsen said, rather than paying it back to the U. S. Treasury and then having to request a yearly appropriation.

BECAUSE OF THE BUDGET CRUNCH, however, Jepsen said he will not request money for the fund at this time.

"I want to put the structure into place now, so it's there when we can afford it," he said.

"This export loan program has proven itself over the past 25 years, consistently returning more money to the Treasury than it receives. The revolving credit fund would remove the handcuffs placed on the program by the annual appropriations process."

Agricultural products now account for more than 20 percent of total U. S. exports, Jepsen pointed out. However, he said, little has been done to implement the energetic financing provisions of the two-year-old Agricultural Trade Act.

"There is strong evidence that limitations in the current export financing program have cost the U. S. export sales to a number of countries," Jepsen said. "A revolving fund will provide a flexibility which is consistent with our aggressive agricultural export policy."

LET THE PROFESSIONALS DO IT, a University of Missouri agricultural economist says concerning cattle feeding.

"Cattle feeding looks like an unprofitable game for all except the top professionals," Vic Jacobs added at a Missouri cattle feeding seminar.

Jacobs said cattle feeding is not likely to be a profitable sideline to be managed with the leftover management energy of the general farmer.

"It's simply too demanding in technical know-how and judgment," he said.

RESTRUCTURING OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE as recommended by the U. S. Department of Agriculture just before the change of administrations goes against the mainstream of public opinion, says the National Cotton Council.

The council's views on the structure report were expressed in a statement filed with a House agriculture subcommittee on family farms.

"At a time when the cry is to move away from government regulation and domination of the economy, the report calls for increased interference by government," the council said.

"And while the nation is moving to increase productivity by encouraging investment and research, it recommends less tax incentive for investment and abandonment of research to achieve more productive farm equipment."

The council also took issue with a recommendation to reverse recent estate tax law modifications that help in passing farms on to heirs who want to continue operations.

THE PRESENT ESTATE TAX OF UP TO 70 percent of taxable value already is quite progressive, the council pointed out.

"To make it more progressive for farm estates not only is discriminatory but will virtually confiscate them," the NCC said.

Regarding farm size, the council said efficient operations range from farms with several acres to those with "several tens of thousands" of acres, depending on soil, climate, management, enterprise, and other factors.

"The greatest overall efficiency is obtained by allowing each operation the freedom to develop its whole array of resources to its maximum benefit," the council statement added.

"This is the genius of the American system, and it has given us an agriculture that is the envy of the world, and one that is essential to feeding and clothing the world."

COTTON FUTURES ERASED EARLY LOSSES and staged an afternoon rally Tuesday, briefly touching limit up in the two current marketing year contract months, to close up 178 points in spot May at 87.43 cents.

July rose 187 points to 88.42 cents and deferred positions added an average of about eight points, with December up three points at 83.30 cents.

Prices soared when commission houses began buying heavily in sympathy with stronger gold and grain prices, floor sources said.

This triggered brisk speculative short covering, including automatic buy stops, in the technically oversold market, analysts added. Mill price fixations also contributed strength, they said.

Earlier, prices had lost as much as 90 points on commission house selling.

SPECULATORS HAD 43.7 PERCENT OF THE long positions at the end of last week, down from 49.8 percent the previous week, and 48.9 percent of the shorts, up from 45.6 percent. This left them 5.2 percent net short.

Hedgers held 33.9 percent of the long positions, up from 32 percent, and 28.8 percent of the shorts, down from 36.3 percent. Straddles or spreads accounted for 22.2 percent, up from 18 percent and the highest in memory.

The July-December straddle traded at 340-350 points, analysts said, and settlement difference on the board was a 512-point premium on July, up 184 points.

A proposal to begin separate reporting of spot market quotations for short staple cotton has been approved by the Southern Cotton Association.

The separate reporting would be on four designated spot markets at Lubbock, Dallas, Montgomery and Memphis.

Japanese and U. S. textile workers plan meetings in Tokyo this week to discuss the current situation of the textile and apparel industries and working conditions.

WORLD COTTON PRODUCTION IN THE 1980-81 season still is estimated at 65.2 million bales, unchanged from last month's estimate and 500,000 bales below the previous season, the USDA said Tuesday.

In a foreign agriculture circular on the world cotton situation, the USDA said lower estimates for Argentina and Australia, down 85,000 and 25,000 bales, respectively, were offset by an increase of 80,000 bales in Ivory Coast's crop and smaller increases in Turkey, Nigeria and Syria.

World consumption now is indicated at 65.6 million bales, down from nearly 65.8 million forecast last month, mainly reflecting lower expected usage in Japan.

Global exports are forecast at 19.7 million bales, down 2 percent from last month and the lowest since 1977-78, with most of the decline attributed to a reduction in Turkey's export forecast.

World cotton stocks on Aug. 1 are projected at 21.3 million bales, up 500,000 from February's forecast and compared with 21.5 million last year. The increased stocks primarily reflect larger stocks in Turkey and India.

THERE ARE UNFAVORABLE EXPORT PROSPECTS in Turkey as government officials continue to require export levies on cotton, the USDA said, while in India textile mills have experienced growing inventories as textile trade remains slow.

Foreign and domestic prices have softened in recent weeks, the USDA said, although quotes for U. S. cotton in foreign markets remain a few cents above those of major competitors.

World output of manmade fibers (rayon, acetate and noncellulose) in 1980 totaled 30.6 billion pounds, the USDA said, slightly below the record 30.9 billion produced in 1979.

The two largest producing areas — the United States and Western Europe — showed declines in noncellulosic and cellulosic production, while production increased elsewhere except for cellulosic fiber output in parts of Africa, Asia and Oceania.

Trading volume on Telcot improved to 3,130 bales, largely on the activity of a Memphis-based merchant, who was guesstimated to have accounted for one-third or more of the turnover. The average price was 67.66 cents, an average of 2,752 points over the loan, and the market difference was up 25 points.

Problems? Not For Ralph, Ray Or NCAA

RALPH MILLER AND RAY Meyer thought they had problems. Trouble with a capital T and that rhymes with B, which stands for basketball.

And I do mean trouble right here in the NCAA's. Miller's Oregon State Beavers and Meyer's DePaul Blue Demons had gone back and forth all year long as the nation's No. 1 basketball spot in the AP and UPI top twenty polls. They were the best, everyone said. They were shoo-ins to reach the NCAA Final Four and one of them was likely to win it all.

Heck, even Al McGuire smiled his squeaky clean smile and assured us these were the best of the best. All the way with DePaul, said Al. And we could only agree. After all, there isn't a more knowledgeable basketball mind in the country than Al's. How do we know that? Because he told us so, ya big dummy.

But an unlikely pretender named St. Joseph's knocked off a gagging DePaul in the Blue Demons' first game of the tournament. So long, Ray. Then the Beavers fell to Kansas State in Oregon State's first-round game. Good-bye, Ralph.

Then UCLA went down the tubes; defending champion Louisville fell when Arkansas' U.S. Reed heaved in a 50-foot prayer; the over-ranked and highly-publicized Kentucky Wildcats fell on Sunday, third-ranked Arizona State also went down somewhere in the massacre.

But nobody's on the hot spot like Ray and Ralph. On national television, with far superior talent than the opposition, those two guys just flat got out-coached.

"A game is a game," said DePaul's Mark Aguirre — an all-American, who's been second only to Notre Dame's Kelly Tripucka in national TV appearances. "It happens that way. It's basketball."

Aguirre, who scored all of eight points against St. Joe's, may be right after all. A quick glance at Tuesday morning's Dear Abby column reassured me that Miller and Meyer had merely lost basketball games — nothing more, nothing less.

If ever you want "real" problems — earth-shaking dilemmas — read Abby. All your own trials and tribulations, like Ray's and Ralph's, will seem like so much nonsense.

• DEAR ABBY: I AM engaged to marry Jeff in a few months but a problem has developed. I have three cats who are like a part of my family. Jeff (the insensitive clod) hates them and is jealous of the attention I give them.

Now he tells me that after we are married he doesn't want to have any cats around the place! Abby, I really do love Jeff, but I just cannot see myself parting with my cats. What should I do? Signed: TORN IN TOLEDO

DEAR TORN, writes Abby: If you are honestly "torn" between Jeff and the cats, you'd be better off with the cats.

Some answer, Abby. Obviously the woman wants to have her chow-chow and Jeffrey, too. So what good does it do to simply tell her to dump Jeff, who's not entirely a bad guy?

DEAR TORN, writes me: your solution is simple. Stop feeding Jeff the cat food and take the kitties off their steak and shrimp diet. You'll find this should also improve Jeff's breath.

But the Kitty or Jeffie problem pales in comparison to this letter written by EMBARRASSED IN MINNEAPOLIS (and why do people always sign their letters like they were writing headlines for True Confessions?)

• DEAR ABBY: I am a 39-year old man who has recently started dating a very attractive 37-year-old woman. We both enjoy theater and movies — especially comedies, and that's the problem. Abby, this lady's laughter attracts a lot of attention. She doesn't just laugh, she screams and hoots! I am sure I am not overreacting. When she laughs, people turn around and look at us.

The embarrassed gent finishes his letter by explaining how, being a quiet, reserved kinda' guy, this mad hooting embarrasses him. Should he ask his lady to stifle, or say nothing? Again, Abby is forced to take the easy way out.

DEAR EMBARRASSED, WRITES ABBY: hearty, explosive laughter is characteristic of an uninhibited, outgoing personality — a healthy plus. Furthermore it's appropriate to laugh at comedy, so why not accept the lady as she is?

Sure, that's easy for her to say. Is she the one sitting in the movie theater while empty popcorn containers are being hurled at big-mouth and spouse? No. I've sat behind a few of those uninhibited types at movies and never heard a single word — funny or otherwise.

You know the type. They frequent every Woody Allen picture and start cackling like hyenas the minute the credits start to roll.

DEAR EMBARRASSED, I'd write: next time you take your attractive, uninhibited lady friend to the movies, carry a freshly laundered pair of socks in your coat pocket. You'll soon know what to do with them.

Either that or start going to drive-ins.

"I'LL BE IN MY office Monday to pick up the pieces and start over again," said Arizona State's Ned Wulk, who's team went 24-3 but fell in the NCAA first-round, "unless I commit suicide first."

Ned, Ned, it's not that bad. So you guys lost. It could be worse. You could be married to a lady with three cats who couldn't stop laughing. If the Kitty Litter didn't get you, the hooting would.

Kansas Schools To Meet In Regional Semifinals

By The Associated Press
Two of the eight upsets in the first round of the NCAA tournament accomplished what the Kansas legislature could not — bring Kansas and Wichita State together on the basketball court.

The Big Eight and Metro Conference schools both are in Kansas, but they hardly can be called interstate rivals since they haven't met since 1955, when the Jayhawks helped dedicate Wichita State's arena by playing a game won by Kansas 56-55.

Since then, presumably because Kansas felt it had the most prestige to lose, the Jayhawks and Shockers have traveled separate roads. A Wichita legislator introduced a bill in 1979 to have the two schools play each other, but the proposal died in committee.

Then last weekend, Kansas upset Arizona State 88-71 and Wichita State defeated Iowa 60-56 to advance to the semifinals of the Midwest Regional at New Orleans Friday. Arkansas and Louisiana meet in the other semifinal of that region.

A third Kansas school, Kansas State, also still is alive via the upset route, having advanced to the semifinals of the West Regional against Illinois on Thursday by beating second-ranked Oregon State. Utah faces North Carolina in the other West semifinal at Salt Lake City.

In the East Regional Thursday at Atlanta, Virginia tackles Tennessee and Brigham Young faces Notre Dame, and in the Midwest Regional at Bloomington, Ind., Friday, Alabama-Birmingham takes on Indiana and St. Joseph's, Pa., meets Boston College.

Wichita State coach Gene Smithson is delighted to be playing Kansas. "We wanted to see KU win," Smithson said. "We are looking forward to playing them in New Orleans. I've always been an advocate of state schools playing each other."

"I don't know the reasoning behind it, but I think in the near future we should do it. It makes sense economically and it makes sense emotionally for the state of Kansas."

Kansas coach Ted Owens wouldn't talk about the controversy, except to say, "That isn't even on my mind. The only thing I'm thinking a out is preparing to play a fine basketball team, preparing

Combo Keeps Gophers Digging

By The Associated Press
Minnesota's own "Mr. Inside" and "Mr. Outside" have gunned the Gophers into the quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

And West Virginia coach Gale Catlett is wondering why his Mountaineers have to play "outside."

The Gophers buried Connecticut 84-66 Monday night to move into the NIT quarters against West Virginia's visiting Mountaineers Thursday night. The other quarterfinal is Michigan at Syracuse. Friday night's two games — the final two before the tournament moves into Madison Square Garden with the semifinals next Monday night — are Duke at Purdue and South Alabama at Tulsa.

"They got inside people, they got outside people" Connecticut coach Dom Perno said of the Gophers. "They have seven quality players and will be tough to beat in the NIT."

Trent Tucker, Minnesota's 6-foot-5 guard, was devastating from the outside, hitting 14 of 17 shots en route to a career-high 35 points, more than twice his scoring average. And 7-2 center Randy Breuer added 19 points, all but three of them in the second half when the Gophers turned their four-point intermission lead into a rout.

"I felt I couldn't miss," Tucker said. "Our team is oriented to the big guy, but I had the rhythm and the coach told me to put it up."

West Virginia made it to the quarters with a 77-76 victory over Temple — built on free throws in overtime by Donnie Gipson and Dennis Hosey — before more than 12,000 fans in the WVU Coliseum. In Monday night's other games, Syracuse beat Holy Cross 77-57, Purdue turned back Dayton 50-46, Duke defeated Alabama 73-70, South Alabama edged Georgia 73-72 and Tulsa trimmed Texas-El Paso 72-67. On Sunday night, Michigan routed Toledo 80-68.

Catlett was dismayed over having to take his WVU team on the road to Minnesota. "We put more than 25,000 fans in the coliseum for two NIT games. I'm shocked that the NIT hasn't recognized this fact and awarded us another home game," Catlett said. "I thought we would get another home game, especially in view of the great fan support we've had."

Catlett, of course, wouldn't mind taking his Mountaineers on the road for one or two games beyond next Thursday — mainly to New York. "We've been in a slump, but we're snapping out of it," he said. "In fact, we're about in midseason form. I'd like to get one more win and then head for the Big Apple."

While Catlett bemoans the fact that his Mountaineers are on the road, Danny Schayes, Syracuse's center, has the opposite complaint. "It seems strange playing here this late. The season was over and we're still playing home games," he said following the romp in the Carrier Dome over Holy Cross, a victory which propelled the Orange into a host role against Michigan's Wolverines.

Parker Says Injury To Blame For Poor Season

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Two years ago, many experts described Pittsburgh outfielder Dave Parker as the best everyday player in baseball.

The 6-foot-5 Parker could hit for average and hit with power, throw bullets from right field, run fast for a man his size and almost always produce the key hit.

In 1971, for example, Parker led the National League in extra-base hits and sacrifice flies, finished second in total bases, tied for second in runs scored, was third in doubles, fourth in assists for an outfielder, sixth in total hits, seventh in slugging percentage and batting average, and eighth in runs batted in.

He was the Most Valuable Player of the '79 All-Star game, and won a Gold Glove that season for his fielding.

Last year, however, he slipped in all categories. He still had a season most outfielders would settle for, but it wasn't a Parker production.

Why? "There isn't anything that happened," Parker said. "I played last year on a bad leg, which was stupid of me. I'm just human. Everybody has an image of me as super. So, I tried to live up to that and played injured."

"I think when the knee got bad was midway through the season right after the All-Star game, and we were competing in what I consider the toughest division in all of baseball. I just wanted to contribute. I was playing for these other 24 guys... and a manager I respect a lot. It was just me. I'm a competitive guy, and when I can go out there 75 or 80 percent I feel I can do an adequate job. That was why I played."

Parker is concerned that he may have done damage to his career over the long haul. "I had a bad knee injury, torn cartilage, bone chips under my left kneecap, playing hurt basically. But I hit .296 on one leg.

"I could have quit, when I was at .311, but I thought we had a chance to win so I just played until I couldn't play anymore," he said.

The huge outfielder with the multimillion-dollar contract admits he isn't sure how he'll do this season until he has had a chance to really test the knee. "I've been lifting a lot of weights and really laying back until I really have to use it in game conditions. That will tell. I'm going to do things moderately (in spring training) and just get it as strong as I possibly can." Does Parker believe that he still is going to live up to that "super" rating? "I consider myself a bonafide .300 hitter," he replied. "Basically that's my approach, go out and hit .300, and try to drive in 100 runs. So I'm a very positive individual. A healthy Dave Parker is considered one of the better players in the game."

Parker has one goal for 1981. "I'd like to play a full season healthy. Statistics mean a lot, but you can't supply them unless you're healthy. If I'm healthy I'll have a good year."

Jones Tries To Revive Career

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — At first, it was nothing more than a twinge in the ribs, the kind of pain an athlete figures he can work out.

So, Randy Jones tried to work it out.

"It happened in a game against Pittsburgh the third week of May," said Jones. "Fifth inning, I kept pitching for three weeks after that. I was my own worst enemy."

Jones had just authored three consecutive shutouts for San Diego. He had not allowed a run for 30 innings and had gone 44 innings without surrendering a walk. Now he admits that his enthusiasm got the best of him.

"You know, when they put the ball in my glove, I've waited four days to get it," he said. "I don't like to give it back."

Jones pitched twice more after feeling the pain for the first time and succeeded in separating a rib. This time, there was no choice. He sat for six weeks.

When Jones returned to action, he was throwing unnaturally, trying to protect his ribs. All that accomplished was to strain a nerve in his pitching arm, the same injury that sidelined him in 1977, a year after he had won the Cy Young Award. The season that had started with such promise, ended in ashes with a 5-13 record.

"It was very demoralizing, really disappointing," he said. "Once it's hurt, it's susceptible. You never know when it might go."

That's why the Mets got him relatively cheaply, swapping pitcher John Pacella and infielder Jose Moreno for the veteran southpaw.

The Padres were sweeping house and Jones suspected the broom would get him.

"When they traded Bob Shirley, Gene Tenace and Rollie Fingers, I said to myself, 'It wouldn't surprise me if the phone rings sometime soon.'"

It did with word that the Padres had shipped him to New York. The deal needed his approval because he had a no-trade clause in his contract.

"They had lost interest in me, though, and I didn't want to stay where I was not wanted," Jones said.

Ted Simmons waived his no-trade clause for $750,000. Jones got something less than that to OK the deal with the Mets. But that's because the pitcher is a question mark. That's why he sees the trade as the start of a new career for himself at age 31.

"With the Mets, I can be a mainstay," he said. "If I'm healthy, I can pitch 250 innings and win in double figures. I know I can still throw. I saw a glimpse of it last year with those three shutouts."

'Daffy' Dean Dies Of Heart Attack

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A little bit of baseball died Tuesday — the baseball of Leo "The Lip" Durocher, Ducky Medwick and the Gas House Gang of the 1930's — when the other half of the feared "Me and Paul" combination fell to a heart attack in Springdale, Ark.

Paul "Daffy" Dean was 66. He never liked the Daffy monicker, hung on him by an alliterative sportswriter after the 1934 season when he teamed with the more famous Dizzy Dean to win 49 games for St. Louis and all four games of the World Series against the Detroit Tigers.

All told, the "Me and Paul" duo combined for 200 career wins in the 30's for the Gas House Gang. Dizzy had 150 of those, and his 30 wins in 1934 still stands in the St. Louis Cardinals record book.

Even so, insiders concede Daffy might have been the better pitcher.

"Criminy, he didn't need a curve, not when he threw the damndest, heaviest sinker you ever saw," said Frankie Frisch, manager of the 1934 team. "When a batter hit one of those pitches, his hands stung as painfully in July as if he'd swung an icicle in December."

But after winning 19 games in 1934 and 1935, a shoulder injury ended Daf-fy's promising career. The farmboy from Lucas, Ark., was 5-5 in 1936 before asking to be placed on the voluntarily retired list.

Daffy won only seven more games before retiring for good in 1943.

But it was 1934 Daffy and fans alike remember.

One day in September, the Cardinals were playing a makeup doubleheader in Brooklyn. Dizzy went out and won the first game on a three-hitter. But Daffy, in what he termed his greatest moment in baseball, bested that effort by no-hitting the Dodgers.

The Cardinals won the pennant that year by two games after the New York Giants collapsed and lost six of their last seven.

In the series against Detroit, Dizzy and Daffy gave the Cardinals a 2-1 lead in the series by sandwiching victories around a loss to Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe. The Cardinals lost the next two, but Daffy picked up the win in the sixth game and Dizzy closed out the series by winning the seventh game.

A salary dispute with the Cardinals followed when Daffy was offered $8,500 for the 1935 season. The hurler sat out until the last day of spring training before signing.

Tigers Trounce Astros

By The Associated Press
The Detroit Tigers remain the hottest-hitting team in spring training. The Bengals rapped 16 hits and raised their team average to .321 in defeating the Houston Astros 8-3 Tuesday. Richie Hebner had three hits and drove in a pair of runs to lead the Detroit attack.

All of Houston's runs scored on a three-run homer by Chris Bourjas. The Tigers, 8-4 in Grapefruit League play, got nine hits and five runs in the first three innings off starter and loser Vern Ruhle.

Steve Carlton, the National League's Cy Young award winner last year, pitched four impressive innings, allowing only three singles and an unearned run, in the Philadelphia Phillies' 4-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The Cincinnati Reds split into two squads and won twice — 3-0 over Minnesota and 5-2 over St. Louis. Dan Driessen doubled home two runs in the first inning in the victory over the Twins, and George Foster hit a two-run homer against the Cardinals. In the two games, Cincinnati pitching allowed a total of just eight hits.

Solo home runs by Hubie Brooks and Lee Mazzilli and a two-run shot by Mike Jorgensen, all off pitcher John Candelaria, led the New York Mets to an 11-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Mazzilli drove in two more runs with a triple and a double.

Jim Morrison hit a first-inning grand slam and doubled in a run in the third to power the Chicago White Sox to a 7-6 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays. It was the fourth victory in a row for the White Sox, who were aided by six Toronto errors.

Burt Hooton scattered four hits in six innings and Fernando Valenzuela followed with four innings of one-hit pitching as the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked the Texas Rangers 2-0.

Rafael Ramirez doubled home the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning to pace the Atlanta Braves to a 6-4 victory over the New York Yankees.

Ted Cox delivered a three-run single and Willie Norwood added a bases-loaded triple to spark the Seattle Mariners to a 9-5 victory over the San Diego Padres. All three runners were moving when Cox lined a John Pacella pitch into left-center to clear the bases and give the Mariners a 5-3 lead in the fourth.

Reserve catcher Brian Harper hit a two-out, two-run double in the eighth inning as the California Angels defeated the San Francisco Giants 5-3.

Jim Dwyer knocked in the tying run with a double and came home on Chris Speier's error on a rundown play in the sixth inning to help the Baltimore Orioles beat the Montreal Expos 6-3. Sammy Stewart pitched four scoreless innings to gain the victory.

SAFE AT PLATE — Houston's Cesar Cedeno slides safely at home plate as Detroit Tigers catcher Duffy Dyer (right) tries to get back to tag him too late. Houston's Jeff Leonard (left) was at bat when a pitch got past Dyer in the 8-3 Tiger win Tuesday in exhibition baseball. Making the call is umpire Rick Reed. (AP Laserphoto)

Carroll, Raiders Roll To Win Over Kansas

EDINBURG (Special) — Texas Tech, buoyed by its first solid pitching performance in five games, rattled Kansas 6-1 Tuesday in the second round of the Jody Ramsey Tournament here.

The Raiders rode the right arm of JUCO transfer David Carroll to its 13th victory in 19 games this season and evened its tourney record at 1-1. Kansas, 6-3 overall and 1-1 in the tourney, played host Pan American, also 1-1, Tuesday night.

ion in the next inning with a bases-loaded triple, driving in shortstop Andy Dawson, second baseman Scott Nethery and right fielder Pat Moore.

Dawson and Nethery had each singled to reach base while Moore was safe on a fielder's choice.

Kansas starter Kevin Clinton, 1-1, worked six innings before moving to the designated hitters slot and letting Matt Gibson get the final three outs. Tech did not let Gibson escape unscathed, however. Moore was safe at first on an error by Jayhawk shortstop Jeff Neuzil in the top of the seventh, stole second and scored the final run on Jimmy Zachry's single.

The round-robin, best-record action continues through Friday. Tech will play a double-header today, meeting Kansas at 4:30 p.m. followed by Pan American at 7 p.m. The team with the best record after three games against each of the other two schools will win the tourney.

The three RBI gave Kohler 26 for the season and four in the first two tournament games. Dawson led the Raider hitters with a double and single in three plate appearances while Moore and Zachry, who each had a pair of hits Monday against Pan American, each singled against the Jayhawks.

Carroll, a transfer from Panola Junior College, upped his record to 4-1 this season by three-hitting the Jayhawks. He surrendered a lone, unearned run in the third inning while walking three batters and striking out five.

With the score tied 1-1, Carroll got the only run he needed in the top of the fourth inning when catcher Dan Hejl doubled home Bobby Kohler, who had walked and stole second base.

Kohler gave Carroll a four-run cushion.

Tech opened the scoring in the top of the third when first baseman John Grimes singled and swiped second before Dawson came through with a double.

The victory snapped a four-game Tech losing skid — an SWC sweep by Texas and the opening-round 8-4 setback by Pan American.

Robert Bryant, 1-1, will start on the mound for the Raiders today against Kansas while Derek Hatfield, 2-0, is scheduled to start against the Broncs.

Mustangs Confident Despite Status As Underdogs

By RICHARD DAY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
For the Shallowater Mustangs, there's no better way to spend St. Patty's Day than sitting on a bus bound for Austin — for the boys' state basketball tournament.

The Mustangs, who earned a berth in Thursday's state Class 2A semifinals against Archer City by knocking off fourth-ranked Morton in the regional tourney, left for the state capital Tuesday at 2 p.m. sharp in hopes of bringing back another state championship to the South Plains.

Two weeks ago, South Plains teams grabbed four of the five state girls' titles and had teams in every championship game.

In the boys' divisions though, just Shallowater and Canyon (90 miles to the north and the girls' champion in Class 4A) remain.
"We're just happy to be going," coach Keith Kitchens said Tuesday. "We're excited, but we know what we're going for. We think we have a great chance of winning the state championship. We beat Morton, Crowell and Vega — three teams ranked in the state top 10 — to get this far. We can play."

The Mustangs will again be the underdogs when they begin state competition. The other three teams in the Class 2A draw (Archer City, Gladewater Sabine and Bartlett) are all back from last year's tourney. Sabine knocked Archer City out in the semifinals 73-60 and went on to win the state title by slipping by Bartlett 69-68 in the championship game.

"We're going in as the underdog, but that's fine with me," Kitchens said.

This is only the third time in Shallowater history a boys' basketball team has gone this far. The 1975 version of the Mustangs lost to Brookshire Royal in the semis.

In 1975, Kitchens was running the Texas Tech basketball team's offense as the Red Raiders won the first annual Southwest Conference basketball tournament and went on to the NCAA tournament.

"Both experiences are just unbelievable to me," Kitchens said. "I can't put one any higher than the other."

For the Mustang players, however, this is the height of their careers. After getting a late start, the Mustangs struggled to a 7-5 record just before the Christmas break. Then, right after the holidays, in the Reagan County Tournament, Shallowater turned it around. The Mustangs lost in the consolation finals to Coleman, but they were on their way to district, improving game by game.

"I just told the kids during district that I wanted them to keep getting better," Kitchens said. "They worked hard and improved game by game until we were 14-0 in district."

"When the playoffs began, we wanted Vega real bad," Kitchens recalls. "Revenge was part of it, but we also wanted to play a good team. I felt good about going into the playoffs. I knew we had momentum with us."

In bi-district, Shallowater avenged last year's loss to Vega, knocking off the third-ranked Longhorns 64-47 and entered the Region I Class 2A Tournament with a 15-game winning streak.

The Mustangs whipped fifth-ranked Crowell in the regional semifinals 55-46 as Robert Sanders and Willie Johnson, their senior scoring punch, combined for 45 points.

Then, against Morton, Shallowater fell behind 12-0 but rebounded to tie the score by halftime at 31-31. It was more of the same in the second half as Shallowater's momentum carried through to a 57-54 victory, earning the Mustangs a state tourney berth.

"Everybody on this team has a job to do," assistant coach Chuck Darden said. "And they've done it all year long, especially in the playoffs. I think we'll win it all. If we get to the finals, we'll be hard to beat."

Kitchens believes it's defense that has carried the Mustangs through the season.

"We've played super defense all year, especially in the (regional) tournament," Kitchens said. "Robert and Willie have carried us offensively."

"Robert grew physically between his sophomore and junior seasons and made a 100 percent improvement," Kitchens said of his star performer. "Then, between last season and this, he got stronger. That improved his performance both inside and outside."

"Willie has improved in every phase of the game. He didn't score as well as he's capable of until the playoffs. He's moving much better this year. He's quicker. Any big man in high school ball is effective, but when he's quick, it's even better. Willie intimidates a lot of people by blocking shots and dominating the boards."

The other Mustang starters are Tommy Gariand, Stuart Smith and Mark Jungman.

"You can always depend on Tommy to play a steady game," Kitchens said of his 6-2 junior. "He always get his 10 rebounds and 12-13 points a game. He also plays excellent defense."

"Stuart Smith has had a lot of pressure on him all year long, but he's improved a lot," Kitchens said. "He's only a sophomore and he's made his mistakes, but he runs our offense well. He broke his nose about six weeks ago and still plays with his protective mask on.

"Mark Jungman (the quarterback of the football team) is not flashy, but is a fine passer," Kitchens said. "He doesn't turn the ball over much. I guess you could call him our stabilizer."

"Joe Maldonado is our sixth man," Kitchens said. "He always picks us up with his quickness when we put him in the game. He plays great defense — he's liable to come up with a steal any time. With him in there, nobody can outrun us."

With Sanders, Johnson and Gariand crashing the boards like they did in the regional tourney, few teams are able to play as physically as the Mustangs, either.

Jordan Cox, another sophomore, is a defensive specialist Kitchens inserts into the game often.

"He plays as good a defense as anybody we have," Kitchens said. "He's not much of a scorer, which is where I'd like to get some more scoring. But they're only sophomores and I'm proud of them. They get the ball to our scorers, which is our game plan at this stage of the season."

If there is a weakness the Mustangs possess, it would have to be in the outside shooting department. Only Sanders and Smith are able to take the ball out 20 feet or so and hit with consistency. That characteristic has influenced Shallowater opponents to use zone defenses against it this season, but few have succeeded in limiting the Mustangs' scoring attack.

"I'm really excited about going (to state)," Sanders said. "There are some tough teams down there, but I think we'll go all the way."

"We got off to a slow start, but we picked it up at the end. My first goal for the season was to make it to regionals. I wasn't all that excited when we got that far — I want to go all the way. It's like a dream coming true."

Individually, Sanders is happy with this season's accomplishments. He averaged 21 points per game during the regular season and has hit 31, 25 and 24 in the playoffs.

"I think I've improved this year," Sanders said. "My passing, defense and outside shooting are better than they were last year. I think it helped being a senior. I'm just more excited about playing."

Johnson, a big man with a soft voice, said he couldn't ask for much more from his senior season except a state championship.

"I just want to win this weekend," the 6-5 Johnson said. "I think I had a god year in football and basketball."

When asked if his signing a football scholarship with Texas Tech during the district season affected his basketball outlook, Johnson said, "No." Darden said if the signing had any effect on Johnson's performance, it was that it made him more aggressive.

That aggressive inside Shallowater attack has pushed many a team to the wayside this season. Knocking off two more teams will be just enough for a state championship.

Farmer Assumes UCLA Position

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Farmer, the fourth UCLA coach in six years who must toil in the imposing shadow still cast by John Wooden, says he's well aware of the pressure accompanying Bruin basketball.

"I like the challenge that people expect UCLA to win and I accept it full our players to play a good game."

"Shockermania" has taken over on Wichita, where the Shockers are 25-6 and spent part of the season in the nation's Top 20. Now that they are among the final 16 in the tournament, two 747s quickly were booked for the trip to New Orleans, and other busloads are expected to follow. More than 1,150 tickets were sold in Wichita Monday for the game, and 250 more went on sale Tuesday.

Kansas State lost eight of 29 games during its regular season, but was chosen for the 48-team championship playoffs because of its victories over five tournament teams — Louisville, Arkansas, Fresno State and Kansas. The Wildcats defeated San Francisco 64-60 and Oregon State 50-48 on a last-second shot by Rolando Blackman.

well knowing what I have to do," Farmer said. "(There is) so much of the tradition here at the school I have been a part of."

Farmer, a UCLA assistant for the past six years, was named Tuesday to replace Larry Brown at the Bruins' helm. Brown, who like predecessors Gene Bartow and Gary Cunningham spent two years in the job, has left to become coach of the New Jersey Nets.

The three coaches who followed Wooden after his 27-year reign ended in 1975 had winning records — never failing to reach 20 victories in a season — but those records paled in comparison to Wooden's 10 NCAA championships.

Farmer, at 30 the youngest of eight head basketball coaches the school has had, said he "grew up" under Wooden at UCLA. Farmer averaged 9.4 points per game in three NCAA championship seasons for the Bruins beginning in 1971. Interestingly, the Bruin teams Farmer played for were 89-1 during his three years, a better record than posted by Bill Walton or Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (Lew Alcindor) during their UCLA careers.

"This is day one of what I hope is not a two-year stint," said Farmer, referring to the tenures served by Bartow, Cunningham and Brown. "I have been with the Bruin basketball program for 11 years and I intend to stay a lot longer."

Farmer said his approach will be to "try to coach like Larry Farmer." He explained: "My background is closely linked to John Wooden, so my foundation is rooted in coach Wooden's style. The icing on the cake is what I've learned from Gene Bartow, Gary Cunningham and Larry Brown while I served under them."

Asked then, if his teams will resemble Wooden's teams on the floor, Farmer grinned and replied: "I hope so... at the end of the game."

Farmer displayed a sparkling sense of humor that might help carry him through any bad spells in his new job. Asked how long he thought it might take for him to receive his first criticism, he grinned and said, "What time is it?"

Talking about waiting in the wings as an assistant, he said, "It's been a tough six years for me; I had to get rid of three coaches to get the job. Now guys are lining up for my old spot for the same reason."

On a more serious note, Farmer said he was sorry to get the job in the circumstances he did — because of Brown's departure.

"I know Larry Brown is very fond of UCLA, and I guess it was basically just a matter of his being offered a huge sum of money. I'm happy for me, but I'm sorry he's leaving."

Brown had a 22-10 record his first year at the school, and his young Bruins surprised most observers by making it to the championship game of the NCAA tournament, where they lost to Louisville. This season, UCLA was 20-7 and lost its opening game of the playoffs, a stunning 78-55 defeat by BYU last Saturday.

Sports In Brief

Stephenson Wins Chap Honors

Baseball player Lewis Stephenson has been named the Lubbock Christian College athlete of the week.

Stephenson, a junior from Richardson, recently made the transition from shortstop to third base. He was the Chaparrals' starting shortstop last season but a pulled thigh muscle has necessitated the move for defensive purposes.

He hit .400 with two doubles, two home runs and eight runs batted in to increase his batting average from .317 to .344 in eight games last week. LCC won five of those games.

First baseman Leland Creel, who hit four home runs and drove in nine runs, and outfielder Jeff Craig, who had eight hits and six RBI, were runners-up to Stephenson.

Kabuki-Mata Match Highlights Card

Kabuki, managed by Gary Hart, will wrestle Raul Mata in the main event tonight in professional wrestling at Fair Park Coliseum.

Killer Brooks, who lost the loser-leave-town match last Wednesday night, has added a little spice to the event by (according to wrestling officials), paying Hart $1,000 to "do a number on Mata."

In addition, he has also left Danny Sanchez and instructed him to throw the money to the fans if Kabuki fails to defeat Mata.

In other matches, Ricky Romero will face Mr. Chan, Billy White Cloud will tackle Raul Zapata, Jesse Barr will battle The Monk and the Lawman will tangle with Danny Sanchez.

Ringside seats go for $4, reserved seats are $3 and you can sit in the balcony for $1.

Raider Women Face Horned Frogs

FORT WORTH (Special) — The upset-minded Texas Tech women's tennis team will battle the TCU Horned Frogs, ranked 14th in the nation, here today at 1:30 p.m.

The Red Raiders will be back in action Thursday when they begin competition in the prestigious SMU Invitational Tournament in Dallas. Tech's first match will be against Northeast Louisiana State at 8 a.m.

Connors Advances In WCT Play

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Jimmy Connors secured a berth in the third round of the $175,000 World Championship Tennis tournament with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Tim Wilkinson Tuesday.

Connors lost the first game but, after checking the height of the net, went on to blast Wilkinson off the court.

In third-round play Thursday, Connors will be pitted against 16-year-old Dutch student Eric Wilborts, who upset Pat Dupre in the first round Monday.

Drake, Pitt Join NWIT Field

AMARILLO (AP) — Drake and the University of Pittsburgh have accepted invitations to the National Women's Invitational Tournament, completing the eight-team field for the basketball meet March 26-28.

Drake will bring a 24-6 record into the tournament. Pittsburgh is 20-7.

Arizona State, 19-10, University of California-Berkeley, 22-11, and Georgia, 24-10, accepted invitations Monday.

The field also will include Baylor, 29-8, Tennessee Tech, 22-9, and Cincinnati, 26-7.

Tyler JG Coach Takes Tulane Post

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tulane University named Ned Fowler of Tyler, Texas, Junior College the school's new basketball coach on Tuesday, picking him to succeed Roy Danforth.

Fowler, 37, compiled a 31-4 record at Tyler this season and was 83-22 for his three years at the school.

Danforth, who led Syracuse to six consecutive post-season tournaments before moving to Tulane, accumulated a 45-90 record in five years at the school. He resigned after this season to become an associate athletic director at Tulane.

Athletic director Hindman Wall said Fowler signed a three-year contract with the school.

Bum, New Orleans Want Rogers

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — If the National Football League draft were being held today, and nobody called within the next five minutes, Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers would become a New Orleans Saint, coach Bum Phillips said Tuesday.

"But make sure you get that 'today,' in there, because it might not be true tomorrow," he said.

Phillips said that in his 53 days as head coach of the Saints, he's had a chance to review team personnel, talk to the players and get a handle on this spring's draft.

"I've learned a lot of good places to eat," he added.

Phillips, fired by Houston after last season, was named the Saints' head coach replacing Dick Stanfel, who served four games after the firing of Dick Nolan.

Although the Saints' defense was victorious all season and Phillips said the team's offense was the strongest facet, he said he had no philosophical problems with drafting the South Carolina running back.

"He's the best player available," he said.

The Saints already have Tony Galbreath, the moody fullback who got his chance to play halfback last season when Chuck Muncie was traded to San Diego.

"I've never had too many good running backs," Phillips said.

"This 16-game league season uses up your backs.

"The fullback makes more yards than the halfbacks in our offense. The last three or four years, since we had Earl Campbell (at Houston), he made more yards at fullback than halfback.

"When you line a guy up behind the center, he can hit all eight holes."

He said he saw Rogers block and catch in college all-star games, and had no worries about his being able to do so in the NFL.

"You can teach a guy to block, if he wants to learn," he said.

As to whether he might be a good receiver, he said, "If I wanted a catcher, I'd draft a catcher."

He said that with 18 choices in 12 rounds, the Saints have enough numbers to enable them to keep the No. 1 choice without hurting the team. However, he said the Saints could decide to trade the first pick in the draft, if someone made them a good offer.

"It's like buying a car. Sometimes they want more than you're willing to pay," he said.

Despite his belief that the Saints' offense is stronger than the defense, he said he could draft to improve the offense without any severe qualms.

"The theory is that you have to have good defense to win, but I've always felt you had to score," he said.

"It's 0-0, if you can't move the ball.

"You can't play defense from your 40-yard line or 50-yard-line in."

Phillips said he had no real hopes of picking up a "sleeper" in the draft.

"We had a kid two years ago that we thought was a sleeper," he said. "We thought we were going to pick him up as a free agent, and the New York Jets drafted him in the third round.

"Fifteen years ago, you could do it, but the scouting's so good that you hardly ever get a sleeper anymore."

He said Russell Erxleben, the 12th player taken in the 1979 draft, would handle both punting and kicking chores — the role he was picked to fill. "He did both jobs in college and did them better than anybody else," he said.

Erxleben missed most of the 1979 season with a series of injuries and ailments, then wound up restricted to just punting last season when his field goal kicking proved inadequate.

Phillips said he has had 60 yards of artificial turf installed on the Saints 170-yard practice field, so the team will be able to work out after rains without having to go to the Superdome.

"I feel that being able to work out regularly has something to do with winning football games, and we will be able to work out regularly," he said.

NFL Committee Proposes Warm-Weather Playoffs

LAHAINA, Maui, Hawaii (AP) — The Competitions Committee of the National Football League proposes the Super Bowl semifinals be played in sunny climates with no chance of ice and snow marring the games.

Tex Schramm, president and general manager of the Dallas Cowboys, heads the committee of four. He said Tuesday one of its proposals to owners will be to play the conference championship games "on neutral, hopefully warm weather sites."

That would avoid, for instance, last January's American Conference title game when Oakland played at Cleveland in freezing, blustery weather. Even though Oakland won, the committee felt the playing conditions were not fair to either team.

"Our feeling is that with all the pre-season work, the work during the season and in the early playoff games, the decision on which teams go to the Super Bowl and should not be influenced by the elements," Schramm said.

Other members of the committee are Don Shula of Miami, Paul Brown of Cincinnati and Eddie LeBaron of Atlanta.

Their plan would be to have the AFC and NFC title games in non-NFL cities which would be determined perhaps two years in advance. In the past, the conference championship games have been played on the home field of one of the competitors — the one with the best season record unless it's a wild card team.

The committee will, in all, make about 30 suggestions of rule changes to the owners, who can accept or reject them.

Many of the proposals were technical, but a couple of importance involved reducing the penalty for pass interference and giving both teams at least one possession of the ball in overtime games.

At present, a pass interference penalty gives the offensive team possession at the point of infraction. Schramm said several proposals have been made to make the penalty less severe.

Witnesses Present Conflicting Testimony In Trial

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two more University of Washington football spectators gave contradicting testimonies Tuesday concerning an alleged punching incident involving former Arizona State University coach Frank Kush and punter Kevin Rutledge in a 1978 game.

Danny Luna, who said he watched the game from the Arizona State sidelines "right behind the bench," told the court he saw Kush grab Rutledge by the face mask after a poor punt and "slap him on the side of the helmet with an open hand."

But John Holmes — a Seattle doctor — testified that Kush grabbed Rutledge's face mask, "shook it, pushed it up and a short punch was delivered to the face... with a closed hand."

Four other spectators testified Monday that Kush shook Rutledge's face mask vigorously but did not punch him.

Rutledge is suing Kush, the university and others for $2.2 million in damages. He claims Kush split his lower lip with a "knuckle-punch" following a 27-yard punt in the fourth quarter of Arizona State's 41-7 loss to Washington Oct. 28, 1978, in Seattle.

Kush has previously testified that he "can't ever recall touching Rutledge" in the game and "was nowhere near him" when the incident supposedly happened.

Rutledge, who now attends the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, also alleges Kush and former Arizona State assistant coach Bill Maskill harassed him into quitting the team in 1979 and forfeiting his scholarship.

Kush, in testimony, and Maskill via a deposition, have denied the harassment charge.

Closing arguments in the first phase of the trial, which is in its seventh week, will be given today, Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Thomas C. Kleinschmidt said he may present the case to the jury of 10 women and three men sometime later in the day for deliberation.

Luna, a Phoenix construction worker who flew to Seattle to watch the game, said he obtained a field pass from a friend and stood next to Arizona State's bench "to see what it was like."

He said he "was about 20 feet away" and had an unobstructed view of the alleged Kush-Rutledge altercation.

"I saw Mr. Kush come toward the punter after the kick and there was some kind of argument," Luna told the court. "I saw Mr. Kush grab him by the face mask and yank down on it. He said something else and then hit him with an open hand on the helmet."

"Then Kush let go and made a gesture like 'Get away from me.' He turned and went back to the sidelines to watch the game."

Luna said then-Sun Devil tight end Marshall Edwards was standing next to him when the incident occurred "and I'm sure he saw it, too."

Edwards testified last week that Kush "grabbed Kevin's mask and slapped him on the side of the helmet. His hand came up to the ear hole. I didn't see any skin-to-skin contact."

Holmes said he "saw a confrontation but I could not identify the coach as the person who punched Rutledge "was coach Kush." He added that he thought wearing a white shirt."

Unser Says 'Winning Addictive' In Racing

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The highly competitive sport of automobile racing requires almost constant innovations just to stay ahead of the other guy, but money alone won't do the job, two-time Indianapolis 500 winner Bobby Unser said Tuesday.

"It takes a lot of dedicated effort by everybody involved. They like it because winning is a disease. Winning is like being hooked on dope. Once you have the feeling of winning, it's something you can't do without," said Unser, who brought his new Penske PC-9B Cosworth-powered race car to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway for testing this week.

Unser, 47, will drive one of five new PC-9B's entered by the Roger Penske team for the May 24 Indy 500.

"A race car, like anything, needs to be tested," Unser said in a trackside interview. "We're testing the car, not to see if it has an oil leak or a fuel leak, but for handling, speed and durability. Testing is the final thing for creating the speed the car is hopefully going to attain."

Unser, the only driver at the track this week, continued: "Back at the shop, they may have 10 different items that do the same thing. The only place you can test which is best is on the track. Since this is the most important race in the world, we wanted to come here."

"This car, the PC-9B, is a very different version of the PC-9. There are so many changes, it might as well have been called a PC-10, and we still don't know what all the changes will be."

One of the biggest changes involves aerodynamic "tunnels" on the underside of the race car. The design, at this time, is being closely guarded lest competitors become too curious.

"The tunnels create a down force," Unser said. "It involves many different concepts. We'd like to extend the edges of the car to the ground — the sliding skirts — which generate a strong down force. But the new rules here are no skirts at all. Other tracks allow fixed, non-movable skirts, but not sliding skirts."

"We're running the tests here with fixed skirts and no skirts at all. We're also testing the suspension, front and rear, and we're doing a lot of aerodynamic testing."

"What the (U.S. Auto Club) officials are saying is they want to slow the cars down, that our 'ground effects' cars are going too fast. Having no skirts at all takes away, I'd say, 70 percent of the ground effects," Unser continued.

"We say we're not going to buy that 70 percent loss. We say we're going to innovate and redesign and cut that 70 percent loss down to, say 50 percent. At other tracks, which is about 85 percent of the races, we will have non-movable skirts. With those, I can't tell you what the (ground effects) loss is because we've created some nice things there."

There is no limit to a race car's potential, he said.

"It all comes from our brains. I'd like to think people are capable of doing things far beyond our expectations. It's like going to the moon. A lot of people never believed we could go to the moon."

"In racing, we're in a very serious thing scientifically. They take away our horsepower (with technical restrictions), and we think of ways, within the rules, to get the speed back."

Unser, the elder of two racing brothers from Albuquerque, N.M., won the Indy 500 in 1968 and 1975. His brother, Al, won the race in 1970, 1971 and 1978.

"I truly think I'll have a good race car this year," said Bobby. "The last two years, we came close to winning, and we had more than just a little bit of a chance of winning."

CBS Offerings Claim Top Five Slots In Ratings Competition

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS claimed the five most-watched shows in the week ending March 15, including "Dallas" in the No. 1 spot, winning the prime-time ratings race for the fourth consecutive week, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

It was the 14th first-place finish for "Dallas" in 19 weeks, but the first for the show since the week ending Feb. 22.

CBS continued to dominate the prime-time competition with an average rating for the week of 19.7 to 16.6 for ABC and 15.7 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.7 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

CBS' "Evening News," meanwhile, remained No. 1 in its three-way race through the highly publicized transition from Walter Cronkite to Dan Rather.

Rather, who succeeded Cronkite as "Evening News" anchorman on March 9, compiled a rating for the week of 15.1, compared with the 16.6 recorded by Cronkite during his final week. Cronkite's average for that last week including a huge audience for his last broadcast.

The rating for "Dallas" was 32.3. Nielsen says that means of all the nation's homes with television, nearly a third — 32.3 percent — saw at least part of the top-rated shows.

In all, CBS listed seven of the week's 10 highest-rated programs, and a dozen of the top 20. ABC's top-rated show for the week, "Love Boat," was No. 6, and NBC's best, "CHiPs," finished eighth.

Both CBS and NBC scored moderate success with made-for-TV motion pictures. "The Killing of Randy Webster" on CBS was No. 23 for the week, tied with "The Chicago Story" on NBC. Another CBS film, "Helling's Law," was 28th.

NBC's effort for the week was hurt by a heavy representation among the week's lowest-rated programs. An NBC movie, "The Million-Dollar Face," was 65th, followed by two NBC shows, "Hill Street Blues" and "The Gangster Chronicles," "That's My Line" from CBS, and "NBC Magazine with David Brinkley."

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated programs:

"Dallas," with a rating of 32.3 representing 25.1 million homes, "Dukes of Hazzard," 29.5 or 23 million, "60 Minutes," 26.1 or 20.3 million, "The Jeffersons," 26 or 20.2 million, and "Alice," 25.5 or 19.8 million, all CBS; "M-A-S-H," 23.3 or 18.1 million, CBS; "CHiPs," 23.2 or 18 million, NBC; "Magnum, P.I.," 23 or 12.9 million, and "Little House on the Prairie," 21.6 or 16.8 million, NBC.

The next 10 shows: "Three's Company," ABC; "House Calls," CBS; "Happy Days," ABC, and "Real People," NBC, tie; "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS; "Fantasy Island," ABC, "Lou Grant," CBS, and "Too Close for Comfort," ABC, three-way tie, and "Archie Bunker's Place" and "Knot's Landing," both CBS.

Performer's Career Zooms After Offbeat Roles

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "The offbeat appeals to me," admits Academy nominee Mary Steenburgen, whose career has zoomed with three marvelously idiosyncratic roles.

The not-so-good news is that the three movies may have been too offbeat to appeal to the mainstream audience. Or, as Miss Steenburgen suggests, the companies didn't know how to sell the films.

First came "Goin' South," in which she played a spunky frontier lady to Jack Nicholson's drier Paramount tried to hide the fact that it was a western, since westerns haven't been selling. Nor did "Goin' South."

Next, "Time after Time," with Steenburgen as a San Francisco bank teller in love with a time-warped H.G. Wells, played by her future husband, Malcolm McDowell. Observed the actress: "Warner's didn't know whether to sell it as a Jack the Ripper movie or science fiction. So they settled for the ad line: 'It took them 100 years to meet and a minute to fall in love.'"

'TAX STRIKE DAY' SET
NASHVILLE, Mich. (AP) — Merchants who plan to close their shops to protest property taxes are hoping their "Tax Strike Day" spreads. "If we could close all businesses in Michigan one day, it would cost the state a minimum of $20 million" in lost sales taxes, says Armo Jordan, a local retailer who is organizing the March 25 protest.

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Shah's Family Attends Event

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Surrounded by security guards, the widow and eldest son of the late Shah of Iran made a rare public appearance here at the finals of the Cairo international tennis tournament.

Widow Farah Diba sat alongside her soft drink-swilling son Reza in front-row seats Sunday at the Ghezira sporting club.

On his 20th birthday last Oct. 31, Reza proclaimed himself inheritor of the Iranian monarchy. His father's regime was toppled in February 1979.

The family of the late Shah have been living since last spring as near-recluses. The Shah died in an Egyptian military hospital last July following months of treatment for lymph cancer and other complications.

Reza recently stopped attending classes at the American University here and opted instead for private tutoring because, according to sources close to the family, security was difficult on the campus.

His younger sisters and brother attend an American school in a suburb south of Cairo.

Small Business Operation

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — The company president was laid up with tonsillitis, the second-in-command was missing a few teeth, and the giggling seemed a bit out of place in the world of high finance.

Nevertheless, the first-graders, second-graders and third-graders of Harper Trading Post Inc. successfully completed their first major transaction with a local finance company.

In the process, said the teacher, Mary Robertson, they learned more about America's economic system than any textbook could have taught them.

Harper Trading Post is a company owned and operated by students at Evansville's Harper School.

Last week, the pint-sized tycoons got their first taste of big business when they were granted a $38 loan from Morris Plan Loan Co. to finance the production of several marionettes.

Loan company president James Galster welcomed the students into his office, donned his rectangular reading glasses and said, "Let's get down to business."

"We need enough to cover our labor costs," said third-grader Carolyn Baugh, who became company treasurer when it was discovered she is the only one who understands multiplication.

After a short discussion, the students decided they would sell the marionettes for $2 each, and would need $38 to produce the first batch. They also decided they could pay back the loan in 90 days.

No Thought To Politics

MONTREAL (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau doesn't want to get involved in the Quebec election campaign, but, awayed by St. Patrick's Day festivities here, he indulged in a bit of blarney at Premier Rene Levesque's expense.

"I'll not be talking politics with a people who haven't given the subject a thought in the last 1,000 years," Trudeau told an audience of 1,500 local Irish men and women on Sunday.

Then he reneged on his promise with light-hearted plugs for the Quebec Liberals in the April 13 provincial election.

Trudeau commented with a grin that he doubted "the good sense of a premier who would call an election against a man named Ryan the week before St. Patrick's Day."

TRUDEAU

Busch Takes Fourth Bride

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — August A. Busch Jr., the 81-year-old honorary chairman of Anheuser-Busch Companies Inc., has taken his fourth bride, Margaret M. Snyder, 61.

Busch, who also owns the St. Louis Cardinals, announced Sunday that he married Mrs. Snyder in a private ceremony last Wednesday.

The new Mrs. Busch, a widow since 1974, was a secretary to Busch for many years and now is a vice president of Anheuser-Busch and the first woman director of the corporation.

Eartha Kitt Moving East

EARTHA KITT

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Eartha Kitt, singer, actress and dancer, says she's going to move from the West Coast to the East "because there's no one out there for me to play with any more."

"Everyone's on cocaine or marijuana," Miss Kitt said during a visit here Sunday. "They can kill themselves if they want, but I don't want to be a part of it."

Miss Kitt was visiting here with a crew filming her life for West German television. Miss Kitt was born in South Carolina and moved to New York when she was 6. She said she thought she might move to Connecticut.

Prince To Attend Ball

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles will attend a ball in Paris on June 8 without Lady Diana Spencer, his 19-year-old fiancée.

The 32-year-old heir to the throne is going as chairman of the trustees of the Mountbatten Memorial Trust and president of the United World Colleges. The project was close to the heart of the prince's great-uncle, Earl Mountbatten of Burma, who was killed in an Irish Republican Army bombing attack in August 1979.

The ball is being given by the British ambassador in Paris and the French committee for the Mountbatten Memorial Trust in aid of plans to send French pupils to the United World Colleges.

Name Still In Print

BOSTON (AP) — Dave Cowens, who played basketball for the Boston Celtics until he retired this season, found his name in print again recently — very small print.

He was named on the state treasurer's published list of persons who are owed money from forgotten bank accounts.

"It was nice to see my name in print," said Cowens. "You have to keep visible."

Cowens apparently is owed $118 by a Boston bank and he plans to pick it up "to find out how much interest I earned."

Cowens said he remembered doing business at the Boston bank about three years ago. "Maybe the bank couldn't reach me," he said. "I moved since then."

Clapton Condition Improved

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Eric Clapton was showing improvement on Tuesday from a perforated ulcer but the British rock star remained hospitalized here in serious condition.

George Ryan, a spokesman at United Hospitals, said doctors reported that Clapton, 36, spent a "very good night" Monday and his condition was "definitely improved."

Clapton was flown to St. Paul in his private jet Saturday after suffering the perforated ulcer in a Friday night performance at Madison, Wis.

Clapton had completed eight concerts on a tour that began March 2. Fifty more concerts that were scheduled through June 12 will be canceled, said Roger Forrester, the singer's manager.

Forrester said Clapton had been under heavy sedation but is aware that he has a "major problem."

Ryan said doctors will decide in two or three days what course of treatment to undertake.

After his release from the hospital, Clapton will be "losing himself — going away with his wife for a time to recuperate for many months," Forrester said. "Eric can't possibly work again for the rest of the year."

He blamed the singer's ulcer on the "general way we live. There's a lot of bad hours and bad food and we're not health fanatics."

Former Beatle Listed In 'Who's Who'

LONDON (AP) — Paul McCartney finally has joined the ranks of the British Establishment — the ex-Beatle is listed in the 1981 edition of "Who's Who."

The 39-year-old rock music superstar, son of a Liverpool factory hand and now reputed to earn $50 million a year, gets a 41-line listing, more than many judges, politicians and other outstanding public figures.

While McCartney was given the accolade, neither of the other two surviving Beatles, George Harrison and Ringo Starr, were mentioned in the famous 2,800-page red book, whose latest edition will be published Thursday.

McCartney may be the only personality in the tome, widely regarded as the last word in social standing, to have a string of drug busts to his name — although they are discreetly omitted.

He declined comment on his elevation, but many felt it was long overdue.

It came nearly 19 years after the Beatles first became famous and 16 years after the lads from Liverpool were made Members of the Order of the British Empire by Queen Elizabeth II for "services to the nation."

A spokesman for the publishers, Adam and Charles Black, said of the rock musicians' long omission from the reference book: "Their reputations may not be altogether permanent. We were very doubtful about the Beatles as four separate people. We wanted to wait and see if they made a continued mark, which Lennon and McCartney have done."

It was not clear whether John Lennon, McCartney's songwriting partner in the Beatle days, would have made "Who's Who." He quit music for five years and had just launched a musical comeback when he was murdered outside his New York apartment last Dec. 8.

Coordinators Appointed At Tech

New area coordinators for management and for information systems and quantitative sciences have been appointed in Texas Tech University's College of Business Administration.

Dr. Carl H. Stern, dean of the college, named Dr. James G. "Jerry" Hunt management area coordinator and Dr. Paul H. Randolph coordinator for the information systems and quantitative science area, effective Sept. 1.

Hunt is nationally recognized in the management field. A faculty member of Southern Illinois University's School of Business since 1965, Hunt has received numerous scholarly awards, including election as Fellow of the Academy of Management in 1977.

With an undergraduate degree in engineering, Hunt gained practical engineering work experience before beginning doctoral work. Hunt holds a master's degree in labor and industrial relations and a doctoral degree in psychology and business, both from the University of Illinois.

Randolph, nationally recognized in statistics and operations research, is currently senior associate engineer with the Mobil Research and Development Corp., Princeton, N.J. He has a wide range of experience in business, government and academic positions.

In 1977-79 Randolph was vice president for operations research analysis and computer operations for Chase Manhattan Bank, New York City. Prior to that, Randolph was an operations research analyst for the Department of Energy, Washington, D.C.

Universities where Randolph has taught include Iowa State, New Mexico State and Purdue. He also has taught at Illinois Institute of Technology. Randolph is the author of more than 30 articles in professional journals.

He earned his bachelor's degree in mathematics and his master's and doctoral degrees in statistics, all from the University of Minnesota.

Park Art Classes Postponed

The City Parks and Recreation Department Cultural Affairs Division has postponed its spring art classes and extended registration until the classes begin next week.

Georgia Booker said the action was taken to allow for spring break in the public schools and at Texas Tech University.

Panel Approves Permanent Bus Transfer Point

By PAT GRAVES
Avalanche-Journal Staff
 The Lubbock Transit Board voted unanimously Tuesday to recommend the City Council designate Broadway and Avenue K as the permanent Citibus transfer point and acquire the former John Halsey Drug Store building as a passenger facility.

But the board stipulated the project, an ongoing source of contention between the council and the transit staff, should be pursued only if federal funds are available.

Board members expressed concern about possible funding cuts from the Reagan administration. But Transit Coordinator John Wilson, long an advocate of the Broadway and K-John Halsey alternative, said federal officials indicated to him the project should be approved.

Wilson's proposal, which the board accepted, calls for purchasing the west half of the building for $22,500 and remodeling it for an estimated $75,000. The city's share of the total cost would be about $3,000, he said.

Board Chairman Bill Dean questioned whether, in light of the uncertainty of federal capital improvement money, it is justifiable to the taxpayers to apply for another grant while one is pending for the purchase of additional buses. Board member John Owens also challenged the remodeling figure, which Wilson said could be reduced if desired.

"We want a low-maintenance, cost-efficient building, not the Taj Mahal," Wilson said.

Although he pointed out Urban Mass Transportation Administration funds will be spent somewhere, Wilson said he would support the project even if it had to be bankrolled totally by the city. "It's long overdue," Wilson added.

But when Wilson suggested at a Jan. 22 work session the council buy the vacant building, the panel balked at the idea as being too expensive.

The property is part of the estate of the late C.L. Bryan of Houston and is being handled by J.E. Murfee & Son Realtors. Bill Murfee said he was unsure how the estate would be settled but that it should be soon. The sale of the building is a good possibility, he said, but the price of $22,500 is not.

"I doubt that figure would hold now," Murfee said. "That was a year ago. We have no new figure at present."

Both Murfee and Wilson were unsure where the $22,500 estimate originated. Wilson said the transit staff probably obtained it from a member of the Bryan family last December. He added much could change during the process of applying for and approving the grant, which includes a public hearing before the council.

Wilson favors the Broadway and K location because it would incur no additional operating costs or rerouting. He and the transit staff also believe a permanent indoor facility could increase ridership and generate revenue to offset its maintenance expenses.

ATE, the firm managing Citibus, currently has no clients which operate an indoor transfer facility for its passengers, although a spokesman said several cities are considering the idea.

In a related matter, Wilson told the board he wants to ask the council to apply for the entire $600,000 federal grant, of which the transfer facility project is only a part. The grant was moved up two years to allow the proposal federal-funding consideration this year.

After much discussion, the board accepted Wilson's explanation the procedure would not mean the city would be obligating itself to spend the money, but simply making Lubbock eligible to receive it over a 10-year period.

"The money may not be available two years from now," Wilson noted.

The board also approved eight bus route changes proposed by the transit staff providing funds are available. The modifications arose out of an operational study performed a few months ago by

ATE. The proposals include service to Texas Instruments, the Lubbock State School and Farrar Estates.

Pending a public hearing, the board also plans to eliminate Route 10-Dunbar East. Wilson estimated the net cost of the changes would be between $11,000 and $13,000, but should be made up for by increased revenues.

Dean said he was satisfied with Wilson's explanation for his lack of concern over the transit budget's $24,000 revenue deficit. Wilson said it was offset by lower expenses and predicted revenues would increase before the fiscal year ends.

In other action, the board opted to wait and see what Congress will do about appropriations before acting on suggested fare increases for its demand-response handicapped van service.

Joint Chiefs Downgrading Rivalry Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff insisted Tuesday that much-publicized arguments over command of the military Rapid Deployment Force "are less than meet the eye" and that more attention should be focused on equipping the force.

Air Force Gen. David C. Jones, appearing with leaders of the individual services at a House Armed Services Committee hearing, said the force was "truly a joint operation" and that the uniform the commander wears is irrelevant.

The force is envisioned as a military unit that could move quickly to the Persian Gulf-Middle East-Indian Ocean area in the event of hostilities caused by an increasing Soviet presence.

Under questioning from Rep. Robin Beard, R-Tenn., Jones said the force headquarters, commanded by Marine Lt. Gen. P.X. Kelley, was made an adjunct of the inter-service Readiness Command, led by Army Gen. Volney Warner, because it lacked resources when it was set up last year.

Jones described Kelley and Warner as "joint generals" whose branch affiliations did not indicate that one service or the other was in charge.

"We are now looking at the evolution of the organizational structure ... and a lot of progress has been made," he said, although he noted that a decision on the command structure has taken longer than he had hoped.

The Marine Corps favored creation of a separate Indian Ocean command to include the force, while the other services would place it under the U.S. European Command in West Germany.

Jones said that under longstanding presidential directive, the European commander has the Middle East under his jurisdiction and that it is possible that in a war situation the Rapid Deployment Force commander would report to him.

But Jones contended that the command system "is working well today. The problem is less than meets the eye in the sense that there's a lot of publicity."

Man Arrested At Jail Door

Police said they didn't have to travel far Monday night to incarcerate a drunk pedestrian. The man, when first spotted, apparently was attempting to break into the Lubbock County Jail.

Jail officials were first apprised of their soon-to-be guest after an inmate yelled out that a man was attempting to force his way in. Officers said when they walked around to the south side of the facility they found the man leaning against a barred window "attempting" to smoke a cigarette.

Police said when they approached the man "he nearly fell on his face." The 66-year-old man reportedly claimed he was drunk, destitute and "temporarily unemployed."

The man was booked into the county jail on suspicion of public intoxication at 9:30 p.m.

Expansion Of Aid To El Salvador Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans an additional $63.1 million in U.S. economic aid for El Salvador this year and a total $117.2 million in U.S. military and economic aid next year, sources said Tuesday.

Reagan's $117.2 million request to Congress for the 1982 fiscal year starting Oct. 1 will include $91.2 million for economic aid and $26 million for military aid, the administration and congressional sources said.

Meanwhile, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy introduced a bill Tuesday to prohibit President Reagan from keeping U.S. military advisors in El Salvador or delivering U.S. military aid there until conditions are met.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is likely to present Reagan's new aid figures for El Salvador to the House Foreign Affairs Committee Wednesday morning and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee plans a hearing on them in the afternoon.

The $117.2 million will be a regular request for Congress' approval, the sources said, but the $63.1 million economic aid for this year will be subject only to veto by House and Senate appropriations subcommittees.

An administration source said the $63.1 million in aid this year includes $20 million in credit to businessmen to rebuild commerce, $8.9 million to create public works jobs and $5 million in slum clearance.

The source said it is too early to try to provide El Salvador with aid to rebuild battle-torn towns and city areas.

"This legislation is designed to take the road of peace, not the road of war, in El Salvador," Kennedy said. "Negotiation, not military escalation, is the only hope for a peaceful solution of this tragic conflict," he said.

But after Kennedy's announcement two weeks ago that he and Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., planned to introduce the bill, they picked up only two additional co-sponsors.

They were Sens. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., and Carl Levin, D-Mich.

The bill, if approved by Congress and signed by Reagan, would require the president to withdraw 54 military advisors from El Salvador and deliver no more military aid unless the conditions were met.

Reagan sent 20 advisors to raise the total to 54 and announced he plans to supply an additional $25 million in aid.

To meet the conditions in the Kennedy bill, Reagan would have to report, and Congress would have to agree, that:

- The United States is actively encouraging international efforts to mediate a peace settlement in El Salvador.

- El Salvador's government had requested the specific U.S. aid in writing.

- There is clear evidence of a thorough investigation by El Salvador to find and prosecute the murders of four church workers and other Americans.

- U.S. prosecution of alleged financing from El Salvadorans in Miami for terrorism in El Salvador.

- El Salvadoran civilians have a substantial role in that country's government.

After securing those conditions, Reagan still could not send advisors and aid to El Salvador unless Congress approved a resolution within 30 days agreeing with the president's report.

"Successive steps are being taken to escalate U.S. military involvement, without specifying clear limits," Kennedy said.

In another development, Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., accused President Reagan on Tuesday of "gunboat-showboat diplomacy in El Salvador" in escalating U.S. involvement there.

Eagleton said he believes Reagan's motive in sending U.S. military aid and advisors to El Salvador is to "score a knockout with attendant image enhancement in his first foreign initiative."

"I believe he has seized upon El Salvador as his opportunity," Eagleton said in a Senate speech.

Noting administration statements that Reagan is aiding El Salvador under the Monroe Doctrine, Eagleton asserted that Reagan is expanding on Teddy Roosevelt's use of gunboat diplomacy under the doctrine.

"He adds his own Showboat Diplomacy to Teddy Roosevelt's Gunboat Diplomacy," Eagleton said, referring to it later as "Gunboat-Showboat Diplomacy."

Kennedy and Eagleton both said Reagan's military policies in El Salvador should be subject to Congress' approval under the War Powers Act.

"The War Powers Act was designed to force a major debate before American forces could be placed in a situation of hostilities in the absence of a declaration of war," Kennedy said.

Senator Eyes Iraqi Nuke Weapon Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston said Tuesday that Iraq has launched a crash program that experts say is clearly intended to develop a nuclear weapons capability.

Cranston told the Senate "there is no evidence that actual bomb design has been done in Iraq."

But he said more than one authoritative Reagan administration official has told him "a weapons capability is clearly the option the Iraqis are pursuing."

"According to these authoritative assessments," he said, "the Iraqis are embarked on a Manhattan Project-type approach — they are pursuing all avenues which could provide them with a capability to produce nuclear explosives."

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., told reporters "we have been concerned about manifestations in Iraq and a number of other countries" that could be signs of nuclear weapons development.

"We're very sensitive to it and we're watching it very, very carefully," Haig said.

Cranston also told the Senate that Pakistan "will most likely have the capability and the materials for fabricating a number of nuclear weapons by the end of 1982."

Cranston quoted the administration officials as saying Iraq is clearly developing a nuclear weapons option because that country has no program for non-military nuclear power development.

"The Iraqi nuclear program is continuing its determined drive towards attainment of the capability to produce nuclear weapons through the use of sensitive French and Italian technology, highly-enriched uranium fuel from France, and more than one hundred technicians from each of these nations," Cranston said.

He said France has provided technical assistance on "key aspects" of recycling nuclear fuel. He said Italy supplied three "hot cells" that can be used to practice techniques for extracting weapons-grade plutonium from uranium.

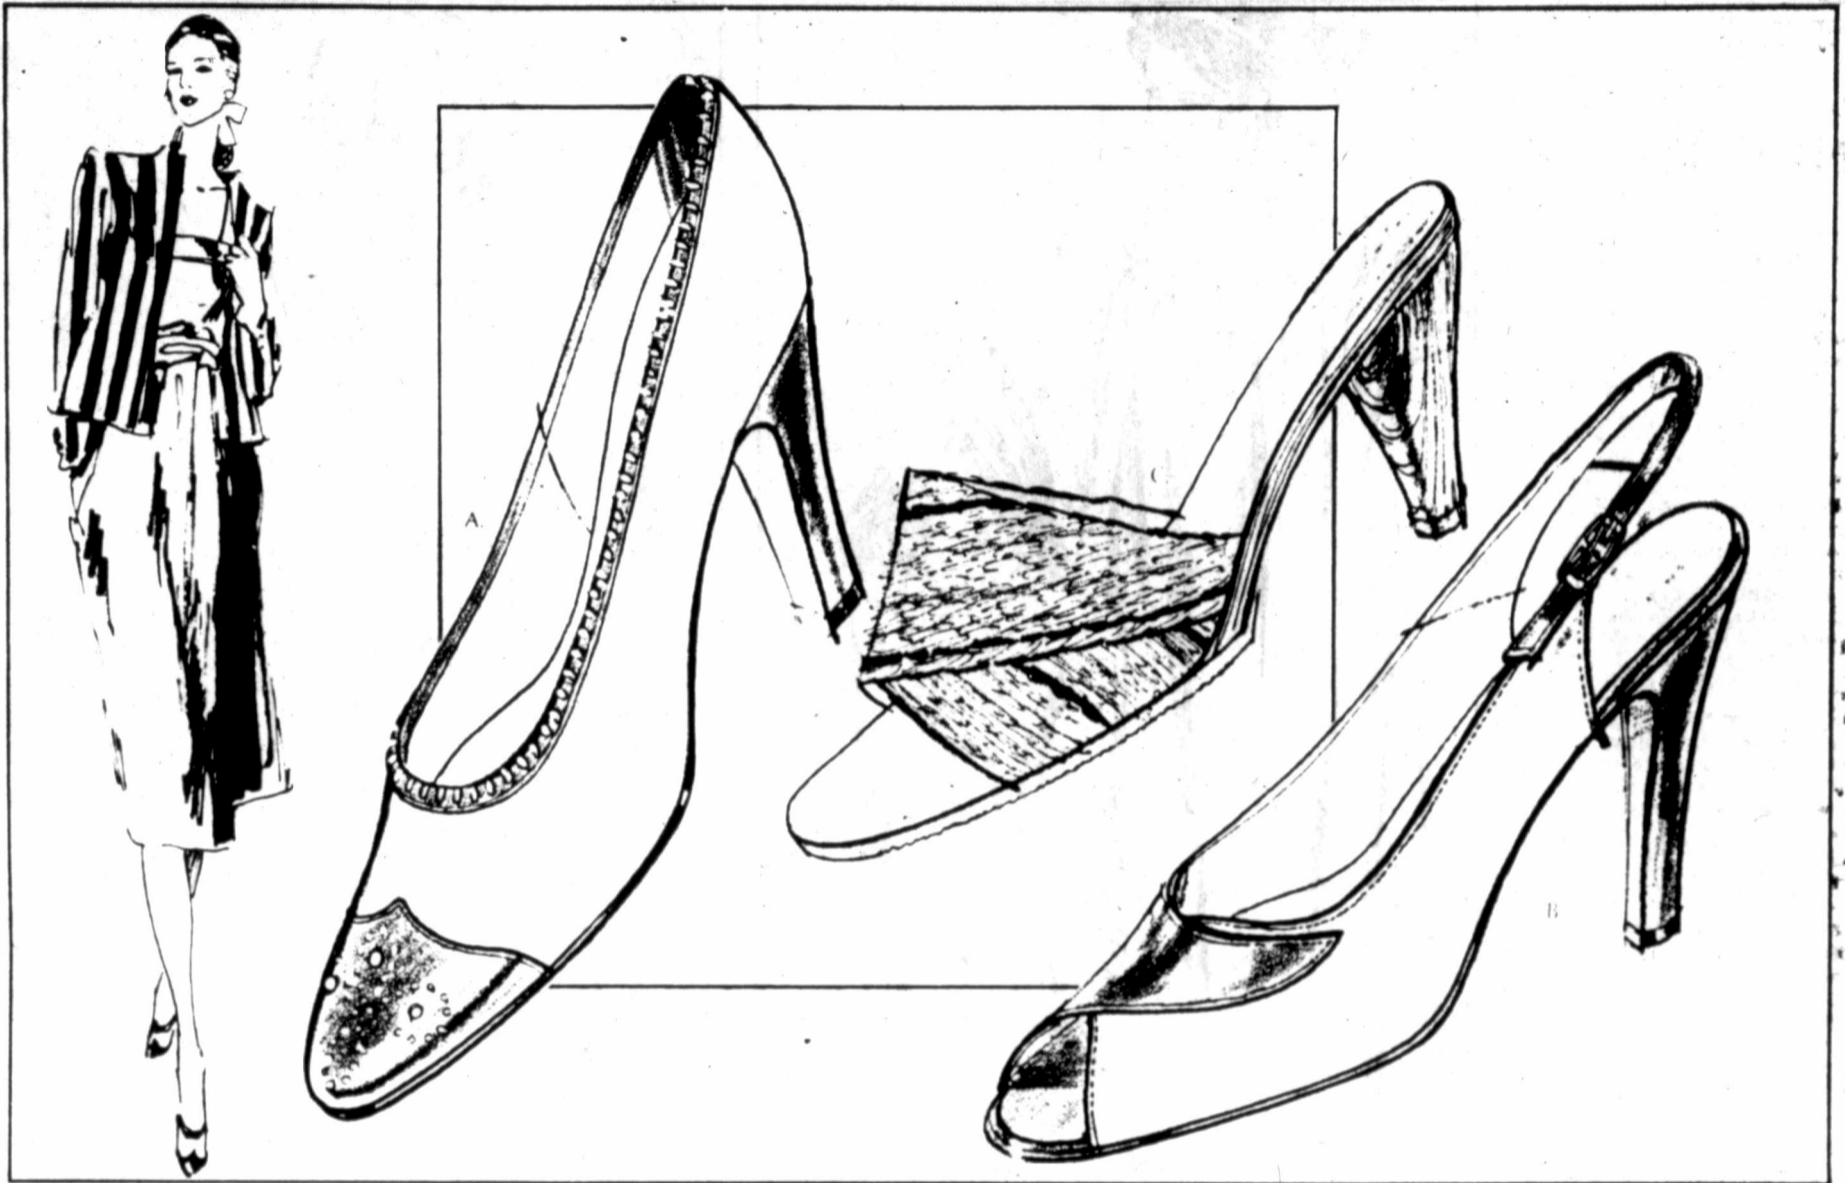

"Imports of highly enriched uranium from France will give Iraq at least the theoretical possibility of fabricating a single nuclear weapon this year," Cranston said. But he said "it will likely be several years before Iraq attains the capability to produce materials suitable for production of more nuclear weapons."

Cranston accused Iraq of using "the oil weapon to blackmail" countries into assisting its nuclear program.

Interest Rates Key To Borrowing Economics

By STEPHEN P. ROSENFELD
NEW YORK (AP) — There's more to watch than the prime lending rate when trying to gauge the cost of borrowing or the return on an investment.

Although the prime lending rate of major money-center banks is the most visible interest rate in the economy, there are many other rates as well, and economists are divided on their relative importance.

Here are some questions and answers about interest rates:

Q: Why are interest rates important?
A: Interest rates represent the cost of borrowing money or the return available to a saver or an investor.

When interest rates gyrate near record levels, as happened twice last year, investors are discouraged from making long-term commitments with their money and demand a greater return. This raises the cost of borrowing for business and government and leads to higher financing charges for consumer purchases.

When interest rates are higher on investments in money market mutual funds than are available from traditional bank accounts, as has been the case, funds flow out of banks and savings institutions.

Q: What is the prime lending rate?
A: The prime rate is the interest a bank charges its best-risk corporate customers for a business loan. Many smaller businesses pay one or two percentage points more for their loans.

Maury Harris, a money market economist for the investment firm of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis Inc., says he considers the prime rate to be the most important short-term interest rate to watch for an indication on the costs of business borrowing and the direction of interest rates on consumer loans.

Interest charges on consumer loans are often regulated by state laws, but changes in those rates usually follow movement of the prime rate.

John O. Wilson, director of economic policy research for the Bank of America, says that the prime rate is no longer a key indicator of trends in interest rates. Wilson said he judges the direction of interest rates by watching for a pattern among a broad range of rates, including the federal funds rate and interest on commercial paper.

Q: What are federal funds?
A: Federal funds are overnight loans of $1 million or more between banks, an important source of funds for financial institutions. Until October 1979, the Federal Reserve Board tried to control the nation's money supply in its fight against inflation by keeping a tight rein on the federal funds rate. But it now tries to control bank reserves, and as a result the federal funds rate has been subject to wide fluctuations.

Since reaching a record 20.06 percent average in the first week of this year, federal funds have dropped sharply to about 14.25 percent. In the same period, the prime lending rate has dropped from a record 21.5 percent to 17.5 percent.

Q: What is commercial paper?
A: Commercial paper is high-grade, short-term corporate IOUs, mostly traded among corporations. The interest on commercial paper currently ranges between 12.5 percent and 14.25 percent, well below the cost of borrowing from a bank at a prime rate.

One of the reasons banks have been lowering their prime rates is to regain the share of the loan market lost to commercial paper, according to Edward Yardeni, an economist with the investment house of E. F. Hutton & Co. Inc.

Q: What other short-term interest rates are important indicators of economic trends?

A: Broker loan rates, the yields on Treasury bills and interest on certificates of deposit all determine the cost of funds to banks and investors.

The broker loan rate is the interest on a bank loan in which stocks are pledged as collateral. A brokerage house may offer such loans to clients buying stock on margin by adding up to 2.5 percentage points to the broker loan rate. Some economists, including Harris, view changes in the broker loan rate as a leading indicator for changes in the prime lending rate.

The Treasury Department auctions three-month and six-month Treasury bills each week to help finance the government's deficits. There is daily trading in these gilt-edge securities, and the market transactions indicate investor perceptions of inflationary trends.

The maximum interest rate that banks and thrift institutions may pay on popular six-month money-market certificates, sold in minimum denominations of $10,000, is tied to the yield on six-month Treasury bills.

At Monday's auction, the average yield on a six-month Treasury bill fell sharply, meaning financial institutions will be able to pay less to raise funds through the sale of money-market certificates beginning Thursday.

Certificates of deposit are sold by banks in minimum denominations of $100,000 and represent an important source of funds.

Q: What interest rates are watched to judge trends in long-term borrowing costs, such as mortgages?

A: Many economists, including Harris and Wilson, say they watch the yields on long-term bonds issued by utilities with double-A credit ratings, the second-highest investment grade. In addition, the yields on 30-year Treasury bonds provide indications of long-term borrowing costs for corporations.

In 1965, Dr. Albert Schweitzer died at the hospital he had founded in Lambaréne, Gabon.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q: Some stock certificates were stolen from our home. We reported the theft to the police and wrote to the company. We do not have the certificate numbers but we do have the confirmation slip from the broker when we purchased the stock.

We would like to find out if the stolen stock was sold and, if so, by whom, where and when. Is there anyone who can help us?

A: You can get replacement certificates for the ones that were stolen. There will be some red tape and expense involved. But you should move fast, to protect yourself.

First, notify the transfer agent for that stock. If you don't know the name and address of the transfer agent — usually a big bank — the company can give you that information.

Then, you'll have to sign an affidavit that the certificates were stolen and you will have to post a lost security bond. These days, bonds of that type cost about 3 percent of the value of the lost stock. So, if the stolen stock has a market value of $1,000, you will pay approximately $30 for the bond.

The bond protects the company, in case the certificates show up in the hands of a legitimate owner at some future date.

Assuming that the certificates have not been sold and presented to the transfer agent to have ownership transferred, replacement certificates will be issued to you.

If the stolen certificates have been presented for transfer, you can put the law enforcement authorities on the trail of the person who sold them.

The confirmation slip from the broker proves you bought the stock. But, if the stock has been sold, you may have a tough time proving that you didn't sell it to the person who presented it for transfer.

So, act fast on the affidavit and lost security bond. And, in the future, keep your stock certificates in a safe deposit box.

Q: Because I am a woman, 35, with no plans to marry in the near future, I believe I should be thinking of the future and retirement. I have only two $1,000 savings certificates and, at work, we have a profit-sharing plan.

I would like to build an investment portfolio. Can you advise me where to start? I have a hard time saving large sums of money. But, if I can invest through a weekly or monthly program, I think I'll do just fine?

A: Your saving habits — or lack thereof — are similar to that of most people. It's to your credit that you face up to that fact and want to do something about it.

Because brokers' commissions on small purchases are high, you'll have to rule out buying individual stocks. A mutual fund — which uses the money you and all other shareholders put into it to buy many different stocks — would be a good choice for you.

Most mutual funds have "accumulation plans," through which you can invest small amounts of money on a steady basis. But don't sign up for a mutual fund "contractual plan," calling for monthly payments over a long period of time, such as 10 years. Contractual plans have big "front-end load" commission charges.

Pick a "no-load" fund, on which there is no commission charge. You can get information on them in the financial reference section of any big public library or by writing the No-Load Mutual Fund Association, Valley Forge, Pa. 19481.

Since you're what my father always referred to as "an unclaimed treasure," my recommendation is to choose a "growth" mutual fund — one that invests in stocks that hopefully will increase in value.

A steady investment program in a growth fund should rise in value over the years and make your eventual retirement much more comfortable.

Miami 'Whodunit' Killings Increase Threefold

MIAMI (AP) — Police cars with flashing lights block the road. Officers stretch rope from a Miami area agency to the warehouse across the street to keep away the curious.

At 3 a.m., there isn't much of a crowd.

Vasquez, 23, the overnight attendant at Fliteways Rent-A-Car, was shot once in the chest. He died at Jackson Memorial Hospital.

"Another typical Miami murder — nobody saw anything," Detective John Parmenter mutters as he wipes sleep from his eyes and follows the trail of blood from the office door to the street, where Vasquez collapsed. "We'll probably never find out who did it."

"Whodunit" killings, random deaths like Vasquez in which there are few clues and no apparent suspects, have jumped from about 25 percent of all local murders five years ago to as many as 75 percent today, according to Capt. Marshall Frank, chief of the Dade County police homicide force. Such murders require more detective work. With the Miami area's murder rate up 90 percent in the last two years, that isn't always possible — and trying to keep pace puts pressure on a detective squad already strained.

"Way back when most homicides were the domestic types, you could handle them in three to four hours," says Detective John LeClaire. "Anybody can do that — you have a willing subject and clear evidence."

Now, he adds, the typical Miami murder is a shootout that takes days of tracking down witnesses, friends of the victims and background.

A record 580 people were slain in Dade County last year, up from 363 in 1979, and the number of homicides so far this year is running well ahead of the 1980 pace. Vasquez is just one more murder victim, but his death gets the careful attention of a squad of detectives, some roused from bed for an early start and others who have been working since early afternoon.

A crime lab technician busily measures, sketches and photographs the scene and dusts for fingerprints as homicide Lt. Raul Diaz examines the empty cash drawer in the Fliteways office.

Detectives interview the agency's owner and all witnesses, view the body at the medical examiner's office and search the rental-car agency.

"There's not much physical evidence," Diaz says, shaking his head. "Even if we get some good prints, if there're no prints on file to compare them with, we've got no subject."

A tourist buying gasoline next to Fliteways tells detectives he saw three Hispanic men race away from the murder scene in a blue car. They were going too fast to catch the license number and he couldn't see their faces.

The job pressures — internal and external — eventually take their toll. Last year, an exhausted detective ran off the road, wrecking his car and injuring himself, on the way home after a long day.

Another detective, already suffering from hypertension, handled two murders in one night, went home, collapsed and required major surgery. A few years ago, a detective with another area police department killed himself.

"Homicide detectives on the average are one of the last groups to seek professional help," Dr. Parke Fitzhugh, the department psychiatrist, says. "They're under a great deal of stress, but generally they've only gotten to me when they've been referred and they're at a crisis."

Some detectives drink too much or develop stress-related health problems such as ulcers. Many are divorced. Most are chain smokers. They don't eat right or get enough sleep. Some get short-tempered.

"You can see the strain. But they don't complain as much as one might imagine. They feel what they're doing is important — they're not dropping like flies," says Frank.

"Look at the people's faces," Diaz says. "They've all got bags under their eyes — you know who the homicide investigators are."

All of them want to do a good job and solve their cases — and they often can't, he says.

"They'll get a case today that looks really hot," Diaz says. "But the next day, they'll have another one they have to chase. The next day, there's another."

"The detective gets frustrated and demoralized — he has leads on his own cases that he's not able to follow."

Compounding the strain is the public pressure on a detective to solve society's most violent crimes. Within hours, an investigator may view death at its worst, deal with some of the most hardened criminals and then carefully break the news to the family of a victim.

"Sometimes you have to catch yourself when you're dealing with nice people — you tend to become cynical," LeClaire says. "But if it ever got to the point that it didn't bother me to have to tell someone their loved-one is dead, then I know it's time for me to get out."

Captain Faces Lesser Charge In Sinking

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Coast Guard on Tuesday reduced the charge against the skipper of the cutter Blackthorn, which sank in Tampa Bay last year in the Coast Guard's worst peacetime disaster and claimed the lives of 23 crewmen.

Instead of a court-martial on a serious charge of hazarding a vessel, Lt. Cmdr. George Sepel now faces a lesser hearing known as an admiral's mast on a charge of dereliction of duty. The lesser charge does not allege that Sepel's actions caused the collision.

Rear Adm. Paul A. Yost, commandant of the Eighth District at New Orleans, ordered the change.

The Blackthorn, a 180-foot cutter with a crew of 50, was leaving Tampa for its home port at Galveston, on the night of Jan. 28, 1980, when it collided with the incoming Capicorn, 605 feet long and loaded with oil. The collision caused little damage to the bigger, heavier tanker.

A marine board investigation had said there was evidence that routine passing rules for ships were not followed by Sepel, Lt. j.g. James R. Ryan, who was the cutter's officer of the deck at the time, the captain of the tanker, George P. McShea Jr., and bay pilot, Harry E. Knight.

In a report issued in Washington, the National Transportation Safety Board said the collision was due to Sepel's failure to supervise the relatively inexperienced Ryan, who was in charge of directing the ship's movements out of the Tampa port.

The board said testimony at a hearing "dramatically illustrated that the conning (control while under way) of the Blackthorn had been left to a novice."

Originally, Adm. Yost ordered a court-martial for Sepel and an admiral's mast hearing for Ryan, Knight and McShea were scheduled for separate civilian proceedings.

But the admiral said further study showed there was not enough evidence to back up the charge that Sepel put the ship at hazard needlessly.

Yost said the charge therefore was reduced to "dereliction of duty in the performance as commanding officer on the night of the collision."

Maximum punishment that may be dealt under an admiral's mast is an admonition or reprimand, arrest in quarters for up to 30 days, restriction to station for up to 60 days and forfeiture of a month's pay.

Yost said the hearing will be held this week. No exact date was specified.

Air Force Selects Colorado Area For Space Center

COLORADO SPRINGS (AP) — The U.S. Air Force has designated Peterson Air Force Base east here as the home for a proposed $400 million control center for all American spacecraft, including the space shuttle and military satellites.

The choice of a site for the proposed Consolidated Space Operations Center was prompted by Peterson's proximity to the North American Aerospace Defense Command, Air Force Secretary Verne Orr said in a letter Monday to Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Orr said the Space Operations Center, to begin operations in mid-1985, would be able to share personnel and services with NORAD, the computerized defense systems control center located under Cheyenne Mountain west of Colorado Springs.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M. and other New Mexico officials have been urging the Air Force to build the center near Kirtland Air Force Base in New Mexico, and a third site under consideration by the Air Force was Malmstrom AFB near Great Falls, Mont.

"All three locations meet the basic geographical, environmental, support and resource siting criteria," Orr said.

"However, Peterson Air Force Base was selected because of its unique operational advantages which accrue from proximity to related activities."

Those activities, he said, include aerospace data facility at Buckley Air Guard Base in Denver and the facilities and personnel at the U.S. Air Force Academy, which is near Colorado Springs.

Vickie Daniel Alleges Abusive Acts By Husband

LIBERTY (AP) — Vickie Daniel told a jury Tuesday she was afraid to leave her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., alone with their 3-year-old son because she had seen him sexually fondle the boy.

Mrs. Daniel, charged with fatally shooting her husband Jan. 19, testified at

New Routes By Delta Irk Braniff

DALLAS (AP) — Delta Air Lines plans to expand service at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport has drawn criticism from the chairman of Braniff International, who claims Delta and American Airlines are trying to run Braniff out of business.

Delta announced four new destinations and expanded service to four other "feeder" cities Monday — a move that will increase competition with already established routes held by Braniff and American. Delta officials said more routes would be announced in June.

American already has announced new D-FW service beginning in June, with plans to increase its activities there by 41 percent by adding 11 new destinations.

"They are shifting their resources here to get Braniff while it's down," said John J. Casey, chairman of the financially troubled airline. "It's obviously an aggressive move to seize Braniff traffic."

But Joe A. Cooper, Delta's senior vice president of marketing, said the airline is "not trying to necessarily run anyone out of business. We just want to add the right routes to Delta's system at the right time."

Delta's new routes, effective April 28, include twice daily non-stop service between D-FW and Fort Lauderdale and Tampa and one daily non-stop to Tulsa and Columbia, S.C.

At the same time, Delta will increase the frequency of its present service between D-FW and Baton Rouge and Monroe, La., and of its two new routes to Houston and San Antonio.

The airline wants to set up a feeder system at the airport similar to its highly profitable hub at Atlanta, where Delta is based.

Delta entered the competitive D-FW-New York market last fall.

"We've got a strong system already in Dallas, and we are building an even stronger one," Cooper said. "We will be announcing additional service there in June, but all the plans haven't been finalized."

Three of Delta's new destinations will compete directly with Braniff; two will compete with American.

For their 1980 fiscal years, Delta had a net income of $93 million, American lost $76 million and Braniff lost $128 million.

the second day of a child custody trial. Her sister-in-law, Jean Daniel Murph, is trying to gain custody of 3-year-old Franklin Baldwin Daniel and 1-year-old Marion Price Daniel IV.

"I didn't like Price to take Franklin because of something I learned he was doing," she said upon questioning by Zeke Zbrank, attorney for Mrs. Murph. "He would be lying in bed and on several occasions Price would go in and put his hands down his drawers."

Asked by Zbrank why she did not tell authorities, she said, "I was alarmed. I filed for divorce to get away from it all."

She said she tried her best the past year to prevent Daniel from taking the boy with him "but sometimes he would get up early in the morning, dress him and then take off."

Her husband's relationship with their oldest son came up after Zbrank asked Mrs. Daniel if she resented the fact that Franklin was taking away her husband's affections.

When Zbrank asked her to describe Daniel as a father, she answered, "He would ignore them, often hurt them; he would let the baby fall off the bed. He never held them when they were babies. He never had anything to do with them when they were little, never changed their diapers."

If he spent time with them, it was on the weekends, she testified.

During testimony Monday, Mrs. Daniel said there were a couple of times when Price would call Jonathon, her 10-year-old son by a previous marriage, over to sit by him and would slip a hand down so the child would sit on it.

"That made me wonder," she said, so she tape-recorded one incident "that put it all to rest."

The tape was made to prove what he was doing, she said, in case he ever tried to take the children from her. She also said she wanted her family to know how he was — "so they would understand and not let him see them (the children)."

But she said she never played the tape for Daniel's family. Daniel's father, Price Daniel Sr., is a former attorney general, governor and senator of Texas.

The couple's rocky four-year marriage, the second for both, ended the night of Jan. 19 at their fashionable home when Mrs. Daniel shot her 39-year-old husband with a .22-caliber rifle. She is charged with murder in the case, which is expected to come to trial this spring.

Mrs. Daniel waived her Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination.

Her testimony Monday and today offered a vivid, and at times hysterical, description of what she claims happened the night of the slaying.

After telling a story of mental and physical abuse by her husband, Mrs. Daniel testified Monday that during a confrontation the night of the slaying she fired a warning shot at him but did not recall loading and firing a second shot which proved fatal.

Earlier Tuesday Zbrank introduced several checks totaling $13,000 written by Daniel to his wife between 1978 and his death. She said the money was to pay for health care, work done around the house and other bills.

Under examination by her lawyer, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, Mrs. Daniel told how she received $7,000 as part of a divorce settlement from her first husband, Larry Moore.

Daniel, her divorce lawyer, got $1,000, with most of the remainder going for bills or into savings account for her two children.

But she said Daniel was angry because "he wanted all of it, but I wouldn't give it to him. He felt like it was his because I was his wife."

Haynes also brought up the amount of money Daniel spent on liquor. Mrs. Daniel said Monday at one point her husband "was drunk most of the time."

She told the court Tuesday she purchased $326 worth of liquor in Beaumont for her husband and charged it to his account. The liquor was kept in the bar at the house. She said Daniel would drink when friends or business partners came. Every two or three months, that amount of liquor would be purchased, she said.

CAREERS

By JOYCE LAIN KENNEDY

Dear Joyce: I am interested in finding employment in the field of air conditioning, refrigeration and heating. I have attended school for a full year and have secured a certificate of completion. Now, where can I find a job?

—M.M., Oklawaha, Ill.

Air-conditioning, refrigeration and heating mechanics — also called service technicians — are hired primarily by contractors who do this work.

Food store chains, school systems, manufacturers and other organizations that operate large air-conditioning, refrigeration or heating systems also are potential employers. Other options depend on your particular area of expertise. Fuel oil dealers hire most oil burner mechanics; gas utility companies hire gas burner mechanics who, in addition to doing installation and maintenance work, repair cooking stoves, clothes dryers, hot water heaters and outdoor lights and grills.

Mechanics in these areas combine skills of plumbers, electricians and others. They must know how to install, maintain and repair such systems and equipment using a variety of tools. Mechanics do considerable driving and work in homes, office buildings and factories. Nationwide, the hourly pay is approximately $10 to $15.

It is still possible to begin as a helper assisting seasoned mechanics for four or five years. More common now — and advised by Hank Michalski of the Refrigeration Service Engineers Society — is getting a solid educational foundation at a private vocational school or community college before expecting an employer to add on-job training. Michalski says the job market is promising for well-trained people.

Still another entry path is the formal apprenticeship option.

Pluses in this field of work for the qualified technician include being able to find employment almost anywhere in the country. Hazards include electrical shock, torch burns, muscle strains and other injuries from heavy equipment.

Michalski predicts the energy crisis will not reduce the need for mechanics but may change the thrust of or even increase their work. Many homes are likely to switch from oil to gas and many refrigeration systems will be adapted for heat reclaiming devices and other modifications to save energy. This could create a booming business for those willing to update and adapt their skills.

READER SERVICE: If you would like a four-page pamphlet on becoming a refrigeration, heating and air-conditioning service technician, send a stamped, self-addressed long white envelope to Joyce Lain Kennedy at this newspaper. Ask for "RH&A Technician." The offer ends May 1, 1981.

Chinese Toddlers Learn Life's Requirements Early

PEKING (AP) — In kindergartens across this nation of a billion people, China's youngest citizens are the model toddlers of a society that rewards discipline above all. But some parents say the price of such youthful good behavior is stifled creativity.

For 9 million children in state-run kindergartens, the powerful and primary lesson is: Don't be an individual, be a team player — there is safety in numbers.

The message is basic and clear. In vain a 4-year-old girl tries to pull up

Swiss Retract Case Against FBI Agent

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Swiss authorities, saying it was a misunderstanding, cleared an FBI agent on Tuesday of allegations that he improperly interrogated a terrorist sympathizer while she was awaiting trial.

Leonard Ralston — who also holds the post of legal attache at the American Embassy — was the subject of a much-publicized complaint filed in December with federal authorities by Geneva prosecutor Raymond Foex.

Foex asserted that Ralston violated Swiss law prohibiting "unauthorized activities on behalf of a foreign country" in visiting Suzy K. Mahseredjian, a Syrian-born American, during her pretrial detention in Geneva.

She was being held on charges of complicity in illegal possession of explosives and of extorting 10,000 French francs from a Geneva businessman for the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia.

The group has claimed responsibility for about 140 criminal attacks, notably assassinations and bombings, in major cities around the world.

Ms. Mahseredjian, 25, was acquitted in January of the explosives count but convicted of extortion, given an 18-month suspended sentence by a Geneva court and expelled from Switzerland.

Federal authorities said Tuesday there was no cause for legal action against Ralston.

"The whole thing was based on something of a misunderstanding," said Ulrich Krebs, a spokesman for the federal Department of Justice and Police. Krebs said federal permission for Ralston to visit Ms. Mahseredjian had been relayed by telex to Geneva authorities "but, somehow, the message didn't get to the right examining magistrate."

Krebs also said, "Ralston did not offend any laws by doing what he did."

U.S. Embassy spokesman Peter Reuss said Tuesday, "We wouldn't have a comment on Swiss action one way or another. We commented back then that all the formalities had been followed. Our noses were clean."

HEARTLINE: My wife and I will soon be retiring to either Arizona or Florida. My brother sent me an old clipping from one of your articles about mobile homes, but my wife washed it in my shirt pocket. Can you give me some information on mobile homes, advantages and disadvantages and things like that? W.R.

ANSWER

ADVANTAGES

- Mobile homes are mobile, so you don't have to go through the rigors of selling and buying whenever you choose to move.
- Mobile home living is easier to finance and less expensive than houses with lots.
- Mobile homes usually cost much less to heat and cool than houses.
- Used mobile homes are rising in resale value much more than they did years ago.
- There is less crime in a well-lit mobile home park in a good neighborhood than in a good neighborhood of houses.

DISADVANTAGES

- Moving a mobile home can cause structural damage if not handled properly.
 - Moving a mobile home is expensive.
 - Living in a mobile home can be more dangerous than a house (especially one with a basement) in severe weather.
 - There is usually less closet and storage space in a mobile home.
 - If you are a pet owner, many mobile home parks have limited yard space and restrictions against animals.
- When buying a mobile home
1. If you intend to use your furniture make sure you study the floor plans.
 2. Are there pop out windows and a smoke detector in case of fire?
 3. Are the floors, walls and moldings even?
 4. Are the walls sturdy yet springy when you push against the?
- Remember mobile home walls need a certain amount of "give" or else they will break when moved.
5. Are there adequate outlets for electricity? Is the wiring copper?
 6. Are windows and doors well caulked for insulation? Are there adequate seals around vents or stacks in the roof?
 7. Are there enough axles and frame supports to insure sturdiness while sitting or moving?
 8. Are there proper instructions for tying down the mobile home unit?
 9. Are ties and outside skirts included in the price of the home?

a monumental turnip in a kindergarten morality play. "I can't do it alone," she wails in defeat. "It's too big for one person." Her friends come to the rescue and together the children conquer the turnip.

The moral: You can't do it alone.

In another ideology skit little girls don rabbit suits and build a house. One independent rabbit refuses to work and wants to visit a comrade. The wrong-headed bunny is re-educated and saved and happily labors with her friends.

The moral: Don't stray from the group.

In their first brush with discipline, 3- and 4-year-olds are placed on a bench and a tantalizing wind-up toy dog struts before them. Inevitably one child wriggles from his seat and makes for the toy. Inevitably — and very gently — he is picked up, put back on the bench and told to stay put.

The moral: Know your place. Visitors to China often remark on the well-behaved children who applaud on cue for visitors and march smartly in rows. Seldom does one see a baby cry.

Older children sit upright in class, hands clasped. They are the youth and future of a society that requires discipline. Fundamental dissent is forbidden, orders must be obeyed.

The discipline is not necessarily harsh. In state-run kindergartens spanking is forbidden. The principal of a model school says, "we never criticize or bully because it harms their self-respect... Although they are small, we must respect and never mock them."

More than 17 million babies are born in China each year and about 100 million Chinese are under the age of 6. China has 165,000 kindergartens with 9 million children aged 3-6, plus makeshift schools in rural areas.

Typically, parents pay 13 to 16 yuan a month ($9.75 to $12) for day or boarding school. Children fortunate enough to attend receive basic education, recreation, meals and moral values.

Some Chinese intellectuals say privately that when their children return from state-run kindergartens, they are docile and subdued.

Zhao Shu Yun, the principal of Peking's model Fruit Market Kindergarten, acknowledges there is a tradeoff between control and creativity. "We want both creative, lively independent children and disciplined, well-behaved children," she said in a recent interview.

Madame Zhao said the school doesn't want to impose discipline at the expense of creativity. "We try to reason things out and help children conquer their shortcomings of unruliness and independence," she said. "But they first must overcome their shortcomings before we can bring their creativity into play."

The Fruit Market Kindergarten has 271 children aged 3-6. It has 20 teachers, most of whom attended special teaching courses, and 27 staff members.

The first requirement for a good teacher, Madame Zhao said "is to deeply love the children and establish friendly feelings so when they are too independent and mischievous we can reason with them."

Praise, not criticism, is the best way to teach and discipline children, she said.

Physical punishment, she said, is strictly forbidden, and so is public disgrace. When a child misbehaves he is to be taken aside and told to care for others and not be disruptive. Never he is made to stand in a corner or singled out as a bad example.

The supreme importance of the group is instilled each day in every child. Individual competition is not encouraged. Individuals seldom are rewarded, except with praise and red paper flowers for team-player behavior.

Entire classes, however, frequently are rewarded with banners and flowers for good behavior. But one person, everyone knows, can spoil the group's chance for a prize.

"We cultivate the collective sense," Madame Zhao said. "By showing that if one individual does not do well, the whole class suffers the whole group is affected."

Scientist Says Evolution Theory 'Beyond Dispute'

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Science is falling prey to "the cultists, the misfits and the fools" because scientists have failed to explain and defend their profession, a Nobel laureate charges.

"We have failed to act vigorously in defense of scientific truths," Dr. Arthur Kornberg said Monday. "We have shrugged off rather than rejected forcefully the cultists, the misfits and the fools who erode science."

He said it was sad that "society, by ig-

Junkyard Man Sees Visions Of Future

HURRICANE, W.Va. (AP) — Kenny Davis spends his days surrounded by twisted, rusting idols that once were worshiped, petted and pampered but now lie abandoned on a wooded hillside patrolled by a flock of chickens.

To put it plainly, Davis runs an auto junkyard.

But Davis, a wiry man with oil-stained hands and a greasy grin, sees no eyesore when he surveys his immobilized fleet. He sees the wave of the future.

"A few years ago people would just get rid of their old cars and buy a new one, but not anymore," he said, watching a bedraggled hen scratch beneath a 1950s vintage bus he had towed in with his wrecker a few months earlier.

"No sir. Not anymore. From now on, I think, people will be hunting for parts so they can keep their old cars running for as long as possible."

And when the people arrive, in search of a thingamajig for an old Hupmobile, Kenny Davis will be ready for them.

"I used to sell most of my stuff for scrap," he said, "but the money's going to be in parts from now on. I've begun stripping my cars and cataloging the parts."

Davis, who estimates he has some 500 vehicles scattered over two hillsides that border his rural Putnam County home, says a day doesn't go without somebody calling in search of parts.

"I get 'em from all over the country. Ripley, Point Pleasant, from over in Ohio, you name it and I get calls from there."

"Say you're looking for a hood for a 1970 Impala," he added, warming to his subject. "Well, there's a lot of those cars still on the road these days but the dealers quit carrying parts for them after five years. So where are you going to go if you need the parts? You're going to some salvage yard, that's where."

He says that some of the bigger yards have as many as 5,000 vehicles and that the price and competition for wrecked and abandoned cars and trucks is getting steeper and stiffer every day.

"When I first started out in this business 10 years ago, you could get an old car for $5," he said. "Now, they might cost as much as $40."

Asked how he happened to be in the business, Davis sighed.

"You could write a book about it," he said. "I used to do electrical work for contractors. I was working up in New York about 10 years ago and making good money but it cost me so much to live that I couldn't send home more than $100 a week. Then, too, I couldn't come home on weekends very often because it was too far."

"So, I came back one day and told my wife I was going to stay home and go into business for myself. I had five old cars around the house here, to start with. I went out and bought an old GMC truck and started hauling in cars from everywhere."

He slowly built up his inventory. A wrecked Dodge here, an abandoned Chevy there. A couple of years ago, he expanded.

"I got a permit to operate a wrecker service," he said. "I've reached the point now where I can make a decent living. It's hard work and I haven't made the living some lawyer might make, but I've raised my five kids with it."

"I've hauled cars in here from everywhere," the younger Davis said. "I even got a call from a guy one day who had bought an old T-bird at Charleston and it had broken down on him before he got any farther than Hurricane. I remember him because I gave him a few bucks for the car and the last time I saw him he was hitch-hiking down the road."

His father grinned. "Yes, you can make a living in this business," he said. "But, you've got to know parts. You've got to know what fits what and you've got to know what makes an automobile tick."

He paused and listened as a big red rooster atop a battered 1973 Ford began crowing loudly.

As the rooster declared his supremacy, a cold wind suddenly sprang up, bringing a furious flurry of thick snowflakes. And slowly, as Davis watched, the driving snow began softening the battered outlines of the dreams of the past and the wave of the future.

Pair Share Poetry, But Not Politics

RENO, NEV. (AP) — Reno lawyer Thomas A. Cooke figured he was being set up for a St. Patrick's Day joke.

Cooke's phone rang Monday and the fellow on the line claimed to be President Reagan.

But after sharing a verse of Robert W. Service's "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" with the party on the other end, Cooke was convinced he was talking with the genuine article.

It all started when Cooke, an outspoken Democrat, wrote a tongue-in-cheek note to Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., that began, "I don't usually correspond with Republican office holders..."

norance, is as captive to creationists, astrologers, evangelists, food faddists and all kinds of gurus as were our ancestors (held captive) by fears of thunder and lightning."

The Stanford University physician, who shared the 1959 Nobel Prize for medicine for research on the material of heredity, was to have defended the theory of evolution earlier this month at a trial in Sacramento. The trial ended before he was called as an expert witness.

Religious fundamentalists had argued that teaching evolution in public schools violated the religious rights of their children and asked that the Biblical story of creation be taught alongside evolutionary theory.

The judge rejected those arguments, without considering the scientific merits of either side, and state attorneys claimed a victory.

But Kornberg told a meeting of the California Medical Association here that science didn't win.

He noted the judicial decision warns schools and textbook publishers not to present evolutionary theory as an "official dogma taught as if it's beyond dispute."

"That," Kornberg said, "is monstrous nonsense. Evolution is beyond dispute. It's a fact of nature as compelling as gravity."

He conceded some scientific dispute over the precise mechanisms by which evolution works, but said the theory itself is beyond question and "the confusion stems from ignorance and semantics."

The problem, he said, is the failure of scientists to explain themselves and the nature of science. That failure has serious impacts throughout society, he added.

Kornberg said the government and the public often forget that the wonders of modern technology exist only because they are built on a foundation of basic research — knowledge sought, not for profit or even for the good of society, but for the sake of knowing.

"This scientific base is often obscured and ignored when the refinements of technology, heaped on one another, make it seem that the marketed product is more important than the knowledge that fathered it," he said.

Governments, foundations and corporations that fund research often expect scientists to aim their efforts at specific goals and problems.

But he said that "crusades against a disease have usually failed. The vast majority of (medical) discoveries derive from unrelated basic insights."

Widely publicized breakthroughs, Kornberg said, are rarely the work of single scientists. Instead, they are merely the latest in a series of small steps over many years.

"It is science that is extraordinary, not the scientists... It is the scientific discipline that has permitted ordinary people to achieve major things over periods of hundreds of years."

Penicillin, Kornberg noted, was discovered in 1929, not by doctors but by a curious researcher who noticed bacteria were dying in a dish full of mold. Then the revolutionary antibiotic was virtually forgotten for a decade until other scientists, using it to study the actions of enzymes, almost stumbled across its great value in treating infections.

A generation earlier, he said, X-rays were discovered by physicists studying the behavior of electricity in a vacuum.

The suit in the Sacramento trial was filed by the Creation Science Research Center of San Diego, which sought to have "scientific creationism" taught on a par with evolution in public schools.

The trial narrowed to the issue of whether the science guidelines present evolution as absolute fact, as creationists contend, or as scientific theory, as the State argued.

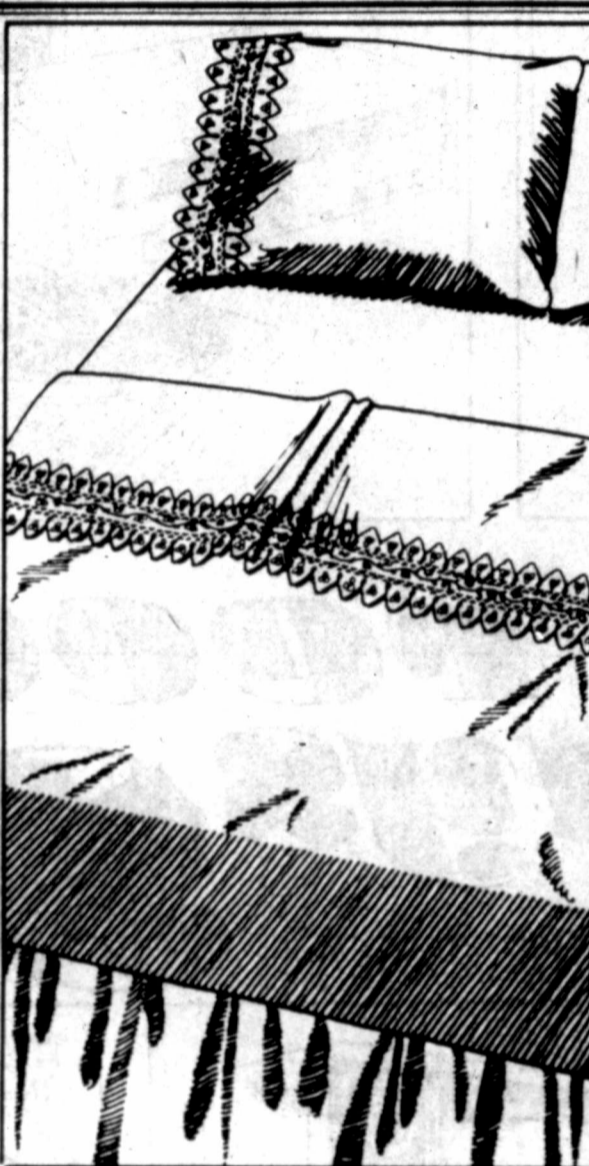

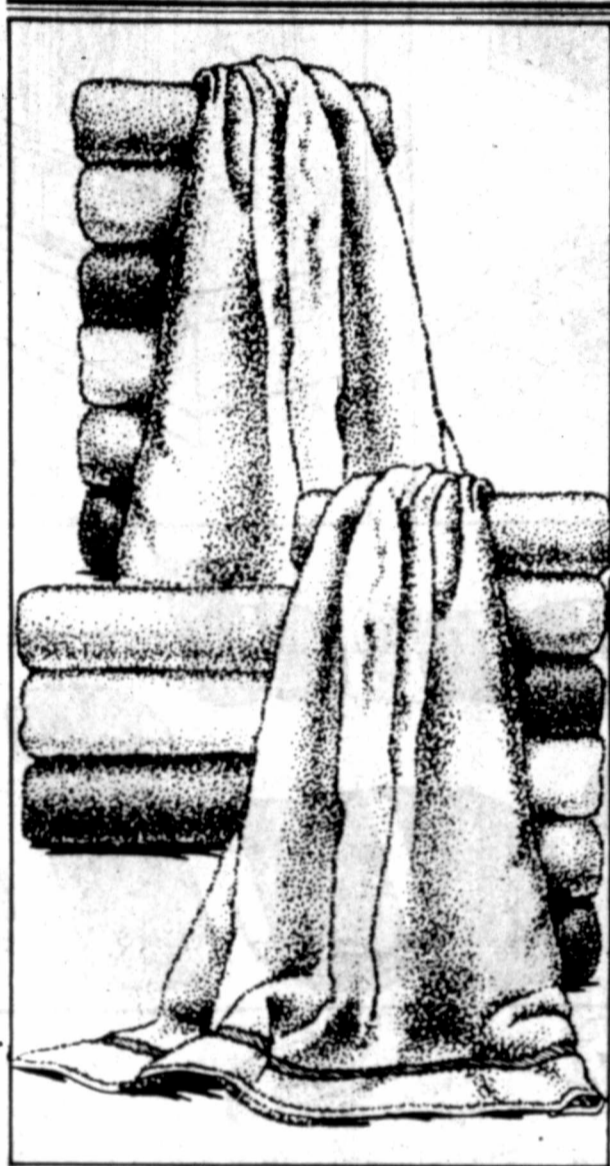

The judge ruled March 6 that state guidelines on textbooks and curriculum contained proper accommodations for opposing views, but ordered the state to make sure school officials are aware of policy forbidding dogmatism in the treatment of the origins of life.
