

Senate Panel Gives Reagan Added Cuts

Baker Vows Floor Action Next Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Budget Committee, doing President Reagan's bidding with unusual dispatch, applied the final touches Thursday to $36.4 billion in spending cuts and Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr. vowed floor action on the blueprint by next weekend.

Chairman Peter Domenici, R-N.M., won a final committee vote of 20-0 on the overall package, which falls heavily on social programs and actually trims $2.3 billion more than the president asked in the areas under the panel's purview.

In all, Reagan wants $48.6 billion slashed from the fiscal 1982 budget he inherited from Jimmy Carter. Congressional aides said the remaining savings could be found in other legislation or in administrative actions that don't require statutory approval.

Domenici later hailed the vote as proof that even Democratic liberals on the panel "are feeling the pressure from constituents" to limit federal spending.

He called the committee's action the first step in "the most historic exercise in restraint that has ever been attempted by the Congress," but conceded the package of reductions faces a hazardous course in the House.

Several Democrats vowed to attempt changes in the proposal when the issue comes up on the Senate floor next week.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said the proposals the committee approved will "wreak unbelievable havoc in the lives of millions of Americans, millions of poor Americans, millions of disadvantaged Americans, millions of middle-class Americans."

Baker Optimistic

Even before the committee completed its work, Baker said the full Senate would approve the spending guidelines by the end of next week. The Tennessee Republican said he would order an unusual Saturday session for March 28 if it proved necessary to meet his target.

The committee, conducting its review of the federal budget in grueling, day-and-night sessions over four days, kept close to Reagan's mark in calling for multibillion-dollar cuts in welfare, jobless, food stamp and some Social Security benefits.

It also backed the president's call to abolish the $3.6 billion public service jobs program next year and endorsed his recommended revision of the federal pay system, at a savings estimated at $3.7 billion.

But it backed away from a recommendation to slow projected increases in cost-of-living benefits for Social Security recipients after Reagan rejected the idea at a meeting in the Capitol.

Technically, the committee was voting on guidelines to require the other committees of Congress to apportion the spending cuts among the programs they control.

But it was clear from the debate that committee members felt they were de-

Americans Accused Of Aiding Attacks By Salvador Forces

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A Roman Catholic Church group claimed Thursday that right-wing terrorists and security forces killed 147 school-teachers and carried out 150 attacks on the church in the past 14 months, in some cases with the help of U.S. advisers.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman called the alleged U.S. involvement "ridiculous" and Salvadoran military sources said the report was "communist propaganda."

The report was issued by Socorro Juridico, which was set up in 1975 by the San Salvador archbishopric to advise peasants of their rights and give them legal assistance.

It did not elaborate on the alleged involvement of American advisers, including some U.S. Army Special Forces, or Green Berets. The advisers were sent here to train the Salvadoran military to fight guerrillas and use and maintain U.S.-supplied aircraft, boats, weapons and other military hardware.

The acting archbishop, Monsignor Arturo Romero y Damas, in a recent homily accused Socorro Juridico of "tendenciosidad" in denouncing rightist, but not leftist, terrorism and threatened to close its office.

The report said that of more than 300 attacks against church property, clergy and workers since January 1980, more than half were the work of rightists.

Among 27 people listed killed were four women American missionaries, whose van was found burned near the airport and whose bodies were later found in a common grave.

In Washington, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee an autopsy on one of the bodies found that shards of glass from the nuns' van had been propelled into the body by a bullet.

"Some have constructed the theory that either they were perceived or may actually have been running a road block," Haig said.

He said that in a country beset with guerrilla warfare, local security forces "could have misread that vehicle down the road as an attempt to run a road-block. And they could have fired into the vehicle, killed one or more of the passen-

Polish Strike Alert Set Following Confrontation

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Police stormed the city government headquarters in Bydgoszcz on Thursday night, beating and forcibly evicting some 25 farm activists who had refused to leave a meeting with local officials, the independent trade union Solidarity said.

A spokesman said one person was hospitalized and the others received minor injuries.

Judge Studies Iran Bid On Prince Home

By KIM COBB

Avalanche-Journal Staff
U.S. DISTRICT Judge Halbert O. Woodward is considering a request by the Iranian government that a lawsuit concerning the former Iranian Crown Prince's Lubbock home be dismissed, but has ordered a stay of litigation in the case pending an appellate court's resolution of several similar cases.

Attorneys for Associated Builders Realtors Inc. and the Iranian government met in federal court Thursday for a hearing on the Iranians' motion that the lawsuit be dismissed on the basis of the agreement former President Carter made with their country for the release of the hostages.

Lawsuits Frozen

Under the terms of Carter's agreement, all lawsuits against Iran and its assets here which were frozen shortly after the hostages were taken are to be decided by an international tribunal. The agreement also terminated any attachments, such as the one filed against the former prince's 4904 21st St. residence by a California military equipment manufacturer, against the blocked assets.

The local real estate firm filed suit against Iran April 15, 1980, after Carter ordered all Iranian assets in this country frozen. The suit claims the company entered into a listing agreement with Iran to sell the house, but has been unable to dispose of the property and collect a sales commission since the freeze.

Iran Blamed

Realty company officials blame Iran for both the freeze and their inability to dispose of the house and are seeking damages of more than $25,000. That amount, company officials say, represents what the Realtors would have received had they been able to sell the

After the incident, the most serious since labor unrest swept Poland last July, Solidarity chapters in two nearby cities announced a strike alert and union officials said national Solidarity leader Lech Walesa went to Bydgoszcz, 170 miles northwest of Warsaw.

Hundreds of regular and auxiliary police patrolled the streets of Bydgoszcz after the incident, but the city of 350,000 was quiet, the Solidarity report said.

Session Declared Closed

Union officials, who asked not to be identified, said the attack came after negotiations between Bydgoszcz officials and private farmers seeking an independent union broke down. The union officials said the police entered after the provincial governor declared the session closed, but the protesting farmers would not leave.

Jan Rulowski, a leader of farmers sitting in at the nearby headquarters of the United Peasants Party was hospitalized, but the others received only minor injuries, a Solidarity spokesman said.

Warsaw Radio reported later that police had been called in "to restore order and ensure the normal work of the provincial office" and that those "who resisted were led out of the building."

Crowd Unaware

The union spokesman said hundreds of "supporters and onlookers" had gathered outside the city government building but were unaware of the police assault until it was over.

A spokesman for the private farmers said their occupation of the peasant party headquarters would continue.

In Warsaw, Solidarity officials announced that union chapters in Torun and Grudziadz, both near Bydgoszcz, had declared a strike alert in response to the attack. Farmers in Irowroclaw had earlier declared a sympathy strike alert, union sources said.

A union official said Walesa rushed to Bydgoszcz from his home in the Polish shipping center of Gdansk.

New Strikes Threatened

The clash came as a threat of new strikes spread to a region of northeastern Poland on the Soviet border, and as Polish officials discussed their nation's problems with other European leaders.

In the capital, West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher met his

CLAPTON SERIOUS

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — British rock star Eric Clapton remained in serious condition Thursday at United Hospitals, where he is being treated for an ulcer, a Clapton spokeswoman said.

SOLAR CEREMONY — This 65-foot solar collector dish will be the focal point of today's demonstration of the Crosbyton Solar Project, at which the first electricity ever produced from solar steam will be sold commercially. The first customer of the historic energy is 76-year-old Crosbyton cotton farmer Rex Wheeler, who project researchers from Texas Tech note "was harvesting solar power with the green leaf" long before energy consciousness prompted the building of the system here. Joining Wheeler and other Crosbyton citizens in the dedication of the project this afternoon will be project director John D. Reichert of Texas Tech and U.S. Reps. Kent Hance and Charles Stenholm. # First Solar Steam-Generated Power Sale Set At Crosbyton

A-J News Services

CROSBYTON — Rex Wheeler, a 76-year-old cotton farmer, will become the first customer to buy electricity generated from solar steam when a Texas Tech University research project reaches a new peak today.

At 2 p.m. on this first day of spring, a variety of officials will watch as Tech's Crosbyton Solar Power Project records another first — the first electricity ever produced from solar steam and sold commercially.

Wheeler, whose farm is adjacent to the solar project two miles south of Crosbyton, has watched the site develop from just another cotton patch to the fully operational prototype.

The prototype is expected to generate about 10 kilowatts of electricity, which project director John D. Reichert figures will provide service to about 15 homes. If Congress funds the full proposed system, a much larger five-megawatt system would be built — large enough to provide much of Crosbyton's electric needs.

"We do not claim to be the biggest electric power plant you ever saw, but we will be doing something that has never been done before," Reichert, a Tech electrical engineer, says of today's historic demonstration.

When the switches are thrown and electricity races through the municipal power grid in this city of 2,500, a whole chain of "firsts" will be set in motion:

— Lighthouse Electric Co-op will become the first utility to transmit commercial electricity generated from solar steam.

— The Crosbyton Municipal Electric Power Co. will be the first to sell the electricity.

— Residential and agricultural customers of Crosbyton will be the first to purchase or consume electricity generated from solar steam.

And by paying his monthly electric bill in advance, Wheeler will be credited with being the very first customer.

"I'm just glad to have electricity," Wheeler said. "This country out here was run on kerosene at one time."

Wheeler's cotton farm surrounds the project, and Reichert points out the farmer "was harvesting solar power with the green leaf on this same piece of land long before we put our mirrors up."

Reichert also notes that it's fitting all Crosbyton residents will play a large role in today's demonstration because, "This all evolved from a people with a need, the folks of Crosbyton looking for an alternative to their rising fuel costs and dreaming of doing something about it."

A group of local residents approached Tech researchers in 1974 about finding an alternative energy source after fuel costs for their municipal electric plant had doubled and then tripled.

In 1976, Tech received funding for a preliminary study of a solar power system for Crosbyton. Construction of the world's largest single solar collector, 65 feet in diameter, began here in 1979. The system produced its first steam in 1980 and for the past year researchers have verified the system's performance standards.

Public demonstration of the technical feasibility of producing solar-thermal electricity is one of the aims of the ceremony today, the day of the vernal equinox when the sun is directly over the equator.

The demonstration, researchers add, also will point out the effectiveness of what Reichert calls "big, dumb and simple" — and economic — technology. That technology is exhibited in the Crosbyton system's notable stationary bowl design.

While other model solar systems have utilized computers and movable dishes, the 65-foot fixed solar bowl here, covered with 430 trapezoidal mirror panels, is tilted 15 degrees to the south for optimum exposure to the sun. It then reflects sunlight to a receiver-boiler and water is pumped through special tubing and converted to steam by the reflected sunlight's intense heat. The steam will be used to turn a conventional turbine attached to an electric generator.

"Once the steam is produced with the right temperature and pressure, it is just a matter of using standard equipment to produce electricity," Reichert explained.

"We're not out putting out computer control signals to tell those mirrors where to go because we think 'big, dumb and simple' is better technology," Reichert says of the $6 million prototype here.

If the full system is funded and built, Reichert admits "one little plant would not save Texas or the nation." But he maintains that having such a solar option would help because, "I still subscribe to the theory that a major cause of inflation is the cost of energy."

The proposed system would include 10 solar collector bowls, each 200 feet in diameter, having 90 times more reflector area than the existing demonstration model. The proposed system's cost is estimated at $25 million, with an additional $8 million needed to build the fossil fuel portions of the hybrid generating plant that would use solar steam and natural gas to produce electricity.

The natural gas would be used to produce electricity when sunlight is not available, Reichert explains. Of the plant's total annual production, about 20 percent would be directly attributable to the solar network.

Such a plant would save a fifth of its fossil fuel bill, Reichert says, adding those savings could amortize the capital investment.

Naturally, Reichert hopes the proposed system will be funded and built. And he says it would benefit more than just Crosbyton.

"It should be applicable in a vast region of the United States," he says, pointing to the possibilities available throughout the Sun Belt.

Detective Ends Testimony; Carlsbad Murder Hearing Nears Conclusion

By BARRY CASEBOLT

A-J Correspondent

CARLSBAD, N.M. — Although several witnesses are expected to testify today in John Volpato's preliminary hearing, opposing attorneys Thursday virtually turned the questioning of a Carlsbad police officer into final summations, with each lawyer offering theories as to how Volpato's wife could have been killed.

Volpato, Carlsbad Mayor Pro Tem and co-owner of Corner Drugstore here, is charged with murdering his wife at his store late Feb. 5, 1980. Volpato has said the killing occurred when two men robbed him at gunpoint, shot his wife four times and wounded him in the left hand and shoulder.

Testimony in the hearing, which began Monday, is expected to conclude about noon today and Magistrate Judge Donald Hallam of Hobbs then will decide whether there is probable cause to bind Volpato over for trial in Fifth District Court.

Det. Lt. John Tully's testimony dominated court proceedings Thursday as the chief investigator in the case described the murder scene and evidence gathered there the night of Mrs. Volpato's death.

Volpato had told police he looked for a glove to stop the bleeding of his wounds because he couldn't find a towel. Thursday, Special Prosecutor Ernest Carroll of Midland showed Tully murder-scene photographs which depicted towels in the pharmacy area.

Defense Attorney Dick Blenden later attempted to discredit the photos by asking Tully if he thought a man educated in pharmacy would use one of the towels, which could have been soiled by use at the food counter area, on an open wound.

Tully, however, refused to fully acknowledge the defense attorney's theory; he would not say Blenden was correct in claiming the towels were greasy. And the officer told Blenden the use of such towels "would be as consistent as picking up an unsterile glove."

Carroll also questioned Tully about the time frame in which the reported robbery-homicide occurred. The prosecutor implied that for Volpato to have carried out all the acts he claimed on the night of the murder, there wasn't enough time between 11:30 p.m., when a passing motorist noticed the Volpato car was not in front of the store, and 11:43 p.m. when Volpato called the police after the shooting.

Blenden, however, theorized during his questioning of Tully that Volpato could have arrived with his wife after the motorist drove by and there still would have been 13 minutes for all the events to transpire.

The killer is alleged to have run after Mrs. Volpato and shot her near the end of the hall and then returned to shoot Volpato. Carroll said Volpato closed the store that night and had ample opportunity.

Panel Backs Dairy Support Reduction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee on Thursday overwhelmingly backed President Reagan's budget-cutting proposal to suspend an April 1 increase in dairy price supports.

The measure was approved, 30-7, after about 2½ hours of debate and sent to the full House for action.

The Senate, meanwhile, wound up debate on the proposal but put off any showdown votes until Tuesday.

The proposal, which would eliminate the scheduled April 1 increase in dairy price supports, is the first of Reagan's budget-cutting measures to reach either floor of Congress.

The administration says eliminating the support hike would save the government $147 million in costs this fiscal year and spare consumers an extra 7½ cents for a gallon of milk, about a dime more for a pound of butter and an additional 9 cents for a pound of cheese.

The House subcommittee on livestock, dairy and poultry voted Wednesday against the proposal to suspend the April 1 adjustment. Instead, it endorsed a measure that would revamp the dairy price support program.

But on Thursday, the full committee agreed on the Reagan proposal, which Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., offered as a substitute to the subcommittee's bill.

Eliminating the April 1 increase "is not going to take one penny away from the dairy farmers but it will hold the line" on government spending, Findley said.

If the committee were to defeat it, he said, it "would have let the president down on the first test vote to sustain his broad economic program."

Current law requires the Agriculture Department to set the basic milk price support on Oct. 1 each year to reflect 80 percent of the parity price of milk.

Attorneys Rest Cases In Libel Suit Against National Enquirer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Attorneys for Carol Burnett and the National Enquirer rested their cases Thursday in the entertainer's $10 million libel suit against the tabloid.

Miss Burnett's case had featured testimony from employees of the Enquirer and witnesses to a Washington, D.C., dinner gathering at a posh restaurant — an event which she said was erroneously reported in an Enquirer gossip column.

She took the stand herself to denounce the publication as printing "a pack of lies" and accused it of portraying her as a drunk.

Miss Burnett's attorney, Ed Bronson, called 15 witnesses and presented eight depositions from other witnesses during the seven-day trial.

Clayton Suggests Solution To Debt

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton says he knows a sure-fire way to pay off the national debt.

Clayton, who is going to Washington, D.C., on Friday for a meeting between state legislative leaders and President Reagan, said selling the public domain would retire the $1 trillion national debt.

The public domain consists of 711.9 million acres, mostly in the western states. More than half the public domain, 359.9 million acres, is in Alaska. Nevada has the next largest segment, 61.6 million acres.

Clayton's itinerary in Washington includes a visit with Secretary of the Interior James Watt, but Clayton said he did not plan to promote his idea during Friday's trip.

"If you plant a seed, it will grow," he told reporters on Thursday.

In 1774, Suffolk County delegates at Concord, Mass., passed resolutions condemning British parliamentary acts affecting America. The resolutions were carried to the Continental Congress at Philadelphia by Paul Revere.

After resting his case without calling any witnesses, Enquirer attorney William Masterson said outside court that he believed his cross-examination of plaintiff's witnesses had accomplished everything he had set out to prove.

Superior Court Judge Peter Smith sent jurors home until Monday, when he said they will hear final arguments and begin deliberations.

Outside court, Miss Burnett said she had received a phone call with good wishes from Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. — a disclosure which angered Masterson.

"I wish the chief executive of the state of California would keep his opinions to himself and not exercise his First Amendment rights in a matter when the case is still on trial," Masterson said. "He is a very influential person. I just don't know that he ought to be speaking out now."

With the Brown comment coming on the heels of a TV attack on the Enquirer by Johnny Carson, Masterson said: "The only question I have is what comes next?"

The Carson comments threw the trial into turmoil Wednesday and caused the dismissal of two jurors and a motion for mistrial which was denied. On Thursday, a transcript of the judge's interrogation of the jurors on the Carson matter revealed that at least half of them were aware of Carson comments.

Masterson moved for mistrial Wednesday on grounds that the entire jury had been "tainted" by the discussion in the jury room Wednesday morning, but the judge denied the motion after interviewing each juror separately in his chambers.

One juror who was dismissed, James R. Reid, said he was dozing slightly and watching the "Tonight Show" on Tuesday night when he heard the comedian begin discussing the Enquirer.

"Johnny Carson made a statement that he was unhappy with the Enquirer because of an attack on him and his wife, and he was inviting the Enquirer to sue him," Reid told Superior Court Judge Peter Smith in chambers on Wednesday. "I was kind of dozing," he said when asked why he continued to watch it, disobeying the judge's instructions to avoid such publicity. "I don't know why I didn't turn it off."

He was dismissed, although he said he could still be a fair juror.

Before he left the judge's chambers, Reid noted that the first thing he thought when he heard Carson was "here's the basis for another suit."

The second juror dismissed, Ernest L. Wade, said he heard about Carson's remarks on his car radio as he was coming to court. He said, "I already forgot about it by the time I got up here this morning," but another juror questioned later said Wade came to the jury room and told others what he had heard, according to the transcript of the closed session.

Another two jurors told of hearing fleeting comments about Carson's attack on the radio and two more said they heard about it in the jury room. All said they could put the matter out of their minds and remain impartial.

As testimony resumed Thursday before the 11 remaining jurors, counting an alternate juror, Miss Burnett's attorneys called to the witness stand a retired professor of linguistics, Arthur E. Hutson, who analyzed the content of the National Enquirer article about the entertainer.

"The average reader, I think, would conclude that the lady was drunk," Hutson said of the March 2, 1976, item that described Miss Burnett as arguing with then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, spilling wine on someone, "traipsing" around the restaurant offering everyone bites of her dessert and giggling.

The professor said his interpretation of the word "giggling" means "senseless, unintelligent laughter," and the word "traipsing" means "to walk around in a sloppy sort of way," both of which he said would indicate intoxication.

He said the retraction printed by the Enquirer was "not a real denial" that the incident happened because they used the words "we understand that these events did not occur," a phrase he said indicated they might have occurred.

'NOT ON SPEAKING TERMS'

Wisest Policy Is No Policy

THE REVOLUTION in Iran is by no means over just because news of the country and its continuing tumult have slipped from the front pages to the inside pages, if at all.

Although the hostages have returned home to restore a degree of tranquility to their lives, their erstwhile captors will find no such solace in the foreseeable future.

"The militant 'students' who perpetrated the 444-day terrorist operation remained behind in an embattled country engulfed in a turbulent whirlpool of revolutionary politics," writes James A. Phillips, a Heritage Foundation foreign policy analyst specializing in Mideastern affairs.

Until the internal turmoil in Iran subsides, suggests Phillips, perhaps the wisest policy for the new administration to adopt vis-a-vis Iran is no "policy" at all.

TODAY, HE says, Iran is a shattered nation seething in political discontent and on the verge of total economic collapse.

While the Islamic fundamentalists and the secular moderates stand by pointing fingers at each other, Iranian leftists are steadily gaining the political strength they need to complete the so-called second phase of the revolution—the overthrow of the Islamic republic and the construction of a Marxist-Leninist state.

Long after the last yellow ribbon has disappeared from its tree in America, millions of Iranians are likely to remain hostage to the erratic course of the revolution.

But there is very little that the U.S. can do in the immediate future, given the fact that the Iranians burned all their bridges to Washington.

As long as Iranian nationalism is defined in anti-American terms, it would be counterproductive to try to unilaterally improve relations.

ANY ATTEMPT, says Phillips, to reach an accommodation with one of the factions currently struggling for control of Iran would only serve to discredit that faction within Iran, "as the Carter administration learned to its dismay."

In any event, we should not re-establish a diplomatic presence in Iran until the Iranians have formally apologized for their actions and admitted the illegality of terrorist activity against diplomats.

Until this admission is made, the U.S. should shun all contacts with the Iranian government and treat it as a non-entity. Or, as the Iranians would say, "qahr (not on speaking terms)."

Over time, the new rulers will be forced to the conclusion reached by the late Shah that a healthy U.S.-Iran relationship would afford Iran considerable leverage to stave off its traditional enemies to the north and west.

NEXT COMES UNIONIZATION

Bargaining Laws No Bargain

UNIONIZATION spurs bargaining laws and bargaining laws spur unionization, according to longtime observers of the labor scene. And figures recently released by the federal Bureau of the Census offer evidence that this is indeed the case.

The figures show state by state how many full-time state and local workers are organized. That is, how many belong to unions or employ organizations.

It breaks down the figures by government level and job type. When the figures are matched with state bargaining laws, a pattern becomes clear: public workers under bargaining laws are the most organized in the nation.

For example, state workers nationwide are 39 percent organized. But where all or most state workers are under compulsory union bargaining laws, workers are 52 percent organized. Where all or most are not, they are only 21 percent organized.

LOCAL PUBLIC workers nationwide show the same pattern. They are 51 percent organized nationwide.

In states with compulsory bargaining laws for unions of all or most local workers, the level of organization averages 60 percent. Where local workers are not under state bargaining laws, they are only 33 percent organized.

States with compulsory bargaining laws for unions of specific employees have relatively high unionization among those employees.

Four states, for example, have mandatory bargaining laws only for local teacher unions. Those states (Indiana, Maryland, N. Dakota and Tennessee) average 29 percent organization among non-teacher local workers. But teachers in those states are 71 percent organized.

Mandatory bargaining laws often are preceded by relatively slow unionization, labor experts say. They are followed by rapid growth in union membership.

"THE RAPID spread of bargaining after enactment of a state bargaining law is not due to widespread rank-and-file demands for immediate bargaining," says Myron Lieberman, chief negotiator for several school districts (and former teacher union consultant).

"It is the result of union leadership efforts to achieve incumbency before being 'frozen out' by a rival union."

In other words, when a bargaining law is enacted, unions move quickly to become the bargaining agent in as many jurisdictions as possible in order to justify their existence.

These efforts force unions to develop pro-bargaining attitudes among public employees more quickly than would otherwise be the case.

That's not surprising, considering the fact that bargaining laws and public employ unionization go hand-in-hand.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Bentsen Behind Wheel Of Anti-Import Drive

WASHINGTON—The plight of the U.S. auto industry has given a powerful impetus to protectionist sentiment in Congress and within the Reagan administration. Such feelings are understandable, but wrong.

A case can certainly be made that U.S. automakers have been poorly treated in recent years, and deserve more sympathetic handling in the future. The auto companies have been inundated with federal regulations concerning safety, pollution, and mileage standards.

They have been dealt a staggering blow by rapidly rising energy prices. And they have historically confronted difficult problems with the auto union.

All these factors suggest the industry deserves relief, in terms of regulatory decontrol and further union wage demands. What they don't suggest is that America should move to a protectionist position by imposing quotas on imports from Japan.

THAT APPROACH would simply add another layer of compulsion on top of the compulsions we already have—which is seldom a proper answer to economic problems.

What is being suggested, either as a jaw-boning measure or as legislation, is to roll back Japanese auto imports to 1.8 million cars annually, 300,000 less than the figure for 1980.

This is an approach being discussed within the Administration, and embodied in a bill submitted by Sens. John Danforth, R-Mo. and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

As with all protectionist measures, this one is promoted on two separate grounds: first, that import quotas are needed to protect the jobs of auto workers and people in related industries; second, that the Japanese, by various devices, control and limit imports from the United States, and that we should do the same to them.

THE FALLACY in such arguments is the common one of all protectionist measures: they view the situation strictly from the standpoint of the producers, rather than from the standpoint of the consumer.

And it is the consumer who must end up paying for such "protection"—in terms of inefficiency and higher prices.

How much impact a quota system would have on the U.S. auto industry's situation is arguable, but one thing is clear: to the degree that such restrictions were effective, they would raise the relative cost of automobiles to American consumers.

Considering the high prices of cars right now, and problems with inflation generally, that hardly seems an appetizing prospect.

IN SUPPORT of his bill, Sen. Danforth argues that Japanese restrictions on trade cause automobiles in that country to sell for $20,000, a glass of orange juice for $4, and so on.

Which means that Japanese consumers are paying much more for such commodities than they need to. But is that an argument for inflicting similar misery on consumers in America?

It is a curious logic which says that imposing higher costs on your own citizens is somehow a national service, while permitting them to buy goods cheaply of their own free will is somehow bad for them.

That is the kind of thinking that takes hold when government interference messes up the market place.

The answer to the doldrums of the auto industry, as of our economy generally, is not more compulsion, but less.

Rather than papering over the inefficiencies created by government regulation with a quota system, we should move as rapidly as possible to free the auto industry from all the rigidities we have imposed upon it.

'Shoo!'

JAY HARRIS:

The Big Gamble

WHO IS GOING to "keep the store" in the Mideast?

Who is going to see that the fires of Islamic fanaticism and Muslim warfare don't spread too far?

Or that Soviet forces don't take advantage of another "liberation" movement to move further into the region?

And even if those questions are answered, the next biggie is: "How?"

Before too many more months pass, the U.S., Israel, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq and a Pandora's Box full of other interested parties will have a lot to say about the puzzles just posed.

And the American people, who may have the most to lose, may have the least to say...

ALL OF THIS is being brought about by what some feel is a new alignment of forces in the boiling Mideast cauldron.

As the area has come unglued at the seams in the past two years, the role of the U.S. has become more vital to what eventually happens. In the wake of the release of the American hostages by Iran, and the inauguration of President Reagan, that role has changed dramatically.

Not everyone, including those nations most involved, agrees with the United States' "quick fix" which involves everything from keeping the Israel-Egyptian peace to placating oil-rich Saudi Arabia and holding the Soviet Union at arms length.

But, as things are shaping up, the Reagan administration is pushing a plan which includes a massive $6.9 billion arms aid program for its friends in the region as well as the definite possibility of major U.S. bases manned by American soldiers, airmen and naval personnel.

In brief, U.S. policy in the area is taking on a new look.

THE NEW American emphasis in the Mideast is one which seeks to play down the historic quarrel between the Arabs and Israelis and to emphasize the Soviet threat to the region as a whole.

It is a multi-billion dollar gamble, with the stakes one of the most crucial geo-political areas of the world, as well as the danger of World War III.

According to reports coming out of Washington, the President and Sec. of State Alexander Haig hope to bypass, for the moment, the thorny Palestinian homeland dispute as well as the Iran-Iraq clash in hopes of cementing a regional package which not only includes "an American presence," but a gradual effort to "put things back together" in the area.

It may be impossible and naive. Some parts of the plan, including the sale of new equipment for U.S. built F-15 jet fighters and American flying radar stations to Saudi Arabia have raised storm signals in Israel.

BUILDING ON the Camp David accord between Israel and Egypt, President Reagan is seeking to extend the peace move to age-old enemies, holding out the danger of an even greater threat from the Soviet Bear.

In brief, the administration hopes to put the Palestinian issue on the back burner for awhile, placate Israel with millions in new military and economic aid, enlist Egypt's President Anwar Sadat in its regional scheme and keep Saudi Arabia more or less "neutralized."

Israel, currently involved in an election campaign over whether it will dump Prime Minister Menachem Begin in favor of the more moderate Labor Party headed by Shimon Peres, has reacted angrily to the sale of updated equipment and four AWACS (Airborne Warning and Control System) planes to Saudi Arabia.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir has told the Israeli Knesset that because of the sale, "friendly relations with the United States are being clouded."

ISRAELI DEFENSE leaders are even more adamant in their criticism.

Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori says the AWACS planes could "expose all of Israel's secrets. We would not be able to make a move without them (the Arabs) knowing about it."

And a retired senior officer likened the AWACS system in Arab hands to "having someone constantly watching your bedroom through closed-circuit television."

The AWACS is a Boeing 707 with an umbrella-like radar saucer which can scan all aerial traffic in a radius of 230 miles while flying at 40,000 feet. Israel, which is only 280 miles north to south and 65 miles wide at its waist, thus would be brought into full view of its Arab enemy.

With the new AWACS system and the modernized F-15s, Saudi Arabia would have the capability of launching pinpoint attacks against Israel, a situation which Israel logically can not tolerate, without U.S. "guarantees."

THOSE "GUARANTEES" most likely will go further than additional millions more in aid to America's long-standing ally in the Mideast.

In a few days Sec. of State Haig will make an important visit to the Mideast. One of his objectives may be to firm up U.S. options in the area, including the use of two Israeli air bases in the occupied Sinai.

President Sadat thus far has refused to go along with that idea. Egypt will regain most of the Sinai as part of the peace agreement with Israel. Ironically, Mr. Sadat has allowed the U.S. to use Egyptian bases on a limited scale.

The Mideast package is still being put together. It has much to recommend it. But, it also ignores the historic and religious hatreds and suspicions of the various nations in the region.

Now, those feelings have been stirred to white-hot with the oil riches, PLO and other terrorists' activities, Soviet forces in a shooting war and American arms. It can be a step toward a tenuous peace or an Atomic Armageddon.

Pass It On...

Q. WHO WAS the first television news reporter to broadcast that President John F. Kennedy was dead?

A. Dan Rather.

Historic footnotes reveal that the most popular pastime among the army officers of ancient Persia was puppeteering. Off duty, they played with their dolls.

One of the most skillful writers on fast travel is that of renowned author Ray Bradbury, who, I'm told, doesn't drive a car and has never flown in an airplane.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Martial Law Of Land

WASHINGTON—The Reagan administration's sharply revised private forecast for the crisis in Poland now rules out Soviet intervention for the next six months, but predicts martial law imposed by the Communist government as the next step in repressing the free workers, farmers and students movement.

That switch from recent forecasts of imminent Soviet invasion is based on intelligence reports from Eastern European sources following visits of Communist Party leader Stanislaus Kania to neighboring hard-line Czechoslovakia and East Germany and the elevation of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski to prime minister.

Kania is believed to have assured his Communist brethren in Eastern Europe that Jaruzelski, who is also defense minister, would impose martial law against the free workers movement if tenacious government control collapses.

Although outright Soviet intervention would unify the Western alliance, martial law as an internal Polish affair would be less of an issue for Reagan to use against the Kremlin.

THE REAGAN administration's quiet rehabilitation of Richard M. Nixon continued when a senior White House aide was dispatched to brief the former President on the new economic program.

The duty was assigned to Dr. Martin Anderson, President Reagan's domestic policy chief who was a junior White House aide during Nixon's first term. Anderson went to Nixon's Manhattan apartment to give him a 24-hour advance peek at Reagan's tax-budget plans.

A footnote: Although the Reagan tax plan is diametrically opposite to Nixon administration policy, old Nixon economic policy-makers, Arthur Burns, George Schultz, Herbert Stein and Charis Walker were brought in to advise Reagan on the final stages.

Even White House aides were surprised to see Stein, who has been publicly hostile to Reagan's economic views, at the Feb. 10 Blair House luncheon for the outside advisers.

SECRETARY OF the Navy John Lehman has sold Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on demobilizing not one but two giant World War II battleships, the largest ships of their kind in the world.

The New Jersey long was slated for return to ocean duty, but Lehman also will put the Iowa back in working order. Apart from their big military wallop, both are seen as valuable political weapons.

Showing the flag from one of these dreadnoughts in the Caribbean would send a powerful political message to Cuba and Nicaragua. Duty in the Caribbean, the new focus of Soviet imperialism, is believed likely for one of the battleships.

In the longer run, the Navy hopes to equip both vessels with medium-range cruise missiles capable of bombarding shore installations from the safety of the deep seas. Non-nuclear warheads are envisioned.

THE HARD-fought victory by the right in getting conservative political activist Donald Devine appointed as head of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) was possible only because of intervention by White House chief of staff James Baker—intervention which fits a pattern.

Baker, a suave Houston lawyer with an Ivy League background, has been distrusted by conservatives because of his political past: manager of Gerald Ford's and George Bush's campaigns against Ronald Reagan in 1976 and 1980.

But Baker in the White House has gone out of his way to promote hard-nosed conservatives to key posts.

The most important was Devine, who was opposed for the OPM slot—the old Civil Service Commission—by presidential counselor Edwin Meese III.

Now, Baker has just about tied down a Department of Education post dealing with private schools for a key figure of the New Right: the Rev. Bob Billings, who mobilized born-again Christians for Reagan in the 1980 campaign.

CUBA'S DIRECT involvement in the El Salvador "insurgency" has been further substantiated by discovery that 100 Salvadoran leftists are now undergoing combat guerrilla training on Cuba's infamous Isle of Pines training grounds.

The U.S. does not know how long this training has been going on. But it has been a major source, along with training camps in Marxist Nicaragua, of guerrilla troops for the Salvadoran insurgency.

No American action has been decided on yet to stop Cuban export of guerrillas to topple the government of a sovereign state.

But if President Reagan decides to use American power to insulate Cuba and terminate its foreign adventures, the Isle of Pines could be a major target.

ANDREW TULLY:

He Fills The Bill

WASHINGTON—"I admit that Giscard is a bit of an (expletive)," said my friend over at the French Embassy, "but you Americans should be pulling for his re-election."

Giscard's square name is Valery Giscard d'Estaing and he is President of France. French voters will decide whether he's still their glass of wine, after his seven-year term in the job, in a two-round election April 26 and May 10.

"I'm talking as a diplomat and an anti-Communist," said Jean, which is not his name. "Your President Reagan needs a strong man in Paris to help him contain Russia's ambitions. Giscard, as you Americans would say, fills the bill."

WHAT WENT without Jean's saying was that Giscard's main rival, old Socialist war horse Francois Mitterand, would have to do business with the French Communist Party if he won the presidency.

Indeed, the Communist presidential candidate, George Marchais, is going about demanding the inclusion of Communist ministers in any Cabinet Mitterand might form.

Giscard, of course, is not exactly in the Reagan mold. He has done both commercial and political business with the Soviet Union and wants to continue doing so in France's interest.

But he also pursues "La Gloire," a strong France that doesn't have to take any lip from the Russians. He would take a stronger line against Moscow than the flexible Mitterand, and that's the way Reagan wants it.

YOU GET the impression the French colony in Washington is not overcome with personal affection for Giscard. To proud Frenchmen like Jean (is there any other kind?), communications from the Quai d'Orsay smack of royal commands.

Giscard lives regally, which the French rather like. But they feel, again, that he has overdone his royal yearnings by decreeing that he be served at state dinners, and that members of his family be served at dinners that do not include the head of a foreign state.

In my common way, I suggested that perhaps Giscard can't wait to start stowing away the vittles when the dinner bell rings.

"Not funny," said Jean. "It is just one of the things he does to remind everybody who is boss. Silly, but there you are. Giscard suffers from an enlarged ego, not from hunger."

EGO OR not, Giscard is not yet a shoo-in for re-election. Besides Mitterand, there is a candidate named Jacques Chirac, representing the Gaullists.

Giscard has dismissed Chirac as a French John Anderson who's running for the exercise. Meanwhile, he proclaims that the choice is between him and anarchy, the same gimmick de Gaulle rode to victory.

Jean sighed. "Yes, Giscard sometimes sounds as if he's immortal, but he is the toughest guy in the race. In his French way, he still stands up to the Russians. If Ronald Reagan could vote, I think he would cast his ballot for royalty."

Coalition Of Reagan Backers Disbands

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group formed by some of President Reagan's friends to drum up public support for his economic policies was disbanded Thursday after reports that it used strong-arm tactics to solicit hefty corporate contributions for a televised gala featuring the chief executive.

With its demise, plans were canceled for a 90-city, closed-circuit television gala and a direct-mail program intended to build public pressure upon Congress for Reagan's budget-and-tax cut program.

Before it disbanded, the group, known as the Coalition for a New Beginning, had received commitments for $800,000, according to a spokesman, Herb Stone.

He denied there were any improprieties or strong-arm tactics in the fund-raising.

"I think we, the group as such, have not done anything illegal, immoral or sexy," said Stone. "I don't think it's been an embarrassment to the White House."

Newsday, a Long Island, N.Y., newspaper, reported the White House had killed the $1-million fundraising effort after hearing that "strong-arm tactics" were being used.

In a copyrighted story from Washington, it quoted an unidentified White House official as saying there was concern the coalition may have violated federal laws in taxation, lobbying or other areas.

Senior Reagan aides said White House disapproval was made known to the coalition last Thursday, after word of the pressure tactics was heard, the newspaper said.

While the White House refused to say Thursday if it had demanded that the group go out of business, officials "may have made some suggestions to them," said press secretary James S. Brady.

From a public standpoint, the White House had held the group at an arms length. Notices were posted in the offices of press spokesmen instructing them to refer any questions about the coalition to a Washington public relations company working with the group.

However, sources said Lyn Notziger, the White House political director and confidante of the president, was designated as liaison with the coalition. The National Federation of Independent Business, for one, had agreed to contribute $60,000, the maximum donation acceptable to the coalition, said industrialist Justin Dart, a leader of the group.

"Certain private corporations agreed to contribute a like amount," he said, and "many other companies committed for smaller amounts." He said the corporations were being released from their commitments.

The coalition actually had collected about $120,000 in donations, according to a source, who asked not to be identified. The source said tentative plans call for the money to be returned to donors after several thousand dollars in operating expenses are deducted from the total.

Of the allegation that the coalition used strong-arm tactics, the source said Dart has a reputation in the business world as "a pretty hardnosed guy ... If a Justin Dart calls up a corporation head, he's pretty blunt. Some people would interpret that as strong-arming."

Figures On El Salvador Killings Said Inflated

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's claim that Salvadoran guerrillas "boast" of killing 6,000 people last year was far from substantiated Thursday in documents released by the State Department.

The documents, based on guerrilla war bulletins and radio broadcasts, cite 4,017 people killed by the rebels in 1980, and department officials concede that even that figure may be inflated due to "double-counting."

The documents were provided to The Associated Press after the department was asked for evidence to back Reagan's figure. But one official insisted the president's statement reflected "the best estimate of our analysts."

Reagan used the 6,000-killed figure at his March 6 news conference in arguing that by sending weapons and military advisers to El Salvador's ruling junta, the United States was "helping the forces that are supporting human rights."

Overall, about 9,000 people died last year in El Salvador's mounting political violence, according to the State Department. Some religious, human rights and labor organizations have put the figure as high as 12,000, but blame government security forces and right-wing paramilitary groups for the vast majority of the deaths.

In an interview with The Associated Press this week, Fabio Castillo, a representative of the insurgents' Democratic Revolutionary Front, said Reagan's claim of 6,000 killed by the guerrillas "is without any basis."

Castillo estimated that Salvadoran guerrillas had killed "up to 1,000 enemy troops" in 1980.

Although unable to present full documentation of Reagan's figure, State Department official Dave Simcox said he still believed the 6,000-killed total was an accurate estimate of guerrilla claims.

"It is the best estimate of our analysts who follow El Salvador and who have access to classified and unclassified documents," Simcox said.

Simcox said some documents that would support Reagan's charge have been destroyed and others could not be released because they are secret.

But he also acknowledged that the figure of 4,017 killed contained in the documents released Thursday is exaggerated because some of the reports "duplicate" body counts already tallied.

"I would concede that there is some double-counting," Simcox said.

In addition, the State Department cited a July dispatch from Cuba's Prensa Latina news agency quoting guerrilla leader Juan Chacon, claiming that during the first half of 1980, the guerrillas inflicted about 2,000 "casualties" on their enemies. The report specified that casualties referred to both killed and wounded.

Larry Birns, director of the liberal Council on Hemispheric Affairs, said his researchers studied the same data used by State Department analysts and concluded that the guerrillas were responsible for less than 2,000 of the 14,000 political killings in El Salvador over the past 15 months.

"That means that for every person killed by the left more than seven have died at the hands of the security forces and their right-wing civilian allies," Birns said.

Identities Of Donors Demanded By Proxmire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said Thursday the public is entitled to the identities of the contributors who gave more than $375,000 to renovate President and Mrs. Reagan's living quarters. "Sunlight is a great disinfectant," he declared.

"When large contributions are made to redecorate the private quarters of the president of the United States, who has the greatest power in our government, the public should know who's making them," Proxmire said.

Proxmire said the White House should name those who contributed more than $1,000 to the project.

"If contributions are being made by oil companies or dairy lobbies, the public has a right to know who is giving large sums of money," said Proxmire. "It is not calling on the taxpayer, which is to Reagan's credit. But if private interest is involved, the public should know about it."

White House officials have refused to release the names of any of the 167 donors who have contributed $375,529 — an average of $2,249 each — to redecorate and refurbish the second and third floors of the executive mansion.

Between February 11 and March 12,

Transcontinental television was inaugurated in 1951 when President Truman addressed the Japanese Peace Treaty Conference at San Francisco.

the fund raised 88 percent more than the $200,000 goal the White House set.

Mrs. Reagan's chief of staff, Peter McCoy, said earlier in the week that some of the donors asked that they not be named.

"I can tell you that most of the money, the larger contributions, came from foundations," McCoy said. "They have absolutely no political interest, no political motives."

Last month the White House announced it would not accept the $50,000 congressional appropriation to redecorate the White House living quarters but would rely on private contributions instead.

White House aides say the family quarters has not been redecorated for 20 years and that painting, plastering and other such refurbishments are necessary.

'I Can Cope' Program Aids Education Of Cancer Patient, Family

By DONNA RAND
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Each year, 800 Lubbock area residents are told they have developed some type of cancer. As a measure to help these victims better understand cancer and accept and live with its associated problems, a Texas Tech professor and the Lubbock Chapter of the American Cancer Society have set up a patient and family education program.

"I Can Cope" is a nationwide program to build support and improve attitudes of cancer patients and their families, according to Dr. Russell D. Crane, assistant professor of Home Economics and Home and Family life at Tech.

Crane and his wife, Eileen, have scheduled eight weekly sessions, set to begin April 16, for persons in West Texas with cancer.

The sessions will be set up in "a primarily classroom situation," Crane said, rather than other "I Can Cope" programs across the state which are more therapeutic in nature.

In a classroom situation, Crane explained, more persons can be helped at one time. There also is a greater opportunity for the cancer victims to speak to other patients about their problems and help them realize they aren't alone.

A major problem for cancer patients is the lack of knowledge about the disease and its various treatments, according to Dr. Robert F. Bloom, chairman of the Service Rehabilitation Committee for the Lubbock Chapter of the Cancer society.

"The 'I Can Cope' program should take the mumbo jumbo out of the ideas and misconceptions about cancer and its effects," Bloom said.

Crane said physicians and experts will attend some of the sessions to discuss, in detail, cancer, its effects and treatments and community resources available to cancer patients and their families.

While medical treatment plays an essential part in the lives of cancer patients, Crane said attitude is a very important factor.

"Most of the meetings will be concerned with helping people enjoy their lives," he said. "These people have been forced to see what is really important to them. We hope to facilitate this further."

Each cancer patient will attend the sessions in the company of a friend or family member, Crane said, with the first session serving as a get-acquainted meeting.

Later sessions will deal with learning about the disease and the methods of treatment as well as the roles of the cancer patients themselves, Crane said.

Crane said the program will help the patients and their families live with the daily health problems associated with cancer and will show them how to express feelings and how to communicate with each other.

Two of the sessions are designed to help those with cancer learn to like themselves and live with their new physical limitations, according to Crane.

"By the final session," Crane said, "these people should be able to put things that are beyond their control behind them and gain more control over their lives."

New Technique Aids Patients With Cancer

CHICAGO (AP) — Japanese physicians have invented a new way to deliver powerful doses of anti-cancer drugs directly to a tumor, a method which American doctors say has "considerable potential."

The Japanese described the technique — which they call "chemoembolization" — in Friday's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

In a separate editorial, JAMA editors said the technique "presents an interesting concept with considerable potential" in cancer treatment because it attacks tumors in two separate ways.

Doctors at Akita University School of Medicine encapsulated tiny doses of a virulent anti-cancer drug called mitomycin into cellulose capsules tiny enough to pass through the bloodstream but lodge near the tumor site.

Then, using a catheter, doctors squirted the capsules into arteries at the site of malignant tumors in 56 patients suffering from several types of cancers at two-to-five-week intervals.

Preliminary results appeared to be impressive. "Substantial tumor reduction of greater than 30 percent in measurable maximum diameter was found in 65 percent of the tumors," the report said.

It added that 80 percent of the patients who underwent the treatment noticed a decrease in pain and that the technique "facilitated" tumor surgery in 82 percent of cases when used before the operation.

Thirty-seven patients, who underwent the experiment from March 1978 to December 1979 remain alive, they said.

Doctors said the technique apparently worked in two ways: it directed the drug only to the site of the tumor, which allowed the dose of drug used to be twice as high as normal; and the capsules also tended to cut off blood flow to the tumor, depriving it of oxygen and nutrients.

Your Personal Biorhythms

by Bernard Gittelson

STEP 1	P	E	I
STEP 2
A-8 MONTH OF BIRTH
STEP 3
DAY OF BIRTH
TOTALS

BIORHYTHMS FOR MAR. 20, 1981
PHYSICAL
Onsets: 7, 16, 25, 34, 43, 52	Climax: you are strong
Highs: 14, 20, 26, 32, 38, 44	Good day run with ease
Lows: 8, 15, 21, 27, 33, 39	Pugging energies
EMOTIONAL
Onsets: 15, 27, 41, 55, 69	Reactions slow, dangerous
Highs: 14, 26, 42, 58, 74	Reaching your peak in
Lows: 11, 22, 33, 44, 55	Depressive periods
INTELLECTUAL
Onsets: 10, 27, 43, 60, 76, 93	Probable anxiety
Highs: 14, 28, 42, 56, 70, 84	Brain working — use it
Lows: 11, 25, 40, 55, 70	Poor perception

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 3 — Day of birth. Enter your day of birth three times in the figure chart, once each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I).

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's biorhythm readings.

Reagan Cuts Concern Library Official

By PAT GRAVES
Avalanche-Journal Staff
City-County Library Director Bill Stewart expressed concern to Library Board members Thursday about the possible effects on library services if the Reagan administration and the Texas legislature reduce library funding.

Although the Lubbock City-County Library's operating budget, just more than $1 million this fiscal year, is funded locally, many library services are subsidized by state library agency appropriations and federal money from Titles I, II and III, Stewart said.

State and federal sources are providing $285,000 this fiscal year to the West Texas Library System, a 29-county association of which the Lubbock City-County Library serves as headquarters, he added.

Stewart said he hopes to have funds to improve the system and is optimistic about getting a good appropriations bill. He said the Legislative Budget Board gave the Library Assistance Act a good recommendation, but Gov. Bill Clements and the House Appropriations Committee were not as favorable.

"Assuming the federal funding cuts are not drastic and the Texas legislature makes a good appropriation, we hope to increase our budget," he said. "But we're very concerned about it."

Adding to his concern, Stewart said, is a rider attached to the Library Assistance Act by Paducah Rep. Bill Healy. Stewart said Healy's proposal would require all area library systems in the state provide service to all the communities in the system, regardless of whether they are participating members.

Stewart explained the measure, if approved, would not affect the West Texas system significantly because most towns already are involved. Instead of across-board eligibility, as Healy advocates, Stewart said towns operate under an incentives structure.

To avoid cracking or chipping when driving nails into a plaster wall, warm the nails first.

On the subject of future plans, Stewart said he would like to build two more branches to accommodate Lubbock's south and westward population shift. He is hopeful the city will make library expansion a priority in its five-year plan for development.

County Judge Rod Shaw told the library board that although north and east Lubbock residents may feel neglected regarding new library construction, the city is growing in the opposite direction.

"Now that the 19th Street location has been moved to the southwest part of town, the Mahon Library is about as close to the northeast part of town as Goddeke is to the rest of the city," Shaw noted.

Stewart said he believes the Mahon Library is being used more by East Lubbockites, while usage at the new Goddeke Branch on south Quaker Avenue is better than he expected.

The director also reported the Friends of the Library has received an anonymous gift of $5,000. The sum will be placed in a savings and loan association, Stewart said, and the interest will be used to buy books.

Russians Accused In Hijacking

PEKING (AP) — China's leading newspaper charged Thursday that the Soviet Union deliberately engineered the 13-day hijacking of a Pakistani airliner.

While the plane was in Kabul for seven days, the People's Daily said, the hijackers were treated as official guests, traded in their pistols for machine guns, and were given every convenience for their propaganda.

Calling the Afghanistani regime in Kabul a "Soviet puppet," the paper added, "the Soviet Union has an unshirkable responsibility for this abnormal situation." The plane flew to Damascus, Syria where the more than 100 hostages were released Saturday in exchange for 84 Pakistani prisoners.

The People's Daily said the Soviet Union was hostile to Pakistan because of Pakistan's stand against the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and because it stood as an obstacle to continued southward expansion by the Soviets.

"Although the hijacking is over, the plot hidden behind it still exists," the paper said.

Picture Of Vermont Lake Creature Claimed Authentic

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — A snapshot said to show some type of long-necked creature swimming in Lake Champlain appears to be authentic, according to a University of Arizona researcher.

J. Richard Greenwell, secretary of the school's Arid Lands Natural Resources Committee, said Wednesday an analysis of the picture shows it is not a fake and that the image is one of a live animal.

He said he based his findings on preliminary results from the University's optical sciences laboratory.

A couple from New Haven, Conn., have copyrighted the picture they said was taken during a vacation four years ago in Vermont. They said they would not have it published until the university completes its study.

A New York man who has searched Lake Champlain for a creature called "Champ," which resembles the Loch Ness Monster, said the color photograph shows a long-necked animal with its head in a shadow, looking off to one side.

Greenwell said the lab has determined the photograph is not a montage, or superimposition or the result of trick photography. He said an examination of wave patterns surrounding the animal shows it came from underwater and was not a model dragged along the surface.

He said the next step in analysis will be to perform a computerized image enhancement, similar to the process used on photographs taken in outer space.

That will sharpen the image and allow biologists to form a theory on what type of animal is depicted, he said.

Mormon Document Trade Aired

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Discovery of a 137-year-old document in which Joseph Smith Jr. promised his son the presidency of the Mormon Church — a post instead claimed by Brigham Young — will make no difference in how church leadership is now transferred, Mormon officials said Thursday.

The document, discovered by a collector of Mormon records, apparently is the text of a blessing given by church founder Smith in 1844. It promised his then 12-year-old son, Joseph Smith III, that he would one day become the leader of the church. Six months later, Smith was shot to death by a mob in Carthage, Ill.

After Smith's death, Young led the main body of the church to Salt Lake City. The younger Smith later became the president of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, headquartered in Independence, Mo.

Mormon officials said at a news conference that they will exchange the document for an 1833 copy of the Book of Commandments held by the RLDS Church. The book contains revelations Smith said he received from God. Both churches accept those writings as Scripture.

Mormon spokesman Jerry Cahill said the church wanted to make the exchange because of the document's historical interest to the RLDS Church, the presidency of which is passed from father to son.

Earl E. Olson, assistant Mormon Church historian, said the document would have little effect on his church's doctrine of "apostolic succession" because the blessing was "conditional" and "never presented to the body of the church for its acceptance."

Lockney Chamber Honors Pair In Yearly Event

A-J Correspondent
LOCKNEY — John Bickley and Virginia Owens were named Outstanding Man and Woman of 1980 at Thursday night's Lockney Chamber of Commerce banquet.

New officers and directors for the Chamber also were installed during the event, which featured Spencer Guimarin of San Marcos as speaker. Guimarin is director of the Health Resources Center of Southwest Texas State University.

The new officers include President Gail Kring, Vice President Roy Holly, Secretary June Bybee and Treasurer J.D. Copeland.

Last year's Outstanding Man Jerry Johnson said, "The town has waited too long to honor Bickley, who has for many years contributed to the community so willingly and freely of his time and financial support."

Bickley bought and donated land for a teenage baseball park and presents the annual "Fighting Heart" award to both a boy and girl athlete at Lockney High School.

He was active in American Legion for many years and through his efforts the building recently was donated to the city for use as a community center. A past school board member and chamber director, he has just completed a two-year term as chairman of trustees of the First United Methodist Church.

A longtime supporter of the Texas Tech University baseball program, Bickley also presents annually the Bert Huffman Award to an outstanding baseball player. He donated uniforms for baseball cheerleaders and is an honorary member of Saddle Tramps. Bickley also is an honorary member of the Texas Rangers and served on the committee for the new building in Waco.

Mrs. Elvira Muniz, 1979 Woman of the Year, said Virginia Owens "cares for the people in Lockney in more ways than simply in her job and she shows a faithful Christian ministry in her day-to-day living."

Nation's Current Account Shows Surplus

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's current account — the broadest measure of economic transactions abroad — showed a $118 million surplus in 1980, the first surplus since 1976, the Commerce Department reported Thursday.

The department reported a deficit of $706 million for 1979.

The current account showed a $687 million surplus in the fourth quarter after a third-quarter surplus of $4.49 billion and deficits in the first two quarters of 1980.

It added that "weakness in the U.S. economy in the first half of the year limited increases in both petroleum and non-petroleum imports."

Council's Professional Staff Given Ax By Administration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The entire professional staff of the Council on Environmental Quality was fired Thursday as the Reagan administration gave another signal of its plans for sharp changes in environmental policy.

Most employees of the 45-member agency were told by administration officials that they would receive formal dismissal notices next week and would be off the government payroll in 30 days.

Environmental groups and some congressmen immediately protested the firings, saying it ran counter to the policy set in three previous administrations.

"While we understand that you intend to appoint a new, greatly reduced staff, we do not understand why this entire, highly experienced staff was dismissed," eight congressmen said in a letter to President Reagan. "Their loss ... can only result in a diminution of CEQ's effectiveness, whether intentional or not."

Administration officials said Reagan's plans to reduce the council staff from 45 to 13 left little room for any holdovers after considering that the three council members to be appointed by Reagan would want to choose their own personnel.

The congressmen, including Rep.

Conservatives Say Reagan Will Get Solid Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two conservative leaders, describing their movement as, at long last, "on the inside," Thursday discounted the complaints of some of their ideological compatriots and said the political right is solidly behind Ronald Reagan's presidency.

At a news conference opening the three-day Conservative Political Action Conference, James Lacy, national chairman of Young Americans for Freedom, said conservatives have a "history of being on the outside looking in and now we find ourselves in the position of being on the inside which is completely unique."

Symbolic of the new relationship with the governing administration, Lacy noted that speakers at the conference will include President Reagan, Vice President George Bush, budget director David Stockman, Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan and U.N. Ambassador Jeanne Kirkpatrick.

Reagan is scheduled to address the conference banquet Friday night.

"With the exception of constitutional mandates who promote the common welfare and provide for the common defense, the scope of the federal government will be rolled back in every direction," Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said in remarks prepared for the conference keynote address Thursday night.

"The poor won't be starved, the elderly won't be abandoned, the crippled won't be kicked in the shins," he added. "The federal government stands ready to take care of their needs."

the sharp personnel cuts would enable the council to carry out its legal responsibility to monitor the environmental impact statements issued by government agencies.

"We would greatly appreciate receiving from you a full description of the legal authority used to take this radical action and an explanation of why you felt it necessary to dismiss secretaries and researchers as well as policy personnel," the congressmen said, saying the action appeared to signal "the administration is equivocating on vigorous enforcement of one of the nation's essential environmental laws."

Michael Weber of the Center for Environmental Education said, "The Reagan administration action will only pollute the work of the CEQ to an unprecedented degree. We are concerned lest political loyalty become a requirement for providing the president with advice on the nation's environment."

The council was created in 1970 during the Nixon administration to monitor a new law that required impact statements when any agency was considering an action that would affect the environment.

Reagan had considered abolishing the council, but dropped that plan when environmentalists protested. Instead, he is seeking to cut its budget from $4 million annually to $1 million, an action officials said would jeopardize the council's main activity, its annual report to Congress on the state of the environment.

Littlefield Pays Tribute To Citizens At Banquet

A-J Correspondent
LITTLEFIELD — Dr. Bill Armistead and Dee Dee Davis were chosen Man and Woman of the Year and the Dean Elms family was chosen Farm Family of the Year during the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture banquet Thursday night.

The first TV Celebrity Award was presented to Dr. and Mrs. Howard Head, who have been featured on the television game show Las Vegas Gambit this week. A packet of reminders to "shop at home" was presented to the Heads, who won $8,700 worth of prizes and cash as contestants on the show.

Theme of the banquet, which was dedicated to the memory of the late Beulah Dunlap, was "Agriculture: It's your heartbeat, Texas!"

Master of Ceremonies Bob Hale introduced guests, officers and directors of the Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development and Chamber Ambassadors.

Dr. W.C. Newberry of San Marcos was the featured speaker. Newberry teaches educational philosophy and adolescent psychology at Southwest Texas State University.

Armistead is the president of the Texas Optometry Association and is past president of the Rotary Club, past president of the Chamber of Commerce and served as mayor of Littlefield.

Mrs. Davis is president of the Band Boosters, is active in church and school events and serves as an elder in the First Presbyterian Church.

The Elms family is active in church and school events. Elms is the chairman of the Lamb County Soil and Water Conservation District Board of Directors and is vice chairman of the South Plains Soil and Water Conservation District Board of Directors. Mrs. Elms is a registered nurse and their sons, Kip and Eddie, have attended Texas A&M University.

The honorees were introduced by Ray Lynn Britt.

Ron Lawlis, past president, presented the gavel to new president Bob Kirk. Kirk, in turn, presented a scrapbook of the year's chamber activities and a plaque to Lawlis.

Texas Cities Rank Among Fastest Growing Metropolitan Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five of the 25 fastest growing metropolitan areas in the nation are in Texas, the Census Bureau reported Thursday.

Bryan-College Station led the way among the standard metropolitan statistical areas in Texas, with a growth rate of 61.2 percent from 1970-1980. It was the sixth fastest growing metropolitan area in the United States.

Other Texas areas placing in the top 25 were McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg, 54.2 percent, in 11th place; Brownsville-Harlingen-San Benito, 48.3 percent, 18th; Austin, 47.8 percent, 20th; and Houston, 44.6 percent, 21st.

All 25 of the fastest growing metropolitan areas were in the South or West, another indication of the increasing movement of the U.S. population to the so-called Sun Belt.

The Houston metropolitan area also was the nation's biggest grower in terms of actual numbers, with 891,930 more residents in 1980 than there were in 1970. Dallas-Fort Worth was second in the nation in that category, adding 586,719 residents in the 10-year census period.

Preliminary census figures for Texas released earlier showed a growth rate of 26.6 percent for the decade. The state's population increased from 11.3 million in 1970 to 14.2 million.

Following Houston's 44.6 percent growth rate among Texas metropolitan areas were, in order, Laredo, 36.0 percent; Killeen-Temple, 34.0 percent; El Paso, 33.4 percent; Tyler, 31.2 percent; Midland, 25.8 percent; Dallas-Fort Worth, 24.7 percent; Longview-Marshall, 24.3 percent; Odessa, 24.3 percent; San Antonio, 20.9 percent; and Amarillo, 20.2 percent.

Other growth rates were San Angelo, 19.2 percent; Lubbock, 18.2 percent; Waco, 15.6 percent; Galveston-Texas City, 14.7 percent; Abilene, 13.9 percent; Corpus Christi, 13.8 percent; Texarkana, in Arkansas and Texas, 11.5 percent; Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, 7.8 percent; Sherman-Denison, 7.2 percent; and Wichita Falls, 1.0 percent.

Metropolitan areas are defined by the Census Bureau, in general, as a city of at least 50,000 and the surrounding counties which are associated with it economically, culturally or by other means.

The new census report also gives the first ranking of metropolitan areas by size according to the 1980 results, showing that Dallas-Fort Worth moved up from the 12th largest area to the eighth during the decade and Houston from 16th to ninth.

Trailing the two Texas giant metropolitan areas were San Antonio, 36th largest, up from 38th in 1980; Austin, 70th, up from 93rd; El Paso, 82nd, up from 94th; Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange, 104th, down from 97th; Corpus Christi, 113th, up from 118th; McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg, 133rd, up from 162nd; Killeen-Temple, 162nd, up from 184th; Lubbock, 163rd, up from 165th; and Brownsville-Harlingen-San Benito, 164th, up from 194th.

Galveston-Texas City is next on the list at 170th, up from 172nd; Amarillo, 189th, up from 192nd; Waco, 193rd, down from 188th; Longview-Marshall, 207th, up from 217th; Abilene, 216th, down from 214th; Wichita Falls, 231st, down from 207th; Tyler, 234th, up from 240th; Texarkana, 235th, down from 230th; and Odessa, 247th, up from 256th.

Others were Laredo, 250th, up from 273rd; Bryan-College Station, 267th, up from 281st; Sherman-Denison, 273rd, down from 266th; San Angelo, 275th, up from 278th; and Midland, 276th, up from 279th.

There are 284 standard metropolitan statistical areas in the United States, 25 of them in Texas.

The five fastest growing in the nation were Fort Myers-Cape Coral, Fla., which grew at a 94.2 percent rate; Las Vegas, Nev., 69.1 percent; Sarasota, Fla., 67.5 percent; Fort Collins, Colo., 66.0 percent; and Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood, Fla., 62.2 percent.

Drinking Age Bill Sponsors Say Groups Standing In Way

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation raising Texas' legal drinking age from 18 to 19 is one step away from Gov. Bill Clements' desk, but the Senate sponsor says beer, liquor and grocery store lobbyists are endangering its final passage.

The House passed the bill, 104-15, on Thursday, returning it to the Senate for action on an amendment strengthening the law against selling alcoholic beverages to minors.

"I understand they (lobbyists) are putting pressure on some of the senators not to go along with the amendment," said Sen. Bill Sarpalus, D-Hereford, the sponsor.

If the Senate refuses to accept the amendment, the bill then would go to a House-Senate conference committee instead of to the governor's desk for signature.

Sarpalus said he feared losing the entire bill in the fight over the House amendment.

Clements submitted raising the drinking age as an emergency matter and is expected to sign the bill if he gets it.

The House amendment puts teeth in the law that says a tavern or beverage merchant may not "knowingly" sell alcohol to a minor — defined in the bill as anyone under 19. A seller would be presumed to know a person was a minor if he did not request a driver's license, military identification card or other proof of age.

Sarpalus said he has heard from grocers who don't like the amendment and knows that liquor and beer interests also are putting pressure on senators to reject it.

"They don't like the idea of being required to ask for an ID, and the responsibility that is being placed on them," he said in an interview.

Sarpalus said he gave each of the 31 senators a copy of the amendment to take home and study over the weekend. He said he would talk to them again on Monday.

"If it looks like I have the support to concur (in the amendment), I will... I support the amendment," he said.

Speaker Bill Clayton, who would appoint House members of a conference committee if one is required, also favors the amendment.

"I know he wants the amendment on there," said the speaker's press secretary, George Works.

Supporters of the bill — including PTAs and organizations of teachers and school administrators — say it should help curb a growing problem of drunkenness in high schools.

Military personnel could continue to drink at age 18 so long as they do it only on military reservations, which have the lower drinking age.

Serpico Shuns Hero Status

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Frank Serpico shook his head in disbelief, studying the ingredients on the saltine cracker package.

"It's such a simple thing," he said, rattling off the label's list of preservatives. "This can be made with flour and water."

Frank Serpico, who was shot during his efforts a decade ago to expose corruption within the New York City police department, became a hero thanks to a motion picture based on those efforts but he doesn't much enjoy the status.

"People want to make heroes so they don't have to do anything about it themselves," he said Tuesday during a brief stopover in Oklahoma City to visit a friend. He calls his efforts to clean up the New York Police Department in the early 1970s as "one little step in life."

Now 44, Serpico has sold all his possessions. He travels on the college lecture circuit and appears on television programs. "Home" is wherever his feet are, he said.

He has founded a college in northern Wales where students are not restricted by age or a four-year curriculum. They study the mind, the body, the environment, self-sufficiency and ways to heal themselves without drugs or surgery, he said.

"We trust technology too much and put our lives into the hands of too few," he said. "Never in any age has mankind been in such a terrible state."

Hostage Gets Cut Lip

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Marine Sgt. Bill Gallegos, among the 52 Americans held hostage for 444 days in Iran, suffered a cut lip in a fistfight with a 25-year-old man, officials say.

Franklin P. Lucero, of Pueblo, was arrested Wednesday for investigation of third-degree assault in connection with the fight outside a downtown convenience store, police said.

Lucero suffered injuries to his lip and right hand. He was released on $2,000 bond, officials said.

According to Officer Ron McMullen, Lucero apparently was angry with Gallegos for talking to police after Lucero allegedly became involved in a fight with a karate class instructor Monday. Gallegos, who is a member of the class, said the instructor was justified in striking Lucero, McMullen said.

Lucero allegedly was told to leave the class following the fight.

Carl Sagan Granted Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carl Sagan, host of the public television program "Cosmos," has been granted a divorce from his wife of nine years. Sagan's attorney says the Scientist plans to marry his co-writer, Ann Druyan.

Linda Sagan had filed suit in New York, but Sagan insisted the case be heard in California. Judge Harry Schaffer on Tuesday agreed that California was the proper forum for the divorce case and dissolved the marriage on the motion of Sagan's lawyer, Marvin Mitchelson.

Schafer plans to hear the property settlement phase in another month.

Mitchelson said Sagan said in the divorce papers that "he wished to marry his longtime co-writer Ann Druyan."

Sadat's Wife In Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Jihan Sadat, wife of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, has brought an exposition of modern arts and crafts to Houston.

"Before, we showed you King Tut," Mrs. Sadat said Wednesday. "Now, we want to show you modern arts. We hope it will let us come closer, to give you a real image of contemporary Egyptian culture."

She flew to Houston from a similar festival Tuesday in Washington, sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution, and she was to open another exhibit in Los Angeles on Thursday.

Hiccupper Gets Relief

MIAMI (AP) — A man who couldn't stop hiccupping for 15 months finally got relief this week after trying home remedies offered by hundreds of people all over the country.

"I was in such agony last Saturday," recalled Eddie Bruce, 65, a North Miami retiree who has hiccupped as often as once every two seconds for more than a year.

"I was just hicking like a son-of-a-gun. Before I went to bed, I bent over and drank some ice water from the wrong side of the glass. Then Sunday morning, I woke up, and I didn't have the hiccups."

A couple of times over the 15 months, Bruce stopped hiccupping for a few hours. But now, after three days, he's cured.

The miracle cure was prescribed by professional golfer Chi Chi Rodriguez, who was playing in a tournament in Jacksonville and read of Bruce's plight in the newspaper. "I've cured the hiccups of a lot of people. I called Mr. Bruce about eight nights. I couldn't sleep after I read about him in the paper. Now, I've got peace of mind because I hated to see him suffer."

Patti Davis Would Protest

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress and singer Patti Davis, the 28-year-old daughter of President Reagan, says her first White House performance could very well be at a nuclear energy protest gathering.

In an interview in the April issue of McCall's, Miss Davis said she would perform at a protest in front of the White House "if a group I respect, such as MUSE (Musicians United for Safe Energy) asked me."

Miss Davis said that while she disagrees with her father on a variety of political issues, the subject of nuclear energy is the source of their strongest disagreement.

"There have been human errors made at radiation plants all along," she said. "Why should we assume there won't be more with catastrophic consequences?"

Jellybeans Lure Hophead Mice

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — City police officers, trying to protect packaged marijuana for evidence, are luring drug-addicted mice and rats into traps with President Reagan's favorite snack, jelly beans.

"Of course, we're using the top-of-the-line jelly beans," said Capt. David Ashmore, commander of the technical services squad, which supervises the property room at police headquarters where bags of potholed pot are stored.

"Our mice are hooked on top quality marijuana and it takes a top quality jelly bean to lure them away," Ashmore said.

Police Director E. Winslow Chapman, a member of Reagan's national advisory committee on law enforcement, believes the president "may have stumbled onto a solution to our national drug problem."

Prosecutor Gets A Shave

CONWAY, S.C. (AP) — A South Carolina prosecutor finally got a shave this week, complying with a judge's order to get rid of the "grisy looking growth... in the interest of justice."

Public Defender Cleveland Stevens, in a hearing last week, requested that his legal adversary and close friend, Solicitor Jim Dunn, be ordered to shave the four-month growth because it was intimidating his clients.

Circuit Judge Dan F. Laney Jr. agreed with Stevens and ordered the shave, offering to personally supervise the operation.

"I have heard some widespread rumors around the community that he has appeared on television with this grisy looking thing," said the judge.

The judge at first suggested that the defense attorney be the one to shave the solicitor. Dunn quickly entered an objection.

Runaway Pig Captured

Residents alerted police Tuesday that a stray pig was scurrying around, so Officer Michael Lane went to investigate.

Area Citizens Spot Weather Balloon

A bright spot in the Lubbock sky about sunset Thursday was a weather balloon sent up by personnel at Holloman Air Force Base at Alamogordo, N.M., local military officials said.

The balloon, which some residents first thought was an unidentified flying object, a star or an information gathering balloon, was sighted about 7 p.m. Thursday in the southwestern South Plains. Its glow was produced when it reflected the last of the day's sunlight, officials said.

Officials with the National Weather Service had speculated the bright object at about 100,000 feet might be a balloon launched NASA or the White Sands Firing Range near Las Cruces, N.M.

But Bill Tynan, assistant public affairs officer for Reese AFB, said local Air Force officials confirmed the balloon originated at the Alamogordo base.

The object disappeared from view with the sunset.

Panel Okays Court Action Fee Measure

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Senate Committee on Intergovernmental Relations Thursday voted to recommend full Senate approval of a bill by Hereford Senator Bill Sarpalus that would increase the fee to file a civil suit in county court.

The committee approved S.B. 701 by a 7-0 vote.

Moore County Clerk Ronnie Campbell, representing the Texas County Clerks Association, said the bill would increase the fees from $10 to $30.

Campbell said the fee has not been increased in 20 years and no longer covers the cost of processing such suits.

"We have a responsibility to the taxpayers to make sure we are at least covering part of our costs," Campbell said.

Worker Dies Following Space Shuttle Rehearsal

Second Rockwell Employee Critical

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — One worker was killed, a second was critically injured and four others were nearly asphyxiated Thursday when they blundered into a nitrogen-filled engine compartment of the space shuttle Columbia after a rehearsal for next month's launch, NASA officials said.

The accident marred a "super" dress-rehearsal of the shuttle's first launch at the Kennedy Space Center, but space agency officials in Washington said the accident was not a result of any flaw in the shuttle and said there would be no change in the launch schedule.

The shuttle, delayed repeatedly by technical problems in the past two years, is to lift off sometime during the week of April 5.

Guard Tries To Help

Five Rockwell International employees were working in the aft section of the orbiter near the engine compartment when they were overcome shortly after 8 a.m. CST, officials said. A Kennedy Space Center security guard also was overcome when he went into the compartment.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesmen said it was unclear why the men went into the compartment.

"Right now, we just don't know what they were doing in there," said space center spokesman Chuck Hollinshead. "It all happened in a matter of minutes and we haven't had time to interview people yet to find out exactly what procedure they were doing."

But one Rockwell official, who asked not to be identified, said: "It was a goof-up."

Incident Called Mistake

The technicians apparently removed an access panel and entered the compartment, unaware it had been purged of oxygen and filled with pure nitrogen.

"The aft portion of orbiter normally is filled with nitrogen to get all the oxygen out," said space center spokesman Rocky Raab. "That is done to prevent fires in that area and to prevent anything explosive from seeping in there."

The workers, unaware they were moving into a "nitrogen purge" zone, were felled quickly by the lack of oxygen, Raab said.

"There is no way you can see or smell that you're moving into an area that lacks oxygen," Raab said. "The whole compartment is purged. We insert nitrogen to get rid of the oxygen and other gases. It is normally a closed area and you can only get into it by going through access panels."

As officials evacuated launch pad 39-A as a precaution, emergency medical teams treated the men at the scene and then rushed them to the Major Health Facility at the Kennedy Space Center.

Doctors worked frantically on John

Bjornstad, 50, of Titusville, but he died aboard a helicopter en route to the Titusville hospital, Raab said.

Another technician, Forrest Cole, of Merritt Island, Fla., was stabilized, flown to a hospital in nearby Titusville and later airlifted to Shands Teaching Hospital in Gainesville where he was placed in intensive care in critical condition with brain and lung swelling.

A third man, William Wolford, of Rockledge, Fla., was hospitalized in Melbourne for observation. The three others were released after treatment, officials said. The two other Rockwell technicians were identified as Nicholas Mullon and Jay Harper and the security guard, an employee of the Wackenhut Corp., was identified as Don Largent. Wackenhut spokesman Dick Wilson said Largent and other guards helped rescue the Rockwell workers.

Military Force Seen As Option In Ending Salvador Arms Flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said Thursday the United States is eyeing a wide range of options, including military force, for going "to the source" to stop Cuban-routed arms to guerrillas in El Salvador.

Haig, in testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said also that the United States has learned that "sophisticated arms" from Eastern Europe, including advanced air defense weapons and possibly tanks, have been introduced into Nicaragua.

The former NATO commander stressed that no specific military action is in the works to interdict the flow of arms in Central America.

But "it is the responsibility of the executive branch to consider a whole range of options," including political and economic moves, he said. "And I can assure you that process is under way."

Military action against Cuba, he said, "should not be... excluded from any consideration."

"I think any assessment that we've made suggests that it is Cuba that is the platform and the instigator and the leadership behind the situation in El Salvador."

"I have said we will take the problem to the source and clearly that is our intention," the secretary said.

Haig repeated, however, that "it would be premature to go out and deprive the president of his options."

Haig did disclose that the administration is studying "intensely" whether to cut off U.S. aid to Nicaragua because of daily reports of arms shipments from Eastern Europe.

That aid was suspended after reports that large-scale arms shipments were being introduced into El Salvador through Nicaraguan territory.

Haig said the United States has observed "some moderation" in the flow of arms into El Salvador and has received

"some private assurances" from Nicaragua that "they won't permit that country to be used as a base for that subversive activity in El Salvador."

However, he also disclosed that U.S. intelligence agencies report that some Nicaraguan officials apparently are attempting "to find an alternative route" for the arms shipments.

house. They also seek about $6,000 in attorneys' fees.

Woodward ordered the case indefinitely stayed, pending the determination of other dismissal motions in similar litigation now before another Circuit Court. Woodward told attorneys it appears the appeals court's resolution of the questions will be applicable to the issues presented by Iran in the local case.

Both parties agreed that the trial would be stayed until the appellate decisions are handed down.

The United States reached its agreement with Iran for the release of the hostages Jan. 19. The U.S. Attorney's Office for the Northern District of Texas requested in early February the case be stayed until newly-elected President Reagan could review Carter's agreement.

The U.S. Attorney's Office, in that request, also advised the court that any judicial action which does not reflect the conditions of the executive order would be a waste of judicial resources.

On Feb. 24, Reagan ratified Carter's executive order, under which Iran and the United States agreed to settle all claims of American nationals against Iranian entities through binding arbitration. An international tribunal would be called to make monetary awards, when necessary, from a security account initially funded with a portion of Iran's money and securities blocked by the freeze.

To implement the agreement, Carter also terminated any attachments against the blocked assets. A California firm which manufactures parts for military equipment filed suit against Iran in Lubbock for breach of contract, attaching the former Crown Prince's home to their suit in their claim for damages.

The Imperial Government of Iran purchased the spacious home west Lubbock home in 1978 for then-Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi while he was receiving flight training at Reese Air Force Base. The young prince, who declared himself shah after his father's death, used the residence until the overthrow of the Iranian government, when his training abruptly was declared complete and he left the country.

Following the upheaval in the middle eastern country, the revolutionary regime took possession of the home. The legal status of the property's title has remained in question since the freeze on Iranian assets imposed by Carter.

ity to open the safe and pull out the drawers before he and his wife returned later after the druggist reportedly was called from home to come to his store and fill a prescription.

He said an armed bandit would be stupid if he didn't take all the drugs, didn't kill Volpato by some other means even after running out of bullets and didn't destroy nearby phones, if the druggist was still alive when the robbers fled.

But Blenden discounted the prosecutor's hypothesis, saying a killer would not stay around a murder scene after firing six shots in the downtown area and it is common for things to be left behind during a burglary.

Also Thursday, Ernest Roger Peele, an agent with the FBI's Elemental Analysis Unit in Washington, D.C., testified he examined the bullet that had pierced Volpato's hand.

Peele said under questioning by both attorneys that fragments found on the bullet were "consistent with" material found in bone, namely calcium and phosphorus.

However, he said under re-direct examination by Blenden that calcium and phosphorus also would be detected with an electron microscope in the FBI lab if the bullet had contacted a calcium or phosphorus pill in the pharmacy.

Administration Official Denies Tax Cut Plan Favors Wealthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, denying a tilt toward the rich, says the president's tax-cut proposal comes as close to equal treatment for Americans at all income levels as any plan that has been devised.

A Treasury Department specialist, Bruce Thompson, acknowledged that many middle-income families whose earnings increase between now and 1984 will face a bigger tax boost on their additional dollars than people with higher incomes who get similar wage increases.

Thompson said, however, that the reason for the disparity is the existing tax system itself and that, within that framework, the Reagan tax changes are fair for everyone.

He noted that the tax brackets at the bottom of the income scale are narrower than those at the top. Low and middle-income families are pushed into higher tax brackets more quickly than high-income people, even if the increased earnings do nothing more than match the rise in the cost of living.

Rate Called Progressive

"Any way you look at it, it is totally progressive," he said of the Reagan proposal. "It is as fair as any we've seen."

Reagan's plan would reduce personal income-tax rates by an average of about 30 percent over the next 3½ years. It is part of his program to revitalize the economy by improving incentives for work, saving and investment. The idea is that a person will be spurred to greater effort if allowed to keep a bigger share of additional income.

"The question is how much of each extra dollar will the government take?" said Thompson, who is on the tax-policy staff of the Treasury Department.

Reduction Explained

Reagan's proposal would give the government less of each additional dollar of income. And the biggest chunk of the tax reduction would go to the people who now pay most of the taxes. Families and individuals with incomes above $30,000, for example, now pay 63.2 percent of the tax. They would receive 60.8 percent of the tax reduction. The Reagan plan is based on the assumption that these people are the ones most likely to save or invest the extra dollars they get to keep as a result of a tax cut.

Most tax cuts of the recent past gave proportionately greater reductions to those at lower income levels. That bating the fate of specific programs. They voted to spend about $1 billion more than Reagan wanted on education, handicapped and nutrition programs for low-income, pregnant women and children.

And the committee called for deeper cuts in subsidized housing for the poor in exchange for restoring $110 million of the cuts sought by Reagan in U.S. funding for the Export-Import Bank. The bank subsidizes exports by extending low-interest credit to the purchasers of American goods.

The committee's biggest departure from the Reagan program came when it called for requiring major refiners to contribute oil to the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. The government would pay the firms 10 percent a year for 11 years for the oil, as opposed to the current system under which the government purchases the oil directly from producing nations.

In general, the committee relied on support of both Republicans and Democrats to back the cuts Reagan wanted.

But on several occasions, the GOP used its new majority in the Senate to push through cuts in popular social programs over the solid opposition of Democrats.

Democratic efforts to restore some of the reductions in Social Security, public service jobs, government jobs, urban aid and nutrition programs failed narrowly in the four days of voting.

Repeated efforts by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, to force the committee to order the Finance Committee to close certain "tax loopholes" also failed, but by bigger margins.

change concerns some in Congress, who portray the Reagan program as taking from the poor and giving to the wealthy.

"That just isn't so," said Paul Craig Roberts, assistant treasury secretary for economic policy.

He and others in the Reagan administration note that those with incomes under $10,000 a year now pay only 6 percent of federal income taxes. It is almost impossible to write a big tax cut for that group of Americans, Roberts said.

But various analyses indicate that Polish counterpart, Jozef Czynek, for two days of talks expected to focus on East-West relations and Poland's multibillion-dollar foreign debt.

Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania made a surprise visit to Hungary, apparently to discuss economic and labor troubles stemming from last summer's widespread labor unrest, which led to formation of the independent union Solidarity.

In Budapest, Hungary's MTI news agency said Kania was assured by his host of solidarity with "efforts of Polish communists to restore social calm and order."

Exercises in Second Day

The Polish news agency PAP said joint Warsaw Pact exercises were in their second day in Poland and bordering Soviet bloc countries. It gave no details of the exercises.

State Department officials in Washington reacted moderately Wednesday to news of the exercises, expressing less concern than in the past that the exercises might serve to apply military pressure on the independent farmers' union that Kula's heads. Solidarity said.

Kula's group demanded the union be recognized as legal representative in all talks with the government, creation of a fund to promote agricultural development, and postponement of a conference of the so-called "agricultural circles" until delegates are elected democratically.

Strike threats spread around the country Thursday in continued ferment by Polish workers seeking labor reforms from the government.

Timbermen in the southwestern town of Gorlice first set, then canceled a warning strike over pay and working conditions, a union spokesman said. A strike alert remained in effect for Gorlice and nearby Opole, the spokesman said. Workers said the dispute could grow into a national walkout by 100,000 employees who provide wood for paper, furniture and other uses.

—Solidarity in Suwalki, 135 miles northeast of here, not far from the Soviet border, proclaimed a strike alert over an "awful shortage of hospital and clinical facilities in the Pojezierze region" and other issues. State television said the provincial governor had resigned.

A top Salvadoran military officer who asked not to be identified said, "We deny the allegations of this group. when wage inflation is considered, middle-income taxpayers — those earning between about $30,000 and $60,000 a year — would benefit less from the Reagan tax cut than would those at higher levels.

An analysis by The Associated Press found the actual tax paid by a family with a current income of $15,000 which increases to keep pace with inflation would rise by 18.7 percent from 1980 through 1984, even after the tax cut. The higher earnings would push those taxpayers into a higher tax bracket faster than the president's plan would cut tax rates.

A national strike committee, led by farm activist Jan Kula, demanded a new law by April 10 to allow registration of the independent farmers' union that Kula's heads. Solidarity said.

Kula's group demanded the union be recognized as legal representative in all talks with the government, creation of a fund to promote agricultural development, and postponement of a conference of the so-called "agricultural circles" until delegates are elected democratically.

Reagan Says 'Meeting Of The Minds' Reached During Auto Import Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan declared Thursday he has reached a "meeting of the minds" with a special task force about how to protect America's auto industry from foreign competition.

White House press secretary James S. Brady, who summarized the president's words for reporters, said Reagan commented at the end of a 55-minute meeting with the auto task force, which gave him a number of options regarding Japanese competition.

However, Brady refused to say whether the president will seek voluntary import restraints or turn to other methods. The press spokesman said a public decision is likely within two weeks, after consultations with Capitol Hill.

But Brady did disclose the task force wants to "modify some antitrust policies so auto companies would be permitted to conduct more joint research." And the president, he said, vowed to "move forward with a more detailed program of regulatory relief."

Auto Industry Supported

Reagan has said previously the auto industry is the one that could "cause a depression all by itself."

Brady said: "Before the end of the meeting the president reemphasized that he remains committed to the principles of free trade and that in general he believes the government should not become deeply entangled with the economic fortunes of any company or industry."

"At the same time," noted Brady, "he said in the campaign he believes the auto industry is now involved in a situation that is not entirely of its own making, that forces of government bear some degree of responsibility so that the government must now bear part of the responsibility for helping the auto industry back on its feet."

Consensus Reached

Brady said "a consensus was reached as to how to approach this," but insisted Reagan hadn't made a final decision.

Asked which government policies contributed to the ill health of the industry, Brady listed auto emission standards, mileage standards and tax policies.

Meanwhile, Sen. William Roth, R-Del., met with Tomio Yamamoto, Japan's vice minister of international trade, and told him Congress is likely to limit auto imports if the Japanese do not adhere to voluntary restraints.

And 23 senators told Reagan in a letter that the administration should take "timely and aggressive action" to persuade the Japanese "to adopt a trade policy which would result in a voluntary, immediate and substantial restraint of Japanese passenger car exports to the United States for a meaningful time."

Such voluntary restraint "would obviate the need for a legislative solution," the senators said in the letter, which was originated by Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind.

Reagan may have tipped his hand this week, when he said in an interview that if any protectionist measure was taken, "we would like to have it be a voluntary restraint."

In an interview with the New York Daily News, the president expressed his concern that import restraints would contribute to inflation.

"On the other hand," he added, "we're talking about the one industry in this country that can cause a depression all by itself."

Reagan declared "it is really a sick industry today," and said the administration could help reduce the cost of automobiles by trimming federal regulations, implementing tax policies to help the industry modernize and persuading "the auto workers to do what they did for the one company (Chrysler) and help in that regard."

Chrysler workers agreed to give up $783 million in wages and other benefits over the next two years after the No. 3 auto company experienced the largest loss in American corporate history — $1.71 billion last year.

Track Team Manager Reports Pellet Shooting

A 19-year-old track manager told police she was shot in the back with a pellet gun by two laughing Lubbock area high school students.

Maxine Walker, who is employed with the Estacado High School track team, said she saw the youths at East Auburn Avenue near Parkway about 1:25 p.m. Thursday. The pair was laughing, she said, and one of them was shooting a pellet gun at pedestrians.

Police said the woman had a large welt on her back but was not bleeding.

In other activity, Lori Suzanne Gailley of 3424 Frankford, Apt. 2H, told police she returned home from work about 2:45 a.m. Thursday and noticed her front door was open.

Miss Gailley said she apparently started a burglar who was hiding in the closet immediately east of the door. The intruder cut her arm with a sharp object, then fled, reports state.

Police said they found no sign of forced entry into the apartment, and the woman said the darkened room prevented her from getting a description of the burglar.

In another incident, police spoke with a 9-year-old boy accused of criminal mischief, then cleared the case after considering the cooperative attitudes of his and his parents.

Mystery Caller Claims To Be Atlanta Killer

ATLANTA (AP) — A man who says he posed as a painter to lure youngsters with job offers reportedly told a minister in a telephone call that he was driven to kill four of the city's 20 slain black children by voices he "cannot get away from."

Public Safety Commissioner Lee P. Brown said he would have no comment on the report by the Rev. Earl Paulk, which was carried in Thursday's Atlanta Journal.

Paulk said the man provided details of the crimes and motives during a six-to-eight-minute telephone call at 7:20 p.m. March 10. Paulk said it was the first time he had spoken to this man, but he has received calls from several other people claiming responsibility for the slayings since he made a Feb. 14 televised appeal for the murderer to surrender.

According to Paulk, the man claimed that he posed as a painter offering part-time jobs as a lure to the youngsters and that he had an accomplice who has since left town.

Paulk said the caller specifically claimed responsibility for the slaying of the latest victim, Curtis Walker, 13.

Otherwise, the story did not provide the details, the motive, who the other three victims were, whether the man was involved only in the four slayings or had killed others by himself.

Repeated attempts to reach Paulk were unsuccessful.

The minister told the newspaper he was to have met with the man at 8 p.m. on the night of the call, but the man failed to appear — perhaps because of several police cars near the minister's Chapel Hill Harvester Church in suburban DeKalb County.

But, Paulk insisted, "I was not a part whatsoever of any trap, and I will not be." He asked the man to arrange make contact.

The man said he was 28, married and the father of a 17-month-old child, Paulk said. "He seemed rather desperate from two points of view. He was out of money and he was tired of running," the minister added.

According to Paulk, the man claimed he drove a blue van filled with paint and a ladder and persuaded the children to go with him by offering them money to help with painting jobs.

The caller said he felt rejected and unloved and maintained he was acting on the instruction of voices when he killed the children.

Walker's body was found March 6 in a river near Paulk's church.

Lubbock Man Hurt By Tree

A Lubbock man early today found himself a little too far out on a limb following a night of beer drinking with his girlfriend and another couple.

Police said the 25-year-old subject received hospital treatment about 2 a.m. Thursday after he ran — not walked — into a tree.

He told investigators, who first thought the injured man was an assault victim, that he and his friends had been drinking beer and that he had his girlfriend stop the car near 22nd Street and Indiana Avenue so he could get out and relieve himself.

Apparently playing a joke, the woman began to drive away from her boyfriend. The man said he turned, started chasing the vehicle and slammed into a tree. A branch caught him on the left eyebrow and he scratched his elbow.

The victim was taken to St. Mary's Hospital where he was treated and later released.

Students 'Repent' After Cat Torture

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Court officials have erased the arrest records of five former University of Michigan fraternity members who tortured and killed a cat in December 1979.

Each of the men has completed the 200 hours of animal-related community service work ordered by the court, Ron Rinker, supervisor of the 15th District Court's probation department, said Wednesday.

The men, who formerly belonged to the Ann Arbor chapter of Alpha Delta Phi, were "sufficiently repentant," Rinker said.

Injunction Requested Against School Board

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In view of Lubbock school officials' past record of allowing unconstitutional religious practices, they cannot be expected to cease those activities without the force of an injunction, according to appeal briefs filed in the case.

Both the Lubbock Civil Liberties Union, which filed suit in 1979 opposing prayer in the public schools, and the American Jewish Congress have filed briefs in the case that now is before the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La.

The AJ Congress, a New York City-based organization founded to protect the constitutional rights of American Jews, was granted friend-of-the-court status after asking to support the LCLU.

A friend of the court is an outside party who is allowed to participate in a lawsuit, usually by filing arguments in the form of a brief.

The briefs have started the appeals process in the case which was tried in U.S. District Court here in November. The litigation was a partial victory for both the school district and the LCLU, but the civil libertarian organization chose to appeal parts of federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward's ruling.

Both the AJ Congress and the LCLU are asking the appellate court to remedy Woodward's failure to issue an injunction preventing future constitutional violations by the district in its application of the district's newest prayer policy. The policy, adopted last August, was approved by the judge, although he found the schools guilty of past violations.

The two organizations also are asking the Fifth Circuit to strike down a portion of that policy allowing students to meet for religious purposes on school property outside school hours.

In addition, the LCLU is requesting that the appellate court reconsider Woodward's decision to award the organization only nominal damages of $1.

The AJ Congress, which termed the litigation a "major church-state test case" in a recent newsletter, asserts in its brief that the Lubbock case "boils down to" whether claims of future good intentions preclude the need for an injunction. Those intentions are not sufficient, attorneys for the organization claim.

AJ Congress attorneys state that the school district officials continuously disregarded students' constitutional rights in the past, especially in light of Supreme Court rulings on religion in public schools.

LCLU attorneys give in their brief little credit to the school district for its new prayer policy, since it was adopted only three months before the federal court trial began. And they contend that school officials never abandoned their prior stance that student-initiated religious activities are constitutionally permissible "although the settled law is to the contrary."

Unconstitutional practices never discontinued even after the August prayer policy was adopted, LCLU attorneys further assert in their brief.

Continental Expanding Flights Into Lubbock

By JOE GULICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Continental Airlines will beef up its Lubbock service beginning June 1 with non-stop flights to Austin and Denver and one-stop flights to Houston.

Dr. John Bradford, chairman of the aviation committee of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, made the announcements Thursday at a chamber news conference. The service to Denver will make available numerous connections in the Denver hub, Bradford said.

The new flight will depart Houston at 8:30 a.m., Austin at 9:35 a.m. and arrive in Lubbock at 10:40 a.m. Departure from Lubbock will be at 11:05 CDT and arrival in Denver will be at 11:30 MDT.

The return flight will depart from Denver at 7:45 p.m. MDT and arrive in Lubbock at 10:03 p.m. CDT. The flight will leave Lubbock for Austin at 10:28 p.m. and arrive at 11:31 p.m. Arrival in Houston will be at 12:37 a.m.

The new service will be in addition to Continental's two present westbound flights each day.

Continental plans to add additional flights to make eastbound connections from both Denver and Houston if the new flights beginning in June are successful, Bradford said.

Chamber president Lee Stafford said Lubbock, with the beefed-up Continental service and the addition of American Airlines service in Lubbock this June, will probably have the best airline service of any city of its size in the United States.

American Airlines will provide the city with an eastern hub and Continental will provide the western hub in Denver, Stafford said.

Mayor Bill McAllister said it is the desire of the city and chamber to make Lubbock the air capital of West Texas and Eastern New Mexico and said he was proud that Continental is increasing service to the city.

He commended Bradford for his hard work and effort and many trips to Continental Airlines headquarters to lobby for the additional flights.

Continental Airlines regional manager T.V. "Tom" O'Donnell said pricing on the new flights is not yet determined, but that it will be competitive.

The boardings for the airline decreased by six percent in the past year, but the boardings on a per-flight basis increased, O'Donnell said.

Mayor Proclaims Ag Awareness Week

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

A proclamation issued by Lubbock Mayor Bill McAllister Thursday designating March 22-28 Agriculture Awareness and Appreciation Week should have been inscribed on gold, he said, because of the industry's staggering impact on the area economy.

"Agriculture is our mainstay," McAllister said. "This proclamation should not be taken lightly."

Dr. Bill Bennett, chairman of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce Agriculture Committee, said about 65 percent of Lubbock's economy is tied to agriculture production, compared to about 30 percent in other Texas cities.

Nationwide the average farmer produces enough to feed 69 people, Bennett added, but the High Plains commercial farmer produces enough for about 300 people.

Throughout the week, the Chamber of Commerce and the National Food and Fiber Institute of Achievement are co-sponsoring a variety of activities which will be open to the public free of charge.

Headlining the events will be a rodeo, a natural fibers sewing contest and style show, implement exhibits and addresses by state and national agriculture officials.

Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown will address the Taste of Texas buffet which will feature an abundant sampling of Texas-produced beef, pork, lamb, vegetables, fruits and nuts. Tickets for the meal are available from the Food and Fiber Institute for $10 a person.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

A few months ago, I suggested that television ease up a little on sex in Texas and give the other 49 states a chance to be unscrupulous and immoral. So far, no one has taken the bait.

J.R. and the Ewing clan have made sex the biggest group sport since water volleyball. They've also succeeded in setting a style that the entire country is trying to emulate.

To be perfectly honest, I've had it with the Western look. If I never see another fanny in a pair of tight jeans it will be too soon for me. If I never see another chase between a pick-up truck and a sports car, it'll be just fine. If I never see a man in a ten-gallon hat arguing about his inheritance, I can live.

No wonder we don't have any oil in this country. We can't get the oilmen out of the bedroom and back on the oil rigs where they belong.

I'm not exaggerating when I talk about the impact Texas has had on the country. In one week alone, I received booklets and ads that offered: Western pillows, boots with matching bags, a doormat that says, "Hi Y'all," horn-shaped beer steins, a stuffed Clydesdale for the wall, a tie clasp in the shape of a Conestoga Wagon, a bolo tie, a belt made out of diamond-back rattlesnake hide, and a game called "Go to Texas."

There's also a silver boot match-holder, packets of Texas chili with enamelware to serve it in, belt buckles, a pound of Texas leather to carry around because it looks and smells great, an oil cap with J.R.'s official emblem on it, an eight-inch ceramic armadillo filled with jalapeno lollipops, barbed-wire swizzle sticks and napkin holders.

I don't deny Texas is easy to fall in love with... the warmth of its people, the outgoing honesty, the extremes and the laid-back lifestyle, but let's not get limited by our imagination. What's the Midwest city you think of when you think of sin? Cleveland!

Try this plot on for size. An envelope baron is buying up all the stationery manufacturers in the Midwest to create a monopoly and bring corporations to their knees. He has a wife who winters in Akron and a mistress in Chagrin Falls. He is trying to marry his only daughter off to a glue magnate and is upset because his only son wants to clerk in a maternity shop. One night the Cuyahoga River catches fire and one of his envelopes is seen on the banks, near the crime.

I'm telling you. Give it a chance and in three months the whole country will be talking with a Cleveland accent and wearing loafers.

A HELPING HAND CAN COME IN HANDY.

Volunteers Sought For Project On Fatherhood In Mid-Years

LINCOLN, NEB. (Special) — Volunteers are needed for a national project being conducted at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in the area of fatherhood in the middle years.

Two groups of fathers are needed for this study: those who have become fathers for the first time between the ages of 40 and 60; and "recycled" fathers between 40-60 who have grown children and are presently raising young children.

Persons interested in participating in the study should write to Dr. Nick Stinnett, Middle Years Father Project, Department of Human Development and the Family, University of Nebraska at Lincoln, Lincoln, Neb., 68583.

Volunteers will be asked to fill out a questionnaire concerning being a father during the middle years. All participants will be sent copies of the final research results if requested. Dr. Stinnett notes that there is a great need for this type of research to obtain some important insights concerning fatherhood during the middle years of life. This phenomenon is becoming more frequent due to the dramatic rise of divorce and remarriage rates.

Digestion, absorption and even utilization of nutrients may be less efficient as the individual grows older.

ANN LANDERS

Neighbor Should Keep Quiet

Dear Ann Landers: I live in a large city. (Please don't say where, if you print my letter.) The neighborhood is not the best, but it's not the worst, either. I would call it middle-class.

There was a dog across the street that barked from morning till night. He really drove me crazy. I spoke to the owners twice, and they said they would do their best to keep him quiet, but the situation never improved.

Last week, while waiting for the bus, I met the man who lives next door to me. He asked if I was bothered by the barking dog across the street. I told him yes, plenty, and that I had complained to the owners, but they never did anything. He said, "I'm fed up, too, and one of these days I'm going to take care of it."

Three days later I heard the dog was found dead. Somebody shot him. I have no proof, but I am almost sure the man next door did it. Should I go to the police? I am afraid that if I do, and he finds out I turned him in, he might get me next. I need some advice. — City Dweller Who Feels Guilty

Dear Dweller: You have no proof that the man next door shot the dog. It could have been any number of neighbors — or even a would-be burglar, so MYOB.

Dear Ann Landers: You printed a letter a while back from a correspondent who was critical of the many ragged and torn flags he had seen, and in Boston, of all places.

I wish you would print a line or two for the benefit of the retailers in this country. Flags should be made more readily available for patriotic Americans who want them. Sears told me if I wanted a flag I would have to order one from the catalog. K-Mart had U.S. flags in the toy department — under the bicycle tires!

Many stores I tried did not carry flags, and some that did priced them out of the reach of working people. No merchant should make more than a modest profit on the sale of a United States flag. If you agree with me, Ann, please print my letter. — I Read You In Pensacola

Dear Pensacola: I do. Here it is.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night my husband and I had dinner with his brother and sister. The woman told the dirtiest joke I ever heard. I was shocked and didn't laugh. On the way home my husband said I was rude. He claims I embarrassed her and that I should have laughed — regardless. Is he right or wrong? — No Ha Ha

Dear No: He's wrong. People who don't like dirty jokes shouldn't have to pretend that they do. The best way to discourage repeats is to be a poor audience. I'm with you, Babe.

Dear Ann Landers: A close friend gave our child a check for $25 on the event of her first communion. The check bounced. We can't understand it. These people are fairly well-to-do.

My husband says our daughter should write a thank-you note, and we should let the matter drop. I say we should send the check through the bank a second time and, if it bounces again, return it to the giver. It says "insufficient funds" across the top. What do you say? — Memphis Mystery

Dear M.M.: Send it through again. If it does a double bounce, your daughter should write a thank-you note, and nothing should be said.

What kind of wedding goes with today's new life styles? Does anything go? Ann Landers' completely new "The Bride's Guide" tells what's right for today's weddings. For a copy, send a dollar, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (15 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Stuffed, Dipped Artichokes Make Good Eating

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

While driving in the area of Castroville, Calif. (south of San Francisco), you will see hundreds of acres of stubby, green artichokes — a sight unduplicated anywhere else in the U.S.

Artichokes are grown in other parts of the world, and it has been said that Cleopatra brought artichokes to Rome. Fifteenth-century Italians considered them an aphrodisiac. History records that Henry VIII doted on them. And, luckily for us, artichokes found a happy growing ground in California.

Actually, the artichoke is the edible flowers of the thistle, and in a good year the plants will provide 100 million or so gourmet delights. Packed fresh, peak supplies usually hit the market in April.

Although devotees would eat artichokes no matter what, they are an excellent source of potassium, phosphorus and iron. Also, another benefit is that a large head (without sauce) has only 58 calories.

Should you be unfamiliar preparing an artichoke, do follow the directions for "Savory Artichokes" given below. But many people like to stuff artichokes.

However, the purist will never stuff an artichoke, because he detests the idea of the tender top leaves and hearts being pulled away before eating — these being the best part.

How to eat an artichoke? — Easy, but only after a first experience.

Remember that artichokes are finger food. Just pull off the outer leaves, one at a time. Dip into melted, clarified butter sauce, seasoned with lemon preferably.

Then, take the narrow end of the leaf, drawing the thick end of each leaf through your teeth. Of course, in the process, you are to scrap off the soft inner portion.

Daintily, discard the remains of the leaf, placing on a plate. Continue this way until you reach the purple-tipped core of tight, light inner leaves. Reach in, pulling out these leaves, and discard. Following, scoop out the hairy choke with a spoon.

With knife and fork, cut and eat the richly flavored heart, dipping each piece into sauce, if desired.

Cooked artichokes will keep in the refrigerator for several days. Thus, you can prepare ahead to use as an appetizer, snack or party treat.

SAVORY ARTICHOKE

6 artichokes
6 tbsp. wine vinegar or lemon juice
6 tsp. oil
2 cloves garlic
1 tsp. salt
6 peppercorns or pinch of crushed red pepper
With sharp or saw-toothed knife, cut off artichoke stems level with base. Cut off top 1/2-inch of each artichoke. Pull off and discard tough base leaves.

With scissors, trim the point from each leaf (this whole process is done more quickly than it sounds). Drop artichokes in a bowl of water with a little vinegar or lemon juice. Wash well.

Place artichokes base-down in a deep enamel-lined or stainless pan just large enough to hold them side-by-side. Pour 1 tablespoon each of vinegar (to prevent discoloration) and oil (to flavor and shine) over top leaves of each globe. Add enough boiling water to cover, then add remaining ingredients.

Cover and bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, about 40 minutes or until a leaf can be pulled off easily. Remove from heat and let stand in cooking liquid about 2 hours or until cool. Drain and serve (reserve liquid for dips). Or, to store, remove artichokes from liquid and place in a deep bowl. Strain liquid and boil down rapidly to about 1-1/2 cups, then cool.

Pour liquid over artichokes and store in refrigerator. These are so flavorful, a dip is optional.

Here is a sampling of dips.

MAYONNAISE SAUCE

Using wire whisk, beat 1 egg yolk with 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, salt if desired, 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground white pepper.

Gradually beat in 1/2 cup olive or vegetable oil, 1 tablespoon artichoke cooking liquid. Makes about 3/4 cup sauce.

MELTED CLARIFIED BUTTER SAUCE

Heat 1/4 pound butter; let stand until white foam subsides. Pour the clear fat into heated sauceboat, discard foam and solids. To the clear butter, add juice and grated outer rind of 1 lemon.

Enjoy!

Bridge

By Oswald Jacoby
and Alan Sontag

South was in a garrulous mood, so when East failed to cover dummy's heart honor with the king he turned to East and said, "Nice play. I can let dummy hold the trick and struggle along for the next ten minutes to see if I can make a whole hat full of no trump tricks, but I am no hog. I will play what looks like nullo, but be sure of game and rubber."

Then he plucked his ace on his partner's winner and continued his nullo tactics by leading his king of diamonds and overtaking with dummy's ace. Next came the play of the jack of diamonds.

East could and did duck, but South led another diamond which East had to win. East played king and another heart to set up two heart tricks, but South simply ran off three more diamonds and the ace-king of spades to wind up with two spades, two hearts, five diamonds, game and rubber.

In some ways we are bridge cowards. We are not going to get into an analysis of what would or might happen if South let dummy hold the first heart. He might actually find out some way to bring in nine tricks. He would have to do it without bringing in the diamond suit and we can assure you that against best defense he wouldn't get those nine tricks home. If he played badly after the first horrible play, he might be down two or even three. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

WHAT A SMARTIE!

DEAR HELOISE: The pretty pot holders with the pretty wooden rings for hanging seem to get dirty same as the other not-so-pretty ones.

So to launder them, I cut loose one end of the loop, which holds the ring, and sewed a small snap fastener to the loop. I sewed the other part of the snap to the potholder.

Now, it's a snap to remove the wooden ring when the holder needs to go in the wash. — Helen S.

HINTS FROM HELOISE:

Pet Stores Offer Cheap Activated Charcoal

DEAR HELOISE:

Someone recently asked about using regular charcoal in the refrigerator instead of the more expensive, activated kind.

Did you know pet stores sell the activated charcoal for around a dollar a pound?

I cut a circle of nylon net (what else!), place a large handful of charcoal in the center, gather up the net and tie it securely with string or a twistie.

Since this charcoal does have dust, I hold it under running water until the water is clear, set it aside to drain, then place in the fridge.

When my nose tells me a change is needed, I just untie the net, discard the charcoal and start all over again with the same old net.

Many of your hints help me tremendously — hope this helps someone else. — Penny-pincher

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Green Leafy Vegetables Rich In Folic Acid

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.
Dear Dr. Donohue: Some time ago, I read about folic acid and how it would help in curing one type of anemia. Could you tell me some kinds of foods that have folic acid in them naturally? I prefer to try foods that contain folic acid rather than take it medicinally. — E.F.P.

Foods rich in folic acid include liver, spinach, lettuce, asparagus, in fact most green leafy vegetables.

Now, let me ask you a question: Where did you learn that you need folic acid supplements? A point I've tried to make, probably to the point of nausea, is that just because a small amount of a substance is vital to health does not mean that a lot of it improves health.

I cannot tell from your letter, but it may well be that you are one of those rare persons with folic acid deficiency. If so, the following should be of interest to you. If not, then forget about supplements, because any balanced diet supplies all of it you need.

The kind of anemia I speak of is macrocytic anemia. The folic acid is essential for the correct formation of red blood cells. A deficiency of folic acid causes those cells to grow larger than they should. That's what macrocytic anemia is.

All of the above has to be qualified. An elderly person trying to live on canned foods only or on a tea-and-toast diet can become deficient in folic acid. Some is destroyed in cooking, so a person in this situation should be sure to get some form of the green foods I mentioned. Too, a pregnant woman has increased need for folic acid, so may need supplements.

For the vast majority of us folic acid need not be of concern. The various nutrient needs and their deficiency states are discussed at some length in the booklet "Vitamins: Facts You Need to Know." For a copy write Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have suffered four years with shingles pain. Some people tell me it will finally wear off. Others say it might wear you out first. I thought maybe by now you could come up with some ideas for relief. — Mrs. M.C.

Shingles is a nerve virus infection. The blister-like rash arises where the infected nerve endings are. To visualize a nerve, picture a plant root. The main nerve is the stem and the hundreds of little hairy root endings are the nerve rootlets. These tiny rootlets branch up into the soil of the skin where they pick up signals for the brain — cold, heat, pain, touch, etc. The virus that causes shingles travels along the main nerve to its many skin endings.

However, when the skin infection clears, many people are left with intolerable pain in the area. At times, it can take years for that pain to leave completely. Doctors have taken a wide variety of approaches to the problem. Some use steroids to prevent pain after the infection begins. Others try to block nerves with Novocaine-like drugs.

The earlier either is done the better chance of minimizing the post-shingles pain. Some try a combination of amitriptyline and perphenazine to ease pain. A newer approach is with electrical nerve stimulators. I sympathize with you. I realize how painful this can be. Unfortunately, none of the above methods can guarantee relief.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am taking a drug called bromocriptine. Can this drug make me feel depressed, as I am a great deal of the time? — Mrs. R.G.

I find fatigue listed as a possible side effect in a small number of users, but not depression. Does your physician know about your depression? He should.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Could you and the questioner both have missed the secret of health and longevity of the 89-year-old woman who still works, drives her own car, lives alone and keeps up her yard work? The dear lady is just too busy to die or even get sick. Perhaps more realization of those principles would relieve the doctor shortage — or would that be good? — V.C.

That would be great!

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have high blood pressure and plan to buy a home blood pressure taking kit. When is the best time of the day to take one's blood pressure? — J.W.

The best time to check your blood pressure is at about the same time every day AND under the same circumstances. If you want to take it in the morning, that's okay so long as you are consistent and not trying to compare the reading with that obtained in the afternoon. Following the same rules, it's okay to take the reading in the afternoons. Whenever you take it relax for about 15 or 30 minutes before to get an honest reading.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column, whenever possible.

"MURPHY TROPHY" — Bill Gallagher, one of the organizers of the West Texas Chess Club, holds the "Murphy Trophy" to be awarded at the club's first tournament scheduled for April. The club is seeking members.

West Texas Chess Club Seeks Members, National Affiliation

The recently-organized West Texas Chess Club is announcing a membership drive for its Spring tournament scheduled in April. The club meets every Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Maxey Community Center, 30th and Oxford Streets.

Interested persons are encouraged to attend any weekly meeting to acquaint themselves with the club's program and benefits. As members they will qualify to

OLDEST KNOWN NUT

The pistachio may be the oldest known nut in the world. Major pistachio production has been in the middle east, but California is becoming major producer of pistachios and in future years we may be seeing more of these delicious nuts. Pistachios are used in stuffings, pates, breads, cakes and other desserts. They can be used raw or salted.

compete for the first "Maxey Trophy"

The club, established by Bill Gallagher and Don Maddox, is being structured to competitively challenge local and regional organizations in matches and tournaments. Ultimately, they want to attract national recognition as a focus of chess activity in the Southwest.

Sponsored by the City of Lubbock Parks and Recreation Department, the club is expected to become affiliated with the United States Chess Federation. In the future, they expect to adopt a constitution and elect officers. Under the direction of Maddox, they expect to institute a fund-raising drive which will include games of marathon chess.

For further information, interested persons may call Maxine Mull at the Maxey Community Center at 762-6411, ext. 2696.

'Pungent' Advice Given On Shopping For Onions

NEW YORK (Special) — The March Reader's Digest has pungent information to ensure that you know your onions.

Green onions should be young, crisp and tender — with fresh green tops, medium-sized necks and well-blanching (white) coloring for two or three inches from the root. Because they are highly perishable, store them in the refrigerator in a plastic bag in the crisper section.

Dry onions, the U.S. Department of Agriculture advises, should be hard or firm, with small necks. They should be covered with papery outer scales and reasonably free from green sunburn spots and other blemishes. Avoid onions with wet or very soft necks. Also avoid onions with thick, hollow, woody centers in the neck or with fresh sprouts. Size does not affect the quality. Large onions are for slicing, medium for roasting or boiling, small for boiling or pickling.

All onions become sweet when cooked, but cooking too long can cause bitterness. In stews and casseroles, small whole white onions are often best. Select mild onions for sandwiches and salads. In soups containing milk or cream, first blanch the onions to reduce acidity.

Onions should be stored in a well-ventilated, dry place. Don't store them in piles; single layers ensure longer life. Chopped fresh onions will stay fresh in a screw-top jar in the refrigerator for a week. Onions also freeze well: peel and slice, separate into rings, and freeze on a cookie sheet.

To remove onion pungency from the hands, rub well with vinegar, salt or lemon juice, then wash with hot water and plenty of soap.

To avoid tears, refrigerate onions for a couple of hours before peeling, or peel them under running water.

Federal Injunction Requested

new policy is no assurance that they will not resume the illegal practices unless enjoined to do so, and the district court abused its discretion in denying plaintiff's requested relief," the LCLU document states.

The AJ Congress brief adds, "The Lubbock Independent School District has had its chance to repent and reform. It has not."

The two organizations also challenge students' rights to gather on public school campuses outside school hours for religious meetings. The policy allowing such meetings "would allow the Lubbock public schools to become annexes of churches and synagogues. This the Constitution surely forbids," the AJ Congress brief states.

Both briefs claim the policy fails the "tripartite test" set up by the Supreme Court for determining violations of the Constitution that forbids the establishment of religion by the state.

The policy, the briefs state, does not pass any of the test requirements which demand that the practice in question have a secular purpose, that it neither advances nor inhibits religion and that it must not foster "an excessive government entanglement with religion."

LCLU attorneys state that "in every case involving organized religious exercise in the public schools, compulsory or voluntary, state or student initiated, publicly or privately financed, the practices have been declared violative of the Establishment Clause."

The AJ Congress brief claims that interference with the free exercise of religion because of adherence to the Establishment Clause "is the price of the bargain struck to preserve religious liberty."

LCLU attorneys have asked that the Fifth Circuit hear oral arguments in the prayer case.

New York Policeman

Charged In Murder

BRENTWOOD, N.Y. (AP) — A New York City police sergeant has been charged with murder for allegedly shooting another police sergeant in a car during a heated argument following St. Patrick's Day celebrations.

The car was being driven by a third policeman who lost control of the auto when the shots were fired. All three officers were off-duty.

The three reportedly had spent hours drinking in a Brentwood bar before the shooting occurred Wednesday morning.

The dead officer, Sgt. Jack Sweeney, 39, was married and had four children.

Council Views Regulations For Kiosk Structures

By MARC FLAKE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Some kind of directive concerning the erection of kiosks, those mini-buildings used for film drops, automatic tellers, snow cone dispensing and other uses, was requested by the Zoning Board of Adjustment at its regular meeting Thursday morning.

Before the board heard the first of four cases concerning that type of structure, member Paul Godwin asked the city staff to have the city Planning and Zoning Commission draw up a policy designating the number of kiosks that should be allowed on shopping centers, what determines compatibility with the shopping centers they are located on and what kind of materials the kiosks should be limited to.

"Are we going to have to allow a fence of these around a shopping center?" he asked. "If we had requests like that this morning, we wouldn't have had any policy to follow."

Man Believed Long-Dead Cited In Death

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A man thought to have died in a fiery car crash nine years ago has been charged with murdering the unidentified person whose charred body was actually in the wreckage, authorities said Thursday.

Lt. E.J. Wilhelm of the Richmond County sheriff's department said John Henry Owens and his wife, Nellie Pearl Owens, were arrested Tuesday in DeLand, Fla., where they were living under assumed names.

They were charged initially with theft by deception in connection with an insurance settlement that was paid to the Owens family after Owens was thought to have died, Wilhelm said.

The murder charge was lodged against the two after they were brought to the Richmond County jail in Augusta Wednesday night, he said.

Wilhelm said authorities don't have a clue to the identity of the person whose charred remains were removed from Owens' 1956 Cadillac following the crash on Nov. 12, 1972.

The body, which was buried in an unmarked grave, will be exhumed in an effort to identify the victim, he said, but the remains may be of little use in establishing the dead person's identity.

Sheriff J.B. Dykes said the charred car was found smashed into a boulder near the stone quarry where Owens worked.

Mrs. Owens received an insurance settlement from a $100,000 policy after authorities concluded the remains belonged to Owens, Wilhelm said.

Dykes said his office recently opened an investigation after receiving a tip that Owens was still alive.

"Why it wasn't pursued in 1972, I'll never know," the sheriff said. "At this time it appears our next step is to see if we can determine just who is buried in that grave."

GETTING MALLED

Americans spend more time in shopping malls than anywhere else outside their homes and jobs. Not only do they go to the malls to purchase merchandise, but they can go to church there, register to vote, give blood, bet, work and meditate. In some large malls it is even possible to rent a hotel room, an apartment or a condominium.

The board approved three kiosk variances involving automatic tellers this morning, but continued a fourth which involved a portable snow-cone stand.

One automatic teller variance request was modified to require that it comply with set-back requirements at 71st Street and Quaker Avenue. The board required the kiosk to remain on the south side of the parking lot, because a Fox Photos kiosk will be located on the north side of the shopping center.

The board approved that part of the variance of an ordinance which requires kiosks be aligned with other buildings on a shopping center, but required that the structure meet the set-back requirements.

The kiosk will be built as a joint venture between First Federal Savings and Loan and Lubbock National Bank.

The two institutions were also granted a variance on a kiosk to be built at 5001 University Ave.

Zoning Administrator Jerrell Northcutt pointed out the institutions would be constructing about six more kiosks at various locations around the city that complied with existing ordinances.

Alan White, representing First Federal and Lubbock National, said that these structures would become more prevalent as more banks and savings and loans began taking advantage of an amendment passed last year.

A variance for a kiosk to be built for State Savings and Loan at 6801 Indiana Ave. was also approved.

However, a set-back variance for a snow-cone stand proposed at Town and Country Shopping Center at University Avenue and 4th Street was continued for one month because board members did not see that the variance was necessary.

Robert Waltman, a Texas Tech University graduate student who said he would own and operate the business, told the board that the location he had selected was the only place which would comply with electrical ordinances governing overhead wiring.

However, Godwin said there were other places in the shopping center which complied with alignment and set-back rules.

Board member Chuck Laney made a motion to continue the request for a month, at which time Waltman would either be able to prove electrical hook ups were not possible or that he may be able to comply with present ordinances.

In other business, the board approved:

- A sign variance for the Country Inn Motel.
- A sign variance for Lorenz Gulf Service station.
- A variance to allow the expansion of a single family residence at 314 Vernon Ave. in a high density housing zoning district.

— A variance to build a self-service gasoline station in a local retail district at 82nd Street and Quaker Avenue.

— A request to install a mobile home for security purposes at 2112 Clovis Road.

— A request to operate a business at 6213 Kenosha Drive. Mrs. Thomas Bunch will be allowed to take phone orders and make deliveries of helium balloon bouquets for one year.

— A variance for the height requirements of a building to be constructed at Loop 289 and 68th Street.

Mailing a letter will cost you 3 cents more beginning Sunday, when the U.S. Postal Service's first domestic rate hike in three years goes into effect.

Under the new rate schedules, the cost of mailing a first-class letter will go from the current 15 cents up to 18 cents, and increases will take place in other classes of mail.

But all the rate changes won't cost postal patrons more money, according to Don Jones, manager of retail sales for the Postal Service here. Jones noted that some fees — such as the rental charges on local post office boxes — actually will decrease in cost.

One of the most noticeable changes brought on by this rate increase will be the use of nondenominated postage stamps — known as "B" stamps — and other nondenominated postal items.

Jones explained that the "B" stamps are necessary because the Postal Service "is on hold." Last year, the Board of Governors for the Postal Service filed with the Postal Rate Commission for a 20-cent first-class rate and a total rate package that would produce $3.75 billion in new revenue.

"We wanted a 20-cent stamp, but we were given an 18-cent stamp," Jones said.

Postal officials have estimated that the new rates will produce about $1 billion less in revenue than they originally had sought.

The Board of Governors voted March 10 to allow the new postal rates to go into effect under protest and returned the case to the rate commission for reconsideration.

However, the Bureau of Engraving does not have time to make constant changes in stamps, Jones said. The nondenominated stamps were produced as a contingency, he said, noting that they will assure the nation an adequate stamp supply.

Postal officials have emphasized that the nondenominated stamps, postal cards and stamped envelopes can be used only within the United States and are prohibited for use on international mail.

Nondenominated "A" stamps were issued under similar circumstances in May 1978, Jones said. The only difference in the two stamps, he said, is their color. The "A" stamp had an orange background, while the "B" stamp is purple.

The 15-cent first-class rate will be good for all letters postmarked through Saturday, Jones said. After that date, he said that 15-cent stamps can be combined with stamps of lower denominations to provide the correct postage.

Jones also noted an increase in the rate for each additional ounce of a letter. For first-class, he said, the additional weight rate will go from 13 cents up to 17 cents.

The 15-cent stamps combined with lower denomination stamps can be used to cover the necessary postage for extra weight, he said.

However, there may be a few problems in obtaining some of the lower denomination stamps, Jones said. He explained that there are plenty of 3-cent and 5-cent stamps, but there may be an initial shortage of 1-cent and 2-cent stamps.

The new schedule of postal rates and fees may be a little confusing for customers at first, Jones admitted. "Some prices have gone down, while others have increased," he said.

One of the areas where Lubbock postal patrons will experience some savings, Jones said, is for post office box rentals.

In the past, the rental fee for the smallest post office box was $14 every six months, Jones said. He noted the six-month rental charge will decrease to $10. For a medium-size post office box, the rental fee will drop from $20 to $13, Jones said.

"All of the box rents have gone down in Lubbock," the local postal official said. But he noted that box rental charges in some other areas have been increased.

Postal patrons also will find some changes in the fee structure for money orders. Jones said that some fees have gone up, but others were decreased.

For example, he said, the charge for a $10 money order will go from 55 cents up to 75 cents. But the charge to obtain a $25 money order will drop from 80 cents to 75 cents, he added.

The new rate schedule will provide some ways that people can save money, according to Jones. He noted an increase in the discount provided large mailers that presort their first-class letters according to Zip Code. The discount will be increased from 2 cents up to 3 cents, Jones said.

Film To Portray 'Escape From Iran'

TORONTO (AP) — For the next few weeks, banners bearing the image of the Ayatollah Khomeini will be common on the streets of Toronto, along with an occasional straw effigy of Jimmy Carter, some gun-toting mock Iranians and crudely made placards proclaiming "Death to American Fascists."

Parts of the city are being transformed into Tehran for production of "Escape from Iran," a made-for-TV movie — already bought by CBS and Canadian Television for broadcast as early as May — about the Canadian-engineered escape last year of six Americans from Iran.

The six escaped on Nov. 4, 1979, when Iranians stormed the U.S. embassy and eventually became the "houseguests" of Canadian Ambassador Ken Taylor and his wife, Pat, and diplomat John Shear-down and his wife, Zena.

After three tension-filled months in hiding, they slipped through Tehran airport on Canadian passports.

Getting CBS to accept the idea that Toronto would be a believable stand-in for Tehran took some prodding by Les Harris, the movie's producer, who says he tangled with the American network on other matters, too.

"They (CBS) wanted us to shoot it in a Middle Eastern location," says Harris. "They couldn't believe that Tehran is actually a very modern city. It's all glass and brick, and it's one of the things Khomeini hates about the Shah's Iran."

An Iranian bazaar, one of the few outdoor locations that does not call for a modern buildings, will be filmed in Kensington Market, an older, ethnic neighborhood of Toronto.

In addition, Hollywood-based network executives couldn't accept the fact that Tehran actually gets ice and snow, says Harris.

"As a matter of fact, the Americans almost didn't make it out last Jan. 28 because a snowstorm two days earlier had closed down the airport," the producer says.

Busy Actress Moves To 'Coal Dust'

By JERRY BUCK
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jennifer Warren had just finished a movie the night before, but she already had the script for her next project.

Miss Warren, one of Hollywood's busiest actresses, had wrapped up "Freedom," a true story based on the relationship between a screenwriter and her rebellious 16-year-old daughter, to be broadcast by ABC in May. Marc Wainwright plays the daughter with Miss Warren in the lead.

Next up, in what she hopes will be her producing debut, is "Coal Dust." She developed the story with writer Ron Turbeville after spotting a newspaper story about Marilyn McCusker, the first woman to be killed in a coal mining accident. Miss Warren bought the rights to the story from the dead miner's family.

"I just got the second rewrite on the script today," she said. "I haven't read it yet, but I hear it's good. CBS will see it soon."

Miss Warren sipped coffee and munched on a cookie from a basket of goodies sent by ABC. She was in the living room of the hilltop home near Pacific Palisades that she shares with her husband, Roger Gimbel, head of EMI Television, and their infant son, Barrett Warren Gimbel.

"Freedom" was written by Barbara Turner, about herself and one of her daughters, Carrie.

"Barbara and Carrie had a kind of love-hate relationship," Miss Warren said. "Carrie joins a traveling carnival, but finally they're able to come together and have an understanding. The real carry people played themselves in the picture, except for one of two major roles. In fact, all of the real people were there, either on camera or behind it."

Miss Warren said she hopes to co-produce "Coal Dust" with Sudie Dostol, and she said she also wants to star as Marilyn McCusker.

"It's an interesting story about the woman and her relationships," she said. "She left an old life to go to Coalport with her 12-year-old son to become a miner."

"She liked mining. It was the first time she'd made a living wage. Then she met a man down there — it's really a love story with a mining background."

She's also reaching elsewhere, she said. She will produce a program on the poems and songs of German playwright Bertolt Brecht for the CBS Cable network. And she will direct a movie for the American Film Institute's women's projects series.

"I've spent my whole life in the theater," Miss Warren said. "I went into films thinking it was the exploitive medium and theater was cultural. But I've had the opportunity to do more expressive things in film and television than in the theater."

The Treaty of Portsmouth ended the Russo-Japanese War in 1905. Russia lost every battle and its fleet was destroyed at Tsushima three months before.

"If you love movies, this weekend, pop over to 'American Pop.' Animation soars anew through the daring creativity of Ralph Bakshi."

Bakshi's 'American Pop' Lacks Snap, Crackle

"American Pop." Screenplay by Ronni Kern. Edited by David Ramirez. Music adaptation and original music by Lee Holdridge. Directed by Ralph Bakshi. Featuring the voices of Fon Thompson, Marya Small, Jerry Holland, Lisa Jane Persky, Jeffrey Lippe and Ros Kelly. Rated R. At The Mann Fourplex.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Ralph Bakshi's animated musical document "American Pop" immediately takes rank as one of the year's most disappointing — and oftentimes downright dull — motion pictures. The ever-controversial moviemaker, who first shocked audiences with animated blood and drug addiction and foul language, and then went on to lose the support of traditionalists by cheating via rotoscoping, returns with this film to the urban cynicism expressed in his "Fritz The Cat" and "Heavy Traffic."

BENNY

There's just one problem: "American Pop" never makes its point clear. Indeed, to sport the obvious analogy, there is no snap or crackle in "American Pop." It doesn't speak to us. The characters are stereotypes, actually walking symbols, which is fine if there's a purpose behind it. But Bakshi is too vague, his pacing too erratic, his clashes meaningless, his musical chronology out of wack. Live action bombs like "Star Trek: The Motion Picture" proved only too well that technical wizardry cannot save a film void of reasoning but, for that matter, there is not much magic in Bakshi's visuals, either.

The magic of animation, after all — and I'm referring to drawn animation rather than stop-motion (like Harryhausen's efforts) — lies both in the originality of story and character and the fluid motion expressed. That sort of painstaking work, the sort still associated to some extent with the Disney studio, literally takes many years to accomplish. And Ralph Bakshi doesn't want to take that many years to make a movie.

That's why he re-introduced rotoscoping while filming "The Lord Of The Rings," a technique by which he films his movies with live actors and then has his "animators" trace over and paint the figures in each individual frame.

Mind you, it's vastly unfair to accuse him of being controlled by the time factor. Bakshi has gone on record as saying he wants his films to be considered major features, not cartoons, and rotoscoping helps him attain a sort of middle ground.

But "American Pop" remains a lazy film. Certainly, individual scenes offer some nice character interaction, but most primary figures are exaggerated and Bakshi only offers the bare animated essentials. Pick practically any scene and odds are a couple characters may move or converse while the background remains a drab, static composite of painted cities or faces. And when only half the scene offers motion and the other half looks like it ought to be hanging in a gallery, it's hard to become involved.

To compensate for the script's inability to forcibly denote scene and time structure, Bakshi also crudely interjects live action footage of sweathouse fires, convention riots, Vietnam warfare and the 1970 tragedy at Kent State. It's a rude and not at all clever mixture, one transforming each sequence into cliched historical symbolism. After all, his '60s characters are neither politically involved or politically interested. Instead, they merely serve as Bakshi's cynical vision of the American dream.

Make that the American nightmare. "American Pop" races pell mell across several generations, beginning with a pogrom in the Ukraine, then following one immigrant's life in America and that of his male descendants. Music is the common genetic link, as we watch the family (and the country) grow from speakeasies to rock halls, from religious songs to Joplin to Germain to Hendrix to Benatar. Bakshi and screenwriter Ronni Kern may be trying to point out the blackness of life — no matter what the director says, this is not a film about survivors — or simply the ironies it may hold. What started with a father singing a Hebrew prayer ends with a street-wise pusher walking past the same scene in America, totally unaware of his own heritage, and going on to become a rock star.

However, don't make the mistake of thinking this is a rock musical. It only seems that way because Bakshi and Kern lend the most emphasis to contemporary characters. The first few generations are whizzed over as though nearly insignificant, the musical score including period compositions to prove Bakshi did his homework.

And I challenge anyone to keep up with the branches on this family tree, few of which are even original. Tony is a combination of Jack Kerouac and Woody Guthrie, hitting the roads. Frankie is a combination of Janis Joplin and Grace Slick. And Little Pete, Tony's son by way of a one-night liason with a blonde beauty in Kansas, is the only one to hit it big — by dealing drugs, then blackmailing his way into the record business.

And what of the music itself? Well, it's a varied soundtrack, sometimes used in interesting fashion, such as pianist Benny playing "Lilli Marlene" before taking a burst from a German machine gun and Pat Benatar's "Hell Is For Children" being played over the junkies' urban night. Much more emphasis is granted rock and roll, searing the picture towards younger audiences, but even rockers may wonder why this chronological story introduces 1960 Pat Benatar before late '70s Bob Seger and then reverts further backwards to Carl Perkins and forward to Lynyrd Skynyrd. It makes about as much sense as Little Pete's voice turning into Bob Seger's when "Night Moves" is played. Again, the question dominating is what's the point of all this? We don't even like the characters, much less care about them. We already know about the immigrants in New York City, the international wars and the prohibition-era gang wars, the Kansas corn and the '60s drug culture. Animation — of any sort — doesn't add emphasis to cliches.

Rocky Marciano, the only heavy-weight boxing champion to retire without being defeated in his professional career, was killed in 1969 in a plane crash near Newton, Iowa.

A-J
FILM REVIEW

In short, Bakshi would have been better off skipping "American Pop" and instead working on the project he never finished: "The Lord Of The Rings." His 1978 film told only half of Tolkien's story — and there remains much of Tolkien's tale left to be filmed. Indeed, while he may want to be the animator's Martin Scorsese, urban reality is only making Ralph Bakshi repetitive.

Poorly-Done 'Final Conflict' Ends 'Omen' Trilogy

"The Final Conflict." Screenplay by Andrew Birkin; based on characters created by David Seltzer. Music by Jerry Goldsmith. Photographed by Robert Payner and Phil Meheux. Edited by Alan Strachan. Directed by Graham Baker. Stars Sam Neill, Lisa Harrow and Rossano Brazzi. Rated R. At the South Plains Cinema.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Even children using their allowance money to catch a Saturday matinee know that sequels rarely live up to the standards set by their predecessors, but rarely does one insult its audience to the extent of "The Final Conflict" — the third and, thankfully, final chapter of "The Omen."

Boasting no stars (the first two chapters were aided in no small way by Gregory Peck, Lee Remick, William Holden and Lee Grant), a television commercial director making his first film, an absolutely stupid script and one of the screen's most disappointing endings, "The Final Conflict" is a hodgepodge of boring melodrama and predictable gore.

Mind you, some religious leaders have already praised the film, no doubt because the antiChrist fails to assume full power. But come on, everyone already knew this even before the film was released. We know God and Good will win out, but producer Harvey Bernhard and director Graham Baker still needed to solicit our involvement, to scare us and thrill us and move us to the edge of our collective seat. And they've failed miserably in all respects.

Indeed, after the first hour or so we don't even care who wins. We just want the whole mess to end.

The film bares its lack of class from the very beginning, assuming that fans of "The Omen," which introduced Damien Thorne as the antiChrist, were attracted solely by violence. But director Richard Donner displayed a sense of style in the 1976 original, concentrating more on suspense than shock. While "The Final Conflict" offers only gory closeups of heads blown apart by shotgun blasts, men being burned alive and babies being destroyed with a hot iron.

There's little, if any, necessity for these scenes, but then logic is no byword here. If it was, you wouldn't see the seven sacred daggers passed out to a priest and six monks, each of whom will try to kill Damien on his own. After all, the first film informed us that all seven were needed to kill the antiChrist, but now — just so we can see that many more confrontations — we're told that one dagger is enough.

Ah, and what if you haven't seen either "The Omen" or "Damien: Omen II?" Never fear, because screenwriter Andrew Birkin has star Sam Neill consistently mouthing Satanic tripe or taunting "the Nazarene" so you'll know who he is.

Confused about the weapons? You won't be for long. Neill lifts one and, like Superman giving a college lecture about Kryptonite, mutters seriously, "This is one of the seven daggers of Magiddo, the only thing in the world that can kill me." (Keep that in mind if you're expecting a major confrontation between Christ and the antiChrist.)

Birkin also includes the same dumb Satanic chapel scene we've seen in bad movies for two generations, with ministers and housewives and Boy Scouts all swearing allegiance to the antiChrist. And probably the most laughable scene in the movie arrives when Damien beds a television newscaster in sick fashion, and chants, "Birth is pain, death is pain, beauty is pain."

The big surprise comes when she later awakens, her back a mass of bites and bruises and scratches from this kinky encounter and, instead of rushing for the exit, goes looking for her new lover. She finds Damien curled up naked on the floor of the next room. Now why she's not frightened and why he's lying about naked on the floor are questions I seriously doubt even the screenwriter could answer.

Mind you, this newscaster, played by Lisa Harrow, isn't the only cretin on screen. Our dirty half-dozen monks are also lacking in the brains category, slamming car doors as they approach their prey, clumsily falling off high beams, revealing their weapons, always warning the antiChrist of their intent. If they were playing college football, the team would be suspected of throwing the game.

"The Final Conflict" is a movie consistently making — and then breaking — promises. For example, an interesting concept arrives when Damien demands to head the president's youth council, but no one follows up on this. When the Second Coming arrives, we are promised a confrontation between good and evil. (We're even willing to forgive the filmmakers for expecting us to accept a newborn Christ child battling a 32-year-old antiChrist.)

But Birkin and Baker only use the Second Coming as an excuse for Damien to order the deaths of all male children born on that day. We are repulsed by the idea of child murders, even if the act is committed off screen, and the entire sequence turns into pure exploitation when every newborn is "accounted for" but the Christ child is never found. Huh?

Instead, a dissatisfied sinner picks up a dagger and succeeds where many have failed, at which point a God-like vision like those seen on candles sold in Tijuana and local grocery stores starts to glow in the window, as though saying, "Well done."

Meanwhile, the audience is up in arms, saying, "You're kidding! This is it? This is what I paid to see?"

"The Final Conflict" was made solely because its original story was never resolved, and because it was assumed fans of "The Omen" would turn out in droves to watch the final fall of Damien Thorne. And it was a valid assumption, since this final chapter should have been the most spectacular, the most daring, the most frightening and the most inspiring.

Instead, it emerges as an ill-written, shoddily directed B-movie, never once thrilling, boring us to tears.

Oh yes, if the producers wanted, of course, they could come up with another sequel. ("The Really Final Conflict?") After all, we've yet to see the rapture, or any of those spectacular confrontations visualized in the Bible's Book Of Revelation. And for that matter, the woman newscaster could conceivably be carrying Damien's child.

But don't hold your breath. I firmly believe word-of-mouth is going to slaughter "The Final Conflict," at least in this country. It is, after all, a movie which proves only that producer Harvey Bernhard and crew had a great concept in 1976 — and should have stopped while they were ahead.

A-J FILM REVIEW

A DIFFERENT ALTAR — The antiChrist, Damien Thorne (portrayed by Sam Neill), taunts a cross bearing Jesus nailed from front to back in this scene from "The Final Conflict," the second and final sequel to the 1976 thriller "The Omen." Rated R, the film opens today at the South Plains Cinema.

Mexicans Purchase U.S. Dried Milk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico has bought nearly one-fourth of the government's surplus of non-fat dry milk, a deal worth about $7.35 million, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The powdered milk originally was bought by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. under its dairy price support program.

Richard A. Smith, acting general sales manager for the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, said Mexico bought 60,000 metric tons of the product for $1.225 a ton. Deliveries are scheduled over the next 12 months.

Smith said the milk will be used in the social programs of the Compania Nacional de Subsistencias Populares (CONASUPO), a Mexican government agency.

As of March 13, the CCC's "uncommitted inventory" of nonfat dry milk was 271,433 metric tons.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Officials said Mexico has been a regular cash buyer of U.S.-owned nonfat dry milk but that the latest order was its largest. In 1980, Mexico bought 40,000 metric tons and in each of the two previous years, 30,000.

CURRENCY SCRAP PONDERED PEKING (AP) — Chinese officials are considering whether to scrap a special currency foreigners have to use in China. Jiang Wengui, a deputy director of the state general administration of exchange control, told a news conference that many foreigners and Chinese visiting from abroad find the currency inconvenient.

FUEL OF FUTURE
The U.S. Department of Energy says wood may be the fuel of the future — already Americans are saving one million barrels of oil daily and $7.7 billion annually by burning wood. Soon the U.S. will be able to produce the equivalent of 2.2 million barrels of oil daily from the wood of lumber waste and dead trees.

TRANSIT WOES BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The Birmingham-Jefferson Transit Authority, shut down since Feb. 28 because of financial problems, has delayed voting for two weeks on a plan that would put a limited number of buses back on the streets. The proposal outlined by the authority's staff on Wednesday called for a one-third reduction in service, modification or elimination of some routes, and cutbacks in employees. If approved, some 130 of the system's 201 drivers and some 40 of the 54 maintenance workers would get their jobs back.

Votes Of Area Senators Scrutinized

WASHINGTON — Here's how area senators were recorded on major roll call votes the week of March 9-13. There were no closely contested votes in the House.

OIL PRICE CONTROLS — The Senate rejected, 24 for and 68 against, an amendment to restore government controls on the prices of crude oil, gasoline and propane. The ceilings were to be lifted Sept. 30, 1981, but President Reagan, in late January, removed them eight months early by executive order. The amendment sought to return to the September deadline. The vote came during debate on an energy bill (S 573) on which final action was deferred.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, the sponsor, said: "This vote today will give (senators) an opportunity to indicate to their constituents whether they are really in favor of the 12-cents-a-gallon increase (in gasoline prices) or the additional 12 to 20 cents yet to come" as a result of decontrol.

Opponent Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said: "The benefits of decontrol are numerous. We know, for instance, that decontrol reduces this country's demand for oil imports, and thus reduces our political and economic vulnerability to oil supply disruptions."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to reupose oil price controls

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D. John Tower, R. Pete Domenici, R. and Harrison

Schmitt, R. voted "nay."

CREDIT CHARGES — By a vote of 41 for and 56 against, the Senate refused to allow businesses to charge extra for purchases made with credit cards in order to recover the fees charged to merchants by credit card companies. Rejection of the amendment left intact a three-year extension of the rule prohibiting surcharges on credit purchases. S 414, later passed and sent to conference with the House, also permits unlimited discounts to cash customers.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., sponsor of the move to allow credit card surcharges, said Congress should stop "forcing this hidden subsidy charge on cash customers for the benefit of the credit card industry."

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, an opponent, said the extra fees would "have a chilling effect on the use of credit cards."

Senators voting "yes" favored allowing the extra charges.

Tower, Domenici and Schmitt voted "nay."

FEDERAL PAY — In four record votes, the Senate said it was against 16.8 percent pay hikes for members of Congress; top congressional staffers; certain judicial branch employees; and a category consisting of the vice-president, cabinet officers, and high-level civil servants. The votes were cosmetic because the proposed increases were scheduled to die anyway on March 16. In a non-record vote, the House earlier took a symbolic stand against federal pay hikes.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, a supporter of the raises, said "we should pay enough to attract people with the top capability in every field."

Opponent William Roth, R-Del., said "it would be highly inequitable to approve these salary increases at a time when the American people are being asked to sacrifice for the common good."

The Senate voted:

•91 for and 3 against to disapprove raises for top congressional staffers from the $52,000 neighborhood to about $61,000.

Voting "nay" and thus for the raise: Sens. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, Slade Gorton, R-Wash., and John Melcher, D-Mont.

Not voting: Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Robert Dole, R-Kans., Barry Goldwater, D-Mass., Russell Long, D-La., and John Tower, R-Texas.

Voting "yea" and thus against the raise: All other senators.

•93 for and zero against to disapprove raises for members of Congress from $60,662 to $70,885.

Not voting: Sens. David Boren, D-Okla., Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Robert Dole, R-Kan., Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Russell Long, D-La., and John Tower, R-Texas.

Voting "yea" and thus against the raise: All other senators.

•86 for and 7 against to disapprove raises for the vice president ($79,125, to $92,418), cabinet members ($69,630 to $81,328) and some 30,000 top-level civil servants ($50,112 to $58,530).

Not voting: Sens. James Abdnor, R-S.D., Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Robert Dole, R-Kans., Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Russell Long, D-La., and Steven Symms, R-Idaho.

Voting "yea" and thus against the raise: All other senators.

•87 for and 8 against to disapprove raises for federal clerks of court ($50,112 to $58,530), bankruptcy judges ($53,500 to $62,488), U.S. magistrates and Court of Claims examiners (both from $51,167 to $59,763). Federal judges from the district court level on up recently received raises and were not directly affected by this vote.

Not voting: Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Robert Dole, R-Kan., Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Russell Long, D-La.

Raising Oxygen Reduces Cleft Palates

NEW YORK (AP) — Cleft palate can be substantially reduced in baby mice by exposing their mothers to oxygen at a critical time during pregnancy, scientists said Thursday — a finding that suggests a method for controlling this common birth defect in people.

Researchers at the University of North Carolina said the rate of cleft palates in two inbred strains of mice was cut by two-thirds when the mothers breathed oxygen-rich air during the 10th and 11th days of pregnancy, when lip and mouth tissue forms.

The experiments show that subtle variations in a mother's environment can contribute to defects, they said.

The work, by Drs. Guillermo Millicovsky and Malcolm Johnston, was presented Thursday by Millicovsky to a joint meeting of the International Association for Dental Research and the American Association for Dental Research in Chicago.

Millicovsky will publish separate but related experiments in an upcoming article in the journal Science.

Dr. William C. Trier, president of the American Cleft Palate Association and a surgeon at UNC, called Millicovsky's research "interesting, promising and important."

"The fascinating thing is that he's been able to reduce the influence of agents such as phenytoin (a drug that can cause birth defects). That's very appealing and has possible practical applications to humans," Trier said.

Cleft palates occur in about one in 700 babies among American whites. They are slightly more common in American Indians and Orientals and slightly less common in blacks.

The defect results when the tissue forming the lips or palate, the roof of the mouth, fails to grow together during fetal development. It can often be repaired by surgery, but may still cause cosmetic problems or difficulty with teeth, eating or speaking.

Surgery Removes Tumor

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A malignant tumor the size of a peach was removed from "right in the middle" of a young man's head in two operations, one of which lasted 20 hours, doctors say.

Luis Enrique Soltero, 19, of Tijuana, Mexico, is on the way to full recovery, the doctors said Wednesday. They said Soltero was so impressed he now wants to go to medical school.

Dr. Perry Camp, a neurosurgeon, said the cancerous tumor, a chordoma, is known almost never to spread. However, the operation caused Soltero to lose permanently the hearing in his right ear.

The operation was so unusual that University of California Hospital at San Diego will pay the $100,000 tab from its teaching fund.

Soltero crossed the border into the United States in November and entered the hospital complaining of a weakness in his tongue. A brain scan revealed a large lesion near the brain stem. Camp said Wednesday. X-rays revealed the cancer.

It took 10 hours of surgery using microscopes to reach the tumor at the base of Soltero's skull, said Camp, who removed part of the tumor in a 4½-hour operation, but found that "a large part of it extended out into the skull base."

A second operation began at 8 a.m. Feb. 25 and lasted until 4 a.m. Feb. 26. Three shifts of support staff were needed by Camp and Dr. Jeffrey P. Harris, a specialist in head and neck surgery. One doctor occasionally relieved the other in 90-minute shifts.

In removing the tumor, Harris said they worked "clear across the other side of his head." They used subcutaneous fat from the abdomen to fill the cavity left by the growth.

It was a cooperative effort, said Harris, describing the operation as "beyond the expertise of any one person."

Harris and Camp are on the medical faculty of the university.

During 1981, 34 new nuclear power plants are expected to go into commercial operation, seven of them in the United States.

Jamaican Holiday Offers Memorable Activities

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Outdoor Editor

"Boonoonooos!" — That's the Jamaican word for delightful. And the island, 500 miles south-southeast of Miami and approximately eight hours by jet from Lubbock, is definitely delightful!

Sun filled, fun filled, action filled — that's Jamaica, the exquisite jewel of the Caribbean and West Indies. From sun up to sun up, there's plenty to see and do. There are the usual tropical activities of scuba and skin diving, fishing, sailing and surfing, and waterskiing. But you can also climb a waterfall and float down a river on a bamboo raft.

Dunn's River Falls, on the vacation oriented north coast, is a natural stair-step wonder of boulders splashed by sparkling blue waters. The cascading waters originate in the mountains, but the falls are within walking distance of a beautiful ocean beach. It may be the only place where a waterfall spills into the Caribbean Sea. At the beach, where you begin your memorable trek at the mouth of the stream-size river, is a crafts market that provides interesting bird carvings and jewelry made of ebony and coral.

In the surrounding park with its scenic walkway is a changing area for persons wishing to don proper attire for the falls climb. Beginning at the beach where the river flows into the sea, the water is only ankle deep. As you wade up toward the falls, the water gradually gains a depth of approximately three feet because of natural rock terraces and shallow pools. Meanwhile, the current gently pushes against your legs.

As you near the falls, there are deeper pools and a hidden "grotto" where the gushing water has worked away at the boulders and rocky ledges for untold ages. One pool is deep enough to allow safe diving into the churning waters at the base of the falls.

The trek up the falls, a distance of 600 feet, will lengthen the participant's life by 10 years — according to island legend. It's easy to believe the legend as the exhilarating waters tumble across your body in a nature-made whirlpool spa.

Surprisingly, the falls offer a relatively firm footing, and are reasonably safe for most people. If you are apprehensive about dropping into one of the hidden pools, guides may be hired to lead you along the most secure route.

For this writer, the visit to Dunn's River Falls provided the opportunity to see Jamaica's famous Doctor Bird (Trochilus polytmus), the streamertail or scissortail hummingbird. The tiny bird's emerald green body is accented by two black tail feathers that can be 10 inches in length. Besides the usual humming sound made by the wings, the tail feathers make a trilling whirring sound during flight.

The charming hummer is found only in Jamaica and is the country's national bird. It also is the symbol for Air Jamaica. It's said that the name Doctor Bird originated with the bird's practice of "lancing" the side of a flower to reach the plant's nectar.

Birders traveling to Jamaica shouldn't have any trouble in observing the streamertail; it is found in most areas of the island. One sure way of seeing the interesting hummer is to visit the Rocklands Feeding Station at Anchovy near Montego Bay. Several species of birds will actually fly to your hand and feed at the sanctuary.

Jamaica gets its name from the Arawak Indian word "Xaymayca," meaning "land of woods and streams." The appropriate Arawak word is delightfully portrayed by a bamboo raft trip down the Martha Brae River, 30 miles from Montego Bay at the 18th century port of Falmouth.

The leisurely float begins at Rafter's Village, three miles up river from Falmouth. The village with its restaurant and shopping boutiques is situated in tropical forest at the neck of an oxbow of the Martha Brae.

Floating on a bamboo raft is usually a new experience for most participants, but the use of bamboo rafts in Jamaica is an old form of transportation that served to get loads of bananas down river to ocean freighters.

About 30 years ago, film star Errol Flynn recognized the potential of the bamboo crafts as tourist attractions. (Flynn maintained a residence in Jamaica, as did writers Noel Coward and Ian Fleming.) The float trips via bamboo rafts conceived by Flynn proved quite popular and are now conducted on two rivers — the Martha Brae and the Rio Grande at Port Antonio.

A typical raft is 17 feet long, consisting of eight large bamboo poles lashed together with wire. Each raft accommodates two passengers and the raftsmen-captain. The stern (rear) of the raft has raised cushioned seat for the passengers, although some passengers prefer to ride on the "deck" where the water sometimes splashes over the craft. The captain uses a cane pole gondoier fashion at the bow to guide the vessel.

The early part of the journey down the Martha Brae is slow and tranquil with the river bordered by banana trees, palms, vines, and a wide expanse of blue sky above. Gradually the river narrows and there is a short stretch of shallow rapids. Actually they are slight ripples that glisten in the sun and cause the raft to gently undulate and twist ever so slightly.

White water enthusiasts won't get their adrenalin pumping on the Martha Brae, but the trip that lasts more than an hour is a fascinating experience and a great way to study the flora of the area. There are times when the flowering trees and vines form an umbrella above the river. Bougainvillea and poinciana accent the many shades of green.

From time to time you will see huts that serve as river confession stands with fruits and beverages that may be purchased by flotilla participants. Occasionally you will see area residents outfitted with snorkels and underwater masks looking for succulent river shrimp and large crawfish. The raftsmen identify unusual flora and fauna for the interested visitor.

If you wish to pause for a few moments to enjoy an area of memorable beauty or to take a refreshing swim — that is allowed. True to the Jamaican nature, the raftsmen are engaging, easy going, enjoy their work and the opportunity to make new friends.

Another unique experience is "An Evening on the Great River." Every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening the Jamaica Tourist Board offers the unforgettable adventure of traveling along a river at night by torchlight.

This time the craft is a long canoe-like boat that transports you to a theme park village where you are entertained with folk songs, music, stage production and dinner. Attractions may also include a fire eater, India rubber man, fortune teller, and bush doctor. The evening of entertainment ends with a return boat trip to your point of origin.

The Great River experience usually requires reservations, available through the local Jamaica Tourist Board or your tour representative. For more Jamaica information in general, write: Jamaica Tourist Board, 1320 South Dixie Highway, Coral Gables, Florida 33146. Contact any travel agent for complete information regarding rates for accommodations, airfare, and package holidays.

Jamaica is a convenient foreign destination. The language is English, U.S. dollars are accepted at most places of business, the rate of exchange is easy on your pocket, and the public tap water is safe to drink. And the American tourist is being welcomed as a friend and neighbor.

"Boonoonooos!" is the word for Jamaica. Delightful!

DISCOVERY

QUIET MOMENT — A moment of tranquility is enjoyed during a bamboo raft trip on the Martha Brae River near Ocho Rios, Jamaica, on the island's north shore. (Staff Photos by Ted J. Simon)

SEASIDE FALLS — Dunn's River Falls in Jamaica is a tumbling landscape only yards from an ocean beach. It may be the only place where a waterfall flows directly into the Caribbean.

Mountains Of Jamaica Exude Charm

Most vacationers head for the beaches the moment they set foot on the island of Jamaica. Few get to know the mountains with all their charms. There are peaks that reach to 7,400 feet and occasionally are touched by snow.

Along the way to the island's high country, depending on the part of the island the traveler is visiting, there are gently curving slopes covered in greenery, precipices with sheer drops of hundreds of feet, flower-clad trees in vivid colors, and small waterfalls flowing beside the road.

Jamaica's mountains are a nature lover's paradise. For the bird enthusiast, there are hundreds of species of birds which sing as they glide from tree to tree showing off their bright colors. The botanist will find thousands of tropical plants including a wide variety of wild orchids which become more abundant the higher he goes. Interesting rocks and other geological features will capture the imagination of geologists.

Some 10 percent of the island's land surface is under the authority of the Forest Department which is primarily interested in growing trees for industry, but which also has devoted a small portion of its resources to developing recreational facilities for those who long to see more than Jamaica's beaches.

All the areas are between 2,750 and 4,000 feet and can truthfully claim to be havens of tranquility. Sometimes the getting there can be rough requiring a good driver (they drive on the left in Jamaica), a sturdy vehicle and an adventurous spirit. But the beauty which surrounds the visitor more than makes up for any slight physical discomfort.

Hikers are particularly welcome by the Forest Department and, winding through all its recreational areas, miles and miles of walking trails await the soon to be enchanted visitor. One forest area boasts a cave, the source of the island's largest river, the Black River. Guides are available for the more intrepid explorer.

There are numerous picnic areas with shelters, tables and benches. For the traveler who would like to overnight, there are cabins with rates that are astonishingly low. Advance bookings are a must for the cabins. Details are available from the Jamaica Forest Department, 2 South Odeon Avenue, Kingston 10, Jamaica.

Because Jamaica is a small island, most of the recreation sites are located only a couple of hours driving time from the main centers of population. So one day spent in the mountains is not only possible, but a delightful prospect for the entire family.

Most definitely — Jamaica is more than a beach. It's a country with geography, flora and fauna to interest every visitor.

HEALTHFUL WALK — According to a Jamaican legend, walking up river to Dunn's River Falls will add 10 years to the participant's life. The walk of 600 feet consists of terraces through gushing waters to the picturesque falls.

Friendly Jamaicans Welcome Tourists

Approximately three-quarters of a million tourists visited Jamaica in 1980, most of them Americans. Many more will arrive this year to soak up the sun and marvel at the natural loveliness. They will take in some night-life, visit the grand homes of a bygone era, and tour plantations where they will see tropical plants of unusual variety and beauty.

They will also be meeting the Jamaican people. Jamaicans are friendly and eager to converse, and they speak in a dialect which has a melodious accent. Once rested and relaxed, interest in the local people grows and many Americans take the time to know them better. This can be done quite easily through a successful "Meet the People" program organized and coordinated by the Jamaica Tourist Board.

Since 1971, the program has grown from 2,000 visitors to last year when nearly 16,000 guests were hosted, most of them Americans. Iva Walters, Jamaica Tourist Board Coordinator of the "Meet the People" program, says, "We've never had a complaint!"

Jamaicans who wish to host foreign guests register with the Jamaica Tourist Board which keeps a record of their interests and hobbies. At present there are 750 volunteer families.

Visitors learn about the program from friends who have participated or from their travel agency, or even when they are in Jamaica, from the hotel desk.

Then they get in touch with the Jamaica Tourist Board, mentioning any particular interests, work or hobbies. The arrangements are made for a Jamaican volunteer family with similar interests to host the travelers. The evening, dinner, lunch, picnic or excursion is entirely free, and is a gesture of friendliness from a warm, hospitable people to their country's guests.

Among Jamaica's two million inhabitants can be found people with a wide range of interests and professions. There are bird watchers, horticulturists, musicians, stamp collectors and many more — all waiting to share their interests and discoveries with counterparts from all corners of the globe.

"Getting to know you" is what the Jamaicans' "Meet the People" program is all about, with the idea that out of knowing comes understanding and friendship which spans national boundaries.

For further information about "Meet the People," contact the Jamaica Tourist Board, 1320 South Dixie Highway, Coral Gables, Florida 33146.

Norval Pollard In The Note...

WEST TEXAS STATE HEAD FOOTBALL COACH BILL YUNG, WHO lands his share of quality football players from around these parts, was glad Texas Tech overlooked a pair of area running backs during the recently concluded recruiting campaign. Former Tech boss Rex Dockery was interested in the pair — Ray Williams of Valley and Gordon Compton of Hale Center — but Dockery's replacement, Jerry Moore, had other ideas.

Yung, who signed both Williams and Compton, explained it this way: "It's easy for a school like Tech to miss the kids in their own back yard. When a kid plays for a school that close, you see him play a lot and you start noticing the things he can't do and the mistakes he makes. But when you recruit a kid in Dallas or Houston, you only see him once or twice and maybe get some film on him. You don't see his mistakes. But those kids aren't perfect, and they can't do everything, either. They just look better to you."

Considering that Moore didn't arrive in Lubbock until Jan. 4, I doubt if he had the opportunity to see either Williams or Compton in action. Considering the thoroughness of Moore's recruiting effort, I also doubt if either Williams or Compton was overlooked.

Moore inked six running backs, including five of the state's best schoolboy prospects. He also inked six players (approximately one-fourth of Tech's 23 signees) from West Texas (Tech's own backyard). Williams and Compton were both outstanding high school players, but I think it's a bit premature to say anyone missed the boat on them. Yung's statement sounds a bit like an early 1982 recruiting speech in the never-ending war to sign prep gridders.

SPEAKING OF LOCAL FOOTBALL TALENT, FORMER LUBBOCK schoolboys Dennis Gentry and Preston Davis are holding down first-team spots during Baylor's spring training. Gentry, the 5-9, 180-pound all-purpose fullback from Dunbar who helped lead the Bears to the 1980 Southwest Conference championship, will be a senior (much to the liking of rival SWC players and coaches). Davis, a 6-0, 170-pounder from Estacado who saw limited playing time last fall, is currently listed No. 1 at left cornerback. What would Grant Teaff do if he couldn't recruit in West Texas? Probably punt a lot more. Jerry Moore and the Red Raiders begin shooting their version of The Rise and Fall of the Veer Offense Tuesday. Moore will trade in Dockery's veer attack (along with 5 1/2 books of Gold Bond stamps and an autographed picture of Bill Yeoman) for a brand new I formation. Tech's old standby 52 defense will also make way for the pro-style 43 alignment because of a shortage of experienced defensive linemen. The action starts Tuesday afternoon at Jones Stadium. Meanwhile in Memphis, Dockery has already begun his reign. His first order (as I'm sure most of you have guessed by now) was to toss out the power I and install the veer. The Tigers will also have a different defensive look in 1981, that of Georgia's eight-man defensive front. Bob 'Punkin' Patterson, Dockery's administrative assistant and defensive end coach at Tech, will soon be Dockery's boss at Memphis State. Patterson all but has the MSU athletic director's job in the bag. School officials will make the official announcement sometime this spring, as soon as all of the technical problems are worked out.

MEMBERS OF THE TEXAS HIGH SCHOOL COACHES ASSOCIATION didn't make many friends in New Deal last week when they announced their all-state teams. Absent from the north squad was Vicki Teal, who helped lead New Deal to a 29-6 record and a berth in the Class 2A state finals this past season. The 6-0 Miss Teal averaged 23 points a game during the regular season, 20 points per contest in regional action and 25 points per outing in the state tournament. She was a unanimous all-state tournament selection, but was overlooked by the all-state committee. That, my friends, is a miscarriage of justice. There is no doubt Miss Teal is one of the finest female basketball players in the country, let alone Texas. Someone goofed. . . badly. . . The Lubbock Karting Association and the Association of Traveling Salesmen will co-sponsor benefit go-kart races a week from Sunday (March 29) at the Target parking lot. The racing action begins at noon and all donations will be presented to Texas Boys Ranch. Nine members of the Lubbock media, including one sports editor from The A-J (just call me A.J.) will be among the contestants. Come on out, aid a good cause and have some fun at the same time.

THE NCAA BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT HAS CERTAINLY PUT SOME LIFE back into the world of sports. I mean look at the teams that have fallen by the wayside: DePaul, Oregon State, Arizona State, Louisville, UCLA and Kentucky to name the biggies. The unpredictability of the NCAA makes it worth keeping up with, and there are bound to be more upsets. Who knows, St. Joseph's might win the whole shootin' match. . . Two of my final four picks (DePaul and Oregon State) were among last week's casualties. Here's my revised final four: Virginia in the East; Indiana in the Midwest; LSU in the Midwest; and North Carolina in the West. The eventual champ — LSU. . . U.S. Reed's amazing 50-foot buzzer shot to stun Louisville has earned him a new nickname: Ultimate Strike. . . How many Heisman Trophy winners are members of the NFL Hall of Fame? None.

By The Associated Press
ATLANTA — Jeff Lamp scored six of fifth-ranked Virginia's first eight points during a 13-0 run that carried the Cavaliers to a 62-48 victory over No. 15 Tennessee in the NCAA East Regional semifinals Thursday night.

Virginia destroyed the Volunteers immediately after Tennessee had taken a 36-31 lead with 13:20 remaining on a steal and layup by Michael Brooks.

Tennessee went scoreless for the next 8:08 as Lamp, a third-team All American, who had a game high 18 points, hit an eight-foot shot, a jumper from the free throw line and a five-footer as the Cavs took the lead 39-36. Gary Carter ended Tennessee's drought with 5:12 remaining, but the Cavs came right back with six more unanswered points and finished the rout at the free throw line in the final three minutes.

Lee Raker, playing with an injured thigh, and Jeff Jones each added 10 points for the Cavs, 27-3. Ralph Sampson was held to only nine points, but he did have four blocked shots.

Dale Ellis led Tennessee, 21-8, with 13 points.

NORTH CAROLINA 61, UTAH 56
SALT LAKE CITY — North Carolina's front line of James Worthy, Sam Perkins and Al Wood combined for 45 points Thursday night to lead the Tar Heels to a 61-56 victory over homecourt favorite Utah in the semifinals of the NCAA West Regional.

Kansas State met No. 18 Illinois in the second game.

The Utah-North Carolina clash was billed as a duel between two of the nation's finest front lines, and the Tar Heels definitely triumphed.

Worthy, Perkins and Wood each scored 15. The Utah front line of Danny Vranes, Tom Chambers and Karl Bankowski had only 26, almost 25 points below their combined season average.

Bankowski was especially ineffectual, held scoreless in the first half and limited to a surprising two points in the second.

Chambers, in foul trouble much of the game, had 11, and Vranes, who poured in 27 points in Utah's 94-69 subregional victory over Northeastern, did not get a field goal until 2:03 remained in the first half, and he finished with 13 points.

An 11-2 spurt helped the sixth-ranked Tar Heels, now 27-7, to a 12-point lead, but the Utes whittled it to two, at 27-25, with Scott Martin's 49-footer at the buzzer.

North Carolina quickly pulled away in the second half, and was never seriously

BYU 51, NOTRE DAME 50
ATLANTA — All-American Danny Ainge drove the length of the floor and sank a layup with two seconds remaining to give 16th-ranked Brigham Young a 51-50 victory over seventh-ranked Notre Dame in the NCAA East regional semifinals Thursday night.

The victory moved the Cougars into Saturday's regional title game against fifth-ranked Virginia.

BYU, trailing by 14 points in the second half, fought back and finally took the lead for the first time in the game, 49-48, when reserve guard Greg Ballif hit from the top of the key with 62 seconds remaining.

Notre Dame then held for a possible final shot, calling two time outs in the last minute, before Kelly Tripucka drilled an 18-footer from the right side with 10 seconds remaining to give the Irish a 50-49 lead.

BYU, 25-6, then called time out with See ANGE Page 2

Mustangs Begin Quest For Title

By RICHARD D'AY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

AUSTIN — It was only a dream before the season began, but the sweet reality of it all is that the Shallowater basketball team is here to play in the state tournament.

The Shallowater Mustangs will play in today's second Class 2A state semifinal game in the University of Texas Super Drum at 11 a.m. against Archer City.

Shallowater was almost given up for mediocrity early this season when it was struggling along with a 7-5 record. But since then, the Mustangs have gone 17-1, including three playoff victories over state-ranked teams.

After going undefeated in District 4-2A play, Shallowater avenged last year's bi-district loss to third-ranked Vega with a 64-47 victory to advance to the Region I Class 2A Tournament at Coronado High School.

This time it was Crowell, ranked fifth with a 26-5 record, which fell prey to the upstart Mustangs. Robert Sanders and Willie Johnson combined for 45 points as Shallowater knocked off the Wildcats 55-46. The next morning it was fourth-ranked Morton which provided the challenge. The Indians would have loved to decorate their little tom-toms into miniature Super Drums at the state tourney, but they were turned back when the Sanders-Johnson show poured in 34 points in a 57-54 Shallowater victory.

The nitty gets grittier as the Mustangs advance into state semifinal action today when they take on Archer City, the state's second-ranked 2A team.

The Archer City scouting report says it likes to depend on a pair of big sharpshooters for the bulk of its scoring, just like the Mustangs do. Darryn Shearmer, a 6-0 junior, is averaging 25 points while Max Schlegel, a 6-3 jumping jack, averages about 18. They also have Curtis Powell, a 5-11 junior, to chip in a few points.

Defensively, the Wildcats like a switch between a 2-2-1 zone and a man-to-man while utilizing the full-court press on occasion as well.

"They like to deny you the ball, just like Morton," Shallowater coach Keith Kitchens explains. "I understand they're a good outside shooting team. Their inside people are only average, but their outside game makes up for it. They're like Crowell, but their guards aren't as quick."

Crowell and Allen are the only two teams to put blemishes on the Wildcats' 38-game schedule this season. They're also going through their share of controversy too. Coach Bobby Ray's resignation is effective at the end of the season due to a salary dispute.

Kitchens is hoping today's game will be Ray's last and is confident it will be

"We've beaten teams ranked in the top 10 in our last three games," Kitchens said. "We have a good chance of winning it all."

In today's other semifinal game, defending champion Gladewater Sabine will put its 32-0 record on the line against Bartlett, the state's sixth-ranked team, in a rematch of last year's state title game. It tips off at 9:30 a.m.

Sabine's Cardinals have a 37-game winning streak and their No. 1 ranking at stake.

Every one of their starters is 6-0 or taller and three are returnees from last year's 69-68 squeaker in the finale. Back are 6-6 junior Johnny Mumphy, 6-4 junior Mark Johnson and 6-0 junior Mark Allen, son of coach Carl Allen.

Sabine's other starters are 6-10 1/2 senior transfer Greg Griffin and 6-1 junior Zeb Strong. The Cardinals went 29-2 last season. Bartlett is 24-3.

In the Class 5A tournament, Dallas Roosevelt will play San Antonio Marshall in the semis at 4 p.m. today and Port Arthur Lincoln will tangle with Fort Worth Dunbar, the only team to return from last year's tourney and Region I champion, at 8 p.m.

Canyon Heads For Title Game

AUSTIN — What a difference 17 years can make.

And what better place for a reunion of a coach and a former player than here at the state basketball tournament. The last time Canyon had a boys' team at the state tourney, 1964, Allen Simpson was at the helm and Jody Richardson was a member of the Eagles' Class 2A state championship team which shipped by Lancaster 52-51 in the finals.

But on Thursday, Richardson's team fared better than his former coaches did here when the 61st annual UHL tournament began at the Superdome. This time it was Richardson's Canyon team defeating South San Antonio West 76-49 while Simpson's Perryton Rangers, competing in the Class 3A semifinals, dropped a 58-54 heartbreaker to Altair Rice.

"I think they (South San Antonio West) just took us lightly," Richardson said after his Eagles posted the impressive win in the Class 4A semifinals. "We haven't dominated a game like that all year long; especially in our tough district (1-4A) games. We had no more than a six to seven point spread against league teams. When we had a 30 point lead, I didn't know what to do."

Canyon ran up a 34 point lead, 73-39, with 2:54 remaining in the game even with its substitutes dominating the lineup.

Kendall Walling, the Eagles 6-3 senior guard, was the game's leading scorer with 22 points. Also in double figures for Canyon were David Harbin with 16 and Steve Beck with 14. Leading the Cougars were Greg Durbon with 15 points and Marland Jones who chipped in 11.

Canyon will take its 29-8 record into the 4A state finals Saturday against defending state champ Beaumont Hebert — an 81-64 winner over Waxahachie at 3:30 p.m. The Cougars finish the season with a 33-5 mark.

Hebert got 31 points from Andre Bouttee and 29 from Donald Mickens — that duo accounted for 54 of Hebert's initial 61 points — to blow away Waxahachie.

In the other Class 3A contest, Powderly North Lamar dumped Van Vleck 65-62 as Merritt Williams, who led Lamar with 31 points, tossed in three crucial free throws in overtime. Lamar will meet Rice, which dumped Simpson's Perryton team.

In the 1A semifinals, also held on Thursday, Henrietta Midway stunned top-ranked Avenger 61-50 as Burton Shepard paced Midway with 17 points. Midway will meet Snook, which took a 53-47 victory over Midland Greenwood on Thursday. Hezekiah Carter scored 22 for Snook.

Only one point separated Canyon and the San Antonio school after the first quarter with Canyon holding a narrow 10-9 margin. After a follow shot by San Antonio's Chris Walker to open the second period, Canyon reeled off 12 unanswered points to take a 22-11 lead during a three minute span.

The Cougars were unable to cope with the Eagles 2-3 zone defense and the Eagles ability to dominate the boards. Canyon allowed San Antonio one shot per trip downcourt throughout the first half and the Cougars rarely hit those.

The San Antonio school could hit only 20 of 70 attempts from the floor in the game (a measly 28 percent) while Canyon connected on 26 of 51 efforts — over 50 percent.

When asked about Saturday's final with Hebert, Richardson said, "we will need to slow Hebert down — even if we have to tie a trip-wire across the court."

"I think this blowout will give us confidence going into the finals."

But for Richardson's former mentor, it wasn't such a pleasant afternoon.

"We just did not play well," Simpson said. "I don't think anybody played as well as he's capable of playing today." Ricky Herring led Perryton with 17 points.

So Long, Hogs; It Was Fun While It Lasted

EVERYBODY KNOWS THEY SMELL bad; heck they're Hogs. Porkers. And everybody knows they shouldn't have much of a chance against Louisiana State when they meet the Bengals tonight in the NCAA Midwest Regional semifinals.

But you've gotta' love the Arkansas Razorbacks. They're all we (in the Southwest Conference) have left. Arkansas is not just playing for the pride of a so-called state any more. The Hogs are carrying the entire SWC on their shoulders. It hasn't been a banner year for SWC basketball. Everywhere you turn people are running it down — often justifiably. They say this conference can't compete with the big boys when it comes to the hoop. Right now, the Hogs are among the final 16 NCAA teams still competing. If they could somehow beat LSU tonight, they'd be in the final eight.

One more victory and it would be off to Philadelphia to play in the Al McGuire Show — formerly known as the NCAA Final Four. But it's not going to be easy. LSU simply destroyed (100-78) an excellent Lamar team in Austin last Saturday.

And Arkansas had to get a 50-foot missile from U.S. Reed to escape with a 74-73 win over defending champion Louisville. If that wasn't enough, tonight's game is in New Orleans' 50,000-seat Superdome. Talk about a home-court advantage.

"I want to see 50,000 screaming cajuns," boasts LSU coach Dale Brown. No, it won't be easy for the Razorbacks.

"LSU might be the toughest team left in the NCAA field," acknowledges UA coach Eddie Sutton. "Maybe it's a disadvantage playing them in New Orleans, but it's not quite as bad as playing them in Baton Rouge."

YEAH EDDIE, KINDA LIKE choosing a Toyota over a Datsun because of more leg room. If there's much of a difference, you'll have to show us.

But what's been practically overlooked is the fact that Arkansas and LSU have already met once this year and the Hogs ran all over the Tigers. LSU won 27 straight games after that early December meeting, though, and dominated the Southeastern Conference much the way Arkansas steamrolled through the SWC.

"We've defeated them once and we think we have a chance to do it again," says Sutton. "Any team still left in the field has proven itself. I'm not sure if there will be any more upsets at this point because everyone is so even."

What Sutton is ignoring is the fact that an Arkansas victory will nonetheless be regarded as yet another shocker, because the Hogs still represent the SWC, not commonly thought of as a bastion of basketball power.

As for the Arkansas players, they seem overwhelmed just to be in New Orleans.

"I've been to New Orleans for a convention once," boasted Reed prior to his arrival in the famed city. "I remember Bourbon Street and the French Quarter. I really like it."

"This city might be a distraction to those who haven't been here before," added Reed, "but we know why we're going."

According to the most recent issue of Sports Illustrated, the Razorbacks may have physical to New Orleans to attend a blood-bath. LSU is just sooo physical.

"LSU IS A LOT like Louisville," admits Arkansas center Scott Hastings. "They have a lot of bangers underneath. They didn't have (6-10 center Greg) Cook when we played them before and he gives them more physical strength."

"Overall our team is playing as well as it was in Alaska but I'm not shooting as well," added Hastings, who leads Arkansas in scoring with a 16.1 average. "We're better than we were then but LSU is a whole lot better. I just hope we can stay with them."

"The key to the game will be keeping LSU off the boards," offers Arkansas forward Keith Peterson. "They really bang the boards hard. I sure remember (Durand) Macklin from playing LSU before. He's so strong inside I got real tired trying to keep him off the boards."

Macklin, for those with short memories, had 31 points and 16 rebounds in the destruction of Lamar last weekend. "We just want to beat LSU," exclaims guard Darrell

Walker, who's been so instrumental in the Hogs' two NCAA victories thus far. "If we can get past them, we certainly have a chance to get to the Final Four."

Walker, who's off-and-on play during the season kept him in-and-out of the starting lineup all year, has scored 41 points against Mercer and Louisville. Since LSU will almost certainly dominate the inside game, the play of Arkansas guards (Reed and Walker) will be critical to the UA chances of success.

"LIKE COACH SUTTON SAYS," explains Walker, "once you get to the NCAA tournament, anything can happen."

"Heck, with all the upsets that have happened," adds senior Mike Young, "if we win the regional we might be the favorite in Philadelphia."

This is the third time in the last five years Arkansas has advanced past its NCAA opener. In 1978 and '79 the Razorbacks reached the regional finals and in '78 Arkansas won the Midwest Regionals and advanced to the final four.

"If we had Sidney Moncrief and Ron Brewer, I'd say we had the edge in experience," notes Hastings. "But we don't and they have their entire team back from last year so they probably have a slight edge in experience."

Probably so, Scott. And they're probably going to win tonight, too. But we've enjoyed the journey so far.

"No matter happens," vowed Reed, "the shot against Louisville is something I'll remember for the rest of my life."

So will we all.

Orangemen Crush Wolverines

By The Associated Press
SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Syracuse hit its first 16 shots in the second half Thursday night to offset a 30-point performance by Michigan's Mike McGee as the Orangemen rolled to a 91-76 National Invitation Tournament quarterfinal basketball victory.

Syracuse, 21-11, advances to next Monday's semifinal game in Madison Square Garden against the winner of Thursday night's West Virginia-Minnesota game.

Michigan, the seventh-place finisher in the Big 10 this year, ends its seasons at 19-11.

Senior center Dan Schayes led Syracuse with 22 points while sophomore forward Erich Santifer had 21 and Tony Bruin added 18. The Orangemen shot 72 percent from the floor in the game.

With Schayes hitting five straight and Santifer four in a row, Syracuse began its torrid second-half shooting spree. The Orangemen did not miss a shot until Leo Rautins' jump attempt dribbled off the rim with 6:06 to play.

By that time, Syracuse had built up a 79-64 advantage.

Rautins also had 16 for Syracuse. McGee, the leading scorer in Michigan history, kept the Wolverines close with 16 first-half points as the Wolverines trailed 46-42 at intermission.

McGee finished his career with 2,439 points.

Center Paul Heurman added 12 points for Michigan.

WEST VIRGINIA 80, MINNESOTA 69

MINNEAPOLIS — West Virginia, with 21 points from Greg Jones and three other players in double figures, upset Minnesota 80-69 in a National Invitation Tournament basketball quarterfinal Thursday night.

The Mountaineers, making their sixth NIT appearance, take a 23-8 record to the semifinals at New York's Madison Square Garden Monday night. Minnesota, the NIT runnerup last year, closed its season 19-11.

The Gophers were led by Randy Breuer with 17 points.

West Virginia's balanced attack included 17 points from Diego McCoy, 16 from Greg Nance and 13 from Russel Todd.

Minnesota held its last lead, 52-51, with 9:45 to play. The Gophers pulled within 61-60 with 4:40 remaining. But West Virginia scored eight of the next 10 points.

Minnesota took an 11-2 lead two and one-half minutes into the first half. But the Mountaineers, behind Jones' 12 first-half points, rallied to take a 39-36 lead at intermission.

West Virginia took a 23-22 lead as McCoy converted a three-point play after a steal with 8:01 left in the half. The lead

LSU 'Designated Worrier' Keeping Tabs On Hogs

By The Associated Press
As the highest-ranked team left in the NCAA basketball tournament, Louisiana State is confident it can win the national championship. But just in case the upset bug tries to bite, the Tigers have a designated worrier.

"It's my job to worry about those 'any given night' and see that they don't happen to us," says Rick Huckaby, an LSU assistant coach whose job it is to know an opponent's strengths and weaknesses.

The fourth-ranked Tigers, who easily defeated Lamar while higher-ranked DePaul, Oregon State and Arizona State were upset in the second round, meet No. 20 Arkansas in the Midwest Regional tonight at New Orleans.

The regional tournaments opened Thursday night with Virginia meeting Tennessee and Brigham Young facing Notre Dame in the East Regional at Atlanta. Utah tackled North Carolina and Kansas State met Illinois in the West Regional at Salt Lake City.

The Midwest Regional opens tonight at Bloomington, Ind., with St. Joseph's facing Boston College and Indiana playing host to Alabama-Birmingham, Kansas and Wichita State meet for the first time since 1955 before the LSU-Arkansas game in the Midwest.

"I think there's an air about our team right now — and we can all feel it — that we all really believe we can win the national championship," says Huckaby. "I'm the worrier on the staff, and I feel it, too."

Nevertheless, Huckaby has seen Arkansas play four times this season, "and I know as well as anybody that they can beat us."

While Huckaby and the LSU staff prepare for Arkansas, St. Joseph's Coach Jimmy Lynam says he is less concerned with Boston College's scouting reports than just getting his team ready.

"We never do anything regarding the other team more than for one day — the practice before the game," said Lynam, who masterminded the Hawks' upset of top-ranked DePaul.

"I'm more interested in working my team not overconcerning myself with the other team," Lynam said.

Ainge, BYU Nudge Notre Dame

Ainge, surrounded by three Notre Dame players, dribbled behind his back to avoid them and headed for the goal where he laid it in over a defender. Ainge's 12 points led the Cougars and Fred Roberts added 11, all in the second half.

Orlando Woolridge, playing with a severe thigh injury, had 17 points and Tripucka 14 for the Irish, finishing 23-6.

Eichelberger, Morley Battle Weather For Lead

PONTE VEDRA-BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dave Eichelberger, who has a habit of success under the most adverse weather conditions, birdied the last three holes for a 4-under-par 68 and a share of the first round lead Thursday in the $440,000 Tournament Players Championship.

He was tied for the top spot in the annual championship of golf's touring pros with longshot Mike Morley, who holed a 30-yard sand shot for one of his six birdies.

"It was not easy out there," Morley said of the cold, blustery winds and occasional light rain that plagued the opening round. As testimony to the strength of the winds that raked the 7,000-yard Sawgrass links, Morley said he was forced to hit his 2-iron eight times.

Jim Dent was the only man in the field, the strongest field of the year, able to escape without a bogey. He was tied at 69 with Barry Jaekel, who said it "was a survival test. We had a little of everything, winds, rain, cold."

And that was before things got tough. Eichelberger, Morley, Dent and Jaekel played in the morning. Conditions deteriorated in the afternoon. The rain stopped, but the winds increased, gusting to 35 miles per hour or more, and made a mockery of the best efforts of some of golf's finest players.

Jack Nicklaus, for example, shot a 75 that included a double bogey on the tough fifth hole.

Arnold Palmer birdied the 18th for the same total.

Masters champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain shot 77.

Gary Player of South Africa was two shots higher at 79.

Lubbock's Jeff Mitchell struggled to an 80, 12 shots off the pace. David Graham, a former PGA national champion and winner of the Phoenix Open earlier this season, had an 82.

The scores ranged up to an incredible 86 by Lon Hinkle, twice a runnerup this season.

Dan Halldorson, a Canadian, and Mike Sullivan were two shots off the lead with 70s. The group at 71 was headed by Johnny Miller, a two-time winner already this year. Also at that figure were Tom Purtzer, Roger Maltbie, Leonard Thompson, Gil Morgan, Mark O'Meara and Gary Hallberg.

The game's more glamorous names were strung out behind them.

Among those at par 72 were Tom Watson, Hale Irwin, Hubert Green and Ray Floyd, a winner last week at Doral.

Defending champion Lee Trevino, heavily bundled against the cold he cannot abide, shivered to a 73. Bruce Lietzke, another two-time winner this year, had the same. Ben Crenshaw was a shot higher.

Eichelberger refused to be overly concerned with the conditions that had most of the other pros talking to themselves and anyone else who would listen. "I've seen it blow harder," he shrugged.

Mrs. Lopez-Melton Grabs Lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton fired a 6-under-par 67 at the Las Vegas Country Club Thursday to take a one-shot lead after the opening round of the $200,000 Desert Inn Pro-Am golf tournament.

Mrs. Lopez-Melton, who is seeking her first Ladies Professional Golf Association victory of 1981, recorded one eagle, four birdies and 13 pars over the 6,087-yard, par 36-37-73 Las Vegas CC layout.

The 88 pros competing here will play one round each at the Las Vegas CC and the Desert Inn Country Club before playing the final 36 holes at the 6,237-yard, par 36-36-72 Desert Inn course. Those who played at Las Vegas on Thursday will play at the Desert Inn on Friday and vice versa.

Tied for second place at 68 entering Friday's second round of the 72-hole event were veteran JoAnne Carner, the top money winner on the 1981 LPGA earning list with $50,482, and Jo Ann Washam. Both played the Las Vegas CC course.

Three golfers came in at 69 — M.J. Smith of New Zealand, 1980 LPGA player of the year Beth Daniel, and veteran Judy Rankin. All three played at the Las Vegas CC.

Jane Blalock and Cathy Reynolds were next at 70. Mrs. Blalock played the Las Vegas course while Miss Reynolds was one of only two players to break par at the Desert Inn layout. Nineteen players bettered par at the Las Vegas CC.

At 71 were Murlie Breer, who played the Desert Inn course, and six players who toured the Las Vegas course — Kathy McMullen, Julie Stanger, Alice Ritzman, Beth Solomon, Dot Germain and Shelley Hamlin.

Defending champion Donna Caponi had a 74 at the Las Vegas CC.

"I felt good today," said Mrs. Lopez-Melton, who hit 16 greens in regulation. "I made the putts I had to. I made two really important putts to save par."

"I received a lesson on hitting irons from my father, Domingo, on Tuesday. He said I was positioning the ball on the toe of the clubs."

Mrs. Lopez-Melton, the LPGA player of the year in 1978 and 1979, is seeking her first victory of 1981. She currently ranks fourth on the money-winning list with $34,387.50 in earnings.

"I'm playing happier this year," she said. "I was doomed last year. There was too much pressure on me. It got to the point where I hated getting out of bed in the morning to play golf."

Mrs. Carner, 41, is seeking to become the first woman to earn $1 million on the

Spring Tennis Tourney Set

The best high school players in West Texas will begin serving it up today when the Lubbock Spring Invitational Tennis Tournament begins at locations all over town.

Action begins at 8:30 a.m. at the Lubbock Municipal Tennis Center, Monterey High, Lubbock High and Coronado High. The finals will be held Saturday at the Tennis Center.

Players will be limited to either singles or doubles competition and team standings will be kept.

Among the 5A schools involved will be the three Lubbock schools as well as those from Odessa, Midland, Amarillo and El Paso.

The three 5A teams will also have players competing in the B and C Divisions against Class 4A teams which include Estacado and Dunbar.

The boys' singles draw has a dazzling group of players. Lance Armstrong and Richie Houdek will be in from Midland, Ram Chalapalli from Permian, Frank Gunrich from Tascosa and Brad Bailey and Jimmy Burkeholder of Monterey will be the local favorites.

The girls' singles tournament could feature a rematch of last week's 4-5A final between Missy Johnson of Coronado and Leigh Mires of Monterey. Miss Johnson won that match in three sets.

Raider Men Begin Tourney

STILLWATER, Okla. (special) — The Texas Tech tennis team will get its feet wet quickly here in the Oklahoma State Invitational Tennis Tournament today when the Red Raiders tangle with host Oklahoma State at 2 p.m. in the eight-team, three-day tournament's opening round.

Tech, 5-7 for the spring, meets a Cowboy squad which has won the past four Big Eight tennis championships and boasts 1980 Big Eight singles finalist Chris Kaskow.

Other teams entered in the tourney are Southern Illinois, Tyler Junior College, the 1980 JUCO champion; Central State of Oklahoma, Oklahoma, Oklahoma City and North Texas State.

"We are going to have our hands full with Oklahoma State," said Tech coach Ron Damron. "But I think we have a chance to win some points in the middle of our lineup and in the doubles."

The Raiders will face either Central State or North Texas on Saturday. Tournament action concludes Sunday.

Damron said he would go with the following lineup, and probably stick with it for the remainder of the year: sophomore Jeff Bramlett at No. 1 singles, followed by senior Zahid Maniya, senior Mark Thompson, freshman David Earhart, freshman Fred Viancos and sophomore Lane Carroll. Thompson has the best singles record this spring with a 9-3 slate while Maniya and Viancos are at 7-5. Earhart is 4-8 and Bramlett and Carroll are 1-11.

In doubles it will be Bramlett-Maniya at No. 1 (2-1 this spring), Thompson Earhart (7-5) and Viancos-Carroll (5-2).

Orioles' Weaver Opens Spring Rhubarb Season

By the Associated Press
Volatile Baltimore manager Earl Weaver pulled his team from the field after six innings in a dispute with umpiring crew over substitutes Thursday, and the Orioles forfeited the spring training game with Kansas City Royals ahead 4-2.

But Weaver wanted a full list of substitutes, maintaining he couldn't manage effectively without it.
Kansas City broke a 2-2 deadlock in the sixth on Dave Chalk's bases-loaded double. Willie Wilson had three singles for the Royals.
In other games, singles by Dwayne Murphy and Jeff Newman and Tony Armas' sacrifice fly highlighted a four-run Oakland rally in the ninth inning as the A's defeated the San Diego Padres 8-4.
Boston broke the Chicago White Sox five-game winning streak with a 8-6 victory as Tony Perez and Tom Poquette crashed home runs for the Red Sox in their six-run fourth inning.

The Minnesota Twins turned three double plays in the first three innings and a triple play in the eighth, but needed run-scoring singles by Rick Sofield and Roy Smalley to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3.
Graig Nettles belted a two-run homer and knocked in the game's first run to lead the New York Yankees to a 6-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves, who got solo homers from Dale Murphy and Mike Lum.

Ed Vargas hit a two-run homer and the New York Mets made six errors, including three on one play, as the Pittsburgh Pirates took an 11-3 decision.
Jeff Burroughs, who drove in three runs, singled with the bases loaded to spark a five-run first inning and the Seattle Mariners went on to defeat the Cleveland Indians 11-3.
The California Angels used a run-scoring single by Dan Ford, a pair of run-producing infield grounders and three San Francisco errors to score three runs in the sixth inning en route to a 4-3 triumph over the Giants.

John Ellis' bases-loaded single in the bottom of the 11th inning pushed the Texas Rangers past the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.
Montreal pitcher Bill Lee hit a three-run homer to cap a nine-run third inning as the Expos defeated the Houston Astros 12-9. Tim Wallach of the Expos and Houston's Dave Roberts and Jeff Leonard also hit homers in the wind-swept game.
Leon Durham and Ken Reitz, traded from the St. Louis Cardinals for Bruce Sutter last December, combined to help the Chicago Cubs beat the Milwaukee Brewers 6-5 in a 12-inning game. Durham singled, stole second, narrowly beating the throw from left field.

Home runs by Otto Velez and Ernie Whitt helped the Toronto Blue Jays beat the St. Louis Cardinals 8-2.
In a night game, Lance Parrish had three hits, including a solo homer, and drove in three runs as the Detroit Tigers romped to a 9-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Chaps Sweep Three From WJC

The indefatigable Lubbock Christian College baseball team limited William Jewell College to 15 hits in three games Thursday, sweeping its second triple-header in as many days.

The Chaparrals, 21-14, have beaten William Jewell eight times in three days and now own a 12-game winning streak.

Thursday's victories came by scores of 7-2, 4-2 and 5-2 and each shared one common characteristic — strong pitching.

Gordy Gessell won his second game in as many starts in the opener, limiting the Cardinals to four hits and striking out 8. Only 26 William Jewell hitters recorded at-bats in the seven-inning game.

In the second game, Bo Hargrove climbed to 2-3 on the year by five-hitting the Cardinals and striking out six.

In the nightcap, Mike Rosales had to get last-inning help from Rick Coskrey before recording his second win of the year. Rosales gave up only six hits before Coskrey came on to pick up his third save of the year.

That nightcap was the only close game of the day. LCC needed three sixth-inning runs to break a 2-2 deadlock and win that contest.

With pinch-hitter Billy Montemayor at bat, Ledbetter stole second, prompting William Jewell to intentionally walk Montemayor, loading the bases with one out.

But that brought up freshman Ricky Pinkerton as a pinch-hitter and he delivered a bases-loaded double to score all three runners and win the game.

Stephenson and Pinkerton were the top hitters for the day. Stephenson, third baseman and designated hitter, got four hits and eight at-bats, driving in four runs and scoring one himself. Pinkerton, who played third in the first game and pinch-hit in each of the other two, wound up 3-for-5 with three RBI and a run scored.

LCC plays today at 5:30 p.m. against Dallas Baptist. DBC stands 14-5 on the year and shares the No. 1 ranking in District 8 with Midwestern State. LCC will also face DBC in a double-header Saturday at 1 p.m.

Fahrenheit's Gem Guides Tech To 5-1 Win Over Pan American

EDINBURG (Special) — Left-handed pitcher Kyle Fahrenheit threw a near-flawless game against the host Pan American Broncs here Thursday afternoon and the Red Raiders of Texas Tech rode his performance to a 5-1 victory.

Tech, now 15-7, owns a 3-2 record in this three-team week-long Jody Ramsey Tournament. The Raiders will face Kansas today at 11 a.m. in the tournament finale.

Fahrenheit, now 5-1 on the year, went the distance for the Raiders allowing only three hits, no earned runs and striking out six. Pan Am nicked Fahrenheit for its only run of the contest in the second to take a brief 1-0 lead, but the Raiders bounced back with three tallies in the third and never relinquished that lead.

Gene Segrest and Bobby Kohler each had a pair of RBIs to pace the Tech attack which scored five runs on only five hits off Bronc hurler Allen Maria, who went the distance himself but fell to 1-4 with the loss.

Jeff Harp led off the third with a walk and, after Andy Dawson reached on a fielder's choice, Pat Moore stroked an RBI single to right scoring Harp and then Segrest lofted a sacrifice fly that scored Dawson.

The Raiders maintained that 3-1 lead until the top of the seventh when they struck quickly for two insurance runs.

A pair of errors against the Pan Am infield left Dawson and Moore on first and second when Segrest stepped to the plate and earned his second RBI of the contest by singling home Dawson. A Kohler ground out scored Moore for Tech's final run of the contest.

Pan Am's only run came in the second. With two out, Rick Haley walked, Larry Guidry walked and Tommy Donigan reached on an error by Dawson to pack the pillows. Lonnie Garza, who had all three of the Bronc hits despite hitting from the No 9 position, rapped a single to center scoring Haley.

In the third and fourth frames, Fahrenheit allowed two-out baserunners but was never seriously threatened.

Today's contest with Kansas — a team the Raiders have beaten twice previously — will conclude the tournament for Tech. If the Raiders win, they will take home the first-place trophy.

Following the Kansas game, Tech is slated to meet Seton Hall in a non-tournament game at 4:30 p.m.

Panthers, Mats Open Play In Tournament

SNYDER (Special) — Lubbock schools Estacado and Dunbar open first-round play here in the Snyder Invitational Baseball Tournament today against a pair of top-notch foes.

Dunbar, 3-2 on the year after dropping a pair to Odessa Ector last weekend, will face the host Snyder Tigers at 12:30 this afternoon. Snyder is 4-4 on the year. Estacado, with a sparkling 6-1 mark under new head coach Hodie Garcia, will meet Andrews at 2:30 p.m.

Levelland and Lamesa will square off at 10:30 a.m. in the tourney opener and the Ector-Brownfield clash at 4:30 will conclude today's action. Ector won last year's tournament by defeating Monahan in the finals.

Estacado and Dunbar both participated in this tournament a year ago with the Mats earning one win against two losses while the Panthers went 0-2.

The Matadors opened the current season with five straight victories but split a double-header with Lubbock High on Wednesday to move to 6-1. Dunbar also opened on a winning note, capturing its first three contests, before falling 10-2 and 14-3 to Ector last Saturday.

Lubbock's other three city schools will swing into action on Saturday. Monterey will host Odessa Permian in a 1 p.m. twinbill at Lowrey Field. Coronado hosts Midland Lee in another 1 p.m. double-header and Lubbock High will travel to Pampa to compete in the Pampa Tournament against Borger, Dumas and the host Harsters.

Northeast Louisiana Downs Tech Women

DALLAS (Special) — The Texas Tech women's tennis team absorbed its second punishing loss in as many days Thursday, dropping to Northeast Louisiana 7-2 in the Southern Methodist University Invitational.

Today, the Raiders will face the loser of the SMU-LSU match played late Thursday. That match will begin at 8 this morning.

Tech, which failed to win a set in losing to TCU, 9-0, won only four sets in taking Thursday's loss. Susan Mangrum defeated Cindy Berryman by a tight 6-4, 6-4 count for one win and the doubles team of Kathy Lawson and Jill Crutchfield squeaked by the Northeast Louisiana team of Miss Berryman and Colleen O'Connell by 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Singles: Cindy Jones, NEL, def. Regina Reiss, 7-5, 6-4; Mary Ann, NEL, def. Kathy Lawson, 7-5, 6-4; Louise, TCU, NEL, def. J. Crutchfield, 7-5, 7-6; Ingrid Roux, NEL, def. Joanne Wainwright, 6-2, 6-3; Susan Mangrum, TCU, def. Cindy Berryman, NEL, 6-4, 6-4; Colleen O'Connell, NEL, def. Jeffery Springer, TCU, 6-4.

Doubles: Lori Ann, NEL, def. Revlon Nanczy, MCGraw, TCU, 6-3; Lewson-Crutchfield, TCU, def. Berryman-O'Connell, NEL, 6-4, 7-6, 6-4; Roux-Roux, NEL, def. Wainwright-Smith, TCU, 6-2, 6-1; Texas Tech, 6-0, 6-0.

Lubbock Gymnast Wins In State Meet

Cindy Kevil of the Briercroft Gymnastic Academy won the Class II State Championship at the state meet in Dallas last weekend in the 15-and-over age group.

In nothing her first place victory, Miss Kevil, a Dunbar High School senior, won the uneven bar and balance beam competition. Miss Kevil was in eighth place after the first day of competition but excelled in the optional competition.

Tracy Laceywell, also a Briercroft Gymnast, placed fourth in the all-around competition. Miss Laceywell, a sophomore at Monterey High School, was awarded medals in all four events to attain her fourth place finish.

Both gymnasts have qualified to represent Texas in the United States Gymnastic Federation Regional Championships to be held in Tulsa, Okla. on May 2-3. The top five gymnasts in each age group were given this honor.

Boys To Continue District Golf Play

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Defending District 4-5A champion Monterey takes a 10-stroke lead into today's second round of the district boys' golf campaign here.

The Plainmen fired a team total of 301 last Friday in Lubbock, 10 shots better than runner-up Coronado.

Lubbock High, Hereford and Plainview will also take part in the second of six district tourneys. Action begins at 10 a.m. at the Plainview Country Club.

Matney Disappointed With 'Slow' Takeoff

By RUSS PARSONS

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

In his first two meets this year, Slaton's Kenny Matney has recorded the state's second-best shot put, has improved on his state meet performance of last year by more than half a foot and is two and a half feet better than his nearest competitor in his class.

But Kenny Matney is not a happy young man. "I just didn't get as good a start as I wanted," he said. "I wanted to start the season at around 60 (feet) and work up."

Now that's a pretty lofty goal, considering the winning put in the Class 2A state meet was a 62-1/4 (Matney was third at 57-10/4) and the best anybody did in the state last year was 64-10/4.

"Well, in the past I've worked my way up pretty well," he said. "Last year I started at 52 and worked up to 58. This year I'm in hopes of working up to around 65."

Don't count him out, no matter what he might say about his slow start. Matney tossed a 57-11 in his first meet of the year and then went 58-6/4 the second time out last weekend in Odessa. Today, he'll compete in the Bulldog Invitational in Plainview.

"Really, I guess everything is working out all right so far, it's just not as fast as I'd like it," he said. "Right now my only competition is from this dude from El Paso. He's consistently going 60. As far as 3A, a guy from Kermit has got him a 56. Other than that there's really nobody around."

The dude from El Paso is named James Jordan and he's going to Texas A &M on a football scholarship. So far, the Eastwood High standout has a high of 60-3 in the shot and 180-0 in the discus. Not bad. Kermit's hope is Mike Kilgore and he's gone 55-10/4, seventh-best in the state.

Matney says he'd like a little more competition, but preferably not like back when Michael Carter was setting national records with heaves of upwards of 75 feet.

"I'd like to be pressed some, but winning is nice," he said. "I'm just not throwing as good as I'd like to and that bothers me. I'm in hopes of every week getting better and better until I get my release just right to get it out where I want it. I just need to get my release and get my form just right."

If there's one thing Matney's not lacking for, it's strength. He improved his weightlifting between 70 and 80 pounds this summer while adding only 20 to 30 pounds to his weight. No wonder he says "I'm not worried about my strength, just my form."

"I think most of the shot put, probably 50-60 percent, is strength," he continued. "About 30 percent is technique and about 10 percent is your mind."

"I've got to have my mind right to get off a good throw. That's my only problem right now, getting my mind right."

Neibauer Holds Lead In Decathlon Event

LEVELLAND (Special)—New Mexico Junior College's Marty Neibauer held the first-day lead at the American Petroleum Institute decathlon held at South Plains College Thursday.

Neibauer won both the shot put and the 400-meter dash to score 3,565 points after five events. The remaining five events will be competed today.

Trailing Neibauer is Jimmy Jones from West Texas State with 3,500 points, Kent Rhyne from South Plains College with 3,472 and Chuck Steinbock from SPC with 3,453. Another Texan athlete, Robert Parker, is fifth at 3,395.

Steinbock also won two events the first day, the 100-meter dash and the long jump. The remaining event, the high jump, was won by Rhyne.

Computers Becoming Important 'Hired Hands'

DORCHESTER, Neb. (AP) — Bob Weber raises cattle and farms 1,600 acres of corn and soybeans with the help of an electronic "hired hand" — a computer terminal that can tell him what tractor to buy and when to turn on the irrigation sprinklers.

The 38-year-old Weber is one of 62 farmers and livestock producers with a personal computer link to the latest agricultural information, through the University of Nebraska's Agnet computer in the basement of the Nebraska Statehouse.

Some 230 others with a stake in farming also have terminals: farm management consultants, other universities, government agencies, feed and fertilizer manufacturers, and sales companies and manufacturers of crop or livestock equipment.

And the system is serving many more thousands through links with county extension agents across the country.

"I'm convinced that with time, this is the trend, the solution, to making things work," Weber said. "Farmers need to become more management-oriented, instead of pure production-oriented. Some farmers are just physically working too hard. They don't have time to think, and it's costing them."

Agnet was conceived five years ago when Dr. Thomas Thompson, a University of Nebraska agriculture professor, and one of his students, Alfred Stark, realized from classroom work that a computer system could be applied to agriculture. The idea has grown into a network of almost 600 terminal links.

"The program has turned out to be much more than we expected. ...," Thompson said. "We have terminals in every county agent office in Nebraska, Montana, Wyoming and Washington (state) and between 50 and 60 percent (of the county agencies) in the Dakotas. It's now used in 31 states, Washington, D.C., two Canadian provinces and Venezuela."

The system, Agnet employees say, helps users in three areas: management problem solving; information sharing to keep up to date on market conditions, trends and predictions; and communications as an electronic mail service.

One Agnet service called HAYLIST, for example, carries a directory of those with hay for sale and those who want to buy.

During last summer's severe drought, "We had some farmers in North Dakota contacting farmers in Missouri for summer pasturing," Thompson said. "We even had people in New York wanting to list their hay."

The Agnet programs are varied: —Does a farmer need a $70,000 tractor or is the $15,000 model more practical for his operation? TRACTORSELECT gives him an idea. Once he's made the choice, he can use another Agnet program to calculate annual depreciation.

—A neighbor puts 200 acres up for sale. Is it worth buying? Using BUYLAND to figure inflation rates, anticipated income and expected returns on invested money, a farmer can make a better-informed decision.

—In MINCOME, the farmer tells the computer how much he's willing to pay for a parcel of land and the computer calculates the minimum cash income per acre he'd need to support the purchase.

—CASHRENT suggests what he can afford to pay to rent land, the long-range value of production relative to costs of production and what he wants as a rate of return on his own capital, management and labor.

With Agnet, a farmer can put information into the computer which applies exclusively to him, Thompson said. The recommendations that come rolling out of his terminal are tailor-made for his operation.

Weber explained the system's adaptability. He had been using a consultant to calculate when to turn on the irrigation sprinklers and how long to run them. This year, he'll do it without the consultant, using Agnet's irrigation scheduling program.

"We really felt the program was a little more fine-tuned to us," he said. "We did better on our own (with the computer) than with the consultant we had had for five years."

COMPUTER FARMER — Bob Weber, 38, makes a telephone link from his rural Dorchester, Neb. farm home to a computer in Lincoln and begins calculations on possible livestock feed mixes which could save him hundreds of dollars a month. Weber says that without Agnet, an agricultural computer network now five years old, he would never have been able to afford the time needed to make the calculations that take the computer seconds to do. (AP Laserphoto)

INDECISION OVER WHICH OF TWO COTTON producers to appoint to the key position of administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service has been resolved by the White House.

Everett G. "Bud" Rank was named administrator and Hoke Leggett was appointed associate administrator.

Rank, a Californian, served as western area director of the ASCS under former ASCS administrator Kenneth Frick, now among those under consideration for appointment to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Leggett, of North Carolina, who has the strong backing of Senate Agriculture Committee chairman Jesse Helms, R-N. C., becomes the southern appointment at the USDA.

He is a former chairman of the Producer Steering Committee and a former president of the National Cotton Council.

ALL-COTTON U. S. PLANTING INTENTIONS are estimated at 14,483,800 acres, down only slightly from last year's 14,558,300 acres, the USDA said Thursday.

The all-cotton total includes 14,415,000 acres of upland, against 14,465,300 last year, and 68,800 acres of American Pima, compared with 73,000 in 1980.

Acres in Texas, based on March 1 intentions, was estimated at 7.8 million, compared with 7.85 million last year. No regional or district estimates were made in Texas.

Several analysts said going into the report that they thought the national estimate would be of limited value.

They pointed out that the report is only a measure of what reducers say they intend to plant and not of actual planted acreage. And what is intended to be planted and what actually gets planted can be substantially different.

Also, much of the report was not revised from January. Only figures for Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana were updated from January and estimates for Missouri and Nevada were added.

THE USDA IN JANUARY PROJECTED intentions of 14.128 million acres but this did not include acreage in Missouri and Nevada. With about 240,000 acres added for those two states, the January estimate would have been 14.368 million acres.

The January estimate in Texas was 7.7 million acres. An average of estimates by nine commission house analysts and specialists had pegged projected intentions at 14,248,778 acres. The range was from 13,889 million acres by Merrill Lynch to 14.45 million by E. F. Hutton, the closest to the new USDA figure.

Cotton Inc. has estimated plantings at 14.213 million acres and an estimate by Chase Econometrics was for plantings of 14.8 million to 15 million acres.

A survey of state extension cotton specialists showed projected plantings of 14.497 million acres, down less than 1 percent from last year's acreage.

That survey indicated acreage in all regions except the Southwest was expected to increase at least slightly from a year earlier.

SOUTHEAST PLANTINGS WERE SEEN up 10 percent in that survey. Delta acreage was put at 5 percent more, Far West estimates were about 1 percent higher, and Southwest plantings were forecast at 3 percent lower.

The relative price of cotton compared with soybeans and other competing crops is a top consideration for farmers, specialists said, as producers weigh production costs and projected income.

Some growers must decide soon whether they should plow under fall crops and plant cotton or harvest fall crops and forego cotton this year, the specialists said.

Producers also will keep a close watch on weather during the next few weeks, remembering the effects of last season's drought, they said.

Texas extension cotton specialist Bob Metzger said it is too early to tell how much cotton will be planted statewide but his tentative guess was 7.6 million acres, down 250,000 acres from last year.

FARMERS IN THE BLACKLANDS, Rolling Plains and High Plains must decide soon whether prices justify a wheat harvest or whether those fields should be plowed under and planted to cotton, Metzger said.

N. B. Thomas, Oklahoma cotton specialist, said weekend moisture in areas of Oklahoma was beneficial to the wheat crop and some farmers may decide to stay with the already planted small grain rather than plant cotton.

As irrigation costs escalate, some New Mexico alfalfa acreage may be converted to cotton this season, a specialist there said.

The USDA's other intentions estimates for Texas showed sorghum at 4.6 million acres, down from 4.8 million last year; corn at 1.4 million acres, down from 1.5 million; and soybeans at 800,000 acres, up from 700,000.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED A QUIET SESSION in the top half of the day's trading range Thursday, up 42 to 20 points in the front three contract months and down an average of 20 points in deferreds.

Analysts said the market lost as much as 57 points on early local liquidation with the trade a scale down buyer in thin conditions.

Prices recovered in the afternoon in anticipation of the weekly USDA export report with speculators scale up buyers, analysts said.

The export report, released after the close, was considered constructive and the planting intentions report, also released after the close, was viewed as neutral to possibly a little bearish.

A larger-than-expected soybean acreage estimate was viewed as negative and the corn acreage figure was seen as slightly friendly, although the large wheat acreage was construed as likely to partially offset bullishness in corn.

NET U. S. COTTON EXPORT SALES for the current marketing year totaled 84,100 running bales during the week ended March 12, the USDA reported, and included 34,800 bales to South Korea.

Sales of 10,600 running bales for delivery in the 1981-82 marketing year also went mainly to South Korea. Shipments for the week totaled 164,400 running bales, hiking exports for the season to 3,735,900.

The 1980-81 export commitment, including 1.8 million bales of undelivered sales, totaled 5,525,900 running bales, above the latest USDA export estimate for the season of 5.43 million running bales. Cumulative sales for 1981-82 were 141,600 bales.

There has been speculation in trade circles lately that a major U. S. commodity firm is negotiating to acquire an international company that deals heavily in cotton.

Principal parties said to be involved in the negotiations could not be reached for comment and no confirmation could be obtained.

IT ALSO WAS REPORTED THIS WEEK that the Prudential Insurance Co., largest U. S. insurance firm, has made an offer to buy the Bache Group, Inc., parent company of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields, one of the biggest brokerage houses in the country.

The New York Times said the deal, estimated to involve some $375 million, has gone before top Bache executives and, if approved, would be announced soon.

It added that the Prudential offer was welcomed at Bache because of intense behind-the-scenes efforts to fight off an unwanted takeover by Belzberg Brothers of Vancouver, B. C., who have purchased 23 percent of Bache's stock since 1979.

Trading on Telcot Thursday totaled 1,946 bales on an average price of 63.81 cents, an average of 2,531 points over the loan, with the lower priced cottons again comprising the bulk of the turnover.

The market difference on the lower physical price cottons was plus 50 points and grades 42 and higher were unchanged, resulting in a narrowing of quality differentials.

1981 Corn Crop Projections Compiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers intend to plant about 84 million acres of corn this spring, slightly less than they did in 1980 when hot weather and drought shriveled yields across the nation, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said that surveys among 48,000 farmers on March 1 and Jan. 1 also indicated a slight decrease in the acreages for soybeans, cotton, sorghum and some types of spring wheat.

Corn plantings in Kansas and Missouri, states hit hard by last summer's drought, may be reduced 19 and 17 percent, respectively, as farmers shift land to other crops, mainly wheat, the report said.

Overall, the 84 million acres indicated for this spring represented a decline of 0.2 percent from about 84.1 million planted last year.

But the report showed larger acreages are in prospect for durum wheat — the kind favored for making spaghetti and other pasta — oats, barley, rice and peanuts.

Officials said total acreages of food grains — wheat, rice and rye — were indicated by farmers at 93.2 million acres, up 8 percent from last year.

Total acreages of feed grains — corn, sorghum, oats and barley — were reported at 122 million acres, a 1 percent increase from 1980.

Farmers intend to plant oilseed crops — soybeans, cotton, sunflowers, peanuts and flaxseed — on 90.5 million acres, a 1 percent increase from last year.

Peanut farmers indicated they would boost plantings to 1.6 million acres, a 4.3 percent increase from 1980. Drought reduced the 1980 harvest by more than 40 percent, which has led to a scarcity — and soaring prices — for peanut butter and related food products.

Corn is the largest and most valuable U. S. farm crop and, as feed, provides a basic ingredient for the production of meat, poultry and dairy products.

Soybeans, when crushed, produce high-protein meal and vegetable oil, the latter used in many food products such as margarine and cooking oils.

Both crops also are leaders in the huge U. S. farm export business, estimated at a record of about $47 billion in the year that will end on Sept. 30.

Last year, after record harvests in 1979, corn production sank 16 percent to 6.65 billion bushels. Soybean output, at 1.82 billion bushels, dropped 20 percent from 1979.

Although corn is being planted now in some southern areas, most of the production is concentrated in the Corn Belt of the Midwest. Most planting in that region is in April and May.

Retail food prices are expected by Agriculture Department economists to climb an additional 10 to 15 percent this year, partly because of the lingering effects of the reduced crops in 1980. Last year's gain was a relatively modest 8.6 percent.

The report said farmers also intend to plant 6.14 million acres of durum wheat, an 11 percent boost from last year, and 17 million of "other" spring wheat, down 3 percent from 1980.

Winter wheat producers, who plant in the fall and harvest the following summer, were reported in December of having seeded a record 63.9 million acres for the 1981 harvest, up 11 percent from last year.

An exception in last year's drought, winter wheat production was record high of 1.89 billion bushels in 1980. And, according to last December's tentative forecast, the 1981 harvest could be another record, some 1.98 billion bushels.

Cotton plantings were indicated at 14.5 million acres, down 0.5 percent from 14.6 million acres in 1980. Last year's cotton harvest also suffered from drought, totaling 11.1 million bales against 14.6 million in 1979.

The department will issue a new estimate of 1981 winter wheat production on May 11. The first corn estimate of the year will be on July 10, and soybeans, cotton and many other 1981 crops on Aug. 12.

Other crops covered in the surveys and farmers' intended acreages included:

—Sorghum, 15.7 million acres, down 1 percent from 15.9 million last year.

—Oats, 13.5 million acres, up 1 percent from 13.4 million.

—Barley, 9.1 million acres, up 9.7 percent from 8.3 million.

—Rice, 3.49 million, up 3.7 percent from 3.36 million.

—Sunflowers, 3.91 million, down 2.6 percent from 4.01 million.

—Sugarbeets, 1.26 million, up 2 percent from 1.23 million.

By major producing states, the indicated planting of 1981 crops and the acres compared as a percentage of 1981 plantings included:

Corn
Alabama, 480,000 acres for 1981 and 92 percent of the 1980 acreage; California, 445,000 and 99; Colorado, 950,000 and 98; Delaware, 196,000 and 103; Florida, 440,000 and 107; Georgia, 1,550,000 and 97; Idaho, 144,000 and 99; Illinois, 11,600,000 and 99; Indiana, 6,450,000 and 100; Iowa, 14,200,000 and 101; Kansas, 1,450,000 and 81; Kentucky, 1,680,000 and 102; Maryland, 775,000 and 103; Michigan, 3,000,000 and 102; Minnesota, 7,700,000 and 106; Mississippi, 160,000 and 94; Missouri, 2,150,000 and 83; Nebraska, 7,600,000 and 97; New Jersey, 155,000 and 108; New Mexico, 117,000 and 102; New York, 1,400,000 and 104; North Carolina, 1,950,000 and 103; North Dakota, 730,000 and 104; Ohio, 4,300,000 and 104; Oklahoma, 130,000 and 104; Pennsylvania, 1,830,000 and 102; South Carolina, 575,000 and 98; South Dakota, 3,410,000 and 98; Tennessee, 805,000 and 99; Texas, 1,400,000 and 93; Vermont, 111,000 and 100; Virginia, 870,000 and 105; West Virginia, 100,000 and 102; and Wisconsin, 4,300,000 and 102.

Legislative Seminar Set For Lubbock

MULESHOE (Special) — A legislative workshop with U. S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock is scheduled at 6 p.m. here Saturday at the high school cafeteria.

The meeting will be sponsored by the American Agriculture Movement and Women Involved in Farm Economics. Garvin Thorn of Friona will be chairman.

Hance will report on progress of congressional hearings on the 1981 farm bill and is expected to review the administration's views on basic farm legislation.

The bulk of the meeting will be devoted to a question-and-answer period. Officials said Hance wants to hear the views of area farmers.

The meeting will be open to the public. Coffee and dessert will be served.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. In reply to a man who had paid $7,887.25 for a $10,000 U.S. Treasury bond, you wrote that, if he holds it to maturity, he will get $10,000 and that the $2,112.75 difference will be taxable as a long-term capital gain.

I have Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds, purchased at $18.75 each. I've been under the impression that, if I cash them, the difference between my purchase price and redemption price will be interest income — the tax on which is heavier than the tax on long-term capital gains.

Are you telling me I will be able to use the same reasoning as the man with the U.S. Treasury bond and report my E bond interest as a long-term capital gain?

A. Not for one minute. The "impression" you have been under is correct. E bonds, like the new EE bonds, are "discount securities." You buy them at one price and redeem them at a higher price — the difference between the two prices being your interest and taxable as such.

The U.S. Treasury has pledged to redeem your E and EE bonds at your purchase price, plus accrued interest. You run no market risk of getting back fewer dollars than you paid.

A U.S. Treasury bond is a different story. It is a "marketable security" — meaning that it can be bought or sold in the market place. The U.S. Treasury issues Treasury bonds at face value, pays interest on them twice a year and pledges to redeem them at face value when they mature.

Between the issue date and the maturity date, however, the market price of Treasury bonds can rise or fall. If the owner of a Treasury bond wants cash for his bond before maturity, he has to sell it and accept whatever the market price happens to be.

Because interest rates have gone way up in recent years, Treasury and other bonds issued when interest rates were lower have fallen. As a result, marketable bonds can be bought at prices below their face values.

Anyone who buys a marketable bond at a price below face value and holds it to maturity has a capital gain. If he sells it before maturity, he will have a capital gain or a capital loss — depending upon the price he paid and the price he gets. The interest he collects while he owns the bonds of course, is taxable as interest income.

Q. I'm in my 20s and figure that buying 100 shares of utility company stock, with a return of about 15 percent, would be a good first investment. I'd like to get a dividend monthly. What do you think?

A. First off, very few stocks pay dividends every month. Most pay quarterly. So, to get a dividend check every month, you would most likely have to buy three different stocks — one paying dividends in January, April, July and October; another paying in February, May, August and November; another paying in March, June, September and December.

That can be arranged. Any good broker can line up three stocks for you with that kind of dividend payment schedule.

But, because commissions are levied on each stock you buy, you would pay more total commissions on three stocks than you would by putting the same amount of money into just one stock. I suggest you put aside the idea of getting a dividend check each month, until you can buy 100 shares of three different stocks.

Most electric, gas and telephone utility stocks do pay high dividends, but the growth in their dividend rates has slackened off in recent years.

A young person such as you should be looking at stocks with a "little more action." Spend some time with a broker and get some recommendations.

Q. You wrote that Securities Investors Protection Corp. (SIPC) insures each customer's account at a brokerage firm for up to $100,000, including up to $40,000 in cash, in the event the brokerage firm goes bankrupt.

SIPC coverage was increased to $500,000, including $100,000 in cash, last October. Will you admit you goofed?

A. I have to. You're correct. The previous column was wrong. What can I say, other than the lame excuse that the latest increase in SIPC coverage went by this typewriter unnoticed.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

U.S. Dollar Rebounds, Gold Prices Steady

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rebounded late Thursday after a week of declines tied to lower interest rates in the United States. Gold prices were stable.

Interest rates bounced off the bottom a little bit, and the dollar followed. "There were a number of people who felt the fall had gone a little far."

"Some people think the (interest) rate structure has bottomed out," said another New York dealer.

Support for the dollar developed in the afternoon, after European markets closed. Trading in Europe was described as hectic.

The dollar slipped below 1,000 Italian lire in Europe for the first time in nearly two months, ending the day at 999.50 lire compared with 1,009.50 at the end of trading Wednesday.

Interest rates, which declined rapidly earlier in the week, were generally higher in the money markets. Six-month treasury bills, for example, were up nearly a quarter of a percentage point to 11.75 percent.

No major banks matched the cut to 17 percent in the prime lending rate, made late Wednesday by Chemical Bank.

Prudential Places Bid On Brokerage House

NEW YORK (AP) — The Prudential Insurance Co. of America, the nation's largest insurance company, made a $385 million bid Thursday to buy Bache Group Inc., parent company of one of the country's biggest brokerage houses.

The joint announcement of a definitive agreement for the acquisition of Bache came as the investment firm is fighting the threat of a takeover bid by the wealthy Beilberg brothers of British Columbia, who own almost 23 percent of Bache stock.

And the offer came almost a year after Bache was embroiled in a crisis set off by a steep drop in silver prices.

Insurance industry analysts said the takeover move follows a trend in the nation's financial centers, as insurance companies, banks and brokerage houses moved to diversify and more directly compete for business.

Prudential said its cash offer is $32 a share for all of Bache's 10.97 million shares, with additional payments for warrants to buy Bache stock boosting the tab to approximately $385 million.

Prudential, a mutual insurance company, is owned by its policyholders. Bache stock did not trade Thursday after rising $3.75 to $29.25 on Wednesday.

The offering price of $32 a share is more than four times what Bache stock sold for on March 27, 1980, when the company was immersed in the silver crisis.

The Hunt brothers of Dallas failed to answer a call from Bache for more than $100 million to cover loans on their silver holdings. Trading in Bache stock was halted for several days until the situation was resolved with no permanent financial damage to the firm.

Bache said its board of directors gave their unanimous recommendation to shareholders to accept the offer.

Oil Executives Say Industry In Difficult Transition Period

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil executives reported Thursday the industry is entering a difficult period of transition despite optimistic trends resulting from price decontrols.

The views of optimism tempered by caution were submitted at the annual "State of the Industry" hearing conducted by the Texas Railroad Commission as it set, for the 50th consecutive month, the state's crude oil production allowable at 100 percent.

Company nominations for Texas crude in April totaled 2,588,452 barrels a day, up 6,906 from March.

Gordon E. Hillhouse, Sun Co. executive vice president, told the oil and gas regulatory agency the transition involves moving from a period of excessive federal involvement in the private sector to a period of more reliance on the free workings of the private sector.

"This transition, if indeed it occurs, will take a long time and will be very painful for the nation," Hillhouse said.

He said pursuit of such issues as decontrol of natural gas prices or repeal of part or all of the industry's windfall profits tax could further strain national budget reductions and the many sectors already suffering because of budget cuts.

"If we pursue our objectives with no thought to their impact on other sectors of the economy, and with no thought to their impact on federal revenues and expenditures, we could not only make the transition even more painful, we could actually be responsible for preventing it from happening," Hillhouse said.

While saying he was not suggesting the industry abandon its public policy objectives, he said he was suggesting it be sensitive to "the timing of what we do and the timing of what the Reagan administration is trying to do."

"We still must be willing to compromise," he said. "It is the petroleum industry's long term self-interest to exercise some restraint right now."

Annon M. Card, president of Texaco U.S.A., said the industry's emerging from years of uncertainty to a renewed emphasis on the social economic values that made the nation strong in the past is a time for optimism.

In the period of transition, however, Card said he is concerned "that those who wish to put constraints on the activities of business in the competitive market will merely shift their emphasis to the state legislatures and state regulatory agencies."

Even now, Card said, individual state legislatures are considering proposals which would reinstitute, at the state level, some form of price, allocation, or margin control on petroleum.

"Control at the state level would simply extend and expand our dependency on imported sources of energy," he said.

C. Nicandros, Conoco Inc. group executive vice president, said it is clear oil price decontrol will not bring smooth sailing by magically wiping out the problems resulting from 10 years of controls.

"Our industry has lost some of its daring," he said. "Controls have rewarded mediocrity and created vested interests. The return to the free market exposes these attitudes and these interests to the cold wind of market competition."

"Nicandros said special interests will not 'just go away' and regulators will not willingly resign their jobs.

"Obstacles will be many and I can just hear some in government, industry, the media, and the consuming sector talk about the 'good old days' of controls," he said.

Ed Hess, Exxon Co. USA senior vice president, said the long term answer to reducing dependence on foreign oil and improving the security of the nation's energy-dependent economy requires continued conservation of existing supplies and aggressive development of all domestic sources of energy.

Judd H. Qualline, Houston division vice president for Getty Oil, said that while decontrol is a step toward operations in the competitive marketplace "there are still many strides yet to be made."
