

Top Resignations Rejected In Warsaw

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist Party Politburo, facing a nationwide strike called by the independent union Solidarity, won a vote of confidence, early Monday, from the party's Central Committee in a marathon 18-hour session.

The emergency meeting of the 140-member committee had been called to deal with Solidarity's general strike, planned to start Tuesday.

At the end of the meeting, the Polish news agency PAP issued a brief communique saying the committee rejected the resignations offered by "some members of the party authorities."

It reported the meeting ended at about 3:50 a.m. with an address by First Secretary Stanislaw Kania.

The PAP report gave no details of what decisions the committee may have reached for dealing with the strike threat by Solidarity, which is pressing the government to punish officials it considers responsible for the March 19 beatings of unionists in Bydgoszcz.

Warsaw Radio named three Politburo members whose resignations it said the central committee rejected — Stefan Olaszowski, Roman Ney and Tadeusz Grabski. The Politburo has 10 members.

The Radio reported that Olaszowski spoke at the end of the debate, saying Solidarity was aiming at a takeover of power, while Grabski charged that Solidarity was supporting anarchy and Ney called for renegotiation of the Gdansk agreements won by striking unionists, last summer.

The PAP communique said the committee adopted resolutions and other documents, but it gave no details.

It said the members of the Politburo Secretariat were instructed to meet immediately with workers at the factory level.

The session opened under the shadow of a grim assessment in Moscow of the crisis and an announcement in Berlin that "new units" were being sent to participate in Warsaw Pact exercises on Polish soil and in neighboring countries.

A top Communist Party leader opened the session by saying that independent unionists were in "an open fight against socialism."

The outcome of the threatened strike "could be unpredictable," said Politburo member Kazimierz Barcikowski in an opening speech broadcast by Warsaw Radio. "This is no longer pressure on authorities, but an open fight against socialism. This is a fight for power," he said.

But moderates on the Central Committee rose to criticize the way the party leadership has handled the conflict and to call for government concessions to the independent union Solidarity, PAP reported.

Janina Kozłowski, a committee member from a Wrocław electronics plant, said she did not understand why party leaders were unswayed by "voices of common sense," PAP reported.

"My party organization joined the (four-hour) strike, Friday, fully aware we violated party discipline," she said. "The guilt for the latest strikes rests not with those determined to strike but those who brought about this determination."

Slaying Suspect Charged

By RICHIE D. REECER, Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 52-YEAR-old Lubbock man was arrested and charged with murder Sunday in connection with the city's latest homicide, last week's shooting death of 32-year-old Rodolfo Romulo Gonzales.

Alfonso Urtado of 123 N. Ave. M was arraigned at 6:30 p.m. before Justice of the Peace Charles Smith, who set bond on the murder charge at $100,000.

Urtado remained in the Lubbock County Jail Sunday night.

Police detectives Cpl. George Parramore and Cpl. Garland Lucas arrested Urtado at 4:50 p.m. Sunday outside a pool hall in the 1200-block of Avenue F, after receiving a tip regarding the suspect's whereabouts.

Victim Shot Three Times

Gonzales, of 1923 Ave. N, was shot three times early Friday morning inside the Dos Amigos Club, 2228 Clovis Road, police said. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack, who ruled the death a homicide, the city's eighth of the year.

The victim had suffered 38-caliber gunshot wounds to the middle of the back, the upper chest and the abdomen, according to reports.

Lucas said the murder weapon has not yet been recovered, and Urtado was unarmed at the time of his arrest.

Witnesses at the nightclub told police they heard gunshots and then saw a Mexican-American man walking toward the rear of the club, carrying a handgun and cursing.

Big Black Pistol Seen

"He was carrying a big black pistol in his left hand, swinging it down by his legs. He was cursing, but I don't know what he was saying," one witness told detectives.

The gunman then reportedly walked out the front door of the club with his girlfriend, still swearing and carrying the weapon.

One club patron told police he may have heard the man and Gonzales arguing earlier outside the nightclub.

Detectives received information over the weekend allegedly linking Urtado with the slaying, but they were unable to locate him until Sunday afternoon.

WAITING FOR WORD — Lubbock resident Mrs. Grace Porter, the mother of Karl Schneider who was shot while trying to escape a hijacked jet in Bangkok, Thailand, brought out the photo albums Sunday afternoon as a diversion from the nervous waiting of word on his condition. Schneider's sister, Mrs. Lois Wilcoxson, also of Lubbock, managed a smile when told her brother was in "stable condition" after surgery. (Staff photo by Milton Adams)

Mother Of Hostage Tells Of Premonition

By LARRY ARNOLD, Avalanche-Journal Staff

KARL SCHNEIDER, the American who was shot by the hijackers of a Garuda Airways jet in Bangkok, Thailand, is a former Lubbock resident.

His mother and a sister, both of whom still live in Lubbock, spent Sunday nervously watching television and answering phone calls but heard little in the way of official reports on Schneider's condition.

Mrs. Grace Porter of 3605 61st St. said she awoke Sunday with a premonition something was terribly wrong but it wasn't until 10 a.m. that she found out about her son.

"I was shaking and shivering like I was ice cold," she said, "and I kept asking, what's wrong, what's wrong."

Mrs. Porter said it was a telephone call from her grandson, Karl Garvin Schneider of Anaheim, Calif., that gave her the news. She added that although she normally listens to the stereo during the day, the music made her nervous and she turned it off, apparently preventing her from hearing the news that way.

Surgery Goes Well

Mrs. Porter said she received a call from an official of Milchem Company, her son's employer, and she found out the surgery had gone alright and the bullet was removed.

Except for information from reporters and television, Mrs. Porter said she has learned little.

"I've been through crises with him before," she said, "the good Lord has taken care of him before. Now I've put it in God's hands."

"You think it's not ever going to happen to your own family," commented one of Schneider's sisters, Mrs. Lois Wilcoxson of 5409-B Temple St. "Now we realize it can."

Schneider, 45, "is a very unusual son and is devoted to me," his mother said. "He doesn't want me to want for anything."

"I've been deathly sick all day...and I won't feel better until I know for sure that he's going to be alright," Mrs. Porter said.

Schneider attended Lubbock High School briefly in 1950 but was nearly killed in a motorcycle-taxicab accident at 19th Street and University. After he recovered, he was enrolled at Tarleton State University to finish his high school degree and then he attended Texas A&M for a year.

He grew up in the West Texas oil fields, Mrs. Porter said, and worked for several companies around Midland before taking an overseas job on Dec. 26, 1970.

He has not lived in the United States since he left on Dec. 26, 1970 although he visited Lubbock in November in between jobs at Athens, Greece and his current

Ex-Tech Cheerleader To Be Fund Raiser

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY, Avalanche-Journal Staff

CLIFF ZSCHIESCHE won't be wearing a cheerleader's uniform now even though he's still inciting fans to cheer loudly for Texas Tech University.

This time he's asking fans to put some money where their mouths are.

The former head cheerleader at Texas Tech has been chosen as field representative for the Ex-Students Association, which means he will be knocking on corporate doors outside the West Texas area seeking financial donations to Tech's Loyalty Fund.

Zschiesche (pronounced Cheese-ee) will call Houston home base, but traveling across the state will be a major part of his job, and he notes, "I will go wherever I'm needed."

Still A Cheerleader

His constant smile and enthusiastic tone of voice give the impression that he is still a cheerleader.

He laughs at the comparison, but admits there are some similarities in job duties.

Whether one is leading cheers or raising funds, either task involves dealing with people and exhibiting a devoted pride to one's alma mater.

"I like people," he says. "But even more so, I love Tech."

Before he graduated from Tech in 1979 with a bachelor's degree as an advertising major, Zschiesche was a cheerleader for three years and active in the Saddle Tramps service organization. He

Indonesia Agrees To All Demands

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — An American aboard the hijacked Indonesian jetliner parked here was shot in the back, Sunday, and dumped from the plane hours after a British captive escaped from the air pirates demanding the release of 84 prisoners in Indonesia.

Two other Americans were reported among the 55 hostages still aboard the Garuda Airlines DC-9 parked at Don Muang Airport since five hijackers diverted it to Bangkok from a domestic flight over Indonesia Saturday.

Early Monday, food was delivered to the aircraft, still surrounded by air force police, half a mile from the airport terminal. Authorities said the hijackers were in radio contact with the emergency center at 7:30 a.m. local time, but did not say anything about a new destination.

Stable Condition

The wounded American, identified as Karl Schneider, a 45-year-old former Lubbock resident, was in stable condition, Thai officials reported.

But in Houston, Bud Hamilton, head of the international division of the Milchem Co. for which Schneider works, said he was told by officials in Bangkok that a bullet had lodged in Schneider's spine and was removed. Hamilton said it had not been determined if any paralysis would result.

Earlier, a British captive escaped through an emergency exit and raced to a golf course while airport workers refueled the craft to keep its generators and ventilation system running.

A Thai government spokesman said Indonesia agreed to meet all the demands of the heavily-armed hijackers, but would only disclose the one demand — freedom for 84 "political" prisoners.

Spokesman Trairong Suwankiri said it was not known what country would accept the hijackers and freed prisoners.

Speaking to reporters in the airport's makeshift emergency center, Trairong said the hijackers responded to the Indonesian acceptance of their demands by saying they would announce a new departure time and destination Monday morning.

Intelligence Aide

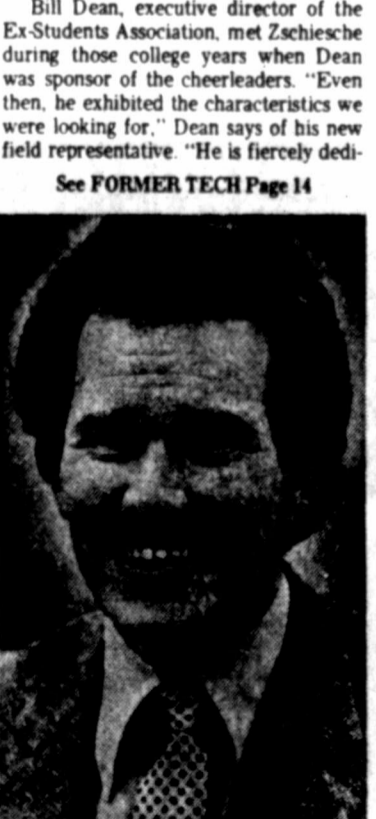

Trairong said an Indonesian DC-10 landed at a military airport adjoining the civilian airfield, and it carried a deputy director-general of Indonesian intelligence, Benny Moerdani, to help in the negotiations.

He said Sri Lanka turned down requests from the Thai and Indonesian governments to allow the hijackers to proceed to Colombo, the Sri Lankan capital, with the prisoners. Sri Lanka, suggested also helped with academic and athletic recruiting.

Bill Dean, executive director of the Ex-Students Association, met Zschiesche during those college years when Dean was sponsor of the cheerleaders. "Even then, he exhibited the characteristics we were looking for," Dean says of his new field representative. "He is fiercely dediby the hijackers as a destination, said it "cannot accommodate" them.

Sri Lanka's ambassador to Thailand, Manel Abeysekera, went to the airport emergency center to explain to the hijackers why her country could not accept them. Trairong said.

He said the other demands were "internal affairs" of Indonesia.

There had been conflicting reports during the night about hostages being wounded.

Witnesses said Schneider either fell or was pushed from the airliner after being shot twice. He waved for help from the runway and was retrieved by a stretcher crew.

Thailand's public health minister, Dr. Sem Pringpaungkaew, said Schneider suffered wounds in the back and in the side, was operated on and was out of danger at the King Bhumipol hospital, near the airport.

Hamilton, the Houston-based Milchem executive, said Schneider was originally from Texas but had not lived in the United States for the last 15 years. He

Space Shuttle Passes Final Fueling Tests

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle came through two final fueling tests in excellent shape, clearing the way for an April 10 liftoff for the Columbia's much-delayed maiden voyage. Shuttle Launch Director George Page said Sunday.

A 73-hour launch countdown could begin next Sunday at 10:30 p.m. CST, Page said. An official launch date for the reusable spacecraft's first mission must await a Tuesday flight readiness review at the Kennedy Space Center by program directors of the $8 billion program.

"We feel the 10th is a viable launch date," Page told a press briefing after a "hands-on" inspection of the two critical fuelings of the 15-story external tank, which feeds the orbiter's three main engines.

The Columbia is to return to Earth on airplane-type wings for a landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California after its first 54-hour orbital flight. The flight is more than two years behind schedule.

"Basically, both tests were successful," Page said. "We have absolutely no debonding problem."

The fuel loading tests, Wednesday and Friday, which involved the loading of 526,000 gallons of super-cold liquid oxygen and hydrogen, were designed to test cork insulation on the surface of the aluminum tank.

Cork Unglued

The cork, covered with a layer of sprayed-on foam, came unglued during a similar "tanking" procedure in January. The insulation is designed to prevent the super-cold fuel inside the tank from vaporizing during the heat of the launch. It also is meant to prevent the frigid fuel from creating ice buildups on the outside of the tank, which in turn could damage the delicate thermal tiles on the shuttle itself.

Page said technicians and engineers who checked the silo-like tank found "a few foam cracks" that can readily be fixed.

He said the launch preparation sched-

Body Of 11th Victim Pulled From Rubble

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Workers uncovered the body of a 22-year-old man among tons of concrete and heavy steel beams, Sunday, removing the 11th victim from the rubble of a condominium that collapsed during construction. Volunteers looked for more victims.

His parents and friends, who had kept vigil since the collapse, Friday, wept and embraced when 22-year-old Darrell Nowakowski's crushed body was taken from the dusty wreckage of what officials say was the worst construction accident in Florida history.

Nowakowski, who began work as a glazier at the site, Thursday, was found on what was the second floor before the five-story structure gave way, smashing the floors one atop another. A crushed tool box filled with concrete chips and a bloody, torn T-shirt were taken out just before medics removed the body.

"When the body was taken away we embraced and had a short prayer," said the Rev. Jim Baugher. "With all the noise that's all we could do."

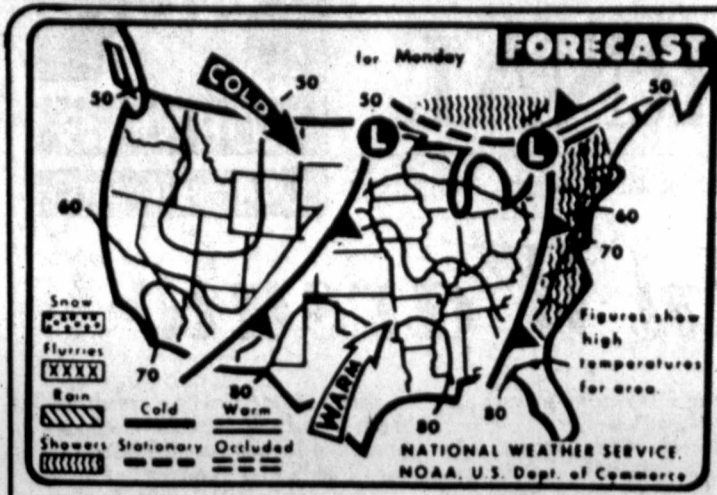

Fire Chief Robert Walker said, Sunday morning, that three or four workmen

Scientists Claim Earth Entering New Ice Age

NEW YORK (AP) — Earth's current warm period is ending and a new ice age that could last 114,000 years is coming, say scientists who have developed a new model of the planet's climate based on astronomy.

But there is no cause for alarm since the next cold peak is not expected for several thousand years, the scientists said.

The new model reinforces the idea — now growing among scientists — that changes in the Earth's orbit cause the advance and retreat of glaciers.

It also offers an astronomical explanation for the brief but crucial warm spells that have punctuated the great ice ages of the last million years of Earth history.

There have been only four of these "interglacial" periods in the last 350,000 years, each lasting about 10,000 years. Human civilization sprang up in the latest one, which began about 9,000 B.C.

The climate model was developed by George Kukla and colleagues at Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory, and by Belgian astronomer and mathematician Andre Berger of the Catholic University of Louvain.

Kukla, Berger, Ramona Lotti and Jeffrey Brown published their theory in the current issue of the British science journal Nature.

In a telephone interview, the Czech-born Kukla said the model was based only on natural causes and did not take man's influence on climate into account.

"We know the atmosphere is being loaded with carbon dioxide and this could change the future climate completely," he said. Many scientists, for example, believe carbon dioxide from fossil fuels will cause a global warming.

But the model suggests that in the past, astronomical forces have played an even greater role in glaciers than was suspected, Kukla said.

Pakistan Becomes Pivot In Maneuvering

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and President Reagan's desire to check Moscow's advance toward the oil-rich Persian Gulf has offered Pakistan a pivotal role in the high-stakes maneuvering of the superpowers.

It is a role Pakistan may not wish to embrace.

The initial cost to Washington is an estimated $500 million in military and economic assistance for Pakistan and the admission that U.S. efforts to stop Pakistan from joining the nuclear "club" have failed.

Following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979, President Carter offered Pakistan a total $400 million over two years in military and economic aid.

But President Muhammad Zia Ul-Haq disdainfully rejected the offer as "peanuts."

Relations were further complicated by an attack on the U.S. embassy in Islamabad by Islamic militants. A Marine guard, an Army warrant officer and two Pakistani employees died before the tardy arrival of police.

Today the new administration is chiefly concerned with the security of the Persian Gulf and its vital oilfields, which it sees threatened by 85,000 Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan. This concern prompted a new policy:

- The administration has proposed repealing a ban on military assistance to Pakistan for refusing to abide by international controls on its nuclear program.
- Officials say the administration is expected to propose about $400 million military credits and $100 million in economic aid as well as military training assistance for Pakistan.

Foreign Minister Agha Shahi of Pakistan will visit Washington in April to discuss the new relationship.

The assistance the administration ultimately offers must be tailored to meet Zia's personal concerns. He does not want Pakistan's leadership role in the non-aligned movement threatened by close links to the U.S. security system.

"We have to look into all of its implications," Zia said last week. "Pakistan definitely needs to be strengthened, but it does not want to involve itself with any military relationship as such."

Another concern is the Soviet Union. Zia does not want Pakistan crushed in the Moscow-Washington conflict by being accused of aiding Afghan rebels and acting as an American proxy.

"I would say the Pakistanis have not rejected any U.S. offer and neither are we in any kind of bargaining situation over the level of assistance," a State Department spokesman said.

This century-old idea, refined in the 1920s by Yugoslavian scientist Milutin Milankovitch, has been supported by modern computer studies of radioisotope-dating records by James Hayes and Wallace Broecker of Columbia, John Imbrie of Brown and many others.

Scientists have noted that mild warming trends occur about every 20,000 years in step with an astronomical cycle known as the precession of the perihelion.

The perihelion is the time when the Earth comes closest to the sun and occurs because the Earth's orbit is not a perfect circle.

The perihelion now occurs in January. But as times goes on, it will come later and later in the year. In 13,000 to 25,000 years, depending on the gravitational influence of the outer planets, it will return to January.

Religious Leaders Warn Of 'Smugness'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Group of 23 prominent clerical and lay religious leaders Sunday charged the new Religious Right with a "spiritual smugness" that threatens to polarize U.S. society.

"No single religious or political orientation can claim exclusive possession of the truth," the group said in a statement. "No group can claim that it, alone, is patriotic and that those who disagree are un-American."

Most of the signers of the statement, entitled "We are a moral alternative," have long been Christian and Jewish activists in social justice causes.

They charged the Religious Right — a movement that seeks to combine religious fundamentalism and political conservatism — with threatening the liberties of those with whom they disagree.

"They represent an intellectual and spiritual smugness that threatens even further to polarize a society already too highly fragmented," the statement said.

"We believe that helping people to their feet is as religious an act as keeping them on their knees.

"The way to do that, however, is not by trying either to 'Christianize America,' destroying its pluralism or replacing democracy with an American version of some theocratic state... The notion of a 'Christian republic' violates the deepest convictions of the founders of this nation."

The statement came at a time of increased debate over the role of religion in the nation's political life.

One of the political-religious conservative groups, the Moral Majority, has recently taken out full page ads in a number of newspapers to combat their critics.

The Moral Majority denied having a position on such issues as the Panama Canal, Taiwan or South Africa — positions some other religious-political conservative groups have listed as "moral" issues.

In their new statement, the Protestant and Jewish leaders said "ultra-conservatism" was symptomatic "of a far more dangerous illness: spiritual and social infantilism which breeds the desire for simplistic answers to complex religious and social problems."

"When these answers are not forthcoming, frustration and anger propel too many towards immediate responses which make the cure worse than the disease," the statement said.

"Amending the Constitution so that, once again, children will be forced to read from the Bible or recite prayers in classrooms of our public schools will neither solve our society's climbing divorce rate nor reduce teen-age pregnancy nor eliminate the horrors of our growing drug culture nor find work for the jobless teenagers in our nation's urban slums," the statement said.

Among those signing the statement were Rabbi Balfour Brickner of the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue in New York City; Bishop Paul Moore, head of New York's Episcopal diocese; Dr. George Weber, president of New York Theological Society; the Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker Sr., pastor of New York's Canaan Baptist Church of Christ; the Rev. John Collins, co-director, Clergy and Laity Concerned; Rabbi Wolfe Kelman, vice president of the Rabbinical Assembly; and the Rev. Howard Moody of Judson Memorial church, New York.

Currently, American military assistance to Pakistan is illegal because of the nuclear amendment. Officials suspect Pakistan will soon have the capability to explode a nuclear device, as has its foe, India.

Efforts to persuade Pakistan by restricting its military aid failed, but the administration says its concerns about the spread of nuclear technology have not lessened.

"We remain seriously concerned by the Pakistani program and will continue to make that clear to the Pakistan government," an official said.

"However, we believe that strengthening Pakistan is necessary as the Soviets continue to occupy Afghanistan, and it is very important to create a framework of regional security in an area vital to our interests."

But Zia may not be willing to line up on the American side too closely.

"Pakistan's dialogue with the United States covers various aspects, the most fundamental aspect being to determine U.S. interests in this region," Zia said.

"It has to be determined whether or not these interests are of such a nature as to serve the cause of Pakistan as well."

Escapee Accused In Robbery, Murder

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bernard Welch escaped from prison seven years ago and lived in luxury near Washington, telling his common-law wife and friends he was a self-employed investor. Police contend he was a master thief and killer.

Welch, 40, suspected of stealing millions of dollars worth of jewels and other valuables from hundreds of Washington area homes, goes on trial Wednesday for the fatal shooting of cardiologist Michael Halberstam.

Dr. Halberstam, brother of writer David Halberstam, was shot twice in the chest Dec. 5 when he discovered an intruder in his rambling ranch-style home.

As Halberstam drove himself to a nearby hospital, he thought he saw his assailant on the street and struck him with his car. Doctors said the exertion involved in driving the car aggravated his wounds and contributed to his death.

Welch was arrested that night. He had been slightly injured.

Interest in Welch grew when it was learned he had escaped from a New York prison in 1974 while serving time for burglary and robbery and had lived in luxury in the Washington suburbs for several years, driving a $40,000 Mercedes-Benz and paying cash for a $235,000 home in Great Falls, Va.

Police confiscated about $4 million worth of antiques, figurines, jewelry and other valuables from Welch's home. Hundreds of people filed through police headquarters to view the loot and claim their property.

Welch and his common-law wife, Linda Sue Hamilton, also owned a $100,000 summer home in Duluth, Minn.

Welch, who went by the name of Norman Hamilton and often described himself as a "self-employed investor," dealt regularly with dealers in coins and antiques in the Washington area and in Minnesota.

"He was very good at it," said a Minneapolis antique dealer. "He sure as hell fooled me."

No charges have been filed against Mrs. Hamilton, mother of Welch's three children. Police said she "was not involved. She thought he was a wealthy stock and real estate man, just like everyone else did."

Welch told Life magazine in an exclusive interview for its February issue the last six years were "the best of my life."

"I had everything going for me and he (Halberstam) had everything going for him," Welch said. "But now he's dead and I'm in jail."

The publicity prompted defense attorney Sol Z. Rosen to ask for a change of venue. Chief Superior Court Judge H. Carl Moultrie has yet to rule on that motion.

During a two-hour interview with The Washington Post, Welch denied he was involved in the Halberstam shooting or any burglaries in the Washington area.

Welch said he had followed a life of crime because it is a "form of excitement" and suggested if he is sent back to jail he will "educate" other prisoners.

"Prison made me," Welch said. "When I was there I futhered my education. If they send me to prison you can believe that I'll school everybody I can so they will do better when they get out."

Youth Job Grants Receive Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate Labor subcommittee voted 5-2 Friday to authorize appropriations through 1982 for youth job grants that the Reagan administration proposes consolidating into other employment and training programs.

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., chairman of the subcommittee on employment and productivity, said the bill "preserves our options."

"If we do not enact it, the youth programs will end even if we conclude after study and investigation that they should be preserved," he said.

Quayle said he hoped for action by the full committee within two weeks.

Joining with Quayle in voting for the bill were Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the full committee, and Democratic Sens. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island and Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Sens. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., and Don Nickles, R-Okl., voted against it.

In his budget message to Congress on March 10, President Reagan said withdrawing the youth job program and consolidating with other programs under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act would save $130 million in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Metzenbaum argued that such a step should not be taken at a time of high unemployment among young people.

Milder Winds, Less Dust Predicted

Southwest winds will diminish the possibility of blowing dust today, according to the National Weather Service. A high temperature of near 80 degrees is expected in the Lubbock area, with winds at a milder 15 to 20 mph.

Some blowing dirt was reported around Lubbock airport between 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, as winds blew in from the west to northwest during the late morning and early afternoon at 17 to 22 mph, with gusts as high as 32 mph. Sunny skies are expected in the area today, turning partly cloudy and cooler on Tuesday. The low tonight is forecast in the upper 40s, with a high Tuesday in the mid 70s.

Around the state, a cold front went through Central and East Texas early Sunday, with heavy showers and thunderstorms reported over the southcentral and southeast part of the state. Between 1 and 4 inches fell over the eastern half of the state during the morning, with an area northwest of San Antonio recording nearly 6 inches.

During the late afternoon, thunderstorms were reported over far East Texas and along the upper Texas coast. The thunderstorms were expected to continue over Southeast Texas during last night, with fair skies the rule elsewhere expected through tonight.

Around the Lubbock area Sunday, afternoon temperatures were generally between 65 and 70 degrees, with a high reported of 71 degrees and low of 36.

The extended outlook for Wednesday through Friday in the South Plains calls for partly cloudy skies, with highs in the 70s and lows in the low 40s.

The outlook for Saturday through April 8 in West Texas is about normal temperatures and no rain.

CARRIER RETURNS

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The USS John F. Kennedy, the world's largest conventional aircraft carrier, has returned home from the Mediterranean after an eight-month voyage. The flagship of Battle Force Sixth Fleet, which arrived home Saturday, was the only U.S. carrier serving in the Mediterranean. Other carriers have been diverted to patrols in the Indian Ocean.

Freighter Captain Shot By Police

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — The captain of a British-registered freighter was shot to death by police Saturday after he shot at officers who boarded the ship to question him and a crewman about a robbery, the civil governor's office said. The victim was identified by maritime officials as John Wilkinson, 44, of Surrey, England.

Authorities said police went to the freighter Argus Pride after a Ghanaian seaman on another ship accused Wilkinson and Trevor Pagden of robbing him.

The incident occurred 20 minutes before the arrival of Spanish Defense Minister Alberto Oliart, who was on an inspection tour of the terrorism-plagued northern Basque provinces of Spain.

Europe Time Change

WATERBEDS by MARINA MARINE

Bears are authorities on the subject of sleeping, and they're sure finicky about their beds. Can't be too soft, too hard, too warm, too cold—they have to be just right. That's why we coaxed Bruno out of his mountain cave to test a Atlantis waterbed. He grumbled and growled at first, but we assured him that a waterbed would support all 800 pounds of his furry frame. We guaranteed him that he'd be comfortable, and showed him how to adjust the firmness and temperature exactly to his liking. Well, that was five months ago, and Bruno is still sleeping soundly. It just goes to show you—a night without a waterbed is simply un-bearable. To learn the secret of a great sleeper, see us.

Guardian Angels Claim Expansion Across U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Guardian Angels have emerged from the subway stations of New York to export anti-crime patrols across the nation, from the tree-lined streets of suburban Long Island to the Sunset Strip in Los Angeles and the docks of San Juan.

In addition to a delegation in Atlanta, the Angels claim to have over 300 members in 12 communities outside New York City.

"It's only a start," says Curtis Sliwa, who founded the Angels two years ago. Since then, the sight of the Angels' red berets and white T-shirts has comforted some New York subway riders, but police say the crime rate has been unaffected. Critics worry Angels could become a vigilante squad.

The 25-year-old Sliwa says Angel patrols are planned for six other U.S. cities, and claims to have requests for Angels from London, Rio de Janeiro, Panama City, "anywhere there's street crime. That's everywhere but the South Pole."

"I wouldn't be surprised if he turned up next in Poland," said Sgt. William McKechnie, president of New York's transit police union and an Angels critic. "Where the cameras go, Curtis goes."

McKechnie says he tells police elsewhere the Angels are the "closest thing I've ever seen in this country to a vigilante society." He said Angels have tied up police by getting into needless disputes with citizens, and that the 700 New York Angels are poor substitutes for officers.

Angels who have gone to other cities to set up chapters often find officials are more cooperative than in New York, Sliwa said.

In Los Angeles, 48 volunteers led by Sliwa deputy Ricard Dominique ride buses and walk the streets. Chief Daryl Gates welcomed the Angels, and police report no complaints.

In Philadelphia, Angels are training volunteers to patrol the subways. On March 11, Sliwa spoke at a City Council hearing on transit safety, and the committee chairman later said "any efforts by the community to add security to the transit system will be more than welcome."

In the Puerto Rican capital of San Juan, said Sliwa, an Angel leads patrols of the dock area "where tourists sometimes get mugged."

"Mayors in other cities have adopted a wait-and-see attitude and the cops are doing the same," Sliwa said.

McKechnie conceded Angels have attracted support, adding: "90 percent of his (Sliwa's) statements cannot be documented or substantiated."

In Hartford, Conn., for instance, Police Chief George Sicaras and local reporters said they knew nothing of a delegation of 16 Angels Sliwa said was patrolling the business district.

"I know they're not here for several reasons," said Sicaras. "For one thing, there's been none of the publicity they typically get."

"We haven't gone public in Hartford yet," Sliwa said, insisting the patrols exist.

Angels went to Atlanta two weeks ago because of the deaths and disappearances of 22 black children, and drew a chilly reception. But Angel Lisa Evers said Friday that they have been asked to form a local chapter by a public housing advisory council.

In New York, Sliwa said, "80 percent of us (the Angels) come from the 10 highest crime-reporting precincts" and lower socio-economic ranks. But "you go out to LA, and we've got actors, cooks, carpenters, plumbers, people with good jobs."

Patrols are tailored to the community, he said. In suburban Nassau County, for instance, Angels patrol in cars, looking for housebreaks.

Sliwa said expansion to Boston, Chicago, Houston, Detroit, Miami and San Francisco will await completion of talks with New York officials over the group's status.

"Now we're a non-profit, tax-exempt group with a board of directors," he said. "I'm not just answering to myself any more."

The Angels do influence others. Couples who patrol their Cleveland neighborhood wearing red berets and carrying citizens band radios say they were inspired by the Angels. Unlike the Angels, they are trained by police.

Sliwa said the Angels could revitalize volunteerism. "It can become what VISTA and the Peace Corps would have been if they hadn't got mixed up with politics," he said.

"Now, if you volunteer for something you're considered to be a sucker or a do-gooder," he said.

Soviets Trying Daylight Savings

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is switching to daylight-saving time this week for the first time in 50 years, and some Soviets are finding the change more than a little perplexing.

Despite a blitz of official publicity heralding the switch — "Change Your Clocks On Time, Dear Comrades!" read the front page of one Moscow newspaper — authorities have received numerous complaints from confused and worried citizens.

"People without experience ask questions," says Vladimir Ilyin, a Bureau of Standards expert helping to oversee the time change, which takes place Tuesday at midnight with the movement of clocks forward one hour.

"They think, 'I won't be able to go to sleep, I won't be able to get up ... At first, people were thinking they would have to go to work earlier, but public transport would stay on the same schedule,'" he said in an interview.

A Ministry of Health magazine said "many parents are worried that their children will take the time change badly."

Moscow Radio reported several residents of one town had written appealing for an exemption because they felt there would be less time to eat breakfast and get children off to school.

Soviet officialdom has responded to these concerns with an extensive campaign of television, radio and newspaper ads saying there is no cause for concern and urging Soviet citizens to take the time change seriously.

"This is not an April Fool's joke," said one publication.

The messages tout daylight-saving time as beneficial to everything from traffic safety to biorhythms.

The time change, which will take effect in all 11 Soviet time zones, is designed primarily as an energy-saving measure. Experts say it will conserve 2 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity a year.

The switch will put Moscow four hours ahead of Greenwich Mean Time and eight hours ahead of Eastern Daylight Time, which the United States enters April 26. Soviet daylight time will last until Oct. 1.

Clocks in 20 nations of Western and Eastern Europe were turned ahead one hour at 1 a.m. local time Sunday — the first simultaneous switch to daylight savings time on the Continent.

Many Western countries and some of the Soviet Union's own East European allies have been using daylight time routinely for years. But the Soviets, who had observed "summer time" early in the century, dropped it in 1930.

Officials here say confusion and misinformation about the switch to daylight-saving time is not surprising in a country where generations of citizens have never experienced it.

"Most people you talk to understand what is happening and won't have any problems," says Bureau of Standards spokesman Ilyin. His agency has sponsored a series of television programs which included man-on-the-street interviews with Soviets who confidently declared they understand the new system.

Still, the bureau quietly dispatched one of its staff members to Soviet Central Asia this month to judge through casual discussions if people were properly informed about the switch. The official verdict is that the Soviet Union's 267 million people will have no trouble, on the whole.

But as the time for the change ticks closer, some clearly remain baffled — and one reason may be the government's own pronouncements, which often confuse more than they convince.

For example, the magazine "Health," which has a wide national readership, insisted the time change will have no ill effects and there is nothing to worry about. But it went on to say that "it is necessary to prepare" physically for the one-hour change.

"Starting in the second half of March, try not to stay up late, don't leave your TV, radio or tape recorder on late at night and prepare to adapt your way of life to going to bed earlier."

"It is particularly important to put children to bed on time, or even a little earlier," the magazine sat also advised the elderly to cut down on daytime naps so they can fall asleep earlier.

Students Make TV Documentary About VD

CHICAGO (UPI) — Like most teachers in inner-city high schools, John West has a tough time getting the supplies he needs — even chalk.

But he got more than $13,000 from CBS for his film students at Roberto Clemente High School. He also got them an assignment to make a network documentary about venereal disease among teens.

The film — "V.D.: Less an Illness than an Attitude," and a brief segment about the students who made the film — will comprise the entire "30 Minutes" telecast April 4.

Clemente High has a reputation in the city. The Latino gangs run it, the kids carry guns and major in sex, violence and drugs.

It also has a reputation in the television industry. Joel Heller, executive producer of CBS Television's "30 Minutes" has dubbed it the network's Midwest production arm. Two years ago, with gang wars in full swing and their friends and families being gunned down in the Northwest Side streets around the school, Clemente students made a film portraying the futility of gang life.

That film, "Too Late for Me," was aired on CBS, NBC and PBS, won numerous awards and currently is being shown in schools, community groups and other organizations around the country.

It proved Clemente students capable of artistic and educational achievement.

"The school has a very, very bad reputation. People have a tendency to just write us off," said Fernando Burgos, a junior film student.

But Clemente students aren't being written off any more.

This year, Heller wrote West asking if his class would produce a documentary on VD — saying the kids had proven themselves more effective in communicating with young people than adult professional film crews.

West took the subject up with his students last fall.

"He asked us how much we know about VD," said Burgos.

"It turned out most of us didn't know too much about it but that we'd be interested in learning. Then he told us we had an opportunity to make a movie for CBS, that he thought we could do it and we said 'Sure we can do it.'"

They did.

They spent the first part of the school year preparing the script. In January, they rented professional film equipment and were taught to use it by Clemente graduates who made "Too Late for Me."

They filmed interviews, visited VD clinics and did one interview with a young man who caught venereal disease. They took film crews to public health VD screening clinics.

The film presents young people talking about a topic adults are afraid, reluctant or unwilling to talk to them about.

And the project has made better students of the filmmakers.

"Having a chance to do something like this, knowing somebody's listening to you, makes school more than just getting up and going to school and going to classes 8 to 3," said student Abibal Rodriguez.

It also gave them direction. Several former students are either looking for work in the film industry or have landed small jobs. One is working for a local television station.

There is a waiting list for West's class for next year. Heller's students are proud of their accomplishment.

"We just show how it is and what we know," said student Delwin Rosa. "If we know the right stuff, they'll put it on the air."

Clemente students are no longer writing themselves off. They have both self-esteem and pride in their school.

"You've got to see things for yourself," said Rosa. "Don't write us off. Don't just assume the worst. There's a lot of problems. But there's a lot of good."

Rabies Incidence Increasing

ATLANTA (UPI) — Rabies in animals, especially wildlife, is increasing dramatically across the United States, lending a new sense of urgency to laboratory research aimed at combatting the problem.

Last year, there was an 85 percent increase in the number of animal rabies cases over the average for the previous five years, according to the national Centers for Disease Control.

With a 67 percent increase recorded in 1979, the 1980 jump in cases could signal a trend. Last year's total of 6,400 cases compares with 5,145 in 1979.

Two other facts also have emerged from the statistics, said Dr. Gregory Parham, a veterinarian with the CDC's viral diseases branch. Dog rabies is on the increase, reversing a decline of many years, and there is more rabies in cattle than before.

This not-too-encouraging report on animal rabies compares with a much brighter picture for human cases. In 1980, no one in this country contacted the nearly always fatal disease, the first time since 1974 there were no human cases. In addition, a new, more effective, anti-rabies vaccine made of human cell tissue came on the market last June, promising better prevention.

Parham said the answer to controlling rabies in wildlife may lie in current laboratory research on vaccine bait. "In Switzerland," he said, "vaccine bait apparently was used successfully to knock out rabies in foxes."

Laboratory research is under way in this country on a similar vaccine bait technique, Parham said, "but it's going to take an awful lot of research and time."

The vaccinated bait would be placed in the wild for animals to eat. Once eaten, the vaccine would prevent the animal from contracting the disease.

Parham said the big jumps in animal rabies over the past two years was due primarily to increases in the number of skunks getting the disease. "Of the 6,400 total cases in 1980, over 4,000 were in skunks," Parham said.

"All warm-blooded mammals are susceptible to rabies," Parham said in explaining why skunk rabies was increasing faster than in other species. "It's just that they have such a high amount of virus in their saliva, when they do bite, the concentration of the virus is so much greater."

He said the increasing incidence of skunk rabies, mainly in the middle third of the country, coincides with jumps in the same region in the number of dog and cattle rabies cases.

Cattle, which had been fourth on the list of animals getting rabies most frequently in 1979, moved up to third in 1980, Parham said. Dog rabies cases increased by 100 percent from 1979 to 1980, but remained in fifth place. Some of the increase in dog rabies cases was attributed by the CDC to the situation on the Texas-Mexico border, where rabies in dogs is endemic and where two human cases occurred in 1979.

Most animal rabies continues to occur in wildlife, Parham said. In 1980, skunks headed the list, followed in order by bats, cattle, raccoons, dogs, cats and foxes.

Of the skunk and cattle rabies, those cases were concentrated in the states of Texas, Illinois, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, California, Missouri, Wisconsin, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

CRACKDOWN WELCOME

Bail Bond Reform Past Due

A CRACKDOWN on bail bond forfeitures is long overdue and we hope the County follows through on its threat to cancel the license of any bondsman who doesn't pay up within 60 days.

A review ordered by Criminal District Atty. John Montford showed that more than $640,000 in forfeitures called here in the last four years has gone unpaid.

Nobody has said just how much of that would have been collected had the steps necessary to get a final judgment in each case been taken, but it undoubtedly would have been a substantial amount.

Forfeiture proceedings on $35,350 in bonds held by currently licensed bondsmen already are final and up to $185,000 may soon be, according to Mrs. Yvonne Faulks, chief of the CDA's civil division.

EVEN MORE DISTURBING is the fact that $256,300 in bond forfeitures were called against bondsmen no longer doing business in Lubbock, but no final judgment and collection ever was secured.

Still another $165,820 in personal recognizance bonds or out-of-county bonds have been ordered forfeited when the defendant didn't show up for trial on the appointed day over the last four years. However, $100,000 of that is represented by a single case which Montford's office now is pursuing.

The district attorney and the Bail Bond Board are to be commended for the recent crackdown on all forfeitures because, clearly, there has been too little attention paid to the situation for years.

BONDING COMPANIES bail clients out of jail and the amount of the bond is forfeitable if the defendant doesn't appear as summoned even if he subsequently is found or shows up voluntarily.

One area of laxity, however, apparently has been in the failure to take the necessary follow-up action against the bonding company to get a final judgment and collect.

Another aspect that probably would benefit from closer scrutiny is the value of property posted to back up the bail bonds and the total amount of the bonds written against it. Every precaution should be taken to make certain that bond forfeitures are first, collectible and second, are collected promptly.

Lifting the licenses of bondsmen who don't pay up is the ultimate way to control the problem but running the court system in a businesslike way requires continuing, close attention before it gets to that point again.

BOTH PLUSSES, MINUSES

Sec. Haig--Unsettled Issue?

THE FLAP over the pecking order between Sec. of State Alexander Haig and other top officials of the Reagan Administration has been smoothed over, for the time being.

And while the incident made headlines and led off the networks' prime time presentations for a few days, actually it wasn't anything which should not have been expected, given the strong personalities and opinions of those with whom we are dealing.

In every administration, in fact most business operations where there are major changes, there has to be a shakeout period. It is no less so for the complicated setup that is the federal government.

IT WAS A certainty that there would be those who would have a difference of opinions, if not mode of operandi, in the new setup in Washington.

In the first place, President Reagan had more or less downgraded his National Security chief to avoid just the precise incident which arose. He had done so in view of President Carter's and other White House occupants' problems with conflicting lines of authority, real and perceived.

Too, Sec. Haig isn't exactly a wallflower and it was understood ahead of time that he not only was his own man, but isn't the type to brook too much of what he regards as incompetence or interference.

IT IS regrettable, we think, that the so-called struggle for power has been given a political implication.

According to the pundits, not only Sec. Haig, but Vice President George Bush, who President Reagan designated to be the man in charge in any "crisis" situation, are supposed to be looking ahead to 1984, in case Mr. Reagan were not a second-term candidate for whatever reason.

Frankly, we doubt either man has given that much thought to the subject in the context of their present posts, even though politics is never out of the mind of a politician.

ALL OF WHICH brings us down to one bottom line which should not be overlooked.

That is, we feel Sec. Haig has a very broad understanding of Soviet Russia, of world Communism and of the threat to U.S. security in many places around the globe.

We hope that those who are soft on Communism are not able to use this incident to "get back" at the hawk image they see in Sec. Haig. By the same token, Sec. Haig must understand that he must answer to the President and the American people.

Sec. Haig is the sort of tough, no-nonsense guy the Russians, and others who would shychange the U.S., understand. While the man in the White House in the final analysis must be the architect and arbiter on foreign policy, a good, strong secretary of state also is a necessity in today's complicated world. Sec. Haig thus far has fit that mold.

ART BUCHWALD:

Educators Overlooking Third Creation Theory

WASHINGTON—The battle being waged in the schools has pitted the Creationists (those who believe the Bible's version of how man appeared on Earth) and the Darwinists, who claim that man walked out of the sea millions and millions of years ago and eventually developed into the human being that we know today.

But there is a third theory which combines the two, and this one should also be taught in the schools.

Professor Heinrich Applebaum has been researching it for years and here is what he has come up with.

"I believe God did create Adam, and then made Eve from one of his ribs, but I can't buy the story of why they were driven out of the Garden of Eden."

WHAT DO you think happened?"

Well, Adam and Eve were living happily in the Garden when some geologists came along and suspected there was oil under it. They recommended that some test wells be drilled.

Adam protested that the Garden of Eden was a perfect paradise, and oil companies would destroy it if they started putting up rigs on the property.

Adam pointed out that God had set aside Eden as a place where man and woman could commune with nature. He said he would take them to court if they tried to drill on it."

The oil companies took their case to the secretary of the Interior, who was charged with protecting public lands.

Lightly Speaking

We call it "hard times" when we have to do without things our grandparents never heard of.

A first-grade teacher said that a little girl in her class had informed her excitedly that she knew how to tell Abraham Lincoln and George Washington apart. "George Washington," said the kid, "is the one with the ponytail."

HE ACCUSED Adam of being an environmentalist and trying to stop the human race from developing its natural resources.

"We can't just let the oil sit there under the ground to protect a Garden which only two people are using," he said on Meet the Press. "Our job is to see that we use our natural resources for the benefit of all mankind."

Besides, I have no intention of giving permission to the oil companies to drill all over the Garden. I'm setting 20 percent of the land aside for drilling, and the rest will be kept in its present natural state."

Adam complained to God, who said, "The oil lobby is much more powerful than I am. There isn't anything I can do to stop them."

The Interior Department auctioned off the leases, and it turned out there was not only oil but gas on the land.

THE NEXT people to apply for permission to dig were the coal companies. The secretary of Interior decided to let them go ahead, despite Adam and Eve's protests, because the coal had a low sulphur content.

But he said he would permit them to mine on only 30 percent of the Garden, which still gave Adam and Eve plenty of room to enjoy the view.

Consolidated Edison decided to build a plant in the Garden, because it was cheaper than hauling the coal across the continent. Then the copper and nickel companies erected smelters to take advantage of the cheap energy.

Adam developed sinus trouble and Eve's eyes were tearing all the time. The final straw came when a snake gave Eve an apple covered with insecticide, and she got sick to her stomach.

"That does it," Adam said, packing his few belongings. "We're getting out of this hell hole, and moving to New Jersey."

'Haig Thinks There's A Commie Under Every Rock'

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Misquotes On Quotas

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The Reagan Cabinet system spent a month wrestling with Japanese auto imports only to reach a non-solution so worrisome that at the March 19 Cabinet meeting Deputy Sec. of State William P. Clark had to come to the rescue.

Clark expressed the absent Secretary Alexander Haig's wishes that the State Department take the lead in trade talks with Japan, putting Special Trade Representative William Brock in a supporting role.

Quick agreement meant that the State Department, not deeply involved until now, was coming in to execute policy after failure of Cabinet government to shape it clearly in its first serious test.

The administration consensus reached was U.S. support for a "unilateral voluntary quota" on Japanese auto exports, but nobody in the administration is quite sure what that means.

ANDREW TULLY:

Loaf Of Spread

WASHINGTON—The fuel crisis, yes. High interest rates, too. But a real tragedy has beset the American people. The price of peanut butter has more than doubled, and supplies are short as a result of the drought and fungus that ravaged last year's peanut crop.

El Salvador indeed. The Russians in Afghanistan indeed. Right here at home a blow has been struck at a great American tradition.

Can we as people survive peanut butter at $2.55 a pound, when we can get it? Will our children grow pale and wan on lunches and after-school snacks of crackers smothered with caviar?

"I'm looking for something cheaper," says a neighborhood mother with three brawny schoolboys. "But my three turn up their noses at Bologna. They'll eat brownies, but only as a chaser to peanut butter sandwiches."

A GROWNUP friend who can afford to dine every night on lobster accompanied by New York sirloin, is desolate. "I've got to have peanut butter," he says. "I've been hooked since I was a two-year-old. But Clara says she went to five supermarkets the other day and couldn't find the stuff at any price. It's a national emergency."

The situation is also the moral equivalent of war. Peanut industry tycoons have always claimed that the peanut butter sandwich is America's favorite.

Peanut butter is one of the few foods that nobody warns will cause cancer. Peanut butter contains protein. Peanut butter tastes good. With a peanut butter sandwich, kids will drink milk.

SHOW ME a kid who doesn't like peanut butter and I'll show you a kid who will grow up to demonstrate against everything. A kid who doesn't like peanut butter needs counseling. Such kids need tender loving care, lest they wind up in Congress or posing for Playboy.

Bureaucracy has been no help in the crisis. The peanut butter industry asked the Agriculture Department to lift import restrictions on peanuts. Agriculture finally did so after considering the request for three months.

By that time, the international market was almost sold out. The mere 60 million pounds of peanuts since imported brought triple the price domestic farmers received last fall.

MOTHERHOOD? I'm for it. I'm for free bones for dogs, and the immediate indictment of surly gas attendants, thieving parking lot tycoons, and females who demand equal rights in the cussing department. But first things first.

Ronald Reagan should forthwith announce that he did not become President to preside over the liquidation of the Republic by denying American citizens their daily peanut butter.

Find the stuff somewhere, Mister President, sir. Trade some tanks for peanut butter. Trade some missiles and bombers. Trade Frank Sinatra. What this country needs most is not billions for defense, but a few millions for peanut butter at 89 cents a pound.

Who will determine whether the quota—"unilaterally" and "voluntarily" set by Tokyo—is too high? The arrival on stage by the State Department insures the Japanese will not be roughed up to "unilaterally volunteer" a quota smaller than they want.

That scarcely amounts to coherent administration policy. The new Cabinet system has failed to approach agreement on an issue where President Reagan himself is ambivalent.

This suggests the chaos that would have ensued in the Cabinet over tax policy had not Reagan's position been so hard in pressing for rate reduction.

INSTEAD OF presenting the President with a unified recommendation on auto imports, the Cabinet exposed its own inherent splits. These disagreements transcend the auto import crisis and go to the basic question of governmental intervention in the economy.

Three millionaire businessmen in the Cabinet—Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Labor Secretary Ray Donovan—favor intimate cooperation between government, business and organized labor in rebuilding the economy.

Heads of those departments are not ordinarily involved intimately in drafting high economic policy, traditionally a Treasury function.

But under the Reagan Cabinet system, a task force on the auto industry headed by Lewis very nearly established a limit on Japanese imports as administration policy.

THE TRADITIONAL economic policy-making departments, headed by the Treasury, belatedly counter-attacked against what they called Lewis' "runaway" task force.

By March 11, Lewis had been stopped cold, the Cabinet was hopelessly split. Treasury and the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) wanted the issue taken to the President's desk in disagreement.

But Lewis protested, contending this violated Cabinet government. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan was talked into it, giving the protectionists more time to finagle a low quota or other import limitation.

The complicating factor was that nobody was entirely certain what the President would do if the matter reached him in disagreement. "The old man is not all that tough on this one," one anti-quota White House aide confided to us.

WORRIED ABOUT the sick auto industry, Regan is torn between free trade philosophy and his sympathy for the U.S. companies and workers.

That led to a March 17 Cabinet-level luncheon out of which leaked inaccurate reports about capitulation by Treasury and OMB to a Japanese quota. The only agreement was on the "unilateral voluntary" quota now so deeply steeped in ambiguity.

Behind this is a genuine lack of consensus in the Cabinet over how economic policy should be conducted.

Pro-quota partisans believe that willingness by United Auto Workers (UAW) President Douglas Fraser to scale down workers' benefits in return for the Chrysler benefit should not go unrewarded. "We can't let Doug down," Labor Secretary Donovan said in one meeting.

"I think we ought to let Doug simmer in his own juices," an anti-quota Cabinet colleague said later. That fits the view of OMB Director David Stockman, who as a Michigan Republican politician remembers no favors toward him or Reagan from the UAW.

BUT FOR their part, Lewis and other Cabinet businessmen regard Stockman as a non-businessman who does not understand the problems of troubled industries.

A smaller group has been trying to hammer out policy in line with the March 19 Cabinet decision: Haig, presidential aides Edwin Meese and James Baker and trade representative Brock.

But deep-seated ideological and stylistic differences between Dave Stockman and Drew Lewis, and between Treasury supply-siders and Transportation interventionists leave nobody happy.

The dismay with which all parties look to the outcome suggests the limits of Cabinet government when the President himself is of two minds.

JAY HARRIS:

ABCs On Griddle

HAS U.S. education, from kindergarten to post-graduate studies, turned the corner?

Can Johnny and Susie read, and write, and perhaps even think better than their counterparts of a few years ago?

Do today's students get a sense of real values, moral and otherwise, in the classroom?

The answers to those questions, many of which came to the forefront in the wake of Sputnik and the Space Age, are still out. But, with all the emphasis on education, American style, and what is right and wrong with it, one would assume a bright new world is in the making.

Right? Well, yes and no, if one is to listen to the rumblings coming from the Three R's complex across the land.

WHILE THE problem of "Why Johnny can't read" is still up front, a few others have joined the list.

Like, for instance, why Johnny or Susie can't write a sensible sentence, let alone a term paper. Or why a recent survey in a prestigious Eastern college showed students would prefer to get an "A" by cheating than a "C" by doing it the hard way...

Before we go any further, let us make one thing clear. It is easy to take up the cudgel and whack today's educational methods over the head.

By the same token, it is easy to leave the impression that many teachers are just going through the motions, and if forced to take some of the tests they give would wind up with embarrassing grades themselves.

But, that's all too simplistic...

FIRST, THERE is much good about today's classroom, from the first day of school to the doctoral degree.

A lot of smart people, who can tune everything from pianos to computers, not to mention scientific farmers and family-oriented doctors, are joining the ranks of the professional world daily.

Secondly, most teachers are dedicated, work long, hard hours and in many instances are underpaid, in money and appreciation. The militants and other such groups are another matter. And more on that later.

But, there also are some problems out in learning land, as even the most dedicated teacher will admit. And in some ways, the problems still go back to the "basics" of reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic, as well as "values" and the ability to compose lucid thoughts, for verbal or written communication.

THE REASONS for whatever problems that exist are not as puzzling as one might assume.

Ironically, the very things which have contributed to today's "more aware" student may be a factor in his shortcomings in the basics.

Today's world is an increasingly electronic world, as well as plastic one. Television, computers, all the gimmicks and gadgets which make life easier also has made it simpler. Instead of Johnny and Susie adding two and two and getting four, a computer does it for them.

But, despite such progress, many educators still hold to the theme that learning also is reading and writing, as well as the ability to discipline the mind in mathematics. And, arguments to the contrary, that is something one has to do for oneself. No machine can really substitute for what might be called "brain growth..."

As is the case with other parts of the body, it stays active and healthy by constant use, challenge, questing, problem solving, memory, achievement. The expression, "He, or she, is sharp," usually is applied to a person well versed in more than just one field.

IN RECENT months, the spotlight has been on a broader facet of Johnny's education than the fact he may not be able to read.

Several studies have said in effect that while turning out experts in everything from computers to the medical profession, we also are turning out "functional illiterates," people who can't write a coherent business report or letter, who aren't well backgrounded in history and who seldom read a good book.

Thomas C. Wheeler, author of The Great Writing Block, taking note of the anti-writing bias in the U.S., put it this way: "In a society where the telephone replaces the personal letter and television the reading of newspapers and books, people begin to assume that writing isn't necessary."

No less a person than Walter Cronkite said before his recent retirement that one of his major concerns was that people would watch television and think they were getting an in-depth coverage of the news. By the same token, such persons also mistakenly feel they are well informed.

BUT, NOT all the blame can be put on television and bureaucratic jargon for poor grammar and inept writing. The issue is more basic.

Recently, U.S. News & World Report quoted some examples of writing by college English majors, as collected by J. Mitchell Morse, a retired professor at Temple U. An example:

"In are times, the responsible writers must read the hand writing on the wall so he can assess the human conditions... She called him an idiot and other epithets... She was pure as a vestigial virgin... The modern day has it's good merit's as well as it's bad one's but I don't think so."

So what is the solution? Well, Leon Botstein, president of Bard College in Annandale-on-Hudson, N.Y., says "Every freshman should get eight weeks of basic training in writing, reading and speaking—day and night—with no other options."

If the world is slowly sliding out of control, as many believe, the slide started somewhere back before the voters, politicians and terrorists took over. The classroom, for instance...

Pass It On...

THAT THE face of George Washington mostly remained unsmiling is fairly well documented in the historical footnotes. But you don't usually get the complete explanation for that. He had to take some care that a grin didn't turn loose his false teeth.

The Aztecs had their nobility, and the nobility reserved special punishments for offenses by their own. Drunkenness in a noble, for instance, was a capital crime. Execution was by strangulation. In secret.

An expert on life among the elderly say the worst thing you can do for them is put their beds within easy reach of telephones, TV sets and sinks. These close comforts are thought to discourage them from getting up and moving around, and they much need that action.

Author Of Prediction Recants

Quake Forecast Rejected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a title like "The Jupiter Effect," it was a shoo-in to interest cult followers and sci-fi buffs.

But when its authors said the celestial phenomenon would trigger earthquakes, Californians and others with reason to worry about the shifting Earth perked up.

Seven years later, and one year before the book said the planets of the solar system would align themselves against the sun and spark a worldwide wave of earthquakes, the theory has largely been put to rest.

Serious scientists, disdainful of the hypothesis when it was first proposed in 1974, emphatically reject "The Jupiter Effect" as bad science. Even one of the two British authors has recanted.

"I have bad news for the doomsayers: the book has now been proven wrong. The whole basis of the 1982 prediction is gone," the co-author, astrophysicist John Gribbin, wrote in Omni magazine's June 1980 issue.

Only a cult of determined believers insist the book's worst scenario will come to pass, bringing a flurry of quakes to California's susceptible San Andreas Fault. And Gribbin wrote the Omni article with them in mind.

"Because of the way the book has been misused by cultists who must never have read it," he said, "I want to make it clear that there is no reason now to expect any unusual seismic disturbance in 1982 from the causes given in the book."

"The Jupiter Effect," which Gribbin wrote with Stephen Plagemann, contended: "Planetary alignment is ... the key to the trigger for unusually high levels of terrestrial earthquake activity. It turns out that there will be a very rare alignment of the planets, with all of them pulling together on the sun, in the early 1980s," and becoming most potent in 1982.

The idea is that the combined gravitational forces of the nine planets will be aimed at the sun, where the resulting tidal forces would spark extraordinary solar activity.

This activity, in turn, would greatly increase the number of charged particles streaming from the sun, known as the solar wind. This flood of subatomic particles racing toward Earth would cause such turbulence in the atmosphere that the Earth's rotation would be changed slightly.

That, the book contends, "will agitate regions of geologic instability into life. There will be many earthquakes, large and small, around susceptible regions of the globe."

Scientists flatly reject almost every point in that scenario, beginning with "the grand alignment" or what some people have called "the ultimate syzygy." Syzygy is the configuration of the sun, Earth and moon or planets in a straight line.

Similar alignments of the planets occur about once every 179 years, so "it is something that has happened periodically and none of these things have ever been proven to actually have occurred," said Kenneth Seidelmann, director of the U.S. Naval Observatory's Nautical Almanac Office.

"I don't think it's going to have any impact," Seidelmann said, adding that at the time the planets are supposed to be lined up they'll actually be spread over much of the sky.

The closest alignment will be on March 10, 1982, he said. But on that day, if the sun were at the center of a giant clock, Neptune would be at about 11:30, the Earth at about 3:15, with the others scattered in between.

Gravity, the force that keeps the planets orbiting the sun and the moon orbiting the Earth, decreases very quickly with distance. Thus the moon has a much stronger influence on Earth than distant Jupiter, which is 24,000 times as massive as the moon.

Gravity from even the most favorable planetary alignment, scientists say, would be 20,000 times weaker on the sun than the influence of the moon on Earth. "As far as (the alignment) having any physical effect on the sun, it's very doubtful," Seidelmann said.

Moreover, he said, there is no evidence that increased solar activity does much more than interfere with radio signals and create the visual phenomenon known as the Northern Lights.

And the Earth's rotation rate already varies by as much as a few thousandths of a second, but such changes don't fit any seismic patterns.

"Probably the most severe change we know of was in 1896 and we can't match that or correlate that with anything," including planetary alignments, solar activity or earthquake activity, Seidelmann said.

Gribbin, in his Omni article called "Jupiter's Noneffect," said he and Plagemann had based their theory on two lines of evidence.

He cited a 1971 study that "suggested a but significant increase in seismic activity at the time of maximum solar activity," which occurs roughly every 11 years. Other scientists, however, deny such a link exists.

Gribbin said other evidence indicated that when the sun is most active, changes may occur in the Earth's atmosphere and perhaps even in the planet's rotation rate. The solar wind seemed "a neat physical explanation for the (alleged) link between solar activity and terrestrial seismicity," he said.

Custody Fight Called 'Prelim'

LIBERTY (AP) — A prosecutor who will help try Vickie Daniel for the death of her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., says a custody trial involving Daniel's children is a "preliminary to the main event."

"I'll admit, in my nine years of prosecuting, this is the first time I've seen a case develop in this manner," said Assistant District Attorney Jerry Andress, who has dropped in often during the two-week custody fight to watch Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, Mrs. Daniel's attorney.

Andress feels the custody trial, which is scheduled to start its third week today, is a dress rehearsal for the upcoming murder trial. Mrs. Daniel is charged with the Jan. 19 shooting death of her husband in the Liberty home.

Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, is seeking custody of Marion Price IV, 1, and Franklin Baldwin, 3, the two children Mrs. Daniel bore during the stormy four-year marriage.

Haynes sought at first to have any questions about the shooting barred from the custody trial, but then Mrs. Daniel waived her Fifth Amendment rights and testified to the events surrounding the shooting.

Andress doesn't know if the protestations by Haynes were merely a way of getting J.C. "Zeke" Zbraneck, Mrs. Murph's attorney, to press for revelations about the shooting and thus open the way for Haynes to delve into the prosecution's evidence before the murder trial begins.

But he's not worried about the information being released prematurely. "The defense has an opportunity to see the state's evidence anyway, so they won't get an advantage," Andress said.

Haynes began delving into the investigation of the shooting last week, his questioning aimed primarily at the failure of Liberty County Sheriff's investigators to have evidence photographed and recorded.

Haynes asked Chief Deputy Clay Autrey, the son of 76-year-old court bailiff Will Autrey, why investigators had failed to photograph about 50 whiskey bottles found in the Daniel home and another in Daniel's pickup.

He also wondered why a green substance found in a box in the attic was not immediately analyzed. Investigators have since ordered the substance analyzed and are awaiting results.

Mrs. Daniel has contended that her husband drank excessively and smoked marijuana.

Autrey also testified that he was paid by Mrs. Murph to provide guards for the Daniel home while he was supervising the investigation of the shooting.

Under questioning by Haynes, Autrey said he was given $7 an hour to arrange for off-duty deputies to guard the home and paid them $6 an hour, keeping $1 for himself.

He said Mrs. Murph paid $1,860 in the two weeks following Daniel's death, and that Liberty County Sheriff C.L. "Buck" Eckels was not aware of the arrangement.

Unarmed Missile Completes Test

POINT MUGU NAVAL STATION, Calif. (AP) — Officials have recovered an unarmed Tomahawk missile that burst from the sea and flew to a Nevada test site in the first submarine-to-land attack test.

The cruise missile was fired underwater Saturday from the submarine USS Guitarro in the Pacific Missile Test Center range off Point Mugu, 60 miles southwest of Los Angeles, said Navy Lt. Susan Glutting.

It flew 300 miles to the Tonopah Test Range at Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada and made a simulated attack before landing by parachute.

In previous tests, the missile had been fired from aircraft to land targets and from a submarine to targets at sea.

The test was under the direction of the Joint Cruise Missile Project based in Washington. Cruise missiles are computer-guided to hug the terrain and avoid radar detection.

PROJECT SEARCH — A resident of the crime-ridden Cabrini-Green housing project peers out as Chicago police conduct a search of the Cabrini-Green housing project Sunday. # Chicago Housing Project Search Turns Up Weapon

CHICAGO (AP) — Some 150 policemen swept through vacant apartments, halls and stairways at the Cabrini-Green housing project Sunday, seeking weapons or squatters. The operation only yielded part of a gun used in the latest killing at the project, officials said.

Police on Sunday charged a second suspect with murder in the killing Friday. Eleven people have been slain at the crime-ridden project in three months, and 35 people have been injured — a spate of violence that Mayor Jane M. Byrne said prompted her decision to move there.

Chief of Detectives William Hanhardt said officers began searching Cabrini Green at about 6 a.m., checking 280 unoccupied apartments, halls, stairways and other public areas.

He said the search was done at the request of the Chicago Housing Authority, which runs Cabrini-Green. Police were accompanied by members of the CHA security force.

Hanhardt said the search was "part of a general cleanup at Cabrini-Green," adding police encountered no trouble at the project.

Police were looking for unauthorized people and contraband, Hanhardt said. The project officially has 14,000 residents, but some officials believe many more also live there.

Noting no unauthorized people were found in vacant apartments, the chief of detectives said, "It's a good sign. Most of the vacant properties are in excellent shape."

In an incinerator, police found the barrel of a 20-gauge shotgun in Friday's fatal shooting of Sylvester Carey, Hanhardt said.

Although police say most of the violence at Cabrini-Green is the result of gang wars over the narcotics trade, authorities say Carey's killing was not gang-related. Neither he nor the men charged with his murder are residents of Cabrini-Green.

James Lawson, 28, was charged Saturday with Carey's murder, authorities said, and Gregory Sharp, 25, believed by police to be the triggerman in a killing sparked by drugs, was charged Sunday.

Sharp was picked up Sunday at his girlfriend's home on the South Side, police said, adding that his former wife lives at Cabrini-Green. Lawson and Sharp were held pending court appearances.

Mrs. Byrne said Saturday that she was not scared by Carey's slaying. Of Cabrini-Green, she said, "It's a sick place."

The mayor also said evictions must continue at the project to rid it of troublemakers. Some residents were evicted last week, but CHA officials said the action was not related to the mayor's anti-crime effort or plans to move to the project.

Mrs. Byrne and her husband and political adviser, Jay McMullen, plan to move to Cabrini-Green within the next few weeks. Mrs. Byrne routinely has bodyguards at all times, and they will take up residence in an adjacent apartment.

Fifteen Injured In Prison Free For-All

JESSUP, Md. (AP) — Fifteen inmates were injured, two seriously, in a "free-for-all" at the Brockbridge Correctional Institution during the second of two half-hour blackouts triggered by a tree falling on a power line, authorities said Sunday.

Capt. Philip Thomas of the Brock-bridge facility blamed the fights that erupted during two power failures Saturday night on youthful "mischievousness."

He also speculated that the fracas may have been fueled by news of the indictment of some two dozen Brockbridge inmates last week in connection with crimes allegedly committed during furlo-

but Thomas doubted whether any charges would be filed as a result of the outbursts. "Everybody's been questioned and everybody seems satisfied," he said. "Everything's back to normal."

The power failures at about 8:20 p.m. and 10 p.m. Saturday affected five prison facilities here that hold some 3,000 inmates, according to Maryland State Police.

Police reported no trouble at the other facilities — the Maryland House of Correction, the Brockbridge Annex, the Maryland Correctional Institution for Women and the Jessup Pre-Release Unit.

John Metzger, a spokesman for the Baltimore Gas & Electric Co., said a tree that fell on a power line at about 7:30 p.m. caused the outages.

Six inmates were taken to the University of Maryland Hospital in Baltimore for treatment and nine were treated at an infirmary in the Maryland House of Correction, Sgt. John Cassidy said.

One of the two most seriously hurt inmates suffered a head injury. The other suffered a shattered ankle when he allegedly "was thrown down the stairs by fellow inmates," officials said.

Police Sgt. Hugh McCormick said there were no injuries from fights during the first outage. "The injuries occurred between 10 p.m. and 10:30 p.m.," he said.

On Friday, Gov. Harry Hughes had ordered a state police investigation to determine whether Maryland's correctional officials have been negligent in supervising inmates on work-release and college study programs.

A Baltimore grand jury on Thursday indicted 26 Brockbridge inmates who were participating in the work-release and college study programs. Police allege the inmates, taken daily from Brockbridge to Baltimore for work details near the Maryland Penitentiary or classes at area colleges, operated a narcotics ring, committed a robbery, a rape and a murder while on furlough.

Thomas suggested that press coverage of the indictments likely contributed to Saturday night's fights.

"The inmates see they're getting their names in the papers, they're getting attention," he said. "They're just being mischievous and doing what they think is expected of them."

The state's correctional system and its officials have been under fire in recent years. Guards have staged "sick-outs" and repeated work slowdowns this past year to protest what they call understaffing. The state also is under a federal court order to reduce overcrowded prisons.

Major Crisis Possible, Economic Expert Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alan Greenspan, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said Sunday that U.S. savings and loan associations and savings banks will face a "major crisis" unless interest rates are brought down.

And if President Reagan's economic program is not adopted, Greenspan said, then both high interest rates and high inflation will persist, creating "great financial havoc" in the United States.

"So long as the expectation of inflation is embodied in the interest rate structure, it will be very difficult to move the economy from a state of stagnation, it will be very difficult to lower inflation," he said.

Greenspan, an economic adviser to Reagan, was one of several speakers at the opening session of the annual plenary meeting of the Trilateral Commission, a non-governmental group aimed at promoting mutual understanding among Western Europe, North America and Japan.

After addressing a closed session, Greenspan outlined his views on the current state of the American economy at a news conference.

Greenspan said the cause of the current high rate of inflation is the widespread perception that "federal fiscal policies are out of control."

The financial community and the public in general believe that unless and until "borrowing of all sorts by the federal government is reduced, inflation will continue rampant."

The alternative to Reagan's proposals for tax cuts combined with steep reductions in non-defense government spending is a "very negative long-term economic outlook," he said.

"We are, in effect, at a watershed," Greenspan, who served as chairman of former President Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, also expressed support for the concept of a multi-year tax cut, which he described as a key to economic recovery because it serves as a constraint on government spending.

If the tax burdens on Americans continue to rise, "I would suspect that we would find that the extraordinary consensus to curb federal outlays would be significantly lessened," he said.

Divers Discover Wrecked Galleon

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — A bronze cannon salvaged from sandy shoals 40 miles west of Key West appears to be from a Spanish galleon that sank in a 1622 hurricane, archaeologist R. Duncan Mathewson says.

Along with the coral-encrusted cannon, divers pulled up clumps of what appeared to be coins and an anchor Saturday.

Mathewson, who examined the cannon, said it was the second from the Santa Margarita to be found by modern-day divers. Many cannons were salvaged shortly after the sinking, he said.

An estimate of the treasure's value was not yet available.

Diver Dick Klauert of Aspen, Colo., said he was with the search vessel Tern when the discoveries were made.

Other divers found gold chains, silver bars, clumps of silver coins and artifacts from the Margarita last spring.

Bani-Sadr Vows To Battle Opponents

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Abolhasan Bani-Sadr, Iran's embattled president, says he has no intention of "surrendering" to his militant, clergy-backed political opposition. He also said Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is "not god" and has "limited means" to deal with Iran's political discord.

In a telephone interview from Tehran Saturday with The Associated Press here, Bani-Sadr also said an Islamic peace-seeking mission's proposal for a cease-fire in the war between Iran and Iraq could be acceptable, depending upon "clarification" he will seek when the mediators arrive in Tehran Monday.

Bani-Sadr is commander in chief of the Iranian military as well as president and has come under criticism by the clergy-dominated hardliners for his conduct of the war. Hardline extremists have said they would not consider an end to the war until the Baathist regime of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is replaced with a "just Islamic government."

Bani-Sadr said Islamic mediators must determine who started the 27-week-old Persian Gulf war and suggested Iraq should pay reparations for war losses by Iran. Khomeini two weeks ago ordered an end to the public squabbling between Bani-Sadr, a Western-educated moderate, and Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, backed by the Islamic fundamentalists.

Khomeini has generally supported Bani-Sadr and has often warned that the clergy's extremism could backfire into resentment by the masses. At the same time, he has been seen as trying to strike a balance between the two sides.

Most recently, Khomeini agreed with Iran's Prosecutor-General Musavi Ardabili, a fellow ayatollah, that he and Bani-Sadr are not "above the law."

The statement was seen as a signal that he would not interfere with Ardabili's investigation into whether Bani-Sadr incited his followers to violence during a March 5 speech at Tehran University.

When asked if Khomeini has been successful in muzzling the political bickering, Bani-Sadr told The Associated Press, "A human being is not god. Man has limited means considering the problems, barriers and so on. He can act to a limit."

The statement appeared to confirm the opinion of some observers who believe Khomeini, whose Islamic followers believe in the monarchy of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi two years ago, is powerless to control the clergy-backed militants.

Asked specifically if he thought Khomeini had the power to control internal conflicts, Bani-Sadr said, "Ask him." He later amended that, saying, "Anyway, I believe he has this control."

Bani-Sadr responded philosophically when questioned about the dispute.

"Conflicts are everywhere in the world," he said. "Where isn't there conflict? It's everywhere but now much we surrender to them, that is the question. If we do not show weakness but persistence and do not surrender, these (problems) will be solved."

Despite attacks from political opponents, he said, "We have not surrendered we will go on with our words and the principles we have."

Asked about the Islamic effort to mediate the war with Iraq, Bani-Sadr said, he needed clarification on the latest cease-fire proposal.

"What is vague to us are three points," he said. "If these three points become clear to us, we will accept" the cease-fire plan.

After two visits from the delegation in late February and early March, Bani-Sadr said, "It was not clear what a solution would be based on after the withdrawal (of Iraqi forces). Secondly, what will happen with the question of aggression and the need to investigate it and third that there should be no time gap between the cease-fire and withdrawal which should take place simultaneously."

Islamic mediators proposed a cease-fire to be followed one week later by the first stage of an Iraqi pullout, which would take place over a period of one month.

Iranian hardliners have demanded nothing less than Hussein's ouster before they would agree to end the war. But Bani-Sadr indicated he would settle for an investigation by the Islamic nations.

"They may investigate and then come and say that (Hussein) has not been the aggressor," he said. "When it is investigated, when the basis is accepted, then the method of enforcing it can be negotiated."

Bani-Sadr gave these responses to other questions during the 45-minute interview, conducted in the Farsi language.

Q. Reports have said Saudi Arabia offered to compensate Iran for war losses to bring about a cease-fire. Is that true?

A. This offer has not been made to us but the question of damages is not only material damage. How can Saudi Arabia compensate for so many deaths? The question is that we want to live independently and the people of the Islamic nations must be certain that every day a dictator does not send his tanks and artillery to take lives from others. This is what we want.

Q. Reports have said Egypt has sent arms to Iraq via Jordan and Saudi Arabia. Are these reports true?

A. This was said at the beginning of the war... (captured armored vehicles and grenades) had a "made in Egypt" label on them. Now whether this means that they had bought them from Egypt before or are now buying them, we do not have clear information on this.

Q. Oil experts are predicting Iran will have to increase its oil production markedly in order to rebuild the country. What form will this take?

A. They are not experts. If they were experts, they would not have said such a thing. The economy is like a human body. You can eat up to a limited extent... We can only produce a specified amount of oil because the money can be absorbed to the extent that our economy would allow...

Arafat Bids To Halt Fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat arrived in Tehran on Sunday to pave the way for a new attempt by an Islamic goodwill mission to halt the six-month-old Iran-Iraq war.

Military communiques from both Iran and Iraq indicated sporadic clashes along the 300-mile-long war front at a relatively low level of fighting.

Both warring gulf nations said they welcomed the second mediation effort by the nine-man commission set up by the 42-nation Islamic conference organization at a summit last January.

But Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Saturday: "We are not prepared for anything before (the Iraqis) leave the soil of our country." And the official Iraqi news agency quoted President Saddam Hussein on Sunday that Iraqi forces will not withdraw from "a single inch" of occupied territory until Iran had "fully recognized the national rights of Iraq."

Iraq wants full control of the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, its only shipping outlet to the Persian Gulf. The two countries shared the 120-mile-long waterway under a 1975 treaty, but Iraq abrogated the pact five days before attacking Iran on Sept. 22.

The Islamic delegation, after trips to Baghdad and Tehran in late February and early March, put forward a plan calling for a cease-fire to be followed one week later by a staged Iraqi pullback over a one-month period.

Bani-Sadr, however, said "there should be no time gap between the cease-fire and the withdrawal. It should take place simultaneously."

All commission members but Arafat met in Jidda, Saudi Arabia on Sunday. They were scheduled to join Arafat in Tehran on Monday and fly to Baghdad on Tuesday.

Arafat's early arrival in Tehran prompted speculation that he was an "advance man" to sound out the Iranians about possible new compromises.

The commission also includes the presidents of Guinea, Pakistan and Bangladesh, the prime minister of Turkey, the foreign ministers of Malaysia and Senegal and Islamic Conference Organization Secretary-general Habib Chatti of Tunisia.

Both Iraq and Iran are Moslem nations, Iraq is Arab and most of Iran's population is Persian. Their border disputes date back to the early days of Islam 14 centuries ago.

On the battlefield, the Iranian command said more than 28 Iraqi soldiers were killed and several wounded in mortar fire and artillery exchanges on the northern, central and southern war theatres Sunday. It said two Iranian civilians were killed and 12 wounded in shelling attacks on the Iranian oil refining center of Abadan in the oil-rich southwestern Khuzistan province.

Iraqi war communiques claimed a total of 121 Iraqis were killed in 24 hours of fighting on all fronts, and conceded four Iraqi deaths. The Iraqi command also claimed its jet fighters attacked Iranian military targets in the Dezful area in Khuzistan, causing heavy damages.

No independent confirmation of the claims was possible, because both Iran and Iraq have banned foreign journalists from daily battlefield reporting since the outbreak of the war.

Retired General Takes Office As President In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Retired Gen. Roberto Viola, swearing to pursue the "Process of National Reorganization" undertaken by the military when it seized power five years ago, was inaugurated president of Argentina on Sunday.

Retired Gen. Jorge R. Videla, who became president after leading the coup against President Isabel Peron on March 24, 1976, relinquished the symbols of office — a baton and blue-and-white sash — to his friend and political ally. Both men wore their army uniforms.

Viola, who will preside over a civilian-dominated cabinet for a three year term, took the oath of office from Gen. Leopoldo F. Galtieri, the army commander and member of the three-man junta that will share executive power.

His hand on a Bible, Viola pledged to "observe faithfully the basic objectives of the Process," which aims to stabilize the economy and return Argentina to civilian rule at an unspecified date.

The 56-year-old Viola was expected to depart from Videla's economic strategy, which put this country of 28 million people through a year-long recession to bring the inflation rate down to 84 percent. The annual inflation rate was 566 percent at the time of the coup.

Press reports said Viola is preparing measures to stimulate economic growth by relaxing exchange controls that have led to an overvalued Argentine peso. Most observers expect the peso to be devalued.

have made massive foreign currency purchases in the past three months, reducing Central Bank reserves from $7.3 billion to $5 billion, according to government figures.

The bank pushed up interest rates in an effort to halt speculation. They reached a peak last week of 165 percent for seven-day loans, worsening the debt burden of companies already laying off workers in nearly all industrial sectors.

Seven of the 13 Cabinet ministers Viola swore in are civilians from small conservative parties. Videla's cabinet had eight ministers, three of whom were civilians.

The large Peronist movement founded by the late President Juan Peron and the center-left Radical Party were excluded from Viola's government. They issued statements earlier this month calling for national elections in 1984.

There has been no indication from the military that civilian rule could come that soon.

The Peronists also are urging the release of Isabel Peron, who has been under detention since the coup and was convicted nine days ago of embezzlement during her presidency.

A career officer, Viola was named by the junta to succeed Videla last October. He helped direct the 1976 coup and, as army commander in 1978 and 1979, presided over the campaign against leftist guerrillas and guerrilla sympathizers. More than 6,000 people disappeared during those years, presumably abducted by right-wing paramilitary squads or security forces.

Viola has resisted demands by relatives of "the vanished ones" for an accounting. But during a visit to Washington two weeks ago, he reportedly told President Reagan he would make an effort to find out who among the missing were dead and who were in jail.

U.S.-Argentine relations suffered as a result of former President Jimmy Carter's emphasis on human rights. The Reagan administration has indicated it is in favor repealing legislation barring arms sales to Argentina.

The United States and other foreign governments were represented at the inauguration by their ambassadors. The junta did not invite high-ranking foreign dignitaries.

Viola took the oath in an ornate reception room of the Congress building, which has not housed a legislature since the 1976 coup. The chamber was filled with about 100 generals, admirals, air force brigadiers and other dignitaries.

Several hundred people gathered outside and watched the new president leave Congress under a gray sky and ride in a limousine to Government House.

U.S. Diplomats Live In Fear

FAREWELL KISS — Britain's Prince Charles clutches his fiancée, Lady Diana Spencer by the arm, as he kisses her goodbye at London's Heathrow Airport Sunday. The Prince was leaving Britain for a five-week tour of New Zealand, Australia and Venezuela. (AP Laserphoto)

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The latest attack on the U.S. Embassy here, a rocket-grenade and bullet salvo, has reminded the 65 uneasy Americans who work in the fortress-like compound of their vulnerability in this war-torn nation.

"They were really trying to kill us," embassy spokeswoman Carol Doerflein said of the dozen men who poured rifle fire at the building and blasted a hole in the third floor with an anti-tank rocket on Wednesday. There were no injuries.

"It was one of the few places they could hit the building and not hurt anyone. Miss Doerflein, of Toms River, N.J., said in an interview in her basement office.

"The mood is tense... We are afraid. There's no way we cannot be afraid," she added.

The four-story embassy has been sprayed by gunfire four times in the last three weeks but Wednesday's assault, staged with clockwork precision, was potentially more deadly than any previous attempt.

The attacks on the embassy are believed to have been carried out by extremists on both the left and the right.

El Salvador's leftists are trying to replace the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta with a Marxist government, while rightists oppose the junta, claiming it has shifted too far to the left.

Four men in a pick-up truck sprayed the embassy with gunfire earlier this month in an operation that one embassy official said had the trademarks of a right-wing attack. He declined to elaborate or to be identified.

Leftists are believed responsible for Wednesday's raid. One indication, embassy staffers said, was that the rocket was a Chinese-design RPG-2.

New security measures are in the works because of the attack.

Salvadoran police now question anyone loitering near the embassy, while upstairs offices are being reshuffled.

The location of the working quarters of Charge d'Affaires Frederic Chapin, the acting chief of mission, will be known only to a few trusted outsiders.

Visitors to the padlocked front gate on Avenue 25 North are confronted by a pistol-packing Salvadoran security guard, who admits them only after questioning.

At the front door of the building, a visitor is confronted by a concrete wall and two more Salvadoran guards. One guard, armed with a 12-gauge pump shotgun, watches while the other frisks visitors for weapons.

Visitors enter the lobby through an airport-style metal detector to find a fatigued U.S. Marine behind a bullet-proof glass panel along with a Salvadoran receptionist.

The Marine, who on one occasion was seen with an M-16 rifle slung from his shoulder, controls further progress into the embassy by electronically operated doors.

Many embassy staffers are driven to and from work in armored vehicles and have Salvadoran armed guards posted on watch outside their homes.

But the embassy personnel have not completely isolated themselves, although they are careful to be off the streets during the 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew.

They continue to live in private residences, although earlier this year some moved to more secure neighborhoods. Their dependents were sent home last year as a security precaution.

The latest attack caused embassy staffers to think twice before moving around this strife-torn country when off duty.

"Two weeks ago I went out motorcycling. This weekend I am not going out," Miss Doerflein said.

Congressional Delays Spawn Late U.S. Government Checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government checks to millions of Americans were delayed last fall — and probably will be late again — because of congressional delays in approving money bills, according to a federal audit.

The General Accounting Office, in the most complete report on the consequences of the funding gap, said the problem may occur many times unless Congress changes the way it works. The GAO is the investigative arm of Congress.

The GAO said periods between when appropriations run out and new bills are passed to fund federal agencies "have become the norm rather than the exception." In the last 20 years, 85 percent of appropriations bills for agencies have been passed after the beginning of a new fiscal year, the report said.

In the past this mattered little because agencies assumed Congress wanted them to continue near-normal operations. However, this changed with a legal opinion by then-Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti last year that agencies had to close down if Congress failed to pass their appropriations or some stop-gap funding bill.

Under the situation since that opinion, funding gaps are costly, GAO said. In the 11-day gap last October, checks were delayed for 100,000 people going to school on the GI Bill, 22,000 victims of black lung disease, 1.6 million people in a nutrition program for mothers and infants and numerous others, GAO said.

"Had the funding gap continued for another week or two, federal payments would have been cut off to such large groups of beneficiaries as recipients of food stamps, veterans' compensation and military retirement pay," it said.

The government auditors did not put a total price tag on the gap last fall because it only asked costs of 18 major departments and agencies of the federal government.

Listing other consequences of the gap, GAO said, "Federal employees became unsure of whether they would be allowed to report for work," the workers could do no productive work because they were ordered only to prepare to close their agencies and about $1 million was spent to issue paychecks covering only part of a pay period. In addition, about $1.1 million was spent to prepare plans on how to comply with the Civiletti opinion, GAO said.

The report said this could be repeated frequently in the future because Congress in recent years has gotten into extensive wrangling over amendments to appropriations bills. These amendments often cover politically volatile issues, such as abortion and congressional pay raises and the debate delays passage of the bills.

GAO said this would be avoided if Congress passes a law allowing agencies to incur financial obligations during the appropriations gaps.

Rescuer Refused Permission To Visit Three-Year-Old Tot

LOGANSPORT, La. (AP) — A man who snatched a knife blade from a kidnapper holding it to the throat of a bleeding 3-year-old boy was barred from the child's hospital room because he didn't have a signed note from the tot's family, friends said.

Volunteer ambulance attendant Richard Brazzil and DeSoto Parish Sheriff's Deputy Allen Bouds, who also helped rescue Keith Kostelnick, said they went together to visit the child Saturday at Willis-Knighton Hospital's intensive care unit.

Bouds said they were kept out because the boy's parents were not there and they didn't have a note from the family.

Brazzil, a quiet man, wasn't saying much about his role in the rescue. But Bouds said everyone else involved considered him a hero.

"If it weren't for him, the baby would have been hurt a lot worse," Bouds said.

The boy was listed in satisfactory condition in the intensive care unit after surgery for cuts in his throat and abdomen — one deep enough to nick his liver.

The man accused of kidnapping him was at LSU Hospital in Shreveport for psychiatric examinations, said DeSoto Parish sheriff's deputies.

Before being taken there, they said, Charles L. Abraham, 32, of Logansport was booked with attempted murder, auto theft, driving while intoxicated, resisting an officer and assaulting an officer.

Caddo Parish deputies said they were preparing warrants accusing Abraham of aggravated kidnapping and auto theft. The warrants would be served Monday, they said.

Brazzil, 25, was visiting Bouds, also 25, when the report of a possible kidnapping came over the police radio Friday evening.

The two men got moving, and soon were at the scene where the kidnapper had run a stolen car into a ditch.

It was the second car the man had taken. The first belonged to Kostelnick's mother, who had left the boy in it while she went shopping.

When it flipped out of control and crashed, the kidnapper threatened to kill the child and commandeered a car from a passer-by who had seen the wreck and stopped to help, police said.

When Bouds and Brazzil caught up, the kidnapper was holding a large stainless-steel folding knife against the tot's throat.

He demanded and got a Logansport police car but Bouds sneaked to the back and slashed a rear tire with a pocketknife.

As the man backed across Louisiana 84, Bouds shot into the radiator and Lo-

Then Brazzil reached in from the car's passenger side and grabbed the knife blade, which the kidnapper was still holding against the little boy's throat.

He gripped the blade so hard he bent the stainless steel folding blade and cut his middle and ring fingers, Bouds said.

"He just went for it," Bouds said.

Brazzil also put his other hand between the knife and the boy's body.

Bouds said he then reached in from the driver's side and grabbed the hand holding the knife.

"I yelled, 'I got the blade, get the baby!'" he recounted.

Brazzil pulled the tot out of the car, and the driver surrendered, police said.

Jerry Taylor and Ralph Rodriguez each won a red ribbon in poetry.

Occupational Ills Hit Postal Workers

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The 40,000 postal workers who use mechanized letter-sorting machines are susceptible to hand and wrist disorders, in part, because they can't stop and rest, a study says.

Dr. Robert Arndt of the University of Wisconsin Medical School said his four-year study of 100 workers at the main post office in Madison indicated that users of multi-position letter-sorting machines can develop tendonitis, arthritis and injury to a nerve in the wrist.

Madison postal officials called the study biased since it was funded in part by the American Postal Workers Union. Arndt said early funding for the 1976-1980 study came from the union, but later it was funded by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health.

Three years into the study, 26 members of one original group of 54 workers had developed hand or wrist problems, Arndt said.

BUILDINGS DOOMED

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The U.S. Naval Academy has decided to raze three buildings on its Annapolis campus known as the Isherwood complex because preservation costs would be too high. Isherwood Hall, a 76-year-old Beaux Arts structure designed by Ernest Flagg, and the two other buildings will be replaced by a 5,500-seat multipurpose auditorium and basketball court, an academy spokesman said Friday.

Step 3 — Day of birth. Enter your day of birth three times in the figure chart, once each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's biorhythm readings.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Potassium Tests May Mislead

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What does it mean if your potassium is abnormally high? I had a blood test at a senior citizen center and got a report it was high. Do I need a special diet? — D.M.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please write about high potassium, which I have. What can one do about it? Is it caused by food? — A.C.

Blood tests don't necessarily lie, but they can be quite misleading and disturbing.

There are only a few illnesses that cause high blood potassium. Kidney failure can do it, as can a disease of the adrenal glands. The adrenals make a special hormone to help rid the body of potassium, so a gland disturbance might cause chronic high potassium level.

On the other hand, muscle cells can be damaged in a severe injury and spill potassium into the blood, causing a temporary rise.

Now, about blood tests themselves. Red blood cells can be damaged when a specimen is drawn from the vein for a test. Potassium is released, giving a false reading. I know this all too well. I have done this to a number of my patients. It's harmless.

About food. We are pretty good at keeping our potassium levels in the right range if there is no kidney or adrenal gland disturbance. Even though potassium is in most foods, you would have to eat prodigious quantities of high-potassium foods to make the potassium blood level rise. Perhaps if one gorged exclusively on bananas day in and day out, the level might rise.

Since neither of you has indicated any of the illnesses I mentioned, I suspect your readings were high because something happened to the blood when it was taken. An athlete who has been through a bruising football game, for example, might have a high potassium blood reading immediately afterward.

Because both of you seem disturbed by your reports, I suggest you ease your mind by having another test. Chronic high potassium does require treatment because it interferes with normal heart action. If the blood level gets quite high, profound and even fatal changes in the heart beat can occur. These are exceptional cases, however.

I hope I haven't overanswered your questions. Because there is so much blood testing being done these days, many of my readers express concerns about routine test findings of blood chemicals. I've never seen a blood specimen in which all the many components have been right on the money. Usually, the kinds of harmless factors mentioned above are at work.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please discuss acne rosacea. I am 66 years old and was never bothered with it before. I went to a dermatologist and he prescribed tetracycline and hydrocortisone ointment and said to use a sunscreen lotion. That was six months ago. Now it is back on my face again. According to his advice, alcoholic beverages, hot coffee or tea, also sunlight, can make it worse. I avoid those. I would appreciate it if you could

Booklet Gives Information About Standardized Tests

WASHINGTON (Special) — A note comes home from school: "Next week, all of the children in the class will be taking standardized tests. As soon as the test scores are available, you will be informed how your child ranks."

That seems reasonable. But what is the point of standardized tests? And what do the scores really mean?

The National Institute of Education notes that, as a parent, you have the right to answers to those questions and to a number of others about standardized tests. To learn what the questions are and some of the answers, send for a copy of the new booklet, "Your Child and Testing." It's free when you send your name and address on a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 520J, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Here are some questions you can ask the principal or teacher:

What kind of standardized test will my child take? Will it be an aptitude test used to measure my child's ability to learn? Or an achievement test that shows how much each student has learned in a particular subject?

Have the test makers reduced cultural bias in the tests the children will be taking?

Do the teachers have any special training in testing, and are the students given any practice in taking tests?

Are there any workshops or special programs planned to help parents understand the tests and what the results mean?

These are general questions you should ask about any test. But there are also specific questions you need to ask about how the test results will be used for your child.

In achievement tests, the results are frequently given as grade equivalents. For instance, a child in the fourth month of the fourth grade who is an average student would have a score of 4.4. If your child scores well above or well below average, will this information be used to help set up special programs either to keep the child's interest or to bring the child up to the level of the rest of the class? If so, what other information will be used to decide if the child needs special placement?

Will these tests alone be used to set your child's grades? They shouldn't. Instead, grades should depend on a variety of factors observed in the classroom, and standardized tests should be used more to get an overall view of how the class is doing.

How do your child's scores compare with the rest of the students in the class? With students in other schools in the system? With students across the country? That tells you a lot about the quality of education your child is getting.

Finally, ask what you can do at home to help. Remember, tests help teachers plan, too.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is it true that very long thick hair can be weakening? — P.S. No.

Acne is a terrible problem for anyone growing up. If you are afflicted with it, or have children who are, write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "Controlling Acne, Blackheads and Pimples." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

HINTS FROM HELOISE:

Carpet Care Secrets Shared

DEAR HELOISE:

To thoroughly clean and prolong the life of a carpet, the secret is to clean often and vacuum slowly back and forth, overlapping the strokes.

This gives the vacuum cleaner a chance to remove embedded particles which can cut carpet tufts at the base.

Dirt acts as an abrasive. — Jean Westring

DEAR HELOISE:

In order to be sure I rehang my swag lamp, yard swing, or hanging plant at the proper height after taking them down for cleaning, I put a colored twist-tie around the link that the hook goes into. — Mary DeBrunner

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

Just a little hint to make life a lot happier.

When caring for an elderly, senile patient or parent, where you have to answer unintelligible or aggravating statements several times a day, don't try to set them straight or correct them.

Answer with what they want to hear. I've found that by saying, "You're so right" or "How wonderful for you to think of that," or "That's just what I had in mind," etc., the situation is soon eased over, leaving them satisfied with the answer, and no useless arguments or hurt feelings result.

It's not always easy, but you won't have any regrets or jangled nerves at the end of the day. — L.W.

MIXING AID

DEAR HELOISE:

Those little round trays that spin around on ballbearings — the kind we use in refrigerators and cabinet shelves to get more organized — are great when using a hand mixer.

Set the mixing bowl on the revolving tray and the weight of the contents automatically keeps the bowl in place and the tray easily spins when touched with the free hand, making mixing easier.

I keep such a tray on my kitchen counter at all times. It matches the decor and can be used for other little chores of food preparation without being in the way. — Mariam Towsley

MAKING DO

DEAR HELOISE:

When the hole in the wall becomes too large for the nail or screw, don't drill.

Simply stuff with toothpicks, breaking them off flush with the wall, and you've solved the problem. — Mrs. Daniel Yandric

If you've found a great way to get the hang of things, share it with Heloise by writing her care of 235 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. She can't answer your letter personally but, sure as pictures should hang straight, she'll share the best tips received with her readers.

STATIC CHARGE

If your hair crackles, flies away or clings to your face every time you comb it or take off a hat, you've got problems with static electricity. A humidifier at home will cut down the static that comes with drying heat. Condition your hair regularly and try a drop of hair cream or perfume on your brush and comb to tame flyaways. Don't wear hats or scarves too tight. Avoid mohair and nylon, which can build up quite a charge.

Students Receive Honors

Two Texas Tech University fashion design students received honors in a Career Day design competition sponsored earlier this month by the Fashion Group of Dallas and the Natural Fibers and Food Protein Commission of Texas.

Senior fashion design major Elizabeth Gardea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Gardea of 125 Coronado Road, El Paso, was a winner in creative design. Her design is an orange, plum and yellow polished cotton pedal pusher and cropped jacket with free-standing geometric panels.

Senior fashion merchandising and fashion design major Renay Jordan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cal Jordan of 1400 Oakhurst, Clovis, N.M., was a runner-up in the commercial division. She designed a floral print daytime dress with petal sleeves and an overskirt trimmed in contrasting solid-colored fabric.

Designs in the March 14 Dallas competition were judged on concept, originality, innovation and fabric manipulation.

For prizes Gardea received a cut of fabric from Italian fabric manufacturer Agona Textile Mill and Jordan a cut of fabric from Richard Brooks Fabrics of Dallas.

Student designs from the fashion program at Texas Tech competed with those from North Texas State University, Texas Woman's University, and the University of Texas at Austin. One winner and one runner-up were selected from each university.

COSMIC CREATION — This pedal pusher and cropped jacket outfit worn by a Dallas professional model was designed by Texas Tech University senior Elizabeth Gardea of El Paso. The suit, made of polished cotton in orange, plum and yellow colors, won a creative design award in a Dallas competition. The contest was sponsored by the Fashion Group of Dallas and Natural Fibers and Food Protein Commission of Texas.

1 can (1 lb 4 oz) sliced pineapple in syrup
1 cup water
1 pkg lemon flavored gelatin
1/2 cup diced celery
1/4 cup diced green onions
1/4 cup diced cucumber
2 tbsps prepared horseradish
1/2 pt whipping cream
Drain pineapple, reserving syrup. Stand pineapple slices along sides of a 6-cup ring mold. Boil 1 cup water; add to gelatin. Stir until dissolved. Add 1/4 cup reserved syrup. Let set in refrigerator until mixture is the consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Toss together celery, onions, cucumber and horseradish. Fold into gelatin. Whip cream and fold into gelatin mixture. Pour mixture over pineapple slices into ring mold. Chill until firm. To unmold carefully run a knife around edges. Place in a large pan of warm water for 10 seconds and invert on serving platter. Makes 10 servings.

League Members Help Entertain Children

Eight members of the Junior League of Lubbock take turns each week helping entertain children in the Overton Pediatric Unit at Methodist Hospital.

"We take arts and crafts to the patients and help them work with them," said Sharon Bennett, a coordinator of the Junior League's program since it began at Methodist Hospital in September, 1980.

"If the patients are too small for crafts, we might just take them a coloring book, or if they are older children, we might play cards with them," she said.

Junior League volunteers are at Methodist Hospital on Monday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

Mrs. Bennett and Gail Kolander, who also has been with the program since its beginning, have six provisional workers for January through May.

Rachael Harmon, Pam Maloy, Susie Moore, Kathy Powell, Lynn Smith and Jill Wolfe will work in the unit six times during the five months.

Mrs. Bennett said no more than four women work at a time and that work at Methodist Hospital primarily is on a one-to-one basis.

"We work with a lot of patients in traction here, and we also work with many patients after their tonsillectomies. We also relieve mothers with small babies so they can get a few minutes rest," she said.

The seasonal crafts the women use with the children were developed last summer by Jane Minkley and others in the Junior League.

"The hospital approached us to do this project, and we thought it was really worthwhile. We plan to continue it next year, and hope more people sign up," she said.

Nurses and parents also said the program is a good one.

"These ladies keep the child so interested, he forgets he's aching," said Sue Steele, grandmother of a seven-year-old boy recovering from a hernia operation.

A similar program with two volunteers has been at Lubbock General Hospital for about three years. Workers there often work with larger groups in a playroom.

Mrs. Bennett said all Junior League volunteer projects are conducted from September through May, asking workers time off for summers and school holidays with their families.

HELPING HAND — Sharon Bennett, left, of the Junior League of Lubbock helps Orlando Arredondo make a construction paper pony with clothespin legs. Mrs. Bennett and seven other women are helping entertain children in the Overton Pediatric Unit at Methodist Hospital as a public service project.

Consumer Features Published

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Add the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to the growing list of government agencies publishing free newsletters for consumers.

FDIC Consumer News, a monthly, is on a trial basis until about June or July, says editor Josie Downey. She is optimistic that it will be continued and expanded from its present four pages to eight.

Articles in the second issue contain tips on establishing credit in your own name and the importance of building a good credit rating, plus an explanation in both English and Spanish of offsets from bank accounts and how they affect co-signers of bank loans.

Ms. Downey said she hopes to make the newsletter completely bilingual in Spanish and English within a few months. Right now, translation is limited to the one article in each issue that deals with the most confusing and difficult to work with subject, she said.

A regular monthly feature will print the most frequently asked questions from bank customers and answers to them.

Recent questions and answers include:

Q. Can a bank charge a service fee for cashing a U.S. treasury check if the customer does not have an account with the bank?

A. Yes. Banks are allowed to make their own policies governing the cashing of checks for non-customers, as well as service charges.

Q. Is there a limit on the service charge a bank can assess for an overdrawn checking account?

A. No. This is a matter of bank policy and is determined by individual banks.

ANN LANDERS

Widower Requests Apology For Letter Criticizing Adieu

Dear Ann Landers: I was offended by the letter about the man who stood by his wife's casket, patted her hair and said, "Goodbye, Honey." It seems the next-door neighbor wrote to tell you she knew the couple well, and over the years she had heard the man call his wife lots of names, but "Honey" wasn't one of them.

I was married for 40 years to a wonderful woman. We had a fine relationship, and I was very good to her. I called her "Honey," "Darling" and dozens of other pet names when she alive. She passed away a few months ago. I, too, stood by the casket and said a few farewell words before they lowered the lid.

Reading that letter in your column was like a slap in the face. I believe you owe me an apology. — Not Guilty

Dear Not: Your letter brought to mind an old Hebrew saying: "If you throw a stone into a pack of dogs, the one that is hit barks." How come I heard from you?

Dear Ann Landers: From time to time you deliver messages to certain groups of people. How about saying something to doctors today — especially gynecologists?

Usually at the close of the appointment, the doctor will ask, "Is there anything you would like to discuss?" Or, "Are you having any problems?"

While this might encourage some people to open up about topics of an intimate nature, others need to be asked more leading questions. I, for one, am very shy. I promise myself I will open up to the doctor "next time," but I never seem to be able to do it.

Please, Ann, urge doctors to ask more direct questions. — Afraid To Be Frank

Dear Frank: If your doctor takes the time to ask if you are having any problems, consider yourself lucky. He (or she) is a gem.

To expect a doctor to go beyond that is unreasonable. In fact, some people might resent it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 19-year-old girl who was once very heavy. I have these terrible stretch marks all over my body — especially on my hips and stomach and on my breasts. I hate the way I look.

I have a wonderful boyfriend, and one of these days I know we will be getting intimate. The thought of him seeing these marks makes me sick. I'm sure they will turn him off. Please, tell me if anything can be done to get rid of them. — Not Looking Forward To The Big Moment

Weather Unit Expert Gives Kids Advice

By ANN EVANS
Family News Staff

Remember how frustrated you were when you were young and lost your balloon on a windy day?

The classes at Oakwood Methodist Preschool weren't upset when they let their balloons go — in fact, they were happy and excited.

The children, who had been learning about weather in school, turned loose balloons with their names and addresses attached, along with a larger weather balloon. The purpose of the project, said Mrs. Evelyn Beard, a teacher at Oakwood, was to show the children how far the wind would blow the balloons and also to wish Lubbock a "happy spring".

Capt. John Sanders, commander of the Reese Air Force Base weather unit, talked to the children about weather and how it affects them. "Different kinds of weather affects us in different ways," he explained. "Some days we have rain and some days we have snow. If you see a big, dark cloud in the sky or hear thunder, go and tell your parents so you will be safe."

Sanders then told the children to go home quickly if they saw lightning or a tornado. "The weatherman on television or radio will tell you when a tornado is near. That is when you find your parents or babysitter as fast as you can."

He discussed safe places in houses if a tornado came, and had the children practice sitting with their knees up and heads down to protect themselves during a tornado.

Children taking part in the weather study were in the classes of Mrs. Evelyn Beard, Mrs. Jerry Carper, Mrs. Aileen Filhower, Mrs. Janna Griffin, Mrs. Jan Parrish, Mrs. Betty Purdom and Mrs. Sylvia Sanders.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AK1062 ♥83 ♦AJ7 ♦QJ5
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Probably the one feature of your hand that is of the least interest to partner is the fact that you have five spades, so don't waste your time rebidding two spades. Tell partner that you have a balanced hand with stoppers in the unbid suits. Rebid two no trump. If partner has an unbalanced hand with three or more spades, he can still bid three spades to offer you a choice of contract.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K76 ♥A10752 ♦963 ♦Q4
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♦

What do you bid now?
A.—Your five-card trump support looks attractive, but in reality it does little to enhance the value of your hand. Your hand is riddled with losers, and the queen of clubs might be worthless. A free raise to two hearts does ample justice to your holding. If that doesn't draw another bid from partner, your chances of missing game are slight.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as south you hold:
♦A105 ♥AKQ4 ♦Q1073 ♦Q5
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 NT Pass Pass Dble.
Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Do you really think that you have a chance for game? Between you and West, you can account for at least 33 HCP. If partner held most of the missing values, he would surely have passed your double. You can expect partner to have five or more hearts and little in the way of high cards. Pass, and hope that you have enough to enable partner to make two hearts.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable.

♦AKJ52 ♥K8 ♦84 ♦9852
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass
Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—A. The only action you might contemplate is a raise to three hearts, but you don't have quite enough. Partner has already bid your values! Bear in mind that he was not strong enough to overcall one heart, and is only backing in to the auction now because the opponents, by allowing the auction to die at one no trump, have told him that you have reasonable strength. Pass.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦Q5 ♥AK873 ♦954 ♦AJ6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—There are many minimum opening bids that partner might have which will produce twelve tricks opposite your holding—your queen of spades is a very important card. Your hand is worth one more toward slam. Cue-bid four clubs. After this, however, it will be up to partner to make the next series of moves. Don't force the issue because you need an exact hand from partner to give you a good play for slam.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AJ1062 ♥J6 ♦AQ85 ♦93
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Just to see how much you retain of what you read in this column, we present a problem similar to one posed a few weeks back. You have a minimum opening bid and partner is a passed hand. Game is out of the question, and you have no reason to suppose there is a better suit in which to play the hand than hearts. After all, you have a doubleton honor in partner's suit and, for all you know, partner might be void in your suit. Pass.

Halve large grapefruit. Remove any seeds. Cut completely around sections to free them from the dividing membranes. With a kitchen scissors clip out center membranes in each half to make a small cavity to hold this addition. Pour enough Grade B maple syrup into each cavity to fill it and sprinkle a little of the syrup over the surface of the grapefruit segments. Place each grapefruit half in a wide fluted cup made from foil. Broil about 4 inches from high heat until tops are tinged with brown — 5 to 8 minutes. Serve in the foil cups — they catch some of the good juices. If the grapefruit is very cold, it may not heat through, but this yields a delightful hot top and a bottom that's deliciously cold in contrast.

Oswald: "Here is an old favorite hand to show when it is really important to play second hand high."

Alan: "Playing at three no trump, South ducks the first spade and wins the second. Then he goes to dummy and leads a diamond. Preferably the four. If East is sitting there taking a nap, he plays his three. South plays the ten. West takes his jack and South runs off the rest of the tricks. If East is wide awake he plays his king of diamonds and the three notrump contract collapses."

Oswald: "If South lets the king hold, East rattles off enough spade tricks to defeat him, if he takes his ace, he can't ever bring in the diamond suit."

Alan: "We don't think too much of South's notrump call. He might well have rebid to three diamonds. If North passed, South would make a nice part score. If North raised to four diamonds and South continued to the diamond game, he could make it against any defense."

Oswald: "Playing in five diamonds, South must take an early diamond finesse, cash the ace and then discard a spade on dummy's third-high club. He can start by either taking, or ducking, the first spade."

Senator Reveals Carter Arms Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said Sunday he believed the Carter administration was giving serious consideration last December to providing military armaments to China in the event the Soviet Union intervened in Poland.

Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he didn't know whether the new Reagan administration also was considering arming China as one option in the event of a Soviet intervention in Poland, but he said it "was an ongoing project in December 1980," just a month before Reagan took office.

"I have reason to believe," Percy said, "that the president had requested from the Department of Defense a list of lethal weapons and equipment that, if force were used by the Soviet Union in Poland, could be and probably would be sold or provided to the People's Republic of China."

"It was just an option we might have, but at least the Carter administration was preparing itself to exercise that option if it needed to," Percy said on the CBS television program, "Face the Nation."

Other sources, refusing to be identified, said Sunday that the Carter administration drew up a list of arms for China last December when it made contingency plans amid concerns the Soviets might be ready to move into Poland.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, who was Carter's national security adviser at the time, said Sunday he could not confirm or deny Percy's account. "I can say I generally endorse what Sen. Percy said on the subject," Brzezinski said.

Percy didn't say why the Carter administration was considering arming China, but he said this probably would have been "the most meaningful" of the number of options the administration was considering in December, a time when fears were widespread here that the Soviets would intervene in Poland to seek to crush the independent labor movement, Solidarity.

He said there still would be "pressure on us to realign ourselves with the People's Republic of China" in the event of a Soviet intervention, and he indicated that Congress would support whatever actions President Reagan decided upon.

"I think the Congress would stand by the president in the event of a move by the Soviet Union into Poland," he said. He also said, "I think it would solidify Western Europe as no other single issue has."

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. separately expressed some optimism that a major crisis can be avoided in Poland, citing evidence of continuing influence by moderate elements in that country.

"The good signs involve some indications that moderate elements in the political structure of Poland seem to be surviving well at the current moment and maybe will continue to prevail," he said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

But Haig also said the continuation of Warsaw Pact military exercises in the area beyond anticipated termination date is a continuing worry to the administration.

"The situation is still very, very tense," he said.

Haig did say that Soviet forces in the region are "in a heightened state of readiness" and warned that "any application of force ... would have unforeseen and most dangerous consequences."

He told reporters after the program that the Soviets had built up their command and communications forces in Poland, East Germany, Czechoslovakia and in the Soviet Union itself.

However, it appeared evident from Haig's remarks that the U.S. assessment of the situation in Poland has improved in the past 48 hours. Reagan on Thursday had issued a strong warning that the Soviets might be prepared to intervene and said such action would be a serious setback to East-West relations.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Sunday he believes the Soviet-led military exercises "constitute a continuing kind of form of coercion" on Poland, and cautioned that "no one should misunderstand it would be a serious and grave step" if the Soviets intervened.

While he said he didn't want to discuss specific options the administration would exercise in the event of a Soviet intervention, he repeated a statement of last week that it would be "useless" for the United States to engage in arms limitation talks in the event of such action.

Other options that are known to be under consideration include cutting off all U.S. trade with the Soviet Union, and encouraging this nation's European allies to also break or sharply cut back their economic ties with the Soviets as well.

Weinberger appeared on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

Percy said he doesn't think the Soviets want to intervene in Poland. He said "there has been restraint on both sides," reflecting an administration view that the Soviets also want to seek a peaceful solution to the dispute without yielding their control their East European satellite.

"I do not believe the Soviets want to use force. ... They will avoid it in any way they possibly can," he said.

Haig held out the prospect that the United States and its allies will consider providing additional aid to the Polish government, but said this will be difficult to do in the event of repression. Haig said Friday he is almost as much concerned over repression by the Polish government against it people as he is over the prospect of Soviet intervention.

Haig said that, with respect to U.S.-Soviet relations generally, he believes the Soviets "at long last recognize they must abide by rules of international law and not indulge in the kind of illegal intervention they have been indulging in the period past and at an increasing level with great dangers to our peace."

Regarding his highly publicized disagreement with the White House over the naming of Vice President George Bush to head a new crisis management team last week, Haig said he is satisfied with the outcome. "I think the situation has clearly been resolved, and resolved in a very happy way," he said.

Soviet Assessment Grim In Confronting Poland

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union issued on Sunday its grimmest assessment of the situation in Poland, portraying its Warsaw Pact ally as tottering on the brink of anarchy.

In a report broadcast throughout the Soviet Union and overseas, the official Tass news agency said Polish subversives had blocked roads and destroyed road signs, had tried to seize post offices and a television transmitter and were working to intimidate police and security agents.

A spokesman for Poland's independent union Solidarity in Warsaw denied the charges, saying, "Solidarity would never even think of such things." Polish state radio, without referring directly to the Tass report, said there were no obstacles on the road the Soviet agency mentioned and that the route was properly marked.

The Tass report from Warsaw was transmitted while the Polish Communist Party Central Committee was meeting to decide how to deal with Solidarity's threat to begin a general strike Tuesday unless its demands were met.

Some Western analysts saw the Soviet report as a new warning that the Kremlin believes the situation in Poland must be changed. Western diplomats in Moscow have said recently they believe the Soviets are pressuring the Polish leadership to crack down on dissident and labor activists.

Breaking from its usual practice of quoting Polish news reports, Tass reported directly that Solidarity had issued "provocative" instructions on how to seize factories and offices.

Tass said local Solidarity groups were trying to discredit police and security bodies and "lists of persons who are to be isolated" were being prepared. It claimed the lists were being drawn up of the home addresses of police, security agents and people who own weapons.

"Subversive elements operating in Kielce Voivodship have set up roadblocks, particularly on motorway E-7 between Suchedniow and Laczna. All road signs in that region have been destroyed," Tass said. The region is in central Poland.

Tass said "anti-socialist forces" tried to seize post offices in Warsaw, Konin, Ciechanow and other cities, and that in Warsaw "they managed to seize for some time a television transmitter mounted on one of the high-rise buildings, but this sally of the political instigators was frustrated."

Andrzej Slowik, a member of the Solidarity presidium, said the Tass reports were mistaken.

"Someone must have seen TV employees walking around with white-and-red armbands," he said. "All workers who cannot go on strike are sporting armbands to show they're with the strikers. Doctors do so, salesmen in food stores, and television people."

Slowik said some signs on highway E-7 had been removed, but only to be replaced with new markers, and he denied roads had been blocked.

In another commentary Sunday, Tass denounced President Reagan's recent statements on Polish developments, accusing Washington of inciting anti-government forces in Poland.

In an interview Sunday in the Washington Post, Reagan said "any imposition on the freedom of the people of Poland, whether internally or, and certainly if it's from outside by the Soviet Union, is going to definitely have an impact on (the U.S.-Soviet) relationship."

Tass charged that Reagan "virtually demanded" that the Polish government not take steps to deal with problems in the country.

The agency said "calls for restraint, calls imbued with hypocrisy, should be addressed first of all to the White House itself and the presidential entourage, for which it is high time to stop making instigatory statements with regard to other states."

Trial Set Today For Seventh Politician In Abscam Scandal

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., the seventh and most powerful federal politician indicted in the Abscam influence peddling scandal, goes on trial today in the most complex case to date.

Although he was one of the first to meet with undercover FBI agents posing as representatives of favor-seeking Arab sheiks, Williams was the last to be indicted.

The 61-year-old New Jersey Democrat, a 22-year Senate veteran whose current term expires in 1982, maintains he is "totally innocent" and says "I will survive."

Jury selection begins today in WILLIAMS Brooklyn before U.S. District Judge George C. Pratt in a trial expected to last up to two months.

Williams, former chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, is accused of bribery and conspiracy involving an alleged promise to introduce an immigration bill to allow the purported Arabs to stay in the United States.

He also is charged with agreeing to accept 18 percent interest in a titanium mining venture in return for assuring the bogus Arabs that he could get military contracts for the company. According to the indictment, the phony Arabs agreed to lend the mining company $100 million, and three co-defendants agreed to sell their shares to foreign businessmen for $70 million. Williams' profits would have been $12.6 million, minus expenses.

In a tape-recorded session made public at an earlier trial, Williams was told by one Abscam agent: "When it comes to your shares, tell him (the bogus sheik) you want 18 percent."

Mel Weinberg, a convicted con man the FBI used to set up the sting, told Williams the shares would be issued in the name of Alexander Feinberg, 72, of Cherry Hill, N.J., a lawyer and longtime Williams associate who will be tried with the senator.

The cases of Williams' two other co-defendants were severed — George Katz, a Fort Lee, N.J., businessman and Democratic Party fund-raiser, because of poor health; and Camden, N.J., Mayor Angelo Errichetti because of a government agreement not to try those convicted on other Abscam offenses unless they win appeals.

Williams' trial is the eighth Abscam prosecution. The government record has been perfect, with 15 convictions — six members of the House, three Philadelphia city councilmen, Errichetti, an Immigration and Naturalization Service investigator, a salesman and several middlemen.

The government has not fared well on appeals. The convictions of two of the Philadelphia politicians have been thrown out on grounds of governmental misconduct and entrapment, and all the others have appealed on similar grounds.

The most controversial Abscam evidence has been tapes of a June 28, 1979 session among Williams, Errichetti and Weinberg. In the meeting, which defense attorneys in other Abscam cases say was entrapment, Weinberg tells Williams, who was about to meet the supposed sheik:

"He's only interested in you. You gotta tell him how important you are. Who you are — 'I'm the man, I'm the one who's going to open the doors. I'm the man who's going to do this, and use my influence, and I guarantee this.'"

"Follow me? All bull... That's it. It goes no farther. It's all talk, all bull... It's a walkthrough. You should be out of there in 20 minutes. You gotta just play and blow your horn. The louder you blow and mention names who you control... A short time later, Williams met with an agent posing as a sheik.

Last week, transcripts were released of that meeting. Williams was quoted as saying "contacts" would be "no problem" because he had influence at the White House.

"I only involve myself in something that I just completely believe in. With great pleasure I'll talk to the president of the United States about it and, you know, in a personal way and get him enthusiastic and excited because we know what our country needs," he was quoted as saying.

According to the transcripts, Williams claimed influence with such Carter administration figures as Vice President Walter Mondale, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and the secretaries of defense, the Navy and the Army.

The meeting led to a dispute among Justice Department personnel, with New Jersey representatives recommending against prosecution — saying Weinberg "put words in people's mouths" — and Brooklyn prosecutors wanting to press charges. It wasn't until Oct. 30, 1980, with most Abscam defendants convicted, that Williams was indicted.

Congressmen convicted in Abscam were Michael Myers of Pennsylvania, John Murphy of New York, Frank Thompson Jr. of New Jersey, John Jenrette of South Carolina, Richard Kelly of Florida and Raymond Lederer of Pennsylvania. All are Democrats except Kelly. Only Lederer is still in office. The others were defeated at the polls.

HONG KONG VISIT

HONG KONG (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington arrived in Hong Kong on Sunday from Pakistan, where he visited an Afghan refugee camp. He was met at the airport by Sir Murray Maclehoze, governor of this British Crown colony.

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Britain's formal request for the extradition of Great Train Robber Ronald Biggs arrived Saturday night, British High Commissioner Stanley Arthur said.

"They have come, I have opened them," said Arthur, Britain's chief representative in Barbados. "The Barbados Attorney General Henry Forde knows they are here and I will hand them over to him as soon as reasonably possible."

Arthur said the next step would have to be taken by Barbados authorities. That action presumably will have to wait at least until Monday, when courts reopen.

Biggs, 51, was sentenced to 30 years in prison for his role in the robbery of $7.2 million from the London-Glasgow mail train in 1963. He escaped in 1965 and fled first to Australia, then to Brazil, where he fathered a child and was able to live openly because of a law barring extradition of anyone with a Brazilian dependent.

Train Robber Extradition Papers Arrive

He was kidnapped March 15 in Rio de Janeiro and taken to Barbados on a yacht. The men who grabbed him said they were paid to take Biggs to a country from which he could be extradited to Britain.

Brazilian diplomats have asked Barbados to return Biggs to Brazil, and Biggs is also fighting to be sent back to Brazil, claiming he was brought to Barbados involuntarily.

Three former soldiers who aided in abducting Biggs were deported to Britain Friday night, said Kendrick Hutson, chief immigration official in Barbados. Hutson did not disclose the reason for the deportation.

The others who helped bring Biggs to Barbados on the yacht are also believed to have left the nation.

Meanwhile, Biggs' former wife, Charmian Brent, said Sunday at her home in suburban Melbourne, Australia, she was willing to fly anywhere in the world to be with him.

"If he wants a reassessment of our feelings for each other we will have to meet again," she said. "I hope this will be soon. The couple was divorced in 1976, seven years after Biggs fled Australia to avoid arrest."

The newspaper Barbados Nation quoted Biggs as saying last week, "I am going to marry my wife again. I know any newspaper will pay any amount of money to see me and Charmian get married again."

In London, the ex-British army sergeant who reportedly masterminded the Biggs abduction, appeared briefly in court Saturday on an unrelated assault charge.

One in every two hundred children is born with a heart defect, commonly a hole in the heart muscle. Fortunately, surgeons are able to correct most problems that are serious enough to weaken the heart and deprive the body of oxygen. However, they must first diagnose the children who actually need surgery, usually one in ten. Better screening methods have been developed with the use of X-rays and a harmless dye. In fact, some problems can be diagnosed during pre-natal examinations. Surgeons can generally find and correct serious problems quickly.

Miners Hear Pleas To Okay Coal Pact

By The Associated Press
 United Mine Workers President Sam Church made whirlwind stops in three coal states Sunday in a push for rank and file approval for a contract settlement, and union officials said the decision was in the hands of a "silent majority."
 Church went to Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky to warn that the United States could lose foreign markets if coal production dropped, saying a long strike by the union's 160,000 members could hamstring the industry.
 UMW officials said miners were studying the proposed agreement, which goes to a vote Tuesday.

 "The silent majority hasn't spoken yet and they're not going to be heard until Tuesday," said John Darcus, a senior UMW official in West Virginia. "You only hear the most vocal."
 Miners struck Friday when their old contract expired, although union leaders had reached a tentative settlement with coal operators. Two years ago, during a fractious 111-day record strike, the rank and file rejected two contract settlements.
 Church continued to predict miners would approve the contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, but many other UMW leaders declined to forecast the outcome of the vote, saying it would be very close.

Miners Talk Strike
 Jerry Miller, a union official in West Virginia, however, said, "It's probably going to be turned down by 80 percent. I haven't talked to anyone who will vote for it."
 Some UMW officials and miners contend the lagging economy and widespread layoffs in the coal industry favor approval of the contract, which calls for a 36 percent increase in wages and benefits over three years.
 "I have a gut feeling that it will pass nationwide," said Walt Murray, an Ohio miner. "The economy is bad and people are afraid and the coal operators know it."
 But a miner at a meeting in East Lynn, W. Va., said, "We're going to vote this contract down and tell Sam Church to go back and get us another one."
Union Leader Heckled
 Church, who has been picketed and heckled by angry miners since he began touring coal states Thursday to boost the contract proposal, got a cordial welcome Sunday at a union meeting in Benham, Ky. Under a banner of "I Support the UMW and Sam," miners listened attentively.
 Toy Dixon, president of UMW Local 7425, told the miners he was a "little disgusted" with the behavior of union members who have burned copies of the contract or broken up meetings.
 "If you're going to be a union, traditionally, you've got to act like men and women. All this going out here and burning contracts is scaring the people and it will hurt the organizing" of non-union miners, he said.
 Many miners have charged the contract would weaken the UMW by dropping a royalty paid by BCOA companies on purchases of non-union coal. Church has said coal companies are not paying the royalty, which goes into the UMW's pension fund, and the union will gain more from a new provision for pensions for many miners' widows.
 Church told Virginia miners Sunday that one feature of the proposed contract would protect jobs of miners.
 "We're trying to add a little protection so if a little company goes out of business, the men would go back to another company," he said.

Indonesia Agrees To All Demands

 said Schneider, manager of Milchem's Indonesia operations, and his English wife had lived in Jakarta for about four months and that Schneider's mother lives in Lubbock.
 Schneider may have been attempting to duplicate the escape of Briton Robert Wainwright, 27, of Cromford, Derbyshire, who earlier Sunday jumped from the emergency door and fled.
 Wainwright, also described as an employee of Milchem, told officials the hijackers ranged in age from 20 to 40 and were armed with machine guns, grenades and dynamite.
Threats Denied
 Indonesian officials here denied reports that the hijackers threatened to blow up the plane.
 The escaped hostage said there were six non-Indonesians among the 47 passengers and nine crewmembers being held at the time of his escape. He said they were three Americans, two Japanese and one person from the Netherlands.
 The names of the other Americans were not known.
 Thai security men questioned Wainwright for an hour about the positioning of the hijackers in the plane. Thai authorities said that fueled speculation about a possible attempt to storm the plane.
 The hijackers, who have not been identified, brought the plane here after a refueling stop in Malaysia, where they released a 75-year-old Indonesian woman passenger.
 They originally demanded that Indonesia release 20 people they termed "political prisoners." But after team of senior Indonesian officials arrived here Saturday night and agreed to the initial demand, the hijackers raised the number to 80 then 84.
Threats Denied
 Indonesian officials here denied reports that the hijackers threatened to blow up the plane.
 The escaped hostage said there were six non-Indonesians among the 47 passengers and nine crewmembers being held at the time of his escape. He said they were three Americans, two Japanese and one person from the Netherlands.

Grand Champions Named For Rodeo

When the arena dust finally settled after the 39th edition of the ABC Rodeo at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, Monte Taylor walked away with the Grand Championship of Brahma Bull riding and $1,409.63 of the total $8,800 purse in that event.
 The Allison cowboy was one of a handful of professional rodeo competitors who emerged victorious from the record-number field of 334 contestants in this year's 39th edition of the ABC Rodeo.
 Each of the top six finishers in the rodeo's six events each will carry home a hefty slice of the more than $24,000 in prize money — also an ABC record — staked on the riders, ropers, racers and steer wrestlers.
 Taylor got a score of 77 to take the championship title. He was followed by Eddie Rawdon, Cedar Hill; John Bland, Trent, and Gary Toole, Mangum, Okla., all tied at 76 ($923.55 each); Rusty O'Donnell, Big Spring, 75 ($437.47).
 The ABC calf roping Grand Championship, and $1,375 of the total $4,880 purse, went to Mike Lansford Jr. of Huntsville, who took 9.1 seconds to get two wraps and a hoey on his calf. That was just fast enough, as close behind with a rope-and-tie of 9.7 seconds was Marshall Green of Baird, who copped the $1,138 second-place money.

Third place honors went to Jim Fuller of Valley Mills, whose 10.1 time got him $901. Jim Brazile of Gruver with a 10.3 finish took fourth place and $664. Paul Tierney of Rapid City, S.D., finished fifth and earned $426 and sixth place and $237 went to Bobby Zesch of San Angelo, with a 10.6 time.
 In bareback bronc competition, Dave Appleton of Snyder scored 78 points to take that Grand Championship and $829 of the total $2,920 purse.
 Two cowboys, David Peters of Pottsboro and Buddy Reynolds of Slaton, tied for second with identical scores of 75. Each took $615 in prize money.
 And still another tie between three bareback riders rounded out that event. Scores of 72 — and $267 — went to Sandy Kirby of Greenville, Mickey Young of Jerome, Idaho, and Bob Wilfong of Andrews.
 The saddle bronc Grand Championship, and $287.46 of the $2,120 purse, was won by Rick Carpenter of Jasper, Ala., who posted a score of 151. Second place and prize money of $215.29 went to Monte Henson of Mesquite with a score of 145. Joe Spearman of Greenville posted a 144 to take third and $143.73. Cody Lambert of El Paso scored 142 for fourth place and $71.86.
 Dennis Gee of Burkburnett was named steer wrestling Grand Champion after he took his animal down in 9.8 seconds. Gee earned $496.53 of the total $3,850 purse for his effort. Second place and $372.40 went to Jeff Green of Bossier City, La., for his time of 11.5. Gregg Mindeman of Apache, Okla., was third with a time of 14.2, and won $248.27, and Delbert Davis of Hereford was fourth with a time of 14.8 and won $124.13.
 Connie Combs of Comanche, Okla., took the Grand Championship in girls' open barrel racing with a time of 14.38 seconds, winning $432.14. Noel Matthews of Logansport, La., was second with a time of 14.43 and won $352.11. Sharon Youngblood of Lamesa was third with a time of 14.44 for $288.09, and Nannette Fine of Monahans was fourth with a time of 14.53 and won $208.07.
 And in the rodeo's "hairiest event," Nick Futrell was named Grand Champion after winning the "Most Becoming" division of the beard-mustache contest, while in the "Anything Goes" category, Jim Pettv won the judges' approval.

The beard-mustache competition definitely was a crowd-pleaser, but the Grand Championship of Entertaining went hands down to "King of the Road" Roger Miller. Throughout the rodeo's four-day run, Miller kept toes tapping and faces smiling with renditions of some of his Grammy Award-winning tunes.
 And, in traditional ABC form, the 24,736 fans were thrilled by the antics of "The Clown Prince of Rodeo" Wilbur Plautcher, "Bull Dancer" Bob Romer and Owens Country Sausage Six Pony Hitch, all longtime ABC favorites.
 The rodeo is staged annually by the Downtown Chapter of the American Business Club to benefit the capital improvement fund of Lubbock Boys' Clubs.

 The East German news agency ADN said "new units" were en route to join the 10-day-old "Sojuz 81" Warsaw Pact maneuvers that have been under way in Poland, Czechoslovakia and East Germany.
 In Rome, Pope John Paul II pleaded that his native land be allowed to solve its own problems, and Poland's Roman Catholic church broadcast a prayer asking the Virgin Mary "to protect us, so that we do not lose our freedom."
 The official Soviet news agency Tass, in dispatches from here, said conditions were "extremely tense" and accused Solidarity of "provocation" and "open methods of struggle against the legitimate state authority."
 The news agency also accused Solidarity of being run by dissident groups and warned Westerners to stop supporting "those elements in Poland that are trying to bring things to anarchy."
 Warsaw Radio said Kania summoned the Central Committee "for a discussion of the party's tasks in the present situation" because Solidarity and government negotiators have failed, so far, to avert Tuesday's threatened strike.
 Solidarity is threatening an open-ended nationwide strike unless the government dismisses officials the union says are responsible for the March 19 beatings of 23 farmers and union activists in Bydgoszcz, north-central Poland.
 Barcikowski said a general strike now "would test the structure of the state, the existence of the nation. This is an ominous prospect."
 "Solidarity carries great responsibility and could influence the country in a favorable or unfavorable manner," he said. "We are warning its leadership against the consequences of political adventurism."

 He accused some of Solidarity's 10 million members of pushing the union into "political action, engaging it into a fight with our party... from anti-communist positions" and called on union leaders to "eliminate proponents of such tendencies from their organization."
 Polish airspace was closed to foreign aircraft for five hours ending at 5:30 a.m. Sunday for "technical reasons," the government reported. The East German news agency ADN said Warsaw Pact troops held simulated "attacks against air-borne troops" in Poland and "accomplished the annihilation of their assumed enemies."

Explosion Damages Military Office

GIESSEN, West Germany (AP) — A bomb planted on the outer wall of a U.S. Army security office here exploded early Sunday morning, causing extensive damage but no injuries, police reported.
 Police said the impact of the explosion caused an estimated $50,000 damage to the office and shattered windows in buildings over 300 feet away. Two people were in the building when the explosion occurred.
 Police said they had no suspects and knew of no motive for the bombing.
 The army maintains a supply depot here.
 During the past few months other bombs and devices looking like explosives have been found on U.S. military installations in West Germany, but no suspects have been arrested.
 Explosive experts disarmed two firebombs found aboard observation helicopters at the Buedingen Army Airfield on February 3.

Crippled Plane Lands Safely

Lubbock International Airport personnel had a few anxious moments Sunday night when a private aircraft was forced to make a belly-landing shortly before 11 p.m.
 The Cessna Skymaster II, piloted by Jack Brown, developed landing gear problems during a flight from San Antonio.
 The Lubbock Fire Department sent several pieces of firefighting and rescue equipment to stand by in case of a fire or explosion, and an Emergency Medical Services ambulance also was dispatched to the scene.
 The two-engine plane, with landing gear up, slid onto the east runway about 10:45 p.m., and Brown exited the craft unhurt.

Khomeini Representative Shot By Motorcyclist

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A representative of Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was wounded by a gunman on a motorcycle in Shiraz in southern Iran, Iran's official Pars news agency reported Sunday.
 It said "someone on a motorcycle" shot Ayatollah Rabbani Shirazi in the neck Saturday in Shiraz, the capital of Fars province 400 miles south of Tehran. He was hospitalized in "satisfactory" condition, the agency reported.
 Shirazi is Khomeini's representative in the province and a member of the Iranian guardian council of the constitution.
 Pars also reported that former Deputy Prime Minister Abbas Amir Entezam, accused of spying for the American CIA, continued his defense Sunday at the third session of his trial.
 The trial was recessed until next Saturday to give Entezam time to hire a lawyer, according to a Pars account carried on Tehran Radio.

 Meanwhile, teams from the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration and state officials continued their investigations, interviewing survivors and examining debris at Harbour Cay condominium, a 45-unit, five-story structure that was to be the first of five buildings in the $10 million project.

TECH FUND RAISER — Cliff Zschiesche, a former Texas Tech cheerleader, will be knocking on corporate doors in Texas cities including Lubbock, Houston, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Dallas-Fort Worth, Longview and Tyler for financial donations to Tech's Loyalty Fund. Zschiesche was picked for the job partly because of his constant smile and long-time devotion to Tech. He will also assist ex-students chapters across the state.

 cated to Tech, outgoing and willing to give his all to whatever he puts his mind to."
 Since graduation, Zschiesche has lived in San Antonio, El Paso and Houston, working in Joske's executive training program and later as an area sales manager and then as an assistant buyer for Foley's department stores.
 Zschiesche says he remained active in alumni activities by joining the local ex-students chapter in each city where he has lived.
 "Our chapter associations are so far physically from the Lubbock office it's hard to have any kind of constant input," he says. "That's one reason association officials decided to open a Houston office, and Zschiesche says his territory will include not only Houston but also San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Dallas-Fort Worth, Longview, Tyler, the Hill Country and any West Texas areas which the Lubbock office designates."
To Assist Chapters
 In addition to raising money, he will be available to assist local student chapters with meetings, receptions and other activities.
 The Ex-Student Association recently announced plans to raise $750,000 annually by 1985, including establishing a $500,000 endowment to generate interest to provide money for academic scholarships.

 Zschiesche says increased fund raising is vital to Tech because the school now ranks at the bottom of the list of all Southwest Conference schools in funds raised through alumni donations.
 And it's hard to recruit students when other schools offer more attractive scholarships, he said.
 Texas Tech is already a good school, he says, but "We're looking for excellence and to have excellence we need money."
 He says giving is easy, noting that membership to the Century Club requires $100 annually, but that on a monthly basis that means only about $8.35.
 While Zschiesche is a newcomer to the philanthropy business, he is a veteran motivator and projects the idea that raising money won't be any more difficult than getting fans to cheer.
 "We're not going to be giving a high-pressure type sales pitch," he says. "We want people to give out of sincere desire and because they realize Tech's needs."
 Besides, he notes, all contributions are tax deductible. "They can give it to Tech or Uncle Sam," he says with that smile that more and more alumni will undoubtedly be seeing as they reach for their checkbooks.

U.S., Egypt To Request Sinai Peacekeeping Force Approval

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Despite Soviet threats to veto the proposal, the United States and Egypt will ask the U.N. Security Council to approve a peacekeeping force in the Sinai following Israel's final withdrawal next year, a U.S. diplomat said Sunday.

Michael Sterner, deputy assistant secretary of state, did not explain why the Reagan administration would request the council action. He spoke with reporters at the end of two days of talks with Egyptian officials on the proposed peacekeeping force in the Sinai peninsula.

Diplomatic sources said the move was intended to follow each point in the U.S.-sponsored Egyptian-Israeli peace accord.

The accord, signed in Washington two years ago, stipulates that a U.N. peacekeeping force patrol the Egyptian-Israeli frontier after Israel completes its pullout from the Sinai in April 1982. Israel has returned about two-thirds of the peninsula, captured from Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

The Soviet Union, which opposed the peace treaty, has said it would veto any resolution calling for a U.N. force that was brought before the council. The Soviet Union is among the council's five permanent members whose power of veto can kill any council action.

There has been no indication the Soviets have since agreed to a U.N. force, and the United States has proposed an alternative multinational force outside U.N. auspices and with American troops as its mainstay.

So far, no other nation has said it will offer military units.

Sterner, who appeared before reporters with Butros Ghali, Egypt's minister of state for foreign affairs, left open the question of whether the force would make use of two key air bases that the Israelis have built in Sinai but are scheduled to turn over to Egypt.

Egypt has opposed allowing a multinational force onto the bases at Etzion and Etam, but Sterner said, "I think this is a possibility we don't want to rule out."

Sterner, who heads the U.S. team trying to set up the Sinai force, is scheduled to fly to Tel Aviv Monday for similar talks with Israeli officials.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is scheduled to visit Egypt and Israel later this week on his first Mideast tour.

The issue of U.S. troops on Egyptian soil is sensitive. In an interview apparently aimed at deflecting concern, Egypt's new defense minister was quoted Monday as saying the Soviet Union has its own rapid deployment force in the Middle East—in Libya—and it is superior to one being planned by the United States.

"Libya is the cornerstone in the global dispersion of Soviet forces," the semi-official newspaper al-Ahram quoted Mohamed Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala as saying.

"Thanks to Libya, the Soviet Union is in a better situation than the United States," he said. "The Soviets have their war equipment here. All they have to do is bring in the men."

It is believed that Libya maintains arsenals of Soviet-bloc tanks, warplanes and field weapons far beyond its own needs.

Egypt, America's strongest ally in the Arab world, says U.S. rapid deployment forces could use, but not be stationed on, Egyptian bases.

The Barry native moved to Lubbock in 1929. She attended McMurry College in Abilene and was graduated from Texas Tech University with bachelor and master degrees in education. She was a longtime teacher at Roscoe Wilson Elementary and was a member of First United Methodist Church. She was also a member of the Classroom Teachers Association. She was state secretary of Delta Kappa Gamma and a past president of Wesleyan Service Guild. She was a member of Methodist Hospital Auxiliary.

Survivors include three sisters, Lula Terrie Watson, Lora Brasch and Marym Robinson, all of Lubbock.

Wife Of Jailer Wounded In Shooting

The wife of a Lubbock County Jail employee was wounded Sunday afternoon in an apparent accidental shooting at the couple's Texas Tech area apartment, according to Lubbock police.

Joyce Elaine Robinson, 19, of 3301 Seventh St., Apt. 9, was listed in serious condition Sunday night at Lubbock General Hospital with a gunshot wound to the jaw. She is the wife of jailer Joby Robinson.

Robinson told police his .357-magnum revolver discharged by accident about 2:45 p.m. when he laid the weapon down on a dresser at their apartment.

The bullet reportedly hit Mrs. Robinson under the chin and lodged in the left side of her jaw.

The 1980 census included questions that were intended to provide additional information on race, energy use, housing, the disabled and commuting patterns.

Woman Blames Assault On Former Husband

A 21-year-old Lubbock woman told police her ex-husband assaulted her early Sunday morning when she refused to engage in sexual activities with him and another woman.

The woman said her former spouse picked her up from work about 6:30 p.m. Saturday, and that they bought some beer and drove around "having a good time."

At midnight, the couple drove to a north Lubbock nightclub, where the man picked up another woman. The three then went to the victim's north Lubbock home, where the man made the unusual request, police said.

When his ex-wife refused to cooperate, the man began beating her, kicking her in the stomach and slamming her head against a wall, reports show.

The man then threw the victim and her personal belongings out of the house, but the woman told police he took $50 cash from her wallet before throwing it outside.

The victim refused medical treatment. Her ex-husband was not immediately arrested, reports show.

In other activity, the manager of a local nightclub told police he would file charges on a 21-year-old man because he broke his hand on the man's head during a disturbance at the club early Sunday

Lubbock Teen-Agers Listed As Critical Following Mishap

Two Lubbock teen-agers remained hospitalized with serious injuries Sunday following a Saturday night traffic mishap at the intersection of 54th Street and Magnolia Avenue.

Darrell Glen Roberson, 16, of 1515 E. 54th St. and 15-year-old Bill Jackson of 612 Hub Homes both were listed in critical condition Sunday at Methodist Hospital.

The youths were injured about 9:40 p.m. when their car collided at the intersection with a 1973 Chevrolet pickup truck driven by LeRoy B. Curtis, 37, of 5603 Magnolia Ave.

The teen-agers, in a 1979 Dodge Colt, were westbound on 54th Street when their car collided with Curtis' southbound pickup. The impact of the collision knocked the pickup into a tree next to a residence at 5402 Magnolia Ave., police said.

The tree fell against the house and a car owned by Janie Perez of the same address, reports show.

Curtis was not injured, and occupants of the house also apparently escaped injury.

Blaze At Home Injures Infant

A 4-month-old boy was listed in critical condition Sunday night at Lubbock General Hospital with burns suffered earlier Sunday in a fire at his family's east Lubbock home.

Pedro Cruz Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Cruz of 604 Ave. D, was hospitalized after the 1:15 p.m. fire that caused extensive damage to the residence.

The infant reportedly suffered second- and third-degree burns over 12 percent of his body.

Firefighters controlled the blaze in 10 minutes, but damage to the house and contents was more than $1,000, a fire department spokesman said.

The cause of the fire apparently was an electrical short-circuit in a bedroom, according to fire department reports.

MR. SECRETARY — Secretary of State Alexander Haig appears on the Sunday television show "Meet the Press." The Secretary was questioned on the situation in Poland among other things during the program, broadcast from Washington on NBC. (AP Laserphoto)

Haig: Soviets Boosting Readiness For Invasion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig said Sunday Soviet military intervention in Poland is "neither imminent nor inevitable," but the Kremlin currently is engaged in "increased posturing" that could lead to it.

"We are watching the situation very, very carefully," he told television interviewers.

Asked if Americans should not welcome such a move in the hope it could lead to a dissolution of the Soviet empire, Haig disagreed.

"Any application of force could have unforeseen and most dangerous consequences and I know of no officials in this administration who could wish for it," he said.

The secretary was interviewed on NBC TV's "Meet the Press." He said there are no indications that Russian troops have moved into Poland, and added:

"We consider Soviet intervention in Poland to be neither imminent or inevitable. (The situation) varies hour by hour, as various postures are taken by the Soviet forces.

"Right now they are at a heightened state of readiness, with increased posturing that could lead to that," he said.

Asked if there are any "good signs" emerging from Poland, he said yes.

"There is some indication that the moderate elements in the political structure there seem to be surviving well and lending some hope they will prevail."

In a situation closer to home, Haig was asked if the government is "totally hostile" to the left-wing guerrillas in El Salvador, or perhaps has "some feeling that they were people simply fed up with oppression, injustice and the fear of the right-wing terror squads."

He replied that there are strong indications that the initial revolutionary opposition was a reaction to the extremes of the right "which we do not endorse."

Newspaper Alleges Coup Plot

LONDON (AP) — Britain's counter-espionage agency MI5 foiled a plot by military and civilian leaders, including the late Lord Louis Mountbatten, to overthrow Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government in 1968, the Sunday Times reported. One of the alleged conspirators was said to have branded the report a "lie."

Portions of the report in the prestigious newspaper were attributed to former MI5 director-general Sir Martin Furnival Jones and other parts to Lady Falkender, who as Marcia Williams was Wilson's secretary at the time.

Jones and Lady Falkender were not available for immediate comment and Defense Ministry officials declined to discuss the report in The Sunday Times, which was bought last month by Australian publisher Rupert Murdoch.

Lord Cecil King, chairman of the London-based International Publishing Corp. from 1963 to 1968, who the newspaper claimed was one of the conspirators, denied The Sunday Times report from his home in Dublin, branding it "a lie," according to Britain's domestic news agency Press Association.

Legislator Ted Leadbetter of the opposition Labor Party demanded that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government investigate The Sunday Times report and make a "full report" to the House of Commons.

The Times story capped a week of bombshell allegations that Britain's Secret Service may have been penetrated by double agents working for the Soviets. The claims, serialized in the Daily Mail newspaper from a new book by a veteran British defense correspondent, including one charge that a former MI5 chief, the late Sir Roger Hollis, may have been a Soviet "mole," or deep cover agent. Mrs. Thatcher told Parliament Thursday that charge was unfounded.

The Times report alleged that Jones reported to then-Home Secretary James Callaghan after investigating the alleged coup plot and named those involved, who included an army major-general.

The paper gave few details of the alleged coup plans and attributed no names of plotters to Jones, but said he described them as "civil servants and military men" and called them as "a pretty loony crew."

Callaghan was "not slow to act," ac-ording to the portion of the newspaper report attributed to Jones. However, the paper quoted Jones as saying that no charges were filed and no senior military officers were disciplined.

The Sunday Times quoted Lady Falkender as saying that Wilson had been alarmed by a major security exercise by troops at London's Heathrow Airport and told her: "They could turn that lot against the government — totally."

According to the newspaper, she named Mountbatten as a leading figure in the alleged plot, saying he had had "a map on the wall of his office showing how it could be done. Harold and I used to stand in the State Room at No.10 (Downing Street) and work out where they would put the guns," the newspaper quoted her as saying.

The Sunday Times said it had "evidence" that Mountbatten made strenuous efforts "to prevent publication of references to the subject in the autobiography of Hugh Cudlipp, King's successor as International Publishing Corp. chairman."

Former Prime Minister Says Press Led Attempted Coup

LONDON (AP) — Former Prime Minister Harold Wilson said Sunday that people "high up in the press" plotted a coup to overthrow his Labor government in the late 1960s. He strongly denied a London Sunday Times report that the late Lord Louis Mountbatten was among the instigators.

Wilson, who served two terms as prime minister, issued a statement saying "one or two people high up in the press approached Lord Mountbatten to discuss their plan for a coup to take over the machinery of government."

"Mountbatten and Sir Solly Zuckerman sent them packing in the best quarter-deck manner," Lord Zuckerman was the government's chief scientific adviser from 1964-71.

Wilson called the newspaper report an "unwarranted slur" on Mountbatten, a cousin of Queen Elizabeth II and a popular soldier-statesman. He was killed when Irish Republican Army terrorists bombed his yacht off Ireland's west coast Aug. 27, 1979.

Wilson's statement did not name the alleged plotters against his government and gave few details of their plan. He was unavailable for further comment.

The Times wrote that a group of military and civilian leaders tried to get rid of Wilson in the late 1960s because they believed his socialist policies were damaging the country.

It said the plot was foiled by Britain's counter-espionage agency MI5 and the director-general at the time, Sir Martin Furnival Jones, reported it to then-Home Secretary James Callaghan.

Wilson was prime minister from 1964-70 and returned to power with the Labor Party in 1974. He resigned two years later and was replaced by Callaghan.

Reached by the Times in India, Callaghan said he did not want to comment on the incident. "Ah, that one," the newspaper quoted him as saying. "I have nothing to say about it, either here or in London."

The Times said the ouster attempt was investigated by the secret service but no one was ever charged.

It identified one of the alleged conspirators as Lord Cecil King, chairman of the London-based International Publishing Corp. from 1963 to 1968. King branded the report a "lie" in an interview with Britain's domestic news agency, Press Association.

The Times quoted Jones as saying he reported the conspiracy to Callaghan but saw no reason to tell Wilson. Jones was not available for comment.

The newspaper reported that Mountbatten was linked to the conspiracy by Lady Falkender, who was Wilson's secretary at the time, and by Hugh Cudlipp, who succeeded King as chairman of the publishing firm.

According to the newspaper, Cudlipp said the plot was discussed during a meeting at Mountbatten's apartment in May 1968 and attended by Mountbatten, King and Zuckerman.

It said King asked Mountbatten to serve as head of an alternative government once Wilson was ousted.

According to Cudlipp, Zuckerman stormed from the room, saying he would have nothing to do with such "rank treachery."

Invasion Warnings Continuing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Sunday the United States is continuing to warn the Soviet Union against a possible invasion of Poland, and is concerned about the continuing war games on Poland's borders.

"We're seeing additional signs of threats," Weinberger said on the ABC-TV show "Issues and Answers."

He said the key concern is that the extensive military maneuvers are "continuing beyond the time it was anticipated they would be concluded" and such positioning of troops "provides a good cover or springboard for an invasion."

Weinberger said any Soviet invasion of Poland would be a "matter that would have grave consequences," but he would not define possible responses by the United States to such an act.

No severe damage was done to the administration in the recent flap over naming Vice President George Bush, and not Secretary of State Alexander Haig, to run the White House crisis management team.

It was "a lot of excitement and activity in a very small teapot," he said, and only an "example of the enormous, microscopic attention" paid to the government.

The defense secretary emphasized his opposition to the SALT II arms limitation program. "The Soviets have outspent us and out-invested us," he said, and the "United States needs to make major investments to try and catch up."

He said the treaty was "totally ineffective" in limiting Soviet military might.

On other topics, Weinberger said:

- While he has not seen a CIA report claiming there is no proof the Soviet Union is behind terrorism, there is "good clear evidence that the Soviets have been part in the training and equipping of terrorist groups" against governments friendly to the United States.

- Military recruitment is going "quite well" and the nation should "stay away from a compulsory draft as long as possible." He said a restoration of "admiration and respect" for the military would help in recruiting.

- The Soviet Union is ahead of the United States in satellite warfare capability and possible military uses of the space shuttle must be examined. "Anything that enhances peace and security should be explored," he said.

Bush To Appear Before Legislators

AUSTIN (AP) — Vice President George Bush will tell Texas legislators Monday what they can expect from the new Republican administration.

Before and after Bush's half-hour appearance Monday afternoon the House and Senate have a wide range of problems to consider — primarily concerning state spending and redistricting.

Bush, an adopted Texan who tried twice to be a U.S. Senator from the state, comes to Austin from a speaking appearance in Fort Worth.

After a brief news conference and a visit with Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, and Speaker Bill Clayton, he will address a joint session in the House chamber.

Aides said Bush would discuss federal and state relations under the new Republican administration.

Bush will be the third U.S. vice president to speak to a joint session of Texas lawmakers. Lyndon B. Johnson spoke to the Legislature in 1961 while he was vice president. Then after Johnson became president, Vice President Hubert Humphrey spoke to a joint session in 1967.

Another famous Texan, Vice President John Nance Garner, never spoke to the Texas Legislature.

Bush plans to return to Washington immediately after the speech.

Otherwise, legislative sessions Monday are expected to be mostly routine.

A Senate committee hearing Monday on a bill regulating the funeral home industry, including embalming of the dead, may attract a large crowd.

Conference committees will continue compromise talks on House and Senate differences in bills that would raise the drinking age from 18 to 19 and appropriate $35 million for emergency housing in the prison system.

The Senate Finance and House Appropriation Committees will be working extra hours trying to get a 1982-83 state spending bill ready for debate by mid-April.

Gov. Bill Clements warned legislators Friday they will have about $2.5 billion less to spend because of expected cuts in federal funds the state receives from Washington.

Redistricting committees will be working with the 1980 census figures received from Washington figures last week. House and Senate members were scheduled to get a "profile" Monday showing the exact population and racial makeup of their districts, down to the block level. Hearings are already underway in the House on how the districts should be changed to fit the 1980 census and Senate hearings being during the week. Final bills on Senate, House and congressional redistricting are scheduled for debate in early May.

Book Suggests Cover-Up In Karen Silkwood Case

NEW YORK (UPI) — The mystery over the death of plutonium worker Karen Silkwood has deepened amid charges that investigators uncovered evidence suggesting the CIA, the FBI and Iranian agents were involved in a possible cover-up of the case.

Author Richard Rashke wrote in a book published this month that a private investigator was told by a source the FBI had a secret report saying Mrs. Silkwood was "run off" the road the night she was killed in an auto wreck.

Mrs. Silkwood, a 28-year-old divorced mother of three, was on her way to meet a New York Times reporter to discuss safety violations at the Kerr-McGee Nuclear Corporation's plutonium processing plant in Crescent, Oklahoma when her car hit a concrete highway wingwall and she was killed.

The FBI and local authorities officially ruled her November 1974 death an accident.

But in "The Killing of Karen Silkwood," Rashke contends investigators for Mrs. Silkwood's family and a congressional subcommittee that held inconclusive hearings on the case repeatedly were rebuffed when seeking FBI documents on the affair.

Rashke, an investigative reporter for National Catholic Weekly, offers no conclusions about her death, but his details of the murky trail of intrigue followed by the investigators raises many questions.

Rashke wrote that Mrs. Silkwood, a lab technician who was active in plant union activities, had been collecting data which she said showed the plant was plagued by safety violations and also was manufacturing defective nuclear fuel rods.

In addition, she told a friend "she had found out that 40 pounds of plutonium, enough to make almost three atomic bombs, were missing from the plant," Rashke wrote.

He said some investigators "would later speculate there was a plutonium smuggling ring" at the plant.

The book also says an investigator was told by a confidential source that the and 1978 suspicions that she also may have been bugged before her death.

Investigator William Taylor traveled to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. to check if a school specializing in teaching electronic surveillance, the National Intelligence Academy, had links to the Silkwood case, Rashke wrote.

Two White House officials heard about the investigation and Taylor was told that the academy trained "students" from Brazil, Uruguay and Iran's Savak and that it "was a top-secret operation with CIA Connections," Rashke said.

One White House source warned an associate of Taylor that he should "stand down" from the case, Rashke wrote.

"They'll kill him," Rashke quoted the source as saying, "and I promise you no one will do anything about it." He did not say who "they" were.

Another source told Taylor "the CIA had been diverting plutonium from nuclear plants and giving it to foreign countries friendly to the United States" and that several CIA Operatives had died after being contaminated, Rashke wrote. But the source did not know if the Kerr-McGee plant was involved, Rashke said.

The book also said that on one trip to Florida Taylor was attacked by two men, one wielding a knife, in his darkened motel room and one of the attackers was stabbed in the struggle before they fled. During the struggle the attackers spoke in a foreign tongue, later identified as the language used in Iran.

Shortly before her death, Mrs. Silkwood was mysteriously exposed to plutonium — traces of which were found in her apartment. The now-defunct Atomic Energy Commission ruled that her contamination was deliberate and came from plutonium processed at the Kerr-McGee plant. But officials never resolved who was behind the contamination.

Unit's Goal Rapid Air Deployment

OFFUTT AIR FORCE BASE, Neb. (UPI) — The Strategic Air Command has assembled its mightiest armada of conventional bombers since the Vietnam war for use as a crisis reaction force.

"We'd be ready to go first," said Lt. Gen. Lloyd Leavitt, SAC vice commander. "We could go tomorrow, if need be."

Called the Strategic Projection Force, and wearing the motto "Anywhere. Anytime," its primary striking power is 35 B-52 bombers borrowed from SAC's nuclear wings. The bombers are supported by tanker, reconnaissance and spy planes that can deploy within 24 hours from air bases in the United States.

Technically, SPF is part of the Rapid Deployment Force created by former President Carter a year ago to meet threats to U.S. interests worldwide. The RDF is primarily geared to the area stretching from Egypt eastward to Pakistan.

However, the SPF has been given a mandate to operate independently of the RDF. Because its bombers, which have a range of 10,000 miles, might be the first force able to get to a combat theater.

The planning for a force of bombers that carry conventional weapons, indicates that serious thought is being given by the military to the possibility that a war with the Soviet Union may not be nuclear.

The SPF lacks but one element, in the Air Force view: Bases in the Middle East and Southwest Asia necessary for stockpiling fuel, ammunition and other items to keep the force self-sufficient for at least 10 days.

"The Reagan administration has come to the conclusion that we have to have bases in the Middle East," an Air Force official said. "How the hell are we going to operate out of there without bases?"

Some Air Force officials think Ras Banas on Egypt's Red Sea coast would be ideal for the purpose since it is out of Soviet fighter range. Egypt has given the United States access to base facilities on its soil but not the right to station forces there permanently.

Other Air Force officials think the Reagan administration should seek Egyptian permission for the United States to use the Sinai bases of Eitam and Etzion, which Israel is to evacuate under terms of its 1979 treaty with Egypt.

The Pentagon is trying to solve the problem by earmarking $106 million for fiscal 1982 to build Ras Banas into what Pentagon officials called a rear staging area.

SAC has requested $98 million for this year and next to modify the B-52 to carry 108 conventional bombs in its belly and under its wings by 1984.

Two bomb wings with 14 B52s each at Minot and Grand Forks Air Force bases, both in North Dakota, have been set up as the primary component of SPF. Seven other B-52s are on standby as spares.

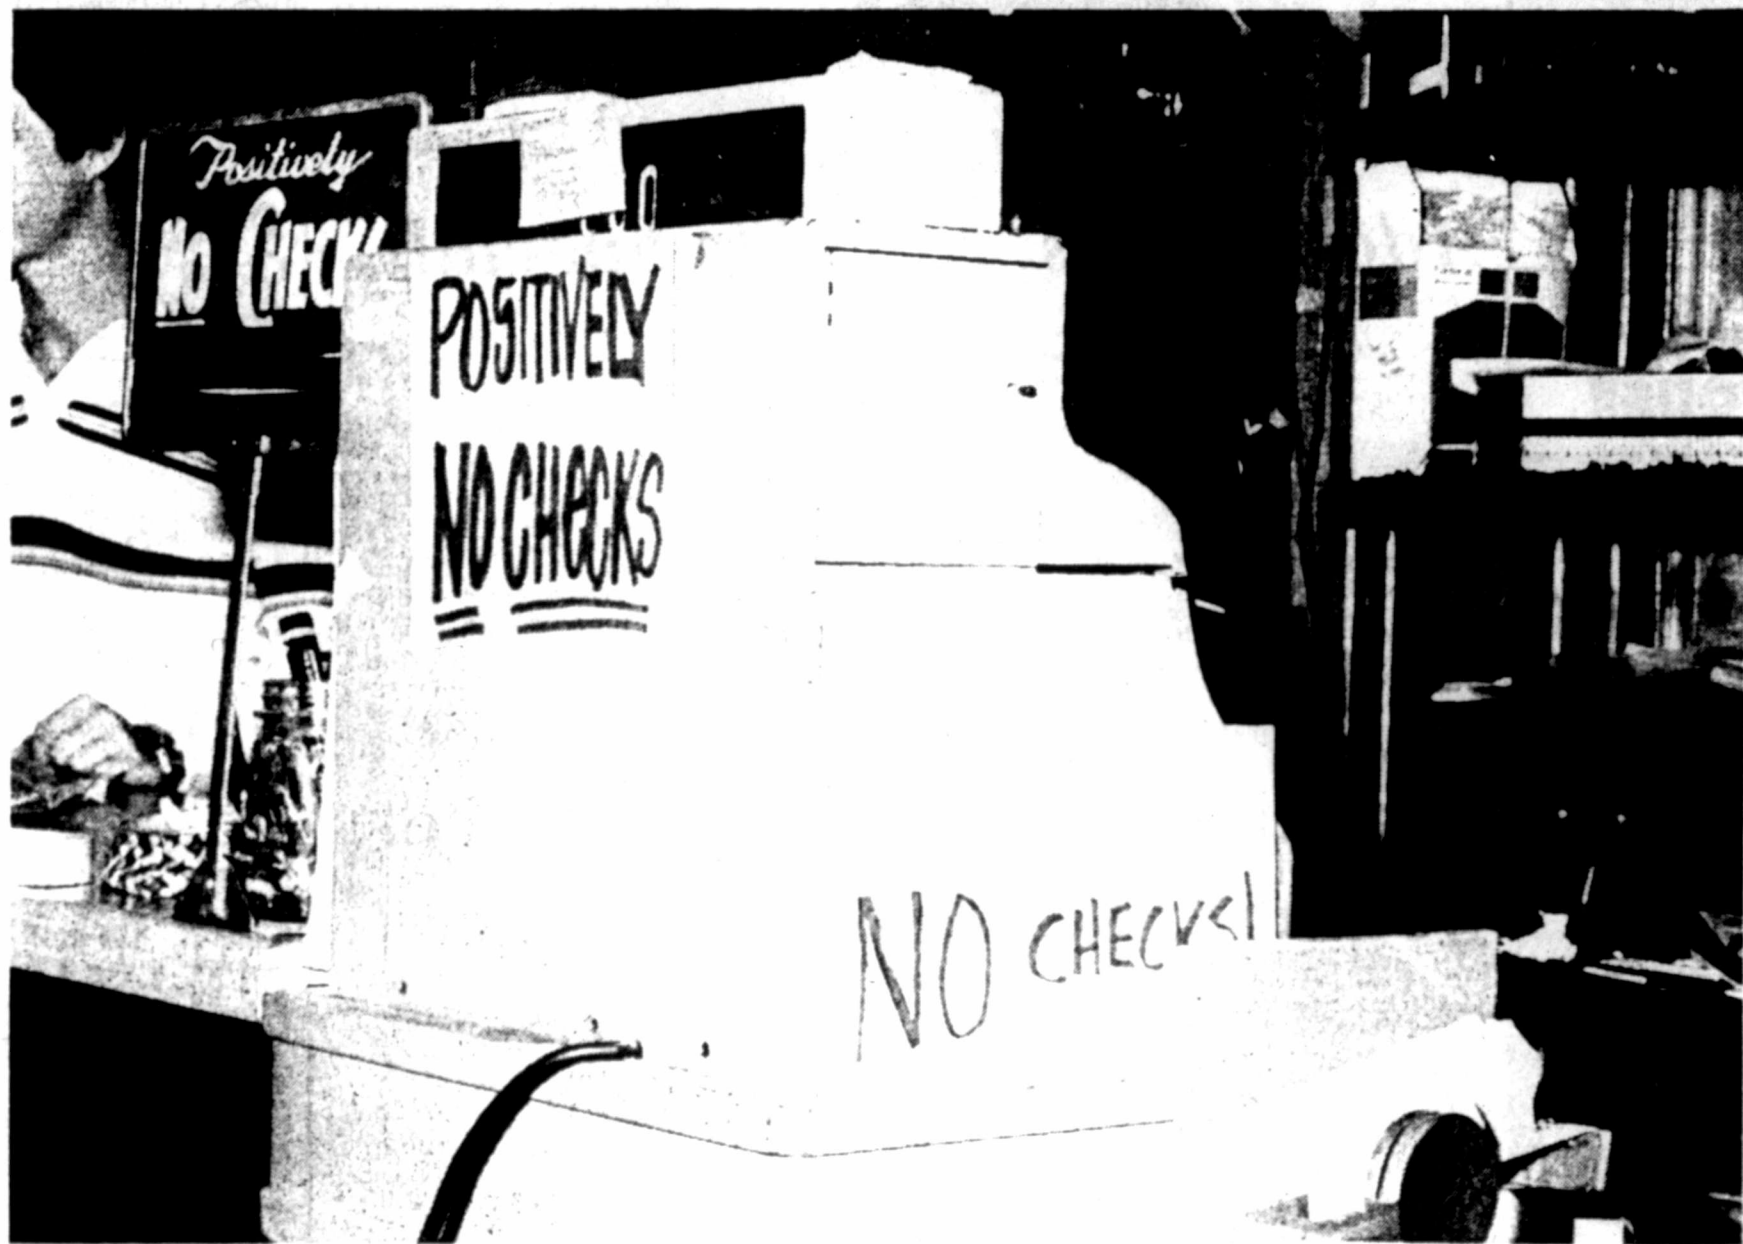

Ten KC-135 tankers are part of the SPF and would refuel the bombers enroute to their targets. Other planes in the force include four reconnaissance versions of the plane and two EC-135 flying command centers.

They would be supplemented with two sleek SR-71 spy planes that can fly above 80,000 feet at more than three times the speed of sound, and two older U-2s that would be sent ahead as scouts. Four to eight KC-135 tankers would refuel them.

To test its worth, SAC Conducted an SPF exercise in September at Whiteman Air Force Base near Kansas City, Mo., and scheduled a second one for May. The exercise, dubbed "Busy Prairie," was pronounced a success.

The bombers, designed for high altitude missions extending to 60,000 feet, practiced bombing runs at only 600 feet off the ground — an exercise designed to get the planes below radar defenses.

"Until general purpose forces can be deployed and employed in significant numbers, it (SPF) may be our only response," a SAC background paper said.

Vetral's Greets Season With Added Lines, Keynote Specials

Delightful evidence of spring and sure hint of summer these are the messages clearly conveyed by the exciting fashions now swelling the stock at Vetral's Fashions.
It is a fabulous offering that has been arranged at Vetral's Fashions (in September Place, 82nd Street at Indiana Avenue).
New lines have been added to the already-prestigious stock.
And look at this:
Limited-time specials have been posted on numerous selections!
There are Fem Form pant suits and skirts on special!
And special low price on Thermo Jac terry cloth spring shorts.
Even a special on large size Countess Custom apparel.

Ryan, and the Jeanne Durrell Sport-swear and dresses.
And the new Ultra Suede dresses from Vera Maxwell!
Also select from Collegian, Donovan Galvani, Rose of California, Sunny South, Jo Hardin, Nardis, Mr Mench, Herman Marcus, Jerrell and others.
"Individual Clothing for the Individual You" is the meaningful motto of Vetral's Fashions, since last summer located in its new elegant quarters after eight year service from its former home east of Lubbock near the Roosevelt School.
New, Added Lines
Be sure to check the new arrivals in the familiar quality lines at Vetral's together with such new labels as Separate Thoughts by Nardis, Dana Point, Ashley Sizes 4 to 20, with 34-44 Countess Custom, are stocked.

Specializing in sportswear and dresses, Vetral's Fashions also stocks purses and some other items.
Those long familiar with Vetral's recognize that new lines are added from time to time, with all merchandise carefully chosen to reflect Vetral's understanding of area preferences, and the recognition of affordable fashion.
Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Davis established the firm and have seen it progress from modest beginnings to the stature it now enjoys.
Vetral's Fashions still is a "family operation" in the main, with Mrs. Jimmy Davis or daughter Vicki always on hand, together with the handpicked capable staff.

Devoted To Fine Food Service, Southern Sea Adds Salad Bars

"Have you discovered the delicious salad bar now at Southern Sea Restaurants in Lubbock?"
"Have you discovered how Southern Sea seems to be headquarters for family dining, for the quick lunch, for the leisurely enjoyed noon or evening meal, for "carry out" and for catering services?"
Chances are that you have enjoyed one or all these Southern Sea specialties, with possible exception of the salad bar which is newest innovation of this customer-oriented, Lubbock-owned and Lubbock-operated business.
Yes, the salad bars are newest of the great considerations of Southern Sea. Many of the menu dinners include the salad bar, or one can order luncheons alone, any of the varied menu combinations, or even the salad bar alone.
The whole story is variety of quality food made available at reasonable prices in a service concept that has gained friends by the thousands for Southern Sea, downtown at 10th & Q, and at South Loop 289 and Indiana Avenue.

And have you discovered the Commander's Room, the striking new facility at the south Lubbock Southern Sea location, just west of the restaurant? This is a versatile facility for all types and sizes of meetings, parties or banquets, cozy for a small group or comfortable for a large meeting.
Southern Sea's "Cater Caddy" is another innovation for which the public has voiced appreciation.
"Cater Caddy" is the time-saving and money-saving answer for business luncheons, club luncheons, etc. Call the day before and Southern Sea will have your meals ready for you to pick up in the easily handled Cater Caddy that is so convenient that it can easily be carried and will fit on your car seat. Choose from the varied menu or any one of several delicious buffet-type meals. Imagine fried fish, barbecue, chicken, chicken fried steak, etc., and with Cater Caddy each person can order whatever is preferred. Simply call 799-2099.

All these benefits the Cater Caddy, Commander's Room, catering services, expanded menu, salad bar, etc. are not a change of policy or operation at Southern Sea, but rather are additions to the great service there.
Services are identical at the 10th & Q location or the Indiana Avenue facility. Southern Sea "appreciates and values you as a customer and friend, inviting you to utilize the facility most convenient to you, or to enjoy the special benefits of the Commander's Room or the catering services.
Owners Robert and Priscilla Sims have been prominent on the Lubbock restaurant scene for over six years as founders and owners-operators of their own establishments. They have served superbly, folks have learned.
"It adds to this: Once you eat with Southern Sea, you will discover the reason your friends and neighbors probably already have the Southern Sea habit!"

FOR ADDED FAMILY DINING PLEASURE — Salad bars have been added at both Southern Sea restaurants in Lubbock, augmenting the already-appreciated menu and services. Whether for a fast luncheon, leisurely meal, catering, meeting rooms and special meal preparation, or for carry-out services, Southern Sea excels. Priscilla Sims, who with husband Robert Sims, founded and still operate the restaurants, is shown here at the Indiana Avenue facility, with identical bar also at the Avenue Q restaurant.

UNIQUE, NEW, EFFICIENT — Roy Jenkins, heading the window and insulation division of Climate Control Insulation, is shown readying the Magnetite inside storm window manufacturing process, while Mrs. Jackie Romans, also of Lubbock, is pictured with one of the completed units that are meeting wide approval for their energy and cost savings as outlined in the accompanying report by their builder.

Climate Control Insulation Provides Energy-Saving Items

For saving money and energy, doesn't it make good sense to turn to the specialists at Climate Control Insulation Co. and Manufacturers, the firm that "sells and installs only energy-saving products?"
 Maybe the preference is the sensationally effective and attractive Magnetite inside storm windows.
 Then see Climate Control Insulation. Or perhaps the PermaCel insulation is the need.
 Or the Thermalite that is self-sticking, peel-off release film for application di-

Home-Owned Wood Metal House Services Include Can Shredding

With all its facilities and services related to scrap metal, the Wood Metal House at 1912 Ave. F not only is locally owned but is one of the oldest businesses of its type in the area.
 The services of Wood Metal House have been utilized by a lot of customers in Lubbock and region since its founding back over a quarter century ago!
 Founded by the late J.W.C. Wood, the firm still essentially is a family-operated enterprise, with Mrs. C. P. (June) Houston as owner and active operator, with her son, Harry Hays, as manager.
 Keeping in a leadership position in the trade is a way of business at Wood Metal House.
 Example of this is recognition that the firm has the only can shredder in Lubbock, the owner reports, and purchase of aluminum cans is one of its major and appreciated services. Presently, aluminum cans are bought at 30 cents per pound.
 Furthermore, customers can see their cans weighed and then run through the shredding machine in only a matter of minutes.
 Most all scrap metals are purchased at the convenient lot at 1912 Ave. F, easy to reach from anywhere.
Local Ownership
 Owner June Houston is a lifelong Lubbock resident and she takes pride in the local ownership of the firm, emphasizing that revenues are channeled back into the local economy.
 Wood Metal House is open 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and business is appreciated, just as it has been throughout the years, whether for purchase of scrap metals or for buying and shredding cans.
 "We are glad to be part of the community and economy here," Mrs. Houston always is glad to relate, "and we look forward to continued years of mutually beneficial dealings with the greatest group of customers anywhere. May we include you, took in this list!"
 Remember the location, 1912 Ave. F, phone 747-2441, in Lubbock. The firm is clearly marked on the west side of Avenue F, just south of 19th.

Rainbo, In Saluting Meals On Wheels, Invites Support Of Lubbock Program

"Thank goodness, there is a Meals on Wheels program in Lubbock!"

This is the sentiment voiced by hundreds served directly by the program here, and is the observation of so very, very many more residents of Lubbock who know of the good that is accomplished through Meals on Wheels.

Rainbo Baking Co. believes in this as one of the noteworthy community enterprises, taking this opportunity of saluting the organization, its leadership, its workers and its intent, at the same time informing on these pages how "you, too, can contribute in time or even in finances."

"We invite you and your neighbor to learn full details of the Lubbock Meals on Wheels with its local direct benefits, then lending your moral support or even more tangible assets to the furthering of this worthwhile program," is the sincere invitation from Harry Hoopes, president of Rainbo Baking Co. of Lubbock.

(Rainbo's support of Meals on Wheels is just another instance of a firm appreciating its community with its related opportunities and responsibilities, just a part of being a "good citizen.")

Decade of Service
Lubbock Meals on Wheels stems from 1971 beginnings as a community response to a human need.

Over the years, concerned volunteers have banded together five times weekly to deliver a hot noonday meal to the homebound elderly who could not prepare for themselves.

The nutritious meals are an essential part of the life-sustaining program, but the daily contact with the volunteer and the link that the program holds to other needed services add greatly to the visits.

Hundreds Involved
Today, Lubbock Meals on Wheels delivered meals to more than 270 clients, with the 21 routes manned by volunteers among the 140 who weekly pay their own expenses and devote their time in delivering the meals.

This group actually saves the government thousands of dollars in volunteer hours, it is pointed out.

They give of themselves in order that the ill, the handicapped and elderly homebound will not have to be institutionalized, with often related unhappiness for the client and involving tremendous expense for the federal government.

Without the love and concern shown through the dedication of the volunteers, a meals program would not be possible.

Although some federal money has been available for this program over the last few years, a large amount of voluntary dollars is required to keep the program going. Fees are paid by the client for the meals when they have ability to do so; otherwise the difference is picked up by churches, civic groups, businesses and individuals who support the program with these much-needed contributions.

Opportunity for Serving
However, an equal need and service is that of volunteer help in delivering. Full information about joining in this service is available by calling 765-8319, the Lubbock Meals on Wheels, Inc. headquarters where director Cindy Simpson is happy to discuss all opportunities and needs.

Lubbock Meals on Wheels has mushroomed since its founding. It is re-emphasized that as the program continues to grow, and as the cost of meals continues to rise, there is an ever-increasing need for volunteers and financial contributions. Only the concern and support of the community will determine if Lubbock Meals on Wheels will continue to meet the challenge of the above-explained service to the homebound elderly within the city.

"Rainbo invites you, too, to lend a very realistic assistance in the documented and very evident endeavors of Lubbock Meals on Wheels."

Cake Show

Special invitation is extended by The Cake Place for participation and attendance at the annual South Plains Regional Cake Show to be held this Thursday through Saturday (April 2, 3, 4) at South Plains Mall.

Entry blanks for competition may be secured at The Cake Place, 5423 Aberdeen, before noon Thursday, and divisions will include those for children, for the special education group, and for beginner, intermediate and advanced adult sections.

Ribbons and a special Best of Show award will be given in this show co-sponsored by The Cake Place and by the Friendly Frosters Cake Decorating Club.

For a revelation in cake decorating achievement, expertise, and variety, a visit to the show is heartily encouraged. It traditionally has enjoyed wide participation and interest of the viewing public.

Business & Industrial Review

STYLES, VALUES FOR YOUNG AT HEART — An exceptional selection of new-season footwear is presented at Holt's Shoes, 4519 50th St., as correctly indicated here by Mrs. Joe Haire. Specific and sizeable sale values are outlined in the story below.

Holt's Special-Situation Sale Enabling Selection, Savings

Rare opportunity is afforded in the Pre-Easter Shoe Sale beginning today at Holt's Shoes, 4519 50th St.

Marked at sale prices are selected styles from such appreciated lines as Revelation, Easy Street, Capri, Footwear Guild and others.

During this event one actually can save $5 to $8 on these new spring and summer shoes, from a very good style selection and range.

Holt's Shoes at this time has the largest selection of shoes ever presented at its Sunshine Square store.

Not only has Holt's bought extensively, but recent loss of lease at its Bray's location in South Plains Mall resulted in moving that shoe inventory to the 50th Street store to make the stock even larger.

For Young At Heart

For the young, for the young at heart, and for those with appreciation of special quality in women's shoes, the selection at Holt's traditionally holds understandable appeal. And the sale, commencing today, adds emphasis to the values there.

The pronounced accent on high-fashion shoes and the beautifully appointed quarters of Holt's in Sunshine Square make for further shopping enjoyment.

Long In City

Holt's Shoes has served for well over a decade in Lubbock. Customers of long-standing know that not only is the selection outstanding, but that expert fitting by experienced shoe fitters rounds out the picture of service, an extremely important consideration in footwear enjoyment.

Owners-operators Mr. and Mrs. Joe Haire and the fully qualified staff invite: "Won't you pay us a visit during our Pre-Easter Shoe Sale? Won't you honor us with a visit as proper entry into the new season? We know you will like what you find... a Holt's with exciting footwear, a Holt's with appreciation of each customer, and with a carefully guarded dedication and capacity for service."

Colonial Stone & Brick Eases Building, Landscape Programs

With the first hints of the warmth and sunshine of the outdoor season at hand, one gets the urge to improve the landscape, lay those flagstone walks, re-do the patio, etc. Right?

"Then, don't overlook this happy situation. There is a Lubbock firm that specializes in products and services seemingly designed just with you and your own projects in mind!"

It is Colonial Stone & Brick, a business that has rendered quite a service to the entire region since its founding back in 1962.

Colonial Stone & Brick, at 5804 Ave. H, phone 744-2777, is owned and operated by Jean Willingham, and it is really a big facility with a big stock, affording exceptional selection in building and landscaping supplies, any or all of which should fit into one's plans at this season.

A variety of building and landscaping supplies is stocked, and turnkey jobs can be provided in landscaping. (Though not offering complete building services, several masonry contractors work out of the firm.)

Even old customers may not realize the many products stocked right here in Lubbock at Colonial Stone & Brick. The following are listed as a representative list:

There is a full line of landscaping stone including crushed lava in red or black. There are several types of river pebbles, with others available by special order.

Plastics are stocked.

And there are moss boulders and lava boulders, with others available by special order.

Landscaping timbers are stocked, too, with a good supply of cross ties and rolled edge 24-gauge metal edging.

White and green crushed marble chips for landscaping and for cemetery plots and landscaping are on hand. Also stocked is white marble dust for cultured marble tops and athletic line markers.

There is a wide selection of building stones for the entire house, fireplaces, panels, etc., and flagstone for walks, patios and stepping stones.

Also stocked is exposed aggregate stepping stone in four sizes.

Rocksapes, Landscapes

"We do rocksapes of all sizes or can do a complete landscape with plants, or if you prefer, we will help you with the design and you may do the job yourself."

Two longtime employees, manager Don Johnston and foreman Ricky Nerios, are on the job and can be very helpful in selections of materials and in figuring amounts needed.

Colonial Stone & Brick usually has a good selection of used paving brick, commons and filler brick.

"Yes, we have a lightweight building stone — either the Utah lava in brown to black tones or the cork stone in beiges to rust tones."

Also available in the warehouse are heat forms, dampers, clean-out doors and ash dumps.

Used Fire Brick

We have a good supply of used fire brick.

"Did you realize so much was available, right at one single location, in Lubbock? Good selection, best in service and fair pricing continues to be the rule as is traditional at Colonial Stone & Brick, 5804 Ave. H, phone 744-2777. May we serve your needs as we have for so many others?"

VARIED STOCK, EXTENSIVE SERVICES — Colonial Stone & Brick staffmembers Ricky Nerios and Don Johnson are shown custom cutting stone for an area fireplace hearth, fashioning the slabs to fit the customer's drawing. Whether spraying calls for landscaping or building activities, Colonial Stone & Brick has a product and service sure to benefit.

LIMITED-TIME OPPORTUNITIES — Dorman Igo (right) president of Anderson Bros., West Texas' oldest and finest jewelers, joins with L. G. Hall, manager of the firm's South Plains Mall store, in calling attention to special diamond values arranged at this time. Check the report here for other details of the sale and of other Anderson benefits.

Anderson Bros. Diamond Sale Affording Banner Opportunity

The Annual Loose Diamond Sale at Anderson Bros. — you can't beat it! This annual sale is a tradition at Anderson Bros., but the current offering of both loose stones and mounted selections was never more fabulous. "The in-stock selections, combined with special consignment from our New York brokers, enables an opportunity not to be overlooked." Almost every price range and size is represented, with loose diamonds from 1/4 carat to 3 carat reduced a full 20 percent in price! This price advantage, without sacrifice of quality, is made possible by the consignment opportunity and fast turnover. The sale event continues through April 11 at the two Anderson Bros. stores in Lubbock (13th & J and in South Plains Mall). "All this again underscores the situation of Anderson Bros. giving you the best diamond deals on the South Plains. It is an ideal time to secure a new or larger diamond, to make an investment in pleasure." Yes, diamonds traditionally have appreciated in value while the owner wears and enjoys them, really a marked departure from so many other investments that cannot continually be seen, worn or personally enjoyed.

For Every Situation "It could well be the best opportunity that you have had to invest in the diamond you've always dreamed of owning. Maybe it is a magnificent solitaire, a man's handsome ring that says 'success', or exquisite ear studs, a fashionable stick pin for lapel or scarf, or tie. Anderson Bros. believes that it can satisfy one's every diamond preference, pointing out that numerous sizes and shapes are presented in the current sale. There are the already-mounted impressive size stones, as example, the pear shape and marquise stones and others, in multiple fancy cuts and fancy shapes. At this time it should be emphasized, too, that a diamond is the grandest lasting tribute you can give your favorite graduate, and this annual sale coincidentally comes at a time to be most advantageous in such a purchase. Though today's Anderson Bros. has an inventory far removed from the modest beginnings when its founder began his career in 1910, the basics have remained the same — quality, integrity, value and knowledge of the field. It is no accident that Anderson Bros. is West Texas' trusted name in diamonds! Founder J. C. Anderson actually dates his interest in the jewelry store business from back when as a child he watched a jeweler near his north Texas home, raply observing how the jeweler from his small repair desk and two show case office would take a watch apart, soak it in gasoline and brush each part, then put it back together! Then at age 13, Anderson and his family made the trek to Lamesa in a covered wagon, and one Christmas was given a $1 Ingersol watch that he later repaired as he had seen the earlier jeweler fix the customers' watches. Later, Anderson attended a watchmaking school for one year in St. Louis, returning to Lamesa at age 18 as "an expert watchmaker in his own mind." Numerous moves and business enterprises were involved in subsequent years before his move in 1923 to Lubbock, a move prompted by his belief Texas Tech would be located here. Lubbock, Texas Tech and Anderson Bros. have grown in extraordinary extent since that early date!

Abbott Trailer's Airstream Models Enable New Vacation Ease, Pleasure

"We at Abbott Trailer Sales like to prove that Building Dreams Is Our Business." "If dreaming of new vacation enjoyment this spring, summer and for seasons to come, then let Abbott show how it is possible, practical, and fun. Abbott Trailer Sales, at 408 Ave. Q, phone 763-4747, has 23 years experience in trailer sales and service, providing Airstream — for the person who insists on a trailer that is lightweight, durable and trouble-free. This year is a special one in the history of Airstream, it is pointed out, this year commemorates 50 years of "building the world's finest recreation vehicles. Since Airstream was founded in 1931, it has been an industry leader in areas of quality, resale value and design; and continues to be a leader in 1981!" Flexibility of Choice "Whatever your preference in an Airstream — motor home or trailer, whatever floor plan or size, we correctly point out that there's an Airstream for everyone!" "If you're ready to retire, but not ready for the rocking chair, there is an Airstream for you!" "And whether you've got two kids or four, or you are just one happy 'free wheeler' bent on heading for the open road, there's an Airstream for you!" "View and select from the all-new models of shiny silver and lightweight, aerodynamic, energy-efficient Airstream construction — a sensibly-priced Airstream, sized in new lengths for every type of family and lifestyle." Airstream offers a valued choice — of loading up with all the fancy frills, or sticking to basics. In either instance or in between, it is a travel trailer that travels "like a stream of air" — a high performer custom tailored to the needs of the owner. "For more ways to get more out of life," the Abbott selection right here in Lubbock can be quite a revelation — an introduction to the delightful advantages of owning something special, of experiencing new travel and vacation convenience, of fighting boredom or exorbitant travel expense! Inspection Invited "With the price of fuel going up and the fuel supply in question, Airstream is the unit to go with. Pages could be written on the aerodynamic construction, the test after test that has proved Airstream's worth, the many standard features of every unit, etc., but it would take a book! The best idea is to come to Abbott Trailer Sales at 408 Q and see for yourself, besides, we want to visit with you as new and old friends alike. We pride in the fact that we at Abbott Trailer Sales have served so many of you in the two decades past, and we look forward to continuing as your dream builder!"

South Park Inn's Capabilities, Service, Facilities Outstanding

The invitation is simple, direct and meaningful. "When planning your next meeting, come to the professionals... South Park Inn." Why settle for less than the multiple benefits of Lubbock's largest hotel facility for conventions, meetings and banquets? South Park Inn director of sales, Carol Mohler, aptly points out that there are 207 rooms in South Park Inn, all with two queen-size beds, four executive suites for entertaining or for VIPs, four junior executive suites, and five meeting rooms to accommodate groups from 10 to 400. There is the beautiful enclosed atrium, too, with adaptability to a variety of uses including meetings or banquets for up to 1,000 persons, great for receptions, dances, etc. There is room for approximately 50 exhibits, with booths for conventions. "Shouldn't your next convention or meeting be at South Park Inn, Loop 289 and Indiana in Lubbock, phone 797-3241?" Services To Enjoy There is the elegant Park Place Restaurant, possibly best known for its fine Sunday buffet but always affording great food; and the South Park Lounge is equally popular and appreciated. "As an added service to overnight guests at South Park Inn, a 'Manager's Cocktail Party' is arranged from 5:15 p.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays, featuring complimentary drinks for all our hotel guests." South Park Inn is very convenient to South Plains Mall and to the rapidly-expanding south Lubbock business district. "For dining treat, for a night out, for every assistance and facility in impending conventions and other meetings, receptions, etc., we think South Park Inn should enter the picture; you deserve no less! For any information regarding services, please feel free to call Carol Mohler, director of sales, phone 797-3241, at earliest convenience. We know we can help."

Business & Industrial Review

AT WHITE RIVER RETREAT — Random views here hint of the beautiful facilities and capable direction of the White River Retreat, east of Lubbock, dedicated to the treatment of alcohol and/or mind changing drugs. Judy Rhoades and Douglas Wood, director and assistant administrator respectively, are pictured at the White River Lake location.

White River Retreat Directing Patients To New Way Of Living

"What is the White River Retreat?"
 "Does this center have a program or a service that could be of benefit to friends or family, in my own situation?"
 "The White River Retreat wants you to have the complete answers to the above; White River Retreat is glad to supply all pertinent information, and from time to time it utilizes these columns of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal to briefly outline its functions and its goals."
 "To be comfortable sober" is a key aim in the services of the White River Retreat dedicated to the treatment of alcohol and/or mind-changing drugs.
 Actually, the chief focus of the staff and entire program of White River Retreat is that of offering the patient a new way of living, thinking and feeling — a release from involvement with and addiction to all mind-changing chemicals.
 White River Retreat, looking out onto White River Lake from the north, is a private enterprise, area-owned and directed. Judy Rhoades is co-owner, secretary-treasurer and director of the retreat. F.E. Seale, M.D., is president. Dale Rhoades, M.D., is medical director; and the board of directors includes Judy Rhoades, Seale, Ruth Breen, Kenneth Gray and Jim Kimmel.
 Located southeast of Crosbyton and east of Lubbock, the mailing address of the Retreat is Star Route 2, Spur, Texas 79370, with telephone (806) 263-4334.

 Judy Rhoades relates that she saw a need for such a center in the West Texas area, and this keen interest led to its establishment in August of last year. Response and acceptance has been most noteworthy. With 30 patients easily accommodated at this time, patronage is invited from the local area or from anywhere. An expansion program, including added buildings, will enable even greater service. Douglas Wood is assistant administrator, and both he and Judy are thoroughly experienced in the in-patient treatment programs and after-care for those who desire this attention.
 Accredited with the Texas Commission on Alcoholism, the White River Retreat welcomes admission of men, women or young people of any age who require any degree of treatment including preventative attention.
 Patients are accepted for a minimum of 28 days with longer terms as to individual needs, for the treatment of alcoholism and other drug dependencies. Therapy includes in-depth study and use of nationally known successful programs for drug-free living.
 Facilities are exceptional at the White River Retreat where three separate buildings are utilized. A central section includes a spacious dining and meeting area, glass-enclosed to heighten the beauty of West Texas sunsets on the lake. A large native rock wood-burning fireplace adds to the warmth and friendliness of the daily and nightly meetings held there.

 Comfortable living quarters are provided for sleeping, resting and relaxation. Excellent and nutritionally nourishing meals are served three times daily.
 Patients participate two nights weekly in an outside Alcoholics Anonymous meeting at nearby communities.
 All meetings and discussion groups at the Retreat are open to family members, close friends and other selected visitors. Close cooperation is recognized as being at the very heart of continuing recovery to health and future well-being for all concerned.
 Personal appointments or admission to the Retreat may be made by calling in advance.
 "If the White River Retreat can serve you, a family member or other person of your knowledge and interest, please feel free to get full details of the program and intense interest of staff, ownership and directors of the White River Retreat, located at White River Lake, between Crosbyton and Spur."

Cowling's Furniture Begins Annual Spring Sale Involving All Departments

"Have you been having symptoms of spring fever? If so, let Cowling's Furniture help lighten up your life... and your home!"
 Cowling's, at 1210 Ave. Q, is beginning its Spring Sale today, offering great savings on items throughout the store.
 Cowling's wants to make it easy for you to give your home decor a lift by adding new sofas and chairs and lovely new occasional table groups... as well as many other items, at savings up to 50 percent on many items!
Adventures in Art
 "While you are at Cowling's, plan to spend a little extra time browsing in the art collection there. It is a beautiful array of original oil paintings by renowned artists from all over Europe as well as the United States that is shown at Cowling's. You also will find a great collection of limited edition prints and other beautiful decorator art."
 There are many lovely lamps and accessory items in brass and porcelain and Satsuma wear available, as well as some beautiful decorator trees to enhance one's decorating theme.
 Cowling's has one of its "best ever" selections of bedroom and dining room groups, together with dinette sets in chrome and formica, glass and rattan, wood sets and wood with formica tops.
 Cowling's also can fill your needs with beautiful Barcolounger recliners with covers from gorgeous decorator fabrics to fit into your special decor.

Savings Re-emphasized
 "You can't go wrong in saving up to 50 percent during Cowling's Spring Sale!"
 "It is one of our ways of conveying the message to our growing list of friends and customers, throughout the area, that we appreciate you and want to continue to be your kind of store."
 "I believe our selection at this time is the best and most beautiful yet," Ken Cowling emphasizes.
 Cowling's Furniture, at 1210 Ave. Q (Broadway at Q), has stocked extremely heavily this year, and a discriminating but full stock is on hand at this time throughout the store.
 Cowling's prides in "what is right and what is quality" for every furniture need.
 Opening in late 1975, Cowling's Furniture has become recognized as a good firm, with good merchandise, with integrity and with a quality-savings combo to be appreciated.
 With so much included in its stock, it is impossible to enumerate all.
Leather, Suede Chairs
 However, it should be pointed out that the merchandise includes the best selection yet offered in lamps, including brass; and there are the suede wingback and leather club chairs on the floor, with even more arriving! Wall, mantle and grandfather clocks are on hand, together with a very good selection of sofas, groupings for every room of the home, credenzas, consoles, Beautyrest bedding, and more.

 Everything seems to say that "we at Cowling's want you to have the best without strain on the budget; we like you and want to serve you accordingly."
 Individual pieces and groupings for every room of the home are stocked.
 Modest on the outside, the big store is most impressive within; and entry there is actually into a whole new world of quality furniture at prices to please.
Locally Owned
 Cowling's Furniture is family owned and operated, with family members doing their best to bring your own family the very finest home furnishings to fit your budget.
 Ken Cowling and wife, Billie, and sons Byron and Ken, Jr., want to know you and help you in your furniture situation in every season and every year.
 Financing is available.

GARY'S BRAND

Gary's Frozen Foods Products Available In Regional Stores

"Have you selected from the great family of Gary's Frozen Foods products at your favorite grocery or supermarket? Demand for the Gary's barbecue and other fine meat products resulted in modernization and expansion, with residents throughout a multi-state area now enabled the eating enjoyment that once was the privilege of only the few that lived near to Gary's operation! Now, when you want the Gary's brand of goodness, check with your favorite grocer! It is just that simple. Though purchasing of these products now involves going to the food store of one's preference instead of a special trip to Gary's, it is pointed out that all the quality items bearing the Gary's label still are prepared in the large, functional-efficient quarters occupied by the firm in south Lubbock. Gary heads a very able staff but still personally supervises the preparation of the several products with their "just heat to eat" convenience. Sandy Sanders is office manager, and Jack Conner is operations manager. Gary's chunk style Bar-B-Que Delight is one of the very, very popular offerings. With the Delight, sandwiches never had it so good! And what student does not know the goodness of Gary's Super Dogs or Corn Dogs? No-fat, no-gristle chili also is among the great family of in-demand Gary's Frozen Foods items. All in all, the invitation is this: Look for the Gary's Frozen Foods products, with their distinctive new packaging, now likely in your favorite supermarket or grocery. (Note the new barbecue brisket tray that is ready to place in microwave or conventional oven.)"

Furniture Restoration, Refinishing, Repair Included In Expanded Service

"Perhaps you have discovered that the antique collector has a new friend at Finish-Off Stripping Center, 1922 Ave. E. Don McBrayer, recently becoming associated with the firm, is now directing expansion of services at Finish-Off to include complete furniture restoration, repair and refinishing. And the response has been exceptional. McBrayer brings 20 years experience in professional refinishing to the business. He is the fifth generation to have followed in the family piano refinishing business. He explains that he began his involvement in furniture renovation as a youngster working alongside family members refinishing pianos. A 1929 picture is the earliest photograph of the family that I have. It shows McBrayer Brothers painted on a 1925 Model-A and Model-T trucks used for the business, and grandpa, uncles and great uncles standing beside them. That picture was taken in Tulia, he pointed out. McBrayer has the 80-year family tradition behind his personal experience. With his early introduction into refinishing work, McBrayer branched out into other related areas. His extensive experience includes designing, building and training personnel for commercial workshops. Besides completely rebuilding pianos, he worked fashioning the wooden frames for custom-designed harps commissioned worldwide. From such a diverse background, McBrayer gained varied experience and knowledge enabling him to tackle even the most unusual furniture renovation jobs. He is familiar with foreign as well as domestic finishes. He specializes in the difficult-to-achieve lacquer finishes. The various skills demanded by the numerous types of renovation have familiarized him with a broad scope of equipment, tools, materials and techniques. He now brings his expertise to Finish-Off Stripping Center to offer a unique opportunity for Lubbockites and area residents to obtain completely professional and knowledgeable furniture restoration. The professional services provided through Finish-Off are particularly important to preserve the full value and beauty of any antique piece. An antique enthusiast himself, McBrayer takes pride in the antiques he has collected during his travels. His quality craftsmanship and appreciation for antiques assures his restoration work will enhance and protect their integrity. He points out that when necessary, any rebuilding, replacement, repairing and even duplicating hand-carved details will be executed with greatest care. "Let Us Help" "If you have an article given up as hopeless because of fire damage, broken or missing pieces, or whatever — call 747-3938 to consult with Don and get his suggestions. Or, bring your items by Finish-Off at 1922 Ave. E. Pick up and delivery are available. Regular shop hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, or you may call and arrange a time for your convenience. The same fine services offered the do-it-yourselfer are still available at Finish-Off where their unique stripping process safely and thoroughly prepares almost any surface for refinishing."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I don't understand the reports of "odd-lot" transactions on the New York Stock Exchange and other stock exchanges. It seems to me that every purchase of stock by one person involves the sale of stock by someone else.

But the odd-lot purchase and sale figures never match. For example, on a recent day, odd-lot purchases were 165,674 and odd-lot sales were 297,825. Shouldn't the two numbers be equal?

A. No, because of the way odd-lot transactions are handled.

Most trading in stocks is done in "round lots" of 100 shares. If you buy 100 shares of XYZ stock, some other member of the investing public sells those 100 shares.

But, if you buy anywhere from one to 99 shares of XYZ, you don't buy from some other public investor. You buy from a brokerage firm, which fills your odd-lot order out of an inventory of stocks it has on hand.

When you sell an odd-lot, a brokerage firm buys from you and takes the shares you sell into its inventory.

The firm selling the odd-lot to you or buying the odd-lot from you might be the brokerage house with which you placed the order. Or, it might be the "specialist" firm, making a market in XYZ on the trading floor of the stock exchange.

The daily odd-lot transaction reports give the total number of shares bought and sold in odd lots by the public. It would be most unusual for odd-lot purchases and sales to be equal on any given day.

CAREERS

By JOYCE LAIN KENNEDY

Dear Joyce: I'm a mature woman anxious for the independence of opening my own health food store. Advice?

— T.M., Fairview, N.J.

Beneath the sugar-coated notion of owning one's own business lies a bitter pill for many, a hearty meal for a few.

Starting a business requires not only adequate financing to carry you through the opening days, but a knowledge of management techniques that include buying, selling and advertising.

With scant background in these fields, a Bethesda, Md., high school counselor and a friend opened a health food store four years ago on a $30,000 shoestring in an area offering little foot traffic.

The ex-counselor says it's been impossible to compete with supermarkets that sell eggs and milk for what she pays wholesale. The only parking lot near the store has closed and sales have taken a nosedive. Her business won't survive another month, she says.

That's the down, here's the up.

During the Great Depression, Virgil Groff of Tacoma, Wash., studied business administration in college and acquired a background in retail advertising. In 1940, "Vitamin Virg," as he's known today, and his wife Viola borrowed $7,500 from his father to buy a health food store. As the population shifted, Groff closed his original store and opened two others in large suburban malls and today enjoys a thriving business.

Groff's success factors have been consistent for 40 years. He hires people who know about and believe in the products, and he spends 3 percent of his gross sales on advertising.

"If you don't want to advertise your business, then advertise it for sale," advises Vitamin Virg. A mix of media — newspapers, television and radio — keeps his business booming.

More Groff tips: Bend with the trends — for instance, relocate if necessary; Remodel; Computerize. He gives trading stamps to customers on request and always distributes free nutrition magazines with each purchase.

Other tips on running this business are found in a 1976 edition of "Health Food Stores," a business profile published by the Small Business Reporter, Bank of America, P.O. Box 37000 Dept. 3401, San Francisco, Calif. 94137. By mail, a copy costs $2.

If you proceed, heed the words of a poor poet but a savvy promoter, Vitamin Virg: "He who whispers down the well about the goods he has to sell, never will make the dollars as he who gets upon the roof and hollers."

Send career questions to Joyce Lain Kennedy at this newspaper. Sorry, the volume of mail makes it impossible to send personal replies.

Leading Texas Newsmen Dies

EL PASO (AP) — Dorrance D. Roderick, civic leader, philanthropist and pioneer journalist in the Southwest, died Saturday in El Paso's Providence Memorial Hospital after a long illness. He was 80.

Roderick was former publisher of the El Paso Times and former president of Newspaper Printing Corp.

Survivors include his wife, Olga Burnett Roderick of El Paso; his daughter, Frances Bagwell of El Paso; nine grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren. Funeral plans were pending Sunday.

Roderick's journalism career, which spanned more than 50 years, included founding several area radio stations and El Paso's first television station.

After a stint as a $30-a-week Associated Press reporter in Oklahoma, Roderick moved to Texas, where he published The Plains Journal, The Lubbock Evening Journal and the The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal before coming to El Paso.

Roderick became president of the El Paso Herald and The Times in late 1928, just eight days before his 28th birthday.

Scipps-Howard, publishers of his competition, The Post, purchased The Herald in 1931.

have opened a Keogh retirement plan. I know I can put 15 percent of my self-employed income into the Keogh plan — tax-free.

But I don't know which line on my Form 1040, federal income tax return, to use to multiply by 15 percent to arrive at my Keogh plan contribution. Which line?

A. Assuming you're not a farmer, use line 13 on your Form 1040 — on which you report your business income. You'll also have to attach a Schedule C to your tax return, giving the details of your business income.

If you're a farmer, you use Form 1040's line 19 — on which you report farm income. And you attach a Schedule F, detailing your farm income.

Then list your Keogh contribution on line 26 of your Form 1040 as an adjustment to income and you won't pay income tax on 15 percent of your self-employed income.

To head off a batch of letters, people with individual retirement accounts (IRAs) use Form 1040's line 8 — on which they list "wages, salaries, tips, etc." — to figure the 15 percent they can tuck tax-free money into retirement plans each year.

Q. Many banks are now charging "service" fees of $15 to $25 a year for use of Visa and Master-Charge cards. We always pay our credit card charges on time. So, we never have to pay finance charges.

How about the new annual credit card "service" fee. Can that be taken as an itemized deduction, when we file our income tax return?

A. The answer from the Internal Revenue Service is "no" — unless you are using your charge card for business purposes. If the latter is the case, you can take the fee as a business expense. But, if you're using the "plastic money" for non-business purposes, you can't deduct that service charge.

All finance charges on unpaid balances and advances on credit cards — whether for business or personal reasons — are deductible as interest expenses.

Q. I have an interest-checking — so-called "NOW" — account. My bank charges $2.50 each month, if my balance drops below $500. Can I take those monthly charges as an itemized deduction on my income tax return?

A. The IRS passes on the word that it hasn't ruled on that yet. So, if your bank hits you with a $2.50 monthly charge, you should feel safe taking the $30 annual total as an itemized deduction — until the revenue rules otherwise.

Meanwhile, why don't you shop around for banks or savings and loan associations offering NOW accounts with lower minimum balances.

Lioness Carrying Tiger Embryo Through Implant

KINGS ISLAND, Ohio (AP) — Brenda the lioness is due to give birth in June — to a tiger cub.

She's acting as surrogate mother in an embryo-implant breeding experiment at Wild Animal Safari here that could help preserve endangered species, officials said.

The 350-pound lioness is successfully carrying a tiger embryo that was surgically removed last month from Mora, a female tiger, the Kings Island family entertainment center announced Saturday.

While embryo transplants have been performed among various breeds of cattle, researchers here believe the inter-species transfer of embryos may be a first.

"Whether we get a baby tiger or not in June, the important thing is the scientific data we've developed to preserve endangered species," said Robert Reece, director of the Wild Animal Safari at Kings Island.

The surrogate-mother project began last fall as a cooperative venture involving Reece, the Cincinnati Zoo, the Knoxville, Tenn., Zoo and the University of Cincinnati Medical Center, which did the research and provided the surgical team.

The safari center wanted its Bengal tiger Mora to breed, but the 7-year-old tiger has a low productive potential. Experts feared she could not carry offspring through pregnancy. To further complicate matters, the male tiger at Kings Island was sterile.

"This is a problem with many animals in zoos. Although many reproduce, they are inbred and not like animals in the wild," Reece said.

Experts removed semen from a male tiger in Knoxville, Tenn., and fertilized Mora surgically. Once the embryo developed, it was surgically removed and implanted in the lioness on Feb. 27, Reece said.

"We are certain now that Brenda is carrying it," he said.

Dr. George Reed, Kings Island veterinarian, performed the surgery with help from Dr. Lynn Kramer of the Cincinnati Zoo. Reproduction physiologists Drs. Betsy Dresser and Paul Russell assisted and developed the procedures for transferring the embryo, Reece said.

The lioness was chosen as surrogate mother because lions have a history of good reproduction in captivity. Tigers normally do well but other species like leopards have not bred well in captivity, Reece said.

Beside the inter-species transfer, the procedure also involved other relatively new techniques, such as super-ovulating the tiger through hormone therapy to boost chances of conception, Reece said.

"The important thing is we have developed the procedures. If it was a matter of simply getting a baby tiger, we would have waited until June to see what we had and then announce it," Reece said.

"The project is ongoing and we're looking at other species as well," he added.

At the Memphis Zoo, a half-dozen dairy farm cows are being used this spring as surrogate mothers in an experiment to help save exotic or endangered breeds of cattle that are native to Africa and India.

Experts there plan to breed the exotic cattle, flush out the embryo and transfer it to a dairy cow that will carry the pregnancy to term.

The project is designed to repopulate breeds known as the Ankoli, a cross between the Egyptian longhorn and wild African cattle, and the Gower, native to India and the largest wild cattle breed.

A Tribute To Area Physicians

Monday, March 30 is Doctor's Day

On Doctor's Day, physicians are traditionally honored with a red carnation. The day and the flower both have meaning. Doctor's Day has been designated to honor physicians nationwide. On that date, March 30, in 1842 ether was administered as an anesthetic agent in a surgical operation thereby freeing mankind from pain and suffering during surgery. The red carnation was adopted because its history is closely woven in medical science. Its spicy scent is the symbol of man's preservation in both body and spirit. The quality of a community's physicians determines to a great extent the quality of life enjoyed by its people. We in the Lubbock area enjoy an enviable quality of life.

We publicly wish to salute our physicians and express our appreciation for their part in helping to provide that quality of life.

INDIANA, NORTH CAROLINA BATTLE FOR NCAA CROWN

It's 'D-Day' For Hoosiers, Tar Heels

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Call it "D-Day" — the tenacious man-to-man defense of Indiana Coach Bobby Knight vs. the multiple zone, or "junk," defenses of North Carolina Coach Dean Smith.

Though both eschew talk of a confrontation between two of the nation's finest college basketball coaches, it is impos-ible to avoid characterizing Monday night's NCAA championship game as anything else.

In his 10 years at Indiana, Knight has changed the character of Big Ten Conference basketball from a high-scoring, wide-open brand of play to one of the lowest scoring leagues in the country. He has done it with a man-to-man defense exclusively, and his theory of teaching it has been repetition and simplicity.

"My two all-time favorite people are Hank Iba and Pete Newell," Knight said. "If I ever played a zone defense, they'd disown me, so I'll hang onto them as friends."

"All three of us feel that in our approach to the game, we'd rather work with one defense, the man-to-man, and bend and mold that rather than play with a lot of different defenses."

Knight credits the legendary Iba, the former coach at Oklahoma State, and Newell, a former University of San Francisco coach now in the front office of the Golden State Warriors, with helping him create the defense that made Indiana a national power.

"We like to play our man-to-man best," Smith said, explaining his theory, "but then we want to be able to throw out some junk. It's probably true that you can't play each defense as well when you play so many, but it also takes more preparation to play us."

Smith said he would show Indiana his entire array of defensive tactics, "our scramble defense, the point defense — we'll use them all."

At the same time, he expected to see Indiana use variations on the man-to-man. "In a sense, they do play a type of zone," Smith said. "For instance, they may elect not to play someone very closely. I don't know how they intend to match up, but they might use something like a triangle and two."

Knight spent the first part of his Sunday news conference talking about a Saturday night incident with a Louisiana State University fan at his hotel, but eventually he got around to basketball.

Stories appeared in the Sunday editions of both Philadelphia newspapers that Knight had shoved an LSU fan into a garbage can at his hotel in nearby Cherry Hill, N.J. Knight said the fan had congratulated him for Saturday's 67-49 victory over Louisiana State in the tournament semifinals.

"In the days leading up to the game, LSU fans kept calling my players 'Tiger bait,'" Knight said, referring to LSU's nickname. "I said to this man, 'Well, we weren't Tiger bait today.'"

Knight said the man then hollered an obscenity at him several times, "and I walked over to him — I walked rather swiftly, I guess you'd say. He said he had congratulated me, and I had been sarcastic. I told him I had just thrown back at him something my kids had been getting for days. The next time he called me ... I shoved him into the garbage can."

Knight quickly closed the subject and was asked if he had decided how he would match his team against sixth-ranked North Carolina, 29-7, particularly against Tar Heels forward Al Wood, who

A Trash Can Slam

TAKE A GOOD LOOK at the picture on your immediate left. At the bottom of the photo you see Bobby Knight, beleaguered expression on his face. Around him are crowding four men who seem to have more than one thing in common.

They all appear overweight, all are wearing glasses (spectacles as us wearers like to refer to them), all hold notepads, display stern expressions and share a mutual interest: Bobby Knight. They're sportswriters and, yes Virginia, all of this breed tend to walk on the chubby side of life and are blind. Call it a sort of badge, if you will. An earmark of the profession.

Now let's fill in the blanks and give this photo a conversation.

"Well, Bobby boy," says the portly gent with the mustache on the far left, "you've gone and done it now. You just had to shove that guy into the trash — didn't you, hotshot?"

"Tsk, tsk," chides the scribe with the intent expression next to Mr. Mustache. "What is it with you Coach, an obsession, compulsion or some kind of disease?"

The third writer looks at Knight in disgust. "This isn't Puerto Rico, Mr Knight. You can't just leave the island, you know."

Finally the young guy on the right asks inquisitively, "but was it an emotionally rewarding experience? That's all that really matters."

And Bobby just shakes his head. "Come on guys, so I slam-dunked an LSU fan into a trash can. Give me a break. I got excited."

ADD ANOTHER CHAPTER TO the never-ending saga of Bobby Knight — a brilliant coach who sometimes seems as if he's on a never-ending search and destroy mission with trouble. If you hadn't heard or read by now, Bobby shoved an LSU fan into a trash can during a hotel lobby incident Saturday night following Indiana's convincing win over the Tigers in the NCAA Tournament semi-finals.

Remember Bobby Knight, the guy who went fist-city with a Puerto Rico policeman during the Pan American games in 1979. Remember the Indiana coach who stirred up trouble by getting in a fight with an Indiana student a few years back, the same guy who carries on a never-ending war with the media. Well, he's back at it.

Although the above conversation never actually happened, it's likely that something similar did occur during a Sunday morning press conference in Philadelphia. Knight admitted that he exchanged words with an LSU fan (who'd opened the conversation by congratulating him on the victory), and ending the discussion by leaving the Tiger fan in a trash can.

And so the story goes. . . it brings to mind the Billy Martin saga that never ends, just keeps repeating itself in different cities. Knight, it seems, can't stand a good thing.

In the past he'd been raked over the coals by the media, always painting an ogre-like picture of the fiery coach. But this year, it seemed, Bobby had gotten his due respect. Sports Illustrated, and Inside Sports both ran complimentary cover stories about "the genius of Bobby Knight" earlier this year.

And when he somehow turned his at one point 7-6 Hoosiers into a member of the NCAA Final Four, the press got even gushier. From Philadelphia flowed nothing but praise for Bobby Knight. "Maybe we've been too harsh on Bobby," was the gist of most of the ink.

THEN CAME SATURDAY'S TRASH can jam. A guy says "congratulations coach," and Knight retorts, "I guess we weren't Tiger-bait this time."

A simple nod from Knight and nothing would've happened. Oh, it's easy to see how the coach could've been raked by all the trash being talked by LSU fans, but that's a part of the sport. It's all those loud-mouth fans who traveled all the way to Philadelphia who are footing the bill for this little shing-dig called the NCAA Final Four.

Coaches live with that kind of talk. They hear it all the time. (Sometime let me tell you about Arkansas Razorback fans. Those folks could drive the Pope to drink).

"He's a bully, always having to put people down," a mid-western coach is quoted as saying of Knight in that Sports Illustrated article. "Someday, I'm afraid, he's going to be a sad old man."

"He'll get away with the bullying and the vulgarity only so long as he wins," said an eastern coach. "But the shame is, he's so smart, and he's so faithful to his principles, so why can't he understand that other people have principles too?"

But such talk rolls off Knight's back — apparently — like so much water.

"I don't think people understand what I can or can't do," he told SI writer Frank Deford. "They're not cognizant of my situation and what I know about myself. I always know what I'm doing."

So that, I guess, should explain this latest incident. Bobby Knight knew what he wanted to do and he did it.

Now we can get on to basketball. And Knight goes about that business in the same fashion he disposes of hecklers — very efficiently.

So why should Knight give a hoot about the fat guys peering over his shoulder. He's in the NCAA championship game and all they can do is write about it.

Rogers Wins Heritage Classic By Single Stroke

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Bill Rogers, under pressure from four men, grimly clinging to a one-shot lead over the last four holes and, with a closing, one-under-par 70, won the Sea Pines-Heritage Classic Sunday.

Rogers, the leader throughout the final round, claimed only the second PGA Tour title of his seven-year career with a 278 total, six shots under par on the 6,650-yard Harbour Town Golf Links, a very difficult layout Rogers calls his favorite in the world.

A single shot back at 279 were Hale Irwin, Gil Morgan, Craig Stadler and Australian veteran Bruce Devlin.

Devlin and Stadler closed with 67's in the mild, partly-cloudy weather. Morgan and Irwin, playing with Rogers in the final threesome, each shot a 68.

Tom Weiskopf, needing a victory to gain his way into the Masters two weeks away, was next at 282, 2-under par. He had a closing 70.

Ray Floyd, who had a two-tournament winning streak coming into this prestigious event, couldn't get anything going. He matched par 71 on the picturesque course that was hacked out of a low-country swamp and was at 284.

Tom Watson, who has yet to win this season, shot a 70 and finished with a 287. Defending champion Doug Tewell was far, far back at 75-292.

Rogers won $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000.

But the 6-foot, 145-pounder has won big purses before, notably in Japan and in the World Match Play in England.

American Tour victories, however, have been an elusive thing for the 29-year-old who is recognized by his peers, the other tourists, as one of the game's more consistent, accurate players. His only previous triumph had come in the 1978 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Beyond that, his career had been a frustrating series of unsuccessful challenges. He won money consistently, some $490,000 over the last three years, and set a record of $230,000 without winning a title in 1979.

Strangely, the breakthrough to his second American title came on the heels of probably the worst slump of his career. He'd missed the cut in five of his seven previous starts and hadn't finished higher than 40th since the second week of the season.

And it didn't come easily. Rogers started the final round with a 3-shot lead and built it to five at the turn.

Then he started having problems, making bogey on the 10th and 11th. And when Irwin birdied the 12th, the lead had dwindled to two.

There was a gasp from the gallery when Rogers' tee shot on the par-three 14th caught the deep pot bunker — so deep it has a stepladder in it — that has caused such trauma in this event. It's from that bunker that Rik Massengale took six shots to extract his ball. Ray Floyd took three swings to get it out.

It appeared Rogers could lose it all right there. But he popped it out on the first try, then two-putted for the bogey that cut the margin to 1.

Miss Bradley Nabs Kemper Title

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Pat Bradley, often a contender but seldom a winner since joining the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour in 1974, fired a one-under-par 70 Sunday to easily capture the $175,000 Women's Kemper Open by five shots.

Miss Bradley's 72-hole score of 284, even-par over the 6,134-yard, par 36-35 — 71 Mesa Verde Country Club course, tied the tournament record established last year by Nancy Lopez-Melton.

Miss Bradley, who turned 30 last Tuesday, collected $26,250 for her first victory of 1981 and surged to the top of the LPGA money winning list for the year with $69,821 in earnings.

The winner brought a four-stroke advantage into Sunday's final round and had it cut to two shots after nine holes. But she birdied the 12th and 14th holes and her closest contender midway through the round, Jane Blalock, fell back with bogeys on the 10th, 13th, 14th and 15th holes.

Debbie Massey finished in second place with a score of 289 after carding a two-under-par 69 Sunday. She earned $17,150. Miss Blalock, JoAnne Carner and Joyce Kazmierski tied for third at 291. Miss Blalock had a 72 Sunday, Miss Carner a 71 and Kazmierski a 73.

Coaching Duel Highlights NCAA Battle

 scored a career-high 39 points in leading North Carolina over Virginia 78-65 in the semifinals.
 "I don't think the game will revolve around any particular point," Knight said. "If either team does not play good defense, if either team does not shoot well, they won't win. Also, no team can get beat on the boards and expect to win."
 Knight said this game, as well as any other game, could be seen as a coach's duel only in that each coach is responsible for preparing his team.
 "We spend far more time on our team than we do on the other," Knight said of his preparation. "You try to understand your own strengths and weaknesses. You play to your strengths and avoid your weaknesses, and once you determine what you do best, then you try to fit it to the team you're playing."
 Smith, who has been to the Final Four six times in his 19 years at North Carolina without winning a national title, said he viewed the confrontation as a "game between the North Carolina players and the Indiana players. Bobby happens to be in charge of their program, and I'm in charge of ours, but it's still the players that determine the outcome."

 Smith said he expected to see Randy Wittman, Indiana's 6-foot-6 guard draw the defensive assignment on Wood, a 6-6 forward. Wittman said he hadn't been told what the defensive matchups would be, but he added that if Knight goes to a three-guard offense, using Isiah Thomas, Jimmy Thomas and himself, he probably would act as a forward on defense.
 When Knight uses Ted Kitchel at forward — sitting down one of the Thomas'

— the matchups would have to be different, "because I don't think Bobby wants Kitchel on Pepper," Smith said.
 Wood, a senior who needs only three points tonight to reach the 2,000-point mark, said he was concerned with the physical style of play of ninth-ranked Indiana, 25-9.
 "They're real physical, so we will have our work cut out for us," he said. "We'll probably try to play a faster tempo than we did against Virginia, and they'll want to slow it down."
 "They come out and play straight man-to-man defense — pressure, pressure, pressure. You know what they're going to do."
 Turner could be the key to Indiana's offense. Playing the best basketball of his three-year college career, he scored 20 points against LSU Saturday.
 "He's still in the process of maturing," Knight said. "He has one real good game, and then a bad one."
 Knight uses what he calls a "motion" offense, relying on the quickness of Isiah Thomas, an All-American, and the power of Tolbert and Turner. Against North Carolina's zone, Indiana also will have to get some outside shooting from Wittman, who hit only three of 10 shots against LSU, and Kitchel, who went 3-for-8.
 "Every player has games when he doesn't shoot well," said Wittman, who shot 54.2 percent from the field this season while averaging 10 points per game. "I didn't shoot well against LSU, but I didn't lose my confidence. Monday night's a different game."
 North Carolina also relies on quickness, supplied in the backcourt by Black and in the forecourt by Wood and Worthy. Perkins, with his 41-inch reach, played Virginia's 7-4 Ralph Sampson to a standoff Saturday, each getting 11 points and nine rebounds and each blocking one of the other's shots. Worthy is strong underneath and a good penetrator, while Wood led the Tar Heels with 10 rebounds Saturday and can hit from the perimeter as well as inside.

 Smith has made the four-corners delayed offense famous at North Carolina, but Indiana also runs a delay. It's similar to the Hoosiers' normal offense — using clockwise motion or a weave across the lane. Indiana just spreads it out over the half court and shoots less frequently.
 The meeting will be the second between these two teams this season. North Carolina beat Indiana 65-54 at Chapel Hill, N.C. Dec. 20.

 "We were both different teams in December," Smith said. "They're a much better team now, and they've settled on a lineup."
 Smith was asked if he was tired of the criticism that he couldn't win the big one, that he could get his team into the NCAA tournament but couldn't win the title.
 "I think it's a foolish criticism," he said. "All the years, except one, that we've been in the tournament, we hadn't been picked to win it. We weren't the best team in the country. We've played well in the NCAA tournament. A lot of schools would be happy just to get into the Final Four."

 "Though, I guess if I win I won't have to answer that question anymore, but if we do win, it won't mean I'm any better coach."

WOOD SCORES — University of North Carolina's Al Wood (30) fires off a jump shot against a host Virginia defenders during Saturday's NCAA semifinal game. Wood, a senior, poured in 39 points to pace UNC to a 78-65 victory. (AP Laserphoto).

UNC's Wood Relishes Leadership Position

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Al Wood has learned to assert himself on the court and in the lockerroom, and his leadership in both places has brought North Carolina within one game of the NCAA basketball championship.
 "I used to be more of a laid-back player," said Wood. "but this fall I decided it was time to stop watching other people doing it. I'm playing harder and asserting myself more."
 "As a senior, the other players looked to me for leadership and I think the role fit me well."
 The 6-foot-6 Wood certainly has come a long way from his hometown of Gray, Ga., which he describes as "a small country town, the kind of place where everybody knows everybody else's business. I liked living there because you could walk around a corner and not have to worry about ducking Coca-Cola bottles or getting mugged."
 Wood was the mugged in one of Saturday's NCAA semifinal games, scoring a career-high 39 points as the Tar Heels beat Virginia 78-65 and advanced to Monday's night's title game against Indiana.
 "Al Wood is a truly fine basketball player who had a truly great day," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "We tried everything to stop him, except throwing the kitchen sink at him, but nothing worked."
 So how does Indiana plan to stop the 22-year-old forward with the silky smooth moves?
 "We played Ted Kitchel on Wood at first, then changed around a bit later in the game," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, referring to North Carolina's 65-56 victory over Indiana in December. "We'll probably do some of the same this time."
 Clearly, Knight wasn't about to give away any secrets.
 "I think he'd prefer to have Randy Wittman on Wood," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, "but that would leave Kitchel on (Jimmy) Black, which he probably doesn't want." Like Wood, Wittman is 6-6 — but Kitchel is 6-8 and Black is a quick, 6-2 guard.
 "They may decide to lay off a couple of people and put all-out pressure on one or two, like Wood," added Smith, suggesting the possibility of a box-and-one or triangle-and-two alignment.
 But whatever Indiana tries, Wood will be ready.
 "If I get a small man on me, I like to post up and shoot over him," said Wood. "And if they try a big man, I'll take him outside and use my quickness."
 Wood's combination of skills were too much for Virginia as he accumulated the most points ever in an NCAA semifinal. How did he feel one day after his big effort?
 "I purposely didn't read any of the papers," he said. "I want to wait till it's all over. I thought about it, sure. Scoring 39 points is great, but we still have one game to play and the main objective is for North Carolina to win a championship."
 Dean Smith has been in the Final Four six times and never won it. He's done just about everything else in basketball, so we want to get that championship for him."

Thomas Directs IU Offensive Assault

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Elimination of Virginia thwarted a Biblical Sampson-Isiah confrontation in the NCAA basketball final — which would have been a David-Goliath matchup — but Isiah Thomas still is around.
 "I didn't have much choice — I had to take the hammer," says the little 19-year-old sophomore point guard, describing how he inherited the dominant playmaker role with the Indiana Hoosiers.
 "I bring the ball up. Everybody wants to score, so they're going to listen to me. It's easy for me to be a leader."
 When the Hoosiers meet the North Carolina Tar Heels in the championship showdown Monday night at the Spectrum, the outcome may be determined as much on Thomas' floor-directing genius as the steel-trap coaching mind of volatile Bobby Knight.
 At least Thomas, who doesn't know how the "a" got dropped from the Old Testament prophet for whom he and his father were named, won't have to deal with 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson, the beanpole center whose Cavaliers were eliminated in the semifinal by the Tar Heels.

 But Thomas, at 6-1 and 185 pounds, will look like a tree stump in a forest of California redwoods when college basketball's two survivors go to it.
 It was the relatively diminutive Thomas, who took over after successive losses to Notre Dame and Kentucky early in the season and proceeded to lead the Hoosiers into the NCAA final.
 He is a disarming youngster — baby-faced, dimpled cheeks, a smile and an air of supreme confidence that jumps out and hits you between the eyes.
 Very articulate and polite — "Thank you, sir, for asking" — he speaks in a soft voice but always with authority. It matches his floor game — a slick-smooth, ball-faking, ball-hawking Houdini who unselfishly throws the spotlight toward his teammates.
 In the playoffs he has scored 68 points — with 64.1 percent shooting from the field and 78.3 from the foul line. But his forte has been in harassing rival offenses and directing Indiana's attack with whirlwind velocity.
 He is a wizard who already has caught the eye of the pro scouts, intent on luring him from the campus with a wad of quick cash.
 Thomas refuses to discuss his plans until this tournament is over. "After the season," he said. "I will listen. I don't close the door on anything."
 Young Thomas explained that before matriculating at Indiana he heard many scare stories about Knight.
 "I got letters from as far away as San Diego," he said. "People said coach Knight would tie me up and whip me. No, I wasn't scared. I was more scared of my brothers."
 Thomas has seven brothers, plus two sisters in the modest family that grew up in Westchester, Ill., outside Chicago.
 "Coach Knight is one man as a coach, another as a person — two different people," Thomas said. "As a coach he might tell me I blew it. As a person he might say, 'You're just tired.'"

It gives us one more chance to end on a winning note," said Brown, whose Tigers face the Virginia Cavaliers tonight in the third-place game preceding the Indiana-North Carolina title contest.
 Brown said his team's poor shooting, 62 percent, accounted for the Tigers' 67-49 loss to Indiana in the semifinals Saturday.
 "Early in the second half, we missed five opportunities to score on one possession," Brown said. He said that when Indiana's Ray Tolbert scored on a slam dunk following that possession, "it deflated us, and it was very difficult to get back in the flow."
 Virginia Coach Terry Holland, whose Cavaliers lost to North Carolina 78-65, said it might be difficult to get his players motivated for the consolation game.
 "It's a very hard thing for people like us to take," Holland said of the Cavaliers' semifinal loss. "Right now, we're still a little down, but by practice time, we'll be looking forward to LSU."
 The consolation game will feature a matchup between Virginia's 7-foot-4 player of the year, Ralph Sampson, and LSU's Durand Macklin, a 6-7 forward, who has averaged 19 points a game during the tournament.
 Each had subpar days in the semifinals. Sampson, who averaged better than 18 points a game during the season, was held to 11, and Macklin scored just four

Cavs Face LSU For Third Place

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Louisiana State Coach Dale Brown, one day earlier an opponent of the NCAA's third-place game, said Sunday he now feels a consolation game at the Final Four serves a good purpose.
 "It gives us one more chance to end on a winning note," said Brown, whose Tigers face the Virginia Cavaliers tonight in the third-place game preceding the Indiana-North Carolina title contest.
 Brown said his team's poor shooting, 62 percent, accounted for the Tigers' 67-49 loss to Indiana in the semifinals Saturday.
 "Early in the second half, we missed five opportunities to score on one possession," Brown said. He said that when Indiana's Ray Tolbert scored on a slam dunk following that possession, "it deflated us, and it was very difficult to get back in the flow."
 Virginia Coach Terry Holland, whose Cavaliers lost to North Carolina 78-65, said it might be difficult to get his players motivated for the consolation game.
 "It's a very hard thing for people like us to take," Holland said of the Cavaliers' semifinal loss. "Right now, we're still a little down, but by practice time, we'll be looking forward to LSU."
 The consolation game will feature a matchup between Virginia's 7-foot-4 player of the year, Ralph Sampson, and LSU's Durand Macklin, a 6-7 forward, who has averaged 19 points a game during the tournament.

father were named, won't have to deal with 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson, the beanpole center whose Cavaliers were eliminated in the semifinal by the Tar Heels.
 But Thomas, at 6-1 and 185 pounds, will look like a tree stump in a forest of California redwoods when college basketball's two survivors go to it.
 It was the relatively diminutive Thomas, who took over after successive losses to Notre Dame and Kentucky early in the season and proceeded to lead the Hoosiers into the NCAA final.
 He is a disarming youngster — baby-faced, dimpled cheeks, a smile and an air of supreme confidence that jumps out and hits you between the eyes.
 Very articulate and polite — "Thank you, sir, for asking" — he speaks in a soft voice but always with authority. It matches his floor game — a slick-smooth, ball-faking, ball-hawking Houdini who unselfishly throws the spotlight toward his teammates.
 In the playoffs he has scored 68 points — with 64.1 percent shooting from the field and 78.3 from the foul line. But his forte has been in harassing rival offenses and directing Indiana's attack with whirlwind velocity.
 He is a wizard who already has caught the eye of the pro scouts, intent on luring him from the campus with a wad of quick cash.
 Thomas refuses to discuss his plans until this tournament is over. "After the season," he said. "I will listen. I don't close the door on anything."
 Young Thomas explained that before matriculating at Indiana he heard many scare stories about Knight.
 "I got letters from as far away as San Diego," he said. "People said coach Knight would tie me up and whip me. No, I wasn't scared. I was more scared of my brothers."
 Thomas has seven brothers, plus two sisters in the modest family that grew up in Westchester, Ill., outside Chicago.
 "Coach Knight is one man as a coach, another as a person — two different people," Thomas said. "As a coach he might tell me I blew it. As a person he might say, 'You're just tired.'"

NBA ROUNDUP

Celtics Top 76ers 98-94 For Title

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics outran the speedy Philadelphia 76ers early and, with Larry Bird and Robert Parish scoring 24 points each, held on for a 98-94 National Basketball Association victory Sunday that gave them the Atlantic Division title and a playoff bye.

Both teams ended the regular season with the NBA's best record, 62-20. They also were tied in head-to-head competition, 3-3, and in their record against Eastern Conference opponents, 42-16.

But Boston claimed the crown with a better division record, 19-5 to 15-9.

The victory gives the Celtics the next week off, while the 76ers must play a best-of-three mini series against Indiana.

Philadelphia played sloppily for three quarters, committing 25 turnovers, and went into the final period trailing 79-59.

But the 76ers chipped away at the lead, and a nine-point streak drew them to within 96-91 with 37 seconds remaining. But Andrew Toney, who poured in 15 of his game-high 35 points in the final period, then fouled Nate Archibald, whose two free throws clinched the victory.

Boston took control early with their effective running game. Their sharp outside shooting also neutralized the speedy 76ers transition game.

With the Celtics leading 41-39, Boston scored the next 11 points, seven by Parish, and took a 54-43 lead at halftime.

The Celtics opened the margin to 67-51, but baskets by Bobby Jones and Toney closed the gap to 12 points with 4:39 left in the third quarter.

The Celtics then outscored the 76ers 12-4 the rest of the period.

Chris Ford added 16 points for Boston, while Julius Erving had 19, nine in the fourth quarter for the 76ers.

Bucks 132, Hawks 128
ATLANTA — Sidney Moncrief scored five points in the last 29 seconds of an overtime period to give the Milwaukee Bucks a victory over the Atlanta Hawks Sunday.

It was the 60th victory of the season for the Bucks, the NBA's Central Division champions, and the final game of the season for the Hawks, who have lost all the games they have played since Coach Hubie Brown was fired last week.

The Hawks led 126-125 when a three-point play by Moncrief put the Bucks ahead for good with 29 seconds remaining in the overtime. He then added a back-handed layup with nine seconds left.

Steve Hawes, who had a career-high 32 points, scored a layup with seven seconds remaining, but Junior Bridgeman iced the game for Milwaukee with two free-throws with five seconds left.

There were 95 foul shots taken in the game, which went into overtime when a rebound tip by the Bucks' Bob Lanier tied the score at 114 with 24 seconds remaining.

The Hawks were playing for a final shot in regulation play when a foul was called on Eddie Johnson with four seconds left. A last-second shot by Marcus Johnson of the Bucks missed, sending the game into overtime.

Moncrief scored 26 points for the Bucks, Marcus Johnson 23 points and Mickey Johnson and Brian Winters 16 apiece.

Dan Roundfield had 26 points for Atlanta, Eddie Johnson had 24 and Wes Matthews had 20.

Bulls 101, Pacers 97
INDIANAPOLIS — Ricky Sobers and Artis Gilmore each scored in the final 42 seconds Sunday, giving the Chicago Bulls a victory over the Indiana Pacers and second place in the NBA's Central Division.

The victory sent the Bulls, who finished the regular season with eight consecutive victories, into the opening round of the playoffs against the New York Knicks.

Indiana, which had held second place all season, will play the loser of Sunday's game between Philadelphia and Boston in its first NBA playoff appearance ever.

David Greenwood scored 16 of his 22 points in the second half to help the Bulls hold off Indiana.

The Pacers, who were led by Billy Knight's 25 points, tied the game on a Knight free throw 97-97 with 54 seconds remaining.

However Knight missed the second shot and Chicago grabbed the rebound. Sobers, who came off the bench to score 18 points, gave the Bulls a 99-97 edge making a jump shot with 42 seconds remaining.

After calling a time out with 38 seconds left, Knight missed a layup attempt and the Bulls regained possession.

Gilmore then hit his basket just before the final buzzer.

Reggie Theus had 20 points for the Bulls and James Edwards also had 20 for Indiana.

Spurs 135, Rockets 109
SAN ANTONIO — San Antonio ended the National Basketball Association regular season Sunday by routing Houston behind a game-high 30 points from George Gervin, who finished his fourth consecutive season with more than 2,000 points.

The Midwest Division champions ended up with a record of 52-30, tying their previous best record established in the 1977-78 season.

Playoff-bound Houston finished in second place in the division at 40-42 and had to wait for the results of the Golden State-Seattle game to determine which team it would meet in the playoffs.

Gervin canned 17 points and Reggie Johnson 12 to get the Spurs off to a 32-23 first-quarter lead as San Antonio never trailed.

With seven Spurs hitting in double figures, San Antonio led 66-54 at the half and 104-76 after three periods. The biggest Spurs lead was 31 points early in the final quarter.

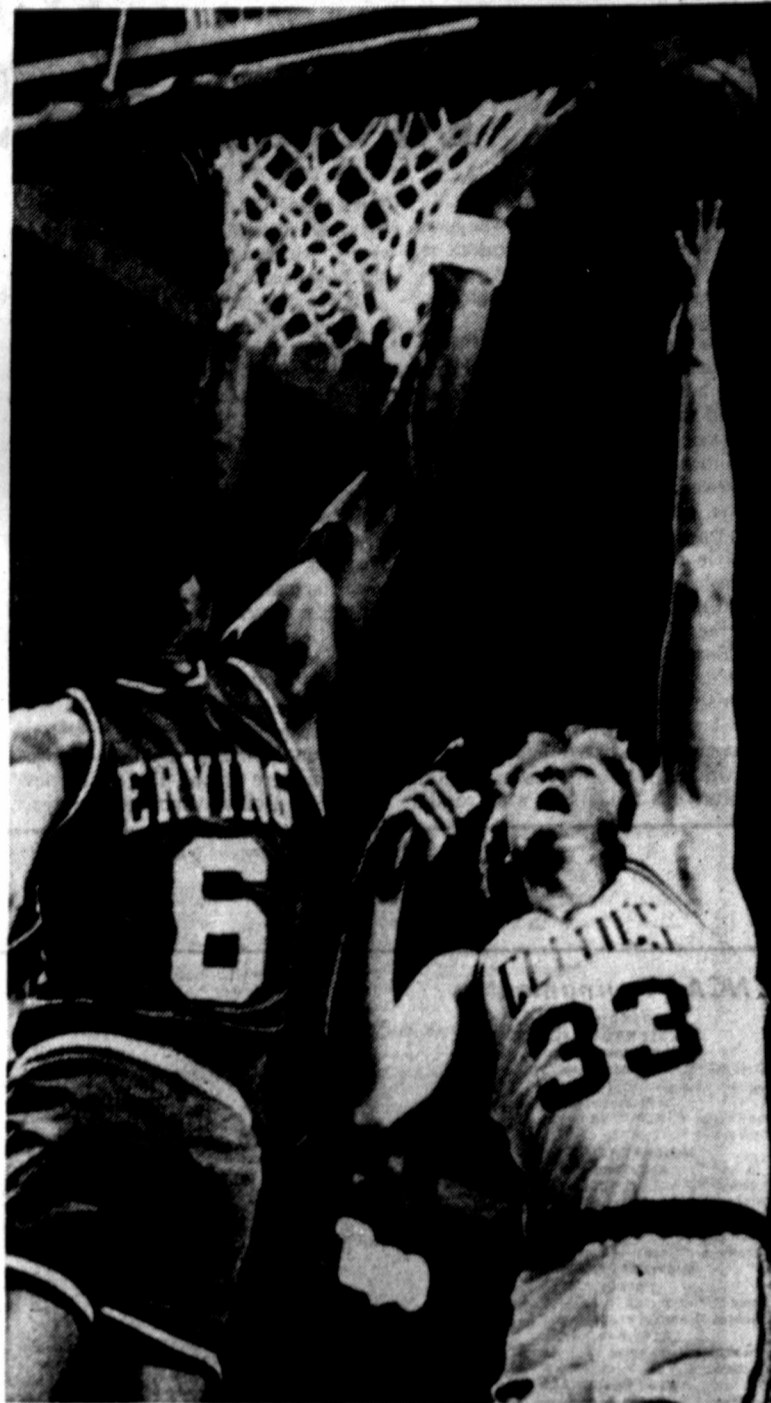

Ron Brewer added 20 points and Johnson 18 for the Spurs, who ended the regular season as the NBA's best rebounding team with a 47.4 average and the best shot-blocking team with 7.9 rejections per game, paced by NBA leader George Johnson.

Bullets 138, Cavaliers 103
LANDOVER, Md. — Kevin Porter scored 27 points and handed off 18 assists, leading the Washington Bullets to victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers Sunday night.

The game marked the end of a 13-year career for Washington center Wes Unseld, who was honored in halftime ceremonies. Unseld, bothered by a sore knee, scored two points in a token appearance.

Washington, which missed the NBA playoffs for the first time since Unseld joined the team for the 1967-68 season, won four of its last five games and finished with the same 39-43 record as last season.

Unseld's replacement, rookie Rick Mahorn, scored a career-high 28 points and grabbed 15 rebounds as the Bullets beat Cleveland for the second time in six games this season.

Mustangs Take On Amarillo Tascosa

AMARILLO (Special) — The Coronado Mustang baseball team will invade the Tascosa diamond here today in hopes of improving on their 10-1-1 record.

A tie baseball game?
That's right, the Mustangs do have a tie on their record because U.I.L. rules say non-district games that go past five innings before being called cannot be made up. Thus, the 7-7 score between Coronado and Snyder in last Tuesday's game will stand as an eternal deadlock.

Mustang coach John Dudley plans to start senior hurler Bryan Brock — he also started the Snyder game — on the mound today against the Dons. Brock has a 3-0 record on the line. Game time is 4 p.m.

"Bryan didn't pitch that well against Snyder, but his other outings have been good," Dudley said of Brock. "I think he'll bounce back and throw well against Tascosa."

"I talked to (Monterey coach) Bobby Moegle who saw Tascosa in the Midland Tournament and he said they hit the ball well," Dudley said. "I expect them to be contenders for their district's championship."

In their last outing, the Mustangs ripped Monahans 9-0 to extend their unbeaten streak to 11 games. The day before, Coronado defeated Estacado 13-6.

Longhorns Clinch NCAA Swim Title

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas, based on the swimmers who qualified in the afternoon for Saturday night's finals, clinched its first NCAA Swimming and Diving championship and the first ever for a Southwest Conference school.

The Longhorns entered the day with 181 points — a 63-point lead over second-place Florida.

Based on the NCAA scoring system, swimmers who qualify for the finals automatically earn a certain number of points. For example, the six competitors in the finals earn anywhere from 16 to nine points. The consolation finals has points seven through one.

Texas earned at least nine points when Kris Kirchner qualified for the championship finals in the 100-yard freestyle. They got at least three more when Eric Finical and Andrew Schmidt qualified for the consolation finals.

Texas' Philip Nemon qualified for the finals of the 200 yards backstroke, Nick Nevid qualified for the 200 yards breaststroke finals, and Texas had a team in the finals of the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Nothing Florida could do could match the Longhorns.

It was the first time a school with the home pool advantage had won the NCAA Swimming and Diving championships since Indiana pulled off the trick in 1969.

It was that year that Indiana scored the most points in history for the NCAA meet — 427. Texas was no threat to break the Hoosiers' point-scoring record.

There were two American records during the afternoon prelims Saturday in the final day of the 58th annual meet. Auburn's Ambrose (Rowdy) Gaines set a record in the 100-yard freestyle and UCLA's Bill Barrett established a new American standard in the 200-yard breaststroke.

Both records came during the preliminaries with the finals set for Saturday night in the final evening of the three-day meet.

Gaines swam the 100-yard freestyle in 42.62 seconds to break his old record of 43.08.

Barrett splashed the 200-yard breaststroke in 1:57.78 to break the old record of 1:58.18 by Steve Lundquist of Southern Methodist University.

Texas held a 63-point lead going into the Saturday night events as the Longhorns tried to win their first national title.

Tech Women Netters Upset Mustangs 5-4

It was just a late-night hunch, but it was the key to the biggest tennis victory for Texas Tech in quite some time.

Texas Tech women's tennis coach Mickey Bowes scouted the SMU-University of Texas-Permian Basin dual match Saturday night and decided to insert seldom-used Laura Scott into the No. 1 doubles position with Regina Revello.

With the match tied 4-4, Misses Scott and Revello were the last players on the court, but their victory gave the Raiders a 5-4 victory.

"It was just a super team effort," Bowes said. "I really can't single any one girl out on the team — they all came to play. We lost four of the six singles matches, but played good tennis. Then we went out and swept the doubles. It has to be our best effort in doubles all year because SMU is ranked 16th in the nation."

The Raiders had lost twice to the Mustangs this season, 6-3 at the Lady Tiger Invitational at Louisiana State University and 7-2 last week at the SMU Invitational, but got their revenge Sunday morning at The Lubbock Racquet Club.

"It has to be our biggest win of the year," Bowes said. "I guess if you play enough tough teams, you're going to start beating them some time. We did that today.

"The way Laura (Scott) and Regina (Revello) played together was a pleasant surprise," Bowes continued. "They had only played together one other time, at No. 2 against Abilene Christian. I needed somebody with a good service return to play the ad court and I thought of Laura, who's left-handed. I gave her a call late last night (Saturday)."

"Both Laura and Regina played really well. Without their win, we'd have lost the match."

Singles winners for Tech were Susan Mangum and Jill Crutchfield, two players who have been playing sparkling singles lately, according to Bowes.

In doubles, Miss Crutchfield and Kathy Lawson won their No. 2 doubles match and Sue Smith teamed with recent transfer Nancy McGrath won at No. 3 to complete the doubles sweep in Tech's biggest tennis triumph in memory.

Louisiana Tech Takes AIAW Cage Crown

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Angela Turner and Janice Lawrence scored 16 points each and Louisiana Tech capped an undefeated season with a 79-59 victory over Tennessee for the AIAW Division I basketball championship Sunday.

Turner and Lawrence helped build a first-half Tech lead of 12 points and held off a mild Lady Vol rally in the second half.

The Lady Techsters finished the year with a 34-0 record. Tennessee slipped to 25-5.

Old Dominion edged Southern Cal 68-65 for third place in the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

Louisiana Tech worked the ball inside to Lawrence most of the game against Tennessee and received driving layins and jumpers from Turner.

Turner combined with Kim Mulkey to run the Louisiana Tech offense smoothly and lead the squad's halfcourt pressure defense.

The Lady Techsters trailed 12-11 with 12:35 left in the first half before they erupted. Turner drilled three jumpers; while Mulkey and Lawrence added buckets to put Tech in front 21-12 with 9:16 left in the half.

Turner, named the tournament's most valuable player, scored 12 points in the first half, hitting five of eight from the field as the Lady Techsters cruised to a 40-28 lead at intermission.

The Lady Vols managed to close to within 10 points, 58-48, with 8:51 remaining in the game on a three-point play by Lea Henry but came no closer.

Lori Scott scored five points over a two-minute stretch to fatten Louisiana Tech's lead to 60-52 with 6:46 remaining.

Pam Kelly added 15 points for Louisiana Tech and Mulkey finished with 12.

Henry and Mary Ostrowski scored 15 each for the losers.

Sophomore center Anne Donovan and senior forward Jean Walling combined for 43 points in leading Old Dominion past Southern Cal.

Old Dominion erased a six-point lead by Southern Cal midway through the second half with the 6-foot-8 Donovan scoring 21 of her 25 points in the final 20 minutes. Walling tallied 10 of her 18 points in the second half.

West Nips East In All-Star Game

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Utah's Tom Chambers and Iowa's Steve Kraficis dominated the inside Sunday to boost the West's All-Stars to a 99-97 victory over the East in the 19th annual National Association of Basketball Coaches All-Star game.

The game includes 20 senior basketball players whose teams did not make it to the finals of the NCAA tournament.

Kraficis netted a pair of foul shots for a 42-31 edge with 3:51 left in the half.

But South Carolina's Zam Frederick, with 16, and Villanova's Alex Bradley, the game's high scorer with 18, engineered an 11-2 East run to draw the Eastern All-Stars to within two points at 42-44.

The West pulled out again in the second half, opening up a 13-point margin with 10:19 left on Chambers' two foul shots.

Mat Netters Excel In Borger Tourney

BORGER (Special) — The Estacado girls, led by doubles champions Kathy Taylor and Melissa Ramirez, finished second while the boys' team took fifth in the Borger Tennis Tournament here Saturday.

Misses Taylor and Ramirez defeated the Duncan-Davis pair from Vernon 4-6, 6-3, 7-5 for the girls' doubles title.

Craig Dailey and Freddie Green were runners up to the Plainview doubles team of Havenhill and Scooter by losing 3-6, 7-5, 6-2 in the finale.

The Matadors will be back in action when the District 1-4A Tournament begins in Brownfield April 10.

Tech Wins Tri Gymnastics Meet

DENTON (Special) — The Texas Tech gymnastics team won a triangular meet here Saturday, coming out ahead of the University of Texas and North Texas State.

The Red Raiders scored 118 points, 7.7 ahead of UT, while the Mean Green recorded 53.19 points.

With the victory, the Raiders and Longhorns are tied in dual meet competition 2-2 with the Southwest Conference Championships coming up in Austin next weekend. Tech's conference record is 6-2.

EXHIBITION BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Ivie, Horner Snapping Out Of Slumps

By The Associated Press
Mike Ivie and Bob Horner, who have both suffered through painful seasons on the field and in the clubhouse, turned in impressive performances in exhibition baseball games Sunday.

Terry Harper hit a grand-slam homer in the first inning off Steve Stone, last year's American League Cy Young Award winner.
It was a big day for the long ball. Bobby Grich and Butch Hobson slammed homers to lead the California Angels to an 11-7 victory over San Diego.

19-5. The Dodgers collected 18 hits.
Outfielder Mike Easler belted two home runs, including a two-run shot in the bottom of the ninth inning that gave Pittsburgh a 9-8 victory over Kansas City. Bill Robinson, Gary Alexander and Bill Madlock also homered for the Pirates.

The New York Mets pounded out 16 hits, including three by John Stearns, in a 13-3 victory over Minnesota. Jesus Vega homered for the Twins.
Luis Leal held St. Louis to one hit in five innings as Toronto beat the Cardinals 3-2. Leal allowed only a first-inning single by Keith Hernandez.

An eighth-inning single by pinch-hitter Larry Littleton snapped a tie and launched Cleveland to a 10-7 decision over Seattle. Howard Bailey and Jerry Ujdar of Detroit scattered nine hits as the Tigers beat Cincinnati 4-1.

Rookie Mike Richardt had three hits and three RBIs to lead Texas to a 9-3 victory over Houston. A 10th-inning single by Wayne Gross drove in the winning run as Oakland beat the Chicago Cubs 7-6. Gross drove in two other runs in the game.

Chicago Baseball Teams Swap Pitchers

CHICAGO (AP) — It isn't often that the Chicago Cubs and the Chicago White Sox go in for swapping players and when they do, the trades seldom cause much of a stir. But a change of scenery might be exactly what pitchers Dennis Lamp and Ken Kravec need.

steady decline since 1979 when he was the ace of the staff.
Also, the Cubs were in dire need of a left-hander while the Sox, loaded with left-handers, could use a right-hander, especially out of the bullpen for long relief.

They needed a left-hander and we are not as deep in right-handers," said White Sox General Manager Roland Hemond in Sarasota, Fla., where the team is training. "Lamp will be battling for one of the starting spots but, you know, we do have good pitching."

"I told him 'pitch me or do something.' I didn't want another year like last year."
In Mesa, Ariz., where the Cubs are training, Lamp welcomed going to the White Sox and said he thought catcher Carlton Fisk, formerly of the Boston Red Sox, "can help me."

Fiscal Debacle Facing Government Officials

BOSTON (AP) — If the budget nightmares of municipal officials across the state come true, 9,100 teachers will be out of work, 306 schools will close and 10,940 other public workers will be fired as the result of Proposition.

That picture emerged from an Associated Press survey of mayors, selectmen and school superintendents in the state's 351 municipalities. The AP survey revealed predictions of profound changes in these traditional New England communities.

"You can't cope with it," said Alberta Fields, town accountant in Truro, a small Cape Cod community. "You could call all this 'The Death of a Small Town.'"

An anti-2 rally Saturday on Boston Common attracted 20,000 teachers, parents and school children, while a rally of government employees last Tuesday drew several thousand people.

The law, passed in November, limits property taxes communities can assess to 2½ percent of market value. It also cut an excise tax on cars and gave municipal officials the power to limit budgets set by local school committees.

State officials estimate the taxing limits will cost cities and towns between $560 million and $600 million in fiscal 1981.

The AP survey, conducted in conjunction with newspaper members across the state, found municipal officials are planning severe cuts because of that loss. The plans include:

•Cuts of nearly $225 million in local school budgets, threatening programs from violin lessons to football competition.

•Closing 306 schools. Of those, 66 are closing because of declining enrollments, but Proposition 2½ has hastened shut-downs for the others.

Pink slips for more than 9,100 teachers and principals, and 1,500 teachers' aides, cafeteria workers and maintenance personnel. The cutbacks would push the state's average classroom size of 25 students past 30.

•Reductions in police forces by 1,348 people statewide. Although many cuts will come through attrition, some towns will reduce their force by 25 percent. Boston plans to eliminate 500 of its 2,000 officers.

•Layoffs of 1,444 firefighters. Some city departments plan to shut down fire stations.

Barbara Anderson, executive director of Citizens for Limited Taxation, the group that sponsored Proposition 2½, says government is overstating the crisis. "Municipal officials seem to be deliberately cutting the most controversial items in order to create an atmosphere for repeal or override," she said.

But local officials say the tax cap's effect will be deep and lasting.

Cities and towns plan charge more for water and sewage systems, end garbage collections and increase fees. Libraries will close or have shorter hours. Dozens of communities will switch off street lights. Some will only plow during major snowstorms.

Education will suffer the sharpest cuts. Quincy, a Boston suburb, plans to cut $8 million from its school budget, eliminate 500 of 1,600 school employees and close five schools.

Smaller towns also will suffer. Rural Granby in western Massachusetts faces the loss of 26, or one quarter, of its teaching staff.

"I'm not crying wolf here," said state Education Commissioner Gregory Anrig. "There's no way we can take these kinds of cuts in the public school program and claim the youngsters are getting the same quality of education."

"If you cut out that many people, you're going to make the kind of changes that are going to be reverberating for years," he said.

Symposium Held To Explore Pet Loss' Effect On People

NEW YORK (AP) — The death or disappearance of "Rover" can be as devastating as the loss of a close family member, veterinarians and psychiatrists say. And they teamed up on Sunday to develop ways to console grieving pet owners.

"I have seen entire families break down over the loss of a pet," said Dr. William Kay, chief of staff at The Animal Medical Center here, one of the largest animal hospitals in the country. "Pets are important to us and we need to explore the relationship between people and their pets."

Veterinarians, psychiatrists, experts in animal behavior, pet owners and even pet cemetery owners met in New York over the weekend for an unusual symposium on "Pet Loss and Human Emotion." About 40 speakers presented papers on topics ranging from the ethics of mercy killing to how people and pets react to death and dying.

One out of every two families in the United States owns a pet. And as the nuclear family shrinks, animal companions are playing a larger role in American life, the psychiatrists said. For many elderly and handicapped Americans, a pet is both a companion and lifeline — sometimes becoming a substitute for human relationships.

"A pet's death can be traumatic, even catastrophic, to some owners, especially when the pet has provided the unconditional love and support that the owner was afraid to seek from other human beings," said Boris Levinson, emeritus professor of psychology at Yeshiva University in New York.

Levinson and others say veterinarians should encourage a period of mourning for departed pets, and even help organize elaborate burials or monuments to the pet to help owners cope with the loss. Finding a new pet can be helpful, but should not be done immediately, Levinson added.

Veterinarians often are insensitive to the depression, sadness, hopelessness, anger and guilt people feel when their pet dies, said Dr. Jacob Antelyes, a Middle Village, N.Y., veterinarian.

"It is ironic that veterinarians seem to lack empathy, understanding and supportiveness" for the owner when a pet is dying, Antelyes said.

"We shouldn't treat this subject cavalierly," added Kay, who organized the symposium. "The veterinarian is in a crucial role. He can make life and death decisions about the animal. And he needs to know more about the possible impact on the family when a pet dies."

A construction worker broke down in tears when he requested euthanasia for his ailing Labrador retriever, said James Harris, an Oakland, Calif., veterinarian.

"Just a simple dog for simple folk" he said through his tears, Harris said in discussing the case. "I put my arm around this 6-foot, 3-inch, 200-pound-plus man and a little wet-eyed myself said: 'No, a special dog for very special people.'" The worker now has a new puppy.

Carole Fudin, a New York psychotherapist who works with families mourning the loss of a pet, says society "tends to look down on a person who is grieving over a pet. But people do need time and an appropriate way of memorializing the pet."

And pets, likewise, grieve when their owners die, the psychologists said.

"Animals who maintain vigils over their dead master's unburied body or over his grave have been reported for centuries," Levinson said. "We can't, of course, know what the animal understands of death, but some animals clearly have some concept of what the loss of a loved person or animal will mean for their lives."

(Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: I have heard that the Railroad Retirement Board pays higher retirement benefits to its employees than Social Security does. What is the approximate difference in retirement benefit amounts awarded recent retirees under both systems? P.T.

ANSWER: For career railroad employees retiring directly from the railroad industry in fiscal year 1980, regular annuities, including 1980 cost-of-living increases, averaged about $850 a month. Monthly benefits awarded at the end of fiscal year 1980 to regularly employed workers covered under social security averaged about $475. If benefits for their spouses are added in this example, the combined benefits for the employee and spouse would approximate $1,175 under railroad retirement coverage compared to about $700 under social security coverage.

The Railroad Retirement Act also provides supplemental railroad retirement annuities of between $23 and $43, which are payable to employees who retire directly from the industry with 25 or more years service. Adding a supplemental annuity to the railroad family's benefit increases total benefits to over $1,200 a month.

HEARTLINE: I am going to apply for Social Security disability benefits. Friends have said that I will probably have to request information from my doctor and possibly have to have tests and medical reports prepared about my condition. Do I have to pay for this? F.G.

ANSWER: Since December 1980, social security disability applicants no longer have to pay for all the costs for the medical data requested by Social Security. In the past, these applicants have been responsible for all costs for preparing the medical reports that may be requested by Social Security. Under 1980 amendments to the Social Security laws, the Social Security Administration will pay a reasonable charge for medical reports it needs and requests.

Victim's Birthday Celebrated

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The parents of Karen Ann Quinlan celebrated her 27th birthday Sunday with a quiet Roman Catholic Mass at the coma victim's bedside in the Morris View Nursing Home.

Tuesday will mark the fifth anniversary of a controversial New Jersey Supreme Court decision allowing the Quinlans to wean their adopted daughter from her life-sustaining respirator. The famous right-to-die ruling followed a year-long legal battle.

Karen, who lapsed into a coma on April 15, 1975, has clung stubbornly to life since the machine was turned off. While Julia Quinlan says she never thought Karen would live long, the years since the court decision have given the family time to adjust to her comatose condition and her inevitable death.

"I didn't feel she would survive this long," Julia Quinlan told The Associated Press recently. "I was only trying to cope with the situation as well as I could."

"I'm very thankful she didn't die. We're fortunate because we've had the opportunity to have her for five years and to make this adjustment," she said.

"But when she dies, it will be just another adjustment."

'Ordinary People' Ready For Extraordinary Night

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Hollywood is gearing up for the Oscar party tonight, getting hairdos, facials and formals, sleek gowns and temporarily sleek hips to match.

The annual Academy Awards ceremony — a very private affair seen by hundreds of millions the world over — will be the night for extraordinary entertainers. "Ordinary People," and a former actor who did better at his second profession, politics.

Ronald Reagan, never nominated, will take part in the ceremony by a TV linkup from the White House, the first time a U.S. president has been part of the Oscar awards since Franklin D. Roosevelt joined in by radio in 1941.

Five-time Oscar winner Francis Ford Coppola started festivities Saturday night, hosting a reception at the Academy headquarters in Beverly Hills for delegations from the five nations represented by entries in the best foreign language film category.

Coppola said he wanted to "make them feel at home among us."

The foreign language entrants are "Kagemusha" from Japan, "The Last Metro" from France, "Confidence" from Hungary, "Moscow Does Not Believe in Tears" from the Soviet Union, and "The Nest" from Spain.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences estimates 300 million persons in 66 nations will see the televised ceremony, but just try to get in the door without an invitation.

The private guard force of 100 at the Los Angeles Music Center will be augmented by 100 off-duty police officers and sheriff's deputies.

Not only must all 2,900 invited guests — the who's who of Hollywood — appear in formal gowns or black tie, so must the more than 800 reporters and TV technical workers, a bonanza for dress designers and formal wear shops.

The showdown for the biggest award of the night is expected to be between "Ordinary People," a story of a family struggling with a suicidal teenager, and "Raging Bull," the story of boxer Jake LaMotta.

"The Elephant Man" is a longer shot, and "Tess" and "Coal Miner's Daughter" appear to be out of the running.

"Ordinary People" is also expected to bring an Oscar to long-time actor Robert Redford for his first work as a director.

Redford won the Director's Guild award for the picture, and only twice in the past has the directors' favorite failed to win the best picture Oscar.

Although Redford snubbed academy invitations in the past he was lured away from his Utah mountain retreat by the chance to present an Oscar to Henry Fonda.

Fonda, who never won an Oscar despite a half-century of starring in some of the greatest American films, will be presented with a special award "in recognition of his brilliant accomplishments and enduring contribution to the art of motion pictures."

If "Raging Bull" or "The Elephant Man" takes the best picture award, it will be the first victory for a black and white film in 20 years, since "The Apartment" in 1961.

Robert De Niro is the favorite for the best acting award for his portrayal of LaMotta, but — Like Marlon Brando and George C. Scott before him — he probably won't show up.

The best actress award seems to be a close race between early favorite Sissy Spacek, for her portrayal of country singer Loretta Lynn in "Coal Miner's Daughter," and Mary Tyler Moore, who broke out of her "oldest pixie in America" image, playing the troubled wife and mother of "Ordinary People."

For the third consecutive year, Johnny Carson will host the television spectacular, which begins at 9 p.m. There will be film clips from 155 movies.

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Scriptures Before Love

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Young women should fall in love with the scriptures before they fall in love with men, Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball advises.

Speaking on his 86th birthday, Kimball told the Young Women organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on Saturday that the scriptures "will help you to prepare for the future spiritually." The meeting in the Salt Lake Tabernacle was carried by closed-circuit television to 2,150 locations throughout the world.

"You will be a better friend and neighbor, a better wife, a better mother if you have developed gospel attributes — of love, purity and meekness — and gospel skills such as communicating, listening and delegating," he told the women, 12 to 18 years old.

Kimball, as church president, is regarded as a prophet by more than 4.5 million Mormons.

'Ten-Four, Big Judge'

DENVER (AP) — A judge can only do so much to maintain courtroom decorum, and in a Denver courthouse, it was particularly tough.

It seems that Citizens Band radio transmissions, some laced with racy language hardly appropriate for judicial determinations, "bled" into the courtroom's public address system last week.

Although the problem has been fixed, stories about it linger on.

As jurors were listening intently to testimony in District Judge Susan Graham Barnes' court, a gruff male voice suddenly boomed over a loudspeaker directly over the jury box.

"Put your pedal to the metal!" the voice said, following it up with a string of profanities.

"The little old ladies on the jury sat bolt upright," the judge said.

Then in District Judge Daniel Sparr's court, the proceedings were interrupted by: "Hi there, Soda Pop, this is Jack Leg."

Sparr said the occasional electronic outbursts would catch everyone off guard, and he often had to stop proceedings briefly to explain things.

U.S. Skier Claims Title

LAAX, Switzerland (AP) — Phil Mahre, in the greatest American triumph in world skiing, has won an overall victory in the World Cup championships and the title as world's best all-around Alpine skier.

The 23-year-old American from Yakima, Wash., clinched the prestigious title this weekend in championships that began last December and featured 31 downhill, slalom and giant slalom races.

Under the World Cup scoring system that favors all-rounders, Mahre collected 266 points against 260 for triple World Cup winner Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden and 185 for the fast-rising Soviet star Alexander Zhirov.

Mahre's twin brother, Steve, retained his fourth-place overall standing to make it the best American showing ever.

Mahre finished in second place in the closing competition behind Zhirov, with Stenmark in third place.

"This means the beginning of a new life for me," said Mahre, who won a slalom silver medal at Lake Placid last year. "This is worth more than a bagful of Olympic medals."

His victory came after a second overall place in 1978 and overall third in 1979, despite a fractured ankle that kept him from completing the season, and 1980.

"I worked hard for this but now I've made it," Mahre said.

$34,000 Garbage Bill

MIAMI (AP) — Everything clicked along efficiently, as only a computer could manage it: The city government automatically sent Wilhelm Peters his six-month garbage bill, with the amount printed clearly on it.

Except that the bill was for $34,050, and the city doesn't collect his garbage.

"We couldn't have this much garbage," said Peters, a Costa Rican coffee broker who owns a condominium. "We only come here for vacations."

It turned out that Peters' bill was for the garbage of all 908 residents of the Brickell Place complex. But city officials said no one there should have been billed, since a private contractor hauls garbage from Brickell Place.

"We have some maladjustments with the computer," said Clarence Patterson, Miami's director of solid waste. "In some places, the number of units went berserk. In others, a fee that was supposed to be for six months winds up 12 months."

Brickell Place Manager Billy Sauls is worried that some of his foreign residents might mistakenly pay garbage bills they get from the city.

"So many of these people here are from out of the country," he said. "They get a bill from the city and the pay it — unless, of course, it's for $34,000."

Secluded Singer Turns Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Connie Francis, in seclusion since the gangland slaying of her brother last month in New Jersey, may emerge as an author, perhaps with a movie deal in the works.

The Daily News reported Sunday that Miss Francis has been asked to write about her troubles, including a hotel-room rape and the ensuing lawsuit against Howard Johnson's in which she won $1.5 million.

Publishing sources told the News that the singer could collect at least that much from a book, and possibly a movie.

Her brother, George Franconero, was fatally shot March 6 in front of his North Caldwell, N.J., home. Franconero, a twice-convicted lawyer, turned down federal protection although authorities feared he would be killed because of his cooperation in a mob investigation.

Jokester To Head Parade

By United Press International

Archie Campbell, one of the joke-tellers on Hee Haw, has been chosen grand marshal of the annual Columbia, Tenn., Mule Day Parade (April 4) and the country comic says he has more than enough experience. "Back in my hometown of Bull's Gap, we used to have a mule race every year," he explains. "I remember one time I went down to the track to get a closer look. I bent over to tie my shoe and somebody put a saddle on me. I didn't do too bad, though. I finished third."

'Sexy Music' Wins Prize

TOKYO (AP) — The Nolans, a British pop group composed of four sisters, won the grand prize Sunday in the 10th Tokyo Music Festival with their song, "Sexy Music."

The six-year-old group, which hails from Dublin, received $14,285 in prize money.

Gold prizes, with $4,762 for each winner, went to Americans, the group Billy and the Beaters for their song, "At This Moment," and Jermaine Jackson for his ballad, "First You Laugh, Then You Cry."

Silver prizes worth $2,857 went to Shoo-ty of Mozambique for her "Tokyo Melody," Japan's Hiromi Iwasaki for her "Koimachigusa," Bessy of Greece for her "Toshiniko" and the Manhattanites of the United States for "I'll Never Find Another You."

Viewers Facing Decision Between Oscars, NCAA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Viewers accustomed to network television counter-programming might be inclined to blame that tactic for Monday night's faceoff between the Academy Awards and the college basketball championship tournament.

It might seem ABC is using Oscar to hurt NBC's coverage of the NCAA championship, or vice-versa. But the networks are innocent here.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament was scheduled years in advance, and by the NCAA, not by NBC. Network influence is more strongly felt with the Oscar show, but the movie Academy choose the date.

Oscar night usually comes in the first two weeks of April, a week or more after the college basketball championship. This year, the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians contract expires in April, and the Academy wanted to take no chances. Oscar night was moved up two weeks.

It could have been worse. The Oscars and basketball will only be in direct competition for a half-hour or less. The basketball game begins at 8 p.m. EST and should be ending just as Oscar is getting cranked up after its 10 p.m. EST start. If the game goes into overtime, viewers will have to choose.

On CBS, the 10 p.m. EST offering is a "Lou Grant" rerun.

REBEL RAID

MANILA (AP) — Communist rebels raided a southern Philippines town for food and weapons Sunday, police said. They said six rebels and two policemen died in an ensuing gun battle. Authorities in Davao del Norte province said about 50 heavily armed rebels of the Maoist New People's Army invaded Montevista town, stripped the mayor and police of their weapons and ransacked a government discount food store in the two-hour raid.

Writers Issue Offer Demand

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Writers Guild of America has demanded a final offer from producers so that members can decide in an April 10 vote whether to go on strike against the television and motion picture industries, a spokesman for the guild said Saturday.

The issue with the writers is fees for pay television and cassettes, as it was for actors when the Screen Actors Guild struck for 10 weeks last summer, brining nearly all movie and television film production to a halt.

Allen Rivkin, spokesman for the 8,300-member guild, said Saturday the guild is asking for 6 per cent of the distributor's gross for pay television and for 8 per cent of the distributor's gross for cassettes.

There has also been talk of another Hollywood strike this summer when the Directors Guild of America contract expires.

Rivkin said the action was taken Friday because the networks and producers have speeded up the stockpiling of scripts in recent days. Members of the guild write all the scripts for entertainment shows on ABC, CBS and NBC, for all motion pictures, and for network television and radio documentary shows.

"Unless we call a halt immediately our bargaining power in the negotiations will be cut drastically," said guild president Melville Shavelson. "We have no choice but to act now."

The guild has been working without a contract since Feb. 28 under an agreement with the producers that either side would give two weeks' notice before terminating negotiations. Rivkin said the guild's action means that the producers must present their final offer prior to membership meetings in Hollywood and New York set for Friday, April 10.

The union's negotiating committee will make its recommendations at the meeting. After that, Rivkin said, it will be up to the members to accept or reject the proposals.

Rejection would mean that the writers would go on strike at midnight that same day, Rivkin said.

The writers have struck twice before.

in 1960 and for 15 weeks in 1973.

Rivkin said the guild also wants to shorten its contract from four years to 26 months in order to take advantage of rapidly changing technology in the entertainment field.

TV Station Admits Using Phony Queries

NEW YORK (AP) — WABC-TV announced Saturday it has canceled a program that purported to answer viewers' questions after learning that members of the production staff wrote queries which were then presented as coming from the public.

The announcement was made at 7 p.m. Saturday by the station's general manager Bill Fyffe, at the start of the time slot in which the program was normally aired on Channel 7 in New York.

He said WABC had canceled the program when it "recently learned" of the misrepresentation.

Fyffe said the program, which has been running about five months, also deceived the public when it "utilized pictures of people asking brief questions which it wanted the show to answer." In fact, he said, the pictures were of Channel 7 employees or other individuals "asking questions not authored by them."

He did not explain how the deception was uncovered, who was responsible, or whether any staff members were to be dismissed.

He said an investigation was continuing and exonerated two prominent members of the station's news team who appeared on the show from any part in the deception.

Fyffe said the format of "Airmail Special," hosted by WABC-TV correspondent and news anchorman John Johnson, "was based upon the idea of presenting informative material in response to suggestions or questions contained in letters from the public."
