Counties won't be hurt by cuts

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Assistant City Editor

When the federal government pulls its purse strings tighter and takes the hands of city and county governments out. Mid land and Odessa won't be finding themselves in serious finan cial trouble, according to officials of both towns. However, the loss still will be felt, they agreed

Budget cutters are targeting the federal Revenue Sharing funds as one item to be snipped out of the list. This program was started by the Nixon Administration and today channels $4.6 billion into city and county governments. Midland and Odessa city and county governments receive a combined total of about $3 million

Designed to be used for major capital expenditures or onetime purchases, some local governments have used the money to pay salaries for personnel. The West Texas governments, however, I ave followed the philosophy under which the funds were established, according to spokesmen

Mike McGregor, assistant city manager for Midland, said the city's philosophy "is to spend Revenue Sharing for capital major items that don't make it into our reguexpenditures lar budget

Ector County Judge Jan Fisher echoed the theory. "Fortunately for Ector County, a wise policy decision was made early on not to rely upon Revenue Sharing for general operat ing expenses because it's not guaranteed and could disappear. If the county depended on it for regular expenses, someone else like the taxpayers would have to absorb the loss.

Midland County Commissioner Win Brown said he had been expecting the funds to be eliminated. "One of the first things that came out about it was to use it only on capital expenditures, not to use it for on-going things.

The city of Midland and Ector County each is targeted to receive about $700,000 in Revenue Sharing funds for 1984-85. Midland County will receive about $210,000, the same as last year, said County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin. The city of Odessa will receive $1.2 million this year

The budget cuts would begin in the 1985 fiscal year Jarnagin said the county had been directing its funds to health and welfare items, spraying insecticides and Meals on Wheels, the elderly nutrition program

Brown pointed out Meals on Wheels is the only on-going program being supplemented by Revenue Sharing funds and if eliminated, the commissioners would "do what we could to adjust our budget to keep funding it. It's one of our better programs. We'd find a place for it.

Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright said the county accumulated the funds for several years and then applied it to buying the pipeline rights of way for Loop 250. "It's been good to us, but we didn't get addicted to it."

German treats not always plentiful

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a four-part series about Christmas in other countries. This story deals with yuletide customs in Germany.

By JULIE HILLRICHS Staff Writer

The German people are known for their love of good food in large quantities. It's not unusual to find buffet tables at Christmas lavishily adorned with fancy pastries, breads and meats

Frieda Duggan of Midland recalls a time, however, when the yuletide feast consisted of little more than a bowl of hot cereal

Despite the poor living conditions, Ms. Duggan said she and her two sisters always were guaranteed a "little something" when St. Nick arrived provided they had been good during

We made sure our shoes were shined and put next to the bureau because we knew there would be a goodie hidden there when we woke up the next morning. Maybe that's how the traditional Christmas stocking originated. I don't know,'

Steve Gilmore of Amarillo expresses his feelings about the nuclear dump site, as Deaf Smith County residents are urged by Gov. Mark White and other officials to fight against the dumps site.

White urges fight against dump site

White came to this farm and ranch community Saturday to confirm a local belief — the land is too fertile dle, should be the stewards of your own soil, not the watchdogs of someone else's waste," White told about 350 people gathered for an antidump rally in the Hereford High School auditorium.

The U.S. Department of Energy last Wednesday picked Deaf Smith County as one of three possible locations for the nuke repository sche-duled to open in 1998. White, Attorney General Jim Mattox and local lawmakers came to Hereford to promise a fight. The promises played well to a county in fear.

Should all other efforts fail; as a last resort we can exercise our state veto power," White said. "And I assure you, I will not hesitate to exercise that power.

The governor also predicted the Texas congressional delegation would work to make that veto stick. Under federal law, the state picked for the dump can nix the decision. But Congress can override that veto.

Texas has filed a lawsuit challenging the selection of Deaf Smith County as a finalist along with sites in Nevada and Washington state.

Mattox told the rally the lawsuit was "a shot heard in Washington. "We better make sure all the sparks fly as possible," Mattox said. White and Mattox cautioned the crowd against losing their enthusiasm in what will be a long fight. The site will be picked in 1990.

"I'm here to tell you that sparks are going to fly," said White. "And they're going to fly far and they're going to burn hot. And I intend for those sparks to light a fire under the backsides of the bureaucrats in Washington so they know and understand that we here in Texas are not about to roll over" and accept the dump.

The crowd cheered all remarks urging them to fight back. But during the brief question-and-answer period, one local man asked what

The National Weather Service predicts snow for portions of the Great Lakes states and Washington with showers expected for parts

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland will see partly or mostly cloudy skies and balmy tempera-tures through Wednesday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting little or no chance of a white Christmas.

Forecasters say today will be partly cloudy with highs in the low 60s. Winds will be southerly at 5 to 15 mph. Tonight and Monday calls for partly cloudy skies. The low tonight will be in the low 30s. The high Monday will be in the mid 50s.

Tuesday and Wednesday will be mostly cloudy. Highs will be near 60. Lows are expected to be in the low 30s.

STATE

Mild and pleasant weather lingered across Texas Saturday as a ridge of high pressure anchored itself over the state from Oklahoma.

Mostly clear skies were common statewide, but a few low clouds blan keted much of the south and some patches of light rain dampened extreme southern regions.

Otherwise, no precipitation was observed across Texas, the National Weather Service said. Winds flowed in a clockwise motion statewide, hovering across the high pressure center over northern Oklahoma. Northeasterly winds of 5 to 10 mph were observed in the south, while southerly winds of 5 to 15 mph blew across West Texas. Temperatures just before sunset ranged from the 40s and 50s, while warmer readings in the 60s and 70s were common elsewhere. The 4 p.m.

extremes ranged from 43 at Dalhart and Amarillo to 78 at Palacios. The forecasts for Sunday called for fair to partly cloudy skies in northern and western areas, with a slight chance of light rain in the extreme south

Lows Sunday will dip to the 20s in northwest portions and to the 30s and 40s elsewhere except the lower coast, where lows will climb to the 50s, the weather service said. Highs Sunday will generally be in the high 50s to mid 60s.

Snow was scattered over the Great Lakes and northern Plains on Saturday and high winds gusted across Colorado, as temperatures across the upper Midwest were unseasonably low and the mercury climbed to record in the East

Winds gusting to 68 mph knocked down a two-story cinder-block building under construction in Boulder, Colo., Saturday evening as a high wind warning was posted from Denver north to the Wyoming border.

Career soldier fills Ustinov's boots

By ALISON SMALE Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — Marshal Sergei L. Sokolov, for 52 years a career soldier in the Soviet mold, was appointed Saturday to succeed the late Dmitri F. Ustinov as the Soviet Union's defense minister.

Diplomats said the speedy appointment indicated that the 73-year-old Sokolov, a World War $\scriptstyle\rm II$ combat commander and a first deputy defense minister since 1967, had been selected well before Ustinov's death Thursday.

The diplomats, speaking on condition they not be further identified, also said the grooming process during Ustinov's long illness suggested Sokolov would make little immediate change in Soviet military policy.

Led by an apparently faltering President Konstantin U. Chernenko, political and military leaders and thousands of citizens plunged into ritual mourning for Ustinov, filing past his open coffin in the House of Unions near the Kremlin.

Chernenko, 73, appeared weak and ill, and had trouble walking as he led a procession of nine Politburo members to noontime mourning, wit-

Sokolov — at that time his appointment still secret - joined the two other first deputy defense ministers, Marshals Sergei F. Akhromeyev and Viktor G. Kulikov, at the open bier, which was piled high with flowers and fronted by 50 medals earned by Ustinov.

Unlike Ustinov, a non-soldier who rose to lead the Soviet military for eight years, Sokolov has been in the army since 1932 and saw front-line action as an armed and mechanized forces commander in World War II.

After the war, like many Soviet military com-manders, he went through various military institutes and was gradually promoted.

He became commander of the Leningrad military district in 1965 and was named first deputy defense minister two years later. Western diplomats in Moscow said little is known about Sokolov, but predicted that the appointment would do little to shift the balance between military and political leaders in the Soviet hierarchy.

Sergei L. Sokolov

have no comment on either Ustinov's death or Sokolov's appointment, and there was no comment from President Reagan, who was meeting with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher at Camp David.

But a senior administration official, while briefing reporters on Reagan's meeting with Mrs. Thatcher, said in response to a question that Ustinov had been ill for some time and 'obviously they've been able to make decisions.'

The official, who insisted that he not be identified by name, then was asked about Sokolov and he said, "We know something about him, he's been involved in Soviet activities in Ethiopia and In Washington, the press offices of both the Afghanistan." The Soviet Union has hundreds of next to the president, then Gorbachev and then State and Defense departments said they would military advisers in Ethiopia, and five years ago it Foreign Minister Andrei A. sent about 100,000 soldiers into Afghanistan to help that nation's Marxist government battle anti-communist rebels. Sokolov has been a member of the Communist Party's Central Committee since 1968, in line with the tradition of keeping the influential military firmly linked to the dominant party. At 73, Sokolov is about the same age as most of the aging Kremlin leadership — seven of the 11 Politburo members are 70 or older — and is thus expected to keep step with its political decisions. 'It's a conservative, predictable choice," one Western diplomat said.

He noted Sokolov differs from Kulikov, Akhromeyev and Akhromeyev's predecessor, Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov, in not holding a specific command. Kulikov commands the Warsaw Ppact armed forces and Aakhromeyev, like Ogarkov before him, is chief of staff.

Sokolov first emerged as a likely successor after Ustinov, whose death at age 76 was announced Friday, dropped from public sight at the end of September.

He stood in for Ustinov at talks with visiting North Yemeni and Indian delegations in October and, more significantly, took Ustinov's place at the Revolution Day parade Nov. 7.

His ceremonial salute to massed forces and speech on Red Square indicated then that Sokolov was most likely to succeed Ustinov if the post went to a military man, diplomats said.

Politburo member Grigori V. Romanov on Friday was named head of the funeral commission overseeing Ustinov's Red Square funeral Monday. The post often goes to the successor of the deceased official.

But diplomats said Saturday the 61-year-old Romanov, reputedly the chief rival of No. 2 Kremlin official Mikhail S. Gorbachev, would have been out of the running as Communist Party leader - where the real power lies - if he had moved to the defense post.

"If he did get it, that was a dead end," said one diplomat. "This leaves all that open."

HOUSTON - When an eightpoint buck deer began prancing down the aisles of a Clear Lake Sakowitz store, shoppers were delighted. But store managers weren't as enthused and shouted warnings for customers to get out of the way.

"I was standing by the front door and it just barreled in," said store manager Linda McGrew, who then gave chase to the 100pound, white-tailed deer. "I was afraid someone might be injured by the deer since his antrs were farily larger and his hooves looked sharp," she said. The deer, prancing through merchandise which included delicate and light crystal, headed straight for the lingerie department Friday afternoon and dashed into a dressing room. "It was miraculous. No merhcandise was damaged and no one was injured," Ms McGrew said. "He found the fitting room by himself. It was sheer luck. Two Department of Public Safety troopers arrived on the scene and helped Ms. McGrew barricade the deer in the dressing room using a display plat-

"The customers thought it was wonderful that we arranged to have a deer in the store, but he came in by himself by pushing the manually operated door with his nose," Ms. McGrew said. "No one held the door open for him or anything."

Store employees nicknamed the animal Rudolph because his nose became red with blood when he pushed the door open.

A customer reported seeing the deer run across four lanes of traffic on a busy street near the Johnson Space Center just before the animal crashed into the store, Ms McGrew said.

Gary Collins, a game warden for for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, said he had been told a deer was in the area.

Buck deer's Man-made comet to brighten sky on Christmas morning

By LEE SIEGEL AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — The first man-made comet will glimmer high above Earth early Christmas Day, tracked by an armada of satellites, airplanes and ground observatories as scientists herald "the year of the

The artificial comet will be created by chemicals to be ejected from a West German satellite 70,160 miles above the Pacific Ocean at 4:18 a.m. PST Tuesday. It should be visible in the southern or southeastern sky from the Midwest to Hawaii and Tahiti, and from southwestern Canada and most of northern Mexico west of a line from Hudson's Bay to near Chicago through Mexico City

It is part of a $78 million, U.S.-British-West German study of how the solar wind interacts with Earth's magnetic field. The solar wind is the hot, electrically charged gas or "plasma" that speeds away from the sun at nearly 1 million mph. Its interaction with the Earth's magnetic field creates the Northern

The choice of Christmas Day for the comet was not meant to elicit comparisons with the Star of Bethlehem, scientists insist. They say it is simply the best day this year for ground and satellite observations, with skies dark thanks to a new immediate practical application, but could provide insight into how space plasmas collide with dust and gases to help form comets, planets and stars; how plasma might be contained to harness fusion energy; how solar winds disrupt satellite and Earth communications and power lines; and how they influence Earth's weather.

The man-made comet also will help astronomers fine-tune an array of sophisticated instruments for the appearance of Comet Giacobini-Zinner next fall and Halley's Comet during the winter of 1985-86 "It's an exciting and significant event," said Bob Cameron of the National Aeronautics and Space Calif. "It's the start of the year of the comets. The biggest uncertainty is how bright the comet will be. Scientists said it should be visible to the naked eye for up to 10 minutes, to people using 7x50 binoculars for about 20 minutes and to astronomers using telescopes for an hour or more. "If you expect this to exceed

Fourth of July fireworks, you'll be disappointed," said physicist Morris Pongratz of Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico. "Everybody who wants to see it should get well away from any city lights and should by all means take a pair of binoculars," said Gerhard Haerendel, a coordinator of the Scientists said the study lacks project and director of the Max Planck Institute for Extraterrestrial Physics in West Germany.

The artificial comet will resemble a real comet, which consists of a frozen ball of dust and gas trailing a tail of loose atoms and particles. But the man-made comet will be composed of a cloud of barium - a metallic element used in another form to make the digestive tract visible under X-rays. The sun will energize the barium atoms and make them radiate colored light.

At first, the comet will look "like a little star which has green rings and a yellow-red center," Haerendel said. "That will last about a minute. Then it will grow in size... After two minutes it will turn purple-gray, he said, and appear "the size of one-sixth the diameter of the moon. It will become more grayish as it fades. The comet will be monitored from the German satellite and from its sister U.S. and British satellites. All were launched from Florida Aug. 16. Haerendel will oversee the operation from the Kitt Peak National Observatory near Tucson, Ariz., and other scientists will watch and photograph it through telescopes atop Mauna Kea on Hawaii, Haleakala on Maui and El Leoncito in Argentina.

Los Alamos will operate 13 telescopes at the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico and six telescopes from a van that will race to find clear skies if clouds cover the test range.

Today, Christmas in West Germany is a two-day ritual, with the government recognizing both Dec. 25 and 26 as national holidays, according to Ms. Duggan.

Most families, however, begin the festive celebration Dec. 24 by attending church services and then return to light the fourth and final candle on the advent wreath as well as the candles on the Christmas tree, also known as the Bescherung. Afterward, "each child in my fam-lot of food - either goose with potato dumplings or Sauerbraten (beef soaked in vinegar and spices)." she said. A popular holiday dessert among Germans is a chocolate pudding with vanilla sauce as well as a large assortment of cookies including liebkuchen (gingerbread men).

According to Ms. Duggan, German families often make their own gifts. Women and girls may spend weeks embroidering handkerchiefs and sofa cushions. Boys often carve figures of men and animals and paint them in bright colors.

"Christmas wrapping paper isn't like what we use in the United States. It more or less resembles tissue paper and it's wrapped around the gift and tied at each end. When I was a child, we carefully removed the paper, folded it and saved it for the next year. It was the sign of the times," she said.

"We don't use the money on salaries," he said. If the funds are stopped, "we wouldn't be in the position of having to lay off anyone.

The Municipal Court was one of those capital expenditures that was built with Revenue Sharing funds. Frank Muser, fiscal services director for Odessa, said the money is being used predominately for street reconstruction, ambulance and fire equipment, trash containers and updating traffic signal lights.

Of the $1.2 million, Odessa has targeted $450,000 this year for street reconstruction, he said. If the money is wiped out in the future, then it would mean such street projects might have to go to the voter for a bond issue. Or city services fees might have to be raised. Judge Fisher pointed out that cut-these capital expenditure items will have to wait.

Approved for this year's money are the Ector County Coliseum renovation, a new telephone system for the county, a mailing device for the county treasurer's office, roof repairs on a county building and courthouse construction contingency fund.

An emergency operations/person-nel officer is paid for out of Reve-nue Sharing funds, according to Judge Fisher, and "I don't know what the Commissioners' Court would do with that person" if the Projects in Ector County up to this year total 77 that have been funded by Revenue Sharing, she said. "Certainly, some things would be put off longer but it wouldn't affect day-to-day operations," she added. Most counties in West Texas have followed a philosophy of not becoming dependent on outside sources of funding for daily operations," she Muser noted of the possible cut-back, "It does hurt. You can put some things on hold for a year or so.

MESQUITE (AP) — Bits of carpet still clung to the concrete slab of what once was a dwelling as Gov. Mark White picked his way through a storm-damaged neighborhood Saturday afternoon.

"My gosh," White exclaimed.
"This used to be a house? That storm just blew the entire thing away."

The Dec. 13 storm and tornado that whipped through Dallas and Ellis counties had brought White to the area to survey the damage — estimated to top $25 million in Mesquite alone. He camne to gather information to funnel to the federal government.

White has asked President Reagan to declare the area a disaster, a move that has brought applause from local officials and the storm victims he greeted Saturday.

"God bless you for coming," Bill Reffitt told White as the governor examined Reffitt's roofless dwelling in Mesquite. "And it looks like we will have a Christmas thanks to the Salvation Army.

White, saying the damage was "worse than I'd thought," in turn praised local officials for responding quickly to the tragedy and residents for stoically rebuilding in the storm's aftermath.

"Everybody out here is to be con-gratulated," White said. "I'm seeing an incredible spirit — a Texas spirit that makes me proud to be an officials said.

American and a Texan."

White told some of the storm victims that he expected to hear from the federal government soon on his disaster aid request. If it is granted, victims will be eligible for low-interest loans and grants.

As White's motorcade wound through streets in Mesquite and Balch Springs, he paused again to speak to Doris Buckmeyer, who was lifted along with her house and hurled a block away by the storm's tremendous winds.

"We consider ourselves lucky," said Mrs. Buckmeyer, who was missing a tooth and aching from a badly bruised face. "We're just thankful to be here.

The storm caught weather forecasters by surprise when it touched down the morning of Dec. 13. It ravaged more than 50 homes in Mesquite and about 350 in Garland, which White toured later by helicop-

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN - "Twas just days to the session, and all over Texas, Politicians were worried - both parties, both sexes. The cause of their fear, that persistently gnaws, Is that Bob Bullock says ther ain't no Santa Claus. Unfortunately for the 1985 Legislature, there's much truth - if little poetry — in that doggerel.

Comptroller Bullock has warned lawmakers that they can't expect any good news from his office on the state's revenue situation. In fact, the best news they can expect is that there won't be any more bad news.

"I think," one observer commented while reviewing the situation, "that Bullock has run out of miracles.'

In recent sessions, Bullock seems to have produced some miracles for lawmakers, but this time the comptroller is warning that his revenue estimate for the 1985 session isn't likely to change - unless it goes

And all indications are that the 1985 legislative session will be dominated by the theme of budgets. Money has always been the focus of intense interest in the Legislature, with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby having summed up the situation by pre-dicting before the 1983 session that the principal issues would be money, money and money.

So in 1985, the difference is in the fact that money will be in shorter supply (relatively speaking) than in previous sessions and the scramble to get it will be more vigorous.

The problem, basically, is that state revenues, which are heavily dependent on oil and gas, haven't been growing as rapidly in recent years, and with the weakness in the prices paid for oil and gas, the gush of money to the State Treasury has started to dwindle and dry up.

Texas also is faced with a growing population and demands for additional revenues due to situations over which the Legislature has little control, such as the need to overhaul the prison system due to court

The bottom line is that lawmakers need to come up with around $700 million in new revenues to keep spending for the next biennium at the same level as for the current biennium, or else reduce spending by about $700 million.

Legislative Budget Board members chose to recommend a budget that makes the necessary cuts, with the LBB taking the money largely (some $550 million) out of higher education.

Woman gives pint of blood in lieu of paying fine

Expectations around the Capitol are that those cuts will be revised considerably once legislators begin tinkering with the appropriations

But the LBB has done two things: it has signaled to lawmakers that they must be prepared to make some hard choices, and it indicates that an increase in college tuition is a certainty (with the only question being how much of an increase).

It also indicates that the state leadership is prepared to do almost anything to avoid having to increase taxes again.

Many of the newcomers to the Legislature are convinced that the reason they're in, and their opponents are out, is that the incumbents voted for increased taxes during the special session this past summer.

And those taxes were directly linked to improved highways and better education, programs enjoying at least the theoretical support of a majority of Texans.

So it's not surprising that the state leadership isn't keen on any kind of a tax hike in 1985.

Speaker Gib Lewis has said he

Lt. Gov. Hobby has said he's no for it.

Gov. Mark White has said it would be a last resort — not necessarily, but possibly, over his dead body. Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, who knows what it's like to be out in front on a tax bill, says he's no intention of handling another tax increase. Not many people are talking about a tax increase - but many are talking about how to get more revenue without raising taxes - with a state lottery, pari-mutuel betting on horse races, and repeal of the Blue Law among the ideas being promoted on that basis.

It's likely to be late in the session before it's certain how much money lawmakers will have, or how they'll spend it, but it's certain that there won't be enough to make everyone

"And so we conclude, at this holiday season,

Legislators are worried. And they have good reason. They've no place to hide, and they can't pass the buck. So hang on to your checkbook -

Pickens, whose Mesa Petroleum Co. is a principal partner in the group seeking control of Phillips, said he and his partners were just as concerned about Phillips employees

LET "SPACE" HELP YOU SELL

There is nothing that will turn off a prospective buyer faster than the look of a crammed house. Closets jammed with clothing, toys and boxes; messy garages or carports, overfurnished rooms; spilling-over bookcases, triple-stacked china cupboards; attics and basements with a flea-market look – all clutter turn buyers

Many buyers don't mention it, but Realtors can see the chill come over them. Some find it distasteful, others find it oppressive, as though they had to cope with all that. Whatever the reaction - it is always negative.

If you want to sell your home, make a good impression on buyers by having it look as spacious as possible. You do this by getting rid of everything extraneous, admitting as much daylight as possible and keeping the place shipshape. Now, not later, is the time to have your big sorting-out party. Inventory what you are going to sell, give away or throw away when you move. Then take action. Outer space is OK for astronauts. Inner space is good for homesellers.

DA wants to strip licenses of nurses, hospital officials

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Bexar County District Attorney Sam Millsap says he will seek to strip the licenses of two former officials and three former nurses at Medical Center Hospital, the site of a series of suspicious infant deaths. Millsap said Friday that hospital district and medical school officials did not violate any state laws, but he would file complaints alleging improper professional behavior with state licensing agencies.

The announcement came in connection with an investigation into deaths of infants at Medical Center Hospital between 1980 and 1982. The investigation has been handed to the U.S. Justice Department.

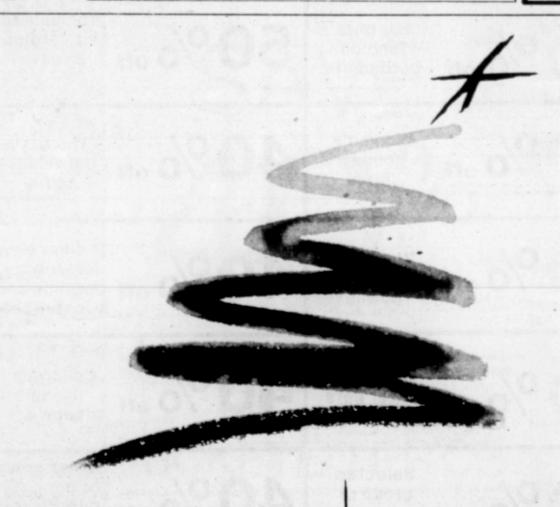

Former licensed vocational nurse Genene Jones was convicted in October of injury to a child. She was found guilty of injecting a 4-week-old boy with an overdose of heparin. a blood thinner, and was sentenced to 60 years in prison.

The boy survived. Ms. Jones already was serving a 99-year sentence for murder for injecting a 15-month-old Kerrville girl with an overdose of a muscle relaxant. That slaying occurred at a private clinic in Kerrville, where Ms. Jones worked after leaving Medical Center in 1982.

"It is my view that the response of certain doctors, nurses and hospital district officials was inadequate to the point of raising fundamental moral and ethical questions which, though not covered by state penal statutes, must be brought to the attention of their licensing authorities," Millsap said.

Millsap said he will file complaints against Dr. Marvin Dunn, former dean of the Medical School at University of Texas Health Science Center; Dr. B.H. Corum, former executive director of the Bexar County Hospital District; and nurses Pat Belko, Judy Harris and Virginia

Corum's attorney, Terrence Martin, said, "We haven't seen every-thing that Mr. Millsap has said, but as far as Mr. Corum is concerned, he did nothing wrong and will stand by

Prosecutor won't deal in robbery case

Two men charged in robbery will be tried together

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A federal prosecutor in the case against two men charged in the bloody robbery of a Geronimo bank that left four people dead said Saturday that the pair will be tried together and that no deals will be made in the case.

"No. Emphatically no. We will not deal," Assistant U.S. Attorney John E. Green said Saturday in response to questions about testimony from Robert Grady Johnson, one of two defendants in the case Johnson, 22, and Jay Wesley Neill, 19, were arrested Dec. 17 by FBI agents in San Francisco, where the two were on what investigators said was a spending spree. The FBI said $17,000 was taken in the robbery of the First Bank of Chattanooga branch in Geronimo, a town of 800. Three people were also wounded in the holdup.

Johnson is charged with aiding and abetting a bank robbery that resulted in death and Neill is charged with committing the robbery. Each count carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

In Lawton, Comanche County District Attorney Dick Tannery has also filed four first-degree murder charges against each man. Tannery said prosecutors will ask for the death penalty when the case goes to trial.

He said he also filed three counts of shooting with intent to kill involving three people wounded in the holdup, and one count of attempted shooting with intent to kill involving an infant who survived the incident unharmed.

Johnson is being detained without bond at a secret location in Oklahoma amid tight security, Green said Friday.

After a federal judge in San Francisco granted Johnson's request to be returned immediately to Oklahoma, Johnson was flown to Oklahoma City and appeared before U.S. Magistrate Ronald Howland late Friday night. Howland scheduled a preliminary hearing and bond hearing

Howland also appointed Public Defender David Booth to represent Johnson. Booth had no comment on the case. Green said officials are waiting for the extradition of Neill before deciding whether federal authorities or the state of Oklahoma will have first prosecution.

The prosecutor said he did not think there was a question of double jeopardy in the men being tried on both state and federal levels, but if it was determined there might be a problem, the more serious of the charges would "We already know what we are going to do," Green said, in reference to who would try the men first. "But we are not ready to make a public statement. We will wait for Neill to be brought back to Oklahoma.

Prosecutors intend to try Johnson and Neill together, Green said. He said prosecutors will seek indictments of the men from a grand jury thta will meet Wednesday.

In the federal court hearings in San Francisco, U.S. Magistrate Wayne Brazil granted both Johnson's request to return to Oklahom and Neill's request that he remain in California until his Thursday preliminary hearing.

Jerrold Ladar, an attorney appointed for Johnson by the court, said Johnson wanted to return to Oklahoma because no progress could be made on his case while he remains in

"To keep it pending here is not in his best interest," Ladar told reporters. "...He needs to be back with counsel. "...This case is moving forward in Oklahoma and stagnating here. I don't believe that's an effective way to deal with an onrushing train. Ladar said he was mystified by the request of Neill's lawyer, Assistant Federal Defender Harry Hellerstein, to scheduled hearing. 'Unless anybody grants him immunity, which I frankly doubt, he's not going to testify," Ladar said.

Robert Grady Johnson, 22, one of two men charged in the Dec. 14 robbery of a bank in Geronimo, Okla., that left four people dead and three wounded, is escorted to a order Johnson held in San Francisco as a witness in the hearing by U.S. Marshal Stuart Earnest in Oklahoma City. He and Jay Wesley Neill, 19, were arrested Monday.

Subway passenger claims he was being robbed, shoots four others

NEW YORK (AP) — A gunman who claimed he was being robbed opened fire inside a subway train Saturday, seriously wounding four passengers before he fled up the track, authorities said.

One victim was in critical condition, two were seriously injured and the fourth was in stable condition, hospital officials said.

Authorities said a motorman halted the southbound subway train just before it reached the Chambers Street station in lower Manhattan after shots were fired around 1:45 p.m.

A Transit Authority porter riding in the subway car told police that a slim blond man had entered the car, approached the four and opened fire, said Capt. John Kelly of the Transit Police. "It was not an

He said a motorman entered the car and spoke with the gunman, who "told him he was being robbed." The gunman fled as the motorman told the conductor to stop the train, Kelly said.

Transit Police Detective Melvin Skinner said all four victims carried large screwdrivers.

Kelly said the gunman was described as a thin, blond, about 45, wearing a light blue jacket and eyeglasses. Port Authority police picked up a man fitting the gunman's description as he left a commuter train in New Jersey, but he was later released, officials said

"This is amazing," said Seaman Renee E. Cauvin, 19, of Orlando, Fla., as people streamed into the Kure LORAN (Long Range Aids to Navigation) station. "This will boost morale like crazy."

Lt. j.g. David C. Ely of Norwalk, Conn., who has been here since April, said the special visit "will be appreciated because we now know the outside world does care.'

The crescent-shaped island is the only permanently dry land in the atoll at the extreme northwest end of the Hawaiian Archipelago. It is part of the state of Hawaii. The station, which provides continuous navigational signals for ships and aircraft plying the central Pacific Ocean, is the most isolated assignment in the Coast Guard's 14th "Out here we become a close-knit family and we treat each other like a close brother or sister," said Ely, the 26-year-old commanding officer of the LORAN station.

Following the white-bearded and bewigged McCrodden off the C130 were eight employees of McDonald's of Hawaii, wearing T-shirts emblazoned with the words "McDonald's of KURE." They served up 150 Big Macs and french fries in the station's mess hall. Later, they helped McCrodden give the station personnel T-shirts and drinking glasses provided by the franchise.

Judge orders money from drug arrest to be used for Christmas

EAGAN, Minn., (AP) — A judge and police have been using money from a drug arrest to buy food and Christmas presents for the needy.

Dakota County District Judge William F. Thuet directed that the money be used to help the needy.

"My job is to do justice," Thuet said Friday. "It seems to me that if you have people withou food and kids without presents, that is not just. It may seem corny, but justice is that they may have a happy Christmas."

Since Thuet became a judge last year, he often has asked people convicted of offenses such as burglary, drunken driving and drug-related charges to contribute money to community agencies as a condition of pro-

Man retires from Santa business

BELLE FOURCHE, S.D. (AP) — Without a flowing white beard or bright red suit, Joe Lemire of Belle Fourche resembles an out-of-uniform Santa Claus — jolly, relaxed and retired.

In past years, he'd already have squeezed his potbelly into a Santa Claus costume many times by now. But no more. He got out of the ho-ho-hoing business last week, selling his suit, two beards, two caps, bells - the whole works - for $50.

'All good things come to an end," Lemire said. "It gets harder to be nice. And nobody wants to see a limping Santa.'

A year ago, Lemire, a retired janitor, had hip surgery and didn't do any Santa Clausing. He expected to make a comeback this season but just didn't feel up to it. So he advertised his Christmas garb for sale. Sundance, Wyo., High School bought it.

Ex-Teamsters leaders indicted

DETROIT (AP) - Two former Teamsters union leaders have been indicted on charges they accepted money and free trips in exchange for steering the union's health care business to companies run by three men, authorities say.

Richard Fitzsimmons, 55, former business agent of Local 299 in Detroit and son of the late Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons, and Charles Collins, 41, former administrator of the Michigan Conference of Teamsters Welfare Fund, were named along with the health care officials in indictments revealed Friday.

If convicted, Collins faces up to 52 years in prison and a $90,000 fine; Fitzsimmons faces up to 43 years and a $60,000 fine.

Man sentenced in wife's murder

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — A chiropractor convicted of murdering his wife after her torso, cut up with a chain saw, was found in the Mississippi River, has been sentenced to a mandatory 50 years in prison.

James Klindt, 36, of Davenport, was found guilty in Sioux City on Nov. 20 of the second-degree murder of his wife Joyce, 34. It was his second trial; the first ended in a hung jury.

Defense attorney Larry Scalise said he would appeal. Klindt maintains his

Insane man can inherit mom's estate

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A man found innocent by reason of insanity in the stabbing death of his mother can inherit $17,000 from her estate because he hasn't been convicted of any crime, a state appeals court

Irene Brumage's brothers and sisters had filed suit to block Roland Brumage, 32, from inheriting. Brumage has been in the Florida State Hospital in Chattahoochee since 1981, one year after his mother, 65, was stabbed 40

The 4th District Court of Appeals said Wednesday that Brumage was entitled to the money in a ruling his attorney said upholds the rights of insane people.

Towboat pilot faces charges

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - A towboat pilot faces a Feb. 4 hearing on charges he was negligent in an accident that sank five barges and left 35 others adrift in fog on the Mississippi River, Coast Guard officials say.

The river was closed to barge traffic for almost 20 hours Tuesday night and Wednesday after the W.J. Barta's tow struck the Hernando DeSoto Bridge. Capt. B.E. Wetterlin "failed to do everything he could have done to avoid the accident," Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Steve McCall said Friday.

Wetterlin, of the Valley Lines Co., could face suspension or permanent loss of his license to operate a towboat, McCall said.

Man accused of selling secrets not given bond

LOS ANGELES (AP) - An engieer accused of trying to sell top-ecret stealth technology to the oviet Union was held without bail Saturday after a magistrate rejected defense arguments the man has close community ties and no previous criminal record.

Thomas Patrick Cavanagh, 40, faces a Jan. 7 hearing for arraignment on an expected indictment in U.S. Magistrate Joseph Reichmann on Friday rejected legal arguments by federal deputy public defender Dennis Landin, who said Cavanagh is "clean. Up to very recently, Mr. Cavanagh has had no contact with law enforcement. He has no history of drug or alcohol abuse. He is devoted to his sons and to his mother.

"Mr. Cavanagh has already come grips with a very terrible chapter his life...He understands the grav-

Landin said Cavanagh's wife, Rita, had offered to pledge the equity in two homes she owns to provide bail.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Percy Anderson said he could imagine no conditions under which Cavanagh could be freed.

"This is a man who was willing to sell out his country," he argued. The defendant has every incentive to flee this jurisdiction."

He said Cavanagh told undercover FBI agents he was seeking "big money" for documents on the U.S. secret stealth bomber program.

The stealth technology is designed to make bombers invisible to radar, and Northrop is known to be the key contractor working on stealth devel-

Air Force to be doing Navy's job

B-52s can launch Navy cruise missiles

By KNUT ROYCE Heasrt News Service

WASHINGTON - B-52 bomber crews may one day be singing 'Anchors Aweigh.'

In a rare mating of resources of two military services, the Air Force by the end of the month will be able to fire Navy cruise missiles against enemy ships from specially equipped B-52 strategic bombers.

'No, we won't have to wear Navy whites," Air Force Maj. George McVeigh, research and development officer for the program, said in an interview.

Though they may still wear Air Force blues, by Dec. 31 crews from a squadron of B-52G strategic bombers at Lorton Air Force Base in Maine will inherit a decidedly Navy mission - the sinking of enemy naval vessels.

They will fly the first nine of an eventual total of 30 B-52s, based at Lorton and Anderson Air Force Base in Guam, that will be capable of firing the Navy's Harpoon cruise missile, a seaskimmer with a range of about 60

And as the crews assume the new mission, a major gap in the Navy's role of defending the world's sea lanes will close with, of course, the help of the Air Force.

That, at least, is what the Pentagon hopes.

How to attack enemy ships out of range of Navy surface ships, aircraft and submarines has long troubled defense planners In 1971 the then-chief of naval operations, Adm. Elmo Zumwalt, approached the Air Force with the novel idea of using its longrange bombers with a new missile the Navy was developing against out-of-reach enemy ships. "So our original study began in 1971," Air Force Lt. Col. Nick Hinch, program planner for the B-52-Harpoon mating, said. "We were then looking at putting it on our B-52D models. But it was then

why. But in 1982 Air Force Chief of Staff (Lew) Allen said, 'Let's do

The Air Force got a major boost in speeding the program and cutting costs from an unlikely source - Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini. The late Shah of Iran in 1978 had ordered 42 Harpoons for Iran's navy, but the United States cancelled the sale with the arrival of Khomeini.

Stuck with the order, the Defense Security Assistance Agency agreed to sell those mis-siles to the Air Force at 1978 prices, about $475,000 apiece. The Air Force, through the Navy, will also buy an additional 35 from its manufacturer, the McDonnell Douglas Corp., for an estimated $600,000 each.

And by next July 1 all 30 B-52 bombers, which have an unrefueled range of 7,570 miles, will be equipped to launch the Harpoon. Another 39 will be wired to adapt to the Harpoon, but will not be fitted with the pylons and electronic black boxes. These can be installed quickly.

Maintenance and repair of the Air Force's Harpoons will be done by the Navy. In time of war those missiles can be transfered to the Navy, or the Navy can turn over its missiles to the Air Force.

Each B-52 will be able to carry up to 12 Harpoons, which are already in Navy service aboard surface ships, submarines, A-6 short-range carrier-based bombers and P-3 Orion submarine warfare planes.

The joining of resources by the two services, which was made official through the signing of a memorandum of agreement early this year, will not be the first one to involve B-52s adapting to naval missions

In 1971 the Air Force agreed to equip B-52s to drop mines, and in 1975 the huge bombers were put to duty for ocean surveillance.

Experts disagree with report on B-1 crash

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Aerospace experts are disputing an Air Force eport that blames human error, rather than design problems, for the fatal desert crash of a B-1 bomber prototype last summer.

The Air Force probe concluded that the Aug. 26 crash, which killed one man and seriously injured two others, was caused by the crew's failare to flip a switch that would have transferred fuel from the rear to the front of the $325 million bomber.

But the experts say changes being made in later versions of the bomber prove their contentions that the simple failure to set a switch should not have caused an accident vithout the crew's being warned a mistake had been made.

"Yes, there was crew error, but did the system lead them into it? Yes," said Calvin Shoemaker, a former McDonnell Douglas Corp. test pilot who works as an Air Force contract administrator. "I can see design deficiencies myself," said Tom Smith, executive director of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots. "What happened should have been designed out of the airplane before (the crash) ever happened. Critics also say the bomber's automatic flight control system, the Sta-

Air Force officials say the modifications are minor improvements in a satisfactory system, and Brig. Gen. John P. Schoeppner Jr., president of the Air Force board that investigated the accident, defended its finding.

The B-1's streamlined wings swing forward for maximum lift. Just before the accident, the crew pivoted them forward, which also brought the center of gravity forward. But they neglected to balance the aircraft by transferring the fuel. The fuel system, which has both an automatic and a manual setting, was on manual when the B-1

Friends help others handle loss of child

By MARK LEWIS Staff Writer

In "A Christmas Carol," the miserly Ebenezer Scrooge dreams of an unhappy Christmas yet to come, with the Cratchit family struggling to celebrate the holiday after the death of Tiny Tim. Then he wakes up Christmas morning to find it's not too late to change his ways, because Tiny Tim is still alive.

But for parents who've lost a child, Dickens' happy ending doesn't apply. When they wake up Christmas morning they still have to deal with the grief, and the holiday emphasis on family togetherness only accentuates the pain of their

"I lost my only child 12 days before Christmas," says Lettie England. "Christmas used to be the saddest day of the year for me."

That was 24 years ago. Christmas is no longer a sad occasion for Ms. England, not only because she subsequently had three other children. but because she learned to accept her loss. Now, as co-founder of the Permian Basin chapter of The Compassionate Friends, she helps other bereaved parents deal with the deaths of their children.

'We're a support group for people who have lost a child," she says.

Founded in Britain in 1969 and in the United States in 1972, The Compassionate Friends has more than 400 chapters in this country. The local chapter was founded a year ago by Ms. England, who's the administrator of the Presidential Museum in Odessa, and Dr. Sam Hooper, a Midland psychologist.

"We had both experienced the death of a child, and knew what it felt like," says Hooper. "We wanted to reach out to others and have someplace to go ourselves Hooper says the Friends are primarily a self-help group. 'We provide a group process - we talk about whatever anybody wants to bring up.

The group, which meets once per month, also maintains a library and provides telephone counseling for those who need someone to talk with between meetings.

'Family and friends sympathize, but there's a difference between Ms. England. "People need someone who's been there to tell them they're going to get through this."

The first step is to get people to talk about their feelings instead of keeping them bottled up inside, she

"Some people put on sackcloth and ashes and wear it the rest of their life. Death doesn't have to be

The hardest part, she says, is acceptance.

"It's not something that you get over; it's something you learn to live

Arrel Creech joined The Compassionate Friends last May, after losing her 7-year-old son.

"Samuel was my only one," she says. "I don't think I could have gotten through it without the people in

Ms. Creech says she didn't think anyone else could understand what she was going through until she joined the group and met other people who felt the same way.

"You think you're going crazy," Though being in the group has helped, "I know I'm not through with my grieving process," she said. 'It's very hard at Christmas time." For bereaved parents facing their first Christmas, Hooper recommends planning the holiday carefully. You need to leave time in the holiday for grief," he says. "Recognize the lost one - set a place setting at the table for them, or have a special ornament on the tree. And it's real not be left alone. Hooper also recommends special attention be given to any surviving children - "Reassure them that your love for them has not dimin-

In their grief, parents often tune out not only their other children, but each other, says Ms. England.

The divorce rate (for couples who have lost a child) is 85 percent. There's a tremendous strain put upon the marriage," she says. "If not rought out in the open, it's going to affect their relationship.

People sometimes accuse her of being morbid with all her talk about death and dying, but Ms. England insists she isn't.

'What people who haven't gone through it don't realize is it's always sympathy and understanding," says in the back of your mind, so you might as well use it in a positive

Guard change begun in Odessa

By LAWRENCE BUDD Staff Writer

ODESSA - The changing of the guard in prominent elected offices in Odessa will not be official until Jan. 1, but the transition switching old faces for new is already in State Rep. Jay Gibson will be relinquishing his seat in the Texas House of Representatives after six years. Ector County District Attorney Mike Holmes will return to private practice after four years as the county's prosecutor.

Also, two of four Ector County Commissioners — Julian Pressly and David Childers - cast their last votes Friday. Pressly, a former Midland Cub, will be completing 12 years in office, while Childers leaves after two four-year terms.

All four Democrats lost as nearly 25 percent of those casting ballots chose the straight-party Republican vote. All but Pressly were convinced

Mike Holmes the outcome would have been different in a Ronald Reagan-less year. T've been here long enough," said Pressly of his three terms. "I've probably been here too long. On election night, Childers said, All the Democrats got Reaganized. I didn't get beat on principle, I got beat on party. Gibson, voted one of the state's 10 best legislators by Texas Monthly magazine, attributed his loss to the electorate's involvement "in the

Julian Pressly

David Childers "I'm not so sure that talent for getting votes relates to the talent to serve," added Gibson.

However, the legislator emphasized his support for the electoral system. "It may not seem in isolated cases that the right thing happened, said Gibson, But overall, the system works and the participants are expendable.

"I think a large number of people came to vote basically for Reagan and Gramm," said Holmes, who, in losing by 722 votes, came the closest to overcoming the GOP blitz.

He called for abolishment of the straight-party vote. "It's an easy wasy to vote and it's a miserable way to vote," said Holmes

Like Holmes, Gibson plans to return to his private practice in Odessa. He claims to have had no contact with Gov. Mark White, despite rumors that he will be joining the governor's office.

"The financial rewards of being a legislator are not that great," said Gibson of the $600 per month salary. He estimated serving in Austin cost him $40,000 per session.

He listed as one his proudest accomplishments his work on the Conference Committee which hammered out the compromise that became the 1983 tax bill. During his three terms, Gibson was largely responsible for the Texas Tech Regional Academic Health Center in Odessa becoming a reality.

Midland mother wants to give child every chance to hear

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Assistant City Editor

The 3-year-old blonde-haired girl poked her mother and asked about the man who had just walked out the door. The mother answered that he had left, and the girl then waved

No sound broke the silence, but the bridge of communication between the mother and her child was complete.

Penney Chappell wants that com-munication with her deaf daughter, Amanda Glasgow, to include sounds. To do that, Amanda may be the first child in Midland to undergo a new surgical procedure known as a cochlear implant in March at a Houston hospital. But Wes and Penney Chappell, who both work at Pylant Sign Co., will need monetary help to cover the costs that medical insurance won't.

The implant is an electronic device surgically implanted behind the ear. The device translates sounds into electrical impulses, which would allow Amanda to hear environmental and some speech

It still wouldn't allow Amanda to hear sounds the way people with normal hearing abilities do, said Mrs. Chappell. But she would hear learn to talk and to lip-read

Today, Amanda hears nothing. Mrs. Chappell didn't realize until Amanda was about a year old that her daughter wasn't capable of hearing. Even then, it was her sister and her mother who pointed out the child wouldn't respond when called from behind

'I didn't believe it," she said. Amanda was taken to Audio Acoustics for testing, and they couldn't determine the girl's hearing capability. She was sent for further testing to the lab in Odessa. One of their tests showed the girl "had no response whatsoever

Amanda was listed as having a level of 90. Most people are placed in the range of 0 to minus 10, said Mrs. Chappell.

They call hers a sensorineural deafness," a damaged cochlea which results in profound hearing loss, according to Mrs. Chappell. It could be hereditary; it could have been caused by an infection.

There is no deafness in Mrs. Chappell's family. The experts have theorized Amanda may have had an infection behind her eyes before she was born.

It wasn't easy for Mrs. Chappell to accept the diagnosis. "It took me a long time to learn signs. It meant I Mrs. Chappell. But she would hear would have to face up to her being environmental sounds and be able to deaf. Now, I wish I knew more

Amanda began learning signs at age 11/2. Now at age 3, she is in a pre-school for the hearing impaired at Parker Elementary School. In a class with four other children, Amanda is learning her ABCs, how to count to 10, the difference between hot and cold, left and right, big and small, and how to draw.

But Mrs. Chappell couldn't give up her hope that some day Amanda would hear. She heard about a cochlear implant and contacted a doctor in Houston. These operations are being performed only on children who have profound hearing loss, she said, and Amanda appears to have qualified. She will be evaluated before the surgery is performed.

"With this implant, I wish it would make her hear like you and I. Even with it, she won't have complete hearing. But it will help her to lip read and how to talk. It allows limited speech and will enable her to hear many environmental sounds. That's my main goal...to help her as much as I can."

Amanda is scheduled to go to Houston the week of March 11. The operation will cost $14,000 and the evaluation will be added to that. The family is expecting insurance to pay for all but about $6,000. The help them pay these expenses, a fund has been established at Western State

GARY OTT

Friends: A lousy substitute at Christmas?

Not everybody goes home for Christmas. Not everybody can. Some people don't have a home.

Oh, they may have a roof over their heads, but "home" at Christmas means the home you grew up in, your parents' home. That's where the childhood memories are stored and childhood memories are what Christmas is all

True, to millions of people Dec. 25 represents the birth of Christ, but even for most of them it is also a day to be with loved ones. A time to share. A time to let others know they are special. Come to think of it, God would probably not object to that. I've got to think He considers sharing more important than remembering His birthday. God is good about stuff

But not all people have someone with whom they can share their love. Friends are good but they can be a lousy substitute for family, especially at Christmas.

Which brings me to an old friend who called the other night.

He lives alone. His parents are divorced and have been for quite some time. He's not particularly close to either one of them. Never has been, in fact. He has a sister, but she lives several states away. "She's got her own family, anyhow," he said. "And, besides, her husband drives me up the wall. The mere thought of spending an extended period of time with him makes me

As a result, my friend will spend this Christmas just as he has the past several. Alone. I'll let him explain.

"I'll begin the day by sleeping late. That's crucial. Then, maybe catch a little TV, an old movie perhaps. Sometime that afternoon I'll go for drive. In the country. That's my form of relaxation, my special time for thinking.

'Later, I'll find a restaurant and have some Christmas dinner.

Chicken fried steak smothered in white gravy. It's sort of a tradition with me. I've had it every Christmas for as long as I can remember. What can I say? It beats turkey and dress-

After that, I'll go home and read a little before going to bed. It's no big deal. Just another day off."

Maybe so. But my holiday spirit was overflowing and I had to pry for some inner reason for this indiffer-

"Don't you have some friends you can spend the day with?" I asked, trying not to appear too sympathetic since I didn't want to embarrass

"I suppose," he replied. "But, to be honest, I'd rather not. If the friends are married then I feel like I'm intruding on their day and if they're not then they're probably the same eople I see everyday at work. Christmas just isn't that special to me. Spending it alone is not a crushing blow to my ego."

"Yeah, but isn't it lonely? I mean, Christmas is a time for togetherness. Don't you long for companionship, someone you can share the day

"Not particularly," he answered. Look, man, you needn't worry about me. I don't hate Christmas. I'm not advocating we do away with it. If families want to get together on that day, fine. More power to them.

"It just doesn't mean that much to me personally. Never has. Maybe it goes back to when I was growing up. Our family wasn't close and we never made a big deal about Christmas. We'd give a few gifts, but

'Now we've all grown apart. We live in different worlds. I celebrate Christmas my way. They do whatever it is they do. But the main thing is, on Dec. 26 we all go back to

By KEN HERMAN Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN - The state law that effectively bans Sunday shopping could fall in 1985 under the pressure of a combination of forces that might overcome past legislative inertia: organization, the state's money needs and the spark of open revolt among merchants. The blue law, an often confusing list of 42 items that can't be sold on both days of a weekend, has survived previous repeal attempts despite occasional court decisions against it and dogged fights by individual retailers. But the 1985 fight will be different. Major retailers have organized and hired lobbyists to fight the blue law. They say their customers want to shop on Sunday.

The open revolt that has rekindled interest in blue law repeal is occuring in Houston, where more than 200 stores began violating the law just in time for Christmas shoppers. Those store owners say many newer Texans are used to shopping on Sundays in their previous home states.

That "new Texans" argument makes no sense to Moore, whose 1,500-member retailers association recently re-affirmed its affinity for the blue law.

"People move to Texas because they like our lifestyle. Now they want to make it like the lifestyle they came from," he said.

They would like the convenience of shopping on Sunday," Moore said of Texans. "But I don't think there's great groundswell of public demand for repeal of this law.

Will state raise taxes, tighten belt?

By GARTH JONES

AUSTIN - The big question Texas legislators face when they open their 1985 session Jan. 8 is whether to raise taxes or try to pay for state government out of current reve-

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby says he will not be pushing for new taxes, but has not said he would oppose them.

Although the special session in the summer of 1984 passed a $4.8 billion tax hike, the first general tax increase since 1971, Comptroller Bob Bullock estimates the state will be in the red by at least $900 million by the fall of 1987 unless something is done to cut spending or raise reve-

The faltering oil and gas economy, which provides a substantial portion. of Texas' tax dollars, has cast a cloud of what Legislative Budget Board Director Jim Oliver calls "gloom and doom" over state finances

He said the LBB - which drafts the 1986-87 budget that legislators start their work with - "has the assignment and determination to write a budget within available revenue. That means there will have to be some budgetary cuts to some agencies and institutions far below the current level."

Not all lawmakers agree the state's financial belt has to be tightened enough to avoid taxes.

There's going to be a tax bill," said Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin. 'Our only hope right now is God, Santa Claus and a good economy or a tax bill. There's no way we can get out of the Legislature without a tax

"I bet a nickel to a doughnut there will be a push for a tax bill," said Rep. Kae Patrick, R-San Antonio.

"I think it would be a sad mistake if we just said there is not going to be any money, so we won't do anything," said Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena. "That would be a great disservice to everyone "Alternatives" is the buzz word in Capitol corridors these days. Everyone wants to find money somewhere other than from new taxes.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee that would write any tax bill, says one option is "fine tuning" present tax levies to provide more revenue

Other legislators have proposed increased state college tuition and other state fees. Another money-maker that some are proposing would tap proceeds from the $4.3 billion Permanent School Fund, which gets about $40 million a month from oil and gas royalties. The State Board of Education immediately warned it would wield its considerable influence against any such move to disturb the fund. The proceeds are too important to the future of public schools, the board declared.

Then there are those who see easy money from horse race betting or a state lottery.

A parimutuel betting bill passed the Senate in 1983 but failed by two votes in the House. Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, says he will be back in 1985 with a horse racing bill that would raise $200 million a

Bills for a state lottery already have been introduced in the Senate and House, although the governor has said he opposes the idea. Some of the state's biggest headaches may come from federal court orders directing the state to make improvements in the Texas Department of Corrections and the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardations. Both could cost big

It is often said that Midland is a good place to raise a family. That's because families, like Steve Davidson's, place a high priority on family life and community service.

Steve and Jan are both involved in a number of community organizations. Jan serves as chairman of the Children's Dental Clinic which is sponsored by the Junior League of Midland. She is also on the Board of the Developmental Disablity Center, the Advisory Board for Early Childhood Intervention and the Advisory Committee of the Craniofacial Deformity Foundation. In addition, Jan is active in St. Nicholas Episcopal

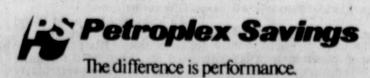

Steve, who is serving a third term on the city council, is on the Board of the Midland Hospice, the Midland Housing Finance Corporation Board, Board of Directors for Petroplex Savings, and the Midland College Foundation Board. This oil and gas producer and investor was president of the Jaycees in 1979 and 1980 and was selected as the Outstanding Young Man of 1982. Having been in the first class of Leadership Midland, Steve is especially excited about serving as Advisory Board Chairman of that organization, now.

Though these organizations are important to Steve and Jan, their family takes first place. In fact, when talking about her many activities Jan speaks with greatest pride about her role as Chris's mother. Chris's own struggles with craniofacial deformity have prompted Jan's involvement in many supportive organizations.

Steve expresses their priorities this way, "we spend quality time with Chris... he's our little prize." That's why Steve jumped on a bike and pumped Chris 91/2 miles in the last American Diabetes Bike-a-thon before even asking how far he

By H.A. TUCK

All the Midland College offices and functions are closed this week for the Christmas holidays. However, we hope that you'll come out - and bring your out-of-town guests - to hear the Christmas music playing on the Hodge Carillon. It's really lovely, probably some of the best music for the sound of a carillon. Several selections play at 12 noon, 4 p.m., and 8:20 p.m. each day.

Offices open and early counseling resumes for the spring semester on Wednesday, Jan. 2. Students can pick up time permits for registration from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and again on Monday, Jan. 7. Registration is scheduled for Jan. 9 and 10 with classes starting Jan. 14.

Those time permits are important, since they assign a specific time for each student to report for registration. So the earlier students complete pre-registration, the better time permit they receive.

Irrigation approved

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - The Texas Water Commission has granted an application by W.T. Averitt, III, for an amendment to a permit which authorizes the maintenance of two dams and reservoirs on Monahans Draw for irrigation in Ector County.

The amendment increases the number of acres to be irrigated from 495 to 800, which are located about four miles southeast of Odessa, according to the TWC staff, and increases the amount of water allowed to be diverted annually from 1,845 acre-feet to 3,200 acre-

The amendment also increases the number of diversion points along Monahans Draw from one to three. The draw is a tributary of Midland Draw, which is a tributary of Johnson Draw, Mustang Creek, Beals Creek and the Colorado River.

In other action, the TWC has granted an application by the U.S. Department of the Interior for a permit authorizing the disposal of treated domestic wastewater effluent by evaporation at Big Bend National Park.

The applicant proposes to use two evaporation ponds in Brewster County to dispose of treated sewage from campgrounds at the Rio Grande Village in Big Bend National Park, at a rate not to exceed an average of 23,000 gallons per day.

The plant site is in the drainage area of the Rio Grande in the Rio Grande Basin, according to the TWC

From Staff Reports

Miscellaneous clothing, valued at about $500, was reported stolen either Thursday or Friday from a vehicle belonging to Ann Riddle, 4319-A W. Dengar, according to Midland Police Department reports.

Ms. Riddle told authorities someone broke into the vehicle between 2 p.m. Thursday and 11 a.m. Friday while it was parked at an undetermined location.

Police said an unknown suspect apparently entered the vehicle by unlocking a right-side door; possibly with a coat hanger. Damage to the door was estimated at $50.

In other complaints, two lawn mowers and a weed trimmer were reportedly stolen either Friday or Saturday from a garden shed located at the Ernest Holloway residence at 3116 W. Ohio, said police

Police said the exact time of the theft is unknown. The property together is valued at $769, according to the report.

Three treated for gun wounds

From Staff Reports

Three Midland men were treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital Friday for gunshot wounds they suffered following an argument with an unknown suspect at La Oficina Bar, located south on the Rankin Highway, Midland County Sheriff's Department reported. According to the report, Maximilliano Hidrago, Everarde Hidrago and Hector Lozano, all of Midland. reportedly were shot about 11:15 p.m. Friday by an unknown Hispanic man following a verbal argument outside the bar.

No arrests have been made in connection with the shooting. An investigation into the incident continues, according to the report.

Stormie's life 'enough for Christmas gift'

Girl's family still feels expense of heart-liver transplant

Associated Press

DALLAS - The traditional trappings of Christmas, such as a tree and loads of presents are missing from the frame house where Stormie Jones lives — but her family is still grateful for the holiday season. Stormie's family may not have money for a tree and gifts, but they have their little girl, who underwent a historic heart-liver transplant this

Her little girl's life is enough for a Christmas gift, says her mother, Lois

"My children are healthy and we have a home to spend Christmas in, and that's all I care about," Mrs. Jones said. "Last Christmas, we all thought it might be our last one

Seven-year-old Stormie, who underwent the surgery Feb. 14, left her former home in Cumby, Texas, a year ago this week for Pittsburgh, where the transplant was performed.

It has been a hard and expensive year, Mrs. Jones said — so expensive that the family can't afford a Christmas tree or many presents.

But last Christmas, the family spent the holiday worrying that Stormie might not live until spring. This year, Stormie says, her biggest concern is when the rest of her baby process the excessive cholesterol, teeth will fall out.

"I have four more loose tooths," she said, revealing an already gap-toothed smile. "And I have a cough because I played outside without my shoes.

To Mrs. Jones, loose teeth and coughs are pleasant reminders that Stomie has returned to a fairly normal childhood. Even the shrieks and the mess of a pillow fight are wel-

Stormie, who suffers from a rare genetic disorder that causes an abnormal build-up of cholesterol in her blood, became seriously ill in the summer of 1983. Her liver could not causing it to accumulate in her arteries and damage her heart.

By December 1983, she had suffered two heart attacks and had to undergo open heart surgery in Dal-

"We left the hospital after her surgery last year on Christmas Eve," Mrs. Jones said. "The doctor told us she had six months or maybe a year to live, but she was so weak that I felt like it wouldn't have even been that long.

Doctors said Stormie's only hope was a heart-liver transplant — a then-untried procedure developed by Dr. Thomas Starzl at Presbyterian-University Hospital in Pitts-

Since the Valentine's Day operation, doctors say Stormie's progress has been excellent.

But the expenses continue. Her occasional visits to the hospital are expensive, Mrs. Jones said.

A recent two-day set of tests cost nearly $2,000 and the family still owes $8,000 to Pittsburgh's Children's Hospital, where the surgery vas performed.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Jones says the family is determined to have a "normal" Christmas this year.

Citrus producers await signs of canker's defeat

By IKE FLORES Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. - Round one is over in Florida's costly battle against citrus canker, the fast-spreading bacterial threat to the state's billiondollar citrus industry, but spring's new growth could produce the first signs of the tree-killing disease in commercial groves. Since canker was discovered in nurseries in August, 7 million trees and more than a quarter-million tranplanted seedlings have been destroyed in efforts to stop its spread from suppliers into 780,000 acres of open groves in 35 of Florida's 67

Now growers and state officials must play a waiting game until late February and March to find out if the campaign succeeded.

Some growers believe the disease may already have spread from infected seedlings and is ready to attack new twigs, leaves and fruit which appear in the warmer

On Wednesday, U.S. Department of Agriculture officials said they had given up trying to find the source of the citrus canker in Florida.

"We're going to end that fishing expedition," said Richard Allen, regional inspector general for the USDA. "We've got too many other cases to work on, it's costing too much money and the probability of success is too low.

There is no known cure for canker. Plants that are or may be infected must be burned.

The disease doesn't hurt mature leaves, branches and fruit to a great extent. That may be one reason it hasn't made a visible appearance in commercial groves yet, experts say. But tender new leaves and fruit are prime targets.

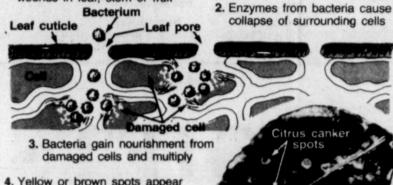

"I'll be awfully surprised if we don't pick it up from the resets" or new plantings that went into established groves, Charles Poucher, chief of the state Department of Agriculture's Pest Eradication and Control Bureau, said last week.

"To what extent, nobody can predict," added Poucher, who heads the effort to wipe out the bacteria making its second Florida appearance in half a century.

Bobby McKown, executive vice president of Florida Citrus Mutual, the state's largest growers' organization, called the spring flush "a critiAGRICULTURE cal period when the trees will be the most susceptible to canker."

Poucher said he also expects canker to show up in home garden trees throughout the state.

"There were at least 86,000 young trees from infested nurseries that were sold on retail markets to homeowners" before a quarantine was declared, he said.

At last count, Poucher's 300-person task force had burned almost 7 million trees in the seven nurseries originally found to be contaminated and in 50 others that received stock from them. Teams also have dug up and destroyed hundreds of thou-sands of resets bought from those suppliers by growers who needed to replace trees wiped out by last year's freeze

But they have not been able to fight the threat of infected home garden trees, because no records are kept of retail sales.

A publicity campaign is planned for January and February to try to identify as many retail buyers as possible and get them to destroy

And experts said Friday that they would search for infected trees in every yard in four southern Florida counties, where there are nearly 1.3 million households.

Growers are "worried," said Wilson McGee, retired industry execu-

McKown said that if canker is detected in groves this spring, "the industry will be faced with a very critical decision of ... eradication vs control. Based on the economics and complexities within the industry, we think it would be extremely difficult to be faced with the prospect of having to find ways to somehow live with the disease

Canker is harmless to humans, and industry leaders are pumping millions of dollars into marketing programs which include assurances of consumer safety for both fresh and processed fruit.

With no evidence yet of canker in the groves, this season's harvest is getting into full swing. Growers expect to pick about 119 million 90pound boxes of oranges — the pre-mier crop — and 41 million boxes of

"Caution" should probably be the watchword for livestock producers with regard to marketing during the approaching holiday season.

The demand for beef generally declines during the holiday season as consumers eat more turkey and ham. Also, supplies of livestock tend to become erratic in the last few weeks of the year. A few days off around the holidays usually stimulates some extra livestock movements to the sales market. Yet, because of lighter demand, there may not be as many buyers around.

Producers thinking about marketing some livestock in the next few weeks should consider the follow-

- Many live stock auction markets are closed during the holiday weeks. Before loading out stock for shipment to a market, check if it is operating that day.

- Since many markets are closed during the holidays, market news reports are often discontinued or abbreviated over these weeks, making price information hard to find.

Kosher traditions also affect the demand for cattle. This is especially true during non-slaughtering, feasting or fasting Kosher holidays. For example, Hanukkah begins on December 19 and there will be eight days of feasting.

— Both Christmas and New Year's Day fall on a Tuesday this year. Normally, that's quite a heavy slaughtering day of the week, so the demand for slaughter livestock may be affected greatly by the holidays this year.

- Livestock prices also are influenced by the holidays. Generally, price strength, as we move into these holiday weeks, yields to price stability until this period is

The holidays, and the traditions that surround them, have a big impact on the amount of money available for spending on meat. Christmas presents, family trips and other holiday expenditures take top priority during this time of year.

The bottom line, then, is for producers to proceed with caution as far as livestock marketing is concerned during the holiday season.

Mechanics of judging, arena routines, pattern scoring systems and other key points will be discussed and demonstrated.

Fish farmers from throughout Texas, as well as those interested in raising shrimp and crawfish, are invited to a two-day conference at Texas A&M University, January 23-24. Some 25 special workshops will deal with a wide range of topics. including water chemistry, marketing, shrimp farming, fish diseases, pond construction, aquatic plant control, computer applications, pond construction and fish handling. A trade show and poster session are also planned.

If the bear's a boar, what does that make his mate?

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON - The Agriculture Department's new yearbook, "Animal Health," offers a fertile source in case someone wants to design a trivia game around animals on the farm, in the wild and around the house.

For example: The male bear is a boar, the female a sow. The same goes for male and female hogs. But the offspring of a bear is a cub, while that of a hog is a piglet or shoat. A group of bears is a sleuth. A group of hogs is a herd or drove. A bear giving birth is cubbing, while a hog giving birth is farrowing.

Get the idea? OK, in the same mode a male cat is ok, in the same mode a male cat is a tom, a female is a pussy or queen. The offspring is a kitten, and group of cats is a clowder. When a cat gives birth, it is called queening.

The male sheep is a buck or ram, the female a ewe or dam. Their offspring is a lamb or lambkin. And the birth event is lambing. A group is a flock or hurtle flock or hurtle.

If a goat is kidding, it is giving birth to a kid. The male parent is a billy or buck, the mother a nanny. A group of goats is a trip.

"Humans, through the ages have developed a special bond with their animals," says a chapter in the yearbook. "In many instances, particular and separate names have evolved for each sex, the young, and for that most magical time of all - giving

The chapter, "Common Names for All Animals," was written by Larry D. Mark of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, and Edward D. Menning, executive vice president of the National Association of Federal Veterinarians.

"Animal terms and characteristics color our language," the report said.
"He's chicken and she's pig-headed, so where's the beef? She's catty, she's kittenish, she's just a pussycat. He's a bull in a china shop, he's lion-hearted, but sometimes a turkey. "She's a silly goose and he's a funny bird, but they're making calf eyes at each other, so it must be puppy love. Well, it's a dog's life... frankly, we're kind of sheepish about the whole thing."

Cattle can live to be 30 but usually ly make it to 20 or 25 — assumit ey are not turned into steaks a ts long before then.

Other recorded lifespans include: Horses, a maximum of about 50 years and usually 20 to 30; hogs, 27 and 16; cats, 21 and 13 to 17; dogs, 34 and 13 to 17; rabbits, 13 and 5 to 6; chickens, 30 and no average listed; canaries, 24 and no average listed;

In matters of gestation — the time between impregnation and birth — the elephant holds the pregnancy record of 20 to 22 months, followed by the sperm whale, 16 months, and the giraffe, 14 to 15 months.

Among domestic animals cattle have a gestation period about the same as humans, ranging from 279 days to 290 days, depending on the breed. Horses, by comparison, carry their young up to 345 days. The gestation period for hogs is 112 to 115

Gestation periods for household pets range up to 59 to 68 days for cats, 56 to 68 days for dogs, 15 to 18 days for hamsters, 30 to 35 days for rabbits, and 21 to 30 days for rats.

in Midland that isn't being fully met for the basic necessities of life — with food being at the top of the list - the Midland Reporter-Telegram launched a program in mid-November to help a number of the community's less fortunate residents.

The program, entitled "Midland Cheer," sought contributions from Midland residents to be used to purchase food for the city's needy residents in the spirit of sharing that dominates this season. It was the brainchild of Reporter-Telegram advertising director Richard D. Hardin and was coordinated by the newspaper's Promotion Committee he heads. "Midland Cheer" was patterned after similar programs in other communities.

Although the newspaper's executives were confident the program would be successful in Midland, they truly did not anticipate the outpouring of compassion that materialized. By the deadline set for contributions, more than $7,000 had been received and by the close of business Friday, with late arrivals still trickling in, the total was approaching $8,000.

Late in the week, Promotion Committee members began purchasing foodstuffs for packaging and distribution to those residents who met the guidelines of

The various aspects of the program are highlighted elsewhere in today's edition.

There are many who deserve a heartfelt thanks for their role in making "Midland Cheer" so successful in its first year - Hardin and the Promotion Committee, the merchants who made food available to newspaper personnel at below retail prices, the many newspaper volunteers who devoted time and effort to making the packaging and delivery flow smoothly.

But most of all, warmest gratitude must be reserved for the many contributors from all walks of life in Midland who during reached into their pockets willingly to make the Christmas season a little brighter for 108 Midland families.

We've said it many times before and we'll say it many times again, but the caring and sharing nature of Midlanders is what makes the community so

The bombings of the American Embassy and the Marine barracks have left even the cockiest of the president's advisers understandably gun-shy. Talk of a "major peace initiative" no longer echoes in the corridors of power.

The new, unannounced policy for Lebanon has already taken effect. Beyond an occasional word of encouragement for an Israeli troop pullout, the administration is taking pains to keep its involvement in the country's terminally complex problems to an absolute minimum.

The new Reagan attitude toward the Middle East, born of equal parts frustration, experience and caution, should not be confused with a 'hands-off" policy. The United States can't afford to pick up its few remaining marbles and go home in a huff. But the administration seems to have learned the hard way that it cannot meddle quite so vigorously and simplistically in a situation that has never been susceptible to easy solutions

It will hold its friends' coats and

What will the United States do,

encourage them to fight for a power balance that will be acceptable to this country's interests. It will sell them the arms they need to equalize the pressure exerted by Soviet scheming and Iranian-led Moslem fundamentalism.

In fact, one administration insider told my associate Lucette Lagnado that the White House's only Middle East policy now is arms sales.

Yet even this scaled-down "interention" in the region will give the administration its share of headaches. Arms sales to virtually any Arab nation east of Morocco historically arouse the many congressional friends of Israel to determined oppo-

The White House has no desire to replay the months-long battle that ended three years ago with hairbreadth Senate approval of the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia. Even though the 1984 election is over, the White House knows that overenthusiastic arms sales to Saudi Arabia and Jordan in 1985 could doom Republican control of the Senate in 1986.

Yet the administration is apparently determined to set forth on this politically risky path. Administration supporters on Capitol Hill have already visited Israel to forewarn officials there and give them the administration's view

Said one insider, "The line is: 'We've been holding back. We cannot hold back any longer." Whether this works or not is problematical. The Israelis are politically savvy enough to realize that the electionyear fear of offending Jewish voters would diminish, but they're also politically savvy enough to urge their friends in Congress to do what they can to minimize the strengthening of Israel's enemies

My sources are divided on the question of whether the arms deals contemplated by the administration are unreasonable. According to reliable sources, the White House is giving serious thought to selling the Saudis an unblushing attack version of the F-15 fighter, as well as bomb racks for the F-15s they got in 1978. These planes were given some offensive capabilities in 1981 over Israel's objections.

One congressional source recalled with exasperation that when the Saudis were first allowed to buy the F-15s, the Carter administration assured Congress the planes would not have bomb racks — unarguably offensive equipment. If President Reagan now decides to sell the Saudis bomb racks, there will be a major furor on Capitol Hill.

There have also been some hints from the White House that it might sell M-1 tanks to the Saudis.

The experts argue that the Saudis need the weapons for protection against Iran. But the two countries are separated by the Persian Gulf, and unless the Iranians possess a hitherto undemonstrated capability for large-scale amphibious operations, this justification can only be classed as bizarre.

Moreover, critics of the suggested sale argue that the Saudis already possess a large and sophisticated arsenal to counter any threat from

The administration's intention to sell F-16s to Jordan has an even greater potential for political carnage. Israel is already lobbying vehemently against this idea.

It seems doubtful that the White House could win this one in Congress. It will need either House or Senate approval, as in the 1981 AWACS fight.

But the House can be counted on to defeat an approval resolution by at least as resounding a vote as it did the AWACS sale. And the White House is missing some key supporters in the razor-thin 1981 Senate vote. Both Sens. Charles Percy, R-III., and Roger Jepsen, R-lowa, were beaten this year. And Percy's crucial loss of Jewish support will serve as an object lesson, particularly for senators who face re-election in Having suppressed Solidarity, the tyrants have slightly modified martial law and released some prisoners. To these mocking "concessions" the Reagan administration has responded by opening the IMF to the tyrants, leaving them better laced than they were before imposing martial law. The tyrants take 10 repressive steps, then one minor "liberalizing" step (while torturing and murdering a priest), and are richly rewarded. This disgusting episode marks the collapse of the moral pretensions of Reaganism and illustrates the dialectic by which democracies perish.

The Reagan administration, tickled by the improved "atmosphere," notified the tyrants of their IMF victory the day before police gassed and clubbed Lech Walesa and other peaceful demonstrators. I remember as a boy of about 11 years waiting, hoping and, yes, even praying that there would be a bicy-cle under the Christmas tree with my name on it. Those were the days when presents meant everything, as is the case for many children. But we were a monetarily poor farm family with little to spend on expen-sive presents and the $40 to $60 a new bicycle cost was a little much. My parents were kind, telling me they would see what they could do but making no promises.

I wasn't blind, though, and I found to a statement about what the cele- it difficult to hide my disappointbration of Christmas is — to me. You ment at the fact no large package

And I remember going to get a Christmas tree. No, not the way it's done today but the way it was done in the 1950s. Driving to a part of the county where the appropriate trees could be found, not pines but cedars, cutting one with a storybook Christmas tree shape, tossing it in

There were Christmases spent going into town to sing carols to the city folks and staying up late to try to catch a glimpse of Santa put-ting packages around the tree. -SPEAKING OUT-

Christmas provides own sense of wonder

By DR. DANIEL VESTAL

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." (Luke 2:10-11)

It happens to me each year. I don't know how, because it happens in different ways. But each year at this time something of the wonder of Christmas seizes me.

I don't know how to explain what it is. It's more than a feeling, although I usually have some deep emotional experience. It makes me want to cry and laugh at the same time, jump up and be perfectly still at the same time, shout and be silent at the same time.

This wonder is more than an intellectual experience. Every Christmas I do wrestle in my mind with the mystery of God becoming a man. My mind presses the question to its far-thest limits. Then like approaching a bottomless chasm, it stops and peers over into an unfathomable miracle. There is a part of me that wants to rationalize and grasp it all. And yet I am satisfied that I can't. This wonder is not produced by the same thing each year. Sometimes it comes as I listen to the children sing or re-enact the Nativity. In their off-key voices and near-ridiculous costumes, something happens to me, and I am seized by the Eternal. Somestately and solemn sounds of a Christmas oratorio. Sometimes it comes when I am in silent contemplation of the incredible claims of the Christian faith. Sometimes it comes while decorating the Christmas tree, or eating dinner on Christmas Eve. or watching my child open a gift. But each year, it comes to me - this wonder, this joy The wonder of Christmas is that the babe born in Bethlehem is our Savior. His very name, Jesus, actually means Savior. He came to this world to give His life as a ransom for many, to seek and to save that which was lost, not that the world might be condemned, but that the world through Him might be saved. That Jewish baby born of a virgin mother grew up to be a man, and by His death on the cross makes atonement for our sins. Jesus came into the world to do for us what we could not do for ourselves - to pay the penalty of our sins so that a loving, holy God could forgive us without sacrificing the moral integrity of His character. No one else could be our Savior. If there's anything this world needs, it's a Savior. For in spite of all our material, scientific, technological advances, we live in a world torn by hatred, war and greed. If there's anything families need, it's a Savior. Today there are as many divorces as there are marriages. Drug abuse is at an all time high. This society performs a million abortions a year. Families disintegrate daily and others are struggling.

If there's anything society needs, it's a Savior. Economics will not solve the problems of society. Politics, education, psychology will not produce the utopia. What is needed is a Savior who deals with the spirit of man. Jesus alone can deal with the societal problems of prejudice, hate, injustice, for He alone can change the human heart.

If there's anything you and I need individually, it's a Savior. We need someone who can cleanse our conscience of guilt, impart peace to our troubled mind, empower us to pray, to love, to live as we know we ought. Jesus is that Savior.

Also, the wonder of Christmas is that the babe born in Behtlehem is the Christ. The word Christ actually means "anointed one." It was a title used to speak of the expected Messiah. The history of Israel fathered a great expectation, a hope. Jesus came to fulfill that hope As the Christ, He is the bringer of a Kingdom. The purpose of the Christ was to usher in the Kingdom of God, and that's exactly what Jesus did. The wise men came seeking a King, and they found one. The forerunner, John the Baptist, said, "The Kingdom of God is here." The parables of

Dr. Daniel Vestal has been pastor of Midland's First Baptist Church since 1976.

For not with swords loud clashing,

Or roll of stirring drums; With deeds of love and mercy, The heavenly Kingdom comes.

Since Jesus is the Christ He is the key to world history. One of the questions that plagues historians and philosophers is the meaning of history. What is the significance of history? There have been many philosophies and theories. Some have defined hisory as cyclical; others as meaningless. Hegel said it was a dialectic, and Marx said it was inevitably moving toward a class-less society. The key to history is Jesus Christ. It is His story. As the Messiah of Israel He brings a kingdom. The purpose of history is to establish His Kingdom. History is the arena, the place where man is given the opportunity to be ruled by God. History is the story of how that is done and how it is not done. Jesus is the

There is one last reason for wonder, the babe in Bethlehem is the Lord. The word lord actually means ruler. In Israel's history the Hebrew word used for God is Yahweh, but often the word Adonai would be used as a substitute for Yahweh. Adonai means Lord. To say "Jesus is Lord" is to say that he is the Adonai of Israel. He is God Himself in human flesh. "He is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature; For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him. And he is before all things, and by him all things consist. And he is the head of the body, the church; who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence. For it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell" (Colossians 1:15-19)

Arturo Toscanini, the great maestro, was on one occasion conducting a symphony in the presentation of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. At the conclusion of the performance the audience was overcome by the power and majesty of the performance. In an almost euphoric spirit, they applauded and continued to applaud. Toscanini leaned forward and shouted something to the orchestra. Since this was so unusual they listened carefully and heard him say, "Gentlemen, I am nothing." Now this was quite an admission because the maestro was known to have a great ego. Finally, as the audience continued to applaud, Toscanini shouted once more to the orchestra, "Gentlemen, I am nothing, you are nothing, but Beethoven is everything, everything, every-

When I see the pettiness of our lives, the superficiality of our love, the greed and lust that plagues our world, I feel like saying, "We are nothing. But Jesus Christ, the Lord, is everything, everything, everything."

Oh, the wonder of Christmas there really is a God. He really does care. He really did come to this world. I really can know Him, love Him, and be loved by Him. Somehow it all comes together. It fits. It makes sense. But even more than that, it's real.

I wish for you this wonder of

When a family approaches the society for help we must determine their real problem and help to find a long-term solution to it. We do this by a visitation to their homes. In the meantime we will give immediate

Many cases we work on present problems and it is often extremely difficult to sort out the genuine from the false; some of their stories are very plausible. However, if there is any serious doubt, one must give the person the benefit of that doubt in the name of Christ.

'Unwanted' child knows mother's love

I'm sure some are tired of this subject but I need to address K.P. Walker and others with some opinion on abortion.

I don't have an answer other than the woman owns her own body for number four. But I have a question to add also. Who owns the child's body?

I don't know if K.P. can or has ever carried a child, but I have and I believe if something can react to light, a soft voice, or a soft touch it's a living being with a soul and body.

I also disagree with his theory that having an unwanted child is the ultimate in child abuse

I was born to a 16-year-old girl who didn't need or want a baby. And instead of thinking only of herself, she gave nine months of her life to me so I could have life and then she passed that life on to my adoptive parents who have bettered that life.

If my biological mother had aborted me she not only would have ceased my existence but that of my two sons also.

We've made other wrong decisions

The declarations concerning abortion made by K.P. Walker recently are based on invalid assumptions.

The statement concerning when a fetus has a soul is a religious and philosophical issue that has been debated for ages. That question may never be answered. Science does tell us, though, that human life begins at conception. Most leaders in the pro-choice and pro-life groups agree with theis biological fact. The important question is when does this human being become "viable" or self-sustaining. The fact is that smaller premature babies are being saved each year.

The Supreme Court and society have been wrong in the past. With decisions like the Dred Scott case (1873) making blacks non-persons and Justice Holmes Ir.'s decision in 1927 (Buck vs. Bell) to uphold Virginia compulsory sterilization laws. Holmes was quoted as saying, "I see no reason for attributing to man a significance different in kind from that which belongs to a baboon or a grain of sand.

Pastoral letter, bishops' forum on arms race

Some letters distort message of bishops

If one only read the Letters to the Editor and did not attend the Symposium on the Catholic Bishops' pastoral letter on War and Peace, one could easily be mistaken about what the Bishops teach on the morality of the nuclear arms race and nuclear war.

First of all, there was an overwhelming positive response to the Bishops' presentations. Since the symposium I have received numerous letters of appreciation for both sponsoring the talks and their content. The loud and prolonged applause given to the speakers was indicative of the audience response. Colleen Parro accused us (Dec. 17) of a lack of objectivity. I guess such a statement depends on one's point of view and one' agenda. We very objectively presented the teaching of the pastoral letter which was the purpose of the symposium. As offi-cial teachers of the Church we gave the moral teaching on this topic, which only reflects the clear teaching of the Church as contained in the Second Vatican Council and the many statements of the recent Popes, especially Pope John Paul II. Some people refuse to accept what the present Pope teaches on this issue which is far stronger than the teaching in the bishops' pastoral let-

It is not true to state that both bishops presented "disarma-ment/pacifist views." The pastoral letter does not endorse pacifism, although it respects those who choose such an interpretation of the gospel as a path to peace. Nor did the two bishops support any disarmament that was not bilateral and freedon in a captiulation to the enting the disarmament/pacifist verifiable, which seems to be the position our government is now taking. To imply that we suggested any unilateral disarmament is a complete distortion of what was clearly said for all to hear if they listened objectively.

To speak of objectivity, there is reason to doubt the objectivity of the one who during the question and answer period spoke of "the exciting High Frontier strategy of non-nuclear defense" by presenting it as a completely safe and thoroughly perfect defense against nuclear attack. Bishop Matthiesen pointed out that many military and scientific experts are not supportive of the "exciting High Frontier" and that in reality it would not offer a completely safe defense. To rely on this excessively expensive defense which will not guarantee safety from nuclear attack seems to be unwise to knowledgeable people, especially when one or two missiles that could escape this defense are capable of catastrophic destruction of lives and property.

Bishop Matthiesen has never encouraged workers at Pan-Tex in Amarillo to quit their jobs at this assembly plant for nuclear weapons. He has asked them to consider seriously the moral implications of their work, a piercing question which persons should ask themselves no matter what their occupation may be. It seems that some people do not want the bishops to raise the question of morality in regard to the nuclear issue. It would seem they prefer to divorce morality from the most serious implications for human life.

For anyone to suggest, as Colleen Parro did in her letter, that the bishops want our country to give up its Soviety Union is simply unconscionable. It seems to be a diversionary tactic to keep thoughtful people from an objective discussion of the nuclear question. The bishops have entered this public debate in order to bring the moral dimension to this extremely important issue which is in the finest service to the religious ideals of our country.

As individuals or as a nation we should never fear a discussion of the morality of what we are doing in the light of the Scriptures and accepted moral principles.

Most Reverend Joseph A. Fiorenza Bishop of San Angelo

On Dec. 3 4, and 5, Catholic Bish-

Balance, objectivity not present at forum

ops Mathieson of Amarillo and Fiorenza of San Angelo invited citizens of the cities of Abilene, San Angelo and Midland to join them in a discussion of the American Catholic Bishops pastoral letter, "The Challenge of Peace; God's Promise and Our Response." These invitations were extended ostensibly in response to the instruction by the Conference of Bishops as expressed in the letter itself. "Therefore we urge every diocese and parish to implement balanced and objective educational programs to help people at all age levels to understand better the issues of war and peace."

Those who attended the meetings (I observed the one in Midland) in the hope of hearing both sides of this most serious matter, were amazed at the glaring absence of either balance or objectivity. Both bishops spoke for two hours pres-views of Bishop Mathieson who ultimately called upon the audience to 'say no to nuclear weapons." Bishop Mathieson attempted to dismiss the exciting High Frontier strategy of non-nuclear defense by claiming since it is not a perfect defense it isn't worth talking about. Of course we know no defense is perfect, however High Frontier would be 90 percent effective in stopping nuclear missiles in flight BEFORE they strike our country.

That level of effectiveness would cause the Soviets grave uncertainty about whether they could launch a successful first strike, since they could not be sure which of their missile would penetrate the shield or which targets they would hit. This would provide the ultimate deterrent and after all, that's what American defense policy is all about preventing nuclear war through deterrence and hopefully soon, defense without surrender to nuclear blackmail.

The short question and answer period was dominated by the bishops' lengthy answers, to which questioners were unable to respond.

Freedom is worth defending. Unlike most American Catholic Bishops, we are not willing to entrust the lives and freedom of our children and grandchildren to the good intentions of the Soviet Union.

Since the Church is not going to provide a forum for objective debate on these issues, I urge the citizens of West Texas to organize and hold meetings where the other point of view can be heard. Speakers and films are available through our organization, High Frontier and Eagle Forum.

Soviet leader presses space advantage

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH

SAN FRAN-CISCO — The truth is that I'm rather tired and have been traveling coast-toour children and grandchildren this holiday season. Besides, I don't think that most Americans Hearst want to be sadlin propaganda offensive against our technological superiority in space. We can read all the meaning the U.S.S.R. fashions in its disinformation procedures calculated to cow the timid and menace people in the West hoping for a sincere peace. Our defense in space is based on non-nuclear rejection of hostile, incoming nuclear missiles. The Soviets are creating a late 1984 Orwellian smokescreen to deceive many well-intentioned people.

Above all, this is a time to gladden the hearts of children, not only with presents, holly and tinsel, but with the presence of families and friends. The radiant faces of boys and girls during these festive days is enough to shed a light that can't be dimmed.

Not all is fun and games, of course, despite the Christmas spirit. As a country of compassion, we are saddened by the misfortune of others, such as those poor starving people in Ethiopia and the victims in India of that poisonous gas horror. The bad news notwithstanding we Americans have much to celebrate these yuletide days. Foremost among them is the continued robust health of the nation's economy and what it means for most of us.

In this report a year ago I noted that one of the season's bright spots was the economic growth that had been taking place for more than a year. It is good to see that the forward movement has been constant throughout the months of 1984 While there may be some tapering off here and there in 1985, most economists believe that the pros-pects for the New Year are bright.

Heart implant patient regaining coordination

By LAWRENCE K. ALTMAN New York Times News Service

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — William J. Schroeder, the recipient of an artificial heart who suffered a series of strokes eight days ago, walked small distances in his room this weekend, exercised with weights to build up his strength and tossed a small balloon to improve his coordination, hospital officials said.

Schroeder also completed a radioisotope test that his doctors hoped would determine the source of his strokes and help them outline his future therapy.

Doctors at Humana Hospital-Audubon used a standard nuclear medicine scintillation camera to record where tiny radioactive blood frag-ments settled in Schroeder's body three days after they were injected into one of his veins.

By studying the tracks these radioactive platelets make in Schroeder's body, the physicians might be able to determine if there are any recently formed clots in his blood

A team headed by Dr. F. David Rollo plans to analyze the findings of this test to determine if the platelets settled in clots that might have formed in the artificial heart or other areas in his chest and neck. Pieces of such clots can break off and travel through the blood to the brain to cause strokes.

The Humana doctors also plan to send the findings of the test to expert consultants from Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., to obtain a second opinion. Results are expected to be disclosed here next Monday.

The radioisotope test has never been done in a patient or animal with an artificial heart. Thus, the results could raise more questions about the source of the clots, if any are found, than they answer, Dr. Allan M. Lansing, the chief medical spokesman for the Humana artificial heart team, said.

Meanwhile, Schroeder was described as making "slow, steady" progress in recovering from the strokes he suffered Dec. 13. He has recovered the use of his right arm and leg and overcome most of the speech difficulties he suffered.

However, the strokes left Schroeder, a 52-year-old retired federal worker, with impaired memory. Earlier this week, for example, Schroeder did not know the name of the president even though he spoke by telephone with Reagan a few

Dr. William DeVries, the surgeon who implanted Schroeder's artificial heart Nov. 25 in Kentucky, has not determined what caused Schroeder to suffer three small strokes after the surgery.

Last week, he said there was a "95 percent chance" they resulted from a blood clot breaking off one of the four metal valves in the artificial heart or from the remnant of Schroeder's natural heart to which the device is anchored

The heart patient exercised his arms and legs with one-pound weights and alternately tossed and caught a 4-inch balloon, Irvine said.

There is some confusion about Schroeder's mental status in part because his doctors have described it in different terms and in part because they have not spoken at a news conference since Tuesday.

Humana officials have described themselves as caught in a crossfire of criticism. One barrage comes from those who assert that Humana has held news conferences to gain extra publicity when there was little news. The other volley comes from doctors and journalists who have said that Humana is withholding important details from the public at a time when Schroeder has had a major setback.

given permission for the release of pertinent medical information. However, communications problems have occurred at times, leaving family members confused when they learned some details from the news media before hearing it from the Humana doctors.

Schroeder was warned that a stroke was one of the many devastating complications that could result from his participation in a highly experimental operation. His strokes, like those affecting thousands of other Americans, came sud-denly and unexpectedly. However, in his case they stopped what his doctors had described as an amazing recovery. The sudden turn of events vividly reminded his family, his docable roller-coaster nature of human

Mill town spending sad Christmas

New York Times News Service WARE SHOALS, S.C. - For nearly 80 years the lives and fortunes of people in this small community have been inextricably bound to the mill. Without it, the saying

By WILLIAM E. SCHMIDT

here goes, the only thing running in Ware Shoals would be the Saluda Now the mill is closing. The Riegel Textile Corp., whose founder sought out the steep falls along the Saluda in 1905 to build a factory to spin cotton thread into yarn and to weave fabric, announced last month that it was shutting down its Ware Shoals operation. As a result, the company said that before the end of March it would lay off its last 900 mill workers, a number equal to nearly half the current population of the town.

Since Riegel built the town, most of us just assumed that it would be here, I guess, forever," said Marion Carnell, who has represented Ware Shoals in the South Carolina Legislature for 22 years. "It's going to be a mighty sad Christmas for a lot of other small communities across North and South Carolina that owe their very creation to the textile industry, it is a season of bitter reck-

At least 400 of the mill's workers will be laid off before Christmas, a circumstance Carnell says is already reflected in a nearly 8 percent drop this month in grocery sales at the supermarket he owns here.

Over the past 11 months, about 50 of the nearly 1,700 textile plants in North and South Carolina have either closed or permanently laid off workers. That has already cost the industry 12,000 jobs, bringing overall textile employment in the two states to less than 330,000 jobs, the lowest total in nearly four decades. Even more jobs are expected to be lost next year.

With the closing of the red-brick mill, not only is Ware Shoals losing its major employer and its biggest taxpayer, but perhaps also the source of its municipal water supply: the company still owns and operates the treatment plant that supplies the town with water.

There is already talk among members of the Town Council about layoffs and cutbacks in local services. Some people here say that if they cannot find other work, they will have to move away.

The industry says that closings like the one in Ware Shoals are a direct result of the inability of the domestic textile manufacturers to compete with an unchecked flood of low-cost foreign imports, which have cost them millions of dollars in potential revenue.

The same day Riegel announced the closing of the plant here, it disclosed a loss of $16.1 million for the fiscal year, which the company attributed to cheap imports from lowwage countries. Riegel owns plants in seven states.

As a result, American manufacturers say they are going through a period of difficult transition: Older, unprofitable plants all across the South are being closed and others are being automated to trim labor costs and improve efficiency.

But all those explanations are little solace to the people who live in this community of 2,200 people, about 30 miles south of Greenville, in the rolling hills of the Carolina Piedmont. Six weeks after the bad news broke, people here are still try-ing to reconcile their future with their past.

From the beginning, the textile company and Ware Shoals were one and the same. It was, after all, Benjamin D. Riegel who built not only the mill but also the homes that housed his workers and the schools that taught their children. There was a company-built stadium where the company's semiprofessional baseball team used to play, and a company-run dairy that made ice cream out of the milk furnished by the company's herd of cows.

Permian, French share 5A football crown

Odessa Permian's Rich Fletcher (10) dives for short yardage, but finds the going rough as he lands in the hands of Beaumont French's Derrick Wilson during 5A championship game Saturday in Texas Stadium.

By BOB BRUNDAGE Sports Writer

IRVING - It was easy to spot the winning players after Saturday's 5A state championship game at Texas Stadium. They were the ones with their heads hung low in dejection, slowly walking off the field to the lockerroom. Many were crying. Neither Odessa Permian or Beaumont French players were in much of a mood for celebrating despite fighting to a 21-21 tie and the 1984 co-championship. Both teams wanted the outright victory. Both were disappointed with the hollowness of their victory, co-victory.

Unlike the rest of the playoffs, when the single-elimination football tournament is down to the final two teams, they revert to regular-season rules. There is no tie-breaker. No win by penetrations. No win by first downs. No win by total offensive yardage. There is only a tie.

And that's why the Panthers and Buffalos were dejected. There was only consolation in the fact they didn't lose.

"We wanted it real bad," said Permian defensive lineman John Fuller, who put tremendous pressure on French quarterback Mark Guilbeaux, sacking the senior slinger twice in the fourth quarter for a total of minus 18 yards. "But, I guess this is better than losing."

Permian coach John Wilkins had the same kind of attitude. "It wasn't in the cards today. I've said this before, I've been on both sides before. We won one and lost one. We would have liked winning this one but part of the pie is better than Fullback Dal Watson, who scored two Permian touchdowns to tie the game, said, "It's not a bitter feeling. I guess the word to describe it might completed 17-of-30 passes for 182 yards and still had one of his worst outings of the year with four interceptions and two fumbles (one of which he recovered himself, the other he lost), added, "There's a lot of tradition at Permian and I feel like we let a lot of people down. The quarterback gets all the glory in football. I think it's about time I got some of the goat.'

Split end Greg Anderson, who was on the receiving end of 12 Holloway passes - a new single-game school record - thought Holloway was to harsh on himself, saying, "This was a team deal. We tried, everybody tried. Alton had some interceptions and fumbles, but he was trying

From Beaumont's point of view. and from the way the Buffalos were shut down in the second half by Permian's defense, Coach Steve Shaver was just happy to have his team in the game. "This is our most satisfying year. The farthest we've ever been before is the quarterfinals and we lost that game 29-29 on penetrations. The underdog kids climb to the top. It's not something everyone gets to enjoy. Now I'm going to take a week off, sit back and enjoy."

NOT ONLY was there dejection in the Permian lockerroom because of the tie, but also because of a few calls in the game that cost the Panthers dearly: An interception return by Danny Servance for a touchdown called back to the Beaumont Frech 46; An illegal procedure penalty (called twice back-to-back) that erased a Rich Fletcher eight-yard TD run and gave the Buffalos a chance to intercept Holloway three plays later and a pair of pass interference calls that Anderson didn't get that could have scored or set up

"I don't want to bad mouth the refs but they ripped us off about four times and Beaumont about four times," said Holloway. "It was the worst officiating I've seen this year. Making that call of illegal procedure and we had seven men on the line. It was just an over-shift, a play we've been running all year and haven't been called on before."

Anderson thought he was interferred with on both questionable calls, saying, "Yeah, I thought so, but the refs didn't make the calls and we have to live with it."

The interception by French's Robert Kiel at the goal line, turned back what could have been the tying touchdown. It would have capped Permian's rally from a 21-7 deficit.

PERMIAN JUMPED out to a 7-0 lead with 9:53 left in the first quarter when Greg Anderson broke an 83-yard punt return, breaking a couple of tackles and picking up a key block from Davey Wright. Sophomore kicker Woody Bryant booted the extra point. It started a barrage of first half scoring.

Charlie Lacy: Long, hard struggle finally pays off

By BOB BRUNDAGE Sports Writer

What started out as a family event for a young Charlie Lacy back in '1957 or so when I was 10 or 11" has turned into a way of life. Today he's a member of the Professional Bowlers Association and is touring most of the national stops.

"I remember Dad used to take me out to Old Plamore here in Midland before this place was open (Regal Lanes, where Lacy still bowls in when not on the road). "My Dad (Charlie Sr.) was an avid league bowler, five or six leagues a week before he died," said Charlie. "My mother (Lily) also used to bowl in five or six leagues. My entire family were bowlers. We practically lived at the bowling center because of our involvement with the game. Even my sister (Becky) was a good bowler. She used to carry a 180 average."

From those family outings, young Charlie went into the junior leagues in which he was a part "of the largest junior bowling program in the United States here at Shamrock Lanes in 1959 and 1960," said Lacy, now 38. "If I remember correctly we had 40 lanes with four bowlers on a team and all of the lanes were full. We also had a second shift which was about half full so there was about 240 bowlers.

Eventually he moved into adult leagues where he worked up to a 200-plus average. He took the big plunge into the PBA in December of "My first tour stop was actually as an amateur in the summer of '78 in Amarillo," said Lacy. "I finished seventh in the rabbit (pre-tournament qualifying) and missed cashing by 50 pins or so.

FOR SIX years it was a long, hard and non-profitable career. He earned only $9,800 during those years, not enough to meet expenses much less stay on the tour full time and make a living.

At least that's the way it was. On Nov. 4. Lacy struck it big, winning his first national title by defeating Mike Aulby, a five-time champion, in the TV match 227-206 to win the True Value open and the $23,000 top

Lacy caused a bit of excitement among the touring pros with his unorthodox approach to the foul line. Standing with his left foot on the approach and the right still in the pit area, he steps onto the approach and continues without stopping to the foul line.
"When we were practicing before the show, Jeff Bellenger, Guppy Troup and Gary Skidmore (three of the five who qualified for the finals along with Charlie) were trying it, mocking me," said Lacy. "Two of them, Skidmore and Troup threw strikes the first time they tried it. Instead of taking six steps like I did, Troup took four huge steps from the back of the approach. I think Skidmore tried it with six steps.

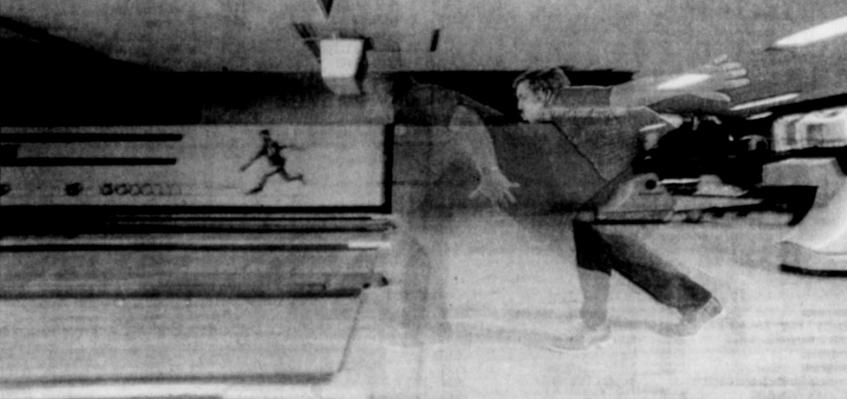

Lacy also added that one bowler. Wayne Webb, came up to him during the qualifying rounds and said. I hope you make the TV show so I can hear what Earl (Anthony) has to say about your approach.'

"Thank's a lot Wayne," was Charlie's reply. "Your not rooting for me to do good, you just want to hear what Earl has to say.

For those Midlanders who saw the program, Anthony and Lacy did discuss the approach and Anthony commented on it throughout the ready for the winter tour which starts with the A.C. Delco Open in Union City, Calif on Jan. 1.

"I'll probably leave three days early to get some practice before the tournament starts," he said. "That's a luxury I have now that I no longer have to rabbit.

A week before Charlie won the True Value Open, he cashed in the Indianapolis Open, earning a one. week's exemption from rabbit qualifying on Monday. With the True Value victory, he has a year's exemption from rabbit qualifying and that gives him more leeway on Permian and Beaumont French share the state's co-championship title of 5A after a 21-21 tie Saturday The last time two teams shared the title at the state's highest level was in 1945 when Waco and Highland Park tied 7-7.

Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders' playoff season is over almost as quickly as it began. The Seattle Seahawks, playing an ultra-conservative game in which they threw only 10 passes, took care of that Saturday by beating the Raiders 13-7 in the AFC wild-card "I thought we were ready," said Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores, who directed the Raiders to Super Bowl victories in 1981 and 1984. "It's a disappointing loss because we don't get to come back. We haven't been very productive offensively all season. Today, we just didn't pull it out of the barrel.' Isles blast Penguins for fourth straight win

Bryan Trottier scored the tying goal and Mike Bossy got the go-ahead goal early in the third period during a four-goal barrage that gave the New York Islanders a 5-2 win over Pittsburgh and a fourth straight victory following a four-game losing streak.

Pittsburgh took a 2-1 lead into the third period when Trottier fired a 10-foot shot past Pittsburgh goal-tender Denis Herron to tie the game 37 seconds into the session. Bossy put the Islanders in front with his 31st goal of the season on a 45-foot slapshot at 3:59.

Nordiques 3, Sabres 1

Dale Hunter and Anton Stastny scored 21 seconds apart in the opening minute of the second period to lead Quebec's victory

Hunter beat Buffalo goaltender Tom Barrasso with a low backhand shot 38 seconds into the period, and Stastny fired in a slapshot from the left faceoff circle at the 59-second mark for his 19th goal of the season.

Michel Goulet scored for Quebec on a breakaway at 13:55 of the same period, for his 23rd goal.

North Stars 5, Red Wings 4 Dirk Graham and Willi Plett scored third-period goals 20 seconds apart to lift Minnesota over the Detroit Red Wings. After Reed Larson gave Detroit a 4-3 lead on a power play at 13:27 of the third period, Graham converted his own rebound to tie the score.

Plett then deflected Bob Rouse's slapshot past Detroit netminder Corrado Micalef with 3:54 remaining to give the North Stars the victory.

Minnesota improved to 10-17-6 and moved into a third-place Norris Division tie with Detroit, 11-18-4.

Maryland snapped a four-bowl losing streak with the victory and improved its season record to 9-3.

The Volunteers, who were hoping a win would boost them into the Top 20, dropped to 7-41. Maryland Coach Bobby Ross said Saturday's second half, in some ways, was better than the final two periods of the Miami game. This was our biggest character half of the season," Ross said, adding that at intermission he decided to play more of a passing game than he had in the first two quarters.

He said Saturday's comeback "felt a lot different" than the Miami

"The main thing (was) we didn't want to lose," he said.
The 5-foot-9, 223-pound Badanjek had 20 carries for 90 yards and was named the game's most valuable player in the game, which was played before a record-setting Sun Bowl crowd of 50,126. On third-and-one, Badanjek took a hand-off from quarterback Reich and easily scampered into the end zone for the Terp win. Badanjek said the Terps "didn't feel bad about being down" at the half and just came out in the third quarter ready to win. Tennessee, which fell to 7-4-1, threatened to score within the final minutes of the game, but a fumble by quarterback Tony Robinson halted the Vols' hopes.

Junior Al Covington recovered Robinson's bobble for the Terps on their own 30-yard line, and Maryland held onto the ball to the end.

Nine earn All-District

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA - Nine Tall City football players earned berths on the 45A All-District football team picked here recently by the league's eight coaches and five sports writers from Odessa, Midland, Abilene, San Angelo and Big Spring.

Midland Lee, a team that earned playoff entry for the second year in a row while advancing to the quarterfinals with a 12-2 record, landed six players (three offensive and three defensive) on the elite team while Midland High had three players given first team honors.

MIDLAND HIGH tight end-linebacker Darrell Davis was voted as a first teamer on both offense and defense, the only player in the league thus honored. That vote gave the Tall City 10 berths on the team that listed 30 players. Lee's All-District offensive picks included halfback Tyrone Thurman, halfback Walter Jones and tackle Ariel Elliott. Lee's picks on defense were end Mark Webb, linebacker Pool Webb and defensive back Earl Davis, the only returning starter to Lee's defensive unit in 1984.

In addition to Davis, MHS also landed offensive tackle Brad Edgar and center Greg Hatcher to the elite

Even though Lee and Odessa Permian were the playoff representa-tives from 4-5A, it was the San Angelo Bobcats who landed the most first teamers on the squad. San Angelo had four offensive picks and three defensive picks on the squad. Permian and Lee both had six players named. MHS and Abilene Cooper followed with four each while Abilene High had two and Big Spring one. Odessa High was the only team that failed to get a player on the All-

District team. Cooper's Doug Hadley and Permian's Alton Holloway, both quarterbacks, and San Angelo punter Bryan Ross were the only unanimous selections on the team. It took 13 votes to earn that honor.

ONLY TWO juniors were selected to the squad. Permian wide receiver Greg Anderson and San Angelo running back C.L. Bowman, the league's leading rusher through regular season play, were the only two juniors honored on the senior-ladened unit.

Midland High wide receiver Allan Foret, the only junior to earn All-District honors a year ago, did not repeat, but was named as a honorable mention choice. The league was blessed with fine receivers this year. Permian's Holloway, who completed over 65 percent of his passes, was named as the most valuable offensive player. Cooper lineman David Newman and Permian end John Fuller were named as coowners of the defensive MVP award in a rare deadlock.

Lee's Thurman and Jones both became 1,000-yard rushers for the Rebels in the playoffs. Elliott was the only senior in the Lee offensive line. Mark Webb and Pool Webb were defensive standouts for the Rebels while Davis was a bright star in the Lee secondary.

Midland High's Davis was highly regarded by the voters on both sides of the ball while Edgar and Hatcher highlighted a Bulldog offensive line that was highly regarded around the Permian, of course, posted a 15-0-1 season record, tying Beaumont French, 21-21, Saturday for the state championship. Lee and Permian combined for an overall 8-1-1 playoff record with Permian eliminating Lee from the state playoffs in a 15-14 victory before over 30,000 fans in Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

Permian coach John Wilkins was named coach of the year in 45A.

His family is Charlie's biggest fan on the tour. Missy even traveled with him full-time a few years back and now goes to an occasional match. Also, Charlie has gotten a lot of support from his in-laws.

"I'm real excited about the Firestone (a tournament in which only tournament winners can compete in)," said Missy. "I've got a week's vacation scheduled for the Firestone, a week for the Showboat in Las Vegas and a week for Kansas City to visit my Dad. He's going to the tournaments also. Dad is real excited about it. My mother, who passed away a couple of months before Charlie won the tournament, was a big rooter for him. Even though she didn't see him win, we, Charlie and I, believe that she knows. Next to me, I think she was Charlie's biggest fan.

Even through the lean years, Missy was always supportive of her

I really felt like he could do it," said Missy. "It was just a matter of when. He just needed a real good sponsor and now he has a real good one and that really helps not having to worry about money while he's out

"I've got a real good sponsor," Charlie concurred. "The way it's set up, he'll get back all of his invest-ment first and then we split the remainder.

Well, Charlie's already made more than enough money this year to repay his sponsor with considerable interest. With an entire winter tour to go, that amount has a good chance of growing even more.

THOUGH HIS bowling takes him away from home a lot of the time, Missy wants to see him stay with the tour a few more years, take every opportunity to achieve the goals he's set for himself.

"I think he's probably got a few years left but not a whole lot like a 20-year-old would and he needs to go for it," said Missy. "I want him to get as much out of these last years as he

When not touring, Charlie works at his own business which he operates out of his home: A bowling pro shop. He drills bowling balls and sells all the equipment bowlers need to participate in the game.

However, since he is on the tour, he only runs the pro shop part-time, establishing a business he can fall back on when his touring days are over. In sports, that can happen quickly: next week, next month, next year or in 10 years. He knows what the hard times are like, now he hopes to enjoy some good.

"One thing about the tour is I've never really done well out there but they've all treated me like I was a veteran," said Charlie. "Now that I have won one the raphit players. have won one, the rabbit players and the stars all come up to me and congratualte me, pat me on the back and say 'way to go.'
"They were always nice to me and now their congratulations make all the trouble I went through the last six years worth while," he continued. "My family has had to sacrifice and I had to sacrifice. Now it's finally paid off."

And, maybe it will keep on paying.

A lot of people Charlie has bowled with and still bowls with are hoping it does

But, "If I never win another tournament I can always look back and say I won one tournament and I got to bowl in the Firestone at least once.

Jim Plunkett, the Raiders' 14-year NFL veteran quarterback, made his first start since the sixth game of the Los Angeles regular season but couldn't get anything going until he drilled a 46-yard touchdown pass to Marcus Allen with 5:05 to go in the game. The deepest previous Raiders' penetration was to the Seahawks' 41yard line in the second quarter.

The Raiders got the ball back on their own six-yard-line with 45 seconds left, but Kenny Easley intercepted a desperation heave by Plunkett to clinch the game.

The Seahawks, who finished in second place behind Denver one spot ahead of the Raiders in the AFC West, led 7-0 at halftime on a 93yard, nine-play touchdown drive. It was climaxed by Krieg's pinpoint second-quarter 26-yard slant-in pass .o Turner, who beat the Raiders'

Suntory tourney

TOKYO (AP) - Brad Daugherty scored 20 points Sunday to lead No. 10 North Carolina past Arizona State 85-66 in the championship game of the Suntory Ball basketball tournament.

North Carolina raced to an 11-2 lead during the first five minutes, sparked by Daugherty and Kenny Smith. Daugherty, named the tournament's most valuable player, got two early baskets underneath while Smith sank a jump shot and then stolen the ball back and dunked it.

The Tar Heels, 7-0, held a 45-31 d at halftime and widened the margin to 21 points early in the second half, spurred by Joe Wolf's three baskets.

Arizona State got within 12 points with two minutes remaining on two baskets by Arthur Thomas, but the Sun Devils scored only one point the rest of the way.

Jim Deines led Arizona State with 16 points and 12 rebounds. Deines and guard Ron Singleton combined to keep Arizona State within striking distance through most of the first half.

The Trail Blazers, now 13-15 overall and 4-11 on the road this season, were playing without all-star guard Jim Paxson (back spasms) and forward Kenny Carr (swollen knee).

Clyde Drexler picked up the scoring slack with 28 points - 22 coming in the second half and 15 in the third quarter. Kiki Van-deweghe added 21 for Portland with Valentine and Sam Bowie getting 16 each and Mychal Thompson 11.

Denison claims first state championship

Associated Press

WACO — Denison quarterback Erick Harper passed for a touchdown and a two-point conversion and kicked two field goals to carry the Yellowjackets to their first Class 4A State Football Championship in 68 years with a 27-13 victory over the Tombail Cougars Saturday.

The Yellowjackets, who started playing in 1916 but had never reached the finals, finished with a 16-0 record and the Cougars bowed out with a 14-1 ledger.

Denison built a 16-6 halftime lead before 12,569 fans at Baylor Stadium, but had to beat back a spirited fourth-quarter rally by Tomball.

Tomball quarterback Lance Pavlas completed a 33-yard touch-down pass to Bubba Greely in the second period and flipped a six-yard pass to him in the fourth period to cut the lead to 16-13.

But Harper kicked a 35-yard field goal then ran nine yards on a key 4th-and-5 to set up Aaron Jackson's 16-yard touchdown run, his first of the season. Harper hit Tony Brown with a two-point conversion pass.

Groveton 38, Panhandle 7
BROWNWOOD — Groveton running back Michael Horace scored five times and established a new career rushing record, firing the Indians to a 38-7 victory over Pan-handle and the state Class 2A football championship.

The Indians' decisive victory made up for last year's loss to Boyd in the state finals. It was Panhandle's first appearance in a state championship

The Panthers never found a way to stop Horace, who scored on runs of 3, 5, 81, and 12 yards from scrimmage and added a fifth touchdown on a 79-yard interception return.

Horace finished the night with 269 yards on 33 carries for a career total of 7,675 yards - better than the Class 2A record of 7,652 set by the late David Overstreet of Big Sandy in 1973-76.

Groveton wrapped up its season with a 13-3 record while Panhandle finished at 11-3-2.

Groveton built a 17-7 halftime lead, then broke the game by scoring on its first three possessions in the second half.

Horace had a 3-yard scoring run late in the first period and his long interception return early in the second quarter gave the Indians a 140

Then Wes Wood, who rushed for 190 yards, set up Panhandle's only touchdown with a 66-yard run midway through the second quarter. He later scored from the 1 on a fourth-and inches play.

But Larry Taylor of Groveton kicked a 26-yard field goal to make it 17-7 at halftime before the Indians moved 81, 81 and 77 yards on their first three possessions of the second half to win going away.

Groveton burned almost seven minutes off the clock with a 15-play 81-yard march after the second half kickoff. Horace scored on fourth down from the two.

The 190-pound senior added his 81yard scoring bolt moments later, then capped a record-breaking night with a 12-yard sprint early in the final quarter.

WEATHERFORD — Dent Offutt threw for one touchdown and ran for another as the Munday Moguls shut out Union Hill 13-0 for the Class 1A high school football champion-Union Hill, which couldn't manage a first down in the first half, saw two touchdown opportunities get away in the second half.

On the Bulldogs' first possession of the half Buford Jones fumbled the ball in the end zone. Munday

Ustinov's death third recent change in military hierarchy

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - The death of Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov and the appointment of Marshal Sergei L. Sokolov as his successor marks the third high-level change in less than four months in the Soviet military hjerarchy.

The changes have come at an especially sensitive time for the Soviet Defense Ministry, which is facing new arms control talks with the United States and is bogged down in a five-year-old war in Afgh-

Ustinov, 76, had been Soviet military leader for the past eight years, a period in which U.S.-Soviet relations fell from a state of detente in the late 1970s to the current atmosphere of severe strain over missile deployments and the spiraling arms

Tass' brief announcement that Sokolov would succeed Ustinov said only that the appointment was made by the Presidium of the Supreme Sokolov, 73, had been first deputy defense minister since 1967 and a full member of the Communist Party Central Committee since 1968.

The recent changes in the Soviet military leadership began Sept. 6, when Nikolai V. Ogarkov, the first deputy defense minister and chief of staff, was suddenly replaced in his dual posts and apparently demoted. Ogarkov was replaced by Sergei F. Akhromeyev, who was formerly his first deputy.

Ogarkov was later reported to have been given a post in the Warsaw Pact forces but it has not been officially confirmed.

On Dec. 4, official Soviet media reported the death of air force Marshal Pavel S. Kutakhov, who died at the age of 70 of an unspecified illness. No replacement has been announced, although his two known first deputy commanders, marshals Alexander N. Yefimov and Grigori P. Skorikov, are seen as possible suc-

Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and U.S. Secretary of State George P.

The Geneva meeting has been described as a breakthrough in the arms control arena. Talks between the United States and the Soviet Union on reduction of mediumrange and strategic missiles collapsed more than a year ago when NATO began deploying new rockets in Western Europe.

Officials of the Western defense alliance say the new cruise and Pershing 2 rockets were needed to balance Soviet placement of SS-20 missiles in the 1970s.

Development of Soviet strategy in arms negotiation sessions is cloaked in the deepest secrecy, but Kremlin policy on military issues is thought by Western defense experts here to have been heavily influenced by Ustinov and Gromyko.

However, Western diplomatic sources who spoke on condition they not be identified by name said the introduction of a new defense minister so close to the Shultz-Gromyko meeting is unlikely to have a strong influence on the Soviet position in

The official medical report on Ustinov's death confirmed earlier indications that he was seriously ill and absent from official duties for the past three months, so his successor has likely already been involved in preparation for the talks, the dip-

In addition to arms issues in the international forum, the Soviet military faces problems domestically with its protracted involvement in the war in Afghanistan. About 105,000 Soviet troops have been in combat in Afghanistan since 1979 against rebels opposed to the Kremlin-backed Kabul government.

Little information is published here about Soviet casualties in the war, but reports from rebel supporters indicate fighting has intensified over the past year

Military service is mandatory for most young Soviet men and as the war drags on, their parents have much attention on arms issues as the become more vocal about worries that their sons will be sent into bat-

Kennedy: Increase aid to Ethiopia

New York Times News Service

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy ended a four-day tour of camps for famine refugees Saturday, saying he would call for increased and expanded United States aid to Ethiopia.

"We, as a society, are going to have to be even more responsive in the future than we've been in the past," the Massachusetts Democrat

The American effort to date has been "making a real difference," he asserted. But he added that "what I've seen here is a beginning, not an Almost a quarter of a million metric tons of grain, or about two-thirds of the food donated or pledged to Ethiopia so far, is coming from the United States, at a cost of more than $112 million.

More than 300,000 people are believed to have died and close to 8 million are said to be endangered by the current famine, the worst in Ethiopia's history.

Kennedy said he was not yet prepared to say how large an aid increase he would ask. But he said he would propose that Congress provide assistance to rehabilitate Ethiopia's drought-damaged land as well as to feed the hungry.

He also said he would argue for long-term commitments to Ethiopia and other poor African countries rather than annual allocations.

"We provide multiyear funding for weapons of destruction," he said. We ought to provide that continuity here, too.'

Kennedy was speaking to a small group of reporters who had accompanied him on a trip to several refuee camps, including those at Makale and Maychew in Tigre, a region where the effects of drought and famine have been compounded by insurgency.

Visits were also made to the camp at Bati, which until recently had the highest death rate in the nation, and to Jijiga in the Harar region, an area that has received little publicity but where 880,000 people are registered

Gorbachev reveals death before official report

MOSCOW (AP) - Mikhail S. Gorbachev broke precedent by telling reporters in Scotland that Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov was dead two hours before the official Soviet announcement in Moscow.

Gorbachev's action Friday was considered a sign of his power in the Kremlin, and also provided an illustration of the secrecy surrounding the lives and deaths of Soviet lead-

Gorbachev, widely believed to be the No. 2 man in the Kremlin behind President Konstantin U. Chernenko, was just starting a tour of Scottish castles on the seventh of his scheduled eight days in Britain when Ustinov had died.

Gorbachev broke off his visit in Edinburgh and before flying back to the Soviet capital, called a sudden news conference at Edinburgh airport. He replied to a reporter's question about the reason for his departure, saying:

'My presence is required as a member of the Politburo. "We have had a great loss and a tragic loss of our old friend and comrade Marshal Ustinov, who has passed away.

It was the first time the death of a Soviet leader had been reported by a fellow member of the Politburo prior to the official announcement.

Gorbachev could have ignored the question. The fact that he gave a straightforward answer suggested he has sufficient authority to act on his own in a hierarchy that normally emphasizes collective announcements and decisions.

and more than 24 hours after Ustinov's death.

Until then, the foreign and defense ministries in Moscow and other Soviet officials refused to confirm that Ustinov had died.

The official announcement said Ustinov died at 7:35 p.m. Thursday. But the first unofficial reports began to seep out on Friday.

The first clue to Ustinov's death was provided by the coincidence that the Hall of Columns in the House of Unions where dead leaders traditionally lie in state is now the site of the World Chess Championship between two Soviet players.

Chess officials said there would be no match Friday or Monday because the hall was to be used for what

An Associated Press reporter who went to the House of Unions was told by an employee that Ustinov had died, would lie in state there over the weekend and be buried on

A few hours later Gorbachev confirmed the death.

The Tass announcement said Politburo member Grigori V. Romanov, 61, was named to head the funeral commission. The job of heading the funeral arrangements normally goes to the successor, but today the Soviet news shal Sergei L. Sokolov, first deputy defense minister, had been named to replace Ustinov

No signs of thawing relations seen during Soviet official's China visit

New York Times News Service

PEKING - Official accounts Saturday of the visit to China by a senior Soviet official offered new indications of the limited expectations both governments appear to have for the occasion.

The official, Ivan V. Arkhipov, a first deputy premier, is the most senior Soviet official to come here in 15 years. His visit is being closely watched for signs of any thaw in the chilly political relations that have prevailed for nearly a quarter of a century between Moscow and Pek-

But so far, after two days, both sides have taken care to emphasize the differences that have prevented an improvement in their relations. At the same time, they have stressed their readiness to expand trade, economic and scientific exchanges, and to continue their search for better

For both sides, the most important fact about the the visit is probably that it is taking place at all, after a last-minute postponement in May when Moscow evidently wished to show its displeasure over Chinese troop clashes with Vietnam and over the warmth displayed when President Reagan came to Peking in Arkhipov is the first Soviet official of his stature to come here since Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin stopped briefly at Peking Airport in September 1969 to confer with Premier Zhou Enlai. The symbolic importance of the visit was underscored Saturday when Arkhipov remained here rather than return to Moscow for the funeral of Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, as unofficial reports from the Soviet capital Friday had suggested he might. The Chinese wariness toward the visit was suggested by the coverage given in Saturday's editions of People's Daily, the Communist Party paper, which put accounts of Arkhipov's arrival here and the banquet given for him Friday night on the bottom of its back page. Important official visitors from friendly coun-tries are generally accorded front-page display. At the banquet, Arkhipov and his host, Deputy Premier Yao Yilin, struck a cordial personal note in their speeches that reflected an acquaintance dating back to the Russian's years here heading the Soviet aid program in the 1950s. Yao and Arkhipov both spoke of meeting old friends. The two officials also spoke of their nations' common interest in better ties. Alluding to the split that developed after the close ties of the 1950s, when thousands of Soviet advisers worked here under Arkhipov, Yao said, "The abnormal relations which arose later could benefit neither side.

But the account given by the offi-cial New China News Agency said both men had also referred to the 'differences" that had impeded normalization. The agency said Arkhipov had "mentioned" those involving "major international issues and relations with certain other coun-

Since political consultations between the two capitals were resumed in 1982, five sessions here and in Moscow have failed to bridge differences over the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, Moscow's backing for the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia and the high troop levels each side maintains on their common frontier.

Beyond these, diplomats believe that the legacy of bitterness over past events poses serious problems. On the Chinese side there is deep resentment over the sudden pullout of the Soviet advisers, which crip-pled a large number of industrial projects, and over what is regarded as Moscow's high-handedness at a time when Communist power here was still new

On the Soviet side, diplomats believe, there may still be difficulty in accepting the divide that the schism with Peking wrought in the Communist world and the dent that it made in the Soviet Union's claim to be the effective leader of that world. Compounding these on both sides are unresolved tensions over the border problems that erupted into skirmishing in 1969.

About the only surprise of the Arkhipov visit so far has been the admiration with which he has spoken of the economic policies adopted by China under its pragmatic leader, Deng Xiaoping. Arkhipov referred in his banquet speech to "the great changes" that had taken place in recent years in the 'economic, material and spiritual life of the Chinese people," and he added, according to the New China News Agency, that "China also had a magnificent plan for building the

If accurate, this account suggests that the official view of Deng's economic policies in Moscow may be considerably more favorable than that taken by the Soviet press and broadcasting, which have derided the "capitalist" implications of some of Deng's innovations. Among these are the effective dissolution of collective agriculture, rapid decentralization of economic authority and the introduction of market forces, all things that the Soviet Union has shunned.

Arkhipov is expected to remain here two more days, signing economic and trade agreements before flying to southern China to inspect economic enterprises. Among the accords expected is one that will commit Moscow to assisting in the upgrading of some of China's 400,000 industrial plants and enterprises.

Efforts to save giant pandas failing

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PEKING (AFP) - Efforts to save China's giant pandas, estimated to number around 1,000 animals, have failed to save the species from the threat of extinction, according to deputy forestry minister

Dong said this year animal workers treated 30 pandas who were sick or dying of starvation, but only 21 survived, the New China News Agency reported Saturday.

Last July, the agency reported that 27 of the endangered species had died over the previous 10

According to a report this year, of 244,000 acres of bamboo, which is the pandas' staple food, 38.7 percent had withered, Dong said. The pandas live in the southern province of Sichuan and the central provinces of Shanxi and Gansu.

Last year China launched a national panda cam-paign, backed by the World Wildlife Fund.

New York Times News Service

SANA, Yemen — A five-day meeting of foreign ministers from 45 Islamic countries ended Saturday night amid discord over how to bring an end to the Iran-Iraq war.

Iran's foreign minister, Ali Akbar Velayati, told reporters that as long as Saddam Hussein was president of Iraq, Tehran would continue to oppose efforts by the Islamic group and others to mediate an end to the war, which is now in its fifth year.

"Any dialogue or discussion of a cease-fire is out of the question," Velayati said. He was replying to a question about whether Iran would accept mediation by a special committee set up in January 1981 by the group meeting here, the Islamic Conference Organization, to help resolve the conflict.

Velayati's reiteration of his country's position dashed hopes raised Friday night by reports of a breakthrough in the Iran-Iraq

Late Friday night Habib Chatti, a Tunisian who is secretary general of the Islamic group, told reporters that Iran had accepted a resolution that called upon both Baghdad and Tehran to "cooperate fully and sincerely" with efforts by the Islamic Conference Organization's mediating committee "to reach an immediate end to the war and settle the dispute on a just and honorable basis."

Chatti suggested that the decision to support the resolution was a breakthrough, because, he asserted, it was the first time that Iran had agreed to accept mediation by the Islamic Conference Organization or by any other

But Saturday, Velayati contradicted Chatti's statement. The Iranian foreign minister said his country had previously expressed reservations about the resolution in committee and in the assembly's plenary session.

"We have no new position with respect to the war or to the aggressor," Velayati said, alluding to Iraq.

ing to Iraq.

The Iranian foreign minister infuriated many of the 200 Arab journalists assembled here by refusing to speak in Arabic or to have his answers translated into that language. Velayati spoke in Persian and his answers were translated into English.

"Any dialogue or discussion of a cease-fire is out of the question."

Ali Akbar Velayati,
 Iran foreign minister

He also asserted that the conference had not been marked by the unity widely reported in the Yemeni local press.

"Unfortunately," Velayati concluded, "the conference has not been able to achieve unity on several points so far."

Ali A. Treiki, foreign minister of Libya, complained about the Islamic group's penchant for polemics over action.

"You can't liberate our territories by resolutions," Treiki declared. "We need action by all Islamic states."

During the five-day meeting the Islamic Conference Organization, a 15-year-old group that includes the Palestine Liberation Organization, approved more than 100 resolutions on a wide variety of topics. Several resolutions were strongly critical of the United States, and of its support for Israel.

One called on member nations to reconsider their diplomatic relations with Washington. Another strongly criticized the "presence of American fleets and aircraft carriers and marines off the coast of Arab states and the eastern Mediterranean."

The delegations, including those of Syria and Iran, approved a resolution proposed by Kuwait that condemned terrorism "in all its forms and aspects," including airplane hijacking.

The resolution called on member nations to refuse to meet the demands of hijackers and to take "all necessary measures" to put an end to such crimes. Delegates said that Kuwait believed that Iran was involved in the recent hijacking of a Kuwaiti plane in which two Americans were killed. Iran has denied any complicity in the hijacking.

India balloting begins Monday

By VICTORIA GRAHAM Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India — Every five years it happens: the world's largest, loudest, most unbridled carnival, a super-bazaar of the improbable. It is the greatest show on earth — India's national elections which start Monday.

From the Himalayas to the Andaman Islands the Indian people, most of them peasants and 65 percent illiterate, will decide the future of the world's biggest democracy of 730 million people in balloting for a new Parliament.

Even China, with more than 1 billion people, does not hold a simultaneous national election for its National People's Congress.

On Monday, Thursday and Friday 379 million eligible voters will be asked to choose among about 5,300 candidates from more than 24 parties for 509 Parliament seats. It will be the eighth general election since independence from Britain 37 years

In Monday's opening phase, 278 million people are eligible to vote for 379 seats; Thursday 97 million will choose 117 other lawmakers, and Friday the rest will fill three seats. Voting for 10 seats in northern Uttar Pradesh state will be held on both Monday and Thursday because of the large number of voters.

The hand-counting of ballots begins Friday and the first results are expected that night, the final results Dec. 31.

The governing Congress Party, which took all but the election in 1977 and holds a two-thirds majority now in Parliament, is expected to win again, riding a sympathy wave after the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in October and the succession to her post by her son Rajiv.

A poll by India Today magazine predicted the biggest Congress landslide ever, sweeping 366 seats compared with 352 in 1980 elections.

Although the Congress Party's image is tarnished by allegations of corruption and incompetence and India is torn by the worst sectarian violence since independence, a Congress victory is predicted because of the divided opposition, the Indira Gandhi factor, and campaign claims that India is imperiled and only Congress can save it.

Political analysts say the ostensibly secular Congress Party has lost the support of Sikhs and Moslems because of violence in Punjab, anti-Sikh riots and Hindu-Moslem riots. Instead, it is aiming for the Hindu vote in the northern Hindi-speaking "cow belt" of four states that have a total of 204 seats in Parliament.

The fractured, quarrelsome opposition of seven national parties has been unable to field common candidates against the well-oiled Congress machine or agree on a common platform and strategy. The assassination deprived them of their single potent

tions have been postponed because of unrest in Sikh-dominated Punjab with 13 seats and Assam with 14. Five other polls have been postponed because of impassable snow, the deaths of candidates and the Bhopal gas disaster that killed more than 2,000 people. A Congress candidate was elected unopposed from remote Mizoram state.

In the last election Congress won 42.7 percent of the vote and 352 seats, followed by the centrist Janata (People's) Party with 18.9 percent and 31 seats, the peasant-based Lok Dar (Masses Party), with 9.4 percent and 41 seats, and the Marxist Communist Party with 6 percent and 35 seats.

Congress governments are in power in 16 of India's 22 states and eight federal territories. Of the remaining six states, the Marxist Communist Party governs two, the Janata Party one and regional parties control the rest.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, 40, a former airline pilot and a political novice, will be seeking a mandate to maintain the dynasty begun by his grandfather, Jawaharlal Nehru, first leader of post-colonial India. He also will seek to carry on his mother's policies, hailed by the Congress Party as the salvation of India and denounced by the opposition as the sources of political turmoil, poverty and other ills.

The campaign has been devoid of substantive issues and any intense debate on problems such as poverty, unemployment and sectarian violence. But Rajiv Gandhi has made India's unity and integrity an issue, citing his mother's assassination by two men identified by the government as Sikh members of her security guard. He has tarred the entire opposition as unpatriotic, divisive and aiding forces bent on violence and dismembering the nation.

"We have to see the powers seeking to weaken and those in the country giving them strength," he said in a speech. "There were some who were guiding and inspiring the forces of terrorism, weapon wielders and murderers...We must remember the leader of the opposition gave these forces strength."

"Gruesome campaign billboards show Mrs. Gandhi gunned down by Sikhs and ask: "Do you want to vote for those who backed the assassins and foreign masters or those who are interested in unity?"

The opposition and many political observers condemn his tactics as irresponsible, saying the unity of the country should not be made a campaign issue and political rivals should not automatically be regarded as villains.

"The thrust of Mr. Gandhi's speeches has been particularly disturbing," said the independent Indian Express in an editorial. "He adopted a stridently divisive stand, slandering the entire opposition for allegedly supporting anti-national, subversive, communal tendencies... He has gone so far as to charge the opposition with being prepared to sell the country for political gain. This is irresponsible poppycock."

The opposition maintains that the country is in crisis precisely because the Congress Party is ineffective, pursues confrontational policies and allows problems to fester. It blames Congress for allowing Sikh terrorism to develop without seriously attempting negotiation and says that under the Congress Party the rich get rich and the poor get much poorer.

Although deprived of Mrs. Gandhi's presence, her Congress Party may have in her a more effective vote-winner in death. Posters of "Beloved Indira" are everywhere, saying, "Vote for Indira, save India's unity." Widely distributed tape cassettes carry her last speech with the words "If I die tomorrow, every drop of my blood will invigorate the country."

Her cremation is shown on video cassettes in the countryside and in one tape she is being interviewed about Rajiv. She recalls his goodness, his strength, his boyish mischief, his fondness for candy and porridge. "When he is in the cockpit, it makes us feel much more confident." she said.

Government says all gas converted

BHOPAL, India (AP) — The government announced Saturday that scientists had converted the last of the lethal methyl isocyanate at the Union Carbide plant in Bhopal to pesticide.

methyl isocyanate gas leaked from a tank at the plant and killed more than 2,000 people Dec. 3.

The government of Madhya Pradesh state, of which Bhopal is the capital, said all the deadly chemical stored in the U.S.-based company's factory had been converted into pesticide, ending an operation launched last Sunday.

The announcement did not say when the task was completed or how many tons of methyl isocyanate had been processed, but the United News of India reported that the operation ended Friday night with 24 tons being converted into pesticide.

About 40 tons of the chemical leaked from a storage tank and turned into toxic gas, sweeping through slum colonies near the plant. Besides the dead, an estimated 60,000 people were injured.

The conversion process called

The conversion process, called "Operation Faith," caused a mass exodus last week by an estimated 200,000 people despite government assurances that it would not cause a second gas leak.

Most of the people have returned

Most of the people have returned, reassured that there was no more danger. Shops reopened, commercial activity resumed and the streets in the city of 900,000 once again were filled with traffic.

"Normalcy is returning fast," N.P. Choubey, a government spokesman, said.

The city's main Hamedia hospital, where at least 1,100 people were hospitalized at a peak time, has discharged most patients and only 65 people still stayed for treatment of gas-related lung and eye problems, medical superintendent Dr. N.R. Bhandari said.

Doctors at temporary medical tents set up in the slum colonies reported that as many as 200 people were still being treated every day for minor gas-related illnesses.

Officials of the Central Bureau of Investigation were still probing the cause of the gas leak. No official announcement of their findings has been made.

Union Carbide officials earlier said the chemical burst from one of three storage tanks under rising pressure.

During "Operation Faith," officials said, the tank that leaked was opened for examination, and the other two were cleared of the toxic chemical and washed out by Union Carbide experts.

Refineries closing down hurts Antilles

WILLEMSTAD, Curação (AP) - A golden age brought on by oil refineries and shipping has ended in the Netherlands Antilles. The prosperous Caribbean islands now worry about plunging into poverty and social unrest.

For years, oil experts have warned that the islands' second most important source of income and foreign exchange after tourism — refining cheap Venezuelan crude oil into fuel oil for shipment to the U.S. marketplace — was obsolete. Unemployment has increased to 20 percent of the population in Curacao and 9.4 percent in smaller but wealthier Aruba as their refineries, once the world's largest, reduced production. Then this past October the islanders' worst fears were realized: Exxon's Lago refinery on Aruba announced it would close down Jan. 1 after 60 years as the island's major employer. Exxon said it could no longer make a profit without cut-rate crude oil from Venezuela. The nearby South American country, itself in economic turmoil, ended its special prices to the refineries earlier in 1984. "This is the worst and most shocking news the present generation of Aruba has ever had to face. Nobody every visualized Aruba without Lago," said Gilberto "Betico" Croes, the political leader on Aruba. More than 1,500 employees and contract workers will be thrown out of work, along with thousands of others in support industries. Exxon's closure sent a wave of anxiety rippling across the short span of Caribbean sea separating Aruba from neighboring Curacao, home of the Royal Dutch Shell refinery. The company has said that if it does not get special tax and other concessions from the local government, it might Labor leaders representing the Lago refinery employees and contract workers warn of a 'social explosion" unless new jobs are found in Aruba, an infertile, rocky island with a population of 63,000, chiefly dependent on the refinery and tourism.

Milo Arends, president of the Independent Oil Workers Union of Aruba, said the closure will immediately push unemployment on Aruba from its current 9 percent to 25 percent, and possibly even higher if businesses built around Lago go

"I don't think people will begin burning down things, but they will protest," he added.

'It could become very dangerous when families don't have any money to feed their children and nothing is done. Government officials in Willemstad, the capital of the six-island Netherlands Antilles - an autonomous parliamentary democracy within the Kingdom of the Netherlands - are looking for alternative sources of employment and income. The first blow, the most important effect of the closing down of Lago is how to earn the foreign exchange lost from that sector," said George Curiel, director of the government's Department for Development Cooperation. "Our whole economy has grown based on the international (oil) market. If it were not for that we would be very poor islands; you cannot import without foreign exchange.

The people of the Netherlands Antilles are accustomed to one of the highest standards of living in the Caribbean, with a per capita annual income of $5,500.

Prosperity is still evident everywhere, from the graceful, arched bridge over the Willemstad harbor to the new cars moving down narrow streets between freshly painted stores filled with electronic gadgets, French perfumes and imported fashion wear.

But the economy is lopsided since little is produced or manufactured locally. Without oil and tourist dollars there would be no way to import foodstuffs and consumer goods. Tourism earnings dropped this year when a currency devaluation in Venezuela discouraged foreign travel by its citizens, who had been frequent visitors.

A major economic prop is the development aid from the Netherlands, more than $50 million a year since 1976. Half of it has been spent on public utilities, low cost housing and schools.

Prime Minister Maria Liberia Peters said she was counting on Dutch interest in the kingdom to keep the Royal Dutch Shell refinery open on

"In spite of the over-capacity of refineries in the area and in the world, I still think that Shell... has a fighting chance," she said.

There is a move to have the service sector replace the petroleum sector as the major dollar earner by providing other countries with offshore banking, transportation and trade facilities. Some have suggested converting Curacao into a "silicon island" — a center of information for the Caribbean and Latin America.

The prime minister said in an interview that her central government would stimulate the creation of small businesses.

The closure of the Lago refinery coincides with a critical moment in islands' political history Under an agreement reached with the Netherlands and the five other Antillean islands, Aruba will get "separate status" Jan. 1, 1986, as the first step toward complete independence 10 years Under "separate status," Aruba will become an autonomous unit of the Kingdom of the Netherlands, giving it equal status with the Netherlands and the Netherlands Antilles, which will be reduced to five islands. The prime minister must arrange for Aruba's departure, organize a central government of the five remaining islands — Curacao, Bonaire and the Windward Islands of St. Maarten, St. Eusta-tius and Saba — and hold parliamentary elec-

Croes, the political leader who heads Aruba's separatist movement, said in an interview that there's no turning back from independence. Arubans have sought for years to escape what he described as the political domination of Curacao, which as a bigger island with a larger population has more votes in Parliament and is the seat of the central government.

READ THIS AD! If you are looking for a home in the "200,000 - "250,000 range, come see this one, it really is special. 4BR, 3 full baths, 3 L.A., formal dining, island kitchen, utility room with sink, 3 cor garage, many extra custom features, all built around an enclosed 20x14 ft (approx) heated and coaled atrium, on large lot in covered Trinity Estates. Not the same boring floor plan you've already seen 100 times. Light and bright with 5 skylights but still has richness of beautiful wood picture frame paneling and lovely custom cobinets. Drive by and then don't be afraid to call for more information (or directions if you can't find it). No high pressure sales tactics. We like honest friendly negotiating and will work with realtors if you prefer.

ANCIENT CUSTOMS & NEW TRADITIONS

Santa's workshop is housed in two windows at the John A. Woodside home, 6 Saddle Club Dr.

When Midlanders brighten Christmas season nights with warmly glowing outdoor lights and decorations, they are perpetuating ancient, hallowed customs and, often, starting new ones of their own.

Traditional Nativity scenes are a special staple of outdoor Christmas decorations.

Such displays were first popularized 760 years ago by St. Francis of Assisi when he staged a Nativity scene using real people and live animals outside his church in Greccio, Italy, on Christmas Eve in 1224, according to "The Christmas Book" by Robert Joseph.

An outdoor Navtivity scene has long been a family tradition in Jan Johnston's family. Her father, J.T. Henderson of San Angelo, decorated her childhood home with one for years.

"He put one up every year for, oh, 20 years, while I was growing up," she said. Two years ago she asked him if he would like to build one for her Midland home.

The large, elaborately painted plywood figures took Henderson "two or three months working off and on" to construct, Mrs. Johnston said.

Her own small children enjoy being part of the family tradition. "They love it," Mrs. Johnston said.

Another very popular outdoor decorating practice in Midland is to fill trees with strings of dazzling white lights. While these trees with shiny halos have a contemporary look, their roots can be traced back to mythic origins of the first Christmas tree.

Legend has it that while on a walk one Christmas Eve early in the 1500s Martin Luther was awed by the way frost-covered fir trees sparkled in the brilliant moonlight. When he returned home, Luther is supposed to have tried to reconstruct the beautiful scene by placing flickering candles on a sapling, according to "The Twelve Days of Christmas" by

Miles and John Hadfield.

Rather unromantically, the Hadfields go on to write, "Considering the Christmas tree more factually, the use of the fir seems to have originated at the winter solstice celebrations of the pagan German tribes in the Black Forest; it was well and widely established by Martin Luther's time. Probably not until the end of the seventeenth century did it carry lights."

Margaret E. Starr, who includes the lights in her outdoor decorations, noted the illuminated trees have been a long-standing tradition in Midland.

"They've been popular here for some time. I'd say that 10 years ago there were more than there are now."

Mrs. Starr is also proud of her "life-size Santa that waves for people to come in," which she said is popular among neighborhood children.

"I have little ones who love to come and visit Santa."

St. Nick — the "right jolly old elf" who started out his career as the generous Nicholas of Patara, bishop of Myra, in Asia Minor during the fourth century A.D. — graces many Midland windows, yards and front doors during the Christmas season.

For three years, the John A. Woodside family has equipped Santa with a toy workshop — complete with elfin labor — in their home's windows.

"I had small children — they're three years older now — so it seemed appropriate," Mrs. John Woodside said about the decorating theme.

The toys in the window vary from year to year depending on what toys her 7-year-old son and 11-year-old daughter have around the house, she said.

The display has already become a tradition in their neighborhood. "We had several comments that people were glad we put them up this year because children were looking for them."

Toffee Wilson, 31/2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Word B. Wilson, visits the life-size Santa in front of Mrs. Margaret E. Starr's home, 2002 Winfield Rd.

This Nativity scene at the home of Mrs. Jan Johnston, 19 Suffolk Dr., was constructed by her father, J.T. Henderson of San Angelo.

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Advertising, packaging, children's pleas and a host of other influences focus squarely on this season to be jolly. The result: pressures from every which way to buy toys, toys,

The pressures often gang up on frustrated parents, and guide their toy-buying tours. So quality can have very little to do with which toys appear under the Christmas

Now comes a list of "Trash Box Toys" to avoid and "Toy Box Toys" to buy. The list comes from, of all people, the Americans for Democratic Action. It is that group's 13th Annual Toy Survey. The ADA teamed with a Washington consumer advocacy group called Public Voice to field test nearly 150 toys, and publicly evaluate some of them.

Known mostly for its strong, lib-eral lobbying efforts, the ADA also oversees numerous surveys conducted by its Consumer Affairs Committee, founded about 15 years ago. Committee Chairman Ann Brown said that her committee surveys any service or product category it considers important to consumers.

CRITERIA FOR ADA approved toys that land in the "Toy Box" category include safety, good play value, realistic packaging and advertising, sturdiness and durability. To be saddled with a "Trash Box" rating, a toy may be dangerous, poorly constructed, messy, unsanitary, lack good play value, lead to a high level of frustration or have misleading advertising or packaging.

In most cases, the Toy Survey lists approximate prices. It does not cite suitable ages for toy users; the ages are quoted from labels on toy pack-

Winners that go into the "Toy Box" include several robots, cars that charge madly around a track, a padded camera that is immune to most kiddy rough stuff, a couple of little battery-operated amphibious cars, a pair of roller skates that won't roll backwards and a design-ityourself wind instrument

Losers relegated to the "Trash Box" include overpriced paper dia-pers (at about 66 cents each) for Cabbage Patch Kids, stinking dolls, a game called Sexual Trivia, a Michael Jackson microphone that barely works, a toy waterfall quite likely to puddle your floor and a ball point pen that simulates sucking blood from your arm. The survey lauded "wonderful," "sturdy," "colorful" Super GoBots. These robots for children 5 and older begin as cars that kids can play with like other toy vehicles, and then flip and slip and fold and slide until "presto — you have a wonderful-looking robot." The survey waxed euphoric on the subject of the $8 to $10 toys, even alluding to their "nice clicking sound."

ANOTHER "TOY Box" robot is children 5 or older. For about $15, this toy starts out looking like a tape recorder and cassette. Fiddle with the recorder for a while and it becomes a robot warrior. The cassette bursts forth as a regal, though miniature bird.

Among a small group of boys and girls aged 3 to 11 invited by the Los Angeles Times to play with many of the surveyed toys during a photo session, the Transformer: Soundwave was a favorite.

Toy store operators say that Transformers, which come in a number of different models, are among their hottest sellers. The Toy Survey did warn, 'We have tested several Transformers, and can regretfully report that there is a great difference in quality within the line. Some are well made, some are not.'

A third robot praised in the survey, the GoDaikin Abega, fascinated adults as well as children. Designed for robot fans 8 and older, this $40 item turns from three robots to three aircraft to a single, highly detailed airplane. "At first, $40 seems an exorbitant amount of money to pay for a toy," the survey said. "But when you consider that thousands of people are paying $15 or $20 for one robot, which often doesn't work well, and the Abega is three robots and is made well, we feel this toy gives value for your

Made for kids from 7 to 14, it sells for about $40. Youngsters at the lower end of that age span are likely to need adult help in putting the toy together for the first time or two. Once it is assembled, the children will have a motorized robot that, with the flick of a switch, will walk, roll, grasp, lift and turn. Robotix consists of 24 pieces and two electric motors that can be put together to create all manner of lunar creatures and equipment: Moon Walkers. Dune Buggies, Space Cruisers, and so on. The Toy Survey's analysis: "Though expensive, it is well made and creative."

THE ROUGH Riders Water Diver (about $8) and Stomper Water Demon (about $7) are a couple of little, battery-operated vehicles for children 4 and older that got high marks from the survey and from kids at the photo session. Water Diver toys work on land or underwater, have a two-wheel-drive "speed gear" and a four-wheel-drive "power gear." They also have tiny headlights, although on the car used in the photo session, the lights flickered once, not to be seen again. But the Water Diver survived plenty of hard use, both on land and in the tub. So did the Water Demon which, despite its four-inch length and 11/2-inch-diameter wheels, rolled over daunting obstacles such as little hands and feet. The Water Demon churned along the surface of the bath water rather than running underwater 'A great idea, well thought out, and it works really well," is how the survey described the Fisher-Price camera, which sells for about $28. It s a Kodak Instamatic to which Fisher-Price added rubberized ends to absorb shock when dropped, large push buttons for easy use, and a level to tell kids when they are tilting the landscape. The camera is suitable for children 5 and older.

IN ANOTHER innovative move that earned a "Toy Box" rating. Fisher-Price took the skate key out of roller skating. A combination of Velcro and tongue-in-groove pressure plates make the skates adjustable to 3-through-6-year-old feet. And the snap of a switch on the bottom of each skate adjusts the front wheels so they will only roll forward, thereby ending the scrapes, scratches and howls of backsliders enduring the indignities of learning to roller skate. The skates cost about $15.

The least expensive "Toy Box" item is Pocket Trivia. The $2 pack of cards for anyone 12 or older has 848 questions and answers. There are six versions of the game: movies, TV, music, world (news, science, history and the arts), sports and politics. So, for $12 one can get more than 5,000 questions and answers. Pocket Trivia can be played almost anywhere by two or more persons, and the survey declared it to be a game "that is fun (and) plays well ... and we think it's a great buy.

Crazy Combo is a whole orchestra's worth of wind section in one box for about $10. Designed for children ages 3 to 7 it is a series of plastic tubes that hook together to make different wind instruments with names like flutophone, slide whistle and trumpazoo. "Kids and parents all loved this creative, fun toy," the survey declared. But there was a warning: Be prepared for a lot of

A CHILD'S FEVER

A recent study at a leading children's hospital

showed that most parents do not know what temperature signals a fever or when a fever is so high it can cause brain damage. In most cases, parents worry too much about low to moderate fevers, giving their kids drugs that they do not need. Here are the fever facts: A temperature of 01 degrees Fahrenheit or greater, measured signals fever in children aged six m

high as 100.4 degrees during a normal day. An oral reading of 100 degrees signals fever in children over four years old. It is not until a fever reaches 106 degrees that harmful side up in the survey's "Trash Box." However, My Little Pony: Sea Ponies earned a "Toy Box" rating. For about $6, kids 3 and older get a sixinch plastic sea horse with a colorful mane, a brush, a comb and a hair ribbon. The sea horse lives in a plastic shell that attaches with a suction cup to the side of the tub, where the shell doubles as a soap dish. According to the survey, "It's not expensive, doesn't break, does what it's supposed to do, is fun for fantasy play — and everyone liked it!'

The survey pulled no punches when it came to filling the "Trash

FOR ABOUT $17, My Little Pony Waterfall will put a big puddle on your floor, once you get it working. At the photo session, the hose fell off and had to be put back, and it crimped and had to be pushed into shape before water with special 'Pony Bubbles' could be pumped from the base of this toy up to a plastic cloud, from which it rained on a little plastic pony with a color-ful mane and tail that could be washed, combed, curled, dried and braided. The survey had some devas-tating comments: "It leaked all over the place ... the plastic tubing which connects the bellows to the waterfall is flimsily connected and had bro-

Cabbage Patch Kids' disposable diapers at $3.99 for six were called 'a Cabbage Patch Kids item taken to its absurd limits. We give Coleco's diapers the award for the most overpriced item of the year.

Blood Suckers, which cost about $4, are rubberlike creatures that look like green and purple fantasy vampires. They surround a ball point pen, the non-writing end of which is clear plastic. When turned upside down, the plastic appears to fill from the tip with blood, so if the tip of a Blood Sucker is held against the skin, it seems to be drawing blood. The Toy Survey valuation: "If that's what you want in a red ball point pen, go for it! Enough said. We put this toy in our Trash Box." But several kids at the photo session thoroughly enjoyed playing with the Blood Suckers. "It's just a pen," said an 8-year-old girl, who then turned the thing over and "sucked" blood from her hand, declaring, "It's fun!"

STINKIES WENT right into the "Trash Box," even though the survey labeled them "too awful, even for the Trash Box. ... this is a nauseating, disgusting item." The toys, which sell for less than $2 and smell like their names, are called "Rotten Eggs," "Bad Breath," "Sewer" and 'Dead Fish.'

Jumpsters are little "Trash Box" cars that get pushed across the floor and, after traveling about 21/2 feet, hop about 21/2 inches in the air. At The Times photo session, everyone ignored the Jumpster. The survey notes that the toy costs less than $4 and wears out relatively fast.

"YOU'RE INVITED for good fun and cheer As we celebrate Lou Brown's

So began the invitations to a gala birthday party held recently at the Plaza Club. Lou's husband, Win, planned the surprise event with the help of daughter Theresa and son, Karl, and friends Ava Jane and Dr. Joe B. Warren. Also assisting with party plans and attending were daughters Barbara of Houston and Nancy of Irving and family friend, Gaye Denley of Houston.

Decorations included fall arrangements, with a birthday motif. More than 100 friends, neighbors and relatives attended. Special guests were Lou's mother, Elinor (Mrs. Charles) Kerber of Chanhassen, Minn.; her sister, Maxine (Mrs. Leo) Zellman of Gaylord, Minn.; her nephews, Scott Bandemir of Midland and Bob Bandemir of Atlanta, Ga.; Bob's daughter, Jessica, and Win's brother and wife, Dan and Evelyn Brown of Christoval.

Actress converts old dairy

WALES, Wis. (AP) — Soprano-actress Barbara Williams, who has starred on Broadway and has danced with a president, is enrolled in a long-running engagement with the old family dairy farm she may once have thought she could leave

"People are needing to get out of the city," the sophisticated New Yorker says of her campaign to convert mammoth barns, milk sheds, bunk houses and pastures into a rural performing arts complex.

An imagination honed by decades of experience with stage settings also envisions the University of Wisconsin re-establishing a portion of the farm's abandoned dairy herd, providing an agricultural backdrop for theaters, craft shops, coffee houses and art studios catering to urban visitors.

She is a country girl's answer to how to keep 'em down on the farm after seeing the big time. Her enthusiasm for the agri-arts project is no less than her concern for the farms that are being driven out of business by economic squeeze. It is, in fact, a daughter's campaign not only to save her parents' acreage from urban sprawl, "but to make a statement, make people save what is worth saving, fighting a little for what is important.

Marketing economics and the cost of hiring a hundred hands to operate the 2,000-acre farm and about eight satellite farms forced her father, Chester Williams, to sell his cattle in 1977.

It was the end of Wern Farms, whose bottled milk had been trucked for years 100 miles to Chicago. Subdivisions began nibbling at the fringes of the farm that once boasted 25 buildings and 900 cows.

It is now down to 900 acres, about 30 of which Miss Williams wants to use for her arts project. If history is an incentive, the family's original 40-acre, land-grant charter of 1848 still hangs framed on the wall of the brick farmhouse, bearing the signature of President James K. Polk.

Holiday doldrums difficult

Wadhington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — When Jennifer Magnus' husband died 15 years ago, she had no idea how tough her next few Christmases would be. "Everything about the holidays reminded me of his absence.

Signing Christmas cards without her husband's name was upsetting. Going alone to her children's school pageants was "a real downer."

Family traditions disappeared. Their live Christmas tree was replaced by an artificial one that is stored - partly trimmed - from year to year. The children, then 11 and 13, noticed fewer gifts.

I stopped making Christmas cookies," says Magnus, 55, of Takoma Park, Md. "We haven't had a whole turkey in the house since I became single.

Most of us have experienced, to some degree, the holiday blues and personal turmoil of schedule hassles, unfulfilled expectations, longings for Christmases past. The dramatic increase, however, in numbers of single and divorced parents and stepfamilies in America has made the usual holiday dilemmas even more complex. "Parents facing the first few holidays without their spouses suffer a profound loss of family," says Herbert Freudenberger, a New York psychologist who examines the issues of holiday stress in his book Situational Anxiety: How To Overcome Your Everyday Anxious Moments (Quality Paperbacks, $8.95).

"SIMPLY BY watching TV and listening to other people at work, they figure everybody is happy and in the holiday spirit - but them. A holiday can become a special trauma for kids of divorced or single parents. They once expected to visit certain grandparents, and now that may not be possible. Traumatic shifts like that point out to them, all the more, the disruptive changes in their lives. Similar problems confront reconstituted families where "time-sharing" of the children can be particularly painful during the holidays.

The logistics become a lot more complicated, and so do the emotions," says Dr. Emily Visher, a Los Altos Hills, Calif., psychologist and cofounder of the Stepfamily Association of America. When she and her husband Dr. John Visher were married in 1959, they each brought four children from previous marriages into the new family.

The children were at the other households Christmas Eve and then came back for Christmas Day. These holidays carry so much emotional weight. Children and adults all have strong needs and expectations around the same date. It's difficult to work it all out."

ONE REASON that holiday dilemmas are particularly difficult, say mental health experts, is because they often center on yearround issues suddenly magnified by the season. For instance, money problems. Psychologists say the added complexities of disrupted family life can turn a simple case of holiday doldrums into an emotional maze. But, they add, a few assertive steps can help simplify, and even prevent, many of the problems.

"If you're a single parent, especially a woman, you usually have less to live on than before," says Abby Sternberg, coordinator of Prevention Services for Children and Youth at the Mount Vernon Center of Community Mental Health, in Alexandria, Va.

"If you're a stepparent, you may be supporting two families. Come the holidays, you probably can't afford the gifts you want for your Pressure builds if the parent without custody turns into Santa Claus and tries to "buy the kids" with expensive presents. "Divorced kids," says Sternberg, may complain that the noncustodial parent doesn't know them well enough to buy them gifts they want. "It's hard for a parent who isn't with the kids every day to shop.

And to make it harder, they feel that if they don't buy their child that Transformer or Cabbage Patch doll, that very special gift, it'll be a negative mark on the holiday."

THE LOGISTICS of juggling schedules and a new roster of relatives also takes their toll. "Dad gets you on Christmas Eve and Mom gets you at 10 a.m. Christmas Day - it can make children feel like they're not really wanted," says Sternberg. "Just pawns moved from here to there because it's expected, not because they're loved.'

Getting used to new family members, such as a new spouse for a mother or father, multiplies problems for children and adults. It can be, says Sternberg, like spending the holiday among strangers. 'The parent is often occupied with other relationships, and that makes the child feel neglected and angry. On top of it all, the parent who doesn't get to see the kids from a previous marriage has a really bad time of it."

Fewer - or new - hands in the family also mean a change in the way a holiday is celebrated, which can undermine the security of traditions. "There are all sorts of little family rituals that aren't going to be observed," says Emily M. Brown, a family therapist and director of the Divorce and Marital Stress Clinic in Rosslyn, Va.

As in the case of Jennifer Magnus, some rituals lose their meaning when the family loses one member. Others simply require too much time for a single parent.

"YOU CAN'T bake the homemade cookies, trim the tree, shop, wrap the presents, clean the house and have friends over while holding down a job and raising the kids by yourself," says Sternberg. "You can no longer do everything that has come to mean the holidays for you."

Psychologists say the added complexities of disrupted family life can turn a simple case of holiday doldrums into an emotional maze. But, they add, a few assertive steps can help simplify, and even prevent, many of the problems. Almost always, the solutions involve creativity, flexibility and communication. Magnus, now an active member of Parents Without Partners, healed some of her holiday wounds seven years after her husband's death when she decided to host an annual open house at her home for friends and acquaintances who can't stand being alone on Christmas Day.

"If you're lucky, you develop some traditions that are easier and as satisfying," she says. "I resolved many of my problems by having guests

"Give yourself permission to try something new," says Sternberg.
"Join together with people who aren't in your family. Tie yourself into a larger community so that you're not an isolated little family hovering at home in pain.'

FREUDENBERGER RECOM-MENDS involving the children in starting new holiday customs. "Predictability is important to them" to help make the transition easier and to minimize the anxiety, he says. A seemingly insignificant - but special - dish for dinner, or a recording of certain music can make a lasting difference.

And sometimes establishing new holiday rituals requires compromise. Visher recalls counseling a woman who had married a man whose family traditionally tied strings from the toes of Christmas stockings near the fireplace leading to gifts hidden throughout the house.

The woman thought it was just too much," says Visher. As a way of gently adjusting a ritual to new circumstances: "I said 'Why don't you just shorten the strings a little each

Better communication - although difficult - is also critical, says Sternberg, who conducted a recent workshop for single and divorced parents facing holiday troubles. Only a few people showed up.

The dilemma," says Sternberg, "is that they need to take time out to talk it over, and too often they don't. They need to let the children know how and where they'll be spending the holidays, and find out from them what they want. The child needs to be involved in talking about the options so he can have a better idea of what is expected."

FOR INSTANCE, if children will be spending part of their holidays at a second home, they must be prepared for it, adds Freudenberger. "I like parents to use photographs and letters, even audio or video tapes, that they send through the year so kids will know a little about the stepfamily they'll meet.

To reduce anxiety during the holiday season, you've got to work on holiday problems all year round."

A good New Year's commitment, say family counselors, is to evaluate the holidays afterwards - including the time the children spent at the

Many parents feel conflict about asking what happened 'over there,' "says Sternberg. "They don't want to put the child in the middle and they don't always want to know the details. But the child needs to know you are a parent he can talk to when things are going well - and when they're not.

Talking it over, ahead of time and afterwards, allows you to make plans now and correct problems

A decision to celebrate the holidays in two homes can be both good and bad news to children.

"I tell parents to be honest to the kids and tell them Christmas won't be like it used to be," says Brown. "Eliminate faulty expectations. For instance, if there are going to be fewer gifts, tell them so - and tell them why.

"Don't create false hopes. Separated parents should never spend Christmas together 'for the kids.' That's just a cruel joke. But do tell them they're going to have two Christmases every year. Most kids like that idea.

VISHER WARNS that some parents who try to assure happy holidays for their children may forget themselves in the logistics.

"Help your kids," she says, "but make sure the holidays are special for you, too. Adults have their own needs. That's an important message for your kids for the future. And children will worry if they think a parent isn't having fun.

Women smell better than men

WASHINGTON (AP) - To detect the world's vast variety of nasal sensations from roses to garbage, women have a more acute sense of smell than men and keep their olfactory advantage throughout life, says a new study.

Researchers at the University of Pennsylvania, in the largest study of smelling ever conducted, also found that the ability to detect and distinguish odors drops off with age. Since smell is an important component of taste, they added, this finding could partly explain why so many elderly people complain that their food is flavorless.

The study of 1,955 persons of all ages also found that females generally are more accurate in identifying odors than males in each age group, and that the sense of smell declines less quickly in older women

In addition, nonsmokers outperformed smokers in every category,

Dr. Richard L. Doty, director of the university's Clinical Smell and Taste Research Center, said in a telephone interview that the study helps resolve conflicting results from numerous smaller studies done ear-

This is the largest study of its kind, the first major use of a standardized test with the general population," Doty said, "and it clearly shows there is a relationship of smell

Researchers used a test developed at the center to check 1,158 females and 797 males with ages ranging from 5 to 99 years. Subjects included university employees, residents of homes for the elderly, students, youngsters at summer camps and people at regional health fairs.

While other studies have shown superior female performance, the latest research shows that this advantage holds for all age groups.

Washington Post News Service

TOKYO - Toshihiko Seko, a Boston and Fukuoka marathon champion who is one of Japan's best athletes, said on his return from the Los Angeles Olympics that he wanted to get married. Despite his disappointing 14th-place finish in the Olympic marathon, he immedireived 300 marriage propos-

Then, last month he announced that he would marry a 25-year-old woman, after having met her through the traditional "omiai" custom - an arranged meeting between couples.

His case is by no means unusual, for omiai is behind 26 percent of Japan's weddings, according to Health and Welfare Ministry figures. But the practice is on the wane.

In the early 1960s, arranged marriages averaged 46 percent, according to the ministry. In the past the intermediary was invariably a friend or relative, but today it might well be one of Japan's 5,000 marriage bureaus. Seko, despite the massive media coverage given to his "I-want-a-wife" appeal, finally resorted to omiai.

He met six young women, finally choosing the first candidate who was introduced to him by his trainer. They met 10 times, and then agreed to marry after knowing each other for 10 weeks.

At a press conference where he announced his plans, reporters asked him why he had gone on to meet five other women after seeing the one he had finally chosen. "I thought I could find better," he said, as his fiancee sat modestly, and silently, beside him.

This reveals an attitude toward marriage that is still widespread in Japan, where love is not necessarily priority. In fact, as reflected in Seko's post-Olympic appeal—which was, to say the least, unusual by western standards - many people marry here because it is the expected thing to do.

In a society often motivated by production, many men like to settle their domestic life early in life so that they can be more efficient in the office or factory

In fact, a single man in his late 20s can often be told nicely by colleagues or bosses that it was time he married.

There is another aspect to marriage for Japanese.

In the absence of a social security system in japan, the children usually the oldest son - follow the Confucian tradition in looking after their parents in their old age. But for those young Japanese men who are too busy, or too shy, to find a bride, "omaiai" is a perfect solution.

For a Japanese woman, whose place is very much in the home, marriage is essential before she is 25, as afterwards she is considered too

A Japanese proverb says "A woman is like a Christmas cake. Before Dec. 25 it sells well: on the 25th it is hard to sell while afterwards it is unsellable

For this reason, many unmarried women of 25 become panic-stricken and rush to look for a husband through "omiai."

The average age of a woman who marries through "omiai"is 26, compared to 30 for a man.

Vinyl wall coverings are undoubtedly one of the best buys available today. It is reasonably priced, extremely hard-wearing, soil and stain resistant, moisture resisiant easy to keep clean and comes in designer colors and delightful patterns. Many come with a coordinated or matching fabric. When this is the case, use the matching fabric for window curtains or have it laminated to a window shade. Matching walls and windows helps to produce a custom-designed look. Another way to create this ambience and, at the same time make a room look larger, is to use the wall covering on the ceiling and on the backs of doors.

Create the look you want in your room with our help at WINDOW DECOR, 30 W. Industrial Loop, 685-0875. Custom window treatments can be made from our fabric or yours. All work is done to your individpal regiulrements in our own workroom and provide installation service. Wallpaper and carpeting are also available to help you coordinate room decor. Hours: Mon thru Fri 8 a.m. 4:30 p.m., and by appointment. Our entire staff would like to take this opportunity to wish all of you a very Merry Christmas.

Unique gifts available

Copley News Service

If there's an amateur astonomer on your Christmas list, you could give that person an out-of-the world gift - a private observatory on a 40acre site on the big island of Hawaii.

The starting price for this one-of-a-kind gift is $1,401,785. Of course, the whole deal is subject to prior sale. It's just one of several gifts listed in Robinson's 1984 Christmas catalog that are truly fit for a king.

Unless you're a Getty or a Rockefeller, however, chances are this won't solve the problem of what to buy the person who seemingly has everything.

You still can surprise your favorite star-gazer with a unique gift, however, one that won't wipe out your savings account. For $70 you can give him the right to name a wo-star cluster high in the universe The name chosen by the recipient will be reported to the Library of Congress by the International Star Registry to make it official.

That's just one unusual idea that Ruth Katz, a New York gift consultant, suggests. Ferreting out creative gift ideas is a year-round occupation for Katz, who also is the television host of Metromedia New York's Saturday Morning Live." She finds them in press releases that cross her desk, in catalogs, during visits to the gift building in New York City and on shopping excursions.

NO ONE is impossible to shop for, said Katz. You just have to put a little thought into selecting the right

If you have a music lover on your list, for instance, she suggests a radio that attaches to a shower wall. The radio is one of the hottest gift items of the year, she said. The price is about $30 to $32.

For a person on a fixed income. Katz suggests buying a 1985 calendar and writing down all the family's birthdays, anniversaries and important dates

'I'm going to give one to my grandmother," she said. "It'll have to be a Rockwell calendar for her."

After Katz has noted all the family's dates to remember, she's going to clip $5 AT&T gift certificates to the calendar. That way Katz's grandmother can call her relatives without worrying about the expense.

It's the perfect gift for her," said Katz, who suggests buying a calendar from an art museum or one to match a person's special interest. There are so many calendars from which to choose.

The right gift for the right person is more important than the amount of money you spend, she said.

Even if you're giving someone in the financial community a conservative "stockbroker's tie," said Katz, you want it to convey the message, "I thought about you."

INSTEAD OF using holiday wrapping paper. Katz suggested wrapping the tie in the Wall Street Journal. In place of a bow, top it with a package of chocolate foil-wrapped coins.

"Give your gifts with thought and love," she said. "There are lots of things you can do, if you just think."

A person's hobby may provide you with an idea. If your child's teacher likes to run, she suggests buying her a $3 pair of jogging socks and then wrapping them up in a map showing local jogging trails - walking clubs have these maps, she said. Then use shoelaces instead of ribbon.

An inexpensive gift that anyone can give to anyone of any age is a musical toothbrush.

"I found it in a gift catalog," she said. "It's like an electric toothbrush. with interchangeable heads so everyone in the family can use it." It plays "Oh What a Beautiful Mornwhen pressed against the

Katz, who likes to combine one gift with another, suggests giving a tube of flavored toothpaste along with the toothbrush.

She also found the perfect gift for the person who is on the road a lot. It's a compact foldup hair dryer which converts to a travel iron. It's priced about $30.

Another thoughtful gift for a traveler is an office-on-the-go. It looks like a manicure kit, she said, but when it's unzipped, it has Scotch tape, paper clips, stapler, rubber bands, scissors — "everything any-one would need."

"I'm going to get one for myself,"

THE NO. 1 gift on her own list was a silver telephone dialer she found at Tiffanys for $27.50. That is a gift that someone gave that I had really wanted," she said of the early Christmas gift. There of lots of creative things you can do for people, she said. Instead of taking your hostess a potted plant or a box of chocolates, she suggests a morning-after gift. When the hostess wakes up the morning after the party, she can open Katz's gift before facing overflowing ashtrays and dirty dishes. The gift is a basket filled with breakfast goodies, so she won't have to worry about what to eat. Katz lines a basket with a dish towel or a piece of colorful fabric cut with pinking shears. Then she adds napkins, fresh croissants, miniature gourmet jams, a specialty tea or coffee and cinnamon sticks tied with a ribbon. Each item is individually wrapped. Another gift she often tucks in the basket is a Toastmark, which costs about $4.

"It looks like a rubber stamp in the shape of a piece of toast," she said. The words, "Good Morning" are written in raised letters on one side of the gadget. When bread is stamped before toasting, the lettering is burned into the toast.

1984 was 'Year of the Yuppie'

By SHAREEN BLAIR BRYSAC Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Gary Hart may not have won the Democratic nomination for president, but he performed a historic duty this year nevertheless. Thanks to Hart, the nation's news media discovered a new name for the statistical bump in the population curve: the Yuppie.

Some candidates leave behind political legacies, but Hart's may be sociological, and may be culinary. Behind him is strewn a trail of croissant crumbs and espresso grounds the splendid remains of a new invention, the campaign brunch. Who eats campaign brunch? The Yuppie, or young urban profes-

The term Yuppie cuts across all class and ethnic boundaries. It is usually applied to those persons living in or near a major city between the ages of 25 (when you've gotten your M.B.A. or LL.D. and landed your first job with assistant or associate in your title) to 45. You can see why Gary Hart was concerned about his birth date.

Within earshot it is possible to identify these overachievers with the alacrity of an exit pollster if you note their constant use of the words "mindset" and "lifestyle." True Yuppies use foreign phrases whenever possible to express complex ideas, tant pis ("so much the worse") being favored along with the more Vonnegutian ainsi va-t-on ("so it goes."). 'Ciao" is, of course, the classic Yuppie greeting.

Warm drinks perk up Christmas entertaining

By KAREN GILLINGHAM Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Those who count, or at least worry about, calories during the holidays probably try to pass on the cookies, fudge and fruitcakes that appear at every gathering. But they may still have just a few drinks, saying no to the party food as their way of surviving the season without putting on the pounds. However, it may be just as prudent (although not very much so) to practice the reverse: nibble a few cookies, a piece of fudge or a slice of fruitcake along with a cup of tea, coffee or a glass of mineral

Running a few hot mulled punches and other typical holiday drinks through the computer turned up caloric contents that did not always return enough nutrient values to justify their numbers, even when the recipes were chosen for their fruity ingredients. Still, these drinks may be a better choice than high-fat, high-alcohol eggnogs or other alcoholic potions combined with sugary mixers such as soft

One that is sure to be different on the holiday circuit is the Golden Mulled Punch, a warm and spicy brew of apple and carrot juices spiked with rum. At 105 calories per serving, this drink is rich in Vitamin A, but it provides little else except a small amount of hard-to-get iron. Those who prefer a non-alcoholic drink can omit the rum, along with about 20 calories per serving.

Any of the recipes and their nutritional data here should provide information to guide holiday decisions about eating and drinking.

Books on wine make intoxicatingly useful presents

By DAN BERGER Copley News Service

Although a bottle of wine is an attractive gift, there are drawbacks. First, there is the fear of what to buy. If the recipient is a wine collector, there are the dangers that he or she already has plenty of the wine intended as a gift, or he or she doesn't like the gift wine. And since the law prohibits the reselling of wine, such unwanted gifts are hard to dispose of.

Wine books, on the other hand, can make better gifts. They are unbreakable and they give the wine lover joy in an arcane sub-ject about which you never can learn too much. And here are further reviews of some newly released wine books, with my ratings on a scale of 1 to 10, with 10

Oregon wine country doesn't sound exciting, this slim (250 pages) effort is enjoyable even if you never step foot in Oregon.

One reason is the book's utter completeness. Not only is there a listing of all 46 wineries in the state (plus three in Washington), but they are listed logically, in geographical order from Port-being tops.

Flower shows inspire gardeners

By ELVIN McDONALD

Barely three months from this writing hundreds of thousands of us will find our First Spring Day at a major flower show: Philadelphia March 3-10, Boston March 9-17, New York March 20-24. I single these out because they couldn't exist without a tricky and often misunderstood growing technique called forcing.

Other famous shows, such as orchids in South Florida, amaryllis in New Orleans and Houston, and even England's fabled Chelsea, which is produced by the formida-ble Royal Horticultural Society, are timed to coincide much more closely with the star flowers' natural peak bloom period.

Delphiniums, foxgloves and hollyhocks blooming shoulder-high in May are nothing to sneeze at, but in March when gardens ouside the exhibition halls are barely stirring under blankets of snow, they are

And inspiring, which is why those who grow for show do it and the rest of us come to admire and soak it all up. In the same way athletes are challeneged by the Olympics, gardeners are spurred on by those who dare to exhibit.

One of the best ways to improve your results as an indoor gardener is to grow as if to show, even if the display is meant entirely for private personal pleasure. Early this fall, a few weeks before New York City's houseplant societies held an exhibition at the Horticultural Society, I was asked to judge.

My outward yes contrasted with an inner no; judging would be fun but I imagined those who were going to compete must at that very moment be lavishing kindnesses on all the chosen entrants. Then it occurred to me, I could prepare to show, then judge my efforts with dispassionate objectivity: The very thought charged me with eagerness. Doing it made me a better gardener and a better judge.

fost show plants are no dents; gardening may be an inexact science but certain factors hold fairly still if not absolute:

1. Space. A show plant has to have room to grow shapely, for air and light to nuture all parts equally. 2. Temperature. Here is where forcing is misunderstood: It means providing approximately the same range of temperatures out of season as nature provides in season to bring

Even if one doesn't compete in plant shows, gardeners can attain their best results with indoor plants if they "grow as if to show."

Outdoors, where we have little control, a cool spell may delay maturity while unseasonably hot weather can bring short-lived blossonms on soft, weak growth. Indoors we can use this information wisely, increasing or decreasing in order to peak at the desired moment.

abundance. Short days and cloudy weather can be offset by supplementary electric lighting. (My 8-inch wreath of Hedera helix 'Itsy Bitsy,' a miniature English ivy I am trying to bring to perfection for the New York Show, spends these winter days in a sunny window, evenings in a warm fluorescent light garden.) 4. Water. Show plants demand consistency, no extremes.

5. Roots. Of course a show plant will have anchor roots, but it also needs youthful feeders, stimulated by root pruning and repotting. (African violet growers typically repot three months before showtime to boost a flush of new leaves crowned by bouquets of bloom.)

6. Nutrients. Be thoughtful, Use an N-P-K ratio designed to get the growth response you want foliage, flower, or balanced. One generally doesn't experiment with show plants, unless quantities of the same candidate can be risked on the chance of producing something

7. Grooming. This includes instant removal of any unwanted growth, dead or otherwise: frequent washing of the entire plant with lukewarm water. No insects allowed; if found, remove by hand with cotton swab dipped in alcohol, or use insecticidal soap, but only if you know it will not have a phytotoxic effect on that plant. Stake early: twigs bend easily. Woodier branches may break.

8. Staging, This often spells the difference between winners and also-rans: Clean pot, matching saucer. Cultivated surface soil, or better, a suitable mulch, such as sandstone pebbles for a desert plant; woods moss, chopped leaf mold, or tiny-leaved ground cover such as baby's-tears for a jungle type.

Optimum growing temperatures for foliage and flowering potted plants are included in my notebook sheets for window, light and home greenhouse gardeners. For your set send $1 and a stamped, selfwritten on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305.

Women pose in lingerie for Christmas gift photos

By JOHN BOGERT Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES - This is a story of changed times. Reaching back two decades I can see the photo of the girl - long, supple and clad only in a diaphanous negligee.

What burned this image into my memory was the fact that this wasn't a magazine photo.

The seminude in question was Bobby Cahill's girlfriend, who posed alluringly in an 11-by-14 print, professionally done and suitable for Need I say that Bobby, some kind guy himself, seemed unimpressed by the gift from his heart-stoppingly beautiful girl.

To me, however, that picture represented one of the raciest moments of my teen life.

Flash forward to the present and a Manhattan Beach lingerie shop called Fantasy World. Displayed inside are frilly undergarments set against loud rock and the whir of a otor-driven camera

IF OUR VIEW of sexuality has changed, then that change is at least partially apparent in a room adjacent this shop.

Here women of all ilks are practically lining up to have taken the very thing that made Bobby Cahill a legend in his own time.

Done up in costumes that range from the practically nude to the sort-of-nude, women are posing for Steve Hutton's camera and they're doing it for mostly the same reasons.

They want to give a present to their man," said the store's owner and creator of this suddenly popular photo scheme. "This seems to be a usiness of the '80s.'

Actually, if women come to face the camera feeling a bit apprehensive (which some do), the sight of the small, balding 34-year-old photographer in his three-piece suit comforts

Not only does his mother run the front counter, but Hutton keeps a shooting to tell his clients that he does not want to sleep with them.

It has always been the Indiana born Hutton's dream to shoot "glamour" photographs

Self-taught and armed with great enthusiasm, he set off into this unchartered field two years ago and has been startled by the demand.

"It occurred to me that nobody was offering these kinds of photos along with a huge wardrobe and makeup: So, I thought, why not incorporate my hobby and my merchandise to give women what they want, a chance to look good."

TO GAIN AN advantage over OK to look nice and feel pretty nature, Hutton uses soft camera filters, soft lighting and professional makeup artist Janette Archer, who will spend as long as two hours making over a subject. Pose the women on a Victorian brass bed wearing a Merry Widow and the customers walk away with 30 of the kind of misty photographs normally seen in a decent girlie magazine. Often he is surprised by the emotional response. "I see women from all walks of fe," he said, offering proofs that seem to back his statement. "They're professionals, housewives, wairesses, everybody of all ages and colors. And what they have in common is this girlhood fantasy of someday being a fashion model. I offer an outlet for that dream to women who can afford (from $50 to $175) to pay for it.

Some women, Hutton said, come because because a man asked them

Said makeup artist Archer: "It doesn't seem that women need a lot of encouragement to pose.

To her own surprise, hefty women, mousy women, women who might otherwise fade into the wall, sometimes come off looking better film than your average heart-

"THEY'LL LOOK A certain way, start doing things with their eyes. It can be amazing to see them come alive," she said.

A very small percentage will ask for nude shots and Hutton will do them, although he says they are not his forte.

On a recent afternoon Sally Gobel of Redondo Beach, Calif., was in the studio being made up. With her was her 71/2-week-old daughter, Amanda.

"I like to please my husband. Isn't that what's it's all about?" she asked, expressing a most unliberated thought that is heard often around the studio. The other most-given reason came from Lisa, a local beach resident used. Attractive and 23, she gave two reasons for being there. "I'm doing this for my boyfriend's Christmas and I'm doing it for me. Who knows, maybe I'm at my peak "Five years from now I could have three kids and 30 extra pounds on me. I want to remember that this is how I once looked. Neither Lisa nor Gobel was uneasy about her photo session. This, said Archer, is fairly typical. Women want to feel that they are OK. There has been a swing away from the 'earth mother' days. I think women want to feel that it's Television reaches Inner Mongolian herdsmen

New York Times News Service

HOHHOT, China - When Jimuya, a herdsman in Inner Mongolia, sold the wool sheared from his 200 sheep last spring, half of the $320 that he earned went to buy a locally-made Swan television set.

Jimuya, who like many Mongolians uses only one name, took the 12-inch black-and-white set back to his two-room house in the rolling grasslands of Siziwang Banner, or County. The herdsman rigged the television set to a windmill generator turned by the incessant wind that sweeps down from Mongolia.

At night, when his sheep, horses and cattle have been settled down, Jimuya joins his wife, four children and elderly parents on the family's kang, or heated-brick sleeping platform, to find out what is happening in the world outside.

"I'll watch whatever programs the others watch - news, features, films," Jimuya told a journafist who had driven two hours across the prairie to find him. The family's favorite nights are Tuesday and Friday, Jimuya said, because the television station in Hohhot, the regional capital of Inner Mongolia, broadcasts in Mongolian then instead of Jimuya is one of many peasants across China who made a television set their first major purchase under the new agricultural responsibility system, which rewards them for working harder. Some fellow herdsmen bought color television sets. Jimuya said, but he frugally limited himself to a black-and-white set because he is saving to build a new

About 200 million Chinese watch television, the official New China News Agency reported last January, making them the world's largest television audience. The Ministry of Radio and Television said in September that television reached nearly 60 percent of China's population, which means 600 million people.

Whatever the audience, factories cannot turn out enough television sets. China plans to produce more than 4.6 million sets this year. In the first nine months, 823,400 color sets were manufactured, a jump of 160 percent over the comparable period last year, but this lagged behind consumer demand.

The impact has been most obvious in the countryside, where television antennas sprout from mud-brick houses on dirt roads. In Guangdong Province in southeastern China, many peasants have put up UHF "fishbone" antennas to bring in sassy television shows from Hong Kong, despite periodic campaigns by the authorities to pull them down as conduits of bourgeois pollution.

But elsewhere, peasants who once went to bed when the sun set now spend evenings mesmerized in front of prime-time physics lessons, reports on the harvest output, Chinese operas, teleplays that act out the government's latest injunctions and sports events like the triumphs of China's abiding heroines, its female volleyball team

The Communist Party recognized in a directive a year ago that radio and television were effective tools for keeping in touch with the masses. Last December, Wu Lengxi, the Radio and Television Minister, admitted that Chinese television should be livelier, though he made clear that it would eschew the violence and sex found on Western television. "While clearing away cultural contamination," he said, "we should try our best to meet the people's cultural needs.

Television has become a fashionable thing, and everybody wants to have one, even here," he said. "With television, I can see what's happening in the outside."

Laundry uses solar power

POTTSTOWN, Pa. (AP) - W.D. Hornig smiles whenever the sun shines, knowing he is using those rays to save money.

Hornig, who owns the Solar Wash in Pottstown, depends on the sun to keep his laundry business profitable. So far, it has not let him down. "Sunshine is one of the few things we get in the world for free," Hor-nig said. "As long as we don't blow ourselves up, it's always going to be there. So, we might as well use it." Using a pre-heat solar system, Hornig, who started the business three years ago, is able to heat city water, which is about 45 or 50 degrees Fahrenheit when it is pumped in to the laundry.

On bright, sunny days during the summer months, Hornig said, he is able to heat the water to above 126 degrees.Other months, when the days are shorter and the sun not as warm, the solar system may heat water to only 60 or 70 degrees. On those days, Hornig depends on gas to boost the temperatures.

The dryers also are gas-operated.

Hornig's gas bills are about half as much during the summer as the winter, and he figures he saves at least 10 percent each month.

He paid $14,000 three years ago for the solar equipment, which has a life expectancy of 30 years, and expects that it will have paid for itself in another two to four years.

Woman worries about bad reference

BY ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

Q. I worked for a major oil company for 91/2 years as a drafting technician until they bought a smaller oil company and had to cut staff. I had major surgery last year, and was out sick one month with more absences than anyone in my department. They did not complain about my work but offered me a job in the mailroom at the same pay. My self-esteem dropped and is still very low. I declined the mail job and took the severance package, which was a month's salary for every year of service. I've been on some promising interviews, but no job offers.

I think my boss, who was not only extremely incompetent but also didn't like me or any other woman in the office, has been giving me bad references. Every prospective employer wants to know the name of your former boss, especially with 91/2 years of employment. Should I leave his name off my resume and say he retired? How can I get past the hurdle of working for an incompetent boss for 91/2 years who didn't like me? I was divorced with three kids and could not easily change jobs, though I have since remarried.

A. You have made a common mistake - working for nearly 10 years for someone you hate. Not risking finding another job because of your children is really an excuse. Sacrificing yourself in such a way is a bad deal for everyone.

Now, to rectify it. No, you can't "retire" him, but you can say on your interviews that you had personal differences with your old boss. You can also take a course in graphics or drafting to prove and update your skills. In the course you just might meet someone who'd give you a lead to another company. You're still young with lots of new opportunities. Start risking.

Q. I have been a teacher for 16 years in one school system. I would like to move to another state but I'd have to give up tenure as well as other benefits. I'd like your opinion on the fairness of this system.

A. It may not seem fair, but some industries do like to keep their own. So they penalize people for transferring. It is not only true for public school systems, but also for airline pilots and for the military branches. It seems you pick your airline or branch of service, and stay put. They hope you'll feel committed enough to contribute new ideas and be trusted to carry on their name.

The only other alternative is starting your own school. But if you did, how would you like to give tenure plus benefits to an experienced teacher who had just jumped someone else's ship? Even for big business, where transfer is common, it presents a tough dilemma.

Q. I am a 44-year-old single career woman. I have given everything to my company and have been rewarded so I have no complaints. But lately I hear my associates talk about their children, and I feel slightly jealous. Do you have any suggestions on overcoming this feel-

A. It's certainly natural enough. There's always advantages and disadvantages to every act. Watching children grow up and, we hope, succeed is one advantage. On the other hand, being childless and free from responsibility is an advantage, too.

Why not do something that puts your advantages in each court become an active "aunt" to your friends' children, join and become active in Big Sisters, or for direct impact investigate having a teenage foster child. At the least, financially support an organization like Save

Q. I am 17 and have tried to work for one supply company for two years. First they wouldn't hire anyone who wasn't 16, and now they didn't hire me because I was only 17. What should I do?

A. Go to their competitor, get hired on, become the best salesman you can be and learn the business.

Maybe they'll be sorry; maybe they won't. But you won't waste one more moment of your precious life trying to understand policies that fluctuate. Get on with it now!

Q. I am a photographer and must admit I really like my work. But I can't seem to sell it to magazines. I'd give it away, almost, before I can ask a price for it. Is there any way that photographers can just do their art and not worry about selling it too?

A. Not really. But you can take some of the pressure off yourself by finding a photographer's agent to market your work for you. Look in the most obvious places - other photographers. Ask who's good. If you don't know any other photographers, go meet them; it will serve you in many ways.

Or, 'call the photography editor of any magazine and ask for some recommendations. Once you find one, and decide to work together, you're not done. You still have to call in, stay in good grace, and make suggestions. In short, you have to build a relationship and stay connected.

Researchers disagree on sugar's effects

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON - That tired (and sexist) old aphorism about the way to a man's heart being through the stomach is almost true. But it's not the heart, it's the brain.

Psychobehavioral researchers agree in principle with a growing body of popular nutritional dogma holding that what you eat can affect how you behave. Where the establishment researchers differ from socalled alternative therapists is on which foods affect which behaviors,

The relationship of diet to behavior drew some 30 specialists. researchers and clinicians to a symposium in Arlington, Va., sponsored by the American Medical Association, the Nutrition Foundation and the International Life Sciences Insti-on the subject marks an attempt by the scientific community to reassert jurisdiction over nutrition - a void they had left for decades. The wideopen field has been subsumed by an informal consortium of nutrition therapists, holistic health and wellness practitioners, mega-vitamin proponents - ranging from some traditionally trained physicians to California-style mail-order "experts" and out-and-out quacks peddling untested nostrums.

From this group has come an out-pouring of food-related anecdotes, some fostered by health food stores and pop-health magazines, many growing out of the '60s-based concept that anything natural was per-

No speaker for the most widely accepted, albeit untested, food concepts - such as sugar's link to violent behavior - was asked to to be on the program, but several were present and vocal in their displeasure. Conference spokesmen, however, declared their purpose as trying to find ways to distinguish proven scientific fact from health anecdotes. Anecdote is a dirty word in medical parlance. Sometimes, scientists will concede, anectodal data may be the basis for medical knowledge — but only when verified by the scientific method, the antithesis

Specifically, most criticism at this conference was aimed at the widely held view that sugar can cause antisocial behavior, including hyperactivity in children and violence in adolescents and adults. The so-called "Twinkie" defense of Dan White convicted of manslaughter, jailed and recently paroled for the 1978 killings of San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk — was a recurrent topic of conversation.

Dr. Richard Wurtman, neuroendocrinologist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a pioneer in discoveries linking foods to changes in brain chemistry and subsequent behavior, said the symposium was designed "to assess what we do know, because of the speed with which public policy is made based on food anecdotes. I think it is one thing for a mother to decide in her kitchen that she thinks that maybe this food or that may make Johnny more hyperactive and decide not to give it to him. But it is another thing for that mother to sit on a jury, say that the man who shot the mayor is not guilty of murder because he ate a lot of Twinkies."

Wurtman's federally financed work, much of which is being con-firmed by other scientists, demonstrates that carbohydrates, including those in sugar or potatoes or any other starch, put into effect a series of metabolic events that raises the brain levels of an amino acid called tryptophan, a precursor for the brain messenger serotonin. Serotonin, in turn, is known to be involved in calmness and in sleepiness - a finding opposite to the

Bachelor's mom wants grandchildren

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 38-year-old bachelor. I live alone, have a secure job that I enjoy, have a couple of hobbies that occupy much of my time and I am completely satisfied with my social life. So what's the problem, right?

The problem is my widowed mother, who thinks I need a wife and she needs grandchildren. In every letter, phone call and visit, Mother nags and harps on the subject. I've heard everything from, "Who will take care of you in your old age?" to "Who will you leave your money to when you die?"

I have told her that I am quite happy with my lifestyle. I've tried ignoring her, changing the subject and trying to reason with her. So far nothing has worked. I've pointed out that I have no desire to have a wifeor children. Everytime someone over 25 gets married or one of her friends has another grandchild, she calls to tell me.

I love my mother dearly, but her

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married soon, but there is one thing we cannot agree on. I want my fiance to wear a wedding band after we are married. He says he will not wear one because he does not care for any kind of jewelry.

I notice he always wears a wristwatch. He says he "needs" to wear one so he won't be late for court or business appointments. (He's a law-

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON - Franklin D. Roosevelt had his Fala. Lyndon B. Johnson had Him and Her. Now comes Lucky, the latest in a long line of top dogs at the White House. Lucky, a 10-week-old black sheep dog, arrived at the White House this month, a gift to President and Mrs. Reagan from Kristen Ellis, the March of Dimes poster child.

Only the future will show what antics might be in store, but so far Lucky has taken her newly acquired fame very much in stride, posing like a pro for television cameras, sitting quietly aboard a helicopter to and from Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland, and merrily chasing a knotted presidential sock, her favorite plaything, around the

"She's very much a people's dog," said Sheila Tate, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary. "She doesn't even bark at strangers

Through the years there have been many first dogs in the White House. But the one that first captured the nation's fancy was Fala, a Scottish terrier immortalized in a radio speech in 1944.

That election year, Republicans contended that President Roosevelt, returning from a Pacific trip, had mistakenly left Fala behind and had Abigail Van Buren is a columnist sent a destroyer to bring him home.

Slightly more than a month before the election. Roosevelt endeared himself to the nation's dog lovers by saying in a radio address: "The Republican leaders have not been content with attacks on me, or my wife, or my sons. No ... they now include my little dog, Fala. Well, of course, I don't resent attacks, and my family doesn't resent attacks. but Fala DOES resent them."

Fala is buried near the foot of Roosevelt's grave at Hyde Park.

Him and Her made dog history of another sort with what was to beagle earlift. Their owner, President Johnson, outraged dog lovers by lifting Him, or perhaps it was Her, by the ears in a playful romp around the White House grounds.

It was Johnson, too, who once took a few turns around the White House dance floor with another family pet. Yuki, a mixed breed, after the we ding of Lynda Johnson to Charles Robb. That dance, in which Yuki sported bright red boots and a red felt coat, was perhaps the first. White House dog trot in history.

First dog in the Kennedy adminis-tration was Charlie, a Welsh terrier, who frequently splashed around the White House swimming pool with the president and who once mistook Jacqueline Kennedy's ankle for a fire hydrant. The Kennedys also had a German shepherd, Clipper.

When the Richard Nixons set ap-housekeeping in the White House with them came King Timahoe, a red Irish setter, Pasha, a Yorkshire terrier; and Vicki, a miniature poo dle. King Timahoe managed to knock Pat Nixon to the ground three times in his first day in the mansion, and he also managed to chew up a corner of the rug in the Oval Office.

Some months after Gerald R. Ford became president, his daughter, Susan, and the White House photographer, David Kennerly, gave him Liberty, a handsome golden, retriever. Liberty managed to make a bit of history of her own in the fall of 1975 when she gave birth to nine pups in a White House bedroom that had been converted into a delivery room

Liberty now lives with the Fords in Palm Springs.

Top pet at the White House in President Carter's administration was a cat, Misty Malarky Ying Yang, but the mansion also became home, albeit briefly, to a black and white mutt named Grits, who once posed on the South Lawn with a veterinarian as part of a campaign against

We took a drive last night and I couldn't help but note what a spirit of Christmas Wonderland prevailed. Strings of lights outlined every house. receding from memory, but they are growing in importance as style setters, as people too young to recall them indulge in nostalgia for a period they never knew.

Sharing in the general nostalgia for postwar music and clothing are furniture and decorative objects. Some indications of growing decorative interest in the period include recent publication of a book about furniture of the '50s, the opening of a number of retail galleries specializing in '50s furnishings and even new interest by museums in acquiring and exhibiting the era's styles.

According to Cara Greenberg, author of "Mid-Century Modern: Furniture of the 1950s," (Harmony Books), collectors are snapping up examples of '50s furniture, lamps and other items.

The most desirable pieces are those designed by well-known architects and industrial designers such as Charles and Ray Eames, George Nelson, Harry Bertoia, Isamu Noguchi and Eero Saarinen. However, pieces by lesser names as well as anonymous examples are also being

Prices for the better-known names are rising, but it's still possible to find an attractive and good quality chair for $150, says Mrs. Greenberg. One New York retailer noted that prices at his shop range from a few hundred dollars to $10,000, depending on the piece, its rarity, historic importance and condition.

Mrs. Greenberg advises those interested in the period to check second-hand stores, tag sales and even Salvation Army stores first. However, she adds, the best of the '50s furnishings were never produced in quantity and are likely to be rare. The designs of individuals such as Noguchi and Nelson were produced in the hundreds, not thousands. They were always expensive and still are. Since these pieces were in demand mainly in urban areas of the country, finds are not likely to turn up in the backwaters of

An option still available is to select currently-produced examples of great pieces. Designs by Charles Eames, Noguchi and Nelson are still made by Herman Miller, while Knoll International continues to produce pieces by Saarinen, Bertoia, Marcel Breuer and Mies van der Rohe, she

Another idea is to shop for the pieces in specialty outlets which have opened recently in Los Angeles, San Francisco and New York. Mark Isaacson, 30, one of three co-owners of Fifty-50 in New York, says there has been a more receptive public recently than when he began selling '50s furnishings about four years ago.

"When I began selling this stuff, people said I was nuts. We still get seemed to be just around the corner those who say they prefer the Salva-The post World War II years tion Army." Yet, he adds, the Bass between 1946 and 1960 may be Museum in Miami recently boran exhibition detailing the decorative arts of the period.

> Those who appreciate the furniture tend to be young, urban trendy individuals in their 20s and 30s, according to Isaacson. They often work in design and allied fields and thus, are familiar with the names of the leading designers, and recognize their contribution to the development of modern design.

Some collectors, including both Mrs. Greenberg and Isaacson, began by buying Art Deco furniture. Then, as those pieces became rare and costly, they looked for something else that was distinctive - and affordable.

Her first find was a molded plastic dining chair. "My husband and I saw it for $15 at a tag sale in Brooklyn. We bought it and later discovered it was by Charles Eames," she said.

What she likes about '50s furnishings is its vitality. "It is outrageous furniture, but there is a great sense of exuberance, which is in keeping with a period when the American dream of the good life for everyone

A Corporate Christmas

Text by Linda Anderson Photos by Jerry Mennenga

"It's Christmastime in the city," thanks to Midland's downtown office buildings and businesses.

For two years First National Bank's large reindeer in the Plaza area were Midland favorites. Unfortunately the reindeer did not survive intact the severe weather of two years ago, said Eleanor Josting, marketing officer at the bank.

"Their frames buckled and they have to go to Dallas for refurbishing before we can use them again."

However, as RepublicBank First National Midland, the establishment is celebrating Christmas in style — even without the reindeer. Decorations are centered around a 22-foot blue spruce in the lobby area, decorated in traditional style with lights and ornaments.

Under the tree were actual gifts which were donated to children. Many of the gifts were delivered on Dec. 15 to the Marine Corp. League's Toys For Tots program. The remaining toys and gifts were taken to the Texas Department of Human Resources for distribution by DHR to 90 clients' children, who would otherwise have no Christmas gifts this year, Ms. Josting said.

Other decorations at the bank include eight silver trees, several small reindeer in the second floor customer area, and several trees in the outdoor plaza laced with tiny white lights.

Classic simplicity is the key to Christmas decorations at The Summit Building. Silver and red line the the lobby area, including silver garlands and red bows on a 20-foot tree; and red poinsettias with silver wrap on three lobby pedastals.

Sara Lawson, property manager for Wagner and Brown, owners of the building, said garlands and wreaths are also hung from the ceiling area on the back walls.

Interior designer Michael Dale of Houston is scheduled to design The Summit's 1985 Christmas decorations.

Businesses outside the downtown area are equally enthusiastic about the season. Clay-Desta National Bank Atrium is the site of a 35-foot tree, brightly decorated with white lights and red bows, said Bonnie Martin, executive assistant.

Mechanical children beside the tree sort packages and help decorate the tree.

The mechanical figures and the tree are circled by a train on its track. At a railroad crossing are several cars waiting to cross the tracks. "All the cars are Mercedes or Rolls Royce," said Ms. Martin. "Each car is personalized with the name of a company of the Williams Com-

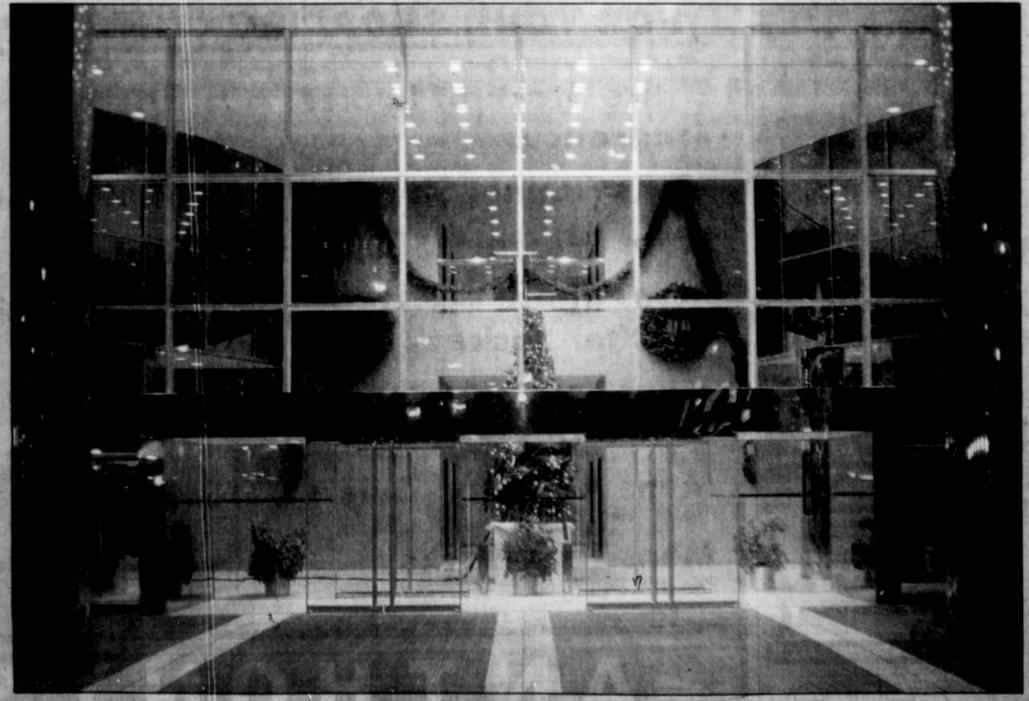

The new Mission Country Club is displaying an entire gingerbread village, about 7x6-foot, according to Steve Tyink, clubhouse manager. Robert VerVynck, executive chef at the club, and his staff of 12 chefs worked on the display for about two weeks, Tyink said.

The village, which includes snow-covered hills, a winding river and several buildings, is "totally edible," Tyink said. "They also used other things like crackers and shredded wheat. ... The snow is white frosting; the river is blue frosting."

Visitors to the club enjoy the display, he said. "We plan to save it and add to it next year ... as a growing process so each year it doubles in size."

Staff members of Mission Country Club created a "totally edible" gingerbread village for the club's first Christmas. They plan to add to it each year as a tradition.

Understanding sexual fantasies eases fears

By DR. JUDITH KURIANSKY

All fantasies are useful if you figure out what they are saying about your sexual needs, fears and plea-

It has been said that sex is only 10 percent between the legs and 90 percent between the ears. That means sexual thoughts are often more important than sexual behavior in determining how much pleasure we

But, you may say, I don't have sexual fantasies. That's all right. Not everyone does. But, some people who say they don't have sexual fantasies will realize they do when they know what a fantasy is. A fantasy does not have to involve a complicated, extensive story. It can be as fleeting as quick memory of a past experience that was pleasurable.

Others claim not to have fantasies because they think it's perverted or means they're not satisfied with their sex lives. Not totally true.

Fantasies can be an escape, but also enchantment. Your mind is a fertile ground for exploring what excites you and experimenting with different sexual responses. Sex therapists almost always prescribe fantasy to help people solve sexual problems. Focusing on a pleasurable sexual thought takes your attention away from worrying about performance.

tain fantasies they have are abnormal or wrong. The answer to this is: Some fantasies may be more common than others and some may be disturbing to you. But no fantasy is wrong or bad.

All fantasies are useful if you figure out what they say about your sexual needs, pleasures and fears.

Q. "I have a fantasy that bothers me. I'm walking by a lake. It's a clear beautiful night. A stranger approaches. He grabs me and tells me he wants me. He rips off my clothes. I scream. He presses a hand over my mouth and his body against mine. I scream, 'No!' Then finally I

A. Submission fantasies are common among women. They're most common in women who have considerable dependency needs or fears of being sexual. In our current social climate, women are distressed to have such fantasies. Fighting for equality and liberation on many fronts can seem inconsistent with giving in to a man in sex.

Many women are also afraid that they may be turned on to being "raped." However, a study conducted at the State University of New York at Stony Brook showed that enjoying a submission fantasy is a far cry from rape. Rape involves women on; it's being so desirable sexually that the man takes her

A woman who has grown up believing it is wrong to want to enjoy sex may find a submission fantasy particularly appealing. If the man in her imagination insists and persists until she gives in, then she can always say, "He made me do it."

IT SEEMS ON THE face of it that she is giving up control. Yet because she is the producer, director and star of her own fantasy, she is also the one who is in control.

The submission fantasy gives the woman permission to express desires she would not ordinarily allow herself. Once she gives in, she can let herself be the passionate person she probably wanted to be all along.

Instead of being afraid of your fantasy, or angry with yourself for even thinking it, ask yourself, "Why am I having this fantasy? What am I getting out of it? And why does it frighten or anger me?"

Explore its content. Compare your need to have it with your reaction against it. Where there's conflict, there's self-discovery.

Some women — and men — enjoy imagining themselves playing the aggressor role in the scenario of a submission fantasy. In real life,

MOST PEOPLE worry that cer- violence. It's not violence that turns these people may be afraid to be truly assertive or are insecure about being powerful in general.

There is nothing wrong with the thought of being dominating. Imagining that you are more in control of the sexual experience can make it more likely that you will actually have the courage to take more ini-

FANTASIES OF TAKING control only become a serious problem if they include pain inflicted on you or the partner. These may come from a storehouse of anger that has not been constructively expressed and has probably been building up since childhood. Professional help is needed in these cases

Having a sexual thought or fantasy doesn't mean you necessarily want to act it out. And it certainly doesn't mean you have to do it. There is a difference between a thought and action. Like in this letter from a woman in Pennsylvania:

'My closest friend is very bright and beautiful. I've never met anyone like her in my life. Since I met her six years ago my life has been very full. But recently my husband and I learned that she and her husband are going to be transferred to the other side of the country. Since then I've had sexual fantasies about her that frighten me.

"We're very close and she calls me her 'best friend' and hugs me when we're in a group of people, but when we're alone she's more distant. That upsets me more than ever lately. I'm very well adjusted so I'm worried about these feelings. Is there any-

A. Having a best friend is a warm and wonderful feeling. Obviously you respect and admire your friend a great deal. And you are having a strong reaction to the shock of losing her. You want to hold on. One way of holding on is by merging physically. By creating a sexual bond between the two of you in your imagination, you can deny your loss, as if saying "we are still as close - if not closer - than ever before. Fantasizing about someone of the same sex does not mean you are homosexual. There is a very useful way to understand and use this type of fantasy.

Since we invent everything in our sexual fantasies, all the characters are really parts of ourselves. You are not only yourself in the fantasy, you are also the character of your friend. You mentioned how you admire her: She is the brightest and most beautiful person you've met. Examine how she behaves in the fantasy. Perhaps she is very confident and loving. You probably want

By creating this person in your imagination in the fantasy, you get a chance to experience what it feels like to be the type of woman that you find so desirable.

Concentrate on what if feels like to be a competent, attractive and sexy woman. Make what you desire in your fantasy a part of you in reality. Imagine yourself having those qualities that you admire in her.

THERE IS YET another way to use your sexual fantasy.

If you don't like the way it turns out, you can change it. Keep your eyes closed, concentrate on the story, go back to the beginning. Stop at the part you don't like and "rewrite" it. Research has shown that this technique helps when people keep fantasizing about someone who has rejected them. Suppose you have a dream about being sexual with a

Over-the-counter multivitamin preparations can be harmful

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know a lot of people who take these multivitamin preparations that you can buy in any drugstore. I'm no doctor and I don't know whether these vitamins are doing them any good or not. But everyone seems to be taking a different brand of vitamin and a different kind. Are all of these preparations the same and it really makes no difference which you take? -Cassie, Brookline, Mass.

Dear Cassie: Multivitamin preparations are not all the same, and I will repeat what I've said many times before: People who believe they need a vitamin supplement should discuss it with their physician and not treat themselves.

Linda Schaffer Bell, a nutritionist at the Yale-new Haven Hospital Clinicall Research Center, studied 41 Dr. Robert F. Avant, of the Mayo multivitamin preparations that Medical School in Rochester, Minnecould be purchased without a pre- sota, anxious patients generally feel

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband was finally convinced to see a psychiatrist, and he came back to tell me that he is suffering from anxiety and depression. It seems to me that both of these are the same thing. If there is a difference, what is it? Mrs. J.Y., Jacksonville, Fla.

'Hot line' offers hope, advice

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The Christmas tree in the receptionist's office is bedecked with pictures of smiling children. But now these children probably have little reason to smile.

They are missing children - runaways, "throwaways" booted from home by their parents, children taken from one parent by the parent without legal custody and those abducted by strangers.

The tree has been set up at the recently opened National Center for Missing and Exploited Children where "hot line" telephones ring about 150 times a day. Few of the calls are sightings of missing children, and most of the tips do not lead distraught parents to their missing children.

But in one recent case, a hot line tip led to reuniting a 6-year-old Cali-fornia girl — abducted by the mother two months earlier and taken to Alabama — with the father who had custody.

A tipster, who recognized the child after seeing her picture on NBC's weekly "Child Search" feature, dialed the hot line number. Center staffers worked with an Alabama district attorney in verifying that the child seen was the missing

BUT THE ODDS are much greater against happy endings when children are abducted by strangers. Margarete Sanders, one of the center's five technical advisers who aid families and law enforcement officers, said her caseload includes 29 children believed taken by strangers. Only one was found. Corinne Elaine Perry, 17, of Creston, Iowa, disappeared from a laundromat April 17, 1983. Hunters found her skeletal remains in a field near Cres- year. ton on Nov. 3.

The center opened June 13, funded by a two-year, $3.4 million cooperative agreement with the Department of Justice. The hot lines have been in operation since Oct. 19, and about 5,000 calls were logged in the first month, according to Carla Branch, the hot line supervisor.

Branch said about 60 percent of general information about the center and its programs, and about 30 percent are from parents wanting to know what they can do to help locate their missing children. About 6 percent are "sightings" — reports from people who think they have seen missing children. The remaining 4 percent fall in an "other" category, including reports of child abuse and exploitation.

WORKING FROM a 58-question form, telephone operators try to elicit as much information as possible about sightings. The information is fed into computers and to the technical advisers who serve as intermediaries among parents, law enforcement agencies and local missing children "action groups."

John A. Rabun Jr., the center's deputy director, said he can recall a dozen instances in which the center played a role in returning missing children. But he said the center does not always hear from parents or police when children are found or return voluntarily.

We do not typically trap that information because we do not locate children," Rabun said. "We are not a police agency. We are a clearinghouse for information. Our job is to channel that information to the people who do find the kids, which are the local police depart-

A tough-talking Baptist minister who refers to child abductors as "dirtbags," Raybun said the extent of the problem of missing children is unknown. The center's pamphlets report estimates of 1 million runaways or throwaways annually, anywhere between 25,000 and 500,000 parental kidnappings and 20,000 to 50,000 children among the unsolved disappearances at the end of each

BUT RUBUN ADDED bluntly that a frequently cited estimate of 50,000 abductions each year by strangers is "claptrap." He said there could be 20,000 to 40,000 cases "where some dirtbag snatches a kid and keeps him overnight." He said the number of long-term abductions more likely is in the 200 to 400 range. the calls are from people seeking. The center has been able to identify only about 80 children as among the long-term missing believed taken by strangers.

"There is no point of buying into scare tactics," Rabun said of inflated estimates. "I am scared enough as a parent when, even in 1958, the Kinsey Institute was telling me ... that one of four girls and one of 10 boys will be conveilly abused before the will be sexually abused before they get to adulthood. Now the data is that it is one of three girls and one of seven boys.

He said about 85 percent of the children known to have been criminally or sexually exploited were missing from their homes at the time of the exploitation.

He said parents sometimes unintentionally aid abductors by teaching children to always respect and never resist adults.

A MAJOR FOCUS of the center is education of parents, police, lawmakers and community groups on aspects ranging from prevention to legislation to search techniques.

He said many police have not been trained to handle missing and exploited childrens cases. He said police too often wait 24 to 48 hours a crucial period if it becomes a homicide case - to take missing children reports. At minimum, Rabun said police should take a report immediately and feed it into the FBI's National Crime Information Center, the computer network that makes information available to law enforcement authorities nationwide. Only about a fourth of the missing children cases are fed into the NCIC, Rabun said.

Currently, the missing children's center operators answer the hot line telephones from 9 a.m. to midnight, Monday through Friday. After Jan. the hot lines will be in operation from 9 a.m. to 3 a.m. on weekdays and from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday

The toll-free hot line number for those who think they have information on a missing child is 1-800-843-5678. Requests for information and assistance should be directed to the center's main number, 202-634-9821. which is a toll call outside the Washington, D.C., area.

There's no better New Year's resolution you make for 1985 than one to insure the safety of your children, says Jeanne Ebert.

Ebert, a teacher, wife and mother of two children, is new book, "What Would You Do If ...? A Safety Game for You and Your Child," to be published in January. The colorful little book addresses some of the serious and timely issues that face today's parents in a brightly written, non-threatening style. Some of the questions addressed are: What would you do if you wandered from your neighborhood and couldn't find your way home? What would you do if a stranger offered you money or candy?

The book is illustrated with drawings depicting a common or unusual emergency a child might encounter.

Blank lines beneath the drawing are to be filled in after the parent and child decide together what the answer should be.

Ebert says she started playing a "What would you do if...?" game with her son and daughter when they were very young concerned about their safety when they were away from her.

As a teacher, I wanted to help my children stretch their imaginations and learn to think for themselves, and I found this question-and-answer approach to safety issues did just that. Child safety is the topic of a study by the National Institute of Educa-

Over-exercising not beneficial, doctor says

Hearst News Service

How much exercise is enough exercise? According to New York cardiologist Dr. Henry A. Solomon, author of "The Exercise Myth," a 20minute one-mile walk or its equivalent will do.

'The only thing more fitness begets is more fitness," he says. "It doesn't beget more health.'

Although Solomon is being billed as the "no-exercise guy," the charac-terization is wrong, he adds. "I'm not anti-exercise, because there is a risk in doing nothing. What I am against is being conned by fitness profiteers into doing what is unnecessary.

The book is guaranteed to sound like fingernails on a blackboard to fitness entrepreneurs. This is no accident; Solomon believes the selling of fitness has gotten out of hand.

I have no quarrel with the idea that exercise training is the only way to increase your physical capac-ity for work," he says. "What I do seriously question is the claim that it makes you any healthier. It doesn't, for? and there's no proof that it does."

Solomon says the high-fat, overprocessed American diet should be of greater concern than any lack of rigorous exercise. He also claims stress tests are largely voodoo, and takes a poke at medically supervised cardiac rehabilitation exercise programs in which running is encouraged. And he says that for every study that claims vigorous exercise is a benefit there is another that is inconclusive.

On the stress test, Solomon says: "If your doctor wants you to take one, ask him what the purpose is, what he's going to do if it comes out normal or abnormal, how he knows if the test is accurate and what he's going to do with it after he's got it. What you'll find is that your doctor doesn't know what he's going to do with it after he's got it. He's going to say, 'If it's abnormal, we're going to have to get another test.' If there's another test, what was the stress test

"It was Dr. Victor Froelicher of the University of California-San Diego who analyzed the reliability of diagnosing heart disease without using a stress test. He wanted to know what a stress test might add. He found that it added such a minutely increased certainty as to be useless; that if the doctor's diagnoses were right 96 percent of the time, and adding the stress test made him right 97 percent of the time, why add the stress test? Furthermore, if a patient knows he has a 96 percent chance of having coronary disease, he's going to act as if he does even if a stress test comes out negative (nor-Solomon said he steers clear of contrived and structured exercise programs for his patients, "although they do follow a walking program I recommend, and gradually increase it as they can.

Children enjoy Christmas cookie-baking

By LOUISE LAGUE Los Angeles Times Washington Post News Service

Something clicks in the Family Cook's mind about this time of year that compels her to make Christmas

It's superfluous, really, since all Family Cooks do the same thing, and the cookies travel back and forth between houses like so many fruitcakes.

They are left at the front door or marched home from school, and then they are either gobbled by bigeyed munchkins who can't eat dinner afterward, or crushed into the

But this is too much bah and humbug. In the spirit of unstoppable optimism, the Family Cook continues to make Christmas cookies. I suspect she does this because it is COOKIE DOUGH is one of God's great gifts to the taste buds. Cookiecutting fulfills our need for precision, which is something the mothers of young children don't see much of. Cookie-decorating is an art that not only brings back warm memories of childhood, but actually becomes more interesting and challenging as we age.

Nonetheless, cookie-baking is not something a mother of young children would do in a rare moment of solitude. Christmas cookie-making is at its most convivial, its most nostalgic, its most uproarious, its messiest and its absolute best when done in the company of young children.

If you are making cookies for show, reserve another time. But if you are making cookies for fun. gather up some neighborhood pals (three at most), scrub their hands, and range them around the kitchen

Age is almost no object; a child of a year or so can play with a little ball of dough; by 18 months he can decorate just as inexactly as a 7-year-old. It's some time before they can roll (even most Family Cooks can't use a rolling pin all that well), but by 3 they can use the cookie cutter and, of course, the sprinkles.

TO START, you'll want to make the basic roll-out cookies in the recipe that follows. These are a little bit difficult and a little bit delicate, but you have to make this dough if you're going to use cookie-cutters at

To ease the rolling out, use a pastry cloth on the board and a rolling pin cover on the rolling pin if you have them. Otherwise, you'll have to use a lot of flour, which will make the cookies look dusty and taste a little more bland.

Preheat the oven completely before baking; place the unbaked shapes on a greased (no salt in the grease, please), cold, shiny baking

To prevent burning, fill the sheet completely. When you run out of sheets, don't use a pan with high sides, or the reflected heat will burn the cookies. Turn the pan upside down, if you must, and grease the bottom. Once you've finished tucking the roll-outs in the oven, the kids might want to do something a little more

Then it's time to pull out a big bowl and make Aggression Cookies, which involve such basic human needs as dumping, kneading, mixing and pounding. Mothers can get into the act too, and on some days, well they should. After these are baked, they turn into lovely, lacy oatmeal cookies.

And finally, because nobody can wait any longer, you all whip up a batch of Quick Energy Pick-Ups, which require no baking whatsoever and even contain a certain amount of protein and calcium.

After everybody has snacked and rolled and so forth, it's time to wash hands again and decorate the rollin white, one for each child. Let them squirt this onto the cookies in any design, then throw on some sprinkles, which will stick where the frosting is.

THE EASIEST way is to buy little tubes of frosting (the very small size)

Now pack up individual boxes of cookies for each child to take home. Hose down the kids and the kitchen, and send them home.

Their mothers will be furious and uilt-ridden. At your house they bake cookies, at her house they watch "He-Man." Don't you feel great?

BASIC ROLL-OUT COOKIES (Makes 30 cookies)

cup butter 3 cup sugar 1 egg, beaten 21/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour 1/2 teaspoon salt teaspoon vanilla

Soften butter and blend in the sugar, then the beaten egg. Combine flour, salt and vanilla, then add it to butter mixture. Combine thoroughly and chill dough in a ball for 3 or 4 hours. Roll chilled dough out to 14 inch thickness and cut with cookie cutters. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 8 to 10 minutes, watching carefully. The cookies have tanned slightly when done.

AGGRESSION COOKIES (Makes 24-30 cookies)

1 cup flour plus extra for stamping cookies cup brown sugar teaspoon baking powder cup softened butter 2 cups oatmeal

Dump all ingredients into the bowl. Mix well with hands and form into 1-inch balls.

Lay balls out on cookie sheet about 2 inches apart. Spill flour out in a shallow soup plate. Have children make a fist and stamp end of fist in flour, then greatly press down each ball with fist to flatten. Bake 10 minutes in a 350-degree oven.

-Adapted from "What Can We Do Today, Mommy?" by Kathy Farrell and Mary Sweeney, Growing Together Press, $6.95

QUICK ENERGY PICK-UPS (Makes 30 balls)

4 squares graham crackers cup confectioner's sugar 1 cup crunchy peanut butter l cup semi-sweet chocolate chips 1/2 cup instant nonfat dry milk 3 tablespoons water

Crush the graham crackers with your fingers onto a sheet of waxed paper. Mix remaining ingredients thoroughly in bowl. Shape teaspoonfuls of the mixture into 1-inch balls. Roll the balls in the graham cracker crumbs until coated. Arrange the coated balls on ungreased cookie sheet and refrigerate for about 20 minutes, or until firm.

Calendars for 1985 have roots in ancient Babylonia

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Those Babylonians, boy were they organized. Take Hammurabi, for instance. He may have been the most organized Babylonian of them all. He was king of Babylonia from 1792 to 1750 B.C. (give or take 60 years either way — he wasn't that organized). It was Hammurabi who decided to whip turbulent southeastern Mesopotamia into shape by setting down a few rules — 282 to be exact today known as the Code of Hammurabi. (Unhappy Babylonians probably called it something else at the

Naturally, once Hammurabi started tightening the screws, his subjects wised up and began beating their swords in styluses.

Mathematicians, who had left a bunch of unsolved quadratic equations lying around during the commotion before Hammuribi's reign, suddenly figured out the answers and without copying from their neighbors. In their spare time, they decided circles should consist of 360 crackers to serve with lunar cheese but here's what you can get instead: and decided to reach a consensus on what to call the time between sunrise and sundown.

"Day" had a nice ring to it, they agreed.

Once they had that licked, it was just frosting on the cuneiform to come up with a system of keeping track of these days by starting a new one every 24 hours.

We know all this from a pile of dusty old tablets at the British Museum. One of the dustiest is a Babylonian calendar dating from 103 to 101 B.C.

Boy is it ugly. It's accurate enough, all right, but it has all the appeal of the last graham cracker in a year-old box. And for all the Babylonians' genius, they forgot to punch a hole in the tablet, so there's no way Mr. and Mrs. Babylonia could have ever hung it in their kitchen. Fortunately, times have changed some in the last 2,085 years, calendar-wise.

For one thing, next year's wall calendars all have holes in them. And they won't break if they're dropped. Of course they probably won't be on display at the British Museum in the year 4000, either.)

In fact, we know of no commercially available clay tablets inscribed with next year's calendar on them.

FOR THE carnivores in the crowd, there's Sterling Specialities' "Image Is" ($7.95), a collection of color photos of 12 male models, looking very earnest and very undressed; "Firefighters U.S.A." (Landmark Calendars, $7.95), a calendar of well-muscled but apparently absent-minded firemen who forgot their shirts when the alarm went off; and "Looking Good!"(Landmark, $7.95), featuring the men of USC or, more accuratley, a dozen men of USC, most of them in no urgent need of orthodontia, Landmark also has published "Magnum, p.i." Other calendars that contain recipes, all published by Workman, include "The Silver Pal-ate" ($4.95), featuring hors d'oeuvres recipes; "Sunday Brunches" ($4.95), 'The Pasta Calendar' ($4.95); and "James Beard's American Kitchen Calendar" ($7.95), Martha Stewart's "Entertaining" (Clarkson N. Potter, $9.95), an engagement calendar.

includes more than 60 recipes. "The American Food Calendar" (Cook's Magazine, $8.95) contains no recipes, but does feature striking color photographs of food.

IN THE OUTDOORS category, the Sierra Club offers "Wilderness 1985" ($7.95), the club's engagement calendar, highlighted by beautiful color photographs, a "Wilderness Calendar" (6.95), featuring striking photos from the United States; a "Trail Calendar" ($6.95), containing photos of U.S. trails, and a "Wildlife" Calendar" ($6.95), featuring photos of animals from around the world. St. Martin's "James Herriot's Yorkshire Calendar" ($7.95) displays 15 pictures from the Yorkshire countryside. Other attractive outdoors calendars include "Jacques Cousteau's Undersea World" (Scribner's, $6.95); the "Audubon Wild Bird Calendar" (Scribner's, $6.95); "Audubon Nature Calendar" (Scribner's, $6.95); and "Ansel Adams, Calendar" (Little, Brown, $12.95). For flora fans, there's Workman's "Orchid Calendar 1985" ($7.95) or "In and Out of

In the great-people category, Norton has published "The Official Marx for Beginners" diary ($7.95), containing quotes, photos and sketches of the philosopher. The press at the University of Chicago, home of Nobel Prize-winning economist Milton Friedman, has published the "Great Economists" engagement calendar ($9.95), which was ballyhooed by the best publicity release of the season: "No kittens, no snowcapped mountains, no scantily clad bodies - Instead an informative and entertaining progresson of some of the world's great (if often littleknown) economists." Scribner's "The Words of Gandhi" calendar ($7.95) is illustrated with color photos from Richard Attenborough's "Gandhi" and with historical photographs. The "Great Classical Composers" calendar (Workman, $6.95) includes plaster and clay sculptures of the towering geniuses of music, as envisioned by artist Mark Steele.

Moorea: Polynesian paradise has life in slow lane

By BILL PEEPLES Los Angeles Times Washington Post News Service

PAO PAO, French Polynesia Ride a bike west through this village at the head of Cook's Bay and head north, up Moorea's coast road that skirts this bay on the west side.

Glimpses of the beautiful bay are sporadic, the foliage is so lush. You see few walkers or other riders on this road, either on bicycles or in cars, so this may be when you say to your companion, "Lordy, we're really here.

If your biking companion is already into a Polynesian mood, she has stopped by the side of the road and picked a red hibiscus blossom for her hair, or a white tiare Tahiti. The flower brightens her on the inside as well as outside, and she smiles at you.

Many others have biked this road. A man told me before I came here that when he was riding it he thought it great. But when he thought of so much peace and so much greenness as steady fare, he concluded that a week or two in this kind of quiet paradise was all he

IT DEPENDS upon priorities. It's either an hour's drive to work amid diesel and gasoline fumes, and fuming at other drivers who cut in on you dangerously, or trading all that for a bike ride on an almost-deserted Polynesian road. The shock of staying too long might be too much, even if it meant living here less than a five-minute walk from your work.

I have a friend who never had to make more than a 15-minute walk to Los Angeles. She was spoiled, because isn't it normal to have to spend a couple of hours a day getting to and from work? Subway, bus or car, it's the same rat race.

But you realize all that becomes a dim ogre that you'll have to return to before long, as you bike up the Cook's Bay road. The bay sparkles, the yachts at anchor or making way easily in the warm breeze flowing down from the valley at the head of down the pineapple hill, we continued north and then turned west with the road a way to where an even quieter bay opens. It's Opunohu, which is the same name as the valley. No hotels, no villages, just a few small houses here and there. Fewer people. Just the trade wind in the palm fronds along the blacktop

In Cook's Bay on any given day, a dozen or more yachts ride at their anchors because the sailors want to be near Pao Pao for supplies, or a here in Opunohu we saw only an self. And off to the left, the entrance occasional sail because this bay is away from the action. So much the better for the seeker of peace.

The road turns west again at the bay entrance, and soon the village of Papetoai was all around us. On the right a thatch-roof post office was open, so we parked our bikes. A lucky break - the "hours open" sign told us that during most daylight hours the postal people are away fishing or up to any other employ that's far more interesting than selling stamps and post cards. We stocked up on cards of color scenes of Moorea, got some extra turns out that the building has been around nearly a century.

The door was open. Inside, tall windows spaced close together provide plenty of light. During Sunday services, men in dark suits and ties sit in wooden pews on one side of the aisle, women in flowing white dresses and wide-brim hats on the other. The clear-voiced harmonies they make with himene, hymns sung in Tahitian, resonate far down the road. They are crystal paeans with baritone undertones, creating a human pipe-organ sound that the visitor will carry in his inner ear for-post office, we quenched our biking thirsts with a beer and a sandwich at one of the many snack bars on the 33-mile coastal route, and pedaled on west. But not until we picked up some olives, cheese and bread at a little grocery. The snack would come in handy when we stopped to Wherever it is - Kauai, the Florida Keys, Puerto Rico - the best way to find good snorkeling places is to ask someone who lives there. A short way down the road from Papetoai we saw a girl of about 10 years wearing a T-shirt advertising Augustana College. Now, Illinois has such a college and so does South Dakota, but the girl said only that the shirt came from a friend.

But she did know where the snorkeling was good. "Just there, and just there," she said as she waved a hand in the general direction of the sea. The first "just there" was nearby and the other one "around the corner" as the coast turns south. We thanked her and looked at the lagoon, failed to see any submerged rocks that might be home to colorful fish, so decided to try around the

WE BIKED PAST hotels on the lagoon side and the mountain side of the road, a small shopping center that sells great ice cream cones, and found that around this northwest corner of Moorea there is indeed good snorkeling. Offshore islands called motus sometimes are close enough to swim to; others are a mile or so out, near the reef.

This was a leisurely day, not for making a project out of hiring a boat to reach the reef, even on its calm inner fringe, but a day just to float and paddle. No fish to catch, no time to savor. People in a rush call it 'slow time. But having much more territory to cover, we decided to rept a car and take along our bikes. Most tourist hotels are on or near Moorea's north half and Cook's Bay, and most residents live and farm in the southern half of the island. Many of them work in Tahiti and get home only on weekends.

We drove south and then north up the east coast through the villages of Haapiti, Atiha, Maatea, Afareaitu (the island's administrative center), Vaiahe where one catches the shuttle boat to Tahiti (sometimes it leaves from Cook's Bay), Teavaro and on to the airport at Temae.

JUST BEFORE the airport we saw that the reef touched the shore on that northeast corner, so we got out our plastic reef-walking shoes. But the surge of the sea over the reef was too strong, so we retreated to masks, fins and snorkels.

Florida's western panhandle evokes past

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN Los Angeles Times -Washington Post News Service

Especially when it rains - which is often - the beaches of Florida's western panhandle evoke the state's unspoiled past. Sandpipers cluster at the mouth of the inlet, their faces turned to the gentle wind, staring out across the pea-green waters of the Gulf of Mexico - waters warmer than the air. Fish jump in the shallows, in schools so dense they can be scooped up in a net. Sea pats wave on deserted dunes. Silence covers the flat landscape of palmetto and scrub pine.

The return of the sun prompts a burst of familiar seashore activity children on brightly colored floats bobbing in the easy surf, tennis players on the courts, families fishing from boats and jetties. But even in the sun, the pace is slower, the crowds less dense, the sales pitches less urgent than at most beach areas in the eastern part of the country.

In fact, for more than 20 miles, between Panama City and Fort Walton Beach, the beaches are nearly empty because the coast is almost undeveloped. Only scattered hamlets and campgrounds abut the pristine shore, and even at the peak of the season it's possible to stroll for miles along the powdery white sand without encountering anyone.

THIS IS THE "Redneck Riviera," so called because most of the people who vacation here are from the surrounding deep-South states of Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia and Tennessee. You'd never mistake the vacationers here for the preppy denizens of Nantucket: The clothes are more discount than designer and the parking lots contain more Fords than Volvos. It's also a different world from the heavily developed, pricey resorts around Miami, Palm Beach and Tampa. The panhandle still has some low-key charm because it has been insulated by time, geography and limited airline service from most of the development frenzy of south Florida.

In this part of the state, rates are highest in midsummer because that's when the weather is best for the beach; winter temperatures drop into the 40s at night, though it's seldom too cold for golf or tennis. The palm trees are blighted and stumpy because they don't belong here - this is the deep South, not the tropics, and the trees on the old estates are hung with Spanish moss. A mile inland from the beachfront of Bay and Walton counties, development stops and the land, indistin-guishable from the terrain of southern Alabama, still belongs to the ossum, deer and snakes.

Sheer distances have insulated the Florida panhandle from overdeve-lopment. Panama City Beach is 375 miles northwest of Orlando and Walt Disney World. It's well west of Detroit and directly south of Louisville. The biggest city within 200 miles is Montgomery, Ala.

THE DIFFERENCE between the western Gulf Coast and popular south Florida can best be described by listing what the Redneck Riviera does not have: horse racing, baseball spring training, direct air service to New York, large retirement communities, ethnic neighborhoods, bigtime football, interstate highways, chic department stores, big-name night clubs, pretentious architecture, heavy narcotics traffic. There's a bush-league jai alai fron-ton and a greyhound track in Panama City for those who want to gamble, but mostly it's like small-town America, except that it happens to be on the water. Panama City is the biggest town between Tallahassee and Pensacola, but it's still so small it rated space in the newspaper when a local man used the wrong flea dip on his cat and called police when the animal passed out. The year-round population of Bay and Walton counties together is only about 125,000.

This of course doesn't mean that the area is wilderness. Fort Walton Beach and Panama City have beach strips like any other. The "Miracle Strip" at Panama City Beach is 10 tacky miles of the usual beachfront motels ("Sea Witch," "Trade Winds"), T-shirt shops, restaurants ("Sir Loin and His Knightly Buffet") and amusements ("Snake-a-Torium," "Petticoat Junction" and the "Sui-Slide," which bills itself as "The World's Longest and Meanest Waterslide"). If you want to OD on miniature golf, this strip is for you.

DRIVING THIS STRETCH of S. Route 98 can be a nightmare especially, we were told, in the spring, when armies of students from southern colleges migrate to the beach - but there's a wide-open bypass road half a mile inland.

In most of the area, the relatively low density keeps the crowds manageable, even in peak season. There are fewer than two dozen high-rise buildings along the entire 35 miles of beach from St. Andrew's Recreation Area - south of Panama City west to Destin. This means the attractions are accessible: If you want to fish off the pier, there's room; if you want to be alone on the beach, there's space; if you want a pizza, you can just walk in and order; if you want to picnic by the lake at Eden State Gardens, a restored gem of a 19th-century estate, you can get a table; and if you want to play tennis, you can usually find a son was the Friday-night mob waiting for tables at Capt. Anderson's, the most popular restaurant in Panama City. This is a vast mass-production place where you can wait two hours for them to call your number and where they justify the $4.95 charge for a margarita by letting you keep the glass. The food at Capt. Anderson's, especially the fresh local fish such as grouper, pompano and snapper, is almost worth the wait. But the one memorable restaurant in the area is the hard-to-find Paradise Cafe, well off the beaten track in the hamlet of Grayton Beach. The waitresses wear shower shoes and the Atlanta Braves game is on the television set over the cash register, but there's nothing frivolous about the Louisiana creole delicacies served up by owner Skip Kirkland.

KIRKLAND, WHO SAYS he "got tired of running restaurants for other people" in Baton Rouge, borrowed a camper and roamed the Gulf Coast looking for the ideal spot for his restaurant. He settled on an abandoned dance hall in a tiny village that doesn't even have a grocery or gas station. Because the Paradise Cafe is right on the beach, it doesn't need air conditioning; ceiling fans enhance the ocean breezes. Try the Crabmeat Louisiane with almonds or the Shrimp Lujon.

Otherwise, you don't go to the Redneck Riviera for the food. What you do go for is magnificent, uncrowded beaches on the gulf and splendid fishing. We aren't a fishing family, but we seemed to be the only ones who weren't. Deep-sea fishing on the big cruisers that go out every morning can be expensive, but there's plenty of free fishing from piers and jetties on the gulf and from the shores of fresh-water lakes a few miles inland. And if your haul of snapper, bonito or flounder is big enough to take home, a crew at Capt. Anderson's marina will clean your catch and pack the fish in ice for 25 cents a pound. The entire environment of the Redneck Riviera emphasizes family vacations in a tranquil environment. Most motels, for example, have kitchenettes and two-bedroom suites so you can feed the kids without going to restaurants. Beer blasts and late parties are viewed with disfavor. A typical motel, the Trade Winds, directly on the gulf in Panama City Beach, informs prospective guests that "during holiday times, reservations are made for families only." It also publishes rules that include "No stereo equipment allowed in motel."

A CALL TO THE Panama City Beach Chamber of Commerce (904-785-5206) will soon bring you brochures and rental information on The only really dense crowd we dozens of motels and rental condo-encountered at the peak of the sea- miniums. Most of them are right on the beach and, because of the area's low-key atmosphere and relative isolation, rates are considerably lower than they are in prime Atlantic Coast resorts. We selected a two-bedroom, twobath apartment in a condominium complex called Pinnacle Port, which is isolated at the extreme western end of the Panama City Beach area. The living room overlooked the gulf. The apartment had its own washer and dryer, as well as a full kitchen with dishwasher, and bed linens were provided. We had the use of four lighted tennis courts, two swimming pools and a fishing pier. The fee for seven nights for our family of five was $590.

This was among the highest rates in the area. More typical are peakseason rates in motels such as the Shalimar, $72 a night for two bedrooms and kitchenette, or the Gulfcrest, $68 a night for a two-bedroom apartment with kitchenette but no view of the gulf. Most of the beachfront motels are in this price range, and offer similar facilities, with swimming pools. The differences are in atmospherics: Some of the swimming pools are postage-stamp-size facilities surrounded by parking lot and overlooking Route 98. And some of the motels are uncomfortably close to the most congested parts of the strip. In general, crowds are thinner at the extreme eastern end of Panama City Beach, near St. Andrew's State Park, and at the far western end, near Hollywood Beach and Lake Powell. West of Lake Powell, there is hardly any development for nearly 20 miles.

THERE ARE SEVERAL wellequipped campgrounds in the Pan-ama City area. Most of these are not on the beach, but much of the beachfront is unrestricted so access is not a problem. One of the lowestcost facilities, and one of the best located, is a campground run by the state, directly on the gulf at Grayton Beach.

The little town adjacent to that campground is almost silent. shielded from the world by the dunes and scrub pines of a tranquil

Advance travel plans necessary

By PAUL DEAN Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Hawaii - with an estimated 250,000 visitors coming for Christmas dinner - has been sold out for weeks.

Those old Mexico haunts, Mazatlan, Acapulco and Puerto Vallarta and the ciudades-cum-lately, Ixtapa, Cancun and Loreto, are closed to anyone without reservations. There might be some room at inns in Florida or Tahiti, but virtually no chance of reaching either spot by tour package or scheduled airline.

This year, say airline, tour and hotel operators, the Christmas crunch had tightened by late summer. In November, efforts to match available hotel accommodations with airline schedules were already a craps shoot. And when there were still 21 traveling days left till Christmas, they added, you just couldn't plan on getting there from here with any degree of certainty.

-"Our (Christmas) Jamaica holidays went on sale Aug. 15 and were sold out on the very first day," said Liz Healey of Thomson Holidays with sales centers in Los Angeles, Detroit, Chicago and San Francisco. Thomson is a specialist of the low-cost, six-day, five-night package. 'Our business out of Los Angeles is up 30 percent over last year. In Hawaii, we offer Oahu, Kauai and Maui. They've been sold out for two

-"The first thing to go was Hawaii, and in the upper part of October," reported Andy Vivian, vice president of sales and marketing for Trade Wind Tours based in Great Neck, N.Y. "Mexico was a little soft for a while. It wasn't sold out until late November, but things very definitely went earlier this year...

-"On our flights to the Virgin Islands for Dec. 21 through Dec. 24 there's not a seat available," said Paul Corsa, Los Angeles district sales manager for Eastern Airlines. "Dec. 21 and 22 to Nassau, sold out. Dec. 22 and 23 to Jamaica, sold out. From now until Christmas, it is going to be very difficult for us to get a family of five on one airplane.

'I wouldn't tell Christmas travelers to forget it, but I would tell them to have the availability of alternative (traveling) days.

A STABILIZED ECONOMY and more disposable income, travel industry spokesmen say, are basic reasons behind the surge. Then there is the strength of the dollar against foreign currencies, European in particular, and airline fares subdued by industry deregulation.

Yet this year, claim others, more people seem to be on the move for psychological reasons — an aversion to the bustle and bombardment of the season and the anxieties of shopping, selecting and spending; a growing preference for Thanksgiving instead of Christmas as the major family reunion of the year; and a trend toward spending more Christmas monies on self and family travel rather than on gifts for

All of the above, agreed Dr. Wyman Sanders, a psychiatrist with the Bresler Center Medical Group, Santa Monica. And as a mild realignment of self-attention and dedication to the present, Sanders said, these new spirits of Christmas aren't

"There has been a shift in the general focus," Sanders said. "From the '40s and '50s with everyone doing what parents told them to do ... a child responding to parental authority. Then came the '60s and and adolescent rebellion, the hippie movement, divorce was in and there was the Vietnam war to

'Now we're into adult persons saying: 'Hey, I'm assertively going to take care of my own needs.' Divorce is decreasing. The family role is expanding. Virginity is in.

IN ADDITION, Sanders continued, the "middle-class tradition of planning for the future has been changed by people who now realize that people die in the future. So there's more concern with the present and less worrying about the future. ... Tomorrow is only a dream, yesterday a memory, and today is Whatever the reason for pleasure travel, financial or emotional, not even distance seems to have contained this year's Christmas tourist.

"Travel to Tahiti is heavier than in past years," UTA spokesman Bob Reader said. UTA, a French airline, operates three 292-passenger DC-10 flights a week between Los Angeles and Tahiti and carries 60 percent of the island traffic. "We do have space available - about 10 or 15 seats per

"We still have five twins (double reservations) for our Christmas in Canada," said Paul Kerstetter, director of sales and marketing for Maupin, "but they will be sold out in a few days. I can get you something for next year."

It is this year, however, that remains a problem for many.

Three weeks ago, in their naivete, Sherman Oaks, Calif., couple began planning a Christmas away. They were undecided. Maui or Mexico? All they were offered were two seats on a flight to Rio de Janeiro with no immediate confirmation of return flight.

A University of California, Los Angeles, administrator would like to spend Christmas with his parents in Mexico. He might not. He has been on waiting lists for two weeks with three airlines for all flights over several days.

Then there is the marketing consultant who plans to marry in Los Angeles on Christmas Eve and hon-eymoon in Cozumel, Mexico. Roundtrip reservations with Continental Airlines have been confirmed. But the couple's choice of a honeymoon hotel, the Mayan Plaza in Cozumel, has been filled for a year and the waiting list stretches to Havana.

"I TOLD HIM: 'If you want to see pyramids, why don't you go to Egypt instead?" explained Adele Klate, president of Gulliver's Travel Agency of Hollywood. "As a matter of fact, we did look at Egypt and came up with five nights in Cairo and five nights in Luxor for almost the same price as that hotel in Cozu-

But the client wants that hotel and nothing else and so there's a $200 bonus waiting for anyone who can get me a room at the Mayan Plaza.

For travel agents like Klate, the season is predictable. Christmas action begins in January each year as tour operators, the wholesalers, make block bookings of hotel rooms and airline seats in anticipation of winter sales. "There's a lull just after Labor Day and before Thanksgiving," explained Klate. "Then, at the end of November and the beginning of December, the tour operators release their (unsold) block space and from then on it's pandemonium

San Francisco is Chinatown, cable cars, restaurants

Finding new 'best' places to dine pleasant pastime in San Francisco

By KAY JARVIS-PROKOP Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — There's a game that's played here with endless

The idea is to find the newest, best little restaurant in The City before it's become popular and then pass the name around to your best friends, warning them not to tell just anybody. They, of course, then tell everybody and — voila! there's another must-go-to cafe on

In a city that boasts more restaurants per capita than any other in the United States — a National Restaurant Association study shows San Francisco with one restaurant per 164 residents, with New York second at one per every 200 — it's a situation so competitive that it's hard to find a bad meal.

It is also an overabundance of riches for a restaurant critic visiting for three days. The first two suggestions I can pass along are to reserve tables for dinner before you leave your own city and to be prepared to wait until 1 p.m. for seatings at lunch if you're trying to go on the ing is being done there. We were seated in the Fortuny Room, agleam with white linen and silver, warmed by apricot silk wall coverings and amber Venetian glass. Although the menu offers a fixedprice dinner at about $50 per person, you may want to ask the maitre d'. Christopher Pappe, to lead you through the menu.

We decided to split orders of freshly made raviolis stuffed with lobster and prawns with a delicate lobster sauce and gnocchi, potatobased little feather-light dumplings dressed in a light cream sauce and absolutely not to be missed. With it we chose a chianti classico and followed with it through the entire meal

We finally settled on swordfish marinated in herbs and done with porcini mushrooms and veal medallions hugged with strips of pancetta and lightly gilded with a cream sauce. Entrees are in the $20 range.

The swordfish was about two inches thick, marvelously sweet and flaky and served with fresh asparagus and broiled cherry tomatoes lovingly stuffed with a gorgonzola cheese mixture. Radicchio, that slightly bitter Italian green, was sauteed lightly and was a good foil for the veal, which was given a richerthan-usual flavor by the strips of pancetta and the light cream sauce.

We finished with a layered almond meringue torte made even richer with its praline buttercream and chocolate stuffings. Crisp little sweet circlets of dough come as the finish to the finish.

This is one of those "expensive but worth it" restaurants to keep in mind for a grand evening of dining. (415 441-7182)

ONE OF THE HOT NEW restaurants in town is Stars, which is situated in a sort of narrow alley near the opera house and civic buildings at 150 Redwood (415 861-7827). It is the latest venture of Jeremiah Tower, who was one of the first chefs at Alice Water's Chez Panisse and who has been given credit for setting standards for the current

California cuisine rage. Since we were on our way to the Hayes Street Grill for dinner, we stopped just for a drink and a look. lower, who began his career as an architect, has used the open-area display concept for the cooking areas. The grill sizzles with fish, oysters are shucked at a marble counter as you watch and salads are sent on Touches to further attract the eye are bowls of bright lemons and persimmons, chilis and gleaming copper pans hung from the kitchen racks. The bar area is large and was crowded with casually dressed patrons. The feeling is '30s and the blue carpeting dotted with stars is mehow whimsical.

WE WALKED THE three blocks to the Hayes Street Grill, 320 Hayes St., and I can only tell you that I'm glad we did.

To put it as simply as possible, you probably can't find fish prepared any better.

The Grill is actually two storefronts joined together, dressed sim-ply in white-clothed tables, blackboards giving the specials of the day, some brass rails - all combining to give the feeling of a no-nonsense San Francisco restaurant.

Emphasis is on the fresh fish of the day although you can order a steak, chicken, whiskey and fennel sausages or Provimi calves' liver.

We began with a crab and avocado cocktail done with a spiking of tomatillos and cilantro, then moved on to warm Sonoma goat cheese with mixed greens and an elegant salad of greens with Stilton cheese, comice pear and walnut oil dressing

The tour de force was the fish. We ordered the lemon sole and the scallops. Both came to the table lightly sauteed with a bright freshness and hint of herbs that let the delicate flavors shine through. Heaps of freshly cooked French fries and that wonderfully addictive sourdough bread and sweet butter were the accompaniments. Entree range is

One of the best desserts I've tasted was a bourbon pecan pound cake drenched in caramel sauce and topped with vanilla ice cream. Try this one; you won't be disappointed. (415 863-5545).

LAST OF THE three dinners was at Masa's at the Hotel Vintage Court, 648 Bush St. Masa's has become the restaurant in which to dine while in San Francisco. Reservations take three weeks or more to obtain and it continues to be so even though the genius behind it, Masataki Kobayashi, was murdered last month in his

The manager, John Cunin, who rather personifies Masa's in his perfectly cut dark suit, is still at the Masa's world of edible artwork. helm along with William Galloway, Masa's sous chef who has taken charge of the kitchen. Since San Francisco is so insatiably interested in its restaurants. Cunin says there is a great deal of interest in whether the standards can be maintained. We see no problem there.

Chinatown, above, one of the favorite areas in San Francisco, has streets lined with tiny shops and restaurants, and the feeling of the Orient in the air. San Francisco's newly-overhauled cable car system, right, is an exciting way to see the "City by the Bay," and to travel to some of the world's best restaurants.

Let me tell you some of what has made it so popular with the haute cuisine set. First, Masa's gives you subdued surroundings with the color and even frivolity reserved for the food. The room is done in soft buff tones and burgundy with a brightness of brass and bouquets of fresh flowers. Starchy white cloths overlay burgundy skirts.

On the evening we were there, the music was Vivaldi and the introduction to the evening a canape of heavy wheat-bread toast bedded on a perfect little bit of green and artfully topped with marinated salmon, a half quail egg and a tiny dollop of caviar. Our first introduction to

Although you can order a fixed price dinner for $48 per person (excluding wine and tip,) we decided to range through the menu and spent substantially more. As a first course I chose New Zealand scallops, the creamy pink roe still attached. Each grilled scallop was meticulously centered with the thinnest wisp of fresh rind and a dollop of pearly caviar. The herb sauce was a pale-green swirl on the plate and as center to this creation was a perfectly executed spiral of cucumber. The splendid dish epitomizes what restaurateurs mean when they talk about "labor intensive" food prepa-

THE SOUP THAT evening was a blue crab bisque that came to the table in burnished brown splendor, the slivers of crab bumping into slivers of al dente vegetables, the whole made sublime by the deep essence of a complex fish stock.

As a note for wine buffs, Cunin suggested a Calera Jensen pinot noir 1981 from Hollister vineyards that he says will become a name to remember very soon.

As entrees we chose stuffed salmon and a double-cooked duckling done in succulent slices. Again, the plates were works of art. The fan of duck-breast slices was done with pink peppercorns and accompanied by a raspberry vinegar-marinated pear cut in knife slices and reassem-

The small whole salmon was arranged as though ready to leap from the plate and garnished with a whole crayfish.

The salad, snowy goat cheese and greens on a French baguette crouton, was embellished with a spray of delicate woodear mushrooms. The meal was finished with an assortment of sweets including a mandarin orange ice, candied figs, tiny butter cookies and a banana rum gateau with Grand Marnier sauce.

If one describes dining as an art, then one must describe Masa's as dining on art. In point of fact, Masa did literally paint pictures of the dishes he designed to catch the perfect point in not only color but texture. It's costly, but it's also a rare experience. (415 989-7154).

BUT THERE DOES come a time when it's time to come down to earth. A wonderful place to accom-plish that on a brisk morning is Doidge's Kitchen at 2217 Union St.

This is where you'll find darkbrown, crusty home-fried potatoes, enormous omelets bulging with Motherlode bacon (honey-cured and reservatives), thick slices of English toasting bread dipped in egg, grilled and snowy with powdered sugar .(415 921-2149)

Fortunately, San Francisco is compact and a great city for walking as well as dining. Otherwise, you'd have to book two seats per person on the homeward flight.

Kobanya district in Budapest has unique atmosphere

By PRUDENCE HELLER

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) -There is a Budapest that the tourists do not often visit, though this Kobanya district of Pest is part of the city's vital heart.

This area of Budapest is away from the Danube, the hills of Buda, the impressive Parliament building, the deluxe hotels.

Kobanya is flat, not beautiful - a residential and industrial district where railroad yards and factories lie behind high cement fences painted rich yellow or terra cotta; where new complexes of apartments tower in neatly staggered rows and shabby old buildings delight those with a feel for 19th-century and turn-of-the-century architecture. Parks add a touch of green throughout, and food and flower stalls add color everywhere.

Kobanya is where the "Project" is (to use the word used by those who live in this particular enclave of fading houses). It is its own world, with school, church, pharmacy, stores and a bit of Hungarian history.

Originally it was refugee housing for Hungarians dislocated when Transvlvania was assigned to Romania in the territorial settlements after World War I. But now it is a mishmash of people of all ages from all walks of life - but a homogeneous, Hungarian mishmash.

The homes have few amenities:

toilets, cold running water in the kitchens, gas stoves for cooking, and shiny tile stoves reaching nearly to the ceiling in the parlors to provide heat. Not fancy, but then they rent (from the state) for $5.$10 a month. And today's tenants have usually added bathtubs, hot water, refrigerators and other conveniences at their own expense.

Kobanya also harbors the largest brewery in Hungary, and the curi-ous can arrange a tour of the plant. We wish you Healthy & Safe Holidays

Best, worst in travel experiences for 1984 listed

By MICHAEL CARLTON Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

This was a year of ups and downs. A year I crossed both the Arctic Circle and the Tropic of Capricorn (but not, thank God, on the same trip). A year I celebrated a first wedding anniversary happily and a 40th birthday grumpily. A year I added several new countries to my baggage (it holds nearly 150 now), some of which I should have skipped.

It was, like all years for any tra-veler, one of pleasures and displeasures, contents and discontents. And so, as tradition dictates, it is time once again to review the best and the worst of 1984:

BEST AIRLINE: What other airline serves Dom Perignon in first class, and gives travelers little "happy coats" to help keep their clothes from being soiled? Only one Japan Air Lines. From economy to first class, JAL runs the classiest show in the air. The service is always of which are considered among the finest in the world, JAL is the best. The runnerup is SAS, which consis-Europe from North America.

WORST AIRLINE: American Airlines has always been one of my favorite domestic carriers. It goes places I want to go when I want, the service is usually professional, and all those Texas flight attendants bring a certain southern charm to the cabin. Alas, American drops the ball on its London route, where it is in competition with some of the best-run airlines in the world. The service on my two London flights on American this past year was indifferent, the food was mediocre, and landing at Gatwick — especially if you are headed to downtown London - compounds the inconven-

BEST CRUISE: Royal Viking Line's cruise of the South Pacific from Tahiti to Australia. Everything was first rate, from the dining room waiters to the room stewardesses. The food was excellent, the wine list long and well priced, the ports interesting and the weather — with the exception of one bad day - perfect. Even the movies were good.

WORST CRUISE: The short cruise from Stockholm to Waxholm, given with a smile, and JAL effi- Sweden, was an exercise in survival. elency is renowned by frequent Our rookie captain rammed two flyers. Of all the Asian airlines, some docks, splintering one in the process all to accompaniment of crashing beer bottles and falling bodies. No serious injuries resulted, but there tently provides the best service to was plenty of psychological damage. We walked home.

BEST MOMENT: Two special bagpipe at hapless people waiting in the mories — Sitting on a balcony in line for the next cable car. In the memories — Sitting on a balcony in Moorea, sipping a rum and tonic, and watching a dozen dolphins frolic less than 10 feet away; and swimming in the warm, clear waters in Virgin Gorda while dozens of pelicans and second their dozens of pelicans are formed their beind diving cans performed their high-diving acts all around us.

WORST MOMENT: Watching the Royal Viking Sky sail away as about 150 passengers stood in panic on a pier in a small Norwegian fjord town. Only an emergency radio call convinced the captain that he had, indeed, left about one fourth of his passengers stranded on land. He came back

MOST HUMOROUS MOMENT: Watching 50 ducks waddling around Disney World while wearing little party hats and eating a cake made of corn. Even funnier was when the ducks decided to go swimming despite their party garb and forced their handler to go into the drink, too, to herd them back to dry land. All this was to celebrate Donald Duck's 50th birthday.

BEST ENTERTAINMENT: The fragile beauty of the Royal Copenhagen ballet.

WORST ENTERTAINMENT: A bagpiper at a San Francisco cable car station. I watched him blast his hour I observed this geek, his awaiting hat received not one coin from his captive audience. Still, he was overpaid.

BEST FOREIGN CITY: Sydney, Australia. It is clean, dynamic, beautifully situated on one of the finest harbors in the world, has a worldclass zoo, and fine seafood restaurants (Sydney rock oysters are exquisite). Add its opera house, the constantly good weather, and its beautiful long-legged women, and it's a city this sexist will rush back to any day

WORST FOREIGN CITY: Suva. Fiji. The Indians, who run this place, are aggressive hustlers trying to get your last buck. The city itself is. dirty, the parks are badly main-tained, and the dogs are ill tempered. Even the once-lovely Grand Pacific Hotel is old, tattered and a great disappointment to all Somerset Maugham fans.

MOST SURPRISING FOREIGN CITY: Budapest, Hungary, which is as capitalistic as Chicago - and a great deal more interesting. The food is excellent, the museums firstrate, and the architecture - especially on the hills of Buda - is stun-

BEST DOMESTIC CITY: As always, San Francisco.

Orleans. Despite my love for the old girl, she was a real disappoinment this year. The French Quarter is dirtier and tougher than ever, and the World's Fair was a flop. Only the restaurants keep me coming back.

MOST SURPRISING DOMESTIC CITY: Pittsburgh. This rustbelt city has spruced up its downtown, has acquired a lot of first-class restaurants, and is looking forward to its future, unlike many of its northeastern neighbors BEST ISLAND: Virgin Gorda, the British Virgin Islands. Literally "the fat virgin," Virgin Gorda has smashing, lonely beaches, good harbors for sailboats, the friendliest natives in the Caribbean and one of its best resorts, Little Dix Bay WORST ISLAND: American Somoa. We should be ashamed.

BEST FOREIGN HOTEL: The Regent, Sydney. This may be the finest hotel in all the world.

WORST FOREIGN HOTEL: Grand Pacific Hotel, Fiji. And this may be the worst, unless you love hot- and cold-running cockroaches.

BEST DOMESTIC HOTEL: The Stanford Court, San Francisco. Simply the best in America. A special nod, too, to Pier 66 in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. Lots of money and good management have transformed a roadhouse into a gem.

WORST DOMESTIC HOTEL: The William Penn in Pittsburgh. Despite an effort by Westin, this hotel has some of the worst service and rooms in America.

BEST INN: L'Auberge de Sedona. A marvelous little place in the Arizona town of Sedona. Rooms are located in small log cabins which are decorated inside with beautiful French country fabrics. And, the inn's restaurant is one of the best in the Southwest. An honorable men-tion to Buffalo, Wyoming's Paradise Guest Ranch.

WORST INN: The Bordeaux House in the California's Napa Valley. This place is overpriced and even the house wine is lousy.

BEST RESORT: The Silverado Country Club in the Napa Valley. The rooms are wonderful, the facilities (golf, tennis, swimming, biking) are first-rate, the restaurant is excellent and the wine list (as one would assume in the Napa Valley) is world class. The runners-up are Little Dix Bay, in the British Virgin Islands, and Hawaii's Mauna Lani.

BEST DRIVE: The 17-mile drive near Carmel, where seals and sea lions are your guides.

Special tour arrangements designed for older travelers

By SHARON DIRLAM Los Angeles Times -Washington Post News Service

Older Americans with buying power and leisure time are being recognized as a major market by the travel industry, and their numbers are growing every year. And an increasing number of travel opporunities are being designed exclusively for them. Leading the field by sheer size, the American Association of Retired Persons offers a travel service that has been in existence for a little more joining at the rate of 5,000 a day, the association is the world's largest private, non-profit, non-partisan membership organization.

The association contracts with Olson-Travelworld to provide travel services for members, Offerings include escorted tours from top quality to budget; group rates and activities on cruises with Sitmar, American Hawaii, Paquet and other

AND THE NEWEST offering is 'leisure holidays," the rental by apartment or condominium in the off-season at resort areas here and

"Some members who live in the Snowbelt have found that they winter on the coast of Spain cheaper than they can heat their own homes," said Robert J. Forbes, travel program manager for the association's member services department.

Before developing its travel program, the association conducted extensive studies to determine what kinds of services the members wanted and what they hope to get from their travels

"At the top of the list was new friendships," Forbes said. "Their second priority was to experience the destination. And third, they want to be able to make long-range plans. We've found that the average person wants to book a trip five or six months of ahead of time. They want time to get well prepared, to have the arrangements made, to be able

Cost is also high on the list of concerns for many older travelers, so along with the companionship and security of an organized tour, they want the savings that can be realized through group rates.

ACCORDING TO Hal Norvell, the association's senior travel specialist, the group rate can save as much as 30 percent of the cost of a cruise. The organization also offers discounts on hotels and car rentals for independent travelers.

"One of the things people want on a tour is flexibility," Forbes said. "A tour manager should be sensitive and perceptive enough to be able to react to an unexpected opportunity that comes up, such as a group's desire to attend a special event - a willingness to try to do something unscheduled if the group wants it."

Olson-Travelworld's Robert E. Dunn is vice president of customer relations for the AARP Travel Service Division. He spent a recent two months visiting 30 cities around the nation, talking to people about their Older travelers need a tour with a different pace, one that lets the traveler absorb the sights and sounds of a place," Dunn said. What you're buying is a major experience, a memory. If you make a mistake, you're buying a bad memory. If something isn't clear, ask

Dunn said his main tip is: "Read the fine print on the tour brochure. It tells you who's responsible for what, what's included, what's not included. Before signing on the dotted line, he suggests: Find out the cost of transportation; check on whether there is a cancellation fee and how much it is, arrangements for trip insurance; what class of hotels are booked; whether the accommodations have private baths or not; the number of meals included in the tour's cost; whether breakfast is continental or a full meal.

beyond the basic cost of the tour; what sightseeing is included; how many of the outings listed are 'optional extras" that cost extra; whether tipping is included; if the tour is fully escorted and whether guide costs are included.

Travel in the off-season, Dunn suggests. "Sightseeing is easier; restaurants are uncrowded; prices are bet-

Another bit of advice, especially for older travelers, is: "Know your limitations. Ask whether the tour involves a lot of walking." For example, safari touring is dusty and bumpy. "If you're a city person who can't stand dirt or dust, better not With 17 million members and try that kind of outing. Check the altitude, especially if you have a heart condition, and consult a physician before signing up for a trip.

Forbes said that the association found that 80 percent of members who are interested in traveling consider their own health to be "excellent or good." They don't consider their physical condition an impedi-ment to travel, he said. "They have the health, the time, the money. The kids are out of the nest; often the mortgage is paid off."

THE BASIC DIFFERENCE week or month of a hotel room, between designing a tour for older travelers and their younger counterparts is the pace, Forbes said. Onenight stops and early morning departures are avoided. A schedule that generally takes two weeks might be extended by two or three days. As for such attributes as enthusiasm and earnestness, Forbes said that he believes the older travelers bring more to a trip than younger

> Dunn agreed. "Older travelers are different," he said. "They're more curious. Well, maybe that's because older people who aren't curious generally stay home.

Older travelers often have more common sense and patience than younger ones, Dunn said. "If things don't go perfectly, they give in, relax, enjoy. It's not the older travelers who keep rushing to the airline ticket counter to see why the plane is late. They have more patience. They're relaxed.

The "leisure holiday" rentals are made available to members in blocks with each hotel or apartment complex staffed by a local AARP host who can arrange transfers, sightseeing, recreational activities, even stock a kitchen with groceries in preparation for the guest's arrival.

Apartments are available in Spain, Portugal, France, England, Mexico, Hawaii, and a few in Eastern Europe and Russia. Many of the complexes have a club room for members and programs such as bridge tournaments, language courses, outings to the theater, deals on subway passes.

Tours on the agenda for 1985 include learning holidays throughout Europe, a Caribbean cruise that features a journey up the Orinoco River in Venezuela, a cruise and tour of ancient Greece and the Greek Islands, escorted bus tours around the United States.

Dunn, 62, says that he will never retire. He is lived in Europe for years, speaks French like a Parisian. worked in Africa for an oil company and ran a hotel for several years on the Greek island of Mykonos.

HIS TRAVEL TIPS come from experience. One bit of advice that is sure to appeal to many is: "Don't cut down on food while traveling. Food is energy. Keep your health up that's the most important thing. If you tire, then miss a half day of touring. Have breakfast in bed. Don't overdo and ruin the trip.'

And the advice that he puts into practice himself is: "Be adventuresome. Try new foods. Try to speak a few words of the language. Don't be embarrassed if you make a mistake. The people in other countries are generally flattered that you've come to see them. It doesn't take much effort to speak a couple of words in their language."

AARP dues are $5 a year. The only requirement for joining is to be age 50 or older. The benefits include group rates on insurance, a lobby for legislation to benefit senior citizens, learning and leisure opportunities, investment programs and other services. AARP headquarters is at 1909 K St. N.W., Washington, D.C.

'Cowtown' beefs up its image

BY WAYNE KING New York Times News Service

FORT WORTH - Fort Worth was once second only to Chicago among the nation's leading meat packers. Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid used to hang out there, between bank robberies, along with the odd cattle rustler, and the city still calls itself "Cowtown U.S.A."

So it was only appropriate when the Chamber of Commerce had a small business lunch a few days ago that Texas beef was served. The meat was rare, the kind cowpokes used to say was "just run through the campfire a few times before the horns was knocked off."

It was served on a croissant. So it is these days in Fort Worth, a city in search of itself. The old Fort Worth is giving way to a new one, and the city's movers and shakers, people like the billion-aire Bass brothers, along with chairmen of three local banks and one of the Hunts of Dallas, are not so sure they want people to consider them a cowtown anymore.

On the other hand, they are not sure exactly how they do want people to think of them. So they have hired the advertising and public relations concern Burson Marsteller to craft the city an image. But first the city has to take a long look and decide what it sees.

IN 1982, IN the wake of an extraordinary upsurge downtown, which doubled its office space and opened three luxury hotels and a convention center, Fort Worth found itself with a boom on its

We had the cards we had to have to play at that big table we call economic development," said the chamber president, Bill Shelton, who is a member of the board of the Fort Worth Corp., a new image-engineering group.

Previously, said John M. Stevenson, vice president of the Robert M. Bass Group, which transformed nine blocks of downtown into a skyline rivaling Dallas', Fort Worth was perceived as "a laid-back, quiet town

In 32 other states, Fort Worth would be the largest city. It has more industry already than all of Arizona and twice as much as New Mexico. And despite the new $54 million Dallas Museum of Art, Fort Worth's four-museum complex is considered the best in Texas. It is anchored on one end of the spectrum by the Amon Carter Museum of Western Art with some of Remington's and O'Keeffe's finest pieces, and on the other by the dazzling 12-year-old Kimbeli Art Museum with a first-rate collection ranging from pre-Columbian to

So it is actively seeking new and diversified industry, with high-technology and electronics a likely keystone, but without killing the tourist-rich Western image - a municipal Electric Horseman.

SWIFT CLOSED the city's last big meat-packing plant in 1971, and the stockyards, while still operating, are being transformed into a "working" tourist attraction.

But that is part of the problem. Boots, buckles and big hats are fine for tourism, not so fine for attracting industry.

"It's a dichotomy for us," Shelton conceded. But at the moment, the problem is not the wrong image, but no image at all. In 1982, the chamber commissioned Louis Harris and Associates to question business leaders around the country about what they thought of Fort Worth. The conclusion: They did not.

Although 600 respondents thought Fort Worth was probably a nice place to live, they knew almost nothing about it. Thus, Harris concluded, "Fort Worth has an opportunity to build a reputation almost from

Computers take over architectual drawing

Now it's instant plans

By JOHN PAUL PITTS Business-Oil Editor

One of the big problems (and expenses) in real estate development can be plan revisions. Move a proposed water line or street line five feet and it make take a team of civil engineers and architects, working overtime, to come up with the new revised plans in time for critical meetings. But for one Midland firm, that is no longer a problem.

Utilizing computer aided design drafting, Ted Buchanan & Associates, a structural, civil and architectural services firm, has brought the computer age to the drawing board. One of the few architectural firms in West Texas to utilize the CADD system, Ted Buchanan & Associates is able to simply program in plan changes. The computer then notes the changes in every single set of plans and shifts every single element of the design to comply with the revised plans. A high-speed printer then prints out a multi-colored presentation plat or drawing in a matter of minutes. Work that previously would have taken hours or even days is on the developer's desk almost immediately at a fraction of the cost

What this system does is allow the architect or engineer to spend more time on design work to meet his client's requirements, and less time in redoing routine drafting, said Ted Buchanan, principal and senior architect in the firm, which provides land planning for residential areas, shopping areas and indus-

BUCHANAN ADDED: "The CADD system is a tool that greatly amplifies the creativity and productivity of the architect/engineer in the design place. In Midland, it puts us in the realm of the avant garde, sort of out there on the cutting edge. The firm that is not computerized within the next three to five years will be obsolete.'

The system was purchased for the Midland firm only after studying the operations of a similar firm in Tulsa, Oklahoma, where six professionals with a CADD system are doing what once required the services of 21 professionals. Six professionals, incidentally, are the number of employees in the Buchanan firm, a subsidary of Jim Sale Enterprises.

The heart of the CADD-system is a Hewlett-Packard 9836 Computer, which drives a high speed plotter, capable of generating 24 x 36 inch drawings or plats in up to six colors. The designer sits at a color video monitor, stylus in hand, and enters instructions on an electronic pad.

Growing Texas population brings power, problems

By SUSAN LINDSAY Business-Oil Writer

New faces are changing the face of Texas. Figures released by the Office of the State Comptroller's research and fiscal management division indicate that Texas population should reach 17.6 million sometime in early 1989, surpassing New York as the nation's second most populous state behind

California. State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland said the growth creates increased economic and cultural power, but also brings problems that cost tax dollars or lead to reduced levels of state and local government

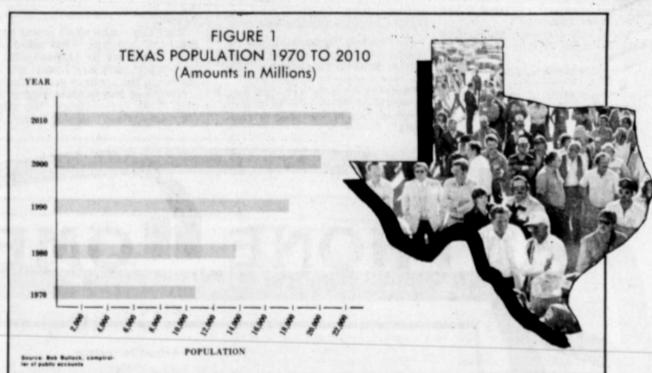

John Moore, director of state tax information, said the cause of the increased population is two-fold. Since 1980, more than a million children have been born in Texas and more than a million newcomers have moved to the state from other parts of the nation.

Since 1980, the state population has grown at a rate of 2.9 percent annually, according to figures released by the U.S. Census Bureau.

However, the comptrollers office projects that the growth should slow to a rate of about 1.9 percent from now until 1990, when the population is projected to be 17.9 million (Figure 1). The 1990 total is 26 percent more than the previous count.

In 1980, the Lone Star State accounted for 6.3 percent of the nation's people, up from 5.5 percent in 1970, said census statistics.

Most of the newcomers were 'baby-boomers,"

Matt Holten/Midland-Reporter

between 1947 and 1965, came to the state during the energy boom, looking for jobs in the oil industry. The number of jobs in this industry increased two and a half times from 122,300 in 1974 to 303,300 in 1982,

Over the same period, the number of manufacturing jobs increased from 831,200 to 1,045,300. In addition, one million jobs were added to the consumer industries, he added.

As a result of the migration, the vcomers were state's largest age-group is made up of individuals 25-29, the heart of the baby-boom generation (Figure 2). cent. The median age in Texas is 28 years, much less than the 30 years nationally, census statistics said.

In addition, because of the young population, the state's birthrate is high and the death rate low. Statistics released by the Texas Department of Health estimate that there are 18.8 births and 7.3 deaths for every thousand people in the state, compared to 15.9 births and 8.7 deaths nationally. Over the past 10 years, the number of babies born in the state has increased by 40 per-

"This high rate of natural population increase means that the state could surpass New York in population by 1990, even if no one else moved to the state in the next six years," Moore said.

The larger population has created many beneficial changes. It means increased economic opportunity, a broader range of cultural activities and greater political power.

"Cities that were once too small to support a symphony, theater, museum or professional sports team may become large enough to support these activities," Moore said. He added that growth gives birth to more growth when increased population requires the building of new homes, businesses and schools to accommodate the new residents. Thus, new jobs are also created, he

In addition, the number of seats in the United States Congress also goes up. Presently, Texans hold 27 of 435 seats in the congress. Figures based on projections of the 1990 Census indicate that there should be 31 Texans in Congress at that time.

But, growth also creates undesirable effects, which include crowded schools, congested traffic, overloaded utilities and increased wear and tear on roads - all of which usually require changes in government spending to correct.

There's still time, a way to ease tax burden

As the year 1984 winds up, invest- stocks and bonds, options, short sellment brokers and accountants will be burning midnight oil, for this is the time of the year when smart among the different ways. investors are searching diligently for ways to reduce their taxes on investment profits.

If you're rich, somebody else is probably looking after your money, and what is said here may seem rather elementary. But if you are not rich, yet make enough to worry about taxes, or if have had an unusually fortunate year financially for one reason or another, you may want to refresh yourself on some of the available options for easing the

There are a number of ways to do this which are prefectly legal and time-tested, according to broker Joe Liberty of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes,

ing, IRA plan deposits and tax advantaged investment programs

All of these techniques will allow the investor to defer some taxes until next year or generate capital losses that can be matched against capital gains and ordinary income in advantageous combinations. Little or no change is seen in ones investment position with these plans, but the tax bill will go down.

And, while the techniques are not difficult, it is still best to consult a tax attorney or accountant, because what's right for one person may not always be right for another.

Sound interesting? Here are a few of the suggested techniques.

Of course, the first technique for using one's investment portfolio to who lists security swaps involving reduce taxes is capital gains and losses. Although Congress shortened to six months the period of time an investment must be held in order to qualify for the long-term capital gain and loss rate, it probably won't help you this year. Only investments purchased after June 22, 1984 qualify. The rest must be held one year.

If you have a large long-term gain sitting in your account, you can take it with the comfort of knowing that long term gains are taxed at a much lower rate than ordinary income.

Also, if you have a long-term capital loss, the tax law gives you a creative choice. You can deduct $3,000 a year in either short or long-term losses from ordinary income. Shortterm losses are 100 percent deductible, but only 50 percent of long term losses are deductible from ordinary income. For example, if you have short-term losses of $2,000, and long-term losses of $2,000, you cn deduct a total of $3,000, which is all of your short-term loss and half of your long-term loss.

However, you can offset capital gains dollar for dollar with capital losses of the same type.

A second method for reducing taxes is swapping. Swapping securities allows you to generate capital losses by simultaneously selling any depressed securities you own stocks or bonds - and buying other, similar securities. You can claim a capital loss, yet maintain virtually the same investment position.

Or, you might want to consider options. Listed "options" can defer gains and losses from one year to the next, but it can be a complicated transaction and will probably require the assistance of an options specialist to avoid unwarranted

Selling short against the box, which involves selling short against securities you own, permits you to defer gains on a stock from one tax year to the next. The transaction involves selling short the same number of shares you own, and maintaining both the short and long positions until the next tax year. Any price movement in the stock from that point will be offset when you close out both positions.

Not exactly unknown are Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA's) which provide an excellent means for reducing tax burden. One of these accounts will allow you to reduce taxable income by up to $2,000 a year by investing in a tax-qualified individual retirement plan. On a joint tax return, if one spouse has no income the maximum deductible investmet can be as much as $2,250.

Tax shelters or tax advantaged direct investments offer excellent opportunities for first year deductions which may be equal to the initial cash investment.

By the same token municipal bonds are not to be overlooked as the simplest and most traditional of all tax shelters. These tax-exempt bonds are issued by a wide range of government entities, and diverse groups of bonds can be singularly packaged in "unit trusts." If your tax bracket is 36 percent or higher, serious thought should be given to municipal bonds.

Trustees' Private Bank making house calls

EDITOR'S NOTE - Less than a dozen private, or unincorporated, banks are still in operation in this country today, but those few are still providing personalized ser-vice for an exclusive clientele with Swiss-style numbered accounts.

Trustees' Vice President Lawrence Estes says the bank's customers "don't have to be in the top 10 percent of Who's Who," but he adds that "typically, it's the affluent who have the need for our service."

Some of Trustees' selling points, such as the numbered accounts, are part of a cultivated image, summed up in one advertisement as "the most exclusive 'club' in town.

"Our services include all of your banking needs, in the Swiss banque tradition," reads the ad, strategically placed in a Pittsburgh Civic Light Opera program.

But other Trustees' services customer access to senior officers, the absence of rigid rules on deposits or withdrawals - are typical of a

Only 11 private, or unincor-porated, banks still operate nationwide: four in Pennsylvania, five in Texas, one in Indiana and one in New York.

Most, like Trustees' with total assets of about $5 million, are small and have at most one branch.

Their founders include merchants who wanted to handle their own banking and a former Romanian consul who wanted to serve his immigrant countrymen. Generally they did not have enough capital to meet state and federal minimums for incorporation.

After the turn of the century, when more than 4,000 private banks existed, state and federal laws discouraged and later barred formation of any new private banks. Those still open operate under legal grandfather clauses.

As with any unincorporated business, private bank owners are personally liable for their banks' debts. Owners agree this tends to make them conservative.

Estes says bank owners are adverse to taking risks. "We have no

FCA official predicts loss

LOS ANGELES - Financial Corp. of America will lose money in 1984's fourth quarter, largely because it will have to bolster its reserves for problem loans, FCA Chairman and Chief Executive William J. Popejoy predicted in an interview Monday. The effort to bolster reserves reflects a conservative and cautious strategy on the part of FCA's management as it seeks to provide a cushion against any disclosure in the future of troubled loans. The addition to loan-loss reserves directly cuts into FCA's earnings.

While the fourth-quarter red ink may look bad in comparison to the third-quarter's profit of $1.23 million and result in some skittishness among depositors, Popejoy expects FCA's recovery to be sustained. The S&L continues to enjoy a net inflow of deposits, a sharp contrast to the massive withdrawals last summer. Popejoy said that the company probably will take a substantial "hit" to earnings in the final quarter. FCA added $24.5 million to loan-loss reserves in the third quarter, bringing the total to $90.5 million. A task force evaluating FCA's loan portfolio should have a report ready by next month, the 46-year-old chief executive said.

FCA's ratio of problem loans, known as scheduled items, to total assets was about twice the saving and loan industry average at September's end.

Popejoy took over Los Angelesbased FCA in late August, succeeding Charles W. Knapp, who had been under heavy pressure from federal regulators to resign because of a deposit outflow.

Veteran pilot locked in battle for British skies

By JAMES F. PELTZ AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - When the aerial Battle of Britain erupted in 1940, many teen-age boys in the British Isles were inspired to be pilots.

One of them was Adam Thomson, then a 14-year-old Scot.

He later fulfilled his wish and flew for the Royal Navy.

This year, Thomson was locked in another battle over Britain's skies. But the combatants this time were Britain's own commercial airlines, and the dogfight was over market

Thomson is now Sir Adam Thomson and chairman of Caledonian Aviation Group PLC, whose main unit is British Caledonian Airways Ltd., Britain's largest private airline. For months British Caledonian argued that in advance of the privatization of state-owned British Airways this spring, the government should transfer or share many of British Airways' routes with British Caledonian and other private British

The proposal, aimed at enhancing competition between British carriers, was promoted by Britain's Civil Aviation Authority, which presented the plan to the government. But as Thomson summed up: "The government decided in the end to throw the CAA recommendations right out the window.

Although Thomson failed to restructure British aviation, his airline's intense lobbying for the changes led British Airways to strike a compromise: It agreed to transfer two lucrative Saudia Arabian destinations, Jeddah and Dhahran, to British Caledonian.

In return, British Caledonian transferred its loss-plagued South American routes — including Bogota, Colombia; Caracas, Venezuela; and Sao Paulo, Brazil — to British Airways.

One British publication, the Manchester Guardian Weekly, nonetheless termed the compromise a "crushing victory" for British Airways in its battle with British Cale-

But Thomson, 58, is undaunted. He figures the two Saudi Arabian routes alone will add 18 million pounds (about $21.5 million) to British Caledonian's bottom line.

"We came away smiling and happy," he said in an interview during a recent business trip to New York. "I would be too foolish to go into any kind of fight with the government, particularly a policy fight,

Yet the fight itself opened the door for the exchange of routes, he said, adding, "I couldn't complain with the final outcome of the total battle, but it didn't answer the industry's problem at all."

Texas' Blue Law facing renewed repeal effort from some retailers

By SHARON HERBAUGH Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Texas' Blue Law, created as a guardian of weekend worship and then reshaped to protect the small independent mer-chants from the discount giants, has proven to be a tough, resilient statute, able to survive widespread unpopularity and unrelenting chalenge for 23 years.

Powerful lobbies defended the law, legislators cradled and protected it from attack, and the appeals courts stood firmly behind its legitimacy.

But now the law, which forbids the sale of 42 selected items on consecutive weekend days, may to be in for the fight of its life. Recent polls have shown that seven of every 10 Texans would like the Blue Law erased from the books. Increasing numbers of retailers across the state boldly are defying the Blue Law, opening their doors on both Saturdays and Sundays and refusing to flinch at the threat of lawsuits.

Some rebel merchants are organ-izing anti-Blue Law lobbies marshaling a strategy to repeal the law during the legislative session that begins next month.

Two repeal bills are waiting in the hopper. And lawmakers, including some who have defended the statute, now predict the controversial law has at best a 50-50 chance of sur-"It's a sad day for the republic," said Tom Blanton, a lobbyist for the Texas Automobile Dealers Association, which along with the Texas Retailers Association and the Christian Life Commission of the Texas Baptist Convention has vigorously opposed repeal efforts.

Texas' adventure with the Blue Law is almost as old as the Lone Star State itself.

Lawmakers, emulating their New England forebearers, passed a Sunday closing law in December 1863 which guaranteed citizens would be free to worship rather than work. The law was bound with blue paper. Amendments were added over the years to exempt household duties, charitable activities, industries operating around the clock and farm work

Finally, it was replaced in 1961, spurred by big discount stores, with a new statute that banned the sale of 42 items, including clothing, furniture, hardware and jewelry.

The law allowed customers to buy a bottle of beer but not a baby bottle; camera film but not camera: makeup but not a mirror; comic books but not toys

References to religious observances were absent, purposely heading off claims of discrimination by those who observed their Sabbath on Saturdays.

But some merchants said the Blue Law was actually a special interest law - vague, selectively enforced and ignored by small retailers who sell antiques or operate flea markets on weekends.

"I think it's about time this ridiculous law was eliminated," said David Christensen, owner of five Textile Outlets of Houston Inc. stores, an "off-price" business selling draperies, upholstery, blinds and bed-

"I think the whole thing boils down to a matter of choice. If I want to open on Sunday, that is my choice. If the big department stores don't want to, they don't have to," said Christensen, 35, a third-generation merchant who is being sued for disobeying the law.

Over the years, various state district judges have branded the Blue Law unconstitutional. But the rulings were overturned on 12 occasions by state appeals courts and upheld three times by the Texas Supreme Court, which said the matter was a legislative question.

"It's time to move into the 20th century," said Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, who has tried three times to push through legislation to revoke the Blue Law.

"The law is archaic and outdated."

Willis said. "If you could close down every business, that would be great. But you can't. It's not being obeyed today; it's being broken. So why have a law on the books?' Measures to repeal the Blue Law

Some 280 Houston merchants began opening their doors on Sundays beginning in November and daring the powerful Houston Retail

Semiconductor market demonstrates volatility

NEW YORK - When it comes to market volatility, it is hard to top semiconductor stocks. This group enjoyed a spectacular run from early 1982 to early 1984. Then the stocks of major chip makers suddenly weakened in January and later recouped much of their losses, only to sink.

The stock market rally in early August sent them flying again. Lately, however, these issues have come under renewed pressure as the goes through a period of painful inventory adjustment and industry lowered earnings estimates.

Small wonder, then, that securities analysts differ on their opinions for semiconductor issues.

"It's a tough group to buy, because these stocks move up or down by as much as six months in advance of changes in their order bookings, Adam F. Cuhney, who follows the industry for Salomon Brothers, said Tuesday. "You've got to buy them on weakness, because they are so

"For four consecutive months to October, there was an accelerating rate of decline in order bookings. But it now appears that the rate of decline is moderating. As the new year progresses, benchmarks of industry performance will appear less ominous and will show signs of recovery before mid-1985."

With the economic slowdown taking its toll on the profitability of semiconductor manufacturers, Cuhney recently scaled back his earnings forecasts for companies for the coming year. However, he remains positive on the group and recommends five stocks for purchase: Intel. Advanced Micro Devices, National Semiconductor, Texas Instruments and Motorola. For the intermediate term of up to one year, Thomas Kurlak, who covers the group for Merrill Lynch, carries a "neutral" opinion on all five of these issues. For the long term, however, he rates Intel and Advanced Micro Devices as outright "buys," and the other three stocks a notch lower, at "OK to buy, Late last week, Intel's management said that its fourth-quarter earnings for 1984 would decline to about 20 cents a share from 40 cents a year earlier. Following this announcement, Kurlak cut his estimate for this year's profits to $1.70 a share from $1.83 formerly. His earnings projection for 1985 was reduced to $1.35 to $1.60 a share from a

James L. Barlage, an analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. Inc., holds to a different view on semiconductor stocks. "We went negative on the group in January and, therefore, have been sellers of these stocks for almost a year," he said. "I still recommend their sale and believe that the industry environment for semiconductors will remain very sluggish for possibly the first nine months of 1985. For two years prior to January 1984, Barlage had remained positive on semiconductor stocks. In the final week of January, however, he became increasingly cautious "concerning the group's appreciation potential" and withdrew all purchase recommendations. At that time, I felt that by the middle of 1984 supply and demand would come into balance and that we would begin to see profit-margin deterioration, order weakness and earnings coming under pressure," he explained Tuesday. In retrospect, his predictions were on target.

At present, Barlage's only recommendation in the group is Anthem Electronics, a distributor of semiconductor products. "Anthem is expanding its product lines, increasing revenues and serving a number of manufacturers in niche areas," he said.

Space, petroleum, medicine key to Houston economy

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Economic Development Council says the state's largest city can diversify its oil-dependent economy by spinning off industries related to the Johnson Space Center, Texas Medical Center and the bellwether petrochemical industry.

The conclusion is among preliminary results of studies commissioned by the council, which is spending $6.6 million over the next two years to find out how to attract "quality growth and economic stability" to

Stewart Orton, president of the council, said at a news conference Tuesday that the panel was interested in attracting new businesses to Houston, plus convincing existing businesses that now is a good time to expand.

In addition, the panel, formed six months ago and made up of top business and civic executives in the city.

Houston's oil-oriented economy so the city can better handle a shock like the one that hit in 1982 when the oil boom soured.

"It's important to not let ourselves be so vulnerable in the future." Orton said. "So many of our nonpetroleum-oriented businesses turned out to be petroleum-

Nuclear test site big business in Nevada

Bigger than Rhode Island, site explodes bomb a month

Los Angeles Times Washington Post News Service

NEVADA TEST SITE — The contrasts are striking. At one end of this vast and beautiful desert expanse a herd of mustangs picks its way among stately clusters of Joshua trees and a hawk plays against a mountain backdrop of ever-chang-

Not far from the horses are eerie reminders of the recent past: a ramp leading to an underground garage that was used to test how a bomb shelter might survive a nuclear blast; an enormous crater, left by 'Sedan," a huge bomb detonated in 1962 as part of a program, later abandoned, to study peaceful uses of the atom; a home blown apart here, a mangled tower there.

Only a few miles from these relics of the nation's atmospheric nuclear testing program is a scene more reminiscent of an oil field. Here, the landscape is punctuated with gleaming white skyscraper-tall drilling rigs, trailers, insrumentation towers and cables - all used to conduct nuclear experiments deep within the desert.

This is America's 1,350-square-mile Nevada Test Site, bigger than Rhode Island, where the nation's most lethal weapons - including warheads for the Trident and MX missile systems - are being put through their paces. Hardly a month goes by without underground nuclear detonations — several times more powerful than the atomic bomb that devastated Hiroshima in the closing days of World War H; others, much smaller, that can hardly be detected — either by America's nuclear watchdogs or by its perceived enemies.

THIRTY-FOUR YEARS after the test site was established; about 65 miles northeast of Las Vegas, the public knows remarkably little cloak of national security, the American people are not told: -The precise number of tests. Usually, only the larger blasts are announced in advance as warnings to area residents, particularly those in vulnerable occupations, such as window washers in Las Vegas or miners, who might be affected by vibrations generated by an underground blast. Officials say they also disclose all tests that produce radiasite since the Atomic Energy Com-mission was disbanded in 1974, defend the secrecy policy on national security grounds. Officials say they have had the option to decide which tests to disclose since the testing program went under-ground in 1963 as a result of the Limited Test Ban Treaty between the United States and the Soviet

"What the American public needs to know, they are told," said Dave Miller, the Nevada Test Site's public information director for almost two decades. "We are as open and candid as we possibly can be without giving away the store."

THE ENERGY DEPARTMENT'S refusal to publicly disclose the tests as they are conducted has brought it into conflict with the Environmental Protection Agency, the govern-ment's radiation watchdog, which is notified of all tests.

Geneva Douglas, operations man-ager of the EPA's radiation monitoring division, said the secrecy policy heightens the concern of people who live around the test site. She said EPA employees make spot checks two days before each test without declaring the purpose of their visit — to determine where ranchers, miners and others in the area are likely to be when the event occurs. Naturally, she said, these people draw their own conclusions when they see agency workers on their land.

If all the tests were made public, Douglas said, "we could be frank and people wouldn't have to guess that there's a test coming up. People's anxiety would be reduced.'

Miller said the philosophy behind the secrecy is to make foreign intelligence operatives work for the

Why hand foreign intelligencegathering agencies the information for 25 cents to pick out of the Los Angeles Times?" he said. "Make effort and then they'll have less time, money and effort to spend on other things.

'That's the whole rationale. It's just that simple.'

Actually, it is not necessary to be a foreign operative to record the nuclear blasts at the site. Seismologists at California Institute of Technology do it all the time as part of their earthquake-monitoring system, although they concede that they may miss a few of the smaller shots. Caltech has counted 138 shots since 1977, compared with the 120 tests announced by the Department of Energy during the same period.

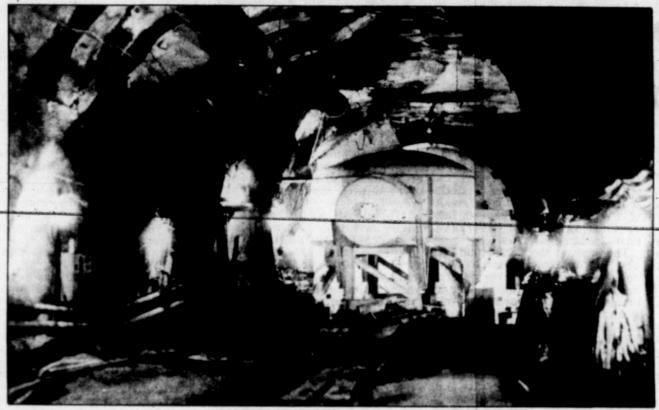

TO DATE, there have been 626 announced nuclear tests at the site, of which 100 were atmospheric shots detonated before the test ban treaty went into effect. (A handful of tests were conducted by Great Britain, the only foreign nation allowed to use the site.)

On average in the last decade, Energy, which has supervised the officials said, there have been 15 or nation's two primary weapons laboratories, operated by the University of California — Lawrence Livermore Laboratory in Northern Laboratory in New Mexico. Most scientists at these two labs believe that the testing program is vital to national security

"The testing program is part of the (nation's) nuclear deterrent," said Philip E. Coyle, deputy associate director of defense systems at Lawrence Livermore. "It should be continued while we attempt to hammer out a (comprehensive test ban) treaty.

Each lab has its own testing area on the Nevada site, and, according to John C. Hopkins, associate director for weapons development programs at Los Alamos, "there's a healthy competition to produce better (weapons) technology and three types of tests. These form the core of the nation's nuclear weapons development program:

Scientists from the two primary labs, and those from Sandia National Laboratories in New Mexico, which produces non-nuclear components, essentially conduct

-Development testing designed to produce new nuclear weapons systems such as those that led to the MX missile. This constitutes the bulk of the testing under the desert floor, according to a Lawrence Livermore scientist, who did not wish to be

-Weapons-effects testing aimed at learning how vulnerable America's nuclear weapons are and to ensure their survivability in case of attack. The Defense Nuclear Agency, a Pentagon unit that administers these tests, said two are conducted annually.

-Stockpile tesing to make sure a particular weapon has not gone stale. These are conducted even less frequently than weapons-effects tests, the Lawrence Livermore scien-

WEAPONS DEVELOPMENT tests occur in shafts, dug between 600 feet and 3,600 feet deep, mostly in the Yucca Valley area of the site. Each test has a price tag ranging from $6 million to upward of $20 million, in part because of the manpower and equipment required to set up the shot and the cost of the

On any given day, said Patrick Rowe, a drilling engineer for Reynolds Electrical and Engineering Co., the site's primary contractor, "three holes are being dug" — two for weapons testing and one for the study of nuclear waste storage.
In effect, he said, "we stockpile holes" for future tests. Into these holes are lowered giant canisters, up to about 200 feet long, which contain equipment to make measurements, monitor radiation and take photographs. Data generated by this payload is relayed through dozens of cables to the surface, where it is collected by instruments in nearby trailers.

Although test site officials will not iscuss the types of weapons being detonated in these shafts or the scope of the nation's nuclear inventory, an article in the August-September issue of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists by three Washington, D.C., anti-nuclear watchdogs said such tests have led to about "26 types of nuclear warheads (includ-ing bomb-type devices) in 28 different delivery systems" in the U.S. nuclear stockpile.

The enormous variety of nuclear weapons under development by the laboratories ranges from warheads with small nuclear yields designed for artillery and tanks to the Peacekeeper-MX missile system with a 10warhead-per-missile capacity, each warhead equipped with a nuclear yield capability of at least 300 kilo-

"Well over 200,000 people and an annual budget of over $35 billion are involved in U.S. development and production of new warheads, the care for those already in the socalled 'stockpile' and the planning for their use," according to the Nuclear Weapons Databook.

UNLIKE THE development tests, which occur in deep shafts, weapons-effects tests, the second major category of testing at the site, primarily take place in long, elaborate tunnels in Rainier Mesa.

They are by far the most costly of the nuclear blasts in the Nevada desert because of the time and manpower involved in constructing the enormously complicated tests. Currently two such tests are held annually, costing about $70 million each, according to the Defense Nuclear Agency.

A recent visit by a reporter to "Misty Rain," the code name for a test to be conducted soon in the mesa's "N" tunnel, revealed a labyrinth of underground passageways snaking from the main tunnel entrance that have been used for nuclear experiments dating back to

A diesel-powered train carried Defense Nuclear Agency officials down about a mile into the mesa, where "Misty Rain" was being con-structed at a depth of about 1,300 feet. As the rail cars bounced along, they passed miles of cable strung along the top of the darkened tunnel. These wires are designed to carry critical test information to scientific data banks outside.

DALLAS (SWN) — The LTV Corp. today announced steps to further consolidate its drilling equipment manufacturing operations.

The International Division of LTV Energy Products Company will be consolidated with the company's Drilling Equipment Division in order to focus marketing, engineering and manufacturing to take advantage of growing foreign market opportunities. The International Division's activities are currently geared almost entirely to supporting the overseas sale of drilling equipment.

In addition, LTV Energy Products will sell its manufacturing plant at Sedro-Woolley, Wash. The facility has been used to manufacture Emsco drilling equipment and the Skagit line of offshore winches, cranes and

LTV Energy Products will continue as a full line supplier of Skagit offshore mooring systems, but will concentrate principally on engineering and marketing. Manufacturing of the Skagit product line will take place in foreign shipyards to meet competitive costs, and manufacturing of Emsco drilling equipment will be consolidated at the company's Houston plant. ks. As a result of the consolidation, Robert S. Schrader, senior vice president-drilling equipment, will assume responsi-bility for the International Division as well as the Drilling Equipment Division, which produces Emsco drilling machinery, Wilson well servicing and workover equipment, and Skagit offshore mooring systems

Dallas bank says 'no thanks' to proposals for leveraged buyouts

By FRED R. BLEAKLEY N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK - Republicbank Dallas used to be one of the most active Southwest banks funneling money into the leveraged buyouts of corporations. But nowadays, when John R. Bunten, vice chairman of the bank, listens to deal makers present him with such written proposals he said he usually has the same reaction: "I throw the piece of paper in the air and say, 'No way; adios, boys.'

Bunten is not alone among bankers in his attitude, as the growing number of aborted leveraged buyouts in recent months makes clear. Washington's tougher stance on bank loan portfolios and the slowing economy have led bankers to put the brakes on the previously frenzied pace of leveraged buyouts.

Bankers still look longingly at the high profit margins on these deals, but they are now scrutinizing the proposals much more closely and nsisting that investors put up more of their own money

In leveraged buyout, a small group of investors, often including management, purchases a company, mostly with borrowed funds. The debt is usually repaid from the company's cash flow, or from the sale of

Earlier this year the number of announced and then completed deals was proliferating like spring dandelions. In the first nine months, 76 buyout offers valued at $27.9 billion were announced, compared with 27 valued at $4.1 billion in the 1983 period, according to W.T. Grimm & Co.

Lately, however, there seem to be as many terminated or shaky leveraged buyout deals as there are new ones. In the third quarter, 11 previously announced proposals, val-ued at $7.9 billion, were abandoned. And in October alone, four leveraged buyout proposals were announced, and four pending ones were canceled, including those for Ryan Homes and Southland Finan-

More recently, a $525 million offer for Diversifoods was dropped and Northwest Industries informed its stockholders that the proposed $1.1 billion leveraged buyout offer for their shares was in difficulty because of financing snags. And last week, the Wackenhut Corp., which is a security and investigative company, said that an offer to take the company private through the leveraged route had been withdrawn because the buyout group could not obtain the financing.

"The easiest part of doing a deal is announcing it," said Brian Little, partner in Forstmann, Little & Co., a private investment firm specializing in leveraged buyouts. With publicly owned companies, he explained, banks are usually not asked to consider a buyout until after a public more evidence that credits are announcement of an offer for fear sound. They want to see better covthat word might leak out and drive ip the stock price

The mounting number of deals that cannot be financed is the result of a reassessment by bankers this summer and fall of leveraged buyout lending practices.

The crisis at the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Co. made every-one, especially bank regulators, more conscious of the quality of loans in a bank's portfolio. And when the chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, John S.R. Shad, and the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Paul A. Volcker, made it clear early in the summer that they were alarmed at the trend in leveraged buyouts, the banks became even more cautious. At the same time, the deal propos als were getting riskier. Bankers had felt more comfortable when most deals were originated by leveraged buyout specialists who had pools of funds they were willing to invest, and who had a strong interest in protecting their equity investment. But this year, more and more investment banking firms competed to put the deals together, for either a fee or a piece of the equity, without putting up any money themselves. And bankers became concerned.

In the Wackenhut deal, which was announced in late June, for example, Merrill Lynch, the investment banker, was to put up very little equity money, according to sources familiar with the proposal. Meanwhile, Wackenhut management, including the company's founder, George Wackenhut, would have bought into the new private com-pany largely with the proceeds of the leveraged buyout financing they received for turning in their public shares. Merrill Lynch officials who worked on the deal were unavailable for comment. In general, the frothy leveraged buyout market in the first half of this year led many bankers to the same conclusion as George Vojta, executive vice president of the Bankers Trust Co. "The market had moved away from our comfort level," he said.

Other banks, such as Manufacturers Hanover Trust, which had been one of the most active leveraged buyout bank lenders, withdrew during the summer, experts in the field say. Manufacturers Hanover is said to have since come back into the market in a big way, but with stricter standards. Officials at the bank were unavailable for com-

"The banks are not out of LBO business, but they are definitely tougher," said Carl Ferenbach, managing director of Thomas H. Lee & Co., a small investment banking firm that recently raised $68 million for a fund that will invest in leveraged sound. They want to see better coverage and better asset support for their loans. And they want to see more equity from the buyout.

If previously a bank syndicate might have lent $300 million in senior debt in a $400 million buyout, now the syndicate is willing to put up only $250 million, Ferenbach added. The rest of the funds must come from subordinated lenders at the so-called mezzanine level and from equity investors, who may add amounts ranging from 1 percent to 10 percent of the total

Some banks pulled back in this field earlier than others. At Chase Manhattan, James H. Carey, executive vice president, said that a more cautious approach had been adopted early this year. Previously, the bank wanted to be sure that a company would be able to meet its floating interest rate debt payments if rates rose as high as 15 percent to 18 percent. Now the bank goes through the same exercise on an 18 percent

Carey said his bank declined to participate as a lender in the Northwest Industries financing because "of the way it was structured." Not enough "pure equity" would be part of the financing structure, he said, thus raising the possibility that cash flow would not be able to cover all of the debt. Jeffrey P. Beck, director of mergers and acquisitions for Oppenheimer & Co., which helped arrange the proposal, declined to comment.

How long the bankers will maintain their tougher stance, however, is open to question. The temptation to throw money into leveraged buyout deals is great. At one major bank, the head of leveraged lending, who asked not to be identified, said he was already seeing some weakening of this new-found resolve among other bankers.

For many bankers "the caution peaked in late summer and lasted through October," he said. Now, with continued weak loan demand in other sectors, the attractive spreads on leveraged buyout loans are getting harder to pass up, he

The typical leveraged loan is priced at about two and one-half percentage points over the bank's cost of funds, he said. In comparison, the spread on higher quality credits, the kind every bank wants and which are harder to come by these days, is about one-quarter to three-eighths of 1 percent. If the banks remain tough, of course, the deal makers ultimately will have to structure leveraged buyouts with more equity and on terms that make more sense to the bankers. Bunten of Republicbank and Vojta of Bankers Trust said they have yet to see that happening to any measurable extent. "The deals we are seeing are crazy," Bunten

Even so, other lenders, such asthe Prudential Insurance Co., say the mix of leveraged deal proposals is ing back to the levels where we can be comfortable," said Garnett L. Keith, vice chairman in charge of investments for Prudential.

After more than 50 years in Chicago, Playskool, a division of Hasbro Bradley Inc., is moving its factory to the East Coast, leaving about 700 workers — a majority of them black and Latino — without jobs Hasbro's decision to leave Chicago has triggered a firestorm of contro-versey, because the plant is being closed less than five years after Chicago helped the company get a $1 million low-interest industrial revenue bond — a loan — to expand and to create jobs.

The Playskool plant closing highlights a problem that communities across the nation are facing: What to do about companies that obtain government-sponsored industrial revenue bonds for expansion and then fail to fulfill the promises they made to get them. Here, the City of Chicago has filed an unprecedented suit to prevent the plant closing, and it is considering putting restrictions on future aid for industrial expansion. Meanwhile community groups are attempting to organize a nationwide boycott of Hasbro's toys, and local newspapers are reacting with anger. "Hasbro, the grinch who 'stole' jobs," the Chicago Tribune called the company in an editorial. "Their action is an arrogant breach of trust," said Chicago Mayor

Harold Washington who authorized the legal action against the company. "For the taxpayers of Chicago who backed the company this is a slap in the face," added the mayor. Paradoxically, Hasbro, inherited the controversey. The Milton Bradley Co. had made a firm decision to close the plant last May but kept it secret from city and union officials and the workers. When Hasboro purchased Milton Bradley last fall, the new owners studied the need for the closing before going ahead. "I've never been happy with this decision because of the people aspect of it," said Stephen Hassenfeld, chairman and chief executive officer of Hasbro, based in Pawtucket, R.I. "I feel badly about the people," Hassenfeld said in a telephone interview. "I held it (the decision to close the plant) up for 13 weeks ... I always felt that the first task that we have is to preserve jobs that are there.' Hassenfeld said the plant itself was not profitable and operated at only 58 percent of capacity. All of that is little consolation to Spontella, McLain, 698 other Playskool workers, and the tens of thousands of others who have lost jobs here in the last decade of deindustrial revolution. About 2,000 factories have closed in Chicago in the last 10 years, most of them without arousing community anger.

There has to be straw that breaks the camel's back," said Hassenfeld. The straw in this case may be the issue of industrial revenue bonds as much as it is the loss of employment. It is an issue that has confronted government from the rural village level to the Congress

Industrial revenue bonds or industrial development bonds, known in financial circles as IRB's, have been used for almost 50 years as a way for cities, counties and states to stimulate economic development, to retain businesses and to lure new ones.

By CAROL LAWSON N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Last May the 16 members of the board of governors of the New York Mercantile Exchange closeted themselves in their headquarters in the World Trade Center to elect a new presi-dent. When they emerged about an hour later they had come up not only with a new president but also with an important breakthrough for women in the work force.

The board selected Rosemary T. McFadden, a choice that raised many an eyebrow throughout the business world, for no woman had ever headed a major stock or com-modities exchange in the United States.

The New York Mercantile Exchange, the fourth-largest of the 11 American commodities exchanges, offers futures contracts in energy — leaded and unleaded gasoline, heating oil and crude oil as well as in potatoes, platinum and palladium. Its success with energy contracts, in particular, has led to rapid growth, doubling the trading volume each year for the past three years, and to the recent emergence of the exchange as a primary force in worldwide oil pricing.

"I was young, I was a woman and I didn't have an energy background," Miss McFadden, a 38-year-old lawyer who has worked at the exchange in various posts for less than four years, said the other day in her sunny corner office. "More than one or two people within the oil industry were asking themselves and each other how I would relate to men and what my knowledge of the industry was. But I seem to be overcoming the skepticism."

exchange and an early supporter of Miss McFadden for the presidency, agrees. "Wall Street is not a woman's world, and in international business women are even less accepted," he said. women to important jobs. Five of the 12 people on Miss McFadden's senior staff are women; all held their positions before her election.

Before moving into the office of the president, Miss McFadden, who has a master's degree in business administration in addition to a law degree, had been going up the career ladder at the exchange with remarkable speed. She went to work there in March 1981 as a staff lawyer and was executive vice president at the time of her recent promotion. As president she oversees the day-today operations of the exchange, makes policy recommendations to the board of governors, supervises a staff of 125 and is paid a six-figure

Marks and other members of the board describe Miss McFadden, who often works seven days a week, as "bright," "a good administrator" and "well liked."

Since its formation from the wreckage of the Nash and Hudson car companies in 1954, AMC's product strategy has been based largely on the idea that, since the company didn't have enough money to compete in all segments of its market with its much bigger cross-town rivals General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., its cars had to be different,

Hence came the Rambler, the Gremlin, the Javelin, the Spirit, the egg-shaped Pacer and others.

Unfortunately, even company executives now admit that AMC's cars were perhaps too different, and all have since slipped little-mourned into automotive history. AMC Chairman W. Paul Tippett Jr. has even described the old AMC as "the oddball car company."

But now AMC, backed by the financial resources of Renault, the big French government-owned auto maker which has a controlling 46.4 percent stake in AMC, is now in the midst of a multi-billion-dollar prod-uct program aimed at making American Motors a serious competitor in most of the major segments of the passenger car market for the first time in its history.

"We have fixed our goals on becoming a company with a full range of products," says Jean-Marc Lepeu, AMC's chief financial officer and a former Renault executive.

AMC, which began its Renault-fin-anced turnaround in 1982 with the introduction of the French-designed Alliance subcompact, plans to add larger, more expensive Renault passenger cars - built both in North America and Europe — and new Jeep vehicles to reduce its historic dependence on lower profit small

After discontinuing production of the last of the "old" American Motors passenger cars, the Spirit and Concord, last year, AMC is already beginning to see its strate of relying on Renault pay off. Thanks to the success of its new, downsized Jeep Cherokee and Wagoneer models (developed with financial help from Renault), which have boosted sales of its Jeep subsidiary by 93 percent this year, and its improved Renault subcompact passenger car sales, AMC has been in the black for four straight quarters.

In the first nine months of 1984, AMC earned $12.3 million, compared to a loss of $154.1 million last year. and AMC expects that 1984 will be its first profitable year since 1979.

With most observers predicting relatively stable car sales in 1985, analysts and AMC executives say the company's financial outlook should remain relatively unchanged next year. "I don't see any reason why AMC should do any better or any worse next year than we've done in 1984," Lepeu says.

'We're estimating marginal profitability, or break-even, in 1985, about the same as in 1984," adds Harvey Heinbach, automotive analyst at New York-based Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. But both company executives and industry analysts say AMC's drive to move "upscale" with its products is essential to its long-term profitability - and to its survival. Although its subcompact sales are up 21 percent this year because of the addition of a new Renault model, the Encore hatchback, AMC executives realize that the Alliance sales are down 19.8 percent so far this year from last year. Sales of all its passenger car sales are up only 1.1 percent.)

The executives realize that AMC must now follow up the initial success it has enjoyed with French subcompacts by filling out its product line with larger, more expensive cars to attract customers who have never before bought AMC cars. Without a wider selection, AMC will never have the economies of scale that give producers such as GM and the Japanese huge manufacturing cost advantages, and the company will find it increasingly difficult to continue to make money.

'Our problem is that we just don't have entries in some of the other segments" to complement the Alliance, says Joseph Cappy, AMC's group vice president for sales and marketing. "To be profitable in this business, you've got to have a broad product line and a large enough sales volume base to make it possible" to continually fund new product programs, Cappy adds.

Lepeu insists that AMC's ambitious, five-year, $2 billion product program will enable the company to double the total number of vehicles it sells from about 400,000 units this year to 800,000 in five years. But analysts such as David Healy of New York-based Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. find it difficult to believe that AMC can really pull off such a coup. "It sounds quite optimistic to me," Healy says. "In order to be competitive, they should have larger cars now, not three years from now. Who knows how well the cars AMC is planning to bring out

"I don't think our plans are unrealistic at all," Lepeu counters. "We know what we want to do in product, manufacturing capacity and in marketing, and where we have problems, they have been clearly identified and we know what we have to do.

AMC's biggest step in its new strategy to broaden its lineup was announced in June, when the company announced that it will spend nearly $600 million to build a new assembly plant in Brampton, Ontario, Canada, to produce a new line of intermediate-sized Renault cars in time for the 1988 model year.

AMC received grants of about $93 million from the Canadian national government and the province of Ontario for the plant, which will employ 3,000 workers building 150,000 Renault-designed cars a year. Cappy says the new Canadian plant will produce a sedan that will compete in the same segment as GM's successful Oldsmobile Cutlass Ciera, a market with high sales volume in which AMC does not compete today.

Until the new plant is built, however, AMC apparently expects to fill out its passenger car lineup mainly with imports from Renault, while updating and expanding its more profitable domestic Jeep lineup. Cappy says AMC plans to introduce at least two more high volume, midsize or compact cars between 1985 and 1987, one to compete against the Chevrolet Celebrity (a less expensive version of the Olds Cutlass Ciera), and another to go against smaller compacts such as the Honda Accord. In early 1986, AMC will introduce the Renault Espace van, designed to compete in the booming mini-van segment, and in the summer of 1986, will bring out a two-door, rearengine sports coupe, to be called the Renault Alpine in France, giving AMC a presence in the profitable sports car market in this country.

Meanwhile, its Jeep unit will bring out AMC's only new U.S.-built products next year, the Jeep Comanche, a pick-up version of the Wagoneer, and a two-wheel-drive version of the downsized Cherokee.

It is obvious that AMC can't go through with much of its ambitious program without the backing of Renault, which has poured $545 million into AMC since the two firms established ties in 1978. Renault, which hadn't been a major force in the United States since the early minimum investment in AMC, it could obtain an American dealer network and marketing base.

But as AMC's problems and its losses mounted in the late 1970s and early 1980s, Renault's investment in the company grew. And most observers now believe that AMC is little more than a manufacturing and distribution arm of the French firm. Further evidence of AMC's reliance on Renault came in September, when Jose J. Dedeurwaerder, a Belgian and a former Renault executive, was named AMC's chief executive, succeeding Tippett, who retained the title of chairman.

Mexico bans LPG in cars

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government Thursday banned the use of liquid petroleum gas in cars, in a move intended to avoid future explosions and prevent gas shortages for domestic consumers, a news release said.

The move came after the Nov. 19 explosion at a gas storage plant in a northern suburb of the capital that killed at least 490 people and injured more than 300 others.

Increasing numbers of Mexicans over the last few years have begun converting their cars over the last few years to use liquid petroleum gas, a mixture of butane and propane that is 20 to 30 percent cheaper then gasoline at current prices here.

The regular brand of Pemex gasoline currently costs the equivalent of about U.S. 75 cents per gallon.

There are no statistics available on how many gas carburetors are currently in use here, but the release said Pemex had been predicting an increased demand for gas for cars of 15 percent annually over the next five years.

The release said the use of the substance in automobiles was dangerous, and said the ban would prevent shortages of liquid petroleum gas for home use. In the weeks since the explosion at San Juan Ixhuatepec, consumers in some neighborhoods here been complaining the

Exxon hit with $100 million suit in venture

D.S. Agency of Lubbock has announced that it is one of a group of 27 Exxon Office Systems agents and dealers who have filed a $100 million lawsuit against Exxon Corp.
The action was filed in the United State District Court in San Diego, California by Giaugue & Williams, a Salt Lake City, Utah law firm. Associated on the case is the San Diego office of the New York City-based law firm of Milberg, Weiss, Bershed, Specthrie & Lerach.

Exxon recently announced its intent to withdraw from the automated office equipment business and indicated that it was negotiating with other companies for the sale of the assets of its Exxon Office Systems Division, located in Stamford, Connecticut. The EOSC Division is part of the Exxon Corp., which is he largest industrial corporation in the world, with 1983 sales in excess of $93 billion.

The lawsuit alleges that Exxon committed fraud in inducing D.S. Agency and the other agents and dealers to sign agency and dealer contracts by representing to D.S. Agency and the others that Exxonwas committed to the office automation industry and was in the business to stay. The lawsuit also alleges that Exxon breached agency and dealer contracts and committed other violations of law by attempting to sell all or part of the assets of Exxon Office Systems.

The agents claim that Exxon deceived them as to its future business plans by telling them, as recently as six weeks ago, that there was no truth to any rumors that Exxon was getting out and that they should continue to invest time, capital and resources in their Exxon dealerships. The agents seek at least $25 million in actual damages and punitive damages of $75 million. In addition, they seek to have Exxon enjoined from selling the EOSC assets during the pendency of the lawsuit, unless that sale is conditioned upon adequate protection for the agents' businesses.

NRC clears nuclear plant

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Nuclear Regulatory Commission appeals board has refused to rescind an operating license for the Byron atomic power station in Northern Illinois, clearing the way for startup of the plant next month.

The three-judge board on Thurs-day turned down all objections by a coalition of local groups that had measures at the $3.67 billion plant, its ability to withstand an earthquake and whether the station is needed at all.

The ruling had been predicted by plant opponents and Commonwealth Edison Co., the station's owner.

The Byron facility, located about 17 miles southwest of Rockford, made nuclear industry history early this year when an NRC licensing panel refused to grant the plant an operating permit. The decision marked the first time the government had denied a license to a nuclear station.

That decision was later reversed and Commonwealth Edison received a license this fall to fire up the first of the plant's twin reactors.

Fuel has been loaded into that reactor, but a nuclear reaction has not been started. Irene Johnson, a spokeswoman for Commonwealth Edison, said the utility expects to begin that reaction in January and have the plant generating electricity

Commonwealth Edison's plans for Bryon were dealt a severe setback by the January licensing panel denial of an operating permit. The panel cited concerns over the qualifications of inspectors employed by construction contractors as the reason for its unprecedented ruling.

The appeals board later set aside that decision, saying the licensing panel should have waited until Edison completed its report on a reexamination of quality control inspections at the plant.

New hearings were held and the licensing panel in October decided to grant the utility a permit.

To conduct the test, a nuclear device would be placed inside a steel container at one end of a tunnel, officials said. The container would be attached to about 900 feet of steel pipe, 18 feet in diameter, leading to a steel test chamber 60 feet long and about the same diameter as the attached pipe.

Canadian utilities brighten American electric picture

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK Associated Press Writer

BEAUHARNOIS, Quebec — In the otherwise tranquil Chateauguay Valley southwest of Montreal, the St. Lawrence River drops 80 feet, crushing past 36 turbines at the rate of 1.3 million gallons per second.

The water's rough-and-tumble journey down the precipice pours millions of dollars into the provincial government's coffers and billions of kilowatts on to transmission lines destined for the United States.

"You can see the energy in the water," said Simon Pare, a commercial representative for Hydro-Quebec, the provincial utility. "It's clean. It's cheap. And it's safe.

The electricity at Beauharnois, equal to the output of two averagesized nuclear plants, is sent across the border and into the New York Power Authority system.

From this arrangement and several others with Canadian utilities, New York state now gets 17 percent of its electricity from Canada. And New York doesn't boast the only power surge.

From sea to shining sea - from British Columbia in the West to New Brunswick in the East — the export of excess Canadian electricity is brightening the U.S. energy picture, notwithstanding complaints from the American coal and nuclear Electricity imports from Canada have increased six-fold since 1970, according to Rayburn Hanzlik, administrator of the Department of Energy's Economic Regulatory Administration. Gross revenues in Canada have increased even more, 12 times since 1975.

Utilities in eight border states are importing more than $1.2 billion worth of electricity annually, accounting for about 10 percent of Uncle Sam's annual balance of payments deficit with Canada, according to the U.S. Commerce Department's foreign trade division.

the Canadians have too much generating capacity, brought on by a lower than anticipated growth rate.

Since most Canadian power is hydroelectric, it is among the cheapest in the world and not subject to volatile price fluctuation like those experienced in the mid-1970s when members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised their oil prices.

Residential customers consuming 1,000 kilowatt-hours a month pay $27 in Winnipeg and $31.10 in Montreal, while New York City residents pay about $149 for the same amount, Bostonians $109 and Philadelphians

It is no surprise, then, that U.S. utility executives, plagued with environmental, safety and financial concerns, have found it easier to buy from Canada than build their own coal-fired or nuclear generating sta-

The potential is almost limitless. Hydro-Quebec, which is completing ts massive 10,269-megawatt La Grande hydroelectric complex, has an additional 30,000 megawatts of untapped hydro potential, nearly the current peak need for all six New England states.

"There is plenty of untapped power, far beyond what can be dreamed of as our requirements and for the northeastern United States for quite a while," said Jacques Guevremont, Hydro-Quebec's vice president for external markets.

Hydro-Quebec will sell 33 billion kilowatt-hours to the 86-member New England Power Pool over the 11-year period beginning in 1986. That agreement played a key role in Vermont's withdrawal of support for the now-canceled Seabrook 2 nuclear plant.

But coal and nuclear industry officials in the United States are unhappy about the Canada sales, noting that the amount of power already imported could be supplied by 16 new coal-fired plants or seven large nuclear units.

We think it stinks. We are obviously very concerned about the negative aspects on the production of U.S. coal and coal miners' jobs," said Carl Bagge, president of the National Coal Association. "People remember what the black-eyed Arabs from OPEC did to us. Well, the blue-eyed Arabs in Canada are doing an even better job."

The nuclear share of exports figures to go even higher. From now to 1993, 45.8 percent of the generating capacity scheduled to come on line in Canada will be nuclear, according to the North American Electric Reliability Council.

"Everybody's trying to get in o the act," said Carl Goldstein, spokesman for the U.S. Committee for Energy Awareness, a pro-nuclear industry group. "It not only helps them get rid of the electricity economically, these export sales help them finance future nuclear projects.

The Canadians, of course, don't see it that way. "If they (the Americans) could build their plants on schedule and not over budget and with the type of quality that is required, then there'd be no problem." Pare said. "It's their own troubles. I don't see how we'd be able to save it by stepping aside.

Carl Walske, president of the Atomic Industrial Forum, acknowledged that the Canadian sales offered "a short-term payoff in ticularly upset with developments in terms of savings for both utilities and their customers. But it raises some long-term questions on whether or not the supplies will be going to honor our contracts. That is off-base," said Guevremont. "It's natural after the oil shock that some Americans are nervous. But the situation is different. We have a renewable energy source. We're good

Even the U.S. Energy Department has questioned the increased Canadian imports, especially when business is conducted on an "avoided cost" basis.

Under this procedure, the Canadians charge a percentage — usually 80 percent — of what it would cost American utilities to produce the electricity using oil and-or coal.

The American utilities shut off their oil-fired units, and avoid 20 percent of the cost, minus the expense of transporting the energy. An estimated 60 million barrels of oil a year is also saved.

The Energy Department's Hanzlik, however, said such contracts "hold the price of electricity somewhat hostage to what could be the wildly fluctuating costs of oil.'

"It looks like New England could have 20-25 percent of its power coming in from Canada," he said. "It's a policy question. Do we want to have a region of the country that dependent on a foreign country that dependent on a foreign country." dent on a foreign source of energy?

The Canadians resent the comparisons, subtle or not, to OPEC nations.

We're not talking about being held hostage to a large and unfriendly neighbor," said Mark Eliesen, chairman of the Manitoba Energy Authority.

Furthermore, if all the deals under discussion are consummated, the amount of electricity involved will total no more than 3 percent of U.S. consumption in the year 2000, Eliesen said. If we shut down exports not a single lightbulb will go out in the United States," said Arvo Niitenberg, Ontario Hydro's executive vice president for operations. "But what will happen is that both Canada and United States consumers will paye a higher price.

The Canadian utilities have been moving quickly to fix the transmission shortcoming. Hydro Quebec, fo example, is spending $240 million by 1986 to upgrade interconnections.

A device installed earlier this year at the Chateauguay substation near Beauharnois increased potential deliveries to New York from 1,320 megawatts to 2,320 mw.

But the New York lines can't handle-such a load south of Utica.

A proposed transmission line would bring additional Canadian electricity as far south as Fishkill, about 75 miles from New York City, and into Con Ed's metropolitan system. But environmentalists are opposed to construction of 183 miles of new lines through rural country-

Hydro-Quebec can cancel its contract if the line isn't built by Sept. 1, 1988. "We're not going to stand there with 2,300 megawatts and nowhere to go with it," said Guevremont. "If New York cannot take that electricity, we want to be free to sell

Indonesia's heavy traffic features mixture of eastern, western styles

By BARBARA CROSSETTE New York Times News Service

JAKARTA, Indonesia - Jakarta, capital of the world's fifth most populous nation, is a sprawling city of seven and a half million people, and some days it seems that all of them are out on the roads, riding in an assortment of vehicles.

There are the trucks of industry commerce, the chauffeur-driven cars of the rich and privileged, hundreds of rattletrap taxis and a fleet of doubledecker buses.

There are also some traditionally Asian, even uniquely Indonesian, varieties in the mix. There are opelets and bemos: low-powered, highrisk four-wheeled and three-wheeled vehicles with space for four to six passengers on benches in the back. And there are life-threatening motorized rickshaws for one or two riders

But the most distinctive of Jakarta's traditional modes of transportation, the becak, is apparently nearing the end of the road.

THE INDONESIAN BECAK (pronounced BEH-chak), a tricycle rickshaw, is pedaled from a driver's seat at the back of the vehicle, not the front, as is common in other Asian cities where pedal power has survived the rush to modernization.

The brightly decorated cycles, lurking in small flocks under shade trees near major intersections, their drivers often napping on the passenger seats, had already been barred from some of Jakarta's main thoroughfares, where they were deemed obstacles if not hazards in traffic.

INDONESIA'S 13,677 islands, scattered over thousands of square miles of equatorial seas, include some of the world's most exotic and dramatic places: Kalimantan, part of the island of Borneo; the island of Celebes, with its rituals of animal sacrifice; the Moluccas, or Spice Islands; West Irian, part of the vast, barely developed island of New Guinea; Bali, where Hinduism predominates, and Sumatra, where tigers and herds of wild elephants still threaten farms and villages.

But more than half of Indonesia's plates. 160 million people live on this over-populated, intensely cultivated island of Java, and they are not likely to get opportunities to visit their distant compatriots. So the government, as part of its effort to create national unity out of diversity, has built on the edge of Jakarta a large theme park that gives the country's 27 provinces and special territories a chance to show off their distinctive and often startling architecture - the boldly decorated wooden structures of Kalimantan or the looming, boat-shaped houses of southern Celebes, for example - as well as regional crafts and culture.

There is at least one block-long market for caged birds; it gives way after a while to a neighborhood of flower shops, then a row of tropical fish stalls. Reagan administration quietly improving Eastern European ties

By R. GREGORY NOKES AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration has been moving quietly over the past year to improve relations with some of Moscow's closest allies in Eastern Europe, taking advantage of new friction between the Kremlin and Warsaw Pact nations over economic and security issues.

The focus now is on expanding economic ties, but U.S. officials believe East Germany, Hungary and possibly Bulgaria also are interested in loosening Moscow's political grip and that Washington can subtly contribute to that effort.

"Although they are not indepen-dent of Moscow, they like to be treated as if they were," said a senior State Department official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. He said the administration has decided to "treat them as they want to be, as the best way of achieving that (independence)."

But he said the United States also has to "accept that there will be no big changes soon - only gradual

THE EFFORT HAS BEEN undertaken without fanfare, partly because too much public attention could embarrass Moscow and cause it to crack down on the East European countries. In part, the administration has been responding to signals from the East Europeans that they want better relations with the United States as part of an overall improvement in relations with the West. West Germany, which has been progressively building closer ties with East Germany, is encouraging the contacts.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, a chief proponent of the improved ties, may visit Eastern Europe early next year with probable stops in Hungary, Romania and Yugoslavia. His trip could be delayed, however, by his meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Ar

Gromyko in Geneva in January. But there have been an unusual number of diplomatic contacts, particularly with the East Germans. Shultz met at the United Nations in October with the East German foreign minister, Oskar Fischer, the first such high-level meeting in six

AN AMERICAN STATEMENT issued afterward said they "agreed on the need to establish an expanded framework for relations." The two countries also exchanged high-level officials in September at ceremonies marking the 10th anniversary observances of the establishment of diplomatic relations. And East Germany's ambassador, Gerhard Herder, attended both Democratic and Republican conventions.

Officials say economic necessity is driving East European nations to seek improved trade relations with the West. Moscow has increased the price of its oil for Eastern Europe to above the world price — following a long period of price subsidy. More than ever before, the East Europe-ans are looking to Western markets to earn badly needed dollars and other hard currency.

In October, the East German government signed an agreement with two Ohio firms to import and distribute German-made utility trucks, a move State Department officials said would have been unthinkable until recently. Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste said the agreement between plans for separate visits to West Germany by the leader of East Germany, Erich Honecker, and the leader of Bulgaria, Todor Khristov Zhivkov.

And, according to Josef Joffe, a senior associate at the Carnegie Endowment here, Washington also is wary of any dramatic rapprochement between the two Germanys that it could not control.

"Neither Germany can move too far out on the leash that ties them to their respective superpower," Joffe said recently. "The process of detente in Europe can never go far enough for fear of it going too far."

Officials say the Reagan administration also has to be sensitive to the feelings of East European emigre groups in the United States, which look to Washington to help lift the yoke of communism from their homelands.

A statement by President Reagan on Aug. 17 seemed partly intende to address emigre concerns, while providing encouragement to factions in East Europe that want to loosen ties to Moscow. Reagan said Americans "reject any interpetation of the (1945) Yalta agreement that suggests American consent for the division of Europe into spheres of influence" between East and West.

ONE SENIOR OFFICIAL said Reagan's anti-Communist credentials will make it easier for his administration to improve ties with the Communist governments, much as Richard Nixon was able to move toward normalized relations with gave in after initially resisting the deployment of new Soviet missiles installed after the deployment of American missiles in Western Europe. Bulgaria wasn't required to take any at all.

"Honecker publicly said the East German's regretted that they had to take Soviet missiles," Burt said. "It's no secret that they are unhappy with the so-called countermea-

But he added, "We recognize that each of the East European countries is different, and relations with each are improving at a different rate.'

The United States has relatively warm relations with Romania, a member of the Warsaw Pact, and Yugoslavia, which is not. But those countries have long been regarded as mavericks in the Communist world. East Germany has not.

ROMANIA WAS THE only Warsaw Pact country to participate in the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles in defiance of Moscow's boycott, although East Germany was known to have been angry at Moscow for pressuring it not to send

Only Albania, which is not a War-saw Pact member, and Czechoslovakia appear uninterested in improved ties with the West, officials say. Poland is a special case because of the Soviet-backed crackdown on dissent there, but Washington is holding out the prospect of improved relations if authorities retreat on the crackdown.

Washington is reluctant to move toward improved relations with Bulgaria because of suspicion that Bulgarian secret police were involved in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II in 1981.

Burt said that while "there is movement" in the U.S.-East German relationship, "major obstacles"

'They still are one of the most loyal clients of the Soviet Union," Burt said. "That said, we are prepared to have an economic relationship with them - trade in non-strategic goods. We are prepared to have a high-level dialogue to talk about global issues.

WHILE U.S.-EAST GERMAN trade is expanding in some areas, there won't be any dramatic increase in American purchases from East Germany unless the United States grants so-called Most Favored Nation tariff treatment. That won't be done without a significant improvement in human rights in East Germany, particularly toward freer emigration.

The only East European countries with MFN status are Hungary, Romania and Yugoslavia. MFN status for Poland was withdrawn following the imposition of martial law

Interest in foreign languages reviving in schools

By GENE I. MAEROFF

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK - Interest in foreign languages is reawakening in the nation's schools and colleges after an era of neglect, paving the way for what educators hope will be a breakthrough in resistance to learning a second language.

Responding to an outpouring of reports urging higher educational standards and to the growing demand in government and business for people who have foreign languages, colleges are reinstituting language requirements abandoned in the late 1960s. In turn, high schools are finding it easier to coax students into foreign language

"After 12 years of decline or stagnation, colleges and universities are reporting increased enrollments in languages other than English," the Modern Language Association concluded in a national study last

Officials welcome the change, but, even as it comes, questions are raised about the quality of instruction and whether there will be the resources and commitment to sustain the gains.

From 1980 to 1983 college enrollments increased 40.2 percent in Jap-anese, 26.7 percent in Russian, 15.9 percent in Chinese, 11.2 percent in Italian, 8.8 percent in French, and 1.8 percent in Spanish, the association reported.

Even Latin and Greek are reappearing after vanishing from some curriculums in the campaign for 'relevancy" that began in the mid-1960s. The Dallas schools sent a recruiter all the way to Massachusetts to persuade a teacher of Latin to move to Texas.

Today there is more elementary school Latin being taught in the United States than at any time in this century," said Rudolph Masciantonio, a Philadelphia school administrator whose idea of teaching Latin to inner-city children to aid lan-other cities. But the surge of language study is not without controversy. In some departments at the University of Pennsylvania, conversational techniques are being emphasized over the grammatical and literary skills that were once staples of foreign language instruction. And Siena College, near Albany, N.Y., says it can teach Russian in nine months because it is stressing conversation over writing. Advocates of these new approaches say students get quicker gratification; critics say there is a danger of superficiality.

ALSO, SOME foreign language departments have tried to keep enrollments up by giving literature courses in English translation, but critics say this caters to students' unwillingness to learn to read books

At the college level, initiatives by . professors and new twists by departments account for part of the new interest. Since 1980, on his own, Hubert C. Kueter at Colby College, in Maine, has been sending cassette recordings each summer to freshmen urging them to take German. The University of Puget Sound in Washington state has made courses more contemporary by giving up half the usual assignments from books and having students read foreign languages newspapers instead.

Harper's Bazaar calls Color 1 "ingenious"; Glamour calls it "revolutionary"; Family Circle says it's "Your Color Guide to Good Looks"; Architectural Digest calls it "intriguing"; Gentlemen's Quarterly says "color your world successful"; Cosmopolitan Living says "Live with colors that flatter COLOR 1 has over 500 consultants and is the most comprehensive personalized color service in the U.S. It is a self-enhancement concept through personal color use that is based on over 15 years of extensive research on the differences in human coloring. Using an individ-ual's natural coloring, Color 1's local, trained consultant J.J. Love creates a Personal Color Harmony chart in which all colors balance, blend and interchange with one another. Because it is based on a person's natural body colors, the chart is never outgrown and thus lasts a lifetime. Used to coordinate and select clothing, accessories, decor, hair color and makeup, it helps avoid costly mistakes, putting the client in charge of the color in his life. It makes the difference between looking good and looking great.

How does this work? Rather than labeling individuals by hair color (like blond, brunette and redhead), the Color 1 concept recognizes four basic color types with most people being one type or a combination of two types: Contrast: dark hair with ivory or olive skin; Muted: brown hair with red or bronze highlights or red hair and brown-beige or golden skin; Gentle: ash-blond, ash-brown hair with ivory or pink-beige skin; Light-Bright: golden-blond or golden-brown hair with golden skin. The client's skin, hair, eyes and lips are foundation for the chart. ALL colors in the spectrum exist on each (brightness/softness) ideal for that individual. Each COLOR 1 charting session is private and takes place only in natural daylight, since artificial lighting of any kind distorts the skin and hair tones. During the private consultation, J.J. Love teaches the client how to combine his or her best colors to the greatest advantage, as well as what patterns, fabrics, textures, jewelry, furs and makeup colors are best for him. Color 1 does not use prepackaged color charts because each individual is unique. J.J Love selects from over

Personal color charting is only the very beginning of what J.J. Love can offer her clients. As an image consultant, she sticks with her clients through a self enhancement program. Whether the client wants to establish the image of an executive or a secretary, J.J. can help. She begins by performing "closet surgery." By getting rid of all the outfits which are never worn anyway, a client can see what he or she already has to work with. Then, J. Venusians ponder fate of almost-bankrupt town

By DAVID HANNERS %

VENUS, Texas (AP) — Postmaster James Tipps leaned on the counter and pondered the question. "Why do we like living in Venus?"

he said, repeating the query. "It's hard to explain unless you live in it," Tipps, 53, said after a while. "We've seen stores close, businesses close...We can look at the city and see that it's crippled, even backward in a way. But it's ours."

What the 414 residents Venus residents have is a city that is near bankruptcy, a school district the state wants to close, a burned-out high school, no police department and only one city employee, little industry and little hope of attracting

Their rural way of life is threatened by an invasion of urban refutened by an invasion of urban refutened by an invasion of urban refutenced by a urban refu gees from Dallas and Fort Worth who have settled in dozens of trailer parks surrounding the 620-acre town of Venus.

These former city-dwellers may live in Venus — and their children may attend the town's schools — but most them earn and spend their paychecks in Dallas and Fort Worth.

THE 80-YEAR-OLD buildings that line the city square are vacant. But the post office stays busy, and long-time Venusians — as residents call themselves - still hang out at Martin's Service Station, chewing the fat and the Red Man.

They are determined that Venus will conquer its problems. They also intend to see to it that the Johnson county town - which sits along U.S. Highway 67 about 35 miles southwest of Dallas and 20 miles due south of Fort Worth - does not become another faceless bedroom community.

In 1898, the town's founding fathers named Venus after the Roman goddess of love and beauty, amateur historian David Shaw said, because "they wanted it to be the most beautiful city there was."

Venus was laid out in the middle of the rich cotton belt, and the favorable climate made for a good crop year after year.

"Venus used to be the world's capital of cotton. They used to produce more cotton here than anyplace in the world," said Shaw, a 29-year-old plumber and a fourth-generation lenus resident.

In its heyday before the Great Depression, Venus was a thriving center of commerce. The town had 3,000 residents and supported two newspapers, 12 passenger trains coming and going each day at two different depots, two banks, a hospital and six doctors, a college, four grocery stores, a fine hotel. The town even had a Chevrolet dealership and a movie theater.

THEN CAME the Depression. As the nation's banks faltered, President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered them closed to prevent a run.

Mayor James Flatt of Venus poses in his town's dying central business district recently. What the 414 residents of Venus have is a city near bankruptcy, a school district the state wants to close, a burned-out high school, no police department and only one city employee, little industry and little hope of attracting any.

"When Roosevelt declared the moratorium on banks, all the banks closed, both of the banks here were weak, so they never did open back said Jack Roten, 72, a retired history teacher who was reared in Venus but now lives in Dallas.

Without banks to help fund the town's businesses, Roten said, Venus slowly became a ghost town. By 1970, the newspapers had shut down, the trains didn't stop anymore, and the Chevy dealership, the movie theater, the college, the hospital and downtown buildings for the shoot-the hotel had closed their doors for-

World War II sealed the town's fate, Roten said. Cotton harvesting became more mechanized, needing fewer workers. And Venus residents took military plant jobs in Dallas, Fort Worth and in the Johnson County seat, Cleburne. Many of them never moved back.

The postwar highway boom didn't help. U.S. Highway 67 goes through town, but highway planners bypassed Venus in favor of nearby Alvarado when they plotted Interstate 35-W.

Roten, who still keeps cattle near Venus, often stops for coffee and doughnuts at the Save Way grocery. The store's brick building once housed a bank

WHEN I WAS a kid, that sidewalk out there was crowded with people just milling about, " Roten said. "If you wanted to get from one end of the block to the other, you had to get out in the street and go that way. The sidewalk was just too crowded.

Venus has experienced spurts of prosperity, mostly thanks to Hollywood. Part of "Bonnie and Clyde" was filmed there in the mid-60s, and this summer, film crews shot several scenes on the town square for "1918," the new film by Horton Foote, the writer of "Tender Mercies." The city didn't charge the production company to use town locations, but the film makers refurbished the exteriors of several ing. As a result, the buildings look new, but they're still empty.

A few residents still farm cotton, but not many. As Roten said, "We're now the trailer capital of the world.' The city's current money problems are nothing new. Longtime resident Leon Sanders said the city defaulted on bonds used to pay for paving the downtown square in the

The most recent fiscal problems came to a head Nov. 11, when the city discovered it had just $169 in its general fund, said Flatt, a 53-yearold LTV employee who has been mayor eight years.

In the previous 12 months, the city spent $46,000 on its police department, much of it on cars. From November 1983 until November 1984, the department wrecked or damaged four squad cars, Flatt said.

"I COULDN'T make them understand that they couldn't tear the cars up at the rate they were going," Flatt said.

Flatt-said the fiscal crisis forced aldermen to fire 20-year-old polie Chief Robert Mier — Venus' only law officer - because the town couldn't afford the chief's driving habits. To save money, Water Superintendent Terry Kyle also was laid off, leaving Venus with only one employee, secretary Marlene England.

Meir, a former Air Force military policeman, said he never caused any of the wrecks. He also said the city bought used police cars with lots of

The redfish taken to Lake Nasworthy are excess research fish raised at the Placios Marine Fisheries Research Laboratories, Carter said. They were hauled to San Angelo in brackish water almost

Then they were tempered, or acclimated, to Lake Nasworthy water by exchanging the brackish water with the lake water over about a four-hour period.

Roxie Roker plays the role of Helen Willis on CBS-TV's "The Jeffersons."

Acting was her prime desire

By Fred Robbins King Features Syndicate

Roker, the black and beautiful actress who has so winningly played Helen Willis for 1-1 seasons now on TV's "The Jeffersons," has two Caucasian husbands — one make-believe and one real—and she never planned to have even one.

"I was very much a part of the civil rights era," says the star, "so, of course, my fantasy was to marry some outstanding black gentleman, a leader — someone like Martin Luther King — who was doing something for black people."

Fate, however, wrote a quite different marital script for her, with a groom named Sy Kravitz, who was not only white but Jewish, a divorced man with two small daughters — and a very persistent suitor.

When, after a long friendship they became romantically involved, and he first proposed to her, he was rebuffed with: "You've got to be kidding." Undaunted, he continued repeatedly to ask until she finally said yes.

Now, 22 years and one grown son later, the long and happily married Mrs. Sy Kravitz, said "The other evening while I was closing up our apartment (thr building was recently sold)," Ms. Roker said, "I found a batch of old letters that Sy had written to me while I was working in plays out of town. At that time, he was proposing and I was turning him down. Re-reading those letters after so many years I discovered I had forgotten some things.

"Evidently, in my hesitation about marrying him, I had admitted being concerned about my loss of identity. Because in one of his letters he wrote: 'You will of course continue to be yourself, as I will continue to be myself. And we will come together and be the best of ourselves that we can be.' And that is how it has worked out."

IN THOSE earlier years, Mrs. Roker had eyes only for her career as an actress. While holding down a fulltime job at NBC in New York, first as a clerk-typist and later as a TV production assistant, she acted in off-off Broadway plays by night and spent every lunch hour dashing to auditions or voice lessons.

'Starman' humorous, romantic

By DAVID LEE FORREST

"2010" rockets off to Jupiter in search of celestial mystery and "Dune's" alien world collapses into a confused holy war, "Star-man" lightly touches down in our backyards.

"Starman" is a warm, humorous and romantic film about a friendly visitor from another planet; sort of an "E.T." for grown-ups (although kids should

The screenplay is inspired by the fact that the Voyager II unmanned space probe launched by the United States in 1977 carried a disc containing recorded music and greetings in a wide variety of earth languages to anyone — or anything — that might somehow run across it during it's immeasurably long voyage through space.

In "Starman," an advanced alien race does find the disc and, interpreting it as an invitation to drop by for a friendly visit, sends a representative to earth.

The Air Force attacks and damages the alien spacecraft during its descent, causing the ship to crash land in Wisconsin near the home of Jenny Hayden, played by Karen Allen

Jenny has been recently widowed and spends much of the time rather unhealthily watching home movies of her deceased husband, Scott, and paging through his old scrapbooks.

The visitor from another world emerges from his wrecked craft as an amorphous glowing ball, drifts into Jenny's home, alights on a lock of her late husband's hair in a scrapbook and, using the genetic information in a strand of hair, turns itself into an exact clone of Scott.

Like Klaatu in the classic 1957 science fiction film "The Day the Earth Stood Still," the Starman, played by Jeff Bridges, is soon hotly pursued by federal authori-ties. The head of the government agents considers the alien a threat to national security and is solely interested in dissecting Bridges takes off on a crosscountry trip to reach a spot in Arizona where he's supposed to be rescued in three days. He takes the understandably terrified Ms. Allen with him.

Bridges is nothing short of marvelous in "Starman." He convincingly gives the impression of someone trying to learn how to operate an unfamiliar body by combining the awkward gait of a small child with abrupt bird-like head movements.

This unlikely-sounding combination is also somehow strangely endearing. He simply looks like someone who really needs help.

Bridges also manages to deliver lines like someone who has never spoken English before and yet does an excellent job of mimicking other persons' speech patterns and facial expressions.

The screenplay helps considerably by giving him some good material to work with. This innocent stranger in a strange land makes such unexpected inquiries as "Define 'love,'" "Define 'bozo,'" and "Can anyone have babies?"

He also has some hysterically funny scenes. After almost killing himself and Ms. Allen by speeding through a stoplight, Bridges explains in a deadpan voice, "I know the rules. I watched you very carefully; green means go, red means stop and yellow means speed up.

Even though he has to work within the tight restrictions of someone who is not supposed to know human emotions. Bridges conveys considerable warmth through his quirky character.

Ms. Allen is equally likable as his at-first-unwilling companion. She gradually grows to love the Starman, who reminds her so much of her late husband but is also utterly unlike Scott - or anyone else for that matter.

She makes her journey from fear to friendship so believably that it more than makes up for her embarrassing role in this summer's poor excuse for a romantic drama, "Until Septem-

Actually, the humor and good-nature of this film is somewhat surprising in light of the fact that it was directed by John Carpen-ter, best-known as a horror film director. In such movies as "Halloween," "The Fog" and the stylish but very gross remake of "The Thing," Carpenter's sole goal was to scare the living daylights out of his audience, which he did quite well.

He has often displayed a sense of humor - even though "Christine," for example, was about a demonically-possessed killer car, it was still often very funny but one would have hardly expected Carpenter could have the delightfully light touch he shows in "Starman

It may not have the "sturm und drang" of the other current science fiction films, but "Starman" possesses many times more heart and soul.

"Starman," rated PG, for some adult situations, strong language and violence, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

Hearst News Service

HOLLYWOOD - James Darren, who plays officer Jim Corrigan on ABC-TV's "T.J. Hooker" series, is proud to wear the uniform of a cop. He's gone along on police calls -"ride-alongs" with friends on the force - in New Jersey, Philadelphia and Los Angeles, discovering firsthand what's going on in the streets.

"The police put their lives on the line every day," says Darren. "I only hope that people appreciate what the police do."

While filming a forthcoming epi-sode, "A Kind of Rage," Darren became a real-life victim. In the show, his character is working undercover as a "derelict" in an attempt to catch a "drunk-roller" who's been mugging people on skid "The cameras were hidden in a doorway and up on a roof across the street so no one could see them, explains Darren. The scene called for the drunk-roller to come up, take money from Darren's pocket and leave. Darren slid down the wall with his bottle of cheap wine, according to the script.

"I'm lying there making believe I'm drunk and I feel this guy come into my pocket and take the money. As it's going on I'm saying to myself, Why didn't they tell me they were going to take the scene this far? I was only supposed to slide down the wall and that was it.' So I look up and see a guy who I know was not hired for the role. I jumped up and chased him until I caught him. He was a real drunk-roller! They got the whole thing on film." The episode is one of Darren's favorites.

Corrigan also gets a head injury and develops a syndrome where he suddenly turns violent for short existence," says Darren.

"It took me into an area where I'd never been. I'd never played anyone who was mentally disturbed, especially violent.'

Darren has taken his acting very seriously since childhood.

"I always made characters out of dummies I made to play with and made up stories for them. I played with changing my features with wadded up toilet paper and water, building different noses and cheeks for myself." Darren would change his appearance and knock on neighbor's doors "to see if I could convince people I was someone else.

In school, he faked heart attacks. "If I could convince the nuns, they'd let me go home," he says laughing.

He has remained close to his Philadelphia beginnings, and three years ago bought a home there "to cement my roots," although he spends only six weeks a year there.

"I've had a tremendous amount of support from my hometown. It's even shown up on the ratings for T.J. Hooker.'

His childhood memories extend to he Boys Clubs. He recently gave the Hollywood Boys Club a pool table that had once belonged to Fred

"It's worth a lot of money, but it gave me pleasure to give something back to them, to see kids playing the way I once played."

Darren believes helping young people is one of the most important things in life. "I'm happiest when I see a kid succeed at something.' He's proud of his two sons and hates leaving his family to do singing

"Touring is a very sterile kind of

'Dune' long, confusing film

"Dune" is visually stunning. but is also overwrought, overlong and often overly grotesque.

Dune" is based on Frank Her bert's 1965 science fiction novel of the same title. Herbert's complex book was very much a child of its time; among its themes were the importance of understanding ecology and the idea of "expanding consciousness" by consuming a hallucinogenic

Interestingly, Herbert's plot was largely inspired by the story of Mohammed, who founded Islam in the Arabian desert.

"Dune" is set in the distant future on the desert planet Arrakis, the only place in the universe where the spice "melange" can be found. Since melange prolongs life, bestows psychic powers and makes space navigation possible, it's the most precious substance in existence.

The political system of this universe is a depressingly medieval one. An emperor rules over aristocratic dukes and barons, who themselves all control various planets. To complicate this messy system, an independent guild has a total monopoly on space travel, which makes it perhaps even more powerful in the long run than the emperor. The emperor, played by Jose Ferrer, decides to play two powerful aristocrats, Duke Atriedes and Baron Harkonnen, against each other, using Arrakis as a

Duke Atreides, played by Jurgen Prochnow, is given control of Arrakis, loses it in a vicious attack by the combined forces of the evil baron and the emperor, and his son, Paul, and wife, Jessica, flee to the hostile desert

Paul, played by Kyle MacLach-lan, is soon heralded by the planet's nomadic natives/ as a long-awaited messiah and begins planning his revenge on the baron and emperor.

Originally, director David Lynch was going to split Herbert's convoluted plot into two separate films, which might have, made the story much more manageable, but he decided against

The result is a rather long, often confusing movie. Lynch makes very frequent use of voiceovers to try to explain what's happening on the screen. In fact, there is so much narration that at times "Dune" almost feels like a documentary instead of a science,

Even though Lynch telescopes the storyline considerably and manages to cover a great deal of ground, the movie still seems strangely turgid and leaden.

MacLachlan shows too little charisma to make much of a messiah. This is a shame since the most important part of "Dune's" plot focuses on a Third World people in control of a vital natural resource, who decide to wage a holy war. The parallels with the problems in the Middle East are unmistakable.

Sting, the lead singer of the rock group the Police, also has a much-publicized role as a villain in "Dune," but, like many of the film's actors, he actually doesn't do much outside of one slightly overwrought scene.

While its acting is forgettable, on a visual level "Dune" is simply outstanding. Lynch obviously tried to put his film's impressively large $42 million budget to good use.

Herbert's novel was one of the many sources of inspiration for George Lucas' "Star Wars" (Luke Skywalker's arid home world of Tatooine was among "Star Wars" most obvious references to "Dune"), but Lynch strived and succeeded — in making "Dune" look absolutely unlike any other recent science fiction

Lynch is known for the his strange visual style. His previous two feature films are the revolting "Eraserhead" and interesting 'Elephant Man.'

His settings in "Dune" have a bizarre, heavily textured, neo-Victorian look that Jules Verne probably would admire. Lynch also throws in quasi-medieval touches that seem marvelously appropriate for the society Her-

The special effects are designed more for visual stylishness than for realism, which makes them strangely unsettling, but they are executed on such an epic scale that their overall impact is nothing short of spec-

However, Lynch's taste for the excessive creates one of the film's biggest problems. Despite the fact that "Dune" is only rated PG-13, it has a few extremely grotesque scenes.

The audience is forced to look at boils being lanced, persons being disfigured and some exceptionally sickening vampirism. These are shown in the graphic detail normally found only in the lowest order of "mad slasher"

While this material makes up a fairly small proportion of the film - always involving the horrid baron (played by Kenneth McMillan) - it's enough to make it advisable for impressionable children or persons with weak stomachs to avoid "Dune. While "Dune" is dazzling to look at and touches on some fascinating ideas, its lack of restraint makes it fall far short of its ambitious goals.

bert envisioned. Selleck goes after 'Runaway' robots

The killer robots of "Runaway" are not the menacing metal monsters that we've grown used to seeing in old science fiction movies from the 1950s, instead, they're small home appliances that have just been led astray.

The film is set in the very near future where small, utilitarian robots are found in most homes, factories and construction sites. They're not at all human-like most look a bit like large vacuum cleaners — and they're just smart enough to do a job if they're correctly programmed to it. They're not as exciting as R2D2, but they're much more realistic.

The villain leading these machines off the cybernetic straight and narrow path is an evil electronic genius named Luther, played by Gene Simmons of the rock group KISS without his makeup on. Luther is substituting special microchips into household robots that program them to kill humans, which, since they just do what they're told to, they do as efficiently as cleaning the rug.

Just exactly why Luther is doing this — like a whole lot of other things in "Runaway" — is never exactly explained, but regardless of the reason, someone has to stop him. Enter Tom Selleck, better known to television viewers as 'Magnum PI." He is a police sargeant who works for a special unit known as the Runaway Squad, which is in charge of disconnecting malfunctioning robots that might endanger the public, or "runaways."

While runaways are a fact of life in the era Selleck lives in, he's bright enough to realize that something's wrong when the helpful little mechanical housemates start carving up their owners with kitchen knives or blowing them away with .357 Magnums.

He and his partner, the inevitable attractive female rookie cop, played by Cynthia Rhodes, go after the bad guy. If all this sounds a bit simplis-tic, that's because it is, but this action film is fast-paced, often amusing and full of techno-flashi-

Selleck and Ms. Rhodes both turn in adequate performances. Selleck's acting is far from Oscar quality, but it has definitely improved since his first feature film appearence in the dismally flat "High Road to China" (dubbed "Low Road to Boredom" by some critics).

Simmons' role primarily requires him to just look very mean a lot, something he does quite well, probably because his years in the famous heavy-metal band have given him more than enough practice in looking threa-

For example, among the weapons Luther uses is a guided missile bullet. This has little to do with the plot but the bullets provide an excuse for some of the best tracking shots (a film sequence in which a highly mobile camera follows along after the action) seen since Stanley Kubrick's 1980 film "The Shining" in which a camera followed a child on a tricycle through the halls of a haunted

Michael Crichton, the writer-director responsible for the bril-liant "Andromeda Strain," the interesting "Terminal Man" and the very dumb "Looker," can take credit for "Runaway's" hightech style.

"Runaway" is certainly not an intelligent film, but it does have a certain mindless verve that many Selleck fans may find enjoyable.

"Runaway," rated PG-13 for considerable violence, some strong language and very brief nudity, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

'Falling in Love,' unlike real life, is too tidy

"Falling in Love," starring Meryl Streep and Robert De Niro, is a basically good film that suf-fers from the unusual sin of sim-

Ms. Streep plays a wealthy doctor's wife living in the suburbs of New York City. De Niro's character is a successful builder who also lives in the suburbs (but works in the city) with a wife and two young sons.

The pair meet when they col-lide in a bookstore and then keep running into each other riding a commuter train to and from the

They find out that they are neighbors and have a great deal in common. As time passes, they slowly and tentatively fall in love, just like the title promises.

The film's early scenes very neatly show how their lives parallel and how much alike they really are. Without them realizing it at first, they ride the same trains, stroll down the same streets, shop at the same stores and even have the same conversations with their very similar

This is all so slickly shown that, at first, it seems quite clever. As the film wears on and the plot keeps on being so tidily packaged, however, it begins to become vaguely annoying.

Undoubtedly, the film makers' intention in making everything converge so well was to make Ms. Streep's and De Niro's affair seem inevitable, but the net effect is to make it almost seem contrived instead.

Despite "Falling in Love's" pre-programmed feel, the two lead performers do manage to project some genuine emotion.

De Niro delivers a quietly straightforward performance as an ordinary guy who gradually finds himself in an emotional situation beyond his control.

Ms. Streep, an actress with an amazing range, has seldom used the same acting style in any two of her films. It would be hard to imagine two performances as dif-ferent — although both were wonderful — as the ones she gave in "Sophie's Choice" and "Silk-

In "Falling in Love," she adopts the nervous mannerisms and hesitant way of speaking that one normally associates with Diane Keaton. At times, one almost expects Ms. Streep to say, "la de da." Although, the resemblance is certainly a bit odd, Ms. Streep makes it seem quite appropriate for her character.

The film has a nicely bitter-sweet tone, but there's no fire in the characters' relationships, just a hazy affluent angst that hangs In the end, "Falling in Love's" lack of spontaneity is the biggest obstacle to falling in love with the movie; the film makers' for-got that real life just isn't tidy. "Falling in Love," rated PG-13 for adult situations and some strong language, is now showing at the Midland Park Mall

James Coco again playing Santa Claus on cable TV

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD - There was a time when to James Coco the ques-tion of weight was academic. "People would say, 'Hey, how much do you weigh?' "Coco says. "And I'd say, 'I don't know and for a very good reason - I never get on the

And here's an actor who knew a lot of lean years. He wrote a best seller, "The James Coco Diet Book." And now he's working on his second book, "Cooking With Coco."

And somehow all of this connects with his title role in "The Curious Case of Santa Claus," a holiday special for cable TV. Coco's Santa is not,

"In my starving actor days," Jimmy says. "I played Santa at the big stores in New York - at Macy's, at Gimbel's. I'd do my 'Ho, ho, ho' and come out of the chimney. The children loved me. I never thought I was quite OLD enough to be a Santa. Now, I am old enough but I'm no

Coco says that he's still getting fan letters for "Calucci's Dept." This was a CBS series that ran in the summer of '73. In it Coco played Calucci, the beleaguered supervisor of a paperwork-laden, red tape-bound state unemployment office

"People write in," Coco says, "and they say, 'Hey, whatever happened with you and Shirley?' They refer to characters on the show, you see. It was the kind of show that people care about and remember." And Coco remembered that it was the first series offered to him that wasn't a rehash of his previous star-ring role on Broadway in Neil Simon's "Last of the Red Hot

"That series was what you call real," he said. "I know because I knew what it was like from the other end in an unemployment office. What actor doesn't know?"

"Best job the unemployment office ever got me was at Gimbel's as

year and we all lived in the same apartment building. It was quite a sight when all of us, dressed up as Santa, went to work in the morning, on the same bus.

"I'm sure we disillusioned a lot of little kids. Still, it was the best nonacting job I ever had...'

Coco played in 13 or 14 flops on the stage. But he did find success in an off-Broadway play called "Next." Neil Simon saw it and went backstage. Coco remembers: "Doc Simon told me that night he just might write a play for me to star in. It turned out to be 'Last of the Red Hot

Linda Lavin's first husband? I think he had a TV show — in which he played a lawyer. Mary T. Laigare

A. His name is Ron Leibman and the show in question was called "Kaz;" Leibman also had a prominent part in the film "Norma Rae" and is in the current "Phar Lap." The two met while acting together in 1969 in a Q. I'm fascinated by Michael Douglas. I'd like to know where he lives, if he's married, if he has kids, what year he filmed "Streets of San Francisco" and what he will be filming next.

Modesto, Calif.

A. He just moved to New York, but he maintains an office in L.A. so he's relatively bicoastal like a lot of his colleagues. He's married to the former Diandra Luker, whom he "saw across a crowded room," as he explains it, at Jimmy Carter's inauguration in 1976; they have a son, Cameron, 6.

He shot "Streets of San Francisco" from 1972 to 1977, but during that period, he also became a producer. His first, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," won the Oscar for best picture. His next, "The China Syndrome," was a success, and this year's "Romancing the Stone" was a smash.

Next filming plans are the sequel to "Stone," again co-starring Kathleen Turner; and "A Chorus Line" currently before the cameras, in which he plays the director, Zack.

Q. I think "St. Elsewhere" is the best show on TV and Mark Harmon is wonderful. Can you tell me about him and what other acting he's done?

Lisa Parks Kahului, Hawaii. A. He's 32, a former football star at U.C.L.A. and the son of football star-turned-sportscaster Tom Harmon and his wife, actress Elyse Knox. He majored in premed at U.C.L.A. and could have gone to medical school or turned pro in football after college. However, after making his

Q. I love George Burns and was wondering if he and Gracie had any children. If so, what are their ages and what are they doing now?

Las Vegas, Nev. A. They adopted two children, Sondra and Ronnie, both of whom made appearances, Sondra's less frequently, on their TV show. Sondra, now 50, teaches school in San Diego; Ronnie, 49, has had a boat-construction business in California. His father apparently tried to get him to study acting in New York and remain in show business, but the younger Burns had more leisureoriented plans.

Q. I think Kirstie Alley is absolutely beautiful. How old is she and what are her plans?

Regarding marriage: His first marriage ended in 1971, and he's now married to an English actress named Lynn.

From childhood, her ambition had been to act on the stage, and this dream was encouraged by her parents who, like their only child, were achievers.

Mrs. Roker was 5 when the family moved from Miami, where she was born, to New York. Two reasons prompted the change of scene better educational opportunities for Roxie and, hopefully, a better life for them all.

Her mother, Bessie, who is from Georgia, quickly found well-paying domestic work with an affluent family. And Albert Roker, her Bahamasborn father, while working as a porter in an apartment house, took correspondence courses and soon became the head shipping clerk for a medical-supply firm.

The Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn where they lived was and is a ghetto, but the Rokers did not let their surroundings hold them back. Roxie did well in school, appeared in children's plays, recited little pieces in church and, to the disapproval of certain neighbors, had music and dancing lessons.

A highlight of Roxie's childhood occurred in 1942 when her father took her to Broadway to see Todd Duncan in "Porgy and Bess" and the incomparable Paul Robeson in "Oth-

Seeing black actors on a stage for the first time solidified her desire to be an actress. "Already," she says, "I had the motivation and urge, but hadn't seen it all so grand. Now I knew it wasn't all in my head. It was really possible to get from here to there. And I was determined to get

HER THEATER work at Howard was so outstanding that, upon graduation, she was awarded a six-week scholarship to study Elizabethan drama at the Shakespeare Institute in Stratford-on-Avon in England.

Back in New York in 1957 and unable to find a theatrical job, 22year-old Roxie Roker went to work at NBC — and remained there, in ever better positions, for 12 years.

She stayed on at the television network even after making a reputation for herself as an actress in the off Broadway production of "The Blacks," in which she replaced Maya Angelou (Make) as Queen.

Ms. Roker's one-man cheering squad through all those years, before and after marriage, was Kra-

At first," she says, "we were just friends at the office, then we were buddies after discovering we had such mutual interests as theater and jazz, and finally, he was coming to see me in plays and it just sort of evolved into a romance. After they decided to marry ("and I must say he had fewer qualms than I about that"), Ms. Roker and Kravitz found their fathers more accepting of the situation than their mothers. Sy's father, after we met, was quite open to me. As for my father, we did it the old-fashioned way. Sy had to go to my dad and say, 'I want to marry your daughter.

Afterwards, she reports her father said: "It is very obvious to me that he's white; everybody can see that. What I would like to talk to this young man about is the fact that he has been in a marriage before. And if that marriage failed, why does he think this one will survive? I'm more interested in him as a human being than I am in his color.

HOWEVER, BOTH mothers his and hers - were (Ms. Roker chooses the word carefully) reserved.

Asked'what changes had transpired over the years, Ms. Roker said, "My father-in-law is now deceased, but my mother-in-law lives in California now, near us, and we are so close. I'm like a daughter to her. And both my stepdaughters are very close to me. So we have become a family - a close, loving family.

Of her son Leonard, Ms. Roker says, "I adore him and I love being a mother. I've not been too permissive as a parent, I would think, but more understanding and very loving. Leonard's interested in a career as a musician and is writing music. He also recently turned 20, and he really should stop telling his age

Has being an interracial child made him more politically aware than many other young people his

'I don't know if politically, but socially aware, yes," his mother answers. "He has a lot of hip friends and many of them are also products of interracial marriages. I've seen all kinds of combinations come through our house - Mexician-and-Japanese, Caucasian-and-Japanese, and Caucasian-and-black, of course. You find numerous people in interracial marriages. They are not as rare as people try to believe. And it's not an uncomfortable situation. For five more years after Leonard's birth, Ms. Roker continued to But the astonishing thing is that no sooner did she commit herself to a fulltime acting career than many doors opened to her. Joining New York's prestigious

Negro Ensemble Company in 1970, she was soon cast in the group's production of Joseph A. Walker's prize-winning play, "The River Niger." In it, she played a strong, quiet wife and mother caught in racial and familial conflicts, and slowly dying of cancer. Her powerhouse performance won her off-Broadway's Obie moved to Broadway, a Tony nomina-

In the strangely circular way that show business often works, at a future date Cover would be playing a wealthy publisher named Tom Willis on "The Jeffersons." His wife in the series, his very chic wife, would be Ms. Roker — and they would make history as television's first interracial couple.

SURELY BECAUSE of her firsthand knowledge, Ms. Roker and her TV husband were able to achieve, from episode one, a certain sensitivity about the situation as well as an absolute lack of self-consciousness.

"Franklin and I talked about it when we first met," she reports, "and we said, 'Let's not play a couple who are sort of walking on eggs around each other, because, according to the storyline, we've been married some 20-odd years. So we will be

Abandoned houses hold fascination for young girls

By SARAH OVERSTREET King Features Syndicate

Most of us remember seldom-seen relatives at Christmas, when we fill out the cards that keep us in semi-touch with those who have moved out of our orbit. I think of my cousin Billie Jo at Halloween. I don't send a card, but I think of her wistfully. She still lives in the tiny Kansas town where she always has, and where the two of us spent probably the happiest summers we'll ever know. A lot of people said the town is dying, because half the houses have lost their occupants to bigger cities offering jobs.

But to two little girls with Nancy Drew complexes, the town was alive with endless possibilities the adults in our lives were just too blind to see.

Every Halloween, I wonder if the town's spooky old homes hold any of the fascination for Billie Jo today that they did when we were kids, and if she ever thinks of the two of us as she passes them on her way to and from her work in a larger town. If there ever was a town made for ghost stories, it was this one. The entire block-long business district, except for a pool hall/tavern, a liquor store and a gas station, has been a row of empty buildings since the

In the 1960s when Billie Jo and I were growing up, most of the 150 or so residents lived in a central core of town. There were several large, abandoned houses on

At the turn of the century, the town had served as the hub of a farming community, and the railroad depot and livery stables did a land-office business. The town's well-to-do merchants built two- and three-story Victorian homes on the outskirts of town in all direct-

As the city eight miles to the south began to grow and this one diminished, it was these houses which were abandoned first.

Billie Jo and I didn't care why the old houses were left to decay; we were just delighted that they were. For several summers when my family and I would visit her family, Billie Jo and I would play Nancy Drew in the old houses and take long walks by the cemetery at dusk, telling our own ghost stories.

I thought it was the most intriguing place I had ever been, because the entire town was a kid's playground. The best house Bille Jo and I found for visiting and playing in one summer was a rambling two-story structure on a three-acre lot at the southwest corner of town. Local kids had rambled through the house for at least two decades, so most of the wallpaper was stripped off the walls and the inside was pretty much a mess. By throwing stones down the dark basement steps, we ascertained that it was at least partially filled with water.

There was no furniture left except a kitchen table and a trunk in a second-floor bedroom. Exploring kids had obviously decided the trunk's contents were of such little value as to hold no interest - except to Billie Jo and me.

The house's last occupant had been a grade-school teacher, the last surviving daughter of a local merchant. The trunk was full of school papers from students she taught until she retired; a calendar was torn off to a date in 1947.

The summer we were 12 and 13, Billie Jo and I went through the old papers on several occasions, fascinated with schoolwork done before we were born, but which looked just like assignments we were doing in

One afternoon as we were walking to the house to plunder the upstairs bedroom, we heard what we thought to be a distinct, but unintelligible, voice coming from the trunk room.

We stopped dead in our tracks for a moment, then hurried into the house to investigate. As we started up the stairs toward the trunk room - armed with knowledge garnered from a recent reading of "Ten True Ghost Stories" — we thought we felt a very cold presence on the staircase.

Excitedly, we backed down the stairs and compared notes on just what we thought we'd heard, what we felt, where we were standing and how cold we thought the temperature was on our arms. If we were finally dealing with an actual ghost, we reasoned, we were wasting our time going in the daytime. We'd have to come back at night. Anybody who knew anything about ghosts would know that.

We gathered two flashlights from Bille Jo's house and fidgeted through supper. At dusk, we told our mothers we were going to visit friends, and walked the seven blocks to the house. We planned to arrive at the house while it was still light, and wait near the bottom of the staircase with our flashlights as dark descended upon the rooms. We walked past the pump in the backyard and crossed the threshold to push back the screen door of the kitchen, when we heard footsteps pounding the wooden steps from the kitchen to the basement. We didn't waste a movement. We stared straight into each other's terror-stricken eyes and started running, as fast as we could, across the weed-filled yard and into

We didn't run the full seven blocks; we figured we were safe after about three. We didn't take the long way home past the cemetery. We went straight to Billie Jo's room to compare notes on just exactly what kind of footsteps we'd heard bolting down those steps.

When we had plotted our escapade, all we'd been able to imagine was confronting some sort of ghostly form which we'd shine our flashlights through and be able to tell all our friends about. We weren't prepared to hear actual feet thumping down stairs.

The play focuses on two young teachers whose lives are ruined by a monstrous child's lies.

In the lead roles of the two teachers are Dana Ritter, playing the caring, considerate Karen Wright; and Jeanie Summer portraying the with-drawn, yet troubled Martha Dobie. The role of the cunning, malevolent child Mary Tilford is played by Jennifer Richardson. The local wealthy matriarch, Amelia Tilford, is portrayed by Frances Heltzel. The local doctor and friend of the school, Joe Cardin, is portrayed by Buster Tie-

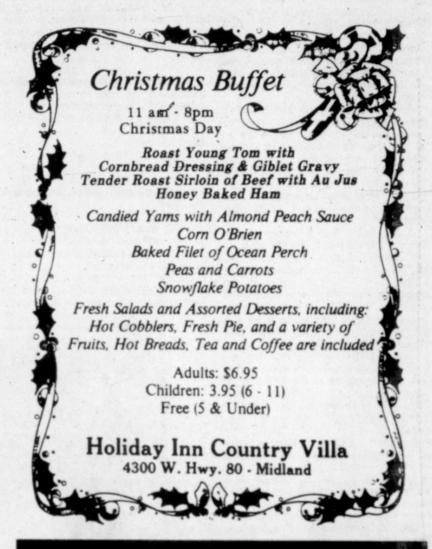

Other supporting roles in the cast include Marissa Wallace and Michelle Furlow as Mary's friends and compatriots with Carla Collinsworth portraying Rosalie Wells, the shy, contrite student Mary uses to her own means. Madie Prather plays the flighty tiresome Lillie Mortar, Martha's aunt and longtime "thornin-the-side." In the role of Agatha, maid and companion to Amelia Til-ford, Ruth Richardson portrays young Mary's menace. Additional cast members include Sasha Summers, Jennifer Tidwell, Rhinda Woods, Nancy Richardson and Neil Collinsworth.

The play will be directed by Coy Sharp with scenic and technical design by William R. Matt. Volun-teers will be directed by Gary Lipscomb, stage manager, with Di Ann Handy and Margaret Young working costumers. Barbara Whitehead will be in charge of lights and props.

Hero sandwiches anything one wants

By PHILOMENA CORRADENO

When Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote, in 1850, "Every hero becomes a bore at last," he didn't mean the hero we know, the sandwich which has probably displaced the Dagwood in appeal. There are so many possibi-lities in our hero it could never become a bore. And Gerald White Johnson, in writing about heroes and hero worship said, "Heroes are created by popular demand, sometimes out of the scantiest materials." He never meant our hero either. Yes, hero sandwiches are created by popular demand but never out of scanty materials.

We're pretty sure the hero was an Italian-American creation. As far back as we could trace its origin, the sandwich started with a loaf of round or long Italian or French bread filled with delicatessen meats that were then topped with Italian appetizers and condiments.

Our family is convinced that my father and his partner invented the hero in 1912. Because of the pressure of their grocery business on Saturdays — that's when the family food shopping was done — they couldn't get home for dinner.

So they would split a loaf of French bread, spread it with mustard and fill it with cold cuts and condiments. One of their favorite combinations was boiled ham, Swiss cheese, sliced hard-cooked egg and sweet or sour pickles sliced length-

Eventually, they began making monumental sandwiches for the garment, fur and construction workers in the area. Their heros had a most important ingredient — customer creativity. Sandwiches were custommade and anything a customer wanted went into the sandwich. And there were some pretty weird com-

A big seller was a whole can of tuna with sliced tomato, with or without sliced onion. This was either sprinkled with fresh lemon juice or topped with pickled peppers. In another, the bread was sprinkled with oil, spread with sliced mozzarella or other semi-soft cheese and anchovies, topped with tomato and dried basil or oregano. Condiments include roasted red and green peppers, condite (an olive salad with capers) and giardiniera (a vinegary mix of crisp chunks of cauliflower, turnips, carrots, celery, cucumber, fennel, olives and pep-

Another topper is Tuscan peppers or pepperoncini. These are imported little hot green peppers, 1½ to 2½ inches long, packed in vinegar and water with stems intact (you pull out the stem to enjoy these spicy pep-pers). There were also pepper salads. Like all foods, the hero has under-

People head for Bethlehem for postmark

BETHLEHEM, Ga. (AP) — A woman who drove nearly 140 miles to mail her 650 Christmas cards is among hundreds of people who head for this 100-year-old town every December just to get that Bethlehem postmark, postal officials

The woman from Spartanburg, S.C., comes every year, said Dru Evans, postmaster in Bethlehem, about 40 miles east of Atlanta. The town is named for the Bethlehem Methodist Campground nearby.

Let's get on to some examples of the hero.

The Conquering Hero might have a corny name but during the holidays it is an ideal lunch or supper sandwich, combining meat, cheese and vegetables on hearty bread.

CONQUERING HERO

2 cup mayonnaise teaspoon onion powder teaspoon oregano leaves, crumbled 1/16 teaspoon black pepper 1 individual hero breads, warmed pound sliced cooked ham pound sliced hard salami pound sliced provolone cheese medium tomatoes, sliced Tuscan peppers, halved (7-ounce) jar roasted peppers,

Combine mayonnaise, onion powder, oregano and black pepper. Cut breads lengthwise; spread both sides with mayonnaise mixture. On bottom half of each loaf arrange 2 slices ham, 3 slices salami, 2 slices cheese, 2 slices tomato, 4 Tuscan pepper halves and a layer of red peppers. Cover with top loaves. Serve immed-

Antipasto Hero is the creation of chef-restaurateur George Lang who is also known as a "food prophet," having predicted the popularity of pasta salads, Tex-Mex food and fruit for dessert. In his sandwich he makes generous use of a variety of delicatessen meats in a substantial hero that would satisfy a hearty appetite or two less hungry persons.

LANG'S ANTIPASTO HERO 1 hero roll, 6 to 8 inches long Lang's Herb Dressing

4 very thin slices boiled ham 3 (1/4-inch thick) slices Genoa salami 2 slices mortadella 34 ounce pepperoni 3 (1/16-inch thick) slices provolone

Reading crucial to leading life which is productive

By JOHN W. DEATS

As the year draws to a close, we might be wise to consider making a new year's resolution to cultivate one of life's simplest but greatest pleasures, that of reading. Perhaps no other activity is so crucial to living a more prod-bibliophiles, and the pursuit of reading is Gerald and Elizabeth Donaldson's BOOKS. Published in 1981, this book would make an excellent gift for anyone who takes their reading seriously. All of the quotations which follow

Ralph Waldo Emerson's three rules of reading were "Never read any book that is not a year old. Never read any but famed books. Never read any but what you like, or in Shakespeare's phrase, 'No profit goes where is

We might wish to apply the second rule to contemporary best sellers, or we compel ourselves to wade through legions of cook books, diet books, romance novels, and popular psychology tracts which fill the bookstores. Students might be wary of studiously following Emerson's third rule, or risk failing half of their courses. But the above quotation from Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" may contain useful advise to parents who would instill good reading habits in their children. Provide them books on subjects of interest to them, so that they can take pleasure in their reading, and profit from the experience.

Another point of view was held by the Greek biographer, Plutarch, who stated, "We ought to regard books as we do sweetmeats, not wholly to aim at the pleasantest, but chiefly to repect the wholesomest, not forbidding observation which is perhaps true even today. "Readers may be divided into four classes: sponges, who absorb all they read and return it nearly in the same state, only a little dirtied; sand glasses, who retain nothing and are content to get through a book for the sake of getting through the time; strain bags, who retain merely the dregs of what they read, and enable others to profit by it also.'

Many pithy and humorous statements have been made about reading, writing and related delights. For instance, author Red Smith's wry comment, "There's nothing to writing. All you do is sit down at a typewriter and open a vein." A Spanish proverb observes, "Books are hindrances to persisting stupidity." Then there is the somewhat enigmatic Chinese proverb, "He who has books is happy; he who does not need any is happier.

There is always the problem of priorities, as noted by the great Dutch scholar of the Renaissance, Desidirius Erasmus. "When I get a little money, I buy books; and if any is left, I buy food and clothes." Unfortunately, not everyone's priorities are so inclined, as bemoaned by Elbert Hubbard in the nineteenth century. "This will never be a civilized country until we expend more money for books than we do for chewing gum.

Reading is fundamental to greater understanding of our world and of ourselves, of the physical universe and of the realm of ideas. We read both to partake of reality and to imagine alterntives, to prove into the past, explore the present, and to project into the future. A Review

Reading opens up new worlds

By CATHERINE A. LEE King Features Syndicate

It has become a litany of our times: Our children can't read. Not in elementary school. Not really in high school. Not satisfactorily, or with enjoyment, even as they go through college.

My heart mourns with them, for years ago, my parents and my teacher, Miss Mendenhall, thought I would never really read. Yet today I lose myself in books. The difficulty is not to read, but to stop reading. How did this change come about? Would you accept, as explanation, a miracle? I was 7, going on 8. For more than a year, I had been trudging a mile across Iowa fields to a small, oneroom schoolhouse, and still the printed symbols in primer and storybooks refused to reveal their mysteries. They challenged me, those yet enigmatic lines, those still impenetrable pages. I had to con-

I suppose that was why I took my books with me when, one Saturday morning, I climbed to my private refuge, the very top of the chickenhouse. There, perched on the stilldamp roof, the miracle happened. The hands of God and Miss Mendenhall reached out and touched me. I opened my primer - and I could read. Yesterday, I had confronted inked characters without meaning. Today, the ABC's held hands. They marched smartly into position and became CAT, RAT, DOG, BOY, I read words. Sentences. Stories! The pages unlocked the door to their treasure trove and invited me in. I entered the wonderful world of reading.

Even now, when I read to my grandchildren, I become, for a moment, that little girl on the roof. Beneath me, that day, hens clucked and complained; a lie-abed rooster crowed belated reprimands. In the pasture, horses kicked up joyous

For me, that day was the beginning of a lifelong love affair with the printed word. But love affairs that last are preceded by meetings, acquaintance and friendship.

tap earlier memories. These are of long evenings in winter. After the supper dishes were done, we moved into Grandma's "sitting room." Here, fire glowed red through the isinglass windows of the well-blackened

HERE, WE popped corn or ate apples still crisp with the cellar's chill. Here, Papa read the "Des Moines Register" or refought the Civil War - he was a history buff. Here, Mama cuddled me on her percale lap and read to me.

Outside, the snow fell. Inside, Cinderella, all satin and starshine, stepped into her golden coach. Goldilocks surprised three quite amiable bears, and little mice - Hickory, Dickory, Dock! - ran up and down the clock. Storybooks were a part of contentment and security, linked for all time with the scent of a starched housedress, the feel of warm, enveloping arms, the sound of a loving

A younger sister had taken over the maternal lap by the time I could read. By then it didn't matter. I was high with the independence and joy of reading by myself. The delight was not limited to stories; before long I discovered the fun of reading for information. In the pantry, I could choose between Mama's r-a-s-p-b-e-r-r-y and s-t-r-a-wb-e-r-r-y jam. S-a-l-t on the grocery list turned out to be the same white substance I put on my egg. That was my own last name on the mailbox, a guarantee that the birthday present from my aunt in Missouri would find me. Yet these aids and assurances paled beside the ultimate pleasure of reading the catalogs. Now when these printed warehouses of wishes arrived, I could do more than look at pictures.

When a catalog came, we gathered around the kitchen table to see the glories outlined in Sears Roebuck or Montgomery Ward. Mama would turn the pages of Sears.

She would agonize over the allwool winter coat for $19.95 versus the one with "imported black Belgium lynx coney fur and guaranteed silk-faced satin de chine lining" for $25.95. Papa, owner of Lizzie, our Model T, considered briefly the "Autoshu for Ford owners...wide enough for comfort, but shaped so it will simplify operation of the foot pedals. All leather, $3.69."

THE BEST time was when we children had the catalog to ourselves. Now, smug mistress of the printed word, I could read every vital fact about the toys. The Flying Arrow Sled for $2.98 has double crossbars for steering.

Those marvelous dolls ($1.98 to $3.75, depending on size) have "bright, lifelike moving eyes and genuine curled mohair wigs. Already I was speeding down a hill on my Flying Arrow, my wondrous doll clutched in my arms!

Dreams, wishes, fantasies: They are not exclusive to fiction. Facts in print also set the imagination soaring. They also can perplex as they inform. They did when I began the furtive reading of Grandma's "Third, Last, And Complete Receipt Book and Household Physician" by one Dr. Alvin Wood Chase.

There, in the section on Mid-wifery, I learned that babies did not come in the doctor's black bag. Nor did angels bring them. Nor were they found under the rose bush or the cabbage plant.

It was not my first encounter with the hidden lore of grownups. The previous December, I had read the annual "Yes, Virginia, There Is a Santa Claus" editorial and confirmed my suspicion that no real, red-garbed and bearded saint existed. Swollen with the pride of secrets, I kept my new enlightenment to myself.

The printed page, whether it told of reality or fantasy, continued to bring me joy. I discovered I liked school. The schoolhouse was on a gentle rise, surrounded by the flat quiltwork of corn and wheat fields and pastures. Small, weatheredwhite, with tiny windows and a child's handkerchief of a porch, it stood, posed and waiting for Norman Rockwell.

Inside was yellow varnish over pine. The air spoke of chalk and sweeping compound. We sat at rigid, iron-legged desks with attached, unyielding seats.

Small desks were in front for beginners; big ones were in back for lordly eighth graders. Experimental scratches with new penknives scarred the small desks; the large ones bore intertwined hearts and rude sketches of various teachers.

EXCEPT FOR the seventh and eighth grades, nobody was really in a "grade." A child was in "primer class" or first or second or third "reader." It was not a bad system of judging scholastic progress.

In turn, each "reader" class. usually two or three children, would recite lessons for Miss Mendenhall. she of the soft smile and generous Sitting just behind that seat-of-judgment bench, I listened to everyone else recite. Would my brother remember the capital of Georgia? Is George Washington going to get across the icy Delaware? Would Raymond from the back row - the one who cut open a snake one recess - would he sass Miss Mendenhall again? By the time I moved on to "fifth reader" and the center row, I had heard just about every lesson several times.

Friday afternoons were bliss. Miss Mendenhall read to us. The big kids read aloud and there were recitings of memorized poems.

Adventure, suspense, splendor, rhyme and rhythm came to us each Friday. They came between the covers of worn books; in the clear voice of a beloved teacher. Oh, Miss Mendenhall, I thank you!

I read discriminately and without supervision. The minute I finished drying dishes or weeding the gar- of preparation.

I wept with "Oliver Twist," shud-dered as the "Headless Horseman" rode ghostly in the night. I was Campfire Girl In The Allegheny Mountains," one of "The Radio Boys In Darkest Africa."

BEAUTIFULLY DRESSED and curly of hair (mine was stringstraight), I attended a dozen boarding schools, gave orders to butlers, gently discouraged impassioned suitors. I was Jo in "Little Women," I was "Anne of Green Gables

I was an heiress one day, an orphan scrubbing floors the next. I was everybody and anybody; I went everywhere in all times - until Mama called me in to watch the Reading blocked out the terrors of spring thunderstorms. Head colds were entirely bearable as long as I had a book to read. Disappointment (No, I couldn't have new shoes for Easter) lost its sting when the "Saturday Evening Post" arrived.

As I grew up, reading let me cover shyness with a measure of social assurance; unashamedly, I called on Emily Post to get me through the graduation banquet of high school, the ritualized tea parties of the college freshman, my initial experience with train conductor and hotel desk.

Reference works I learned, could tell me how to write a senator, take grass stains from my white skirts, help me understand why the music of Chopin was poignant with melancholy, and that of Bach organized, optimistic and spiritual.

My tastes in literature would change with the years. The sheer joy of meeting thoughts in print would remain as fresh and splendid as it was the day I could so suddenly read the day the miracle happened.

But was it a miracle at all? I realize that no such God-tinged event took place; what had happened was an apparently spontane ous performance after several years The ability to read had emerged from not quite conscious knowledge as inevitably as spring flowers break through warming earth. The seeds of both were already planted and nourished; neither came from barren ground.

WHAT HAD nurtured my initial mastery and lasting love of reading? What enables any normal child to

I turned to educators and childdevelopment experts for the answers. They wrote that "Young children learn a great deal through their feelings," that "The association of loving and cuddling with being read to fosters a readiness to read, that the child gradually associates word meaning with pictures as he sees the same pages of his storybook over and over again.

All this had been mine: being read to with love. The familiar storybook with its often-turned pages. Then why was my reading skill delayed?

At the University of Hawaii School of Medicine, John F. McDermott, M.D., a child psychiatrist, reminded me that youngsters also may not tie their own shoestrings as long as someone else continues to tie them; that the desire to read independently must gradually replace the wish to be read to.

Psychiatrists and educators write of the challenge to read, of the example of adults engaged in that wonderfully grown-up activity: read-ing for pleasure or for practical information; of the presence of books as valued, but always accessible and "touchable" possessions; of the sense of importance that comes when a child has his first library card or learns how to check out a

Again I realized I had had it all. The book-filled home and the bookloving parents. The catalogs and recipe books for pragmatic use; the novels and essays and poetry to awaken thought, free the imagination and let the spirit soar. I - perhaps all youngsters of my generation - were equally fortunate in what we lacked. We spent no evenings as passive slaves of the TV set. No transistor radios fed endless rock and disco to ear and mind. Reading's joys could be experi enced
