Shultz fears force needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz, faced with a stony European rebuff of sanctions against Libya, says the United States has just about exhausted its economic ammunition and may need to use force against terrorism.

"We are prepared to use the measures that are effective and are necessary," Shultz told a news conference Thursday. "Force is not always the best means, but it may be necessary."

He repeated Reagan administration charges that Libya was sponsoring terrorists, including those who attacked the Rome and Vienna airports in December, and described the U.S. response as "gradually escalating economic sanctions against Libya."

But he added, "I think by this time we're pretty much at the end of the road and all of the things one can think of economically have pretty much been done now."

On the use of economic warfare against terrorism, he said, "No one contends that these actions by themselves are likely to have a decisive effect."

Within the Reagan administration, Shultz has been one of the leading advocates of measured and focused military retaliation against terrorism. The Defense Department has stressed the difficulty of using U.S. might in such cases, especially when it might bring the United States into conflict with well-armed nations such as Libya, which has a large air force.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a constant critic of the Reagan administration, suggested Thursday that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi be assassinated, a move that White House spokesman Edward Djerejian quickly called "not a policy option of the United States government."

Metzenbaum said in a broadcast interview, "Maybe we're at the point in the world where Mr. Khadafi has to be eliminated," and said he was using the term "literally."

Despite explicit allied rejection of sanctions against Libya, Shultz said he was sending Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead to Europe to try to persuade governments to join the effort. None of the allies have so far.

The trip will begin early next week, and West Germany, Britain, Italy, France, the Netherlands and Belgium are on the list of nations he may visit. Italy, West Germany and France are among Libya's biggest trading partners.

Italy, which is second only to the Soviet Union in arms sales to Libya, on Thursday said it would be careful not to export to Libya what Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti called "particularly dangerous arms" during the heightened tension between Libya and the United States.

Man convicted as teen executed despite mercy pleas

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — James Terry Roach, who murdered two teenagers when he was only 17, was executed today after the Supreme Court rejected his appeal and the governor refused clemency requests from the United Nations, Mother Teresa, Jimmy Carter and human rights groups.

Roach, 25, was pronounced dead at 5:16 a.m., said Doug Catoe, a deputy corrections department commissioner.

"I leave you comfortable that I've been forgiven in my sins, just as I have forgiven those who have done this to me," Roach said in a final statement addressed to his family and fellow death-row inmates.

"I'm going to a much better place without a heavy burden upon me. I pray that my fate will some day save another kid that ends up on the wrong side of the tracks..."

"To my family and friends, there is only three words to say: I love you. May God bless each and every one of you."

With two dissenting votes, the Supreme Court late Thursday refused to grant a stay, clearing the way for Roach's early morning execution in South Carolina's electric chair at the Central Correctional Institution.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, the secretary-general of the Organization of American States, Nobel Peace Prize winner Mother Teresa, former President Carter and international human rights groups all made appeals on Roach's behalf.

But Gov. Dick Riley refused to grant clemency. He had also refused clemency for co-defendant Joseph Carl Shaw, who was 22 when the slayings occurred and was executed Jan. 11, 1985.

About 220 death penalty proponents and 60 opponents gathered outside the century-old prison on the Congaree River in chilly predawn temperatures before the execution.

Inside, Roach laughed nervously while waiting for the sentence to be carried out.

"He was very calm about everything," said said witness Sean Calleba.

"He showed no emotion." Roach, who was the second person put to death in South Carolina and the 51st in the nation since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976, spent Thursday night visiting with relatives and a minister.

He requested a last meal of fried shrimp, hush puppies, french fries, tossed salad, cherry cheesecake and a soft drink, said Hal Leslie, a spokesman for the state Department of Corrections.

Roach's attorneys argued that his life should be spared because he suffered from Huntington's chorea, a mentally debilitating condition, and because international accords prohibit the execution of those younger than 18 at the time of their offense.

Similar arguments made to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals earlier Thursday also were unsuccessful.

Roach said on ABC-TV's "Nightline" Thursday he did not want to die. "I think anybody who's under 18 who is in the shape like I'm in, they can be rehabilitated," he said. "I just hope that they let me live in prison. If I see somebody going down the same road that I've been going down, maybe I could say something to change his mind. 'Cause I've been there."

In another interview, Roach said he would go willingly to his death.

"Won't nobody have to drag me in there," he said, adding that he wouldn't give prosecutors "the satisfaction."

Roach pleaded guilty to the 1977 murders of Carlotta Hartness, 14, and Tommy Taylor, 17.

Odessan named executive director of Bid Resource Center

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

The Executive Board of the New Bid Resource Center located in Grand Slam Village at Midland Regional Air Terminal, today announced appointment of a 64-year-old Odessa man as the new facility's executive director.

David S. Thayer, with 35 years experience in the areas of petroleum refining, petrochemical manufacturing and research, and energy consulting, is a former director of planning for El Paso Products Company.

Thayer, 2918 Kirkwood, at a news conference this morning explained that the primary mission of the Bid Resource Center will be to assist area businesses through the complex maze of procedures that must be followed to successfully bid on federal projects. He said assistance provided by the Bid Resource Center in Beaumont will, in effect, allow the Midland-Odessa facility "to hit the ground running," because the Beaumont facility will make available facilities already in existence.

Because of this cooperation with Beaumont, Thayer said the Midland-Odessa Bid Resource Center will be fully operational six months, possibly as much as a year, earlier.

In announcing Thayer's appointment, Hank Henry of Midland, president of the Bid Resource Center's

Board of Directors, estimated that the new facility will provide area businesses access to federal contracts for goods and services valued at about $165 billion. Henry said it's difficult to estimate the exact dollar value that this might mean to businesses in the Permian Basin area, but the Bid Resource Center will provide information concerning goods and services to be purchased by the federal government and will help them prepare the paperwork necessary to submit bids.

Thayer said he hasn't specifically researched the federal budget to determine the exact amount of goods and services purchased by the federal government, but he suspects the $165 billion figure suggested by Henry may be extremely conservative.

He estimated that goods and services purchased by the federal government may represent as much as 15 to 17 percent of the gross national product.

Midland Chamber of Commerce Economic Development Director Steve Hardin said the greatest asset of the Bid Resource Center will be its ability to help existing area businesses. The real value of the Bid Resource Center, he said, will be as a tool to promote job retention as well as job expansion. The Center should help in the economic development efforts of both communities, said Hardin.

Twelve injured in meat packing plant mishap

Ammonia escapes from refrigeration equipment at Sealy facility

SEALY (AP) — About a dozen people were injured, at least four of them seriously, when an ammonia line apparently burst today at a Sealy meat packing plant, officials said.

At least two of the injured workers at the Braunfels Meats Inc. plant were being taken by helicopter to Hermann Hospital in Houston, about 80 miles away, Life Flight spokeswoman Libby Myers said.

Company president Dick Patton estimated that about a dozen workers could require hospitalization.

"Everyone of them who went to the hospital had ammonia inhalation," Patton said. "Twelve or 13 have been hospitalized. It's my understanding that four or five of them are serious."

Patton said the incident, which occurred about 6 a.m., resulted in no explosion and no fire.

"The only thing we know is that we had a severe ammonia leak due to unknown reasons," he said. "We had several of our employees inhale and breathe this ammonia gas. We're trying to determine if it was an ammonia leak or if a line broke."

Patton said the company remained open and workers were in the process of cleaning up.

"There were no injuries that occurred other than the breathing of the ammonia itself," he said.

Workers who were not injured seriously were taken to the Brazos Valley Hospital in Sealy. Their conditions were not immediately known.

Patton said the ammonia was used for refrigeration equipment. The incident occurred on the slaughter floor of the plant.

Midland woman struck by car

From Staff Reports

A 67-year-old Midland woman was killed Thursday when she was struck by a car while running across a street in southwest Midland, according to reports from the Midland Police Department.

Juanita Copenhaver, 4313 Versailles St., was running across Midland Drive from east to west when she was struck about 6:30 p.m. by a 1984 Chevrolet Blazer driven by Robbin Kendall Rucker, 4711 Kiowa St. Rucker said Ms. Copenhaver was wearing dark clothing and he didn't see her until it was too late to stop, reports said.

A witness, Gary Yeargain, 4401 Pleasant St., told police Rucker never had a chance to stop before hitting Ms. Copenhaver.

Justice of the Peace Leonard Howell pronounced Ms. Copenhaver dead at 7:33 p.m. She died of massive internal injuries, reports said.

The accident occurred in the 700 block of Midland Drive, between Versailles and Pasadena streets, reports said.

End to drilling equipment sales embargo sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas

has lost thousands of jobs since the 1979 embargo of oil drilling equipment sales to the Soviet Union, says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who has asked the Reagan administration to lift the ban.

The embargo expires on Jan. 20, and Bentsen, D-Texas, has written to Secretary of State George Shultz, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Treasury Secretary James Baker asking them not to renew it.

Bentsen said the embargo cost the oilfield equipment industry 90 percent of its potential overseas orders from 1979 to 1983 at a loss of more than 8,000 jobs. He said Texas companies have borne about 80 percent of the losses.

The embargo was imposed by the Carter administration after the invasion of Afghanistan and has been maintained.

The Soviet Union is the biggest petroleum equipment market outside the United States. Exports account for about 35 percent of the U.S. oilfield equipment industry's sales.

"I have long been concerned that this country has a history of shooting itself in the foot on trade matters," Bentsen wrote to the cabinet members. "I strongly believe that we should not impose embargoes unless the target country is hurt worse than the United States is."

Bentsen said exports have dropped from about $5.3 billion in 1982 to about $3.2 billion in 1985.

He argued that the embargo does not meet the requirements of the Export Administration Act of 1980, which requires the administration to consider whether the embargoed goods are available from other countries before continuing an embargo.

"Other countries can and do produce comparable equipment, and they have refused to join in this embargo," Bentsen said.

A spokesman at the State Department who asked not to be identified said the issue had also been raised by the petroleum equipment industry.

Borger may appeal award to high court

BORGER (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court may be the last hope for this West Texas city's appeal of a $1.4 million wrongful death judgment handed down in the 1981 shooting death of a ranch foreman.

Borger was ordered to pay the family of 6666 Ranch foreman James C. Grandstaff, who was shot to death Aug. 11, 1981, after law enforcement officials chased a fugitive onto the ranch.

Wednesday, the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans denied the city's request for a rehearing on the judgment.

Borger City Manager James Layton said the City Council, along with the community's insurance company, may decide to appeal the case to the U.S. Supreme Court. Borger has 88 days left to register that appeal.

"We have not lost this," Layton said. "We have lost this at this point."

"We feel confident that this will be overturned," he said Thursday.

City officials have said the court-ordered amount is more than a city with a $7 million annual budget can afford. Borger had only $500,000 in liability insurance at the time of the shooting.

But while appeals continue, the interest mounts on the judgment.

Proposed immigration bill will hurt Hispanics, commission told LAREDO (AP) — An immigration bill that proposes to punish employers who hire illegal aliens will discriminate against Hispanics and will strain relations between Mexico and the United States, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights told.

The eight-member panel heard Thursday from Hispanic leaders, educators and immigration officials who testified on issues relating to illegal aliens.

Oscar Moran, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, told the panel that proposed employer sanctions in the Simpson-Rodino bill will hurt Hispanics.

"How many jobs will Hispanics be asked to forego because of frightened employers?" Moran asked. "What will the initial impact be and how long will it take to return to the safety and security of civil rights as we enjoy them today?"

Dr. Gilberto Cardenas, an economics professor at Pan American University, said that border cities from San Diego, Calif., to Brownsville are interdependent and that the bill threatens their relationships.

"If you develop formal legislation it will contribute not only to more serious problems in terms of Hispanic workers, but will sever bilateral relations with Mexico, like this type of legislation," Cardenas said.

"It will have very serious consequences on both the United States and Mexico," he said.

Cardenas, who has researched minority employment for 10 years, said undocumented workers do pay taxes and almost never receive Social Security benefits.

Immigration officials testified that they needed more manpower and funds to control the flow of illegal aliens.

Larry Teverbaugh, chief border patrol agent in Laredo, urged the passage of the bill because of the employer sanctions.

And Robert O'Connor, who resigned as a federal judge in 1984, said that some businesses thrive because they employ illegal aliens and therefore feel comfortable with the lack of enforcement of immigration laws.

"Certainly the hotel, motel and restaurant industry, heavy construction and the domestic help are comfortable," O'Connor said. "Even here in Laredo, nurses at Mercy Hospital would not be able to go to work because they did not have somebody to take care of the kids; a lot of the school teachers wouldn't be able to teach school."

"It's a comfortable situation," he said.

White: Better to reward districts, not punish them

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Penalizing school districts whose students do not perform well — as Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby suggested earlier this week — should be used as a last resort, Gov. Mark White said Thursday.

White said he would prefer to reward districts that show progress rather than punish those who do not. State funding would be one form of a reward, the governor acknowledged.

"I think people who are doing a good job should be rewarded," White told reporters at his weekly press conference. "I want to reward success. The success I'm talking about is the reward that's given to those who take the least talented of our children and make the most of those children."

The state should not automatically blame school districts for poor performance, he added. "I think we ought to go in and see what the problem is and then analyze it and build a solution for the problem," White said. "I believe that (withholding state funds) would be only as a last resort."

The governor said he thinks Hobby is frustrated by school districts that have adequate resources, yet set the wrong priorities.

"It seems that too often we find excuses — being made by some districts, not all — saying 'we can't afford a new classroom,' yet they can afford Astroturf on the ballpark for the football team," White said.

"I share that frustration," he added.

Judge to decide change of venue motion next week

LIVINGSTON (AP) — A state district judge says he'll decide early next week whether or not to move the murder trial of a former school principal accused of murdering a football coach over the affections of a school secretary.

Judge John Martin said Thursday he would decide by Tuesday if the murder trial of Hurley Fontenot, former principal of Hull-Daisetta Woodson Junior High, should be moved from Polk County. Defense attorney Dick DeGuerin asked Martin to move the trial on the grounds an impartial jury could be selected because of widespread publicity.

DeGuerin, who asked the trial be moved Wednesday, gave Martin copies of area newspapers containing news articles about the case for consideration in his change of venue motion. DeGuerin wants the trial moved from Polk County as well as neighboring San Jacinto, Waller and Liberty counties.

White: Missing-person 24-hour hotline in place

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White Thursday announced the inception of a 24-hour hotline and information clearinghouse for missing persons in Texas.

The statute requires all Texas law enforcement agencies to submit information concerning a missing person — including dental records and fingerprints — to a Department of Public Safety clearinghouse.

The clearinghouse will be linked by computer to the Texas Crime Information Center, the FBI's National Crime Information Center and to the Texas and National Law Enforcement Telecommunications Systems.

"While the missing person clearinghouse will not investigate missing person cases, its five DPS staff members will centralize and coordinate information to aid in local investigations," the governor noted at his weekly press conference.

The statewide, toll-free hotline number for the clearinghouse is 1-800-346-3423.

"I am glad the clearinghouse is finally in operation," said Port Arthur

Rep. Frank Collazo, who authored the law. "Texas has truly started taking care of our most precious resource — our children."

White said there are currently about 4,000 missing children in Texas. Another 1,000 adults are listed as missing under unusual circumstances.

Legislators set aside $150,000 a year for the program, which has unofficially helped locate three missing persons.

Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker carried the bill in the Senate.

Ex-guard gets three-year sentence

LUBBOCK (AP) — A former Big Spring federal prison guard has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment for accepting illegal gratuities from drug kingpin Rex Cauble and another inmate at the prison.

Eddie Roybal's sentence was handed down 2½ months after he was convicted of accepting money from Cauble and inmate Gary Marcus Gunter and smuggling drugs into the minimum-security complex for Gunter.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward of Lubbock, who presided over Roybal's trial in October, passed sentence Wednesday.

Witnesses at Roybal's trial said Cauble convinced his sister to lend $11,550 to Roybal in May. Roybal, 33, admitted accepting the loan but insisted it was a legitimate transaction unconnected with any favors to Cauble.

Reagan to shield military from cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, anxious to protect military manpower as he faces his first decision under the nation's new budget-cutting law, is expected to balk at cuts that would force reductions in U.S. troop strength, administration sources say.

A letter to be sent to congressional leaders today would exercise the president's power to shield most or all of the Pentagon personnel funds that otherwise would be subject to slashing under the recently enacted Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law, the sources said Thursday.

At the same time, White House sources said Reagan will use his Jan. 28 State of the Union address to urge Congress to revamp the budgetary process.

A senior Pentagon official said the Defense Department believes the full cut in troop strength, if allowed to go into effect, would be $2 billion.

"The president wants to protect military manpower," the official said, speaking under condition he not be identified. "He wants to keep the force at the level it is now and maintain the existing pay and benefits and incentives."

This official said that without protection, the overall strength of the active force "would be quickly affected."

He said there might be room for some flexibility — allowing some cuts in the personnel account — by limiting transfers or letting some soldiers who are leaving the service muster out a few months early.

"But I anticipate that the president will decide to protect almost all of the military personnel account," the official said.

The president is acting under a provision of Gramm-Rudman enabling him to block cuts in money to maintain military manpower levels during the current fiscal year.

A White House source, speaking on condition he not be identified, noted that the administration lobbied for this provision and it was therefore likely the president would take advantage of it to shield most if not all of the troop funds.

The administration sources said the president was not required to spell out immediately what cuts should be made to make up for the ones that are being forgone in order to make what are expected to be $5.2 billion to $5.8 billion in defense budget cuts.

The aides said a report due Jan. 15 from the Office of Management and Budget and the Congressional Budget Office, however, would calculate percentage cuts needed in specific accounts to meet deficit-reduction goals.

The principal Pentagon accounts from which such cuts could be made provide funds for operational readiness, weapons procurement and research.

Gramm-Rudman seeks to eliminate the federal deficit by 1991, and provides for automatic budget cuts if Congress and Reagan don't meet deficit-reduction targets. The first big round of cuts is scheduled to take effect March 1.

Reagan told a group of network bureau chiefs in an interview on Wednesday, "I hope we never have to come to that. If the Congress will cooperate with us in making the cuts that have to be made where we have selection power over them, we'll never have to resort to that sequestering of programs in which you just automatically go in with a meat ax approach and they're automatically cut."

"I never favored that part of the legislation at all," the president said.

In his State of the Union address, Reagan is expected to make completing work on an overhaul of the income tax system a top priority, the sources said. The president made the same proposal in last year's address.

But the sources said Reagan also

Court to debate Gramm-Rudman's constitutionality

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first courtroom test is under way for a new budget-balancing law that could mandate massive federal spending cuts and reshape government for the balance of the decade and beyond.

A special three-judge court was to convene today to hear arguments over the constitutionality of the Gramm-Rudman law that seeks to eliminate the federal deficit by 1991.

The statute triggers automatic across-the-board cuts if Congress is unable to reduce the deficit — estimated to be around $200 billion now — either through spending cuts or tax increases.

A dozen members of Congress, led by Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., and a union representing some federal workers are challenging the law.

Ironically, the Justice Department, which is called upon to defend the law, says a key provision is unconstitutional and the act may have to be modified by the court.

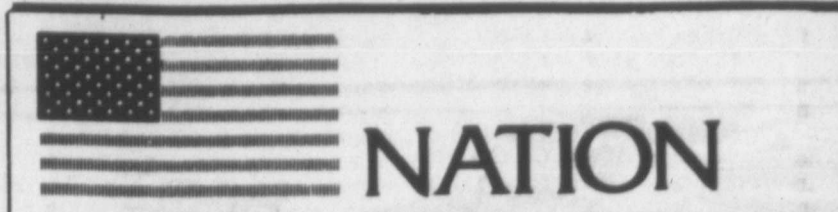

The department said the court could still salvage part of the law by eliminating a procedure for automatic spending cuts but preserving a fallback provision. The fallback procedure essentially returns the decision for specific cuts to Congress, a situation that caused a stalemate last year.

Even if the entire law is invalidated, government lawyers added, the effect of the ruling should be suspended for 60 days to give Congress a chance to approve spending cuts mandated by the Gramm-Rudman legislation.

The three-judge panel is serving as a trial court, with its ruling certain to be appealed directly to the Supreme Court.

President Reagan, who called the legislation a landmark in the battle against the growing deficit when he signed the measure last month, said this week he opposes the mechanism for automatic spending cuts.

"I never favored that part of the legislation at all," he said.

New 'Cold War'

What's new in Afghanistan? Try a Cold War. It is now possible to say the new Cold War began on Dec. 27, 1979, when the Red Army installed a Soviet puppet named Babrak Karmal as president of Afghanistan. Six years later, Karmal is still head of the Afghan state. Widespread fighting continues in the country. Afghan resisters continue to oppose the Soviet occupation.

The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan took the Carter administration by surprise. It led to Carter's withdrawal of the SALT II treaty from the Senate, where it was stalled. Coupled with the Tehran embassy hostage crisis and the disastrous U.S. rescue attempt in Iran, the Soviet aggression in Afghanistan hardened the mood in the United States. Ronald Reagan was elected on a platform of military strength; the largest peacetime buildup in U.S. history was begun, and U.S. and Soviet leaders didn't meet for six years. When Reagan and Soviet leader Gorbachev finally did meet at Geneva last year, it was to discuss a wholly new arms race, this one in space.

The thaw in U.S.-Soviet rhetoric that began by the roaring fireplace at the summit in Geneva may be moving toward action on United Nations negotiations going on in Geneva over the issue of Afghanistan. The important word is "may."

The Afghan government has offered a plan to withdraw Soviet troops from Afghanistan. Because the Afghan government is a Soviet puppet, this may indicate a desire by the Soviets to pull out, according to a timetable, and under guarantees that there would be no outside interference in Afghanistan.

This sounds like the framework for a reasonable settlement. But the Soviets are calculating. Is it in their national interest to pull out?

They have suffered thousands of casualties. Afghan resistance remains as strong as ever. And the occupation is costing billions, while it is relatively cheap for the West to supply the rebels.

None of these factors is of ultimate consequence to the Soviets, who have little reason to fear an anti-war movement in their country. But there is another element that the Soviets do fear — Star Wars.

Although the Soviets initiated space military research before the United States, they are far behind. The prospect of trying to catch up to a new arms race in space is concerning the Kremlin. In their view, it might be better to try to trade Afghanistan's freedom for an arms agreement that would halt the arms race in space.

There is little indication Reagan would trade anything for the Strategic Defense Initiative, which the president views as a defensive shield — not an offensive weapons platform.

But the American people might be moved by a Soviet pull-out. The anti-Soviet mood is softening already, and many Americans do not share the president's confidence about the Strategic Defense Initiative. The possibility at least offers an opportunity to explore an alternative to the status quo.

And while one must not be overly optimistic about negotiating a Soviet pullout in Afghanistan, if one could be negotiated in return for a pledge of neutrality, it would certainly be the best possible outcome for the suffering Afghan people. Ousting the Red Army by force is obviously a practical impossibility for the rebels — even with Uncle Sam's help.

Bekaa Valley perfect for reprisals

WASHINGTON — Internal White House documents emphasize President Reagan's attitude toward any further tweaking of Uncle Sam's beard by Moslem terrorists: He's sick of being pushed around.

Reagan believes the American people "are tired of suffering in-sults at the hands of other nations," as one policy paper put it. For this reason, Reagan is convinced that "minimal risks" can be taken to bolster U.S. leadership in the world.

Jack Anderson

The list of target options that could both assuage the public's outrage and deal the terrorists a damaging blow includes the obvious ones like Libya, Syria and Iran. But there's an even more tempting target: the ancient city of Baalbek in north-eastern Lebanon.

If ever there were a viper's nest ripe for destruction, it is this terrorist plotting-and-training center in the Bekaa Valley, close to the Syrian border. Since 1975, the Bekaa has been the headquarters and nerve center for the greatest concentration of terrorists in the world today. Protected by Syrian troops, who screen every outsider venturing into the area, the Bekaa Valley is only about an hour's drive from either Damascus or Beirut. It is an ideally situated launching pad for terrorist operations anywhere in the world.

Among the groups that use the valley's facilities, which are defended by mobile batteries of Syrian anti-aircraft missiles, are terrorists linked to the notorious Ilyich Ramirez Sanchez (Carlos the Jackal) and radical Palestinians Abu Musa and Abu Nidal.

Of all the terrorist gangs in the Bekaa, the most numerous and blatant are the groups supported by Iran, loosely lumped under the cover name of Islamic Jihad. The most vicious of these fanatics are the Shiite Hezbollah and the Islamic Amal, both based in Baalbek.

At one time or another, almost every American hostage held in Lebanon, aside from last June's TWA hijacking victims, have been kept at some location in the Bekaa Valley. It was here, for example, that CIA official William Buckley was imprisoned for a year and tortured before being moved to Iran last March, where he died from torture-induced heart failure.

According to intelligence sources, the two Bekaa Valley terrorists most responsible for Buckley's ordeal are Sheikh Subhi Tufaila, leader of Hezbollah in the Bekaa, and Hussein Rezaie, commander of the Iranian Revolutionary Guard in the valley.

The nerve center for most of their depredations is a dilapidated building in downtown Baalbek known as "Hosseinih." A former schoolhouse, it serves today as the Bekaa Valley headquarters for the Revolutionary Guards.

The Iranian guard units were rushed to the Bekaa in June 1982, when Israel invaded Lebanon. Their strength quickly reached 350, and kept on growing. It was from the Hosseinih headquarters that terrorists planned the devastating bombings of the U.S. Embassy and Marine barracks in Beirut in 1983, as well as airplane hijackings, murders and kidnappings of Americans.

The old schoolhouse isn't the only identifiable target for U.S. retaliation in Baalbek. The Hotel Khawam is used by the Hezbollah as a military training school. The Hezbollah headquarters in the Sheikh Abdullah barracks sits on a hillside above the town; a one-time Lebanese army post, it was the target of French and Israeli reprisal raids in 1983, but has since been rebuilt.

Also housed in the Bekaa Valley is the radical Shiite group, Islamic Amal, led by Hussein Musawai, a 42-year-old former schoolteacher. Though he denied complicity in the bombing of the Marine barracks, he praised the action. U.S. intelligence is convinced that his group had a hand in the bombing.

A large, hand-painted message scrawled on a wall in downtown Baalbek next to a poster of Ayatollah Khomeini, says it all: "Death to Americans!"

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: In secret talks with Nicaragua, U.S. negotiators have focused on four principal demands: 1) an end to Sandinista aid to guerrillas in El Salvador and elsewhere; 2) a loosening of Managua's ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union; 3) introduction of democracy to Nicaragua, as promised in 1979; and 4) a cut in the Sandinista armed forces below 30,000 from the 100,000 that U.S. intelligence estimates is the present size.

WATCH ON WASTE: A recent State Department report on the Manila embassy chastised the administrative officer for the purchase of $800 coffee tables and $200 table lamps, noting that the Philippines has "an abundance of inexpensive furniture craftsmen and hardwoods." The report ordered a halt to the purchase of "expensive household items at questionable cost."

CHARLEY REESE

Arms pacts won't work with Soviets

No honest arms control agreement is possible with the Soviet Union for the same reason no agreement would be possible between a two-legged man and a one-legged man if the two-legged man demanded a leg as the price of agreement.

To paraphrase Marlon Brando in an old movie, if you take their missiles away from them, the Soviet leaders are nothing.

Charley Reese

The civilian sector of the Soviet Union is nothing. The quality of life in the Soviet Union is nothing. The popularity of the Soviet regime in the Soviet Union is nothing. One free election and communism would be a bad memory. The Soviet empire would be a footnote in the history book.

The only thing the Soviet regime does well is use force. It has the best internal security system in the world. It has the best censorship system in the world. It has the best prison system in the world. It has the best propaganda apparatus in the world. It has the best espionage system in the world. And it has the best and largest military system in the world.

By "best" I mean effective and nothing more.

So to ask the Soviet Union to disarm is to ask them to give up their only success. It is to ask them to give up not only the one thing they do well but the one thing that keeps them in power. On the Soviet side, the Cold War never ended and it never will because they need an enemy the way humans need oxygen.

For all its miserable history, the Communist Party of the Soviet Union has kept the people on a war footing. To fight the Whites, to fight the counter-revolutionaries, to fight the fascists, and now to fight the imperialists.

Only with an enemy outside the gates snarling to get in can the Communist Party justify its inhuman repression and its permanent hold on power. The United States does not need the Soviet Union as an enemy; the Soviet Union needs us desperately.

That's why Americans who think we can placate, make compromises with, or otherwise assuage Soviet hostility are like people trying to convince an acute paranoid that they are his friends. There is no way it can be done. The cause of Soviet hostility is not us or anything we do or say. The cause is internal. They are hostile to us for their own reasons and no matter what we do — as history plainly shows — they will remain hostile.

We gave the Soviet Union $11 billion in military aid in World War II and significantly helped them repel the Nazi invasion. They erased that fact from all Soviet histories and from public memory just as they did the Hitler-Stalin pact. The story now is that the Soviet Union defeated fascism while wicked imperialists secretly plotted with the fascists. Around the clock, from birth to the grave, the Soviet regime preaches hate America to the Soviet people.

The Soviet leaders are riding on the back of a dragon they created. If they got off — if they ended the myth of imperialist aggression — then they could no longer justify the repression. Without the repression, the people would tear the Soviet leaders to pieces. And why not? For nearly 70 years, the Soviet regime has murdered, tortured, imprisoned, and impoverished the people. Soviet leaders may be cruel, vicious and brutal but they aren't stupid. No way are they ever going to seek peace with the U.S. except in the form of our surrender or defeat.

Unfortunately one of the things contemporary Americans do least well is face unpleasant truths. We don't want to grow old. We don't want to die. And we don't want to make the sacrifices necessary in the face of a militarily powerful and implacably hostile enemy.

The future will weep if one of history's most benign and sane nations falls to one of history's most malignant and insane but that is exactly what will happen unless Americans face reality.

If they listen to their fears, if they listen to the Soviet disinformation agents, if they listen to the lace party wing of the Democratic Party, then their future is short indeed.

I wish it were not so. Who likes tension and $300 billion defense budgets? Not me. Still, what distinguishes survivors from dead people is the ability to know the difference between reality as it is and reality as we wish it were.

Another View: Against Col. Khadafy

The president did what he had to do in deciding to retaliate economically against Col. Moammar Khadafy's support of terrorism against American citizens. Military reprisal would have been risky, given the Americans and the American interests hostage in Libya and elsewhere and the difficulty of pinpointing the right targets and penetrating Libya's new Soviet-supplied missiles. The economic squeeze is unilateral and lets Libya play off the United States against its allies. This is troublesome but not so troublesome as standing helplessly on grounds that the Europeans won't go along. Some things have to be done for their own sake, though they are not fully effective and entail certain costs. After all, innocent Americans were murdered.

It has become a cliché that Mr. Reagan began by promising swift vengeance against terrorists and that his actual record constitutes a humbling education in political reality. The president might have spared himself some grief by picking a more modest course. The principal source of grief, however, lies not in any politician's embarrassment but in terrorism itself. It is awful, it is difficult to deal with, and it continues. It continues against principal targets such as Israel and the United States and against countries in Europe that have tried to set themselves apart.

The tendency of many in Europe is, after a point, to become resigned to terrorism, to succumb to the political excuses readily available for it, to accept it as a part of the permanent surroundings. A code of business as usual is in effect. But this is not for Mr. Reagan. Even in his frustration, he retains an evident rage. He has made political concessions to the struggle against terrorism but not moral concessions. This is his strength.

For taking the new steps alone, Mr. Reagan will doubtless be accused of practicing a unilateralism that willfully separates the United States from its friends. There is a whole school of criticism of American "global unilateralism," commonly juxtaposed to the "liberal internationalism" of earlier memory. There is something to this, but it can easily become an excuse for Europeans and others to evade their duty and to dump the more thankless tasks of international life, like containing Col. Khadafy and easing the Israeli-Palestinian dispute, on the United States.

Rather kindly, Mr. Reagan this week offered the allies an alibi, saying that economic considerations may keep Europe from joining the new American sanctions. But he also said that "Americans will not understand other nations moving into Libya to take commercial advantage of our departure." This is a modest but necessary marker. Internationalism, Europeans surely would agree, cuts both ways.

Cuomo blunder shows ineptitude

WASHINGTON — Gov. Mario Cuomo's pre-Christmas blunder, heatedly protesting descriptions of the crime syndicate as the Mafia, confirms to his own supporters just how far he is from being ready to run for president in 1988.

It certainly makes no political sense for an Italo-American to blunder into the language used by mob lawyers.

"Thankfully, it was buried by the holiday season," one prominent New York Democrat who supports Cuomo for president told us.

Indeed, a check of party leaders across the country showed little or no awareness of the incident. But Cuomo and his press secretary, Martin Steadman, have been on the telephone telling Washington-based reporters that he never denied the existence of the Mafia — only its use as a synonym for organized crime.

The significance is what this tells about Mario Cuomo two years away from presidential primaries. He remains a quintessential New York politician, geared more to local ethnic considerations than national coalition-building. Nor is he willing to forego semantic debate for his own political sake.

While close advisers are eager to enter national competition, the governor himself tells the truth when he says he is a long way from committed to that massive undertaking. Nothing could better show that than Cuomo insisting to us, one month afterwards, that his Mafia comments did not constitute one of 1985's blunders.

When mobster Paul Castellano was shot to death in front of a midtown Manhattan steakhouse the night of Dec. 16, Cuomo was mortified by the New York Post headline: "Mafia's No. 1 Blown Away." In Albany, he vented that exasperation to reporters — including the Post's Frederic Dicker. "You're telling me the Mafia is the organization and I'm tell you that is a lot of baloney," said Cuomo. "... It is nothing. It is a word invented by people."

Those quotes came from what one bystander called "a 45-minute Cuomoesque, Socratic dialogue" with Dicker. The newsman insisted that Tony Buffalo, a small-time bookie in Cuomo's boyhood New York City neighborhood, must have had to pay off the Mafia; the governor called that nonsense.

Just what Cuomo was talking about was described over CNN's "Crossfire" program by the governor's fellow New York Democrat and sometime adversary, Mayor Edward Koch: "What I think the governor was trying to convey, perhaps inarticulately because of his emotions, is that organized crime is not only the Mafia." But Koch added that a visitor, Gov. Rosario Nicolosi of Sicily, when asked about organized crime trials on his island, replied: "What is this business with organized crime? It's the Mafia."

Some Cuomo supporters attribute his vehemence to personal sensitivity about ethnic discrimination and pressure from Italo-American groups, representing 36 percent of his state's voters. He is genuinely outraged over treatment of Italo-American politicians, particularly by the right, and questioning of his record against organized crime.

More basically, the incident reveals the old Queens County lawyer's appetite for debate. A month after the incident, he does not concede Castellano belonged to the Mafia. Wondering out loud whether references to a slain mobster as a Mafioso "sums up images that are unfair" to Italo-Americans does not come with running for president.

Cuomo's political problem is described by a liberal member of the Democratic National Committee from the Deep South: "Between Richmond and Houston, there are no Cuomos and damn few Marios." The philologic debate about the Mafia does not relieve that ethnic difficulty.

Cuomo proves he is not running for president in other ways, such as refusing to take positions on international affairs. When asked about the contras in an interview with the Village Voice, he replied: "Nicaragua, I'm not too good. I'm no expert on foreign policy issues."

In such primary states as Iowa and New Hampshire, there is no Cuomo presence. Democratic State Chairman Dave Nagle told us last year's enthusiasm in Iowa, when Cuomo was first choice of the party faithful for the Jefferson-Jackson dinner, is "rapidly evaporating." When the governor turned down the Iowa affair, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware accepted and turned it into the year's most successful visit to the state.

None of Cuomo's boosters expect him to join the presidential trail anytime soon. But they are hoping for too much if they expect him to pull away from the Mafia debate. One supporter said the governor is probably sorry he ever initiated the dispute. "Absolutely not," Cuomo told us, adding he has not finished talking about it. "I'm sure it's bad politics," he said. That's an unusual admission for one of the nation's surest-footed politicians, but one with which his backers would agree.

Farm population plummets 7 percent in 1985

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even when survey errors are discounted, 1985 saw one of the sharpest year-to-year declines in the U.S. farm population in a decade, government census experts say.

Moreover, the income of farm families continues to lag behind that of city folks, according to a report issued Thursday by the Census Bureau and the Agriculture Department.

According to preliminary survey figures for 1985, the farm population declined 7 percent, or 399,000 people, to 5,355,000 from 5,754,000 in 1984.

Part of the loss in farm population was blamed on the financial crunch suffered by farmers during recent years, in which thousands of families have been put in jeopardy by huge debts and declining assets.

The sharp 1985 drop in population was challenged by one of the report's overseers, who said much of the year-to-year decline was due to changes in sampling techniques.

Although the report did not include the new farm population estimate for 1985, census officials provided that figure to The Associated Press upon request.

The report said the estimated 1984 U.S. farm population of 5,754,000 was down 33,000 from 1983, but that the decline was "not statistically significant."

During the 1970s, annual farm population losses averaged 2.9 percent, including a drop of about 7 percent from 1975 to 1976, a period when the U.S. farm economy was on the upswing with record exports and rising land values.

The report said the median income of farm families was $18,925 in 1983, the most recent year studied. That was only three-fourths of non-farm family income. Median income means that half of the families had larger incomes that year, half less.

In 1983, 20 percent of all farm families had incomes below the federal poverty level, compared with 12 percent for non-farm families, the report said. The income poverty level in 1983 was $10,178 a year for a family of four.

At the Census Bureau, Diana DeAre, one of the report's authors, called the apparent 7 percent decline in the farm population last year "the most significant change" so far in the 1980s.

But USDA's Calvin L. Beale, head of population studies in the department's Economic Research Service, said the figures should not be taken at face value.

In 1983, he said in an interview, the census survey showed an increase in the farm population. Then in 1984 the survey showed a decline of 33,000 people, which "struck me as unrealistically low."

"I think there has been a real and actual decline in the farm population, but in my opinion it's not 7 percent from '84 to '85, and only half of 1 percent from '83 to '84," Beale said. "I just feel the '84 number was a high bounce, as it were, in the sample. Also, they've been changing the sample design during this time."

Beale, who is widely known as a demographer and expert on rural population, said he thought the 1985 figures were sound, but that they should be compared over a longer period and not on a basis of year-to-year.

McMartin Pre-School hearing ends with seven to face trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The longest and most expensive preliminary hearing in California history ended abruptly when all seven defendants accused of the mass molestation of pupils at McMartin Pre-School were bound over for trial.

"This has been a long, hard-fought battle," Deputy District Attorney Lael Rubin, the chief prosecutor, said after Thursday's rulings ended the 18-month, $4 million hearing. "The strength of our case, as you know, has been the strength of the children. We look forward to their support and continued dedication."

During the hearing, which was to determine if there was sufficient evidence for a Superior Court trial, children testified to rape, sodomy and other abuses over several years, starting in 1978.

They said they were stripped and photographed during "naked movie star games," then terrorized into silence by threats against their parents, animal mutilations and rituals involving people dressed in satanic costumes.

The former teachers of the defunct suburban Manhattan Beach preschool were scheduled for arraignment Jan. 23 in Superior Court on a total of 135 counts of rape, sodomy and other abuse, as well as a single conspiracy count.

NATION in brief

Reagan to visit Grenada

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is preparing to visit Grenada in February to celebrate the principal foreign policy triumph of his first term, U.S. officials say.

It will be Reagan's first visit to the Caribbean island since a U.S.-led military force ousted the Marxist government there in October 1983 and laid the groundwork for the re-establishment of democratic rule.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press that Reagan will go to the island Feb. 20.

Grenada is viewed by U.S. officials as the one clear-cut foreign policy victory of the Reagan presidency, and he made frequent references to that issue during the 1984 re-election campaign.

Water found in comet

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. scientists have definitively confirmed the long-held theory that Halley's comet contains water, a discovery that space agency officials say marks a new era in the study of the celestial wanderers.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Thursday that a team of U.S. researchers aboard a modified military transport plane last month discovered water in Halley's through use of sophisticated instrumentation attached to a 36-inch telescope.

While some components of water previously have been identified in the comet, the December discovery marks the first time the actual water molecule has been confirmed, said astrophysicist Mike Mumma, head of the planetary systems branch of Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

"This is really a very exciting time for us. It represents the culmination of 10 years of theoretical and experimental work," Mumma said in a telephone interview.

Man held in air piracy

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — A psychiatric examination in a federal prison hospital has been ordered for a man accused of wresting the controls of a commuter airliner from the pilot, causing the plane to drop 3,500 feet over open seas before passengers beat him into unconsciousness.

John G. Johnson, 33, was charged with violating federal air piracy statutes on Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Jerome Simandle, who ordered a psychiatric evaluation.

Seven people, including two crew members, were aboard the twin-engine Allegheny Commuter airline's Flight 1050 Wednesday morning when it plunged from 5,000 feet to 1,500 feet as Johnson grabbed the controls.

Amnesty nets millions

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A man's check for $2.5 million in unpaid 1984 income taxes set the record for New York State's tax amnesty program, but it's no big deal, says the state tax commissioner.

"We get this all the time," Commissioner Roderick Chu said Thursday, his tongue well in cheek.

In reality, Tax Department workers were staggered when the check arrived in Albany, said department spokesman Madeline Lewis.

"They thought it was a fake," she said. "Then they calmed down and realized it wasn't."

Tax officials estimated the New York City man's income for 1984 was between $24 million and $28 million.

Lowly Steers face Rebels with win streak

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

A new wrinkle was thrown into the District 4-5A boys basketball race Tuesday night when the Big Spring Steers made their intentions of contention known with a 70-66 upset victory over Abilene Cooper.

Though they are only 1-2 in the young district season, they have already surpassed their 1984 and 1985 4-5A accomplishments. In fact, the Steers snapped a 21-game district losing streak with their victory, dating back to Feb. 15, 1983 when they beat Odessa Permian, 61-47.

Even if the Steers fail to contend for this year's 4-5A title, their ability to win games could have a lot to say in who gets a post-season berth.

As it stands now, Midland High and San Angelo are the early leaders with 3-0 records, but one won't be there for long. The Bulldogs and Bobcats have a date tonight in San Angelo. The winner will be the lone 4-5A leader.

4-5A Cage Roundup

In other games, 2-1 Midland Lee's Rebels will be out to snap Big Spring's one-game winning streak when they host the Steers at Chap Center.

The Rebels are tied for third place with Odessa Permian. The Panthers travel to 1-2 Abilene Cooper while 0-3 Odessa High hosts 0-3 Abilene High in a battle to leave the league cellar.

All district games are scheduled for 8 p.m. starts.

AFTER A rough 4-5A start, in which the Rebels lost an 81-88 decision to San Angelo, Lee has come back with a pair of victories over Cooper and Permian. A victory over the Steers tonight, and Lee will be tied for second place with as many as two other teams: the San Angelo-MHS loser and possibly Permian.

Both Lee and Big Spring have a shooter in the top five in the 4-5A scoring statistics. Steer Brian Mayfield is third on the list with 77 points in three games, 25.7 per game average.

For the Rebels, Anthony Dickens is the fifth and final 20-plus shooter with a 21.6 average. In three games, the 6-6 three-year starter has dropped in 71 points. Lee also has the league's No. 7 scorer in Lee Dixon, who has 46 points, 15.3 average, and No. 12 in Eddie Riley with 41 points, 13.7.

THE MHS Bulldogs have had little trouble this year putting points on the board. Their 85.7 team scoring can be seen on the district's individual stat sheet.

Senior Elvin Mackey is atop the tight race for scoring honors with 79 points, 26.3 average. He is closely followed by San Angelo's Chris Lowry at 78 points, 26.0, Mayfield in third and Bulldog Anthony Deande in fourth with 71 points, 23.7.

Midland High is the only team with three players in the top 10, with Matt Sears hitting for 15 points per game to rank ninth on the list.

Also in the top 10 for San Angelo is David Hulse, tied with Dixon for seventh at 15.1. Add the scoring of Ricky Ryan, 13.1 and Skip Bartek, 13.0, and the Bobcats have the only four-player double-digit punch in the district.

"Chris Lowry and Skip Bartek are their two best players," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "If we can control Lowry and Bartek, we'll be all right."

THE BULLDOGS and Bobcats have already met once this year, in the championship game of the Kerrville Tournament. MHS came away a 73-66 winner. Stephenson is hoping to make it two straight over the Bobcats despite being on the road.

"Road games don't make any difference in our league, I don't think," said Stephenson. "San Angelo beat Lee in Midland and beat Abilene in Abilene. We beat Odessa over there and Big Spring in Big Spring. You still have to go out and play. It doesn't make any difference where you play, Chap Center, Big Spring or Abilene. You don't have that big an advantage in high school."

Texas Christian basketball coach Jim "Killer" Killingsworth gives instructions to his Frogs, who are off to their best start in 15 years with a 3-0 Southwest Conference record.

TCU breaks gate at 3-0

Frogs no surprise to 'Killer'

PORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian's basketball team is off to its best start in 15 years and coach Jim "Killer" Killingsworth says he's more pleased than surprised by the Horned Frogs' 3-0 Southwest Conference record.

"But I'll tell you the truth, I thought we were the type of team that was capable of it," he said as TCU prepared for a Saturday night showdown with Texas A&M (2-0) at College Station.

"Of course," he smiled, "we were also capable of a 1-2 or 0-3 start."

With no players among the SWC scoring leaders, the Frogs have succeeded not with one or two super stars but with unusual balance, aggressiveness and teamwork.

They've out-rebounded all but one opponent in compiling a stunning 11-3 record that includes SWC triumphs over perennial nemesis Rice, preseason favorite Arkansas and Baylor's suspension-crippled Bears.

"It's Killer's reward for quitting smoking," quipped Glen Stone, TCU's sports information director.

Certainly something unusual is going on. Stone's associate, Charlie Dierker, observed that winning just might be agreeing with the volatile coach, who has been known to fling his coat or an occasional chair in a fit of sideline frenzy.

"I've known him for almost 10 years and he has just mellowed out," laughed Dierker. "The games don't seem to upset him like they once did. He is more calm and more easy going."

"Of course, when you have a winning basketball team, you have a tendency to be that way."

This squad is different, said Killingsworth, who is in his seventh season at TCU and has a record here of 95-48.

"I've had other teams that were team oriented but I don't believe I've ever had one — that was also so well balanced through seven or eight men," he said. "Some of those other clubs had a star or two."

Junior college transfer Carl Lott leads the Frogs in scoring with a modest 13.8 average and guard Carven Holcombe, a preseason SWC pick, is right behind at 12.7.

Significantly, Jamie Dixon, Larry Richard and 6-11 center Greg Grissom are all averaging better than nine points a game and Norman Anderson is scoring at a 7.8 clip.

More importantly, six players are averaging more than four rebounds a game, headed by Richard (7.9) and Anderson (5.6).

The 84-68 triumph over Baylor Wednesday night illustrates the balance and aggressiveness that lie at the heart of the TCU success.

The Frogs entered the game with the third best defensive shooting percentage in the nation and enhanced it by limiting the Bears to a meager 32.7 effort.

Although Lott led the TCU scoring with 11 points, five players recorded seven or more points while the Frogs were demonstrating their league-leading rebounding strength with 42 rebounds to Baylor's 38.

"I thought TCU was the best team we've played this year," said Baylor coach Gene Iba. "They played harder, longer than anyone we've played."

Killingsworth said he believes the Frogs will continue to contend for the conference title if they can maintain their intensity.

"It all starts with intensity," he said. "If you have it, then you are going to be able to do the things you need to do, like rebounding, shooting and defense. Without it, you generally struggle in all areas anyway."

Lee's Tayrien still Rebel

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Odessa High's brief flirtation with Midland Lee head football coach Jack Tayrien came to an end Thursday as Tayrien made a decision to stay as the coach of Lee's Rebels, according to Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director.

"Jack called me Thursday from New Orleans and said that he had decided to remain at Lee," Bartosh said. "He told me that he had talked with Odessa officials Thursday in New Orleans and told them he was no longer interested in the head coaching job at Odessa High."

Tayrien has been in New Orleans this week attending the NCAA coaches' convention. He was in New Orleans when word came out that Tayrien had made an application for the head job at Odessa High.

Tayrien, an Odessa High graduate, could not be reached for comment Thursday, but told the Reporter-Telegram Wednesday that he did fill out an application for the Odessa High vacancy, but only did it because Odessa officials wanted to talk with him about the job and couldn't do it unless he made a formal application.

Although Tayrien couldn't be reached Thursday, Midland High head football coach Doug McCutchen, who has been staying with Tayrien in New Orleans, confirmed Thursday that Tayrien had made a decision to stay at Lee.

"Jack told them (Odessa officials) that he had decided to remain at Lee and was no longer a candidate for the Odessa High job," said McCutchen. "This thing didn't help me any way. I was going to have to coach against him no matter what he decided, but I think it's great that he is staying in Midland."

Tayrien was scheduled to leave New Orleans for Midland today.

"Of course, I'm happy that Jack has decided to remain in Midland," said Bartosh. "This is really nothing new. There are people always wanting to talk with the coaches we have. I guess that's something you have to deal with when you have successful programs."

Cowboys run from Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Telephones were left lumped on the floor with the litter of packing boxes and surplus schedules. All that remained in the private bathroom of club President Tex Schramm's office was a rumpled copy of the Los Angeles Times.

The Dallas Cowboys, embarrassed by a playoff loss to the Los Angeles Rams last Saturday, skipped town over the weekend.

At the team's executive offices near downtown Dallas, pictures, trophies, furniture and almost everything else was cleaned out. Little more was left behind than a few cheerleader nametags and an old team poster.

"When I left here Friday before the L.A. game, they were here," said Bill Tidwell, a worker at the Cowboys' Dallas office building. "I came back Monday and they were gone."

THE COWBOYS, skunked by the Rams 20-0 in Anaheim, planned all along to move their offices last weekend to a new development in suburban Irving, team officials said.

"I know it did look like we just left town, slipped out. But we're out here trying to get it back together," team spokesman Greg Aiello said Thursday.

In 1971, the team moved its games to Texas Stadium in Irving. Last August, it moved its practices to the "Valley Ranch" development in Irving. Over the weekend, the executive offices were packed up and moved and by Feb. 1, the ticket office and travel agency will be at Valley Ranch, too.

The Dallas Cowboys aren't really in Dallas anymore.

"We already have an investigation," Dallas Mayor A. Starks Taylor told television station WFAA, his tongue planted firmly in cheek. "It's very secret, though. I'm not able to comment on it. — It's one of the big problems in our city."

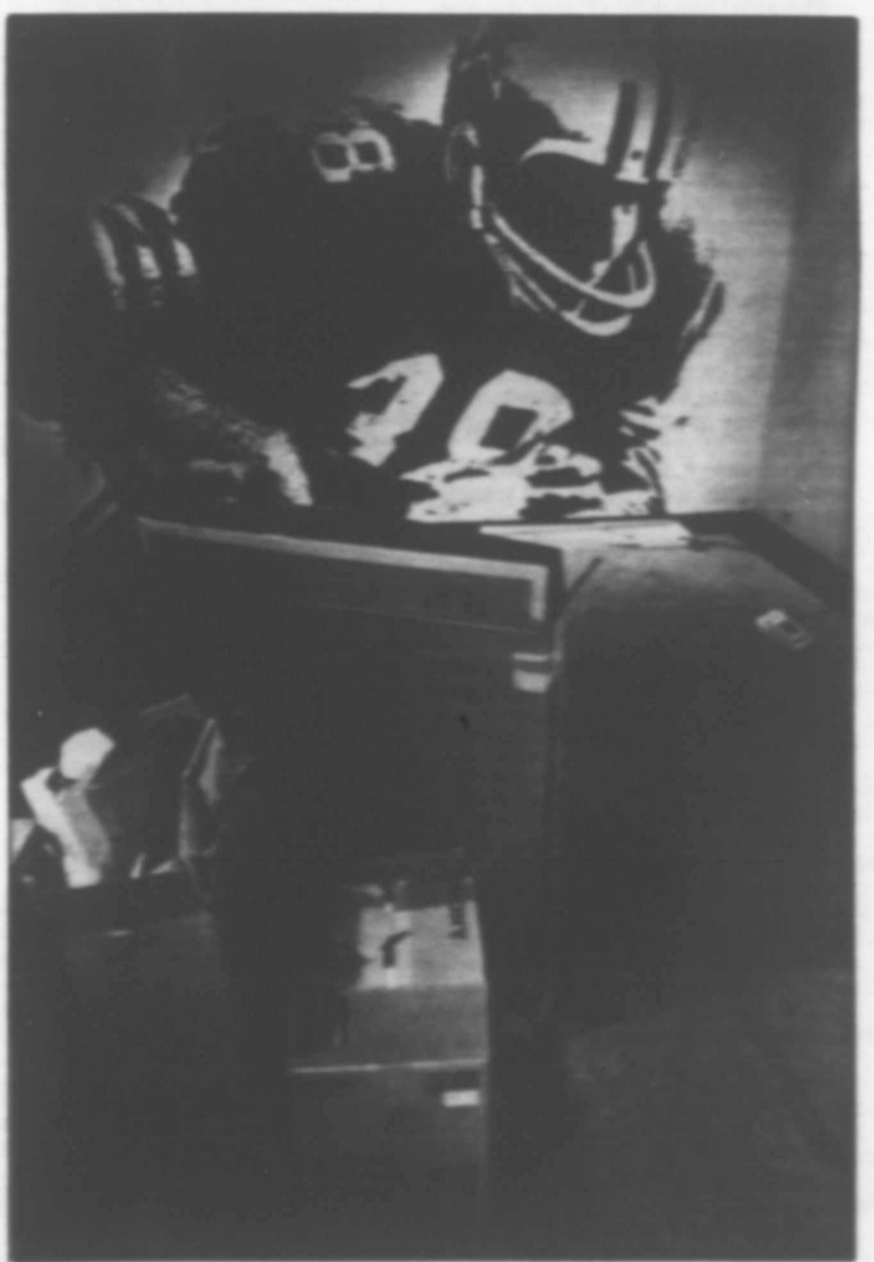

For Irving Mayor Bobby Joe Raper, getting the Cowboys is a very serious civic coup, even if the team did end its season on a sour note.

"Taking into account even a season like this year, there's tremendous pride in having America's Team," Raper said.

Resident, the mayor said, "We're going to cry all the way to the bank with the tax money from this Cowboys center."

Few anticipate a move to rename the franchise in, say, the "Irving Cowboys," "Suburban Cowboys" or "The Dallas Cowboys — Irving's Team."

"I don't think they'll call themselves the Irving Cowboys," Dallas

Telephones and packing boxes were all that remained Thursday in the executive offices of the Dallas Cowboys after the team moved offices to Irving.

City Councilman Jerry Rucker told WFAA. "How 'bout the Irving Berlins?"

Phone calls to the Cowboys main offices in Dallas are now answered by a recording saying the number has been changed.

In the middle of what was once Schramm's office, a circular imprint remained in the carpet from a Super Bowl trophy. An empty lemon juice bottle was all that was left behind in the bar Thursday, and the only evidence of the fateful flight to Los Angeles was the tattered newspaper on the bathroom floor.

Coach Tom Landry's office was bare, stripped even of its telephone. And the silver stars stuck on the glass front doors of the 11th floor offices had been pulled off. Even the Dallas Cowboys sign alongside Central Expressway will one day come down, officials said.

"They were good guys," Tidwell said of the former tenants. "They had great timing (with the move). Really great."

Edberg stuns flu-ridden McEnroe by 6-3, 7-6

ATLANTA (AP) — Yannick Noah made him fight for the distinction, but Ivan Lendl remained the only undefeated player in the $800,000 AT&T Challenge Tennis tournament by pulling out a victory with a 10-8 third-set tiebreaker.

The 6-3, 6-7, 7-6 victory over Noah marked the second time in two nights Lendl was extended to three sets.
Lendl faces John McEnroe, upset by Stefan Edberg earlier Thursday, at 6 p.m. CST today. Jimmy Connors and Edberg meet in the other semifinal this afternoon.

Edberg said he served and returned serves better than at any time previous to his 6-2, 7-6 first-time victory over McEnroe.

"I don't think I could have served better," Edberg said. "I went for every serve, first and second. I know I can beat McEnroe if I play very well." McEnroe had won all three of his previous matches with Edberg in straight sets.

"I look forward to playing a lot more matches with him, but these aren't the circumstances you want to hold them under," McEnroe said, referring to a stomach flu he contracted two days ago.

Edberg broke McEnroe's serve in the fourth game of the first set. There were no service breaks in the second set, but McEnroe had an early lead in the tiebreaker when he broke Edberg for 3-0. Edberg came back with overpowering returns and serves. At one point McEnroe broke his racket when he slammed it to the ground in frustration.

Earlier Thursday, Connors returned to the court only 15 hours after losing a 7½-hour match to Lendl to defeat Gomez 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

In the other afternoon match, Curran downed Jerryd 6-4, 6-1.

Connors, 33, had battled Lendl until almost 10 p.m. Wednesday — losing 6-3, 5-7, 6-1 — and was back at The Omni sports complex for Thursday's 1 p.m. match.

Connors started quickly against Gomez, who said, "I was worried for a moment I wouldn't be able to get a game."

The American let the second set slip away, but broke Gomez in the first game of the final set and again in the fifth game for a 4-1 lead. After Gomez held, Connors served out the match.

"The night comes and goes pretty quick when you go back and sit around and can't go to sleep until 1 or 2 in the morning," Connors said. "But I haven't done that for two months — I've been off — so I forgot what it was like to go home and just stare at the walls, but it worked out OK."

Curran needed only 25 minutes to take the second set from Jerryd and win his first match of the round-robin tournament.

After breaking Jerryd's serve in the eighth game of the first set, Curran didn't let Jerryd come close in the second, breaking serve in the first, third and final games.

Malone, Bol block Jazz

Rockets erase big Spurs' lead

Associated Press

The sharpshooting of Jeff Malone outside and the shot-blocking of Manute Bol inside were too much for the Utah Jazz to handle.

Malone scored 32 points and the 7-foot-6½ Bol blocked seven shots as the Washington Bullets sent Utah to its ninth loss in 10 games, 95-89 Thursday night. Washington snapped a four-game slide.

"We tried to get everyone involved in the offense," said Malone. "My shots were falling tonight."

And so were Utah's — to the floor after being blocked by Bol.

"If I stay in control on defense we can win," said Bol, who had only two points. "It's good to win a game on the road."

Jazz Coach Frank Layden was impressed with the Bullets' 1-2 punch that did in his team.

"Give them credit, they are a good team," said Layden. "They isolated very well and really controlled the ball."

"Although he only scored two points, Bol played a great game. A lot of people came to see him tonight and I don't think he disappointed them. He had seven blocked shots and was an intimidating force every minute he was in the game.

"Malone just killed us from the outside tonight. Bobby Hansen was in his face all night and he still made some big shots."

The Jazz was led by Adrian Dantley with 32 points, but Dantley had to leave the game with a hip injury in the fourth period.

Utah guard John Stockton said of Bol, "Not only does he block shots, but he makes you adjust your shot so you miss a lot of shots that he doesn't block. When we come down on a fast break and I see him standing there, I hesitate, and this is reflected in our shooting percentage."

Rockets 120, Spurs 110

John Lucas scored 27 points as the Rockets rallied from a 17-point hole at halftime and won their 19th straight home game. Houston moved within two points with a pair of three-point baskets by Lucas early in the fourth quarter. Akeem Olajuwon put the Rockets ahead to stay with a jumper and free throw 7:49 from the final buzzer.

Ralph Sampson contributed 24 points for Houston, while Steve Johnson led San Antonio with 31.

Hawks 110, Pistons 99

Glenn Rivers had 29 points and Dominique Wilkins scored 26 as Atlanta won for the 11th time in 15 games and Detroit fell for the 11th time in 13 outings. The host Pistons fell behind by 27 points and nearly overcame that, pulling with six behind a lineup filled with reserves. But Atlanta responded with five of the next six points and coasted.

Nuggets 94, SuperSonics 90

Reserve Mike Evans, playing for foul-prone Lafayette Lever, contributed 12 of his 15 points in the last 10:17 of play to lead the host Nuggets. A tight defense held Seattle to only five field goals in the last quarter.

Calvin Natt paced the Nuggets with 23 points, while Jack Sikma had 38 for Seattle.

"Our defense was very good," said Denver Coach Doug Moe. "The best way to play them is to put our best defensive players out there."

Williams deserves Hall

An AP Sports Analysis
By HAL BOCK

The appointed guardians of baseball's Hall of Fame have proudly ushered Willie McCovey into Cooperstown, while once again denying admission to Billy Williams, compounding a continuing misdemeanor.

They examined Williams' credentials — a .290 career batting average, 20 points higher than McCovey; 2,711 hits, 500 more than McCovey; 1,475 runs batted in, 80 less than McCovey; and 426 home runs, 95 less than McCovey — and advised him to apply again next year.

Williams fell four slim ballots short of election — nine-tenths of a percentage point shy of the "pure 75 percent" the baseball writers require. Last year, they shut the doors by just two votes on the late Nelson Fox in his final year of eligibility, turning away a man whose induction would have only added luster to the shrine.

Williams is luckier. He has 10 more swings and almost certainly will make up the narrow deficit in the 1987 election when no first-time heavyweights, like McCovey this year, move up for consideration.

That is not the point. Williams ought to be marching into Cooperstown right now. He shouldn't have been forced to wait around for another year. He shouldn't have had to wait the five years since he first became eligible.

It is sad to report that there are some otherwise responsible members of the Baseball Writers fraternity who absolutely refuse to vote for a candidate in his first year of Hall of Fame eligibility. Never mind that his credentials will not change, that he will not get one more hit or record one more victory. These voters just feel that election in the first year — an achievement denied even the legendary Joe DiMaggio, who later was chosen the greatest living player of the century — is too much of an honor to bestow on any mere mortal.

It's one thing to protect the integrity of the Hall of Fame and to take seriously the responsibility of choosing its members. But it's quite another to be fanatical about it.

The BBWAA electors are far from perfect. They proved that when Hank Aaron and Willie Mays were not unanimous choices for Cooperstown. If some voters could find a way to leave them off their ballots, then certainly Billy Williams' absence should not be a shock.

Not a shock, perhaps. Just wrong. McCovey's selection is completely justified. He hit more home runs (521) than any other left-handed hitter in National League history. And if his credentials are good enough for induction — as his and Williams' certainly are — then he ought to be elected as soon as he is eligible and not be made to cool his heels in the waiting room, undergoing the scrutiny of an annual review.

And while Williams waits, the electorate casually tosses around throw-away votes. It is to be hoped that none of those missing Williams votes came from ballots that found room for marginal candidates like Jack Bingham, Jose Cardenal, Bud Harrelson and George Scott, all fine fellows but hardly Hall of Famers, and each of whom received one vote for Cooperstown.

Thirty-three voters supported Don Larsen, a distinctly ordinary pitcher with an 81-81 career record who owns one of baseball's singularly spectacular accomplishments — a perfect game in the World Series. Hopefully, those 33 Larsen voters found room on their ballots, too, for Billy Williams, whose production spanned 18 seasons, not one day.

Chaps meet Murray St.

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College returns to action at 7:30 tonight against Murray State, Okla., at Big Spring's Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, and it's not any too soon as far as Coach Jerry Stone is concerned.

"We didn't work out Sunday or Monday and had only a light workout in the morning Tuesday and then called off the afternoon workout because of the weather."

Stone added, "It will be good to play someone." It also be the last game without significance for the Chaps, who plunge back into Western Junior College Athletic Conference action Monday...again at Big Spring, against Howard College.

However, when you are 16-0 and ranked No. 3 in the nation, every game is significant.

Originally, this was to have been a two-night tussle for the resumption of WJCAC play, but Howard encountered difficulties lining up suitable opposition, so it became a one-night affair.

Fortunately, the Chaps had the Mesa, Ariz., Shootout last week for a post-holiday warmup. MC added three more wins.

Stone was especially pleased with the way the Chaps played after the loss of Chase Brown at mid term.

"It hurts to lose a starter and a contributor," Stone said. "In a case like that, it's up to somebody else to take up the slack and that's what happened last week in Phoenix."

In one game, Lincoln Minor tossed in 23 points and in the semifinal against Ricks of Idaho, Mookie Blaylock pumped in 35, 17 from the field in the final against Mesa.

Murray State played in the Chaparral Classic back in November and was 1-2, losing to Garden City, Kan., 83-75, and South Plains while defeating Grayson County, 87-78.

Gault's motto: 'Safety first'

James says New England can run

Associated Press

"Safety first" may be Willie Gault's motto when the Chicago Bears hook up with the Los Angeles Rams in Sunday's National Football Conference title game.

Gault, a wide receiver for the Bears, will be given added responsibilities as the "safety" man when Chicago kicks off to the Rams' Ron Brown.

Both Gault and Brown are world-class sprinters — Gault a member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic team and Brown a gold medal winner on the U.S. relay team at the 1984 Olympics.

"We've run against each other twice," Gault recalled Thursday as the Bears took advantage of some milder weather at the Atlanta Falcons' training headquarters in Suwanee, Ga. "I beat him once and he beat me once."

GAULT WILL be the last-resort man on kicks should Brown elude everyone else. Brown led the National Football League in kickoff returns, running three back for touchdowns.

"I'll be the safety man just in case," Gault said. "It's no big deal. I've done it before. I did it last year in the playoffs. We can't play around. This is for all the marbles."

Also going for all the marbles Sunday will be the New England Patriots and Miami Dolphins. These two teams meet at the Orange Bowl for the American Conference title and a chance to play in the Super Bowl on

NFL Roundup

Jan. 26 at New Orleans. The NFC game starts at 11:30 a.m. CST, with the AFC game scheduled for 3 p.m.

Gault and Dennis McKinnon also will be the primary receivers for Bears quarterback Jim McMahon, who threw two touchdown passes to McKinnon as Chicago defeated the New York Giants 21-0 in the second round of the playoffs.

"We'll have to be patient but we've been patient all year," Gault said. "The name of the game is winning. Dennis and I would like to contribute but if we don't and we still win the game, that will be fine."

LAST YEAR, the Bears lost the NFC title game to the eventual Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers 23-0.

Both the Bears and Rams rely heavily on defense. The Rams advanced to the conference title game by beating the Dallas Cowboys 20-0. Running back Eric Dickerson set a playoff record with 248 yards rushing against Dallas, and his matchup with Bears running back Walter Payton could provide a key to the game.

The Dolphins had to rally from a 21-3 deficit in the third quarter to beat Cleveland 24-21 in the second round of the AFC playoffs. In building their lead, the Browns rushed for 251 yards, and the Patriots intend to test the Dolphins' rushing defense again Sunday.

"I think we can run the ball on anybody," said Patriots running back Craig James, a college teammate of Dickerson at Southern Methodist. "We have a great offensive line. It takes a great effort to stop our running game, and it only sets up our passing when you concentrate on our running." James' 1,227 yards rushing during the season ranked third in the AFC.

THE DOLPHINS had the weakest defense statistically against the rush among the 10 playoff teams. In three of their 17 games, they gave up more than 200 yards on the ground, and in four others they yielded more than 150.

In a 17-13 regular season victory over the Dolphins, New England gained 201 yards on the ground. Miami won the second meeting of the two AFC East Division teams 30-27, allowing only 122 yards rushing.

"We played New England on that Monday night down here as well as we've played this season," Dolphins Coach Don Shula said. "We have to play that way again."

If the Patriots are forced to go to the air rather than rely on James, they could encounter problems. Wide receiver Irving Fryar cut a tendon in the little finger of his right hand and will be sidelined.

Kite fires 66 round

By HANK WESCH
Copley News Service

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Mark O'Meara has had it easy on the roads driving from his home 20 minutes away to the La Costa Hotel and Country Club this week.

But the traffic he's encountering atop the MONY Tournament of Champions leader board is getting heavy.

O'Meara shot a 7-under-par 65 Thursday for a 9-under-par 135 total at the midpoint of the $500,000 golf event. But that just put him in a three-way jam that includes defending champion Tom Kite and opening-round co-leader Calvin Peete.

Kite placed a 66 behind his opening-round 69, and Peete birdied the last three holes for a 67 to go with his opening 68.

Four other golfers are within four shots of the lead, among them amateur Scott Verplank, a 21-year-old senior at Oklahoma State University. Verplank toured La Costa's 8,911 yards in 87.

In the senior division, Miller Barber's second straight 70 gave him a three-shot lead over Lee Elder, with Arnold Palmer another shot back.

O'Meara was reared in Orange County to the north, but built a home on a hill overlooking a lake near here last summer.

"It's about a 20-minute drive," O'Meara said. "I take the BMW."

It wasn't that long ago that O'Meara was washing cars at a country club to make a little extra money while attending Long Beach State on a golf scholarship.

O'Meara, three days shy of his 29th birthday, had modest success in his first three PGA tour seasons. But he then moved into the luxury auto class with two years that produced three tournament titles and more than $800,000 in earnings. By finishing seventh or higher in the T of C, O'Meara will receive enough to become the 57th player in PGA tour history to top $1 million in career earnings.

O'Meara's round Thursday, one stroke off the tournament single-round record, may have paved the way to the milestone.

He didn't hit a drive in the fairway until the sixth hole but still had two of his seven birdies by then. A 4-iron out of the rough stopped 6 feet from the pin at the first hole to set up one birdie, and a 5-iron off the tee on the 178-yard third hole preceded a 12-foot birdie putt.

O'Meara wedged to within 12 feet to set up birdies on the three par-5 holes. His other two birdies came when a 4-iron shot stopped 2 feet from the cup on the 203-yard par-3 14th, and when he landed a 7-iron shot within 11 feet on the 423-yard 18th.

O'Meara was in danger of bogeying only once but made a 10-foot par-saving putt on the 394-yard eighth hole, a stroke he considered the key to the round.

"I'll take 65, but I had a lot of good breaks to shoot 65," O'Meara said.

Free agents finally sign, but collusion cry remains

NEW YORK (AP) — The executive director of the Major League Players Association reiterated Thursday that collusion among major club owners could have been the reason for the late signings of virtually all of baseball's free agents by their old teams.

"My remarks have been designed to support collusion," Don Fehr said. "It does appear that that's the case."

While Fehr emphasized that he could not yet prove collusion among the owners, he said, "We are still reviewing the final stages of negotiations and will be doing so for the next couple of days. The free agent market still is very troublesome."

Several teams beat the Wednesday night deadline for signing free agents, or losing them at least temporarily.

Among the players agreeing to terms were outfielder Kirk Gibson and third baseman Tom Brookens with the Detroit Tigers, catcher Carlton Flak with the Chicago White Sox, relief pitcher and former Midland Cub Donnie Moore with the California Angels, pitching brothers

Phil and Joe Niekro and catcher Butch Wynegar with the New York Yankees, and second baseman Tony Bernazard and pitcher Jamie Easterly with the Cleveland Indians.

The only unsigned free agent was Kurt Bevacqua, a reserve infielder-outfielder with the San Diego Padres. The Padres said they were not interested in re-signing Bevacqua.

Under the new free-agent system, players who rejected their team's offers and chose not to go to salary arbitration had until 11:59 p.m. EST Wednesday to resign. After the deadline, teams would have had to wait until May 1 to negotiate with their free agents. In the meantime, those players would be eligible to negotiate or sign with any other team.

Prior to the Wednesday night deadline, the free agents could have signed with any club. None did, and that, along with the belief that none was approached by other clubs, disturbs Fehr.

"There's never been such an absolute lack of interest in free agents," Fehr said. "Take Flak or Gibson or Moore — you would think that other clubs would have had interest in these people. But if so, they never expressed it."

"There was no real effort to sign these free agents by other clubs."

"That doesn't suggest the operation of a free market, and if that's true, that violates the (Basic) Agreement (between management and the union)."

"I was very surprised that no club other than the same club was interested in those free agents."

Gibson, Flak and Moore were considered the major prizes of the free agent group.

Moore, who had a club record 31 saves with an 8-8 record and a 1.92 earned run average for the Angels last season, signed a three-year contract for a reported $1 million per year.

"I really wanted to be an Angel again," Moore said. "It's really nice. I'm kind of speechless. There was always hope. We simply got together and both sides bent a little."

Angels Vice President-General Manager Mike Fort called the 32-year-old Moore a "very important factor in our club."

"I'm delighted to have things finalized," Fort said. "Doing it any earlier would have been too easy. This way, it made better drama."

The 28-year-old Gibson led the Tigers in 1985 with a .287 batting average and hit 29 home runs while driving in 97 runs. Although Gibson was honeymooning in New Zealand, the Tigers said they had reached agreement with the player's agent, Doug Baldwin, on a three-year contract that was worth about $3.9 million.

"Baldwin has power of attorney," Dan Ewald, a Tigers spokesman, said, "and he will sign for Gibson. It's binding."

"On behalf of all the Tigers, we're happy," added Ewald.

Flak, 38, and the White Sox reached agreement on a two-year contract.

Dublin coach suspended

DUBLIN, Texas (AP) — Dublin Athletic Director Bill Bryant was suspended with pay early today pending an investigation into his use of money from the high school's vending machines.

The suspension is based on a Texas Education Agency audit report that showed Bryant used funds from the machines to pay for trips to see University of Texas football and basketball games, school officials said.

The report also indicated Bryant used the money to rent an airplane to attend a UT athletic banquet and to pay Dublin coaches a "Christmas bonus."

Dublin School Board trustees emerged from a 2½-hour executive session just after midnight and voted 5-2 for the suspension.

Bryant, who has also been Dublin's football coach since 1977, said the suspension was just "one step closer to getting this over with."

"I'm very confident that right will prevail," Bryant said. "I'm looking forward to a great 1986 football team in Dublin."

The board also voted unanimously to hire an attorney who is an expert in school law to assist in the investigation.

The meeting drew a noisy standing-room-only crowd to the high school, where Bryant told board members the expenses were "luxury items" but that all were supported by receipts and reimbursed through the proper channels.

Bryant said the school board in office eight years ago asked him to take charge of the vending machines and "the fund would be handled at the discretion of the athletic director for the betterment of the athletic program and anyone associated with it."

Attending football games helped the coaches instruct and train the players, Bryant said.

"I'm tickled to death this came out," Bryant told the board. "All the money was accounted for. There was no money missing."

Drysdale sues former wife

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — A suit filed by former Los Angeles Dodger pitcher Don Drysdale against his former wife seeks to block the use of his name and pictures at her new restaurant in Hawaii.

The Riverside County Superior Court suit, filed Wednesday by attorney Jon A. Shoenberger of Palm Springs, asks for an injunction against the use of Drysdale's name and likeness by his ex-wife, Eula "Ginger" Drysdale. The suit also seeks punitive and compensatory damages.

The complaint alleges Mrs. Drysdale is using her former husband's name and likeness at a restaurant called Drysdale's Two, located in Kauhau-Kona, Hawaii, without his consent and in violation of the terms of the couple's October 1984 divorce settlement.

The restaurant opened last November. There was no answer to a telephone call there Thursday.

The suit says Mrs. Drysdale, under terms of the divorce, is sole owner of Don Drysdale's Club 53 Inc., a restaurant formerly co-owned by the couple.

Mrs. Drysdale can use Drysdale's name and pictures at that restaurant, located in Kailua-Kona, Hawaii, Shoenberger said Thursday.

But the suit contends the settlement agreement prohibits the use of the former Dodger pitcher's name and likeness at any other restaurant or business venture owned by his former wife.

The complaint contends the new restaurant's walls are covered with pictures of the 46-year-old Hall of Fame pitching star "at various stages of his career."

The suit also alleges souvenirs bearing Drysdale's name and picture are being sold at the new restaurant without his consent.

"The agreement gives her the right to use them in the one (restaurant), but not the new one," Shoenberger said.

Chicago inks Hebner

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs announced Thursday they have reached a contract agreement with infielder Richie Hebner, avoiding an arbitration settlement.

Hebner, an 18-year veteran, had three homers and 21 RBIs for the Cubs last year. Although Hebner plays first base, he mainly has been used as a pinch hitter. He led the major leagues last year with 12 pinch-hit RBIs.

Ned Colletti, a Cubs' spokesman, said Hebner had agreed to a one-year contract, but he would not discuss the specifics of the agreement.

Gold soars

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices soared today, but the U.S. dollar steadied on foreign currency markets after plunging because of rumors of heavy dollar sales by Arab interests backing Libya against President Reagan.
Gold jumped by almost $8 an ounce in Hong Kong and later gained more than $4 in Zurich and more than $3 in London. Bids for gold approached the $340 level for the first time since July.
The dollar opened lower against major hard currencies, but there was no sign that the sudden falls in Europe and New York late Thursday were being repeated.
Dealers were inclined to dismiss the rumors of heavy Arab selling as unfounded. Traders in Frankfurt said there was no evidence that Libya's calls for an Arab assault on the dollar were being heeded.
An ounce of gold was $20 more expensive than a month ago, and up by more than $10 in just a week.

The dollar's moves were far less spectacular. In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 201.88 yen from Thursday's 202.40. Later, in London, it was quoted at 201.88 yen.
Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Thursday:
—2.441 West German marks, down from 2.446
—2.0722 Swiss francs, down from 2.0785
—7.49 French francs, down from 7.515
—2.744 Dutch guilders, down from 2.756
—1.662 Italian lire, down from 1.667
—1.39335 Canadian dollars, down from 1.39755
In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4635, compared with $1.449 on Thursday.

Texaco seeks new trial, removal of judge

HOUSTON (AP) — Failing to reach an out-of-court settlement in its $11 billion dispute with Pennzoil Co., Texaco Inc. went back to court to ask for a new trial and the removal of the judge who heard the case.
Texaco waited until Thursday — the last possible day — before submitting its request for a new trial, turning in 237 pages of documents that claimed more than 300 errors were committed during the 4½ months the case was heard.
State District Judge Solomon Casseb Jr., who presided over the final weeks of the trial, has 45 days to consider the request.

Texaco's actions were "entirely expected," according to Pennzoil spokesman Robert Harper. He said the company would have no further comment.
However, Pennzoil attorney Joseph D. Jamail Jr. accused Texaco of "desperately grasping for straws."
"I think they must have borrowed a dump truck to haul that garbage over to the courthouse in," Jamail said. "First they maligned the law-

Mattox says Texaco should appeal case in Texas

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texaco Inc. should go through the appellate process in Texas before taking its case to New York court, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Thursday in intervening in the Pennzoil-Texaco case.
A state district judge ruled last month that Texaco must pay Pennzoil Co. roughly $11 billion for tampering with a merger agreement between Pennzoil and Getty Oil Co.
Texaco, based in New York, is appealing the ruling to a New York federal court, challenging the constitutionality of certain Texas court procedures. The trial used New York law and Texas court procedure.
Mattox called Texaco's action "premature," saying Texaco should exhaust its appeals in Texas before going out of state or to a federal court.

Texaco is fighting a Texas law requiring the losing party in a civil suit to post a bond equal to the judgment the court awarded. In Texaco's case, the company would have to post a bond of at least $11 billion — the judgment is getting higher because of interest — to appeal.
The total value of outstanding Texaco stock is about $3 billion less than the judgment, and the company claims it cannot post a bond that large.
Mattox is asking the New York court to postpone the hearing until the he can study the case and submit pleadings arguing that the court doesn't have jurisdiction.
"It seems elemental," Mattox wrote to the court, "that if a party wishes to complain about a violation of due process, that party must first avail itself of the process that is available."
Mattox said Texaco's fighting of the bond requirement "is based on assumption and speculation."

ries tried for more than two weeks to negotiate a settlement. Discussions were called off after Pennzoil directors unanimously rejected a Texaco proposal Tuesday night.
Texaco, warning it could be forced into bankruptcy proceedings, also is seeking an order from a federal court in White Plains, N.Y., where the company is headquartered, that would block attempts by Pennzoil to seize Texaco assets.
Texaco also has argued that having to post a $12 billion bond, as required by Texas law, would deny it the right to appeal the verdict.
The motion for a new trial in Texas courts contends that the evidence in the trial failed to support the verdict and that the jury's judgment is "excessive and manifestly unjust" and improperly calculated.
Texaco also alleged jury misconduct, saying the jury foreman's father-in-law was a former employee of Texaco. The company also contended many of the jurors appeared on television after their verdict was announced and indicated they did not really understand the law.

yers, then the jury, then the judge. There's nobody they're going to be able to find on this planet that's going to be suitable for those folks." A jury in November ordered Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company, to pay Pennzoil $10.53 billion in damages for wrongly interfering in Pennzoil's planned merger with Getty Oil Co. in 1984.

In December, Casseb upheld the damage award — the largest in U.S. history — and added another $600 million in interest.

Wagners give $250,000 to diversification center

From Staff Reports

A $250,000 donation to the new Permian Basin Center for Energy and Economic Diversification will help to further "progress" in the region, a University of Texas of the Permian Basin official says.
UTPB received the quarter-of-a-million-dollar donation from Lissa and Cy Wagner of Midland to establish the "Ellen and Bill Noel Distinguished Chair for Energy Research."
The Chair will be affiliated with the University's new Permian Basin Center for Energy and Economic Diversification which will be located midway between Midland and Odessa on land donated by the Schreiber family of Midland.
The Center was created to assist the economy of the region by applying practical research and commercialization to develop new technologies and other entrepreneurial activities. Primary emphasis will be on products and business ventures related to the petroleum and other industries.
The Noel Chair will be used to recruit guest researchers, consultants and scientists as well as enrich seminars and conferences by attracting acclaimed lecturers and speakers.
The Wagners will present the gift to the UTPB Board of Directors on Tuesday in honor of Ms. Wagner's parents, the Noels, who have been residents and supporters of higher education and economic development of the area for over 40 years.
"My parents have dedicated many years and considerable resources to provide educational and economic opportunities for Permian Basin residents. They established the Ellen and Bill Noel Scholarship Fund, which has assisted college students from throughout the region. We wanted to build on their example and recognize their contributions by making this endowment in their name," Ms. Wagner said.

Bill Noel began his career in Wickert, and the family lived in McCamey during the 1940s before moving to Odessa in 1949. Both have been community leaders in cultural, educational and philanthropic endeavors.
Wagner, partner in Wagner & Brown, noted "Our family has roots here, and we plan to continue the Noel's philosophy of reinvesting in the future of the area by making available educational opportunities for future generations to capitalize on the entrepreneurial strengths of the people of the Permian Basin."
In accepting the gift, UTPB President Duane Leach said "The Center is grateful for the Noel Chair Endowment, which we hope is the first of many. This is a prime example of a successful family who is willing to share their successes with others. They recognize the long range implications of this institution and the role it will play in the area's progress."
Initial development of the Center was provided by a cooperative effort of Odessa and Midland families and businessmen. It will bring together research scientists and business people to develop new knowledge and improve existing products for commercial ventures.
The Center will be administered by UTPB with additional resources and personnel drawn from other UT System institutions.

Stock market lower; holiday sales gain

Associated Press
Stock prices followed their record drop with a further decline but many Wall Street analysts say the weakness was an expected respite following the torrid rally of late 1985.
Although the Dow Jones industrial average dipped 8.36 points lower to close at 1,518.23 in Thursday's session, it recouped most of its 21-point mid-afternoon drop. Thursday also marked the eighth-biggest trading day ever on the New York Stock Exchange, with 176.6 million shares changing hands.
The Dow average of 30 blue-chip industrials had plunged a record 30.10 points on Wednesday in heavy trading, the biggest drop since the crash of 1929.
But analysts who believe the Dow will resume its ascent said the average had soared nearly 270 points since late September, and was due for a correction.

Analysts expect a market downturn say factors such as a fear of continuing massive federal budget deficits would continue curbing investor enthusiasm.
A nagging slump in the bond market and fears that Arab nations might withdraw investments in the United States at the urging of Libya helped depress the stock market on Thursday.
Elsewhere, the nation's major retailers reported modestly stronger sales in December, despite a Christmas selling season six days shorter than in 1984.
December sales reports released Thursday indicated that Sears, Roebuck and Co., the nation's largest retailer, increased sales by 1.7 percent in December.
Second-ranked K mart Corp. posted a 5.7 percent sales increase, although sales fell 0.3 percent at stores that have been open more than a year.
Sales rose 8 percent at No. 3 J.C. Penney Co.; 1.1 percent at No. 4 Federated Department Stores Inc.; and 5.6 percent at Dayton Hudson Corp., the fifth largest.
Because of the Christmas selling season, December sales account for a major part of the retailers' annual sales and profits. The season starts the day after Thanksgiving, which fell on Nov. 28 last year, compared with Nov. 22 in 1984.
Analysts said the shorter selling season probably affected sales, although some said sales were strong in the five days before Christmas. Others said sales may have been hurt by a lack of markdowns and by special auto sales incentives, which left many car buyers with less Christmas money to spend.
In other economic news:
—A monthly survey of 5,000 U.S. families indicated consumer confidence dipped slightly in December but remained within a good range, according to the Conference Board.

Kodak flooded with refund requests

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — More than 12,000 callers swamped the Eastman Kodak Co. switchboards the day after the company said it would refund or stock to the 16 million owners of the company's discontinued instant camera.
Fifty operators working around-the-clock Thursday couldn't keep up with the calls to a special toll-free number, said company spokesman Charles Smith.
"We're hiring more operators and we're going to try to double the number we have right now," he said Thursday afternoon.
As of Thursday afternoon, he said, 12,000 calls had been received by Kodak operators on duty at WATS Marketing of America, an Omaha, Neb., company that provides temporary toll-free phone service. The number was announced Wednesday night.

"Our advice to people having trouble getting through is this: the offer is good for the entire year so wait a week or a month to call," Smith said. He said the number would be available until Dec. 31.
Kodak estimates that it sold more than 16 million Kodak instant cameras since getting into the instant photography business in 1976. The most popular models of the five instant cameras on the market are the Trimaprint 920 and 940 and the Champ, Smith said.

Stock Market Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned upward today, showing signs of stabilizing after the selloff of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, down 47.48 points Wednesday and Thursday, edged up 46 to 1,518.69 by noon today on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 2 to 1 in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Merrill Lynch led the active list, up 1/4 at 36 1/4. The stock has benefited lately from heavy volume in the securities markets and takeover rumors that have been denied.

GATX jumped 4 1/2 to 36. Leucadia National Group and affiliates said Thursday they had effectively acquired a 5.26 percent interest in GATX, and might seek to gain control of the company.

Among actively traded blue chips, Ford Motor rose 1/4 to 55 1/2, but International Business Machines slipped 1/4 to 150 1/4 and American Telephone and Telegraph lost 1/4 to 23 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .52 to 119.39. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .70 at 245.02.

Volume on the Big Board came to 58.04 million shares at noon, down from 66.92 million at the same point Thursday.

'Junk' bonds not necessarily trash in mutual funds

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Lately, I've seen the word "junk" used in reference to bonds held by high-yield mutual funds. Exactly what are junk bonds? Although my experience with high-yield mutual funds has been excellent, I'm a little worried.

A. Junk bond is the often unnecessarily harsh term applied to any bond counted as being below investment grade. It does not mean that the bond should be assigned to the scrap heap as worthless.

It does mean that the bond is rated below Baa by Moody's Investors Service and below BBB by Standard & Poor's Corp. and Fitch Investors Service. Bonds judged lower by those rating agencies are considered speculations.

Bond ratings are based on the credit worthiness of the issuer — the ability to meet interest payments and pay off the bonds at face value when they mature.

It stands to reason that bonds with low ratings have to pay higher interest than bonds with high ratings. Wouldn't you expect to get higher interest from a Fly-By-Night Widget Co. bond than from a bond issued by AT&T, GM or IBM?

In order to collect high interest and pass that money along to shareholders in dividends, high-yield mutual funds invest in less than top-rated bonds. Typically, a fund of that kind will own no AAA- or AA-rated bonds but will hold some rated A and Baa, as well as others rated even a notch or two lower.

By investing in medium- and high-yield mutual funds, a high-yield mutual fund naturally takes on greater risk than a mutual fund holding only high-rated bonds.

But, as the name implies, a high-yield mutual fund's investment objective is to provide high income to its shareholders. And, because it diversifies by investing in many different bonds, the default of some bonds in its investment portfolio won't be a disaster for a high-yield fund and its shareholders.

There is a point that shouldn't be glossed over. Bond prices in the marketplace move in the opposite direction of interest rates. Bond prices rise when interest rates go down and fall when interest rates go up. So do the share values of mutual funds holding bonds.

And junk bond prices react more sharply than high-rated bond prices to interest rate changes. As a result, the share values of high-yield mutual funds fluctuate more widely than the share values of mutual funds holding only high-quality bonds.

Q. I'd like to know what happens when a bond defaults. Does the issuing company get away scot free?

A. No, indeed. If your high school readings were similar to mine, you should remember one of the great lines in Robert Service's The Cremation of Sam McGee: "A promise made is a debt unpaid."

A bond is a debt security. If a company defaults on a bond it has issued by failing to keep its promise to make scheduled interest payments, not paying the bond off at maturity or not meeting other requirements in the bond's indenture, the company can be put into bankruptcy.

State could get $50 million from oil, gas royalties

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The state of Texas and 32 oil companies have reached an agreement in a federal suit that could add $50 million in unclaimed oil and gas royalty revenue to state coffers.

The oil companies had filed suit against state Treasurer Ann Richards and Attorney General Jim Mattox in October, claiming state law governing abandoned property was unconstitutional.

Under the terms of the settlement, approved Thursday by U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr., the companies agree to report and remit to the state unclaimed property unless the last known address of the person entitled to the money is in a state other than Texas.

Oil companies incorporated outside Texas are exempt from reporting unclaimed royalties if there is no address for the person entitled to the royalties, or if the address of the person entitled to the money is in a state that has no law governing unclaimed property.

In return for the settlement, Mrs. Richards said she will not proceed against the companies, who have previously given abandoned royalties to other states or kept them for themselves.

"What really matters here is that oil royalties are going to go back to the rightful owners and back to the state of Texas," Mrs. Richards told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

The agreement sets an Aug. 28, 1986, deadline for the oil companies to turn over unclaimed property to the state.

Austin attorney R. James George Jr., one of the attorneys who filed the suit against the state, said he is pleased with the settlement, which prevents the possibility of the companies having to pay out unclaimed royalties twice.

Oil companies listed as plaintiffs in the suit include Getty Oil Co., Apache Corp., Atlantic Richfield Co., Conoco Inc., Fina Oil and Chemical, The Permian Corp., Mobil Oil Corp. and Union Oil Co.

Since the late 1960s, oil companies have turned unclaimed royalty checks over to the state of the owner's last listed address. If the state lacked laws on unclaimed property, the royalty checks were handed to the state in which the oil company was incorporated.

That payment arrangement results from a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in Texas vs. New Jersey in the late 1960s, in which the court said the money should go to the state in which the recipient of the royalty had last listed his address.

Texas, in passing the amendment in 1965 changing the time period for claiming property, asserts that abandoned royalties should be returned to the producing state.

Under the old law, the state did not claim abandoned property for seven years. The 1965 amendment reduced the abandonment period in Texas to three years, which, if enforced, would give the state access to the royalties instead of the oil companies.

Mrs. Richards said the state's unclaimed property program has a good chance of collecting $150 million, including the $50 million from the oil and gas companies, under the legislation passed in 1965.

China's first Holiday Inn inaugurated, plans call for seven more

PEKING (AP) — The world's biggest hotel chain formally entered the Chinese market when the Lido Hotel, a China-Hong Kong joint venture on the road to the Peking airport, was renamed the "Holiday Inn Lido Beijing."

Holiday Inn has managed the Lido since it opened with 500 rooms in February 1984, but it held back from a full management agreement until the recent completion of another 500 rooms.

Rudi Koppen, the American-based chain's Asia-Pacific managing director, said Thursday that Holiday Inn plans to build seven more hotels in six Chinese cities and take on management of hotels in Canton, Gullin, Shanghai, Xian and the Shenzhen special economic zone outside Hong Kong.

Ex-FNB president soon may collect money

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Tom Wageman, former president of the failed First National Bank of Midland, soon may be getting his $600,000, which has been held in escrow, and interest after the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La., dismissed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s appeal of the judgment in the disputed case.

Last January, U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton ruled that Wageman rightfully was due the $600,000, which FNB had placed in escrow with InterFirst Bank Dallas in mid-1983 as an inducement to hire Wageman as FNB president — a $300,000-a-year post. Wageman had been president of a Chicago bank since 1979.

FNB directors hired Wageman, 51, in mid-July 1983 for his banking experience in an effort to bring the failing bank out of its slump. The $600,000 was to be paid Wageman were FNB to be declared insolvent or sold prior to July 15, 1986.

The 93-year-old bank collapsed on Oct. 14, 1983, after the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency had declared the bank insolvent. Subsequently, the FDIC moved in as receiver for and liquidator of the bank's assets, which had peaked out at $1.8 billion. RepublicBank of Dallas bought from the FDIC some of the old FNB assets and named Wageman president of the newly formed RepublicBank First National Midland, which is headquartered in the 24-story FNB Building.

The bank failed due to a slump in the economy, soured energy loans and a drop in the price of petroleum. However, Wageman, who had testified that he had "reversed (adverse) trends in the past," as late as August 1983 felt he could "stabilize" the community, instill public confidence in the bank, and return deposits to the ailing institution.

FDIC claims that the escrow funds belong to it — not Wageman — since the escrow funds would be void had Wageman taken the FNB presidency in contemplation of the bank's failure. FDIC contended that it should have been apparent to Wageman that the troubled bank was doomed even before he took over the presidency on Aug. 1, 1983. The bank failed 2½ months later.

Wageman disagreed with FDIC's assessment. And Judge Bunton ruled that as late as July 15, 1983, when Wageman and FNB directors entered into the hiring contract, that there was "not a high probability that First National would fail."

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals dismissed FDIC's appeal on procedural grounds. The FDIC had not filed a "timely" notice of appeal.

The FDIC on Feb. 1, 1985, had filed notice of appeal from Bunton's Jan. 23, 1985, judgment on awarding Wageman the $600,000.

Notice of appeal is to be filed within 10 days from the date of judgment. But the FDIC failed to file another notice of appeal after Bunton on Feb. 21 set forth a "separate, plain, concise" judgment on the awarding of the interest to Wageman. That interest amounts to approximately $100,000.

Then, on Oct. 22, 1985, the appellate court dismissed the FDIC appeal "for lack of jurisdiction." Less than a month later, on Nov. 15, 1985, Bunton entered an "Order Altering Judgment" and an "Amended Judgment," which would allow the FDIC to refile its appeal to the Fifth Circuit.

Wageman objected to that through his attorneys, Bill Browder Jr., Harrell Feldt and Barbara Goolsby.

"Substantial rights of Wageman have been prejudiced by this court's entry of a new order and new judgment on Nov. 15, 1985," Wageman's attorneys argued. Bunton's orders and amended judgment came 10 months after Wageman "reasonably believed" that Bunton's court had settled "the only matter (the interest) still in dispute."

"Wageman reasonably believed and relied on the time limitations provided in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and the FDIC should not be able to skirt those rules," Wageman's attorneys reasoned.

The attorneys said Bunton should give "due regard to the sound interest underlying the finality of judgments."

"Ten months after such final judgment is rendered, this (Bunton's) court should not have allowed the FDIC to skirt the time limitation for altering that judgment in the trial court and to skirt the time limitations for filing a notice of appeal."

Further, Wageman's lawyers said Bunton did not have the jurisdiction to enter the Nov. 15 order and amended judgment. They are petitioning the judge to set aside those documents so that Wageman can collect his money.

Were it not for Bunton's Nov. 15 instruments and the FDIC's motion for a rehearing, "Wageman would be entitled to the monies which have been due him since October of 1983" when FNB failed.

Brown files suit to settle issue of his eligibility for AG race

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

State Sen. Buster Brown has filed suit in the State Supreme Court to settle the issue of his eligibility in running for attorney general on the Republican ticket, he said this morning during a news conference at Midland Regional Airport.

Brown

His application to enter the GOP primary and $3,000 filing fee were rejected Wednesday by State Party Chairman George Strake, who cited a law which states a legislator who votes to increase the pay of an office can't run for that office later.

Brown said he wasn't surprised the application was rejected and welcomed it as a chance to clear up the issue.

The question of his eligibility was brought up last July by Attorney General Jim Mattox. "Mattox is using it as a political issue to undermine my campaign and to keep it from gaining momentum," said Brown, whose state senate district encompasses the metropolitan Houston area.

He expects the State Supreme Court to consider the brief next week and to have a decision within two weeks. Resulting publicity could be a plus or minus, he noted. If he loses the case, "it's not a valuable asset." But if he wins, the additional name identification he gains from the case could boost his campaign.

"Mattox is the one who brought up this phony, political issue," he said.

The brief names Strake and Mattox as respondents and asks that Brown's name be placed on the ballot and that the 3 percent cost-of-living raise approved by the State Legislature last year not be granted Brown should he subsequently win the primary and general election.

It also points out that inflation was 3.2 percent in 1985 and 4.2 percent in 1984 and that the 3 percent raise was granted to all state employees, not just the attorney general.

Barrera: Dignity missing from office of attorney general

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Concentrating on the need to restore dignity to the office of state attorney general, Judge Roy Barrera Jr. of San Antonio brought his campaign for the Republican nomination to Midland Thursday afternoon.

Barrera

During a news conference at Tiger Charter, Barrera said the state justice system is in crisis and punishment assessed a convicted person should be served behind bars and not on parole.

Without listing specific complaints against Attorney General Jim Mattox, who is planning to run for reelection on the Democratic ballot, Barrera focused on his background and philosophy in running the attorney general's office.

Nor did the 33-year-old 144th District judge talk of his opponents in the Republican primary, which includes Collin County District Judge John Roach and former Williams County District Attorney Ed Walsh, or State Sen. Buster Brown, whose application was rejected by GOP State Chairman George Strake. Brown has said he will go to court to get his name on the ballot. But Barrera said he's "not concerned" about the resulting increased publicity.

Barrera's father served as Secretary of State under then-Democrat Gov. John Connally. The son joined the Republican Party after being nominated by Gov. Bill Clements in 1980 to the 144th District Court. In 1982, he was elected to that post with 58 percent of the vote in Bexar County.

As district judge, he has presided over 3,000 criminal cases in which 10,500 years of "punishment and hard time were assessed in my court."

"Integrity and quality...are indispensable to the office of attorney general," said Barrera. Any social, family or political relationship used to advance the political or private interests of others has no place in that office, he added.

In traveling across the state talking to people before officially entering the race this week, Barrera said he found people who have lost confidence in the attorney general's office. "He (Mattox) has not lived up to the dignity of that office."

As a judge, Barrera said, "I took the position politics should play no part in our court system." The lawyers he would hire "would have to make the sacrifice to serve our country, state and community. I want to put together an office this state can rely on."

Looking at prison reform, the candidate said there is a lack of attention and knowledge to the problems facing the state and he was critical of early release programs to ease prisons overcrowding. "This is a merry-go-round we have been living with of going in the front door and out the back the last 10 years. I'm not talking about bricks and mortar. I will put teeth into the law."

Of Mattox's program to make divorced spouses pay delinquent child support Barrera said he would do "everything I can to see those (court) orders are obliged. Mothers and fathers have a responsibility to support their children whether or not they choose to live together."

Barrera told the group of 40-50 supporters that a Republican has never won a statewide race that has been "down on the ballot," meaning no one other than governor. "This is proof of the battle before us. The strategy of the Republican Party has traditionally been north of San Antonio. What my candidacy brings is an added dimension of South Texas."

GOP congressional candidate offers solutions to drug abuse

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Lamar Smith, Republican congressional candidate for the 21st district, officially declared war on drug abuse Thursday in announcing his proposal for an anti-drug abuse program in Texas.

"Effective drug law enforcement will help reduce the availability of illicit drugs and deter drug-related crime," Smith told reporters during a news conference Thursday at Goddard Junior High School. "But education is the key to long term success in stopping drug abuse."

Smith proposes to create a Southwestern Border States Drug Task Force, similar to the South Florida Task Force, that would be responsible for enforcement along the southwestern border of the U.S.

The initial program would establish a comprehensive network of radar sites that would detect illegal flights that cross the border, Smith said. In addition, it would increase military assistance to civilian law enforcement agencies in observing and watching suspected drug flights including the modification of the Civil Air Patrol and military training flights in specific border areas known to be used by drug smugglers.

San Antonio would serve as a "core city" for the President's Organized Crime and Drug Enforcement Task Force, he noted.

In the second phase of the program, Smith proposes to implement an integrated local, state and federal approach to coordinate efforts on the local level for more vigorous enforcement and prosecution in drug cases.

The provision would upgrade the Midland office of the Drug Enforcement Agency with more agents, organize a formal county sheriff's association to monitor local drug trafficking and establish a coordinated effort by local agencies, he said.

Finally, Smith proposes to establish a community organization made up of parents, educators and law enforcement officials. The group would coordinate, implement and monitor programs aimed at "drug demand reduction."

Smith said his proposal could be implemented without exceeding the $1.4 billion federal budget created for such programs.

"I think we can work within that budget, but we must first establish our priorities," he said. "Our citizens, community organizations, and the private sector have recognized that they can make a difference in this battle. Expanded drug abuse awareness and education efforts, the banding together of concerned parents, and the involvement of many community groups are helping to lower the rate of drug abuse in our schools."

Smith added, "There are no simple solutions to this dangerous and festering problem. It is going to take the unified efforts of parents, educators, law enforcement officials, the citizens of Midland and strong, effective leadership in Washington to wipe out this devastating problem."

Lujan takes prison time, probation after earlier mistrial

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 21-year-old Midland man whose October voluntary-manslaughter conviction was voided by jury misconduct pleaded guilty Thursday to the lesser charge of aggravated assault and was sentenced to 10 years probation.

But under the terms of his plea-bargain agreement, Frankie Madrid Lujan will have to serve at least two months in the Texas Department of Corrections before beginning his probation.

Lujan had been indicted for murder after 20-year-old Daniel Ozuna Padilla was stabbed to death July 6 at the Lakewood apartment complex, 4410 Lanham. At his October trial, Lujan admitted stabbing Padilla but claimed he acted in self-defense.

Thursday, resplendent in a white formal shirt with aquamarine bow tie, scarf and cummerbund, Lujan agreed to take "shock" probation, in which a convict is given a brief taste of prison life before his probation begins.

Prosecutors agreed to the plea bargain because they couldn't try Lujan again for murder — the first jury had in effect found him not guilty on that charge, so trying him again would constitute double jeopardy.

"That's what motivated our agreeing to the plea bargain," said Assistant District Attorney Chuck Roades.

"There's a chance he could have walked," said District Attorney's Investigator J.D. Luckie, explaining why the DA's Office chose not to try Lujan again for voluntary manslaughter. "At least it (shock probation) gets him down through the TDC system."

A 142nd District Court jury deliberated more than eight hours Oct. 25 before convicting Lujan on the lesser-included charge of voluntary manslaughter, which carries a penalty range of two to 20 years in prison. After they returned their verdict on a Friday night, Judge Pat Baskin recessed the trial until the following Monday, when the jurors were to decide Lujan's punishment.

Over the weekend, however, one of the jurors called Baskin and told him another juror had brought a knife into the jury room Friday to show what Lujan's weapon, which wasn't recovered by police, looked like. Lujan had described the knife during his testimony, and the juror brought in a knife he thought was similar.

Since jurors aren't allowed to gather their own evidence, Baskin granted defense attorney Richard Alvarado's motion for a mistrial.

Thursday, the nattily dressed Lujan pleaded guilty in an arrangement which will send him to the TDC for two to six months. If he maintains a good prison record, Lujan will be released and go on probation.

Shock probation is intended "to give them a taste of the penitentiary," Baskin said. "The idea is that a fellow who doesn't respond well to probation will have his eyes opened if he does a little time."

"Considering the prison population problem, it's a good system," said District Attorney Al Schorre. "It has worked out well here."

The penalty range for aggravated assault is two to 10 years in prison, but Lujan was eligible for probation because he has no prior felony convictions.

Commissioner candidate saves money with petition

From Staff Reports

Guy McCrary, Midland County candidate for commissioner of Precinct 2, is taking advantage of a Texas statute to save $600 in his campaign.

McCrary, who is seeking to beat Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig out of the Republican Party nomination for the $25,286-a-year post, is using a petition instead of paying the $600 filing fee to place his name on the ballot.

The petition is in circulation by McCrary and his supporters, according to Dean Rucker, McCrary's campaign treasurer.

McCrary needs 79 signatures — or 2 percent of the votes cast in Precinct 2 for Republican Gov. Bill Clements in 1982.

"We expect absolutely no difficulty in getting the number of signatures required to validate the filing," said Rucker. "Guy's record of service to the community is outstanding, and he is well qualified to serve as a commissioner."

McCrary, 32, is owner of Guy McCrary & Associates, a marketing and management consulting firm.

Store reports 'lots of calls' on Kodak returns

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

One Midland camera store reports being deluged with customers wanting to return Kodak instant cameras, while others have had almost no reaction yet to a Supreme Court decision banning the company from selling instant products.

"We've had lots of calls," said Sue Guess, a sales clerk with Midland Camera Shop.

Ms. Guess said about 12 people called Thursday seeking information on refunds for their Kodak instant cameras.

However, Frances Topolski, a sales clerk with K-Mart, said she had received only three inquiries about the refunds.

"I think a lot of people haven't heard about it yet," she added.

Julie Patterson, a sales clerk with Wal-Mart Discount City, said she had not had any inquiries, but she expects the calls to start coming in today.

Thursday's Supreme Court decision left Kodak on the losing side of a 9-year-old battle with Polaroid Corp. over patent rights. The decision prevents Kodak from selling instant cameras and film for the cameras.

Only Kodak film can be used in their instant cameras, so the corporation is offering to refund the estimated 16 million Kodak instant camera owners with a disc camera and two rolls of film, a $50 certificate for other Kodak products or one share of Kodak stock.

The four models of the Kodak instant cameras cost from $40 to $60.

Ms. Topolski said she had taken all Kodak instant cameras off the shelves, but film is still on sale.

Kodak is not expected to lose a lot in sales because the instant cameras were their least popular items.

"Polaroid definitely beats Kodak. I would say an easy two to one. Polaroid has always been more popular," Ms. Topolski said.

"The big reason is because they (Polaroid) have batteries in their film. Kodak doesn't," she said.

Kodak batteries are contained in the camera's body and require owners to purchase batteries separately, she explained.

"We always sell a lot of the Polaroids. More than we do Kodak. It's not Kodak's best seller by any means.

They're not going to be hurt very much," Ms. Guess said.

Polaroid's win may not turn out to be so large in the long run, the shops report, because instant camera sales are always less than other camera sales.

More people are buying other cameras because they get a negative and can do more with it, Ms. Guess said. However, there will always be a market for instant cameras, Ms. Topolski said.

People in arts and crafts and insurance tend to buy instant cameras, she said.

"This is the kind of person who usually buys an instant camera — someone who needs the picture right now."

Liberty painting begins tour

AUSTIN (AP) — A painting of the Statue of Liberty by Texas artist G. Harvey began a national tour Thursday as a tribute to the statue's creator, Frederic Auguste Bartholdi.

The presentation was unveiled by T. Boone Pickens, a G. Harvey collector and president of Amarillo-based Mesa Petroleum Co.

Brown said that at the same time the cost-of-living raise was approved by the Legislature as part of the Appropriations Bill, a rider was attached to it which stated if any member ran for state office and won, he or she wouldn't receive the pay increase.

A precedent already has been set, he contended, when State Sen. Max Sherman was selected as president of West Texas State University and the Legislature in which he had served had given that position a pay raise. But a change was made in the law to allow Sherman to take the post at the original lower salary.

Since announcing two months ago he would seek the post, Brown said he has found that "Texas wants a strong conservative individual defending the state," and contended he has a record of fighting crime.

Mattox, he charged, hasn't lived up to his campaign promises to run a fiscally conservative office or to fight crime.

Brown said when Mattox took over in 1982 the attorney general's office had 500 employees. Since then, the number has increased to more than 1,000 and the budget has doubled.

"Mattox said he was going to be tough on crime and for law and order. He's done none of those. In the last legislative session I was the one who put together the anti-crime package and passed it. During the session, he was nowhere to be found, and he should have been helping us pass this piece of legislation."

Brown also cited a case in which a sodomy law was ruled unconstitutional and Mattox refused to defend it. A district attorney from Amarillo was granted the right to defend it and won, said the state senator.

The attorney general, he said, "is the top lawyer for the state and you have the duty to defend the law."

Legendary actresses wow Dallas crowd

DALLAS (AP) — Actresses Mary Martin and Carol Channing, portraying aging and out-of-work movie queens trying to make a comeback, wowed a capacity crowd in the official world premiere of the Broadway-bound play "Legends!"

Heralded by the beams of eight klieg lights outside Dallas' renovated Majestic Theater, the two appeared Thursday night in the premiere of the play written by James Kirkwood, best known as co-author of "A Chorus Line."

"I always enjoy both of them very much, and I think this could be real theatrical history," said Lee Morton of Dallas, a fan who saw Miss Martin in "South Pacific" and Miss Channing in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" more than 35 years ago.

Miss Martin, making her first appearance since being injured in an automobile accident, and Miss Channing are themselves legends of the musical theater who are attempting a Broadway comeback.

"Legends!" marks the first time the two women have ever appeared together.

The play, scheduled to move to Los Angeles and Washington before opening later this year on Broadway, revolves around the personality struggle that separates the two women and the life struggle that brings them together.

One of the audience members Thursday night was Miss Martin's son, "Dallas" star Larry Hagman, who caused a minor sensation when he strode quickly through the theater's lobby a few minutes before the curtain rose.

Doctor: Home used range of treatments

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Texas City nursing home used some effective and some ineffective treatment methods on patients who suffered from bedsores, an expert in the healing of wounds testified.

Dr. Anthony Silveti, who runs two wound treatment facilities at hospitals in the Chicago area, also testified the nursing home had fewer bedsores on patients than the prosecution had claimed.

Silveti's testimony came in the murder-by-neglect trial of Autumn

Hills Convalescent Centers Inc. and four of its current and former employees.

They are charged with murder in the Nov. 20, 1978, death of Elnora Breed.

Texan wants to 'nose out' Khadafy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Used car salesman Rick Griffing says asking for the assassination of Col. Moamar Khadafy may be going too far.

Griffing just wants the Libyan leader's nose, and has offered $100,000 for the proboscis, provided Khadafy is not attached.

The offer was made Thursday via three local radio newscasts.

"At first, I thought we should pay for his assassination, but that's too strong," said Griffing, adding that response to his newfound People Against Khadafy has been overwhelming with 250 area residents pledging $50,000 toward the unusual goal.

Griffing said the idea began while he and five pals watched President Reagan's news conference Tuesday night.

EARNEST KIKER

Profit depends on average daily gain

By EARNEST C. KIKER

While pasture costs are a major factor in a profitable stocker cattle operation, perhaps even more important in influencing profit or loss are the animal's average daily gain and total gain.

For instance, doubling average daily gain from .95 pounds to 1.94 pounds can reduce the breakeven price by $17 to $19 per hundredweight, assuming 400-pound steers at $280 per head, $50 per acre variable pasture cost, and almost $82.50 for other inputs such as hay, concentrate, salt, mineral, labor, interest, depreciation, insurance and land return.

Average daily gain is critically important because the more an animal gains, the fewer inputs go into maintenance. Average daily gain can be boosted with the following practices:

1. Provide protein supplements where there is dormant pasture or low quality hay.
2. Provide energy supplementation when high quality winter forage is limited.
3. Use gain supplement products which typically boost gain .2 to .3 pounds a day.
4. Use implants which generally increase average daily gain .2 to .3 pounds a day.

As the stocking rate of one animal per acre, boosting average daily gain by just .25 pounds — from 1.44 to 1.69 pounds — increased profit by $31.18. Pushing the gain up to 1.94 pounds a day can result in an overall profit of $72.01 per head. With a stocking rate of .75 acres per head, profits will be even greater, about $25 per head greater in the case of the 1.94 pound average daily gain.

So in stocker cattle operations, as well as in other types of cattle enterprises, the name of the game is increasing the pounds of beef going to market through efficient management. *

Burglar bars blamed in too many fire fatalities

DALLAS (AP) — Seven people died this week when they were imprisoned in their blazing home by burglar bars and fire officials across the nation say the anti-theft devices are responsible for too many fatalities.

"If you put yourself in a dungeon, a fortress, you're protected somewhat from an intruder on the outside. But you've also locked yourself up inside," said Capt. Richard Clark of the District of Columbia Fire Department.

Bars on all but one door and a couple of windows — too small to use as exits — thwarted rescue of the Dallas family. One woman managed to unlock the front door but was overcome by smoke before she could unlock the burglar gate, said fire department spokesman Bill Jernigan.

Cities across the country increasingly are requiring that newly installed bars be of a type that release from the inside. But countless homes are fitted with the fixed bars.

Odessa district judge gives couple life sentences

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — District Judge Tryon Lewis, after hearing about 2½ days of testimony in the murder-for-hire trial of a former Odessa couple, sentenced Leonard and Andrea Garcia to life prison terms.

The 161st District Court judge said he did not stack the life sentences on top of the prison terms the Garcias are already serving on a murder conviction, that the sentences will be served concurrently.

The Garcias were convicted in 1983 of killing 36-year-old William T. Dowd at an Odessa motel in April 1982 during an argument about a drug deal.

Leonard Garcia, 42, was sentenced to 99 years in prison and Andrea Garcia, 43, was sentenced to a 40 year prison term.

The solicitation of capital murder charges grew out of the killing of Dowd. The Garcias were indicted by an Ector County grand jury on allegations they hired Charlie Garrett to kill two witnesses to the killing of Dowd — Tommacene Dowd, Dowd's widow, and her sister, Brandy Williams.

Mrs. Dowd, in testimony during the latest trial, stated Garcia persuaded her to change a statement she had given police concerning the killing of her husband, saying she and her sister would be killed if she didn't. In return for changing her statement, she told the court, Garcia promised to take care of her for the rest of her life, providing her with money and drugs. One of the conditions, she further stated, was that she and her sister would have to leave Odessa and never return. She finally did agree to change her statement and did leave Odessa.

Mrs. Dowd, her sister and Garrett eventually wound up in Minnesota in early 1983 and Garcia then hired Garrett to kill the two women, according to testimony. Garrett, who had been visting in Odessa, returned to Minneapolis and faked the murder of the two women with their cooperation. Pictures were taken portraying them dead and sent to Garcia who, in turn, sent Garrett a check for $3,000. Garrett was later given a quantity of drugs as additional payment for killing the two women during a visit to Odessa.

The Garcias were tried only on the charge of hiring Garrett to kill Tommacene Dowd, Lewis said. The murder-for-hire charge involving Brandy Williams has been dismissed.

Lewis said the Garcias will be required to serve no less than 20 years in prison before being eligible for parole. The judge said he expects the Garcias' attorney, Craig Washington of Houston, to appeal the latest conviction.

The murder-for-hire trial was tried without a jury after the Garcias waived their right to a jury trial.

Ruling pending on bond reduction

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A ruling is pending with a federal judge on a motion for a second bond reduction for Elizabeth Chagra, who faces retrial on charges she conspired to kill a U.S. district judge.

U.S. District Judge William Sessions a few weeks ago reduced bond for Mrs. Chagra from $1 million to $250,000.

Her attorneys Warren Burnett and Larry Zinn filed a motion Wednesday for a reduction to $175,000.

Burnett and Zinn said if such a bond reduction is approved, Mrs. Chagra's family could put up enough real estate to back the bond.

Prosecutor Ray Jahn said if the bond is lowered, he will file a motion seeking to find out the source of the money used to buy the real estate.

Mrs. Chagra was convicted in 1982 of conspiracy to kill U.S. District Judge John Wood.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Islamic group conferees condemn U.S. sanctions

FEZ, Morocco (AP) — Members of the Islamic Conference Organization, urged by Libya to take their money out of the United States and boycott American products, strongly condemned U.S. sanctions against Libya and called for a response from Moslems.

Libya turned the foreign ministers meeting of the organization into an anti-American forum for the second time in three days on Thursday. The resolution passed by the conference followed a milder declaration Tuesday of "firm solidarity" with Libya. Both measures were approved unanimously by the 45-member organization, which normally concerns itself mostly with trade and commerce and includes some countries such as Saudi Arabia and Egypt that are U.S. allies.

It was not known if the pro-Western countries would go along with Libyan demands for specific action against the United States. However, Libya's success in winning a second resolution against Washington came as somewhat of a surprise to diplomats and observers.

Chevron denies presence

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A spokesman for the Chevron Corp. on Thursday disputed a State Department assertion that his company was among the American oil companies that have maintained a presence in Libya.

Larry S. Shushan, speaking in a telephone interview from Chevron's headquarters in San Francisco, said the company's holdings were nationalized by the Libyan government in 1973 and 1974 and that no affiliates, subsidiaries or personnel remained in business in that country.

On Friday, a spokesman for the State Department's Bureau of East Asian and Pacific Affairs listed Chevron as one of several American firms whose technical expertise was regarded as important to pumping Libyan oil. After Chevron's statement Thursday, the spokesman said the information provided to him must have been misleading, and he apologized.

British party is 'split'

LONDON (AP) — The governing Conservative Party was reported today to be split "top to bottom" over the resignation of Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine, who declared that honor dictated he quit in a dispute over the sale of a helicopter company.

After stalking out of a Cabinet meeting Thursday, Heseltine told a news conference he quit because Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was trying to silence his campaign against a U.S.-led takeover of Britain's only helicopter manufacturer, Westland PLC.

His resignation shocked fellow ministers, who had just agreed that any statement on the Westland sale had to be cleared by the Cabinet.

The London Times said today that the Conservative Party was "split from top to bottom" over Heseltine's resignation.

Marcos to study powers

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos said today that an outbreak of street fighting with communist insurgents would be about the only thing that could halt next month's election, and that if re-elected he would review his emergency powers.

Meanwhile, opposition candidate Corason Aquino drew the biggest crowds of the campaign as she stumped south of Manila.

Marcos and Mrs. Aquino are running in the Feb. 7 special presidential election, which Marcos called to prove he can still muster support. At a news conference, Marcos said that nothing short of a running battle in the street with communist guerrillas would force him to call off the election.

"Our estimate, however, is that they have no capability for doing that," Marcos added.

Italian trains collide

CIRIE, Italy (AP) — Two passenger trains collided head-on near the station of this north Italian town, slightly injuring 30 people, police said.

Railway officials said most of those treated at the local hospital suffered minor bruises and no one was seriously hurt.

Officials said the trains were moving very slowly when they collided Thursday on a single track section of the line between Turin and the Lanzo valley, in northwestern Italy. Police were investigating the cause.

New province dedicated

LELYSTAD, Netherlands (AP) — The Netherlands formally dedicated a new 716-square-mile province made up largely of land claimed by pushing back the North Sea.

Queen Beatrix proclaimed Flevoland as the Netherlands' 12th province on Thursday. It is located northeast of Amsterdam on land reclaimed gradually in a giant dam-and-drainage project that began during World War I.

The original goal was to relieve wartime food shortages by creating more farmland.

Every card tells a story. You can learn as much about declarer's hand from what he does not play as from what he does. Here's an example of what we mean. You might like to cover the East and South hands and see how you would fare on defense against South's contract of three no trump. Let's suppose that North-South reach this normal contract via the auction shown. There is no reason for you to lead anything other than a normal fourth-best of your longest and strongest suit. Dummy's jack of clubs wins the first trick and declarer continues with the queen. What do you know about the hand? You should realize that, if you duck, you have given declarer his ninth trick! Also, unless you can take five tricks in a hurry, there is no way that you are going to stop declarer from making his game. What's the tip-off? The fact that declarer did not go after diamonds.

Rejects may be whoppers for CBS' rival networks

By MORGAN GENDEL
Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Think of them as two that got away.

A pair of CBS' hottest executive producers — Peter S. Fischer, of "Murder, She Wrote" and Barney Rosenzweig — of "Cagney & Lacey" both have taken their follow-up shows to other networks.

So, at a time when CBS has dropped to second place in the prime-time ratings and has several time slots desperate for resuscitation, NBC is getting the benefit of "Blacks' Magic," from Fischer, and ABC next month will introduce "Fortune Dane," the new one from Rosenzweig.

It would seem to be a programming blunder of the highest order to allow these two particular creative forces to turn up on the competition's schedule. "Murder, She Wrote" is CBS' highest-rated entertainment series; "Cagney & Lacey" swept last year's Emmy awards.

"Blacks' Magic," which will fill its weekly time period Wednesday at 9, stars Hal Linden as retired magician Alexander Blacke and Harry Morgan as the father who taught him everything he knows. Each week, the two will apply their skills to the solution of crimes that they happen to wander upon.

The lighthearted whodunit tone, the protagonists' ages and their peripatetic nature are all so similar to "Murder, She Wrote" that one industry observer, New York media buyer Paul Schulman, months ago dubbed the show "Murder, He Wrote."

So how did CBS let this one get away?

In a way, it didn't. To CBS, "Murder, She Wrote" is its own "Blacks' Magic."

As executive producer Fischer tells it, he first approached NBC with "Blacks' Magic" 3 1/2 years ago, but was turned down. "They liked the concept but for some reason, mainly to do with casting, it never got off the ground." A year and a half later, he again approached NBC, and "it died again."

That is when he turned to CBS. Fischer recalls that executives there liked the concept, but told him "we'd like to do something with a female lead." Senior vice president Harvey Shephard, the network's top hands-on programmer, said that a script for "Blacks' Magic" never reached his level, but he confirmed that, at that time, he wanted to do a similar "closed-end mystery" — TV lingo for a show in which the perpetrator is not revealed until the end.

(Much more common on TV is the "open-end mystery" — "Columbo" is the classic example — in which the viewer sees the crime committed at the outset.) Either way, Alexander Blacke became Jessica Fletcher (Angela Lansbury), prestidigitator became novelization, and thus was born "Murder, She Wrote."

When that series became a 1984 hit in its first season, "there was renewed interest at NBC" in "Blacks' Magic," Fischer said. The availability of Hal Linden was the key piece of casting that pleased NBC. To fit Linden's affable style, Blacke became "less curmudgeonly" than originally written and, so he would have someone to play off of, he gained a father.

"Fortune Dane" leaves behind no such legacy at the network that passed up executive producer Rosenzweig's next project. It was a business decision on CBS' part.

Rosenzweig said that he did approach CBS about a deal for another series beyond "Cagney & Lacey," but Shephard told him that he was philosophically opposed to making such deals — with any producer — before having a series concept in hand.

"To make a blind commitment without knowing the idea, I'm tying up a lot of resources, and it will hurt my ability to do other things," Shephard explained.

The other two networks, however, do make such deals.

'Cultural' Raggedy Ann charms Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — When the first American visitor to take advantage of a new U.S.-Soviet cultural exchange program made her official premiere this week, Russian children were already enchanted by Raggedy Ann, the star of a touring musical called "Rag Dolly."

The play, performed by the Empire State Institute for the Performing Arts of Albany, N.Y., and based on the Raggedy Ann tales, has been performed twice publicly in advance of its official opening. The eight scheduled performances at Moscow's Children's Musical Theater were sold out.

A 9-year-old boy named Volodya stood in line for autographs after the second performance Tuesday afternoon. "I love this American theater," he said. "I especially liked the dolly."

About 1,000 Soviet adults and children gave a three-minute standing ovation to Ivy Austin, who plays the red-haired doll, after she sang the title song in Russian. She also received loud applause for translating occasional words into Russian with dramatic asides.

A narrator gave the audience an oral synopsis in Russian before each of the two acts.

The 90-member Albany troupe, the first American theater group to visit the Soviet Union since 1979, came under the new cultural exchange agreement signed last November at the Geneva summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Producing director Patricia Snyder said she began discussing a visit two years ago with Natalya Sata, director of the Moscow Children's Theater, but the deal could not be concluded because the old cultural agreement expired in 1979.

Mrs. Sata will take her company to the United States in June, Mrs. Snyder said.

Despite the language barrier, the Soviet audience was enthusiastic about the Broadway-style musical, a form of theater that is rare here.

"We just loved it, loved it!" said Tamara Derevyanshchikova. "I am only unhappy that I don't speak English. I've never seen a musical before, but I can say that I really like this kind of theater."

Her 12-year-old son, Alyosha, said he wanted to see "lots and lots more" American shows.

The troupe caused a sensation at intermission when it passed out letters from school children in the Albany area and were surrounded by Soviet youngsters eager for American pen pals.

The musical was written by William Gibson, author of "The Miracle Worker." Joe Raposo of "Half a Sixpence" and "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" was the composer.

Traveling expenses and artists' fees were underwritten by the CBS Broadcast Group and the Soviet government is paying for the stay in Moscow. Mrs. Snyder would not say how much the trip cost.

All the actors are Americans, but half the stage crew and 14 of the 20 musicians are Soviet citizens.

"We work through interpreters," Raposo said. "At one point, they have to sound like a mariachi band, and the Russian trumpet player didn't know what that was."

The Americans say they have had a warm reception. "I haven't been so well taken care of since I left my mother," Raposo said.

Some complained, however, of being unable to mix with Soviet colleagues.

"I get the feeling the Big Eye is on us all the time," said Sam Parks, one of the American musicians.

Actor Gibby Brand said: "I came here to find out how Soviet actors work, how they live, but I haven't had a chance to do that. So far the only Soviet people I've really talked to are our interpreters."

Philadelphia band finds leap up from obscurity a 'hoot'

NEW YORK (AP) — When the rock 'n' reggae band, the Hooters, performed last July at the Live-Aid concert in their native Philadelphia, organizer Bob Geldof didn't know who they were.

Since then their album, "Nervous Night," has gone gold, they have two Top 10 singles — "All You Zombies" and "And We Danced" — a video and a sell-out national tour under way.

At Live-Aid, the Hooters were the first artists to perform on the 107-foot-high stage. Almost overnight the band went from playing small-town gigs to one of the pop concerts of the century. "We don't get jittery about new audiences after that. We'll probably never reach more people than that at once," said Eric Bazilian, the Hooters' all-around instrumentalist and songwriter.

"This is still a grass roots thing, but now the roots are longer," he said. "We're doing the same thing we were doing at home (Philadelphia). We like the feeling that we're tapping into the underground. The ultra-hit crowd doesn't like us. No one particular group is into us."

Bazilian set up the Hooters with keyboardist and vocalist Rob Hyman in 1984. Before being known as the Hooters, Bazilian, Hyman and former member Rick Chertoff played in a local Philadelphia band called Wax. The trio later became the principals in a band they named Baby Grand. In 1983, after two albums that flopped commercially and critically, Chertoff severed the longstanding alliance and turned to producing.

Following a brief hiatus, he made Bazilian and Hyman the principal players on his first major effort as a producer — Cyndi Lauper's multi-platinum LP, "She's So Unusual."

Riding on the crest of the album's huge success, Bazilian and Hyman regrouped and formed the Hooters with Eric Usikinen. Bassist Andy King and guitarist John Lilley joined later.

The group soon became a record-

ENTERTAINMENT

"It's not like we're the hot new kid in town. We've always been there. We are good, and we've worked very hard to be good. We prescribe to the (Bruce) Springsteen school of artist development: You hang in there and you play and work hard and suddenly you're in Newsweek."

— Eric Bazilian of the Hooters breaking act, playing Philadelphia's local halls. Within a year of the band's formation Chertoff produced the Hooters first album, "Amore," an independent LP which sold over 100,000 copies.

The musicians patented their own brand of reggae, using rock keyboard riffs and the curious, perky sonic sound of the Hohner Melodica, sprinkled sparingly throughout.

The Hohner Melodica is a hybrid, keyboard harmonica which the group affectionately nicknamed the "hooter." Bazilian and Hyman so enjoyed playing the instrument that they dubbed themselves the Hooters.

The name conjures many images for their fans. "The group is a lot of different things...Everyone thinks something different. But the key is to make sure that everybody thinks something," said Bazilian.

"The success of Cyndi's record brought us so much attention," he said in an interview. "Our rate of movement was phenomenal. After that the band experienced exponential growth. In July of 1984 we had garnered enough acclaim in the industry to sign our current record deal with Columbia."

The Hooters' 19-city tour has been sold out at every stop, and the group doesn't want to become another flash-in-the-pan rock memory.

"We are not a band that was produced as a major media hype," said Bazilian. "It's not like we're the hot new kid in town. We've always been there. We are good, and we've worked very hard to be good. We prescribe to the (Bruce) Springsteen school of artist development: You hang in there and you play and work hard and suddenly you're in Newsweek."

Some critics have compared the Hooter's seemingly overnight success with that of summer sensation 'til Tuesday, a group that was highly visible with one hot single last summer then fizzled.

"I feel bad for 'til Tuesday. They really had some talent," said Bazilian. "But their picture was everywhere. Now all that's left of that band is (the lead singer) Aimee Mann's blond hair. With us a lot of people hadn't heard the name so they weren't expecting anything but got a big surprise."

If the Chertoff-produced "Nervous Night" is any indication, the Hooters have nothing to worry about. The album recently had its third single, "Day by Day," released and is within a few thousand sales of becoming platinum.

The Hooters, all between the ages of 25 and 30, live in or around Philadelphia," said King. "For any band to survive there has to be a common thread. Philly is ours. As the sound evolves you bring old fans along, but you pick up a few new ones as well."

The rock-n-reggae band, the Hooters, performed first at the Live-Aid concert in Philadelphia. From front left are John Lilley, David Usikinen, Eric Bazilian, and back, Andy King and Rob Hyman.

"No matter how big we become we will always be based in Philadelphia."

Protect dogs from antifreeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterinarians at the University of Pennsylvania urge dog owners to keep their pets away from antifreeze.

Antifreeze is very toxic to dogs, and even a small amount can be fatal, according to the university's School of Veterinary Medicine.

And dogs seem to like the taste of antifreeze, they warn. Prompt medical attention is necessary if a pet ingests this product.

The veterinarians also urge washing the feet of dogs after they have been walked on city streets or sidewalks.

DEAR ABBY

Mom believes in child's rights with own room

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

hood. — MODERN MOM IN ENID, OKLA.

What do you think? — ALL IN THE FAMILY

John Cash. My husband insists that the "J.C." stands for Jesus Christ.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a 13-year-old son. I believe if a child wants his bedroom to be messy, with clothes and other belongings strewn all over the place — on chairs, door-knobs, the floor — so be it.

Van Buren

The bedroom is supposed to be a private, comfortable place a child can call his own. How can that be when parents holler, scream, yell and threaten at whatever trips their trigger?

My son will be brought up to know that his bedroom is his — not mine. I don't know how many others would agree with me, but I was raised by a mother who screamed, yelled and threatened me if my room wasn't in perfect order, and all I have is bad memories of my child-

DEAR MOM: Kids (especially messy ones) will love your letter. Mothers will hate it. Me? I say, keep the door to the kids' rooms close, and go in once a week to rake it. I would, however, insist on one rule: If there is any snacking in the bedroom, all dishes and leftovers should be taken to the kitchen before bedtime.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I am 28 and the mother of two darling children. I've been happily married for five years and I really love my husband. He's good to me and the kids, but here's the problem: I am very much attracted to my husband's brother, and he's attracted to me. We kid around and flirt a lot, but haven't done anything about it except maybe a quick kiss in the kitchen. Abby, it's getting harder and harder to fight these feelings.

Maybe if I have a fast fling with this guy and get it over with, I will finally get him out of my system.

DEAR ALL: I think you should try harder to fight these feelings. No flirting, no eye contact, no kidding around, and no quick kisses in the kitchen or anywhere else. Forget the fast fling. It could fling your marriage right into the divorce court.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please settle an argument between my daughter and my husband? It's about the J.C. Penney Co. My daughter claims that the "J.C." in the J.C. Penney Co. stands for

Who is correct? — EDIE FROM DAYTONA BEACH

DEAR EDIE: Neither, but your daughter comes closer. Although the founder of the J.C. Penney Co. was the son of a Baptist minister and a very religious man, the "J.C." in his name stands for James Cash, not Jesus Christ.
