Bunton expected to order single member districts

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton today was expected to sign a second official judgment ordering the Midland Independent School District to abolish its at-large election system and implement seven single-member districts. Bunton also was expected to order that an election be held May 3 to elect two minority district representatives to the school board.

According to MISD officials, Bunton reportedly advised attorneys on Tuesday that he intended to enter the order requiring MISD to be divided into the seven single-member districts despite the district's request that he reconsider his original ruling.

Trustees voted unanimously today to ask for an expedited appeal to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La.

Following an executive session on legal matters this morning, Board President Bill Jackson said MISD trustees asked to expedite the appeal "so this controversy can be determined and resolved, for everybody's benefit, as soon as reasonably possible."

MISD originally had asked the court to approve a 4-3 plan (four single-member districts and three at-large positions), but the court rejected that plan and ordered the school board to adopt two minority districts proposed by the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council, and then to divide the remainder of the school district into five additional single-member districts.

MISD in a compromise plan asked the court in January to approve a 2-5 plan under which the two single-member districts would be implemented. The remainder of the district, with a majority of Anglo voters, would be considered one district with five at-large members.

While Jackson said he was not surprised by Bunton's ruling today, he added the board believes its 3-4 plan is constitutionally satisfactory and that the court should have accepted the district's 2-5 plan. He charged the court of being "in error" in imposing a 7-0 plan on the MISD.

LULAC President Edia Hernandez said, however, that the court ruling is fair in that it provides all Midlanders equal representation. "We pay taxes. We are entitled to our say. We are entitled to our opinion and we are entitled to representation. We aren't second-class citizens," she said.

Mrs. Hernandez argued with the MISD's claim that it was willing to compromise to resolve the controversy. "If they had we wouldn't have had to have gone through this and waste taxpayer's money," she said.

Aquino orders release of political prisoners

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today ordered the Philippine military to release all of deposed ruler Ferdinand E. Marcos' political prisoners, including suspected members of a communist insurgency.

Presidential spokesman Rene Saguisag announced Mrs. Aquino's new directive at a news conference a day after her government slowly began releasing some of the more than 500 political prisoners officials say are still in military detention.

When asked whether the order included Jose Maria Sison, suspected leader of the Philippine Communist Party, which had been outlawed under Marcos, as well as other people suspected of being insurgents, Saguisag replied, "without any exception."

Asked then if the presidential order meant immediate release for "all 450 prisoners" that the military acknowledges it is still holding, he said, "Well, that is the intent."

Saguisag added, however, that releases must be governed by "certain administrative requirements."

"We want to be sure that not one of them is being held on other charges," he said.

The presidential spokesman, a human rights lawyer who is a member of the committee studying the release of prisoners, had acknowledged Thursday that there was "very strong resistance" to the release of certain people.

That was widely interpreted as meaning that senior officials in the Philippine military were adamant that at least some prisoners suspected of taking part in the New People's Army communist insurgency should not be freed.

But today, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said, "We are bound by the order of the president. If she issues that order, we will carry it out."

Of 39 prisoners initially slated to have been released Thursday, only 16 had actually been freed by this afternoon, bringing criticism from human rights groups and an association of relatives of political prisoners.

Firefighters battle a two-alarm blaze at the Lake Point Apartments, 2438 Whitmore. The Thursday afternoon fire was touched off by a welder's torch being used for plumbing repairs, according to Midland Fire Department reports. The apartment complex is located near the intersection of Garfield and Loop 250.

Families find shelter after fire

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

More than a dozen Midland families woke up this morning in unfamiliar surroundings after a Thursday fire destroyed a building at the Lake Point Apartments, 2438 Whitmore.

"They were all relocated last evening" to vacant units within the same complex, said Sue Robinson of the Midland County Red Cross.

Ms. Robinson was still assessing the needs of the 28 people burned out of their homes on Whitmore, as well as those of a family whose home on South Tyler Street was heavily damaged in an earlier fire.

"It's too early to tell right now," Ms. Robinson said this morning.

The Lake Point fire, touched off by a plumber's torch, was one of several blazes which kept the Midland Fire Department busy Thursday and early this morning.

"When it rains, it pours," said Fire Chief James Roberts this morning. "Yesterday, practically every station in town responded to something."

The most serious fire was at the Lake Point Apartments, where 13 families lost their homes. Firefighters used 40,000 gallons of water to quell the blaze, which was touched off about 2:30 p.m. in apartment 8H.

According to Fire Marshal Jerry Petree, the fire was sparked by repairmen working with a welder's torch in the bathroom of the apartment, which was occupied by Belinda Baber.

"They were sweating some pipes," Petree said.

Flames ran up the wall to the attic and quickly spread to other units.

"Somebody came and knocked on the door and told us to get out of there," said Angie Rizzo, who stood outside the burning building holding her six-month-old baby.

"There's nothing," responded Manuela Castellon, 23, when asked what she had rescued from the flames.

Residents of Building Seven were luckier; firefighters were able to keep the flames from crossing the breezeway connecting their building to Building Eight, and neighbors helped remove their belongings to protect them from smoke damage.

"All these people got everything out. They were wonderful," said Carrie Lovett, 21, who lived in 7D. "It takes things like this to show you there's good people."

No injuries were reported, but two five-gallon cans of gasoline were found in one of the apartments directly below those being consumed by flames.

"It could have been worse," commented Fire Inspector Eric Metzger as he sifted through the debris.

No damage estimate was available this morning. The complex is owned by the Robert McNeil Corp. of Dallas, according to fire reports.

Earlier, firefighters responded to a fire in a house at 407 S. Tyler reported about 11:46 a.m.

The fire was apparently set by children playing with matches in a bedroom, according to reports. The bedroom was heavily damaged, and there was smoke and heat damage throughout the house.

Officials cool to proposed oil import fee

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — At the first Senate hearing on a proposed oil import fee, administration officials threw cold water on the idea and economists warned it could do more harm than good to the U.S. economy.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, a co-sponsor of two bills (SB 1507 and SB 1987) under review by the Finance Committee's energy panel, making oil state senators' argument for an import fee, warned that domestic exploration and production could dry up if something isn't done to stabilize prices.

"We as a nation ought to be able to see at least to the end of our nose," Bentsen said. "We ought, also, to be able to look backward far enough to recall the last time we were hooked on foreign oil, then take rational steps to prevent that from happening again."

Bentsen, with Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., co-sponsored a bill (SB 1987) that would impose an excise tax on crude or refined oil products imported into the United States to bring the price near to $11 a barrel.

With Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., Bentsen sponsored another bill (SB 1507) that would set an import fee at the amount that world oil prices fall below $30 a barrel or the amount that refined products fall below $35 a barrel, up to a maximum of $5 for crude and $10 for products.

J. Roger Mentz, Treasury's acting assistant secretary for tax policy, confirmed that the president would agree to an oil import fee only in the context of a revenue-neutral tax reform bill that meets his prerequisites.

Tax reform, approved last year by the House in a form unacceptable to the president, is pending in the Senate; President Reagan has said it is his No. 1 legislative priority.

U.S. oil falls below $13 a barrel

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of the main grade of U.S. oil briefly fell below $13 a barrel in frenzied trading today, touching levels last seen in 1978, and Saudi Arabia's oil minister said popularly traded crudes could plunge as low as $10 before bottoming out.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate crude for April delivery plummeted as low as $12.70 a barrel as trading opened, then recovered to $13.25 at midmorning.

That still was 70 cents lower than Thursday's close, and 58.2 percent lower than the $31.70 a barrel that prevailed as recently as November.

The last time oil sold for less than $13 a barrel in the United States was mid-1978, according to Platt's Oilgram Price Report, a newsletter specializing in petroleum prices.

Ahders names Justice Court clerk temporary JP

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A veteran Justice Court clerk was appointed Thursday to serve as justice of the peace until Charlie Sprayberry's legal problems are resolved.

"I'm doing it to help Judge (Robert H.) Pine out," said Judy Massingill this morning.

Her appointment by County Judge William B. Ahders takes effect Saturday, according to Terry Lewis, Ahders' administrative aide.

Ahders' letter to Ms. Massingill said he was appointing her at Pine's suggestion, and she was to serve "pending the outcome of Charlie Sprayberry's situation," Ms. Lewis said this morning.

Ms. Massingill, 45, has been a Justice Court clerk for 10 years.

Ahders' letter noted that she had no intention to run for the position if Sprayberry should be removed from office and a special election called.

"I think it'll work out real good on a temporary basis," Pine said this morning.

Sprayberry, 45, was elected justice of the peace for precinct one, place one in 1980, and re-elected in 1984.

He took an unpaid leave of absence after being indicted in November for attempted sexual assault, a third-degree felony.

The charge resulted from a reported incident involving Sprayberry and a former Justice Court clerk which allegedly occurred on April 26, 1984.

He was also indicted for two counts of harassment and three of battery, or improperly soliciting cases for an attorney.

A three-day trial on the attempted sexual-assault charge ended in a mistrial last week, with a 25th District Court jury deadlocked 10 to two for conviction. Special prosecutor Andy Shuval said he would try the case again, but no trial date has been set.

The other five indictments against Sprayberry are for alleged misdemeanors. They were to be tried at the county-court level after the felony indictment is resolved.

Retired Midland attorney Leonard Howell was appointed temporary JP in December, but left office Feb. 18, the day Sprayberry's trial began. Pine has been handling the caseload alone since then.

RELEASE

HONOLULU (AP) — A planeload of Ferdinand Marcos' personal effects, said to include weapons and millions in cash, has arrived as the exiled Philippines leader relaxed at a heavily guarded air force base.

"It's been a quiet day," said Chief Master Sgt. George Joanou, a spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command at Hickam Air Force Base, where the 90-member Marcos entourage remained in seclusion Thursday.

"Everybody's still here. They've been taking meals and resting at the quarters. There's been no word that he's going anywhere."

The calm was disrupted by the arrival of a second C-141 transport plane loaded with hundreds of boxes of personal effects belonging to the Marcos family and those who fled the Philippines with Marcos on Wednesday.

NBC and ABC quoted unidentified government officials as saying that the plane was loaded with millions of dollars in cash, certificates of deposit, deeds for U.S. land holdings, and a cache of weapons.

Although some family members complained to Gov. George Ariyoshi that they left the Philippines too hurriedly to grab a change of clothes, KHON-TV quoted unidentified government sources in Washington as saying jewelry belonging to Marcos' wife, Imelda, was brought into the country in diaper boxes, along with $200,000 in gold bullion and nearly $1 million in Filipino currency.

U.S. Customs officials refused to confirm the reports. Marcos was to be available to the news media tonight at 7 p.m.

In a memorandum to Enrile, Mrs. Aquino said, "you are hereby directed to release from detention or any form of restraint on freedom of actions all persons or political prisoners who are presently under custody or restraint pursuant to orders issued by Marcos."

Enrile had been Marcos' defense minister, but Mrs. Aquino retained him in her Cabinet after he and Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, now the military chief of staff, broke away from Marcos last Saturday and led a military rebellion that helped sweep Marcos from office and bring Mrs. Aquino to power.

Replying to questions, Saguisag said Mrs. Aquino issued the order following criticism that she had been magnanimous in victory to Marcos but stricter on the political detainees. Marcos left the Philippines Wednesday, and Mrs. Aquino has said she would not seek his extradition.

In other developments, an ex-senator who led U.S.-based opposition to Marcos returned home today from 14 years in exile, and credited President Reagan with helping topple the Philippine ruler.

But former Sen. Raul Manglapus said that despite his gratitude for U.S. actions in ending Marcos' 20-year reign and bringing Mrs. Aquino to power, he found it "lamentable that it took such a long time for them to do it."

Scores of people greeted Manglapus as he landed at Manila International Airport. The former president of the U.S.-based Movement for Free Philippines left his Asian island nation the day before Marcos decreed martial law in 1972 and had led anti-Marcos forces in the United States.

"It was the people of the Philippines, people power, that pushed the dictatorship to the brink," said Manglapus, referring to the anti-Marcos military and civilian rebellion. "But it was the final Reagan touch that pushed him over."

Monday, the White House urged Marcos to relinquish power, saying it would be "futile" to try to retain power by violence. The next day, Marcos took the oath for a new six-year term. However, he fled hours later to Clark Air Base, then flew with an entourage of family members and associates to Guam and on to Hawaii.

The United States, calling Marcos an "old friend and ally," has offered the 68-year-old deposed president asylum in the United States, but Marcos, currently on a U.S. Air Force base in Honolulu, has not made his final destination known.

Troops capture conscripts before Mubarak visit

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Army troops stormed a mutinous security force camp near the Great Pyramids today and captured about 100 conscripts shortly before President Hosni Mubarak arrived to tour the riot-damaged area, witnesses said.

Under cover of gunfire from four armored cars outside the camp on the northwest edge of Cairo, scores of troops charged into the facility, their submachine guns blazing, the informants said.

There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Witnesses said conscripts of the Central Security Force, holed up inside the camp since the mutiny began Tuesday night, shot back at the troops with automatic weapons.

Information Minister Safwat el-Sherif said today's attack came after five mutineers inside the Central Security Force camp opened fire on army soldiers stationed outside.

"A unit of the armed forces went into action immediately and there was an exchange of fire for five minutes," el-Sherif said. "Afterward the camp was stormed and the mutineers were arrested."

The mutiny, which spread Wednesday to other parts of Cairo and two southern cities, apparently was sparked by a false rumor that the paramilitary conscripts, paid about $4 a month, would be required to stay on duty for a fourth year. The government said it was actually cutting the three-year tour requirement by one month.

The rioting left 36 dead and 321 wounded. Four hotels near the Pyramids were gutted by fire and looting during the two-day rampage, but no tourists were injured.

Clearly outmanned, about 100 security force conscripts wearing civilian clothes came out of the camp, their arms raised in surrender. Witnesses said some prisoners crawled out at gunpoint.

Some mutineers who reportedly escaped from the camp through a back gate were being chased in the desert by army troops.

Mubarak arrived 30 minutes later aboard a U.S.-made Sikorsky military helicopter, guarded by four French-built Gazelle helicopter gunships.

Mubarak, facing his most serious domestic crisis since becoming president in 1981, landed near a government guesthouse behind the Pyramids, about 1 1/2 miles from the police camp. He took a 20-minute tour of the area.

Sporadic gunfire earlier near the Pyramids had delayed Mubarak's tour for an hour. Nearby is the 4,000-year-old Great Pyramid of Cheops, the only one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World still existing

Experts say shuttle decision-making process not flawed

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Four Marshall Spaceflight Center rocket experts, returning fire from a presidential commission probing the Challenger disaster, today disputed the panel's conclusion that NASA's decision-making process was "clearly flawed" in the hours before the Jan. 28 launch.

"I can't agree," said Stanley Reinartz, head of the special projects office at the spaceflight center.

His deputy, Judson Lovingood, said that while NASA will now consider "whether we need to make changes in deciding to launch, you've got to remember this is the same process that was used in 24 successful shuttle launches," as well as earlier moon landings, Skylab and other manned flight.

The comments by Reinartz, Lovingood and two other officials meeting with a small group of reporters amounted to an unexpectedly defiant response to criticism leveled by the commission investigating the loss of the Challenger on Jan. 28.

Summarizing three days of public hearings on Thursday, commission chairman William Rogers bluntly rebuked officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for giving the go-ahead for the Challenger liftoff when engineers had expressed deep concerns

FEE

Mentz agreed that an import fee would help states that are heavily dependent on revenue from oil taxes, but he said consumers would pay more for all goods and services and that poor families (with incomes below $12,000 a year) spend a quarter of their income on gasoline, fuel and other energy uses.

Deputy Energy Secretary Danny J. Boggs avoided tax policy implications in the proposed legislation, focusing his testimony on energy policy.

"The inescapable conclusion is that any energy tax, no matter what its specific form, raises energy costs in the economy," Boggs said.

An oil import fee could further reduce the U.S. trade deficit, Boggs warned. "A fee would make it more difficult for domestic industries to compete with imported manufactured goods, and for U.S. exports to compete in foreign markets," he said.

Noting that all estimates should be taken with caution, Boggs said Energy Department analysts figure that a $5 import fee would increase U.S. oil prices by a somewhat lesser amount, perhaps $3 per barrel or more, beginning in the first year.

This price increase would reduce consumption and raise domestic producers' revenues. Also, it eventually would stimulate or maintain U.S. production by about 100,000 to 200,000 barrels per day above levels that otherwise would prevail and increase use of U.S. and Canadian natural gas, Boggs said.

"The overall effect would be to reduce net oil import demand of about 4.3 million barrels per day for crude oil and products combined by perhaps 600,000 to 800,000 barrels per day, beginning in the first year, the Energy official said.

Energy Department analysts believe the import reduction would probably come largely at the expense of non-OPEC producers — including Mexico and Canada — whose costs are generally higher than those of producers belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. For that reason, Boggs questioned whether the fee would significantly improve U.S. energy

PRICES

Before New York markets opened, Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani told an interviewer in Tokyo that prices of actively traded crudes "may go down to a very low level, perhaps to $10, but they won't stay there for long."

Yamani, in his interview with the Japan Broadcasting Corp. did not say what price levels he expected oil to stabilize at following the current collapse.

At an earlier news conference, Yamani repeated a call for cooperation among oil producers in and out of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to hold down production to prop up prices.

Alan Greenspan, former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, predicted oil prices will continue to fall until OPEC bring production back to the level of demand and until inventories stabilize.

"He said it is not inconceivable for a secondary break in the market to bring wellhead prices into the $10 to $12 a barrel range."

"At $10 to $12 a barrel, the first clear cash losses would become evident on some crude production in the U.S. and perhaps the North Sea," he said.

Greenspan, like Mentz, cautioned that an oil tax would decrease American competitiveness and would be "neither politically easy nor economically neutral."

Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, represented by its chairman James W. Hunt of Dallas, said if "stripper" wells in the nation's mid-continent, and other high-cost wells on Alaska's North Slope and in California dry up, imports would have to double overnight to meet America's energy needs.

"No longer would it make sense to express euphoria in the nation's media over the 'benefits' of sharply declining petroleum prices," Hunt said.

Hunt suggested that an import fee should be a temporary measure to counter "dumping" of cheap foreign oil on the world market.

Energy economist Henry M. Schuler of the Center for Strategic and International Studies at Georgetown University, raised the specter of an oil import tax resulting in Iran replacing the Saudis in OPEC leadership.

"Given the present Saudi political and economic climate, I strongly believe that U.S. imposition of an import fee would prompt the Saudis to relinquish leadership of OPEC to Iran," Schuler said, "a development which would have enormous political and strategic repercussions as well as economic and commercial consequences."

MISD

In other remarks, Jackson said the MISD Board believes that "each citizen should have a maximum opportunity to participate in the governance of their public schools" and that the at-large system of electing trustees would allow citizens to vote for each of the seven trustee positions or two or three trustee positions every year.

The ordered seven single-member district plan "reduces" from seven to one the number of trustees representing any individual citizen and "reduces the frequency of participation in the trustee election process to once every third year," he said.

"Trustees believe members of the minority community are entitled to representation," said Jackson. "In fact, trustees believe minorities have enjoyed the same high level of representation afforded other citizens."

He added that the compromise which would call for four single-member district trustees and three at-large trustees would afford "each citizen an opportunity to vote every year and to enjoy representation from four of seven trustees."

The 7-0 system "is a throwback to the ward system and will encourage geographic factionalization and special interests instead of a broad view based on what is best for all," Jackson said.

But Rolando Rios, attorney for LULAC and the BAC, argued that several jurisdictions operate under such a system without encouraging geographic factionalization or special interests. "If that's their (MISD's) charge, then I wish they'd cite some examples, cite some cases," he said.

FIRE

No injuries were reported in the fire at the house, which was occupied by Romero Aceves and owned by Barry Realtors, reports said.

Even earlier, a trash fire at Dow T. Hamm Inc., 3210 Cloverdale Road, had spread to a pit. The fire, reported at about 9:55 a.m., did no damage but required four hours and 10,000 gallons of water to extinguish, reports said.

And early this morning, a trailer house on County Road 1225 South was heavily damaged by a fire of undetermined cause, reports said.

The house, owned by David Dibble, Route 6, Box 400, was unoccupied when the fire broke out about 3:30 a.m., reports said.

Stores 'overreacting' by removing Gerber

DALLAS (AP) — Grocers who remove Gerber baby food from shelves following discoveries of glass particles in the jars are overreacting, a federal official says.

"I think the level of concern is unusual, particularly with the little bity particles," said Don Heaton, regional director of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. "Nobody is going to advocate it, but it's not at all unusual to find particles in a jar."

Heaton's office is investigating possible contamination after 50 ground glass particles were found in a jar of Gerber strained peas fed Monday to 4-month-old Preston Davis of Dallas.

After the boy began vomiting and spitting blood two hours after eating the peas, his mother called paramedics, who discovered the glass.

A 9-month-old girl was treated at a hospital Wednesday for minor throat cuts after eating Gerber's strained bananas with tapioca.

peas and beef dinner off the shelves at 58 stores in Dallas, Fort Worth and East Texas and officials at 60 Kroger stores in Dallas, Fort Worth and Shreveport removed all Gerber products until FDA tests are completed.

"We took it all out because of the confusion about the product," said Byron Crain, Kroger's director of merchandising. "We don't know what the situation is...It's the most confusing thing I've ever seen in the last 10 years."

Heaton said the FDA has received three other complaints from consumers in Dallas. Test results are not yet known, he said.

Doctors who treated the Davis child said they found no evidence of cuts or other damage caused by eating the contaminated food.

According to the FDA, tests conducted on the strained peas mixture showed about 50 pieces of glass from 1 to 5 millimeters long — about one-sixteenth inch to one-fifth inch.

"It's concept of having glass in food," Heaton said. "But people aren't thinking about the size of the particles we're talking about here, which is extremely small."

Investigators also found three fragments less than 1 millimeter long in an unopened beef dinner jar also purchased by the boy's mother from a Grand Prairie store. Another unopened jar had no contaminants, officials said.

"Fifty fragments in one bottle just doesn't happen," Heaton said. "I find no reasonable explanation as to how that could have accidentally gotten in there."

After detecting 50 particles in one jar, FDA officials bought all of the Grand Prairie store's Gerber food stock and some at a warehouse from which the store is supplied. Out of 3,000 bottles, they said, they found one fragment 2 millimeters long in a jar of string peas.

Heaton said glass contamination in Gerber baby food has been detected in 21 states in the last several weeks, but never has such a high number of glass particles been found as in the Dallas case.

Rich Bowman, co-manager of a Minyard Food store in Dallas, remove a Gerber baby food product from the store's shelves Thursday, in a corporate-ordered move after glass particles were found in a jar of baby food.

STATE IN BRIEF

Load of cocaine seized

FALFURRIAS (AP) — Three men are in the Brooks County Jail after authorities confiscated more than 800 pounds of cocaine valued at $137 million, officials said.

The seizure was the third largest in Texas history. Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said Thursday.

The cocaine was seized after DPS narcotics agents — with help from federal marshals and Brooks County sheriff's deputies — stopped a tractor-trailer rig in front of the county courthouse in this South Texas town Wednesday night, authorities said.

"We found a load of onions covering 862.5 pounds of cocaine packed in large bales," DPS spokesman David Wells said.

Michener donates to UT

AUSTIN (AP) — Best-selling author James Michener so firmly believes the University of Texas should have a top-notch writing program that he is giving the school $1 million to help start one.

"My husband is a Quaker. He is a writer. And he has said whatever money he makes from the arts goes back to the arts," Mari Michener said after the gift was announced.

University president William Cunningham said the money will be used to help create two graduate programs — in writing and book publishing.

'Liz' Chagra convicted

AUSTIN (AP) — Elizabeth Chagra has been convicted a second time for her part in a plot to kill U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., who was slain in 1979 when he was scheduled to preside over her husband's narcotics trial.

The verdict came about 10 hours after the eight men and four women in the federal court jury began deliberations.

Crowder: White conspires against challengers

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Democratic gubernatorial hopeful A. Don Crowder Thursday accused Gov. Mark White and Party Chairman Bob Slagle of conspiring to force him and other challengers out of the race.

A spokesman for White denied the charges. Slagle could not be reached for comment.

Crowder called a Capitol press conference to release details of the plot, which he said he had hoped not to tell. "Since the very beginning of this campaign, there's been a concerted effort at driving me out of this race and frustrating my candidacy," said Crowder, a 43-year-old

"The co-conspirators are Mark White and Bob Slagle."

Their actions, he said, tell all Democratic "newcomers who wish to challenge an incumbent, at least statewide you are not wanted." He called on all "yellow-dog Texas Democrats" to help him defeat White in the May 3 primary.

On Jan. 9, the day he confirmed he would oppose White, Crowder said Slagle called and "with great irritation in his voice, chastised me roundly for my indiscretion in challenging" White. Crowder complained that Slagle has violated his "oath of impartiality" by implying he would endorse White over five other Democrats seeking the party's gubernatorial nomination.

Crowder also complained that White tried to get to him through Attorney General Jim Mattox, Crowder's former law partner. He alleged that on Jan. 10 "an operative out of the governor's office" called Mattox' top aide Harmon Lisnow and "threatened to pull some $300,000 that the governor's office, out of its emergency funds, had committed to the attorney general's office with which to fight a lawsuit in East Texas against Gulf States Utilities Co. concerning alleged rate gouging."

Mattox spokesman Ron Dusek said the attorney general has no contract with White concerning the GSU case. "Mr. Crowder is mistaken," he said.

White, other 'political animals' wonder if budget's sky is falling

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Call it political Animal Farm. First came Chicken Little, followed — of course — by Foxy Woxy (really Loxy). Now we have Mr. Ostrich.

George Orwell would have loved it.

Earlier this week, Comptroller Bob Bullock's office prepared a memo that claimed Gov. Mark White's cost saving plan for state government would save no more than $557 million of the $13 billion revenue short fall facing the Texas treasury.

White bristled at the criticism, saying there is "always a Chicken Little out there who says that something can't be done."

The next day, Bullock tried to update White on his fairy tale history.

"I'm reminded that the villain in the Chicken Little story was Foxy Woxy, who connived to trick Chicken Little and her friends with false promises. I'm sending you a copy of the story for your own study and reference. Sincerely, Bob 'Chicken Little' Bullock."

Thursday, Democratic gubernatorial hopeful A. Don Crowder, who has hurled a few names at White himself, charged into the barnyard. First he criticized White and Bullock for playing nursery rhyme politics.

"I'm calling the governor an ostrich," Crowder added. "He's got his head buried in the sand so far, he can't see what's going on in this state."

By the way, every fairy tale veteran knows Bullock needs to take another look at the book His Foxy Woxy is really Foxy Loxy. The sky is falling.

Secret Service guards Marcos as 'distinguished foreign visitor'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secret Service agents are protecting Ferdinand Marcos round-the-clock under an authorization from President Reagan that accords the deposed Philippine leader the status of a distinguished foreign visitor.

As federal and local officials in Hawaii quarreled over security arrangements for Marcos, Secret Service agents took up positions around the former president.

Secret Service spokeswoman Jane Vezaris said Thursday that under Reagan's directive, Marcos was afforded protection as a distinguished foreign visitor. She said Marcos is the only person in the country currently covered by such authority, but that it is invoked from time to time for foreigners.

Meanwhile, a U.S. aircraft landed in Hawaii carrying "a plane-load of stuff" from Manila that Marcos had been forced to leave behind when he abandoned power Tuesday and was whisked from his palace by a U.S. helicopter.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the aircraft carried "the personal effects of the Marcos family and the other people accompanying him." He added, "We assisted with bringing out a number of items that they needed."

Speakes said the U.S. Customs agency "will perform a thorough examination of all contents of that aircraft."

Trying to end squabbling about Marcos' protection, Speakes said, "We expect all security elements, federal, state and local, to discharge their duties in a responsible fashion."

Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi rejected a Secret Service request to provide security for Marcos for the next six weeks, saying the federal government or Marcos himself should pay for protection.

"If the federal government wants to pay for it, (Fasi) would provide it," said Lou Torraca, a spokesman for the mayor. "He just doesn't want to use taxpayers' money."

In Washington, Speakes also confirmed that Reagan and Vice President George Bush had received gifts from Marcos in the past, but said they were duly recorded and turned over to the government.

The only gift Reagan uses, Speakes said, is a chair, described in some accounts as an electric vibrating chair that massages sore muscles.

A similar chair was given to Bush and put at the vice president's mansion, but he does not use it, said his spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater.

A wooden game table and four chairs, with a combined value of $4,950, also were given to Bush. Fitzwater said they are in a storage room near Bush's office awaiting shipment to a government storage area.

NATION IN BRIEF

JAMA assaults smoking

CHICAGO (AP) — The cover illustration is a grim Van Gogh painting of a skeleton smoking a cigarette, and the contents of today's Journal of the American Medical Association's special anti-smoking issue are just as graphic.

Articles in the journal's third anti-tobacco issue in 18 months call for a ban on advertising of all tobacco products; say smokeless tobacco users risk oral cancer; cite a higher survival rate for heart patients who quit smoking; and contend a higher cigarette tax would encourage millions to stop smoking.

"It is obvious that up to this point we have all failed miserably in trying to defeat tobacco," one editorial said.

"What other conclusion could one possibly reach when one looks at the 1,000 tobacco-associated deaths each day in our country alone?" it said. In one article, the AMA's Council of Scientific Affairs "recommends that the restrictions applying to (broadcast) advertising of cigarettes also be applied to the advertising of snuff and chewing tobacco."

In another article, Dr. Ronald E. Vlietstra of the Mayo Clinic wrote that the mortality rate for heart patients who quit smoking is a third less than that of those who continue to smoke.

Economist Kenneth E. Warner concluded in another study that an 8-cent to 16-cent-per-pack increase in cigarette taxes would encourage between 1 million and 2 million young people and 800,000 to 1.5 million adults to stop smoking.

And in the AMA editorial, the association reiterated its call for a smoke-free society by the turn of the century; insurance industry incentives, such as discounted premiums for non-smokers; expanded health education programs; and a ban on cigarette vending machines.

Free lunches may stop

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least 10,000 schools would have to stop serving free lunches to low-income students under a Reagan administration proposal to stop subsidizing lunches bought by other pupils, critics say.

Ending the cash and commodity subsidies of nearly 24 cents for each "paid" meal would save $722 million and help "to improve targeting of these programs to persons in greatest need," Assistant Agriculture Secretary John W. Bode told a House subcommittee Thursday.

But critics argued that 10,000 to 15,000 schools serving between five million and eight million students could no longer afford to participate in the program.

"You're going to demise many school lunch programs, you are going to send the students down to the bakery to have a can of Coke and a doughnut," Rep. Steve Gunderson, R-Wis., told Bode during a hearing of the Education and Labor Committee's primary education subcommittee.

The Agriculture Department estimates it will spend $4.2 billion this

Morton Thiokol's NASA contract safe

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Despite Morton Thiokol Inc.'s role in the controversy surrounding the loss of the Challenger, industry analysts say the company faces no immediate competition in the production of space shuttle rocket boosters and will remain a prime NASA contractor into the next decade.

"There is no one else that could be up and running with the space shuttle motors," said Mary Schoenbrod, an analyst for Duff & Phelps in Chicago.

Ms. Schoenbrod and other analysts say it would take another company at least five years and more than $100 million to develop the expertise and facilities to compete with the Utah manufacturer, the sole maker of the giant booster rockets since the shuttle program began in the 1970s.

Thiokol is now completing a contract for 74 rockets at an estimated cost of $15 million to $30 million each.

Analysts believe Thiokol and NASA were near final agreement on a new contract for an additional 60 "sets" of the twin boosters. The contract also provided a clause for an additional 30 sets if NASA decided to exercise that option.

The loss of the Challenger and its seven astronauts Jan. 28 has put the agreement on hold with the rest of the shuttle program.

But there is little doubt within the industry that when shuttle flights resume, they will be powered by Thiokol boosters.

"NASA needs Morton and Morton needs NASA," said James Cunningham, an analyst for First Boston Corp. in New York. "Once this all dies down they will sort of return to business as usual."

Investigators have focused on the possible failure of seals in the shuttle's right rocket booster as the possible cause for the shuttle disaster. There are indications exhaust gas may have escaped from the seals, causing the explosion.

Haitian council will try to extradite Duvalier

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The new governing council says it will try to extradite deposed President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier from France, where he was granted temporary exile after fleeing Haiti during violent protests against his rule.

Justice Minister Gerard Gourgue made the announcement Thursday on national television.

France had no immediate reaction today to Gourgue's announcement, and a spokesman at the Foreign Ministry said no statement on the subject was likely until an official request was received from Haiti.

Duvalier fled Haiti for France on Feb. 7, and since then has been unable to find a new permanent home.

Haiti's ruling six-man council also will seek the return of Col. Albert Pierre, Duvalier's police chief, from Brazil, which granted him political asylum earlier this week.

Chris Fitzgerald, an information officer at the U.S. Embassy in Port-au-Prince, said he did not expect Duvalier would be extradited, but added, "I don't want to give the impression the embassy sees this as impossible."

The ruling council's announcement to seek extradition proceeded following a rare news conference in which the council president, Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, said other Duvalier aides accused of crimes "are or will be brought to justice."

Namphy was joined at the news conference by council members Col. Max Valles, the minister of information, and Col. William Regala, the minister of the interior and national defense.

The flight or attempted flight of Duvalier aides — including Rosalie "Mad Max" Adolphe, the longtime leader of the dreaded Tonton Macoutes private militia, who reportedly was released from prison and fled last Friday — has angered Haitians, sparking demonstrations and violence.

Luc Desir, secret police chief under the late ruler Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, attempted to flee on Tuesday but was arrested at the airport after thousands of Haitians, responding to radio reports that he was there, converged to intercept him.

Gourgue said he had directed that Desir and a former Tonton Macoutes named Elois Maitre, be tried for their alleged role in a case of torture and murder.

Pierre, his wife, and Jener Cotin, a former secret police officer, were granted political asylum by Brazil last week and allowed by the ruling council to leave Haiti. Pierre has been accused of torture, disappearances, arrest and murder of Duvalier's opponents.

The trio was reportedly staying at a hotel on a Brazilian island in the Atlantic, but Rio de Janeiro newspapers reported Thursday that they were moved to a nearby military base because tourists in the hotel protested their presence.

After a relative calm last week, demonstrations broke out Monday and Tuesday to protest the Pierre and Desir incidents.

Officials reject stiff enforcement of apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Port Elizabeth officials rejected a proposal to stiffen enforcement of apartheid on its beaches, gaining a respite from a controversy in which the U.S. automotive giant General Motors played a leading role.

The municipal council of the southern coastal city voted 16-5 Thursday against a committee proposal that would have empowered city inspectors to call in police if non-whites used any of Port Elizabeth's four whites-only beaches.

But the vote did not mean an end to segregated bathing. The law still enables a private citizen to lodge a complaint against non-whites using the beaches, and the council made no move to take down the "whites-only" signs that have been on the beaches for decades.

The issue was catapulted into the headlines last week when General Motors' Port Elizabeth plant pledged legal aid to any of its employees prosecuted for defying the ban.

Robert A. White, American managing director of General Motors in South Africa, wrote to the council that GM was paying municipal taxes for services that 60 percent of its 3,500 employees could not use.

"Why?" he asked. "Collectively, it seems the council has neither the courage to do so nor the integrity to clashes between white bathers and blacks or people of mixed race who might break the ban.

Former Mayor Ivan Krige led the fight against the committee proposal, saying South Africa could not afford a clash with an American company which is the city's biggest private employer.

"This city, more than any other in South Africa, is dominated by American capital. This thing gets a lot of publicity, and will give the disinvestment lobby (overseas) a lot of ammunition," he said in an interview.

The United States and other countries are pressing for racial reforms in South Africa, where 5 million whites dominate 24 million voteless blacks under the apartheid system of racial segregation.

In other developments, three white railway apprentices in their early 20s were charged with burning a black man to death and were freed on bail of about $500 each. The victim allegedly was slain on a remote road near Krugersdorp, 20 miles west of Johannesburg.

Officials have given no reason for the attack, but it appears to be the latest indication of a white backlash against anti-apartheid violence.

More than 1,100 people have been killed, nearly all of them blacks, in 17 months of apartheid-related violence.

deal with the issue urgently and openly."

Chris Meyer, a right-wing city councilman, accused White of encouraging civil disobedience, a crime under South African security laws.

Suspected Nazi war criminal arrives in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — John Demjanjuk, the first alleged Nazi war criminal to be extradited by the United States to Israel, arrived today to stand trial on charges of mass murder in the deaths of thousands of Jews in Nazi gas chambers.

The retired Cleveland autoworker has been identified by Holocaust survivors as the Treblinka death camp guard known as "Ivan the Terrible." He will be tried on charges that in 1942 and 1943 he helped operate the gas chambers in which 900,000 Jews were killed at the Polish camp and open-necked shirt, Demjanjuk was approached by the Israeli police officer in charge of his interrogation, Alex Ish-Shalom, and a translator.

Demjanjuk laughed nervously as the U.S. marshals took off his handcuffs. Ish-Shalom then manacled him with Israeli handcuffs and read him his rights, saying: "You are under arrest on suspicion of crimes under the Nazi War Crimes Law."

His statement was translated from Hebrew for Demjanjuk, whom witnesses described as grim-faced.

Accompanied by two U.S. marshals, the 65-year-old Demjanjuk was flown from New York to Israel in a curtained-off section in the tourist class of a regular El Al Israel Airlines flight, said airport authority spokesman George Katz.

Katz said most of the 460 other passengers did not know Demjanjuk was on the plane, which stopped on a distant runway to drop him off before continuing on to the airport terminal.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Human remains from Laos site will be flown to U.S.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Human remains and belongings recovered by a joint U.S.-Laotian team from a Vietnam War crash site of an American aircraft will be flown to the United States later this week, a U.S. military spokesman said Thursday.

Wednesday an 11-member U.S. team ended a nine-day excavation at Savannakhet jungle foothills near the Vietnamese border in Laos where an American AC-119 gunship crashed in March 1972.

The aircraft was hit by missiles over communist North Vietnamese troop supply lines. Fourteen American airmen aboard the plane have been missing since then and the remains unearthed by the team may belong to them.

The Savannakhet search was the second such joint effort to account for a total of 556 Americans missing in Laos from the Vietnam War.

We of course hope this excavation along with that at Pakse a year ago, are indications of the Laotians agreeing to future excavations," said Lt. Col. Terry McCann, a spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command.

He noted that the Laotians have agreed to another excavation before the end of the current dry season, which ends roughly in April.

Africa's time 'running out'

PARIS (AP) — About 19 million Africans need food desperately even though there has been ample rain in much of the continent, U.N. relief coordinator Bradford Morse said Thursday.

"The crisis has gone out of peoples' consciousness despite all we have done to keep it alive," Morse told reporters. "I called this meeting to emphasize that time was running out."

He added "Because of emergency operations last year, deaths were in the tens of thousands rather than the millions we had expected."

Morse said 116 million people in Ethiopia, Sudan, Mozambique and Angola lack food, and 74 million in 12 countries across sub-Saharan Africa as far south as Lesotho need other urgent aid.

Of the $680 million in assistance needed for 1986, about $200 million is for food, and about $440 million is for trucks, port equipment, spare parts, water systems, agricultural needs and shelters, he said.

Another $44 million is required to help more than a million refugees in Ethiopia, Sudan and Somalia.

Iraq claims upper hand

BAGHDAD, Iraq (LAT) — Iraq said Thursday that its armed forces were slaughtering Iranian revolutionary guard brigades streaming across its borders on two fronts, while Iran reported new territorial gains in northern mountainous areas leading to Iraq's oil-rich province of Kirkuk.

Iraq conceded publicly for the first time Iran's three-day-old invasion of the northern Sulaimaniya area, where it said its forces were inflicting heavy casualties on the Iranians.

But it said the Iranian drive across snow-covered mountains was essentially an attempt to relieve pressure on another invasion force lodged in the Faw peninsula, about 550 miles south of Sulaimaniya.

Fire sparks oil depot blast

SALONICA, Greece (AP) — An explosion at an oil depot where a fire has been burning for days sent panic-stricken residents rushing into the streets early Friday. One man died of a heart attack and seven firemen were burned, police and reporters said.

"It was suddenly like daylight for more than a minute," said George Economou, the local correspondent for the Athens newspaper.

U.S. leaves Hussein looking for arms

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein, the guarantor of arms to the generals who run his armed forces, has been weakened in this pivotal power base by President Reagan's renegeing on his $1.9 billion arms pledge, a fact that explains his unreported invitation to a high Soviet military delegation.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The American arms supply line has been "terminated" by the U.S., Hussein told us when we interviewed him over Cable News Network — a choice of word leaving no room for doubt. The king is now looking elsewhere for big-ticket items — new fighter aircraft and a mobile air-defense system — he desperately needs. Moreover, officials in Washington who claim that Hussein will continue to buy spare parts from the U.S. arsenal may be disappointed.

The king will not beg the U.S. for crumbs under a Pentagon table groaning with billions for Israel. He has virtually decided to cancel the annual joint U.S.-Jordan military maneuvers this spring. He can buy his spare parts on the open market (he's already exchanging the M-1 for the Soviet-made Kalashnikov). And he's getting ready — without U.S. help — for hard times when Israel reverts to tough Likud leadership late this year.

Yet the king, who ascended his throne when Josef Stalin was still running the Soviet empire, is not all that happy with his new associates: Moscow for those modern arms for protection against Israel; and Soviet-linked President Hafez Assad of Syria to shore up his northern border with that long-unfriendly country.

He spoke without rancor to us about his country's half-century alliance with the West, starting after World War I with the British. London, in effect, gave his Hashemite kingdom its original identity and sovereignty across the Jordan River from Palestine.

But even though he talked to us with moderation, the bitterness cut through and it was aimed principally at what he believes to be the tight grip of America's pro-Israel lobby on U.S. Mideast policy. "Termination" of the long Jordan-U.S. arms relationship, he told us, would have been unimaginable were it not for the "political" potency of that lobby. He singled out and correctly named AIPAC (the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee).

But Hussein is no brooder. Confronted with dangerous and radically different geopolitical factors arising from "termination," he is moving to prevent further erosion of his political reputation at home and to find new ways to buttress himself against Likud-led Israeli expansionism. Seeking arms from Moscow is no more congenial to him than seeking an alliance of convenience with Syria, a prospect that only one year ago would have seemed ludicrous.

Hussein says privately that only the two superpowers have the resources and can offer the financial terms — long-term loans at discretionary interest rates — to handle small-state or Third World needs. U.S. "termination" leaves Moscow as the sole source.

Hussein

Skeptics believe this may be royal subterfuge, designed to galvanize oil-rich Saudi Arabia into giving Jordan enough extra largess to permit it to buy what it needs from France or Britain. If so, despite their fear and suspicion of Moscow, the Saudis have shown no signs yet of biting on that bait.

A decision must come soon. Restiveness in the military cannot be allowed to smolder any longer, after several years of delay.

After Syria, the king's aspirations are more shrouded. With the U.S. now so prominently committed — in his eyes — to carrying Israel's water in its struggle with the Arab world, Hussein cannot risk military problems with a stronger and larger Syria. Even though Syria backs Iran, and Jordan is essential to Iraq in the Persian Gulf war, Hussein has swallowed scruples to court Assad.

That raises the possibility of some sort of eventual alliance between these two hostile neighbors of Israel. Hussein's break with the PLO's Yasir Arafat, whom Assad regards as a personal affront, may help produce such an alliance.

But Hussein does not yet know. He's looking for new firm ground somewhere, anywhere, to replace an American foundation that has disappeared.

Filipino dawning

The transfer of political power in the Philippines this week could hardly be described as a textbook example of democracy in action, but in a world which has seen more than its share of dictatorial rule it still was refreshing to see the will of a nation's people carried through.

As was witnessed there in recent weeks, free elections still cannot be considered a guarantee that the will of the people will be done. The bitter election between Ferdinand Marcos and Corason Aquino, wife of the slain opposition leader, led to social unrest and in the end a desperate flight by Marcos from his homeland lest the masses vent their anger on him for past atrocities. Even Filipino diplomats and the Roman Catholic Church called for Marcos to step down in the end.

No one, not even the supportive Reagan administration, could deny in recent days that the Filipino people had spoken. They wanted Marcos out of office. They wanted an end to his oppressive regime. They wanted a greater chance to live in a democracy under the presidency of Mrs. Aquino. And in the end, no one — not Marcos, not the troops that still supported him, not the communist insurgents of the New People's Army, not the world onlookers — could alter the Filipinos from that course.

It's regrettable that the change of political power had to be marked by such violence as confrontations between troops and Filipino citizens, by election fraud possibly on both sides and by ransacking of the president's mansion in Manila after his flight, then bloodshed and destruction. But history has shown that democracy is seldom born in the placid environment that nowadays cloaks presidential elections in the United States. In fact even in the United States, democracy and freedom from tyrannical rule was won with the blood of patriots more than two centuries ago. That it is worth the cost is verified by the willingness of free people to die in order to keep liberty alive.

Thus, in the dawning of the new age in the Philippines there is a reason for joy and excitement. With the wisdom of duly elected leaders now and in years to come to put liberty and freedom above all else, the Filipino people could become a shining example of the fruit of democracy gently pushing aside the irritating yoke of autocratic rule.

Nothing is greater than when the search for human rights and self-rule becomes reality.

Soccer's being 'kicked'

I have resided in Midland since January 1980, a period of six years and in each of these years I have been involved in the soccer programs of the Midland Soccer Association of which there have been six fall seasons and six spring seasons.

In each of these seasons the interest in the sport of soccer has grown significantly, to the point where this city now has approximately 3,000 participants of all ages involved in this sport every year. It is apparent that the Midland Reporter-Telegram has once again failed to realize and report a sport that has tremendous interest to its readers.

On Saturday, Feb. 22, 1986, our newspaper once again dropped the ball as far as soccer fans are concerned. On this date the City Championships of Midland for Junior High School Boys and Girls, Freshman School and High School Soccer Teams were played for the first time in Midland Memorial Stadium. The caliber of individual and team play was excellent, however our local sportscasters will never know how excellent because they weren't interested enough to attend these games or if they were there, they felt these games weren't important enough to mention in their paper. I could not find a single word regarding these championship games in the Sunday sports section.

I could possibly think of several reasons why our local paper continuously fails to give the soccer programs of our city any recognition (none too valid) but reasons nonetheless:

1. Perhaps they didn't know about the games. I thought it was a reporter's job to find the news.
2. Perhaps the paper doesn't need to sell more papers. I thought circulation could always be improved.

3. Perhaps no one on the staff knows anything about soccer. If this is true, how can anyone call himself/herself a sports reporter and not know anything about the most popular sport in the world.

I had the pleasure and opportunity to coach the San Jacinto Junior High Boys Soccer Team this year, this gave me the opportunity to work with 21 of the finest young men I have ever been associated with, and I feel these young men deserve some credit for the work they did and the accomplishments they achieved.

Other newspapers cover youth soccer events in their towns. Why can't the residents of Midland expect the same?
I for one think it is about time our local sports departments, radio, newspaper and television, enter the real world of sports today and realize that the sports world is not made up of football, baseball, basketball, boxing and track alone.

If our local paper can print articles about these sports that occur on the other side of our nation, why can't they take the time to attend a local soccer game and print an occasional story in our newspaper? Remember everyone of these people involved in our soccer programs either reads or purchases a newspaper or have parents or relatives that do.

The 1986 Midland Soccer Association season will start on Saturday, March 1, 1986. Let's see if you can do a better job this year. If you continue to ignore soccer this year, you will send a message to the residents of Midland that says loud and clear, "We just don't care about soccer or its players."

Gentlemen, the ball has just rolled into your side of the field. Let's hope you know what to do with it.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1704, American colonists in Deerfield, Mass., were attacked by Indians.

In 1827, the first U.S. railroad chartered to carry passengers and freight, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co., was incorporated.

In 1849, the ship California arrived at San Francisco carrying the first of the gold seekers.

In 1917, The Associated Press reported the U.S. government had in its possession an intercepted German communication. The "Zimmerman note," as it became known, proposed a German alliance with Mexico and Japan should the U.S. enter World War I.

In 1961, the Senate crime investigating committee headed by Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn., issued a preliminary report that said at least two major crime syndicates were operating in the U.S.

In 1966, astronauts Elliot S. S. Jr. and Charles Bassett II were killed when their jet trainer crashed into an aerospace plant in St. Louis.

Austrian weapons in Iran trigger probe

WASHINGTON — The largest industrial concern in Austria, the state-owned Voest-Alpine conglomerate, is under investigation by its government for engaging in improper transactions that may include illegal arms sales to Iran.

An Austrian official told us there have been "heavy political discussions" in the last year about the operations of Voest-Alpine and its subsidiaries. These discussions evolved into an investigation of whether the companies were "engaged in deals which they were not supposed to do," he said, including possible illegal arms transactions.

The Voest-Alpine group hasn't made a profit since 1976, sustaining heavy losses from its steel-making operation and poor oil investments.

Austrian citizens have lost millions as the government poured money into Voest-Alpine.

In fact, sources said, it was this very situation that may have led company officials to enter into secret negotiations with Iran. By the treaty that ended Allied occupation after World War II, Austria is officially and permanently neutral, the sale of arms to a nation at war is a violation of Austrian law.

Over the past year, the Austrian government has become concerned at the sizable quantities of Austrian-made weapons that have been showing up on the Iranian side of the stalemated Persian Gulf war. The amount seemed to be more than would normally reach the Iranians through the black market or unscrupulous arms dealers.

Our intelligence sources, including some inside Iran itself, say that a partial explanation for the appearance of Austrian-made arms in the theater of war is back-door deals made with Austrian firms, including the Voest-Alpine group.

In fact, we have a copy of a five-page, "memorandum of understanding" between Voest-Alpine and the Islamic Republic of Iran, signed Feb.

14, 1985. The contract, which ends today, was a barter deal: Iran was obligated to provide $1 billion worth of crude oil in exchange for certain manufactured goods and raw materials.

An annex to the contract lists the goods only generally: $550 million worth of "Various Equipment and Materials," $150 million worth of "Various Products Including Spare Parts" and $100 million in "Pharmaceuticals."

But included in the "Various Equipment" category, according to information coming from Iran, were military items, among them some 155mm howitzers made by Noricum, a Voest-Alpine company.

Our sources say the final hitch in the billion-dollar deal was over the commission. "There was a fight over the percentage of the commission on these weapons," said a source close to the negotiations. The price of the arms had been jacked up as much as 35 percent to allow for payment of the commissions, the source explained, adding: "There were arguments over this."

Once the commission was agreed on, the transaction was sealed. Since the Austrians could not legally ship arms to combatant Iran, our sources said, the "end-user" certificates, indicating the weapons' ultimate destination, were presumably written to show a different country than Iran. It is known that the weapons were to be shipped by way of neighboring Yugoslavia.

LANGUAGE BARRIER: The Immigration and Naturalization Service has received a complaint from a novel source: U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack. He noted that in the past two years a growing number of new citizens can't qualify for jury duty because they don't understand English. The judge wondered if the service has been fudging on the English requirements for naturalized citizens. The test isn't exactly onerous. An applicant must answer a few questions to show that he understands and speaks English. Possibly by coincidence, the agency expects to set a record of 400,000 naturalizations this year — with no increase in staff.

CHARLEY REESE

Jefferson's view of U.S. might be satisfied

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA. — Of all the ways you can classify people, I suppose cynics and romantics is as useful a division as any. Both occupy the same world but they see it differently.

Thomas Jefferson was definitely a romantic. He could look at a wilderness and see a nation, at a working man who was only thinking of making a living and see a citizen of a Republic. Why, he could look at the squalid, raucous game of politics and see the process of self-government.

There was no way I was going to get near Monticello, Jefferson's home, and not go by to pay my respects even though it was as cold as a well-digger's feet and raining ice water. Jefferson loved his little mountain and the home he built on it and you can still feel his presence in it. It's Jefferson I care about, not the house. I'm not overly interested in houses per se, even one as lovely as Monticello.

Still, the house itself is a reflection of Jefferson and of the complexity of the man. It is clearly an aristocratic house and as many as 75 slaves were involved in the operation of the house and farm, yet Jefferson was a populist and champion of the common man. The house reflects his admiration for much of European and ancient culture, yet Jefferson was an ardent nationalist.

None of these things is a contradiction. We are used to dealing with simple people these days and Jefferson was far from simple. Like all the men of the American Revolution, Jefferson's romanticism was well grounded in realism.

He thought slavery an evil institution but found out early that you could not abolish slavery and fight a revolution, too, nor could you later get a Constitution ratified and mold a nation while simultaneously dealing with so divisive an issue as slavery. Keeping slavery was one of the bargains struck at the Constitutional Convention. Like all compacts with evil, we would pay a terrible price later.

Contemporary American politicians would do well to remember that before they strike any bargains with the current slave states that carry the banner of communism. Evil drives a hard bargain and always exacts its terrible price.

Jefferson also was the kind of man who could see the value of European art and science without making excuses for political and social evils in Europe. He advised against travel unless it was necessary and then, in one letter, he offered instructions about what to look for that ought to be read to every class of graduating CIA recruits. In sum, his advice was to find out everything that would be useful in America and bring back the knowledge.

Here again contemporary American politicians ought to emulate the realism of Jefferson. If we find it useful to form an alliance with a foreign nation to accomplish a specific goal, fine — but we do not have to marry the ally or adopt them. Who cares whether the Philippine elections are more or less honest than Chicago elections? Our interest in the Philippines is military bases — period.

One of the more disgusting practices in our time is American presidents heaping praise on tin-pot dictators who happen to run countries with which we have alliances. Your alliances should be on a business-like basis. If we would keep these characters at arm's length, it would be more difficult for their enemies to blame us for their excesses.

Jefferson helped persuade France to enter the Revolutionary War as our ally but he never kissed King Louis' keister or made ridiculous public statements about what a great lover of democracy the Bourbon monarch was.

I couldn't help but wonder, when I walked in the rain down the hill to Jefferson's grave, what he would think of us today. A lot of things would disturb or outrage him, but being the romantic realist that he was, I think he would give us an overall passing grade.

Sunny skies should prevail on Saturday

From Staff and Wire Reports

The forecast for Saturday predicts sunny skies and warmer temperatures, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The high for the Midland-Odessa area should reach into the middle 70s.

Tonight will be fair and cold with the low expected to be in the lower 30s and winds out of the south at five to 15 mph. Winds will shift on Saturday to the southwest at 10-15 mph. Thursday's high of 63 was 19 degrees cooler than the record high set in 1950. The 44 degree low of this morning was 30 degrees warmer than the record low set in 1962.

STATE

Winter-like temperatures are forecast to return to Texas tonight, but the National Weather Service says a warming trend will set in again Saturday.

The temperatures, including below freezing readings expected in Northeast Texas, are being triggered by cool Canadian air associated with a large high pressure system located over the Plains states that settled across Texas early today.

Lows tonight will be in the 20s in Northeast Texas, the 30s over the rest of North Texas and West Texas and in the 30s and 40s elsewhere.

It will be partly cloudy to clear statewide Saturday with temperatures expected to be mostly in the 60s and 70s, ranging up into the 80s in South Texas and Southwest Texas. Some rain showers were reported at dawn today just southwest of Lubbock, but forecasters said it was the only rain reported in the state although some showers were likely today in the Concho Valley.

NATION

Sections of the Midwest, Northeast South and Plains had snow today while dense fog prompted travelers' warnings in California and thunderstorms dampened sections of Florida.

Snow extended across the lower Great Lakes into northern Pennsylvania and was scattered across the southern Appalachians into eastern sections of Kentucky and Tennessee.

Snow also was scattered from eastern South Dakota into northeast Nebraska and from southeast Iowa across Missouri.

Travelers' advisories for snow extended across the northern mountains of North Carolina.

Thunderstorms rumbled across central Florida.

Travelers' advisories for dense fog were posted for the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys of California while the southern two-thirds of the California coast had patchy fog.

Dunbar looms as team to beat

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

When Midland's Region I Class 5A high school basketball tournament kicks off tonight at Chaparral Center, there will be two Region I veterans matched against each other and two newcomers shooting for Saturday's 11 a.m. finals.

At 6 p.m., Amarillo High will test South Grand Prairie in a match that features two teams that have never been in Midland's version of the Region I tussle. At 8 p.m., the wily Region I veterans go at each other when El Paso Eastwood tangles with Fort Worth Dunbar.

Dunbar, carrying a 29-4 record, is the only team in the field that has won a Region I championship, doing it twice over the last six years. Eastwood has never won the crown here, but this will be the third Region I test for the Troopers, who are currently on a 21-game winning streak.

Past history says that Dunbar should be the tournament favorite, but the Wildcats get a stern test from Eastwood.

Eastwood got to the tournament by defeating El Paso High and Odesa Permian in playoff action, but it hasn't been an easy road. The Troopers nipped El Paso High by a 58-57 margin in bi-district and came back with a narrow 60-58 win over District 4-5A champion Permian in the Permian fieldhouse.

Brian Kelly led the Trooper charge against Permian with 19 points while Wilbur Griffith contributed 13 and Brett Wagner 10.

Dunbar's playoff experience has shown some human flaws, giving opponents hopes of an upset here. For instance, Dunbar won its bi-district match by a narrow 70-64 margin over District 5-5A runnerup Denton, a team that ended the season with a 15-15 overall record. The Wildcats, however, came back with a 79-65 win over District 6-5A champion Duncanville in the area contest.

Dunbar showed early that their Wildcats should be a state title contender when they defeated Baltimore Dunbar by a 66-65 score in the finals of the West Side Lions Club tournament last December. The Baltimore team was then the No. 1 ranked high school team in the nation.

As usual, Dunbar has a balanced attack with leading scorer Mark Chambers, the tallest of the Wildcats at 6-3, averaging just under 16 points a game. Guard Derrick Daniels guides the offense on the floor while forward Coyle Allen is the top rebounder.

Although Amarillo High has never been to this Midland section of the playoffs, the Sandies have had little trouble in getting here this year. AHS bombed District 4-5A Midland Lee in bi-district by a 62-44 margin and then belted District 1-5A champion El Paso Andress by a 66-41 margin in the area round Tuesday in Amarillo.

The Sandies also have a balanced attack with Ashton Nowak, Sammy Sampson and Craig Brown carrying most of the scoring load. Doug Fisher is also impressive off the bench.

Midland High's David Lujan skims hurdles in workout for Saturday's ABC Relays.

Cinder teams on road again

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

With some record shattering performances under the belt after just one week of the track season, Midland's thinclads part ways for two meets Saturday.

The Midland High boys will join the MHS and Midland Lee girls in Big Spring Saturday for the ABC Relays while the Lee boys trek to Monahan for the Sandhill Relays. Both meets will cover one day with preliminaries held in the morning sessions while finals in Monahan will be at night and finals in Big Spring in the afternoon.

The Lee boys won four individual events and the 1600-meter relay last week in Fort Stockton's Comanche Relays. Quintus Hampton set a meet record in the 300 hurdles with a 37.62 and Brad Cooper set a new 400-meter standard with a 48.88.

LEE ALSO got a double killing from Mike Garza in the 1600 and 3200 runs. Garza posted a 4:31.08 to win the 1600 and had a fine 9:53.03 in the 3200. The Rebels also won the 1600 relay with a 3:21.80, which is very good for this early in the season.

The Midland High boys failed to win an event at Fort Stockton, but scored 76 points to finish third behind Odessa Permian and Lee. It was a good start for the Bulldogs.

MHS showed some sprint power as Terry Robinson, Anthony Adkinson and Everett Bowers all placed in the 100. Tyrone Oliver was second in the 400 and the two MHS relays also placed second. The sprint relay team posted a 42.51, the best time ever posted over recent years and the 1600 team had a 3:24.33.

The Midland High girls also showed some record power while scoring 71 points in a fourth place finish in Fort Stockton.

Brewers regroup after gas explosion

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) — Amazed and thankful that no one was killed, Milwaukee Brewers Manager George Bamberger called on his club to regroup today after a fiery explosion tore through the team's spring training headquarters here.

Ten people were injured and four — three Brewers coaches and a plumber working in the team's new clubhouse — remained hospitalized late Thursday night. Chandler fire officials said they believed the explosion at 8:50 a.m. local time Thursday was caused by natural gas ignited by a pilot light.

"We have to regroup right now," said Manager George Bamberger. "We'll be a little short-handed, but it won't set the club back. We have to go on."

Bamberger and General Manager Harry Dalton narrowly escaped serious injury and helped douse the burning clothes of the coaches and plumber Jeff Sutton, who was fixing a space heater at the time of the blast. The others who remained hospitalized were third base coach Tony Muser, pitching coach Herman Starrette and bullpen coach Larry Haney.

"It's amazing somebody wasn't killed in this thing," Bamberger said. "I just think this was one of those accidents."

Of the coaches, Muser and Starrette were the most seriously injured. They were in the coaches' room, where the explosion occurred.

Muser, 38, was listed in serious but stable condition at the burn unit of the Maricopa County Medical Center in nearby Phoenix, according to spokeswoman Shirley Dieckman. Muser suffered second- and third-degree burns over 50 percent of his body, hospital officials said.

Starrette, 47, was in stable but serious condition at Chandler Community Hospital with first- and second-degree burns over 18 percent of his hands and face, said Pat Hopkins, a hospital official. Haney had first- and second-degree burns on his arms and was in stable condition, she added.

Sutton was in fair and stable condition at Maricopa Medical, Dieckman said.

The injuries to Muser and Starrette were not life-threatening, according to Dick Hackett, a Brewers' vice president in Milwaukee.

Catcher Bill Schroeder was one of those injured in the blast, treated and then released. He said he was walking out of the training room when he heard "a whooshing sound."

"My back was to the whole thing," he recalled of the explosion that sent a fireball racing down a hallway in the clubhouse. "When I started heating up, I ran out of there."

The Brewers manager said the plumber "was in the doorway going out of my office, and he's completely on fire, with his hair and his back and everything. Harry Dalton, the general manager, was trying to beat that out and I jumped on him."

Levelland gains finals

AUSTIN (AP) — In a rematch of their 1983 state championship battle, the Levelland Loboettes defeated Calallen again in the feature match of Thursday's opening day of the 1986 girls' state high school basketball tournament.

Calallen was undefeated and ranked No. 1 in the state, but No. 2-ranked Levelland took an early lead, built it to nine points in the third quarter, and then got accuracy at the free throw line to hold off Calallen's closing rally.

Levelland's 49-40 victory put the Loboettes into Saturday's championship game against A&M Consolidated, which defeated McKinney 65-48 Thursday night.

In other state tournament action Thursday, defending champion Nazareth and Snook won berths in the Class 1A finals, while Ingleside and Sour Lake-Hardin Jefferson advanced into the Class 3A championship games.

Class 2A and 5A schools are in action today to complete Saturday's round of five championship matches. In 2A, it's Abernathy vs. Olney and Rogers vs. Paris-Demar West Lamar. In 5A, it's Victoria vs. Houston Yates and Tyler Lee vs. Irving MacArthur.

Levelland 49, Calallen 40. Kristi Schonstedt hit three free throws in the final minute to ice the upset victory and their spot in the 4A finals. The Loboettes improved their record to 31-2.

Kim Cavanaugh was Levelland's top scorer with 16 points

MC ends season unbeaten

From Staff Reports

CLARENDON — Midland College finished the regular season with a 30-0 record by defeating Clarendon College, 87-65, here Thursday night to also finish with an unblemished 16-0 WJAC record. It was the first time MC has ever gone undefeated in the regular season or the WJAC season.

The Chaparrals now advance to the Region V tournament in Snyder next Thursday and will play Hill Junior College of Hillsboro 5 p.m. Thursday. Hill finished fourth in the Northeast Conference.

Clarendon took an early 2-0 lead, but that was the last time the Bulldogs saw the Chaps, who used their stout defense, fast break, and tremendous rebounding to take charge. In the first five minutes, the Chaps raced to a 14-4 lead. The teams traded baskets for a short time but the Chaparrals went racing off to another lead and a 49-24 halftime lead.

MC shot 65 percent from the field and grabbed 19 rebounds in displaying their championship form.

In the second half, things got sloppy.

Up by 31 points, 61-30, the Chaps allowed the Bulldogs to close the margin to 19 several times.

Clarendon was aided by 15 Midland College turnovers in the second half. But Lincoln Minor kept pouring in the shots from outside, while Eddie Frazier, Tony Wright, and Ricky Grace snared rebounds and pushed in the follow shots.

"We got a little too loose in the second half," MC coach Jerry Stone admitted. "But most of the mistakes came because we were pressuring their offense and running hard on offense. The rebounding was really great, especially on our missed shots."

Again the Chaps showed that everyone on the team can score. Minor led the way with 20 points, Eddie Frazier put in 15, Mookie Blaylock had 14 and Todd Duncan bombed for 10.

The 1985-86 Chaparrals now own the record for most consecutive wins, breaking the streak of 29 established over two years when the 1981-82 NJCAA championship team won 24 in a row and the 1982-83 team added five more before losing.

"Sure, we started thinking about going undefeated for the season a couple weeks ago," Stone said, "but our players were good about keeping their minds on the next game and not trying to look ahead. They've done a super job this season, and I just couldn't be prouder of what they have accomplished. I've never had an undefeated season before and I think I'm as excited as the players and fans. It's really something special!"

TED BATTLES

No, Tech not Phi Slamma Jamma

Questions readers ask and the answers they receive...

Texas Tech has received a lot of publicity this season for its "dunks", particularly in game-on-the-line situations. Of course, that's why they have that fraternity at Lubbock, what do they call it...Phi Slamma Jamma?

Answer: The reader is mixed up, which is understandable. The University of Houston made the name Phi Slamma Jamma famous during the Akeem Olatunwo, Clyde Drexler, Michael Young years. It is not to be confused with Texas Tech's dunking society is known as the Phi Slamma...O-Damma!

Question: Michael Ray Richardson? I notice in the stories detailing his lifetime suspension from the NBA for the cocaine use, he was a four-time All-Pro. Did he make All-Pro before or after his drug troubles became known? And what about this three-times and you're suspended rule for junkies in vogue in the NBA?

Answer: I think the all pro recognition came after the drug problems. Frankly, I never associated him in the same company as Magic Johnson, Dr. J., Isiah Thomas, Dominique Wilkins...or, for that matter, Mark Aguirre.

As for the three times and your out rule, apparently the NBA doesn't start counting until after four. According to his chronological record, Richardson has been entered in rehabilitation programs seven times and traded three, which indicates there might have been trouble even before the admission of a drug dependency problem.

The Richardson case prompts both anger and compassion. Anger, because the guy has blown the kind of chance thousands of ghetto kids grow up dreaming about. Compassion, because he is the helpless victim of his own weakness and we can all say, "There, but for the grace..."

A teammate says Richardson won't live a year, he's that bad. The wonder is that he was able to perform competitively as long as he did.

Question: We know everybody in the WJAC in the Region V tournament at Snyder next week is dangerous, but is there anybody in the Northern Conference who can stay with the Midland College Chaparrals?

Answer: Claco is in first place, but MC Coach Jerry Stone is also worried about fourth place McLennan. "They were nationally ranked at one time. But they have had a lot of injuries and illness. The thing is, they are getting well."

Question: Wouldn't you say that the most unusual college athletic conference in the land is the Ohio Light Opera Conference which includes Otterbein, Wittenberg, Naughty Marietta...?

Answer: Good try, but the most unique college athletic conference is the Great West Hockey Conference. It includes, get this, U.S. International of San Diego, Northern Arizona of Flagstaff, Alaska-Fairbanks, Alaska-Anchorage...and to save expenses no overnight trips are allowed...kidding, of course...

Question: You ran a ski page a while ago in which you detailed the harrowing heights of the runs at Telluride, but there were no pictures. What's the matter, were you afraid to go to the top?

Answer: That seems a reasonable assumption, but the color slide film I was shooting turned out to be color print film, which is not suitable for reproduction in the newspaper. It was a boo-boo which means I'll have to go back and do it all over...until I get it right.

ESPN calling all cage fans

By DICK JOYCE
AP Basketball Writer

For college basketball junkies, ESPN will be satisfying much of their needs in the coming weeks. The cable network, which reaches 37 million homes will televise 26 conference playoff games of them 22 live.

That's more than double last year's output. There will be seven live Big East games starting with the quarterfinals, seven Atlantic Coast Conference games (four live) and six Sun Belt contests (five live).

In addition, the championship games of the Atlantic 10, Metro Atlantic, Missouri Valley, Midwestern Collegiate, Southwest and Western Athletic conferences will be seen.

"We also will have the facility under our whip-around format to cut into 35-40 games," says ESPN spokesman Chris LaPlaca. "We could go into the Big Eight, Metro, Pacific Coast Athletic Association and possibly Big Sky games at an appropriate stoppage point or during halftime of the games we are doing."

CBS doesn't get into the postseason act until the NCAA tournament, while NBC will provide the championship games of the Southeastern Conference March 8 and ACC March 9 to close out its coverage for the season.

CBS will be in Kansas City March 9 for live coverage of the selection and draw for the NCAA Division I 64-team field.

ESPN analyst Dick Vitale and his cohorts will be back for coverage of 21 NCAA tournament games — 12 live — while CBS will do 45.4 hours of live tournament coverage, including the NCAA Final Four at Dallas

TV-Sports

March 29 and 31. Included in CBS' 45.4 hours is the NCAA women's championship at Lexington, Ky. March 30.

Also on March 30, NBC will present its one-hour "Al McGuire's Championship Special," when the former Marquette coach conducts interviews with the championship-round coaches and projects the NBA draft.

ESPN's NCAA tourney coverage consists of 19 (12 live) first-round games March 13-14 and two live regional semifinals on March 20-21 to wind up its tourney coverage.

The March 22-23 regional finals are the weekend domain of CBS. CBS will show live first-round games from Ogden, Utah March 13 and from Long Beach, Calif. March 14, starting at 11:30 p.m. EST. For the March 15-16 second-round games, a viewer will be able to see three games of the four games each day from noon to 6:30 p.m. EST.

CBS also will show two regional semifinals March 20-21, getting the first pick over ESPN because of the competition and/or starting time.

Billy Packer, CBS' analyst, sees the NCAA tournament as a free-for-all. Both he and Vitale agree that the 45-second shot clock, in effect for the tourney for the first time, should reduce the likelihood of a longshot champion, such as Villanova last year and North Carolina State in 1983.

"On paper, a healthy North Carolina, Kansas, Georgia Tech and Duke look like the top four," Vitale said.

BOWLING BEAT

Warren's 739 paces City bowlers

By RANDY ISENBERG

Don Warren paced bowlers with a 266 game and 739 series while bowling in the Bowl Hospital Mixed League at Fairmont Park Lanes. Bud Baker rolled a 258 game and 681 series in the Monday Nite Fun at Fairmont Park to finish close.

Ty Bowling rolled a 278 game and 683 series in the City Mixed League to finish in the top three. Leo Rodriguez paced men at Dellwood Lanes with a 286 game and 706 series while bowling in the Civic Commercial Men's League. Rodriguez's 286 game included 10 strikes in a row. He pulled his 11th ball leaving the 4-6-7 split ending his bid for a 300 game.

Finishing behind Rodriguez in league activity were Doug Browning, 262 game and 677 series and hot rolling Dana Shank with a 255 game and 233 game for a 674 series, and a 233-225 combination enroute to a 668 series. Fernando Saigado, 17, just missed the 700 mark on games of 244-212 and 238 for a 664 series while bowling in Mens League competition. In his high school P.E. Class Fernando rolled a 278 game.

Rosie Urias paced Dellwood women with a 235 game and 628 series. Following close behind were Karen Broughton, 234 game and 619 series, and Pennie Poole, 226 game and 603 series.

Carol King rolled games of 201 and 207 for a 586 series. Merry McGee converted the Big Four Split, the 4-6-7-10.

Debbie Detmer paced Fairmont Park women with a 220 game and 583 series. Donna Archer was close behind with a 22 game and 575 series.

Betty Seay and Gary Seay captured the Valentine's Sweetheart Doubles Tournament with a 1474 No Tap score. Gary Seay rolled a No Tap 300 game. They captured $50 for first place. In all, nine couples collected a share of the $286 in prize money. Finishing second through eighth were: Lonnie and Linda Campbell, Debbie and Rick Smith, Gary and Judy Halleland, Tommy and Lisa Gutierrez, Lucy Williams and Guy Conley, Lois and Ricke Cease, Jim and Susan Campbell and David Austin and George Ann Powers.

Individual high game honors were won by Al Benson, David Austin, Gary Seay, Betty Seay, Debbie Smith and Lucy Williams.

Al Benson and Bob Burns defeated Tim Dickerson and Brent Gallagher to capture the Dellwood Lanes monthly Scratch Doubles tournament.

Jarel Blair won Pin Point Bowling for the second time this past Saturday with a score of 40. Mabel Nelson, 69, rolled a score of 39.

Ags, Texas back in title picture

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

LUBBOCK (AP) — The Texas Christian Horned Frogs get one more chance to earn a piece of their first Southwest Conference basketball title in 15 years.

Tight and tense TCU suffered its worst loss of the season Wednesday night, getting blown out 62-52 by the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

The loss got Texas and Texas A&M back into the title picture as Texas Tech rode the career-high 25 points of Tony Benford to knock TCU back into a tie with Texas for the SWC leadership with 12-3 records.

Texas A&M lurks a game back at

SWC

11-4 with a Saturday game on the road in Arkansas left on the schedule.

TCU plays at Houston Saturday night while Texas hosts the Raiders Sunday afternoon in Austin. If TCU beats Houston it can still clinch the No. 1 seed in the SWC post-season tournament in Dallas next week and at least the co-championship.

TCU had no magic in Lubbock, a graveyard where the Frogs have lost 13 of their last 14 games.

"I think we were awfully tight," TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth said. "We just never got anything going. We just didn't play good. It was a simple as that."

Texas Tech's Tobin Doda said the Red Raiders could sense the Frogs wanted to win too much.

"They might have had a little pressure on them because they were trying to win the championship," said Doda. "We were loose. I think at the end they were pressing a little bit. They were frustrated."

Killingsworth didn't relish the idea of playing in Houston in Coach Guy V. Lewis' regular season finale.

"It won't be easy going to Houston but I guess we have to," said Killingsworth. "We're really put a lot of pressure on ourselves now."

Carl Lott, who led TCU with 21 points, said, "Coach Killingsworth told us Tech would come out fired up and they did, but we obviously didn't."

Benford said, "Our defense kept us in the game. It was emotional for me, knowing it was my last time to play on this floor."

TCU came completely unglued toward the end of the game, receiving three technical fouls.

Tech coach no stranger to WT

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Texas Tech's new head football coach David McWilliams had to introduce himself a few times at Midland Center Thursday night as the Tech Exes held their annual Tech Auction, but chances are that he won't be an unknown for very long in the Permian Basin.

In fact, McWilliams knows Midland better than Midlanders know him at this point in time.

"I'm really no stranger to Midland," notes McWilliams. "I coached six years in Abilene and was the head coach at Abilene High for four years before I went to the University of Texas."

"That experience was tough on me — one I should have paid to get I didn't think so then, but looking back, I owe this district a lot. It's not like I've never been to Midland."

"There were some great coaches in the league when I was at Abilene and they all took great pains to teach me a few things on the playing field. Guys like Gene Mayfield, Spike Dykes, Bob Burris and Emory Belard were coaching here then."

IT WAS this background that made the Texas Tech position attractive to McWilliams.

"Tech is a school I always admired and I felt it was an excellent opportunity for me. The school has been competitive over the years and I felt I knew the area, having coached in Abilene for six years."

In fact, McWilliams has surrounded himself with a lot of former District 45A coaches, including two former Midland Lee head coaches, Spike Dykes and Jack Tayrien.

"I've known Spike for 22 years and we've coached together and against each other. We were together at Texas for five years and our families are close. I think the strong point at Tech the last few years has been defense and I couldn't have gone out and found a defensive coordinator better than Spike. I'm really glad he agreed to stay at Tech."

THE LAST person McWilliams hired to fill his staff was Tayrien, who had a 22-5 record in two years at Lee.

"When Carlos Mainard left Tech for Miami, one of the first people I thought of was Jack Tayrien. He was coaching at Bishop when I was recruiting that area for Texas and we became good friends. And a big plus, I think, for us is that Jack and Spike have worked so well together in the past. He was Spike's secondary coach at Lee and I think I'm going to like that chemistry at Tech."

McWilliams has just completed his first recruiting stint for Tech, an effort the Associated Press rated as a C+ effort.

"Recruiting has become a media sport of sorts," says McWilliams. "And I don't really have anything against that because it generates interest in what you are doing and that can't be all bad. On the other hand, newspapers go out and make their own Top 100 lists or Area Top 25 lists and grade you from there. We didn't get a lot of the blue chippers like A&M, but I'm very pleased with what we did get."

"We set down some criteria before we started recruiting. First, we wanted to sign as many West Texas kids as possible and we signed nine. Next, we wanted to concentrate in areas we knew we had because we know you can be hurt when you make a new coaching change in areas where you aren't known. We got 18 verbal commitments and kept them all on signing date."

"We wanted to sign only one quarterback and we did in Lee's Toney Rankin. We wanted only one running back and one wide receiver and we got Richard Ross, who is the first player from Lubbock the last decade to sign with Tech in the past 13 years. We also made it a priority to get some linemen with height and we signed six who are at least 6-4. We also wanted a punter and we got Jamie Simmons, who was an All-State punter as a junior. Then we filled in with linebackers and secondary personnel and I feel really good about the quality we got."

"I don't know how you would rate us. The Lubbock paper graded us higher than a C+ and the Austin paper graded us lower than that. I didn't see Midland's Tyrone Thurman on any blue chip lists and he was the sensation of the conference last year as a freshman."

MCWILLIAMS is glad the recruiting war is over and he is ready to get down to some Xs and Os.

"I'm glad to get back in Lubbock for more than two days in a row. I'm looking forward to spring training."

McWilliams will send his Red Raiders through spring training drills March 24-April 19, ending with the Red-Black scrimmage.

"We have some definite goals to work for in spring training. We want to get people in the right positions, we want to work hard on fundamentals and we will hold a lot of situation scrimmages."

The physical part of spring training will be easy for me because I've coached what these kids can do in that area during our off season program. What I want to take a look at is their mental attitude and we will do that with situational scrimmages."

"We're going to run out of the formation and throw the ball. We'll use some one-back sets with motion and we want to get our basic offensive and defensive schemes in place during spring training."

While McWilliams was showing that he knew where he wants to go in the months ahead, Tech Exes were helping the cause by bidding on auction items from pool table lamps to a black V W. Over 100 items were auctioned with the proceeds going to the Tech athletic department.

Westphal likes the small time

By THOMAS ROGERS
N.Y. Times News Service

The game is still basketball, but the resemblances end there. Paul Westphal's schedule these days takes him not to vast big-city arenas but to dusty gyms where the bleachers are usually empty. The opponents are no longer the Celtics, the Sixers or the Lakers, but Arizona Auto, American Indian Bible College and Sierra Nevada.

Westphal, four-time all-star and 12-year veteran of the National Basketball Association, is now the basketball coach and athletic director at Southwestern College, a two-year Baptist Bible school in Phoenix with an enrollment of only 250.

The job is full-time but unsalaried. The college has no gym, forcing the team to hold practices and play all its home games at a nearby high school. There are, of course, no scholarships. The starting center, Jeff Nimitz, stands 6 feet 2 inches. All of this is fine with the 35-year-old Westphal, who arrived at Southwestern last spring. Money? He seems secure enough from the investments he made while pulling down a strong dollar with the Celtics, the Suns, the SuperSonics and, for one season and part of another, the Knicks. As for other rewards: "This is the lowest level of college coaching that you can find," he allows. "Nobody's on scholarship. But the players care as much as anybody. Once you realize that, it's not a comedown at all."

If Westphal doesn't miss the big time, one reason is that he has deliberately cut ties with it. He retired in 1984 after losing two arbitration cases in a particularly bitter salary dispute with the Suns, and he's nowhere to be found in the stands these days when the team plays at the Coliseum in Phoenix. When the Suns invited him to play in an old-timers' event before a regularly scheduled game not long ago, he declined. In 1980, during a first tenure with the team, his frequent criticism of Coach John MacLeod led to a trade that sent him packing to Seattle.

Sports Notes

MacLeod's coaching limited Westphal's talents. Or so it seemed to Westphal, who viewed basketball as a chess game with soul. Players provided the soul, and coaches' restraints simply stripped the game of its creativity. As a coach himself, Westphal has fielded a squad that, by contrast, is unencumbered. A run-on-offense, press-on-defense approach has taken a Southwestern team that finished 3-20 last year to 15-6 so far this season. "His kids are very intense," says John Hernandez, assistant coach at rival Grand Canyon College. "They play all over the floor, diving for loose balls and also trying to do the things that they can't because of their size."

Size, of course, is no big thing to Westphal. "I have some very talented players," says the rookie coach at the tiny school. "They just happen to be short."

Positive Step

MORE THAN 45,000 knee operations are performed on football players every year, and Mike Tanel believes that his invention can do something about it.

Tanel, a 31-year-old Milwaukee security employee, has created the Tanel 360, a football shoe whose essence is a doughnut-like protrusion that is molded to the rubber sole and that has a single cleat in the middle. The doughnut replaces the set of cleats that a conventional shoe has on the front part of its sole, and thus allows the player to more easily pivot.

The circular principle is not new, shoes with round, movable, ball-bearing-laden plates have been tried before, but proved too heavy. The 360 remains as light as a conventional model.

Saturday, March 1, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Don't let your ego spoil a very good thing for you and your loved ones. Conflicts can be resolved if you refrain from flying off the handle. Emphasize your willingness to make intelligent concessions. Your enthusiasm is contagious and helps you get things done. Someone influential is persuaded that you are on the right track. Financial backing becomes available. Let mate know that his/her wishes are very important to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Communicate your feelings with greater subtlety and this can be a very special weekend. Postpone major financial and business decisions until Monday. Exercise or a brisk walk helps relieve tension. Plan ahead. CANCER (June 21-July 22): A real estate or car sale could be part of the picture. Things are looking up! Plan a family celebration. You may have to put romance on the back burner for a while. LEO (July 23-Aug 22): A dramatic change in your weekend plans could leave you breathless but happy. Look for a positive way to address a child-related problem. Romance is a source of inspiration. Be affectionate. VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept 22): Give loved one the benefit of the doubt. A marriage proposal or real estate offer occupies your thoughts. Travel for fun, but not for business. Influential people will be difficult to reach. LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 22): A reunion could rekindle a dream or romance. Do not despair if money is a bit tight; relief is near at hand. Just count those pennies for a while.

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov 21): A great day to relax with music, art or a good book. You treasure having some time to yourself. Write to someone who may be feeling homesick. Romance thrives on considerate gestures. SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22-Dec 21): Ask other family members to help with household chores so that everyone will have some time to relax. Sharing your thoughts with loved one brings the two of you closer. Be affectionate. CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 19): A new money-making idea has you walking on air. Get more rest. All work and no play will work to a competitor's advantage. Be your most gracious self at a social event. AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 18): There is a good reason for something that happens today. Probe beneath the surface. Include offspring or parents in your dinner plans. Acting standoffish with a new comer would be a mistake. PISCES (Feb 19-March 20): Self-pity will only hamper your efforts to achieve something great. Pull up your socks and get to work! A new project will pay rich dividends. Put your best foot forward.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF. MAKE SURE YOU GET YOURS.

North-South vulnerable South deals. NORTH: ♠QJ10, ♥K109, ♦7, ♣KJ10642. WEST: ♠9842, ♥532, ♦J653, ♣A7. EAST: ♠A765, ♥AQ, ♦842, ♣Q953. SOUTH: ♠K3, ♥J8764, ♦AKQ109, ♣8.

The bidding: South West North East 1 Pass 2♦ Pass 2 Pass 2 Pass 3 Pass 4 Pass Pass. Opening lead: Nine of ♠.

On every hand your side is due a certain number of tricks. It is up to you to make sure you get them. Cover the West and South hands with your thumbs and decide how you would defend as East after partner leads the nine of spades against South's four heart contract. South bid out his shape after receiving a two-over-one response from his partner. North decided that his heart honors and singleton diamond would offer good play for ten tricks; that is debatable, since his secondary honors in the black suits would surely be wasted values. After the lead of the nine of spades, the defense should be easy. East can be sure of three tricks: the ace of spades and ace-queen of trumps, since he is sitting over dummy's king. Declarer has shown at least ten cards in the red suits, and he must surely have the ace-king of diamonds for his opening bid and move toward game. Where is the setting trick coming from? The picture is completed by the opening lead of the nine of spades. Had West held the king in that suit, his choice of opening lead would have been a low card. Therefore, East should assign that card to declarer as well. Now the hand is an open book. Declarer has at most three cards in the black suits and one of them is the king of spades. Dummy's spade honors are going to provide declarer with one or two discards, depending on his black suit distribution. One thing is certain for the contract to be defeated, declarer must hold at least one club and it must not be the ace. Also, the defenders must take their club trick before declarer gets rid of his clubs on the spades. That makes life easy. East must win the ace of spades and shift to a club despite the menace of dummy's long clubs. Again, accurate analysis of the position is rewarded with a one-trick set.

Perry Como, Pat Boone get together on stage to benefit children's home

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Singers Perry Como and Pat Boone plan to perform together next month as part of an annual fund-raiser for Bethel Bible Village, a home for children whose parents are in prison.

Como

"I'm thrilled at the opportunity to take the stage with Perry again," Boone said in a statement released Thursday.

In addition to the concert, Como will play in a four-man golf tournament during the Pat Boone-Bethel Celebrity Spectacular April 24-26. Boone has sponsored the events for 14 years to raise money for the 31-year-old home.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jazz greats such as Dizzy Gillespie, Sy Oliver and Woody Shaw will be going to school — as teachers in the New School for Social Research's four-year curriculum in jazz, the school says.

"For a long time, I had hoped to develop a program like this in New York — the music and jazz capital of the world — which we could build around a faculty of the greatest jazz artists who live and work here," university spokesman David C. Levy said Thursday.

Other musicians who have agreed to take part include Chico Hamilton, Milt Hinton, Major Holiday, Thad Jones, Toots Thielemans and Grady Tate, the school said.

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Bandleader Xavier Cugat rested comfortably in a hospital a day after emergency treatment of a respiratory ailment, his doctors said.

Cugat, 86, was in good condition and was expected to leave the intensive care unit for a regular hospital. Drs. Jorge Riut and Jaime Pujadas said Thursday.

Cugat, who suffers from heart disease and high blood pressure, returned to his native Spain in 1978 after a long career in the United States. Cugat, who has been married five times, has written an autobiography and a book titled "My Wives."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock singer David Lee Roth has sued CBS for $25 million, claiming the entertainment company failed to honor a contract by not producing a film he started in.

In the suit filed Thursday, Roth contended that CBS Productions agreed to finance and produce the film, "Crazy From the Heat," with a summer release date tied to an album and concert tour.

But after the agreement was reached, CBS dismantled its movie production division, apparently as part of cutbacks following the expensive battle to fend off a takeover attempt by Cable News Network magnate Ted Turner, attorney C. Stephen Howard contended.

Jack Purcell, vice president and West Coast counsel for CBS, said he would not comment on the lawsuit.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television viewers can tune in Senate floor debates this summer in an experiment that advocates say will bring the nation's top legislative body into the modern age at last.

The Senate approved the plan 67-21 Thursday despite complaints that it will wreck longstanding traditions, show an unflattering picture of lawmakers and cause them to neglect their duty.

Plans call for radio broadcasts to go out over the nation's airwaves starting May 1. Television from the Senate chamber begins the same day but only as a closed-circuit, in-house trial.

The public gets a chance to see the Senate in action starting June 1 when a signal the Senate allocated $3.5 million to provide becomes available to any television network that wants to plug in.

The experiment ends July 15, but that deadline follows a 12-day recess during which there will be nothing to see. Most telecasts may well be confined to cable TV systems not available in many cities — including the nation's capital.

The test caps a decade in which the tradition-conscious Senate killed all plans to televise debates. That was in contrast to the House, where debates have long been carried by Cable-Satellite Public Affairs Network.

Proponents say the Senate's move could lead to a streamlining of longstanding rules and customs that at times tie the lawmakers in knots.

"A test period is a time-honored process for easing change upon tradition-bound bodies," Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said. "We can change without violating the unique role of the Senate."

"The Senate can rejoice at entering the modern age at last," he said.

The test offers senators a critical look at telecasts before they leap all the way into the electronic media era. They are set to vote July 29 on whether to make the change permanent.

Louisiana Sens. Russell B. Long and J. Bennett Johnston led efforts to scale back the telecasts. Both moves were defeated by wide margins.

Johnston predicted viewer dismay at marathon debates designed to kill legislation. But he said such filibusters are crucial to the Senate's role as "the saucer in which the passions of politics are cooled."

"Can you imagine what they will be saying when the intrusive eye of television in the Senate records unlimited debate in all its glory?" he said. "It is a messy, untidy spectacle, but I think it's vital to the nation."

Duty requires senators at times to take unpopular stands, Long said. He said telecasts could thus give lawmakers a choice between political posturing and "political suicide."

"Those who are concerned that statesmanship is all too scarce a commodity as it is now are going to find it's going to be even more scarce on television," Long said. He urged senators to give themselves the option of switching off the cameras for sensitive debates. It failed 60-28.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., said a blackout would "arouse cynicism and even suspicion among the American public."

Under the plan, any network can pick up the signal, but it was unclear which networks — if any — will carry the television signal and how much of it will reach viewers. Senate aides said C-SPAN has expressed interest.

Camera angles will be strictly controlled by the Senate, focusing on the senator or presiding officer speaking when a debate is in progress and the entire chamber when a vote is being taken.

The Senate tabled, or killed, 49-43, a proposal by Sen. Dan Evans, R-Wash., to require lawmakers to be at their desks when they vote. He said it would add decorum to the sometimes confusing scene on the floor.

Lawmakers not participating in debates will not be shown.

In the spring of 1980, catcher Darrell Porter, then with the Kansas City Royals, abruptly left the team's training camp with no explanation. It took some time before the reason surfaced and when it did, it was a shocker — alcohol and drug rehabilitation.

Until then, sports appeared to be immune from drugs. Porter's admission was the first indication that all was not serene in this tight, little society, and it was the first in a series of disclosures and admissions that continue to rock a billion-dollar industry.

SIX YEARS later, the stain of drugs is still spreading in sports. Only the names are bigger — All-Pros and All-Stars, even Super Bowl players. "If you look at the purposes for involvement in drugs, it doesn't surprise me that it's reached superstars," said Dr. Thomas Tutko, a sports psychologist at San Jose State University who did much of the early research on drugs in sports.

"I think this will get a little worse before it gets better. It will take some big star suffering a clear deterioration for it to turn around," he said.

Two years after Porter, pro football player Don Reese talked freely about the rampant use of drugs in the NFL.

Two years after Reese, four NFL players — Pete Johnson, Ross Browner, E.J. Junior and Greg Stemmick — were suspended by Commissioner Pete Rozelle for their involvement with cocaine.

That same year, four Kansas City baseball players, including ex-batting champion Willie Wilson and former Cy Young winner Vida Blue, were suspended after pleading guilty to federal drug charges. Also suspended at that time was pitcher Steve Howe, who, after repeated relapses was released by the Los Angeles Dodgers and Minnesota Twins and now is out of baseball.

A week before the Royals case was being tried, pro basketball player Micheal Ray Richardson suffered a relapse of his drug problem and asked the NBA for assistance.

IN OCTOBER 1983, the NBA put in place what has developed into the most effective drug program in pro sports. It encourages abusers to voluntarily step forward for help yet sets successively firmer punishment for relapses.

"Our goal is rehabilitation," Commissioner David Stern said.

Last month, former All-Star John Drew was banned from the NBA because the league said he used up all of his chances involving drug rehabilitation.

Richardson followed while Quintin Dailey has one more chance, Quintin Dailey of the Chicago Bulls and John Lucas of the Houston Rockets.

Hockey, meanwhile, has one of the cleanest drug records in sports and NHL President John Ziegler says it's because his no-nonsense message is clear: "If players are going to perform an illegal act like taking drugs, I tell them to do it somewhere else. I don't want a crook in my league."

BOXING was stung last week when Tim Witherpoon, the new WBA heavyweight champion, was placed on one-year probation by the Georgia Boxing Commission after traces of marijuana appeared in his urinalysis following his title bout with Tony Tubbs.

Most of the drug headlines, however, have belonged to football and baseball players.

Last summer, baseball was embarrassed when a parade of seven players, including former Most Valuable Players Dave Parker and Keith Hernandez, testified at a federal drug trial in Pittsburgh.

Last month, it was disclosed that six members of the New England Patriots, Super Bowl losers to the Chicago Bears, admitted to Coach Raymond Berry that they had used illegal drugs. Two of those players were All-Pros Irving Fryar and Raymond Clayborn.

Now, one of the NFL's top stars, linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, reportedly has entered a drug and alcohol rehabilitation program.

WILL FANS see more big names? Tutko, for one, thinks it's possible because, as he says, "superstars are not immune."

"They are babied and coddled. They're adults, but they're really still kids, children prone to drug usage. Tough guys won't take drugs. The ones who've been babied are more prone to look for an elixir, a way out. Tough guys do it for themselves."

Where will it end? Management says with mandatory, random spot testing, a concept steadfastly resisted by the player unions.

Dollar gains

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was higher against all major currencies in early European trading today. Gold prices also rose.

In Tokyo, the dollar rebounded against the Japanese yen, closing at 180.45 yen, up from Thursday's closing rate of 178.60 yen which was a seven-year low.

In London, the dollar gained against the pound sterling, which has been hit by lower oil prices. It cost $1.4685 to buy one pound, cheaper than the $1.4820 price late Thursday.

Other midmorning dollar rates compared with late Thursday:

- 2.2205 West German marks, up from 2.20875
- 1.8745 Swiss francs, up from 1.85775
- 6.8325 French francs, up from 6.7875
- 2.5000 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4920
- 1.51250 Italian lire, up from 1.50300

Bullion dealers said the gold market was much quieter than it had been earlier in the week as traders consolidated their positions at the end of the month.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold was selling at a bid price of $338.10 a troy ounce at noon, up from late Thursday's bid of $334.50.

In London, the city's five major bullion dealers set a recommended trading price of $338.25, up from $336.25 bid the previous day.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold dropped the equivalent of $1.06 to close at $337.71 compared to Thursday's $338.76.

The December figure may have

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit swelled to a monthly record of $16.5 billion in January despite declining world oil prices, the Commerce Department said today.

That's up 9.3 percent from the December merchandise trade deficit of $15.1 billion, a revision from the $17.4 billion reported earlier.

January's deficit was $4.1 billion greater than the $12.4 billion average monthly deficit recorded last year.

Lower oil prices push stocks past 1,700 for first time

Associated Press

The stock market's best known indicator has finished above 1,700 for the first time only three weeks after breaking the 1,600 barrier.

Lower oil prices and the prospects of lower levels of inflation are generally credited with creating conditions that have fueled the recent rallies in both the stock and bond markets.

The stock market surpassed its latest milestone Thursday during the fifth busiest session on record, with nearly 182 million shares changing hands on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks jumped 17.09 to 1,713.99. Most other market measures also climbed to new peaks.

The stock market's steady climb has been aided in large part by a continuing rally in the credit markets, where prices of government bonds have soared and their yields have tumbled to seven-year lows.

On Thursday, the Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond rose more than $20 for each $1,000 in face amount. The bond's yield dropped to 8.30 percent from 8.48 percent late Wednesday.

Bond prices were little affected, however, by the Federal Reserve's report late in the session of a modest decline in the nation's basic money supply, called M1.

The Fed said M1, whose growth is considered a factor in interest-rate trends by many credit analysts, fell $600 million to a seasonally adjusted $630.6 billion in the week ended Feb. 17.

In other economic news: —U.S. business productivity fell at an annual rate of 3.1 percent in the final quarter of 1985, the Labor Department said. That decline erased modest gains achieved earlier in the year, and produced an average, full-year decline of two-tenths of 1 percent, the government said. It was the first annual decline since the 1982 recession.

—The dollar fell against most other major currencies after a volatile session in which the dollar flirted with a post-World War II low against the Japanese yen. Gold prices inched higher after plunging by more than $11 an ounce Wednesday.

—Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., matching General Motors Corp.'s extension of sales incentives, said they too would offer 9.9 percent financing on most car models and some light trucks, a rate less generous than those it replaces.

Home Savings to close two area branches

Home Savings and Loan announced Thursday that it would close two of its branches and layoff approximately 10 percent of its staff, as a result of the downturn in the oil economy.

Scheduled to be closed are the branch at University and Tripp in Odessa and the branch adjacent to the firm's administrative offices at Air Terminal. Approximately eight jobs will be eliminated, when the branches are closed about 30 days from now, but 20 administrative jobs will be eliminated immediately by the savings and loan for a total of 28 positions, according to Robert Savage, vice president Human Resources.

"The cutbacks are the result of falling oil prices," said Savage. "The Permian Basin economy is tied to oil prices, and with a lack of economic vitality we had to take a hard look at our operations. We had hoped to hold off a bit longer on such action, but decided we needed to do it now."

He said the closing of the branches and layoffs would help control administrative costs and make Home Savings more competitive in the financial market.

The firm operates eight branches and employs over 200 in the Permian Basin.

Exxon makes $2 billion settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exxon Corp. sent the Energy Department $2,066,772,850.04 on Thursday in the largest court settlement ever paid. The money, sent by wire transfer into a Treasury account, represents $896 million in overcharges when crude oil was under price controls, plus interest.

The overcharges were incurred on oil from the Hawkins field in Texas, which Exxon operates on behalf of several owners, from Jan. 1, 1975 through Jan. 28, 1981 when President Reagan removed the last oil price controls.

The Supreme Court on Jan. 27 refused to hear Exxon's appeal of a 1983 verdict against the company.

TWA, Ozark agree to merge

NEW YORK (AP) — Trans World Airlines and Ozark Air Lines, facing serious losses due to low-cost competitors, have announced that TWA will buy the smaller carrier for about $250 million cash as part of a strategy to become profitable.

Thursday's announcement marked the second major airline agreement in a week and heightened predictions that more carriers will merge for fear they will go out of business unless they adapt to deregulation.

Financially troubled Eastern Airlines agreed Monday to be acquired by Texas Air Corp. for $600 million, which would make Texas Air the country's largest airline. Texas Air also operates low-cost Continental Airlines and New York Air.

"Texas Air-Eastern is telling you a story, and anybody who doesn't read it is a fool," TWA Chairman Carl C. Icahn told a news conference at TWA's New York offices, where he announced the Ozark agreement.

Ozark President Edward J. Crane made the same announcement at the carrier's St. Louis quarter of this year and Ozark expects to sustain unspecified losses, Icahn said.

TWA serves 23 foreign points and 63 domestic cities with a fleet of 165 planes. Ozark's fleet of 50 planes serves 66 domestic cities, most within 400 miles of St. Louis.

"The acquisition of Ozark will deliver much-needed facilities, smaller aircraft and presence in regional markets we simply could not gain quickly any other way," Icahn told reporters.

The deal provides for TWA to pay $19 cash for each of Ozark's approximately 13 million shares outstanding, which Icahn said amounts to nearly $250 million. He was not more specific.

The deal also gives TWA an option to buy 2 million shares of Ozark at $17.50 a share, which is a clause to protect TWA's interests in case Ozark were to accept a higher bid from another airline, Icahn said.

He discounted suggestions that the government would raise anti-trust objections to the merger, and said he would ask the Department of Transportation for expedited approval.

headquarters, saying the takeover would provide shareholders a good return.

Discussions of a possible TWA-Ozark merger have been held for more than a year but began in earnest about two weeks ago at TWA's suggestion. A definitive merger agreement under which Ozark would operate as a wholly owned subsidiary was expected to be reached today, Icahn said.

Low-cost airlines such as Southwest and People Express have hurt TWA and Ozark in the St. Louis market, where both have major operations. TWA expects to lose about $125 million in the first

Trade deficit reaches record $16.5 billion in January

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit swelled to a monthly record of $16.5 billion in January despite declining world oil prices, the Commerce Department said today.

That's up 9.3 percent from the December merchandise trade deficit of $15.1 billion, a revision from the $17.4 billion reported earlier.

January's deficit was $4.1 billion greater than the $12.4 billion average monthly deficit recorded last year.

The December figure may have been a fluke," said Lawrence Chimierne, president of Chase Economics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. Chimierne said his forecasting service is predicting a $15 billion trade deficit in January, "down from January, but still a high number."

"The trade deficit will stabilize, but I don't think we'll see it begin to turn around until late in the year," Chimierne added.

For 1985, the United States imported $148.6 billion more than it exported, well up from the $123 billion deficit of the year before. Imports from Japan accounted for one-third of the 1985 deficit.

Government and private economists say it takes a year to 18 months for a decline in a currency to show up in trade figures.

Since last February, the value of the dollar has fallen about 30 percent against the Japanese yen, the British pound and the West German mark. Most of this has occurred since Sept. 22, when the United States, Japan, Britain, Germany and France launched an orchestrated effort to devalue the dollar.

Despite scattered price increases announced over the past few months for some Japanese imports, the trade imbalance has worsened since September.

In theory, a lower dollar should make U.S. goods less expensive abroad — and thus more competitive — while making imports more expensive here. That is supposed to eventually stem the flood of American dollars out of the country.

The continuing large trade deficit has fueled support in Congress for a variety of import-restraint legislation to protect U.S. manufacturing industries battered by foreign competition. The Reagan administration has opposed all such moves, generally favoring efforts to open more markets to U.S. sales as part of a "free trade, fair trade" approach.

The trade figures for January come among other signs that the U.S. manufacturing industry remains deeply troubled.

Trying to salvage Tylenol, again

Company reconstructs crisis, strategy

Johnson & Johnson Chairman James E. Burke holds up a model of a Tylenol caplet during a recent news conference.

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the wake of the second fatal poisoning of Tylenol capsules in three years, Johnson & Johnson's handling of the crisis has earned the company praise. Here is a reconstruction of just what actions the company took and its reasoning for them.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — When Johnson & Johnson President David Clare walked into his boss's office and said, "We've got big trouble," he set the stage for a $100 million struggle for the second time in three years to salvage the company's most successful product, Tylenol.

The company's mid-February recall of Tylenol capsules and its decision to stop making over-the-counter medicine in capsule form have caused problems for the entire drug industry and raised consumer concerns.

The bad news Clare gave Chairman James Burke was that a 23-year-old woman, Diana Elstroth, died Feb. 8 after taking two cyanide-contaminated Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules purchased at a suburban New York store. It was a repeat of the poisoning of Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules that claimed seven lives in the Chicago area in 1982 and an indication that packaging developed subsequently to foil tampering was vulnerable.

Not only was Johnson & Johnson on the spot again, but other drug manufacturers found themselves on the defensive. As Johnson & Johnson grappled with the crisis, other producers waited for the market to make up its mind on the continued acceptance of capsule medication.

Johnson & Johnson was guided throughout by a conviction that what's good for its customers is good for the company. Its handling of the Tylenol crisis has been hailed as a textbook example of how a corporation should deal with the unexpected.

As it did when the 1982 sabotage first was uncovered, Johnson & Johnson moved fast to protect public confidence in the Tylenol brand. As soon as Tylenol was linked to the poisoning, on Feb. 10, the company immediately halted advertising of Tylenol and began polling to keep track of consumer attitudes about the brand. It also pulled capsules from stores in the area, advised retailers and wholesalers to return bottles from the batch involved in the poisoning, and set up toll-free telephone lines to handle customer questions.

The next day, Burke held his first news conference, resuming the visible role he played during the Chicago crisis. Behind the scenes, Johnson & Johnson executives felt the poisoning was an isolated event and were satisfied that they had taken all necessary steps.

Johnson & Johnson chairman symbol of responsible business

NEW YORK (AP) — Looking at home on national television, James Burke told Phil Donohue why he decided that Johnson & Johnson, the corporation he runs, would stop making over-the-counter medicine in capsules.

After the company's best-selling pain-relief capsule had been turned into a murder weapon twice in 3 1/2 years, he said, Johnson & Johnson was not going to risk a third crisis.

The audience seemed clearly in his corner and Donohue said that in an age that does not like big companies, "you have to admire Johnson & Johnson."

The day before the Donohue Show, Burke stood at one of many news conferences, again facing banks of cameras and calmly fielding pointed questions from reporters about the cyanide poisoning of a New York woman who had taken the company's Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules.

Burke not only is chairman of Johnson & Johnson, he has made himself the corporation's public face.

What changed Burke's style

and made him a symbol of how big business should handle unexpected crises was the still-mysterious poisoning of Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules that claimed seven lives in the Chicago area in 1982. Lightning struck again Feb. 8 in Bronxville, N.Y., claiming one life.

His goal was to convince the public that Johnson & Johnson was doing everything possible to make Tylenol safe to swallow.

His program of recalling and destroying Tylenol capsules, redesigning packages, promoting substitutes and rebuilding markets cost Johnson & Johnson $100 million in 1982 and an estimated $100 million to $150 million this time. That effort to protect the public, without waiting to find out if Johnson & Johnson was to blame, won Burke the admiration of friends and foes of big business.

President Reagan said Burke "has lived up to the very highest ideals of corporate responsibility and grace under pressure." Joan Claybrook, president of the consumer advocacy group Public Citizen and a frequent corporate critic, said Johnson & Johnson is "an absolutely fine model of how a company should behave."

Burke says the company's action showed enlightened self-interest. It was, he says, a pragmatic effort to keep his company alive and a realization that protecting customers is good business. That is a view he believes is common in the business community.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Mitchell strike flows 379 barrels

From Staff Reports

Mitchell County gained a Penn Detrital discovery, west and slightly south of the Westbrook Northwest field as EDWIN and BERRY COX completed the No. 1 Brennand.

The well tested to flow 379.2 barrels of 44.2 gravity crude and 330 Mcfd on a 25/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 210 psi. Production is from perforations 7,976 to 7,984 ft., with no treatment reported. Gas-oil ratio is 870:1.

Scheduled as an 8,100 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,225 ft. and plugged back to 8,150 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,193 ft.

The well topped the Clearfork at 2,591 ft., Strawn at 7,490, and the Penn Detrital at 7,972 ft. on ground elevation of 2,193.1 ft. Pay was topped at 7,976 ft.

Location is 1,400 ft. from south and east lines of Section 6, Block 28, T-1-N, T&P survey, seven miles north-west of Westbrook.

Glasscock gas strike tested for 3.8 Mmcf

An exploration project in Glasscock County has netted a Devonian gas discovery, southeast of the Sant Lawrence field.

L&B OIL CO. completed the No. 7 Frysak for a calculated absolute open flow of 3.8 Mmcf from perforations 10,572 to 10,618 ft. The interval was acidized with 7,500 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured with 97,000 gallons of gel and 147,400 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Suzan Conder, Reporter-Telegram

Drilled as an 11,100 ft. wildcat, the well reached a total depth of 11,011 ft. and was plugged back to 10,924 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,687 ft. include the Spraberry at 6,307 ft., Wichita Albany, 7,988, Wolfcamp at 7,936, Strawn at 9,952, Devonian at 10,563, and the Fusselman at 10,960 ft. Pay was topped at 10,570 ft.

Dallas operator tests Coke field re-opener

GLAHN-REESE RESOURCES, INC., Dallas, re-opened the Hendry Point field of Coke County with completion of the No. 3 Hendry, a Cambrian producer located a half-mile southeast of the original opener.

On potential test, the well flowed 216 barrels of 50 gravity crude and no water on a 16/64 inch choke. Production was natural from perforations 5,934 to 5,964 ft.

The well reached a total depth of 6,080 ft. and was plugged back to 5,989 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,059 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 1,966 ft. include the Canyon Reef at 3,850 ft., Goen Lime at 5,235, Gardner Lime at 5,463, Gray Sand at 5,567, Ellenburger at 5,876, and the Cambrian at 5,932 ft.

Location is 200 ft. from northeast and 1,332 ft. from southeast lines of Section 305, Joel Holleman survey, three miles southeast of Blackwell.

Location is 680 ft. from east and 4,620 ft. from south lines of Section 47, Block 35, T-4-S, T&P survey, four miles north of St. Lawrence.

Ward County wildcat flows 165 barrels oil

TEXACO, INC., Midland, completed the No. 6 University 10-18 "B" as a Cherry Canyon producer in the Block 18 field of Ward County.

Texaco finished the producer to flow 165 barrels of 34.4 gravity crude, 1.6 Mmcf and 190 barrels of water on a 20/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 800 psi.

The well is flowing from perforations 6,427 to 6,436 ft., which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 7,500 gallons of gel and 17,500 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 9,630:1.

Scheduled as a 6,850 ft. wildcat, the well reached a total depth of 6,850 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and was plugged back to 6,766 ft.

The well topped the Lamar at 5,028 ft., Bell Canyon at 5,053, and the Cherry Canyon at 5,953 ft. on ground elevation of 2,796 ft. Pay was topped at 6,427 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from north and 790 ft. from east lines of Section 10, Block 18, ULS survey, 9 miles northwest of Pyote.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Amoco subsidiary signs China agreement

BEIJING — Amoco Orient Petroleum Co., an Amoco Production Co. subsidiary, has signed its second offshore agreement with the China National Offshore Oil Corp. here.

The agreement involves Contract Area 16/34, covering 630 square kilometers, 244.8 square miles, in the Pearl River Mouth Basin. The area area is approximately 100 miles southeast of Hong Kong in water depths ranging from 300 to 820 ft.

Apache dividend declared by directors

MINNEAPOLIS — The board of directors of Apache Corp. has declared a $0.7 per share dividend, the 78th consecutive quarterly cash dividend on the company's common stock.

The dividend is payable on April 30 to shareholders of record on March 31, 1986.

Apache sees first quarterly loss since 1963

MINNEAPOLIS — Apache Corp. reported that declines in the price of oil and gas led it to reduce the carrying value of its oil and gas properties, resulting in the company's first quarterly loss since 1963.

For the quarter, a loss of $7,039,000 from continuing operations, or 34 cents per share, compares with a profit of $5,706,000, or 27 cents per share for the fourth period in 1984.

Tesoro will take write-down on reserves

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (SWN) — Dr. Robert V. West, Jr., chairman of Tesoro Petroleum Corp. informed Tesoro's stockholders at its annual meeting today that as a result of the recent decline in petroleum prices Tesoro expects to take a write-down in the value of its oil and gas reserves at the end of March 31, 1986 fiscal quarter. The amount of the write-down will depend on the level of petroleum prices at that time. However, assuming that crude oil reserves are written down to a market price of $20 per barrel, and natural gas is written down to a market price of $2.07 per thousand cubic feet, Tesoro's write-down would be approximately $36 million (before tax effects) under the full-cost accounting method used by Tesoro.

Dr. West also announced that Tesoro was anticipating a further write-down in the book value of its receivable from the Government of Trinidad and Tobago which was for approximately four million barrels of residual fuel oil on December 31, 1985. The value of Trinidad fuel oil is currently less than its book value of $17.05 per barrel. If this continues until March 31, 1986, as Tesoro considers probable, Tesoro will write down the receivable to its then value.

Conoco affiliate plans $923 million project to develop North Sea natural gas fields

HOUSTON (AP) — Conoco Ltd., an affiliate of Conoco, will begin a $923 million project to develop three North Sea natural gas fields that will supply 5 percent of Britain's natural gas by the early 1990s, Conoco announced.

Natural gas from the fields will be sold to the British Gas Corp., under a long-term contract to sell all economically recoverable reserves from the fields. Delivery is scheduled to begin in October 1988.

The project involves seven offshore platforms and a large-volume gas pipeline and terminal.

The three fields, Vulcan, Vanguard and South Valiant, are about 70 miles offshore and have total recoverable reserves estimated at 1.4 trillion cubic feet.

Conoco Ltd. will manage development of the fields in partnership with Britoil, Arco British Ltd., Marathon Petroleum Ltd. and Occidental International Oil Inc.

American Investor's Guide

Newly established trust takes time to reap dividends

Q. I have more money but am reluctant to pay high income tax on income from my investments. So, I invest in tax-free unit trusts. Last year, I invested a total of $100,000 in four such trusts and waited three to four months before receiving any dividend checks. After that, I started receiving a check a month from each trust. Why the delay in the first checks?

A. Because it takes a while for a newly established unit trust to gather enough income from which to make dividend payments.

When a unit trust is set up, it purchases a portfolio of securities — municipal bonds, in the case of a tax-free trust. "Units" then are sold to investors. Think of the units as shares.

Your trust collects interest from the bonds it holds and passes that money along as dividends to you and other unit holders. Because interest from municipal bonds is not subject to federal income tax, your dividends also are exempt from that tax.

Right here, it has to be noted that municipal bond interest, as well as dividends from municipal bond unit trusts and municipal bond mutual funds, can result in Social Security recipients paying federal income tax on up to half of their SS benefits.

A unit trust might hold 50 or more different municipal bonds, all of which pay interest semiannually. But different bonds pay interest in different months. So, a unit trust doesn't make its first dividend payment until it has collected enough interest to make a reasonable size payment to all unit holders.

After that, as interest payments keep coming in to the trust, the trust pays dividends on a regularly scheduled basis. Most unit trusts give their unit holders the choice of receiving dividends monthly, quarterly or semiannually.

Q. I invested $14,000 in a unit trust while living in a different state. I wrote to the broker there, asking for the year-end value of my investment, but I received no answer. When I ask local brokers, they immediately want me to sell and buy something else from them.

Is there any way I can learn the year-end value? Also, suppose I want to check my investment's value at other times. How can I get that information?

A. You should have received a year-end statement from the trust, listing a great deal of information — including the value of your account. If you didn't get that statement, contact the trust.

The information you seek is important to investors in states with intangible taxes and similar levies, based on the year-end values of their securities.

You can learn the day-to-day value of each unit of the trust by telephoning the unit trust's sponsor or trustee. The sponsor is the securities firm that established the trust. The trustee is the bank that has possession of the unit trust's securities. You'll find the phone numbers — most likely, "800" toll-free numbers — in the statements and/or reports sent to you regularly.

After you phone and get the value of each unit, multiply that by the number of units you own. The result will be the current value of your investment.

Q. I have owned 500 shares of a mutual fund for more than a year. I receive monthly dividend checks, but I have never received a statement or shareholder report from the fund. I asked the broker through whom I purchased these shares and he said it is not unusual for a mutual fund to send no statements or reports. Is that true?

A. No. Indeed, The Federal Investment Company Act of 1940 requires every mutual fund, unit investment trust and other registered investment company to send shareholder reports semiannually. Many do it quarterly.

And, when you receive dividends, the investment company also sends a statement of your account.

I suspect you have your mutual fund shares at a brokerage firm in "street name" — registered in the brokerage's name. In that case, the brokerage is supposed to forward the fund's shareholder reports to you and send account statements to you.

TYLENOL

But two days later, on Feb. 13, another contaminated container was found at a nearby Woolworth store.

At that point, Johnson & Johnson halted capsule production at its McNeil Consumer Products Co. and urged consumers nationwide to stop using Tylenol capsules until further notice. It advised merchants not to sell capsules.

Burke met with reporters again the next day, Friday, and was questioned on whether he was going to recall all capsules and abandon the popular form of medication.

With precautions in place to prevent the sale of more capsules and with the public alerted, he deferred a decision on a recall while a crisis team looked for ways that eventually could return a safer capsule to the market.

That team, made up of Burke, Clare, McNeil Chairman David Collins, Johnson & Johnson public relations chief Lawrence Foster and corporate counsel George Frazza, held sometimes heated consultations. Joseph Chiesa, the president of McNeil, also was a key figure in the deliberations, although he stayed at the subsidiary's headquarters in Fort Washington, Pa.

Burke said he had concluded privately that capsules would have to go. But he wanted to give his top managers a chance to debate the choices. The McNeil executives argued against abandoning capsules.

"It was very important to let people say whatever they thought because you are under terrible stress," Burke said of the process. "The anger that comes out in these meetings is just appalling. If you walked in you'd say, 'Geez, these guys aren't going to get anywhere, they hate each other!'"

"Well we not only don't hate each other, we all love each other. And we've known each other long enough so we can look somebody in the eye and say,

"That's crazy,' or, 'Will you shut up and listen to me.'"

Cost was not a consideration, he said. The company, which spent $100 million in the Chicago Tylenol crisis, knew it would cost at least that much this time. It also knew that with $613.7 million in profit and $6.42 billion in sales last year, it could afford the expense.

Over the three-day weekend, the team concluded there was no way to guarantee the safety of its capsules. On Monday, Presidents' Day, Burke announced Johnson & Johnson would no longer sell any over-the-counter medicines in capsule form.

The focus immediately turned to persuading its capsule customers to switch to tablets or caplets. Caplets are coated, capsule-shaped tablets designed to be easy to swallow. They were developed by Johnson & Johnson as an alternative to capsules after the Chicago poisonings.

It also prepared to defend its markets for other widely used consumer health products that no longer er are being sold in capsule form. Prescription drugs, which are not stocked on store shelves, continue to be sold in capsules.

On Tuesday, Feb. 18, as Burke was appearing on the Donahue Show on NBC to push caplets, representatives of other over-the-counter drug makers were meeting behind closed doors in Washington to consider ways to improve the safety of their capsule products. There has been no move to follow Johnson & Johnson in abandoning capsules.

Before the New York death, Johnson & Johnson had 14 million users of Tylenol capsules. But there were 35 million others who use the acetaminophen in tablet or caplet form.

Even without the capsules, Johnson & Johnson says Tylenol's sales are almost twice as high as those of its closest competitor.

It had painfully rebuilt a business that had been written off by some analysts after the Chicago poisonings had slashed its market share from 35 percent to under 7 percent.

Eastern reaches agreement with flight attendants

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines and its flight attendants reached a three-year tentative agreement today that the union said would avert a midnight strike and should keep creditors from declaring the airline in default.

"It's the best possible agreement given the absolute insanity of the last year and especially the last two weeks," Robert Callahan, president of the local Transport Workers Union, said in announcing the settlement after an all-night negotiating session.

"I think we came out with a contract that's fair to employees and to everybody," Eastern President Joe Leonard said, adding that some laid-off flight attendants would likely be recalled this spring. "We've been hanging on by the skins of our teeth."

Leonard said the agreement calls for 20 percent wage cuts and an increase in work hours, which will replace similar wage cuts and work increases the company temporarily instituted last month.

CHAIRMAN

"I had no doubts in the beginning that what we were doing was a good business decision," Burke said. "Not just a good decision in terms of the commonweal. If I wanted to do that I guess I would have been a priest. I'm a businessman. My point is business runs on public confidence in the people who make and market the products."

As a public figure, with his image enhanced by his distinguished grayish-white hair and air of confidence, Burke, who turns 61 today, has become a credible spokesman for the 100-year-old company he took over in 1976.

Burke, who left Procter & Gamble Co. to join Johnson & Johnson in 1963, spent most of his career developing and selling health-care products.

Reflecting on the decision to drop Tylenol capsules, Burke said there was no magic formula for dealing with the unexpected.

"I don't believe you can teach crisis management. I know that there are a lot of people out there making a living doing it and maybe I'm wrong. But I don't think that if we all had a course in that before that event it would have helped us at all. As a matter of fact, it might have gotten in the way," he said.

Burke said a lot of the credit he gets is misplaced.

"Most of the people that I know in business that I respect think like I do," he said. "I get a lot of credit just because of an incident. I don't think that I think uniquely about business."

Standard Oil says top executives to be replaced April 1

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Standard Oil Co., which is controlled by the British Petroleum Co., announced Thursday that its two top officers — Alton W. Whitehouse, chairman and chief executive officer, and John Miller, president and chief operating officer — would be replaced April 1.

The Standard Oil board of directors named a British Petroleum executive to lead Standard and also placed at least one other key B.P. executive in a key management position at Standard. But analysts said they doubt that British Petroleum, which owns 55.5 percent of Standard, would soon move to buy the rest of the company.

Spokesmen for Standard said its board had named Robert B. Horton, a managing director of British Petroleum, as the new chairman and chief executive officer, and Frank E. Mosier, an executive vice president of Standard, as the new president and chief operating officer. Both Horton and Mosier are already members of Standard's board. The company, based in Cleveland, was formerly known as the Standard Oil Company (Ohio).

Randy Walthus, a spokesman for Standard, said in response to questions that the directors had acted because they and British Petroleum "decided they needed a management team in which they had more confidence." He said that neither Whitehouse nor Miller had been "fired." He said, "The board has simply appointed replacement officers as of April 1," he added. "The matter of a resignation by Mr. Whitehouse and Mr. Miller still has to be worked out."

MMH takes varied steps to maintain healthy revenue

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital, like other hospitals across the country, is feeling the pinch as more and more insurance companies push for less expensive treatment plans, a hospital spokesman has indicated.

"An appropriate question is, does this reflect the beginning of a significant trend change to even less inpatient services as more and more group insurance plans encourage...outpatient surgery/services whenever appropriate?" asked Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson in his monthly financial report. The report was presented at Wednesday's monthly meeting of the Midland County Hospital District's Board of Trustees.

The hospital figures, which supported the trend, fell short of budget in most cases. While the number of same-day surgeries (205) exceeded last year's amount by one in January, the total amount of inpatient surgeries (typical surgical stays of several days), in comparison, fell short of a projected 400 cases by 16. For the year to date, 1,450 standard inpatient surgeries were reported — far less than the expected 1,524. In a climate of governmental health policies, bargain-oriented insurance plans and a general increase in medical costs, MMH is taking steps to stay afloat.

The recent $1 million purchase of West Texas Pathology Laboratory gave the hospital an opening in the growing lab market. In addition, MMH has been expanding the effectiveness of its own lab by offering blood bank services to outlying communities such as Andrews and Stanton — a move even the larger Medical Center Hospital in Odessa has not yet taken. One customer of the lab is Clearview, the chemical dependency center administered in part by MMH.

Director Phil Lundberg said that while MMH's revenues from Clearview were "no big amount at this point," the lab work is the largest purchase the center makes from MMH.

"We use West Texas Pathology Lab as our reference lab, send any emergency cases to MMH and purchase our pharmacy items at their pharmacy," he said. MMH, however, derives no revenue from the operations of Clearview itself.

Increases in the uses of such ancillary services as respiratory therapy and physical therapy have also offset the depressed medical environment, although there has been concern over the first area.

"Respiratory therapy treatment growth continues to be astounding," said Peterson. "But as that is a service highly utilized by Medicare patients, it also raises concern."

Peterson was referring to the much ballyhooed DRGs (diagnosis related groups), the system that Medicare has devised to decrease its payments to hospitals. With DRGs, hospitals treating Medicare patients are reimbursed for a predetermined condition only. Subsequent illnesses (and treatments such as respiratory therapy which may relate to those illnesses) incurred following admission may not be covered.

Still another service which could raise extra revenue for the hospital is the hyperbaric oxygen unit (HBO) — a sort of iron lung in which the patient is infused with large amounts of pure oxygen.

Bunton will rule on apartments' delinquent bills

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton said Thursday that he was "extremely reluctant to get into the management business of any apartment complex."

But the judge, who is to render a ruling on the plight of the Statler Terrace and Riviera Apartment complexes, said he did want the city of Midland and Energas Company "to receive their money" for the water and gas services supplied to the apartments.

Doerring & Associates Inc., the San Diego, Calif.-based apartment management firm, had fallen behind in utility payments since October 1985 after its accounts were frozen following the filing of a U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) civil lawsuit against Doerring. The SEC is alleging fraud on part of Doerring, a $200-million company.

The city is claiming that $13,900.07 is past due in water bills; $9,039.19 from Statler and $4,860.88 from Riviera.

And after the city cut off water and sewer services supplied to the Statler Terrace and Riviera about 5 p.m. on Jan. 29, Glenda Wright, manager of the Statler Terrace and Riviera apartments, went to the federal courthouse. Through a welfare tenant, Doris Brockington, she requested the water services be restored for the health and welfare of the tenants who had paid their rents and that the gas flow not be shut off.

The requests promptly were granted by the judge.

"My company told me that there was nothing I could do" to get the water services restored, Ms. Wright had said.

County GOP appoints Rucker interim chairman

From Staff Reports

Dean Rucker has been appointed to serve as interim chairman of the Midland County Republican Party. He succeeds Kelly Fish who resigned to run for city council.

Rucker

Rucker, a partner of the Midland law firm of Rucker & Rucker, was elected by the party's executive committee recently held at Republican Party headquarters.

In accepting the position, Rucker vowed that he would continue to work on building the party's strength and expanding its influence in local government.

"I look forward to this challenge

This is a particularly exciting and important political year for Republicans, and I'm very pleased to play a part of it as chairman," he said.

Rucker is a member of the State Bar of Texas, and is admitted to practice before the U.S. Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit and the U.S. District Court, Western and Northern Districts. He is also a member of the Midland County and the American Bar Associations, and Midland County Young Lawyers Association.

He currently serves on the boards of Alamo YMCA, Community and Senior Service, and the Midland Apartment Association. He has served as a vice-president of the Midland Jaycees and the Midland County Young Republicans. He is a graduate of Leadership Midland.

Rucker earned his juris doctor from St. Mary's University, and his bachelor's degree in business from Trinity University. He is a native of Midland.

Planned Parenthood won't offer IUDs

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Intrauterine devices (IUDs) will no longer be available through the local chapter of Planned Parenthood, said a spokesman today.

"There has just been too many problems with the IUD's — particularly in the past year," said Pam Black, director of community relations for Planned Parenthood, Permian Basin. "We will not be inserting any more IUD's."

Ms. Black said the decision came following a meeting of the group's medical committee earlier this week. The committee is chaired by Dr. Norman Harris, an Odessa obstetrician/gynecologist.

"We haven't heard if any of the other doctors in town are planning to do likewise, but Dr. Harris had decided to stop inserting them in his private practice and he has a lot of clout with the medical committee," she said. "His decision is sort of what precipitated this."

Protesters give Planned Parenthood respite

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Maybe it was the lack of a controversial speaker.

Maybe it was because the furor over the teen theater Esteem Machine seems to have subsided.

Or maybe pro-life advocates didn't know about the Permian Basin Planned Parenthood annual meeting.

Whatever the reason, for the first time in four years, members attending the Thursday evening meeting at the Midland Petroleum Club did not have to cross picket lines to get to their annual banquet.

"I don't know whether to be upset or happy," said 1985 board president Charles Seltzer.

"They might have got bright and figured out that every time they show up, the news media shows up and we get free coverage," Seltzer said.

Abortions are not performed at the Permian Basin Planned Parenthood centers, but some affiliates of the national agency do abortions.

"These people picket us because we're a federation of Planned Parenthood...but we don't do abortions," he said.

"We try to prevent that horrible decision from arising," he said.

Despite the absence of pro-life advocates, Seltzer said, "I don't think for a minute they're going to take the pressure off."

"They're good people...but they're way off target with us," Seltzer said.

Protests were intensified last summer against Planned Parenthood and its Esteem Machine, said executive director Dana Frazee. The theater, made up of 18 high school teens, performed Thursday evening in lieu of a guest speaker. The group of 9th and 12th graders act out issues as a way of reaching teenagers with adolescent concerns.

Some Midlanders felt the Esteem Machine promoted teenage sex and protested its formation, Ms. Frazee said.

The theater formed in July has performed for more than 1,700 people. The Esteem Machine travels to perform in Austin on April 11 and 12. The group will also travel to Texas Christian University at Fort Worth in July.

Officers for 1986 were elected at Thursday's meeting. They include board president, Jan Foust; vice president of fund raising, Debra Sewalt; vice president of programs, Marion Kimberly; secretary, Gay Patterson and treasurer, Marshall Nelson.

Outgoing officers for 1985 include president Charles Seltzer, vice president Gay Patterson, secretary Marion Kimberly and treasurer Marshall Nelson.

'Mama Mary' makes plans for 100th birthday

By JULIE HILLRICHS

Mary Dockett says she wants a three-wheel bicycle when her 100th birthday rolls around in 1987.

"I'm going to learn to ride that bicycle when I get it. I'm going to get some blue jeans and I'm going to get on that thing," she says.

In the meantime, Mrs. Dockett — affectionately called "Mama Mary" — says she'll settle for new posts on her front porch and a "little party" when she turns 99 years old on Saturday.

She pauses. "Wait a minute," she says. "Maybe I'm going too fast. I ain't even got there yet."

Mama Mary attributes her longevity to "singing and praying everyday, keeping a clean house, and keeping my mouth shut."

But long-time friend Evangeline Richman says Mama Mary's secret can also be traced to a "strong faith in God, positive attitude and honest labor."

She says Mama Mary "was destined to live a very colorful life because she has put a lot into it."

richer had we known her earlier. She has many hobbies — enjoying people, sewing aprons, bonnets and quilts which have won blue ribbons," Mrs. Richman says.

Mama Mary was born March 1, 1887 in Milam County — one of nine children born to Central Texas cotton farmers. "My folks raised cotton, peas, hogs and children."

The family moved to Robertson County when Mrs. Dockett was a toddler and to Falls County when she was 10 years old.

"I went to school in Robertson County. When it rained I was in school. When it was sunny I was in the field picking cotton."

"We didn't get nothing and we didn't have nothing. That was common. We didn't have fine clothes to wear to school, but we were happy as we could be," she says.

By the time she was 18, Mama Mary met and married her husband. "We met in the cotton field and we were married on the front porch of the house. I remember we came in from the field, got cleaned up and got married."

That union produced four children — two of whom are still alive — and 33 grandchildren. The couple was divorced 12 years later.

"He wanted to keep having babies and I had enough of that," she says.

After her children were grown, Mama Mary moved to West Texas. "That was in 1950. Some of my friends came to see me and they brought me back to Midland."

Even today, Mama Mary says she drops in for a visit with her former employer or to prepare a meal. "Sometimes I go over there and cook. If I don't think I ever quit working. If I want to work, I work. If I don't, I don't."

She says "I'm content all the time."

Local trade forum splits with Lubbock

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The president of the Permian Basin chapter of the West Texas International Trade Forum announced Thursday that the group's board of directors had voted to incorporate and become independent of the Lubbock-based trade forum.

From now on, the organization will be known as the Permian Basin International Trade Forum, according to Bill Gruer, El Paso Products personnel director. Part of the reason for the board's action, he said, concerned obtaining non-profit exempt status from the Internal Revenue Service, which will give the organization greater latitude in its operations.

Those attending the noon luncheon meeting at the Rodeway Inn heard Marie M. Mortland, an international trade specialist with the Texas Economic Development Commission, say promotion of international trade is high on the governor's priority list because increased overseas trade can help Texas achieve diversification.

TEDC, she said, is in the process of developing a data base that will eventually help Texas businesses expand their overseas activity.

A survey of Texas businesses is currently being conducted, she said, that will ultimately allow TEDC to provide greater assistance to businesses through being aware of the specific types of products and services they are in a position to provide for overseas customers.

Japanese investors have begun to seriously look at the Southwestern and Southeastern United States because of growth patterns in these areas, Ms. Mortland said. She observed the Japanese are now investing more capital in the United States and in Asia.

Residential burglaries reported in Midland

From Staff Reports

A $1,000 mobile barbecue pit was reported stolen Thursday in one of several burglaries and thefts reported to local law-enforcement agencies.

Wes Tex Equipment Co. reported the pit was taken from 1803 B Checotah Thursday, reports said.

In other reports, $6,500 in currency was reported stolen by Leo Hatfield of Hatfield Development Corp. Other items taken from an apartment at 2400 Whitmire were valued at about $1,975, for a total loss of about $8,475, reports said. The name of a suspect has been given to police.

Dick Leonard, 1403 Princeton, reported the theft of a $400 water tank, 1,000 pounds of livestock feed worth $250, and a $100 roping dummy from a corral on County Road 1208. The theft occurred Thursday, reports said.

Jim Mauldin, County Road 1150, reported the burglary of a vacant mobile home on County Road 1150 in which, a $500 refrigerator and a $300 gas range were taken. The burglary occurred about a week ago, reports said.

A $500 shotgun was reported stolen by Thomas John Frantes, 401 Nicklaus. The shotgun was taken Thursday, reports said.

A $350 videocassette recorder was reported stolen Thursday by Vijay Singh, 214 W. Stokes, according to reports.

Evelyn Jones, 4405 N. Garfield, reported the loss of two brass objects worth a combined total of about $210 in a Thursday burglary. Also taken was a $99 telephone, reports said.

A $158 radar detector and a pair of boots valued at $80 were reported stolen Thursday by Keith A. Cain, Westgate Mobile Home Park. The items were taken from his vehicle while it was parked at a location near 1004A Andrews Highway, reports said.

Filipinos in Basin celebrate ouster of Marcos

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The sign on the living room wall of the westside home of Mar Borna proclaimed "MABUHAY ang PILIPINAS, Midland-Odesa Filipino Community Celebrates the Restoration of Philippine Democracy."

Asked what Mabuhay ang Pilipinas meant, the 35-year-old Borna, a registered nurse who works in the Medical Center Hospital emergency room, said it means "Long Live the Philippines."

The sign was made Thursday afternoon by Benjie Santos, a Filipino who lives and works in Midland. Santos brought the sign to the Borna home to be displayed as most of the 40 or so Filipinos who live in the Odessa area gathered to celebrate the return of democracy to the Philippine Islands under the presidency of Corazone Aquino.

According to Bernadette Fuentes, a 35-year-old registered nurse who has lived in the United States about 11 years, most of the Filipinos living in the Odessa area are involved in the medical profession and work at Medical Center Hospital. Nearly all are naturalized citizens of the U.S. She estimates there are about 100 Filipinos living in the Permian Basin area.

Most of the Filipinos attending the celebration, said Ms. Fuentes, have relatives still living in the Philippines. None have been able to contact their relatives since the ascension of Cory Aquino as president. But, in their quiet way, they are happy and confident conditions in their former homeland will improve.

Borna concedes President Aquino will persevere and be able to overcome the problems the country faces.

Noting that many of the country's economic problem stem from the martial law imposed by former President Ferdinand Marcos during his 20 year reign, Borna said martial law discouraged foreign investment to the detriment of the island nation, where the United States has long-maintained two strategic military bases.

The most important aspect of the change in the Philippines, say Ms.

Fuentes and Borna, is that the country will now have "a government of the people and by the people."

According to Borna, he has not returned to the Philippines with his family because he feared for their safety. Now, he says, people will be able to live without fear. They'll also be free to speak out, freedoms the Filipino people have not had for many years, he said.

Borna recalled that he had just graduated from high school when Marcos ran for his first term as president and that he campaigned for him. But, by the time he ran for a second term, he said, "We were already demonstrating against him" because things had become so bad.

APARTMENTS

Judge Bunton ordered the city to reconnect water services to Statler Terrace and Riviera, told Energas not to shut off gas to the apartments and then ordered that rental income from the apartments be placed in the registry of the court, which would supervise payment of bills.

Complicating the case is the impending foreclosure of Riviera and another Doerring property, Town & Country Apartments, on Tuesday. Doerring is fighting the foreclosures.

"This matter is difficult — to say the least," said Bunton. "I am extremely concerned about the jurisdiction of this court" in a matter which originated in California.

Earlier, Houston attorney Darryl Malone suggested to Bunton, "One federal court should not interfere with the ruling of another federal court." Malone represents Thomas F. Lennon, the temporary disbursing officer who was appointed by Federal Judge Edward J. Schwartz of California to pay Doerring's bills during the SEC "freeze" of Doerring's accounts.

Lennon has not been paying certain bills, including the Statler Terrace and Riviera utility bills and Ms. Wright's salary.

Bunton noted that the Statler Terrace and Riviera apartments "are in a money-losing posture."

Evidence before the court indicated that last year Statler Terrace was bringing in about $10,000 in monthly rental income from individuals and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and that Riviera similarly was bringing in about $3,000 in monthly payments.

"The Riviera is not generating any (income) — zero," Ms. Wright said after the court hearing. "Statler is in a little better shape." It now is generating $3,500 in monthly income.

Ms. Wright said some tenants moved out and some others simply withheld payments. "They know the company (Doerring) is in trouble, and they are not going to pay rent. The law is so much in favor of the renters than landlords."

HUD rental income is a certainty, she said.

"If you don't pay the rent," Bunton said, "you ought to get out." The judge said he was "not interested" in providing water and gas services to those people who do not pay their rent.

In referring to the Doerring matter, Bunton said the case "ought to be in bankruptcy court." He said the proceedings before him "sounds like a meeting of creditors."

"I'M NOT a bankruptcy judge, and I'm not interested in being a bankruptcy judge."

In open court, Bunton said he was going "to compliment Ms. Wright for taking over this difficult task without compensation." The SEC freeze of Doerring's accounts had cut off her paychecks.

Meanwhile, Ms. Wright, a property manager, has taken a "position" with VMS Realty of Albuquerque, N.M. The company is permitting her to spend time in Midland to carry through with her commitment to her Midland tenants in the apartment complexes.

Though it has 63 units, including 51 which are in operation, Statler Terrace has lost tenants. Of the 20 families now there, 15 households are paying rent either individually or through HUD. Riviera tenants have discontinued paying rent.

"It's a bad situation," Ms. Wright said, "but I think it's going to be remedied right away.... You can't put that many people out on the street (if the apartments were shut down)." She said the Harvey Doerring is in a partnership which owns the apartments, which are managed by but not owned by Doerring & Associates Inc. "I think that there will be new owners taking over. We'll keep it open."

Ms. Wright said she has hope that Statler Terrace in northeast Midland will be revamped and opened as a HUD-funded apartment complex under HUD's self-sufficiency rental program for single parents.

"Nothing is going to change," Ms. Wright said, "until he (Bunton) hands down his decision."

DEATHS

Nellene Marshall

Mrs. Nellene Marshall, 82, died at her home Wednesday.

Services were to be today at 3:30 p.m. at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel, with the Rev. Milford Thomas of the Church of God officiating. Burial was to follow at Resthaven, under the Direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Marshall was born Sept. 4, 1903, in Wellington, Kan., and was reared in Oklahoma. She married Jesse W. Marshall on Aug. 4, 1923, in Muskogee, Okla. They lived in Montana, Colorado, and Oklahoma, and moved to Midland from Denver in 1967. She had been employed in Midland schools since that time. The schools included were Alamo, Goddard, and Lee High School. She was a member of the Church of God. She was preceded in death by her husband.

Survivors include a daughter-in-law, Ida Marshall of Aurora, Colo., one sister, Helen Guice of Oklahoma City, Okla.; three grandchildren, four great-grandchildren, and two nieces and one nephew.

Lloyd A. McKinney

Lloyd A. McKinney, 87, of Midland, died Sunday in a Brownfield nursing home.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Jackson Funeral Home.

McKinney was born Aug. 28, 1898, in Gonzales to the late Steve and Sarah Johnson McKinney. He grew up in Gonzales. He married the former Hazel Young. The couple had no children. He was preceded in death by his wife.

Judith Eugenia Bliss

Survivors include two nieces, Mrs. Betty Bailey of Brownfield and Mrs. Alfred Williams of Austin; three nephews, Joseph Williams of Coleman, Alvin Williams of Atlanta, Ga., and Johnny Williams of Abilene.

Services for Judith Eugenia Bliss Marsh, 49, of Houston, will be held at 3:30 p.m. Saturday at Resthaven Memorial Chapel under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. An additional service will be held in Houston at 10 a.m. Monday at the St. Francis Episcopal Church.

She died Tuesday in a Houston hospital.

She was born Feb. 9, 1938, in Quanah, and lived part of her life in Midland where she attended the Midland schools. She made her debut in Midland with the Minuet Club.

She was further educated at the Hockaday Schools in Dallas and received bachelor's degrees in journalism, English and special education and masters' degrees in English and special education from Oklahoma University.

She taught school in Anchorage, Alaska, Denver, Colo., Okinawa, Japan, Houston and Galveston. Ms. Marsh was an associate member of the Junior League of Houston, the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution and was active in the St. Francis Episcopal Church's altar guild.

She is survived by three children, John Paul Marsh, Robert Tobias Henderson Marsh, Alexandra Eugenia Bliss Marsh, all of Houston, her mother, Eugenia Harms Bliss Van Banvakenburgh of Denver, a brother, Robert Harms Bliss of Dallas, several cousins, uncles, a great aunt and one niece.

HOSPITAL

Although smaller HBO's which can treat isolated parts of the body are available in the Permian Basin, MMH's unit will be the first to treat the entire body.

Scheduled to go into service in March, the $75,000 HBO will have its own room and trained personnel to operate it at MMH. Although no price list has been handed out for the service yet, private therapists in Midland and Odessa who use the smaller units indicate that it could be a money-maker.

One therapist reportedly charged $50 per hour, plus charges for extras such as antibiotics and bandages.

The units, first introduced into the area in 1982, are enjoying a nationwide acceptance as more and more hospitals find them both an effective treatment device and revenue-spawner.

The number of HBO's between 1977 and 1984 increased six-fold, an MMH spokesman said.

The recently-opened Labor/Delivery/Recovery area, which attracted more than 400 pregnant and non-pregnant visitors to the "Stork Day"

Billing it unofficially in the beginning as a "birth center," the expanded obstetric services are taking full advantage of the latest baby boom.

Still another possible offset measure was MMH's decision last week to increase room rates by six percent. Private rooms went from $168 to $179 and semi-private increased from $165 to $176.

Peterson stated the increase was due to an overall rise in costs and the length of time since the last rate increase.

"It's been since October 1984 since we last had a rate increase," he told directors.

MMH's room rates compare closely with those of Physicians and Surgeons Hospital (private — $175, semi-private — $166). P&S Director Dick Liley agreed that room rate increases were sometimes necessary.

"A lot of depends on inflation and operational expenses," he said. "It's not uncommon to increase the room rates."

Perhaps the most drastic measure,

however, is the decision by the governing bodies of the hospital to create a special fund to be used for "various hospital activities" — primarily, searching for ways to prevent medical corporations from moving into the Midland market and to possibly increase size of the patient "pie" by using such services as Lifelight — an emergency helicopter service which could bring in oil field emergency cases.

The fund, called a "management fee," will go, in part, to pay for a feasibility study which examined the need for a preferred physician-type arrangement, in which local companies would get a reduced rate for using the services of those physicians at MMH. Both the select group of physicians and the hospital would benefit from the extra volume that could be generated.

Hospital leaders are cautious, however, about the management fee, underscoring the tentative nature of the fund (1 percent of gross revenues or about $500,000 for a one-year period). Chairman of the Board of Trustees Tom Bruner, in a Thursday morning interview, emphasized that there was no such preferred physicians group yet and that the feasibility study was just that — a study to be received in a community, because the Japanese want to become involved in the areas in which they invest. Texas is drawing the attention of Japanese investors, she stated, because it is in what the Japanese consider to be the "5th stage" of economic evolution — the high tech development era. Also of particular interest to Japanese investors, she said, is the Texas-Mexico border area and the availability of less expensive labor for use in assembly plants.

One area of special importance, she said, is how companies would be received in a community, because the Japanese want to become involved in the areas in which they invest. ## Big Spring teacher free on bond after drug arrest

BIG SPRING (AP) — A teacher arrested Wednesday at his school and charged with selling marijuana to a police undercover agent has been released after posting a $10,000 bond, police said.

Charles Alan "Chas" Briscoe, Big Spring High School history teacher and junior varsity football and track coach, was one of 10 people police have arrested as part of a nine-month undercover investigation, said police Lt. Jerry Edwards.

He said Briscoe was arrested at the school at 10 a.m.

Briscoe, 26, was charged with felony delivery of marijuana. He posted $10,000 bond and was released, Edwards said.

Briscoe played football for West Texas State University and for the Denver Gold of the United States Football League.

School superintendent Lynn Hise said Briscoe has been suspended with pay.

IUDS

A Midland OB/GYN, Dr. James Humphreys stated that all Searle IUD's he had in stock "would be returned."

"We stopped using them as soon as we received notice," he said.

Ms. Black added that while the decision is a local one, the group had received a directive from the national headquarters, Planned Parenthood Federation of America, which stated that all groups should use up what supplies they had in stock and then discontinue the service.

"Our decision to stop before we had used up all of our IUD's in stock was purely a local one," said Ms. Black. "We have enough left to go ahead and do a few more but we decided with all of the problems there's been, it was best to go ahead and send them back to the manufacturer. Our medical committee is very conservative."

Planned Parenthood's decision comes one month after Searle Pharmaceuticals Inc., the leading manufacturer of two intrauterine devices (the Copper-7 or CU-7 and the Tatum-T IUD's), announced they would no longer be manufacturing the items due to an excessively large amount of lawsuits.

Litigation costs were also a factor in the discontinuation of another IUD, A.H. Robin's Dalkon Shield, which was alleged to caused sterility.

Ms. Black added that, while PPPB was returning the remaining IUD's, that the decision was, in no way, a recall.

"This is not a recall," she said. "We will, of course, remove the IUD's if the clients are having problems."

Searle said in a letter dated Jan. 29 that while it "maintained full confidence in the safety" of its products, they would be discontinued due to an increase in lawsuits over IUD's in general and the difficulty of getting insurance to cover such litigation.

Overall, the amount of women using IUD's has declined significantly in the past few years with only 48 percent seeking birth control using the products, said Planned Parenthood.

TESCO's lower fuel rate to lower customer's bills

By GARY RASP

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas Electric Service Co.'s residential customers should soon see lower electric bills, thanks to a lower rate the company now charges for its fuel.

The change will save the average residential customer $3.20 per month, said company spokesman Dick Ramsey.

Ramsey said the new fuel rate will save all classes of customers about $245 million annually.

The fixed fuel factor rate, which the Public Utility Commission sets for all investor-owned utilities in the state, results from $140.4 million in fuel charges TESCO overcharged its customers from September 1985 through January 1986.

Texas Utilities Electric Co., which owns TESCO and several other utilities in the state, is also negotiating a customer refund for those over-collected. Parties involved in the case have yet to work out details of that refund, which is expected to total approximately $25 per residential customer.

"We asked (the PUC) for authority to make the refunds as early as possible," Ramsey said. "It's very unlikely that we'll be able to make them in March."

He said the refunds — most likely in the form of credit on electric bills — will probably begin in April.

"There is a remote possibility that that piece of the case will go to hearing," said Geoffrey Gay, a state-paid attorney who represents residential and small commercial ratepayers at the PUC.

Administrative Law Judge K. Crandall McDougall gave the parties until March 10 to agree on a refund plan.

'Sight Conservation Month' named

The month of March has been proclaimed "Sight Conservation Month and White Cane Days" by Gov. Mark White.

During March more than 44,000 Lions throughout Texas will be participating in the observance of Sight Conservation and White Cane Days. The Eye Bank Association of Texas is sponsoring the White Cane Kick-Off Banquet on Saturday in Houston. The purpose of the event is to emphasize the work done by Texas Lions for the blind and visually handicapped. In 1985 more than 2,000 Texans received their second sight through corneas provided by the Lions Eye Banks.

In 1925 Helen Keller challenged the Lions to become "Knights of the Blind." One of the first steps was the origination of the White Cane which makes a blind person more mobile.

The White Cane, tipped with red, is regarded now as a universal sign of inability to see.

On March 21-22 local Lions Clubs and Lioness Clubs will be joining forces to participate in the White Cane project. Proceeds will benefit the local District 2-A1 Lions Eye Bank, eye testing and will help provide eyeglasses.

Limited growing region tastes sweet to Vidalia onion farmers

LYONS, Ga. (AP) — Ben Jack McDilda peered across a field of Vidalia onion sprouts and was satisfied. It's been one of the mildest winters in years and, besides, the law is finally on the side of those who grow the onions prized for their sweet, mild taste.

"Right now they look good," observed McDilda, whose family has been planting Vidalia onions since 1945.

Enthusiasts say Vidalias can be eaten like apples and are the only onions that do not discourage kissing.

A child ate four within five minutes last year to win a $50 prize in the onion-eating contest at the Vidalia Onion Festival, a harvest season extravaganza.

"You don't have to run and hide when you eat one," noted Malcolm Taylor, a Vidalia grower and shipper. "They're real mild. They don't have any bite at all, but still have the onion flavor."

With its 10,000 residents, Vidalia has become an economic hub in southeast Georgia, with industries that produce designer shirts, baseballs, cardboard boxes and parts for the space shuttle.

But the town is most famous for onions, which were first promoted at the Vidalia state farmers market in the early 1940s. The onions have grown into a $90-million-a-year industry, although fresh Vidalias are sold only in May, June and July because of their short storage life.

"For salads, onion rings and hamburgers, they can't be beat," said McDilda, pointing out that Vidalias have won two taste tests against rival sweet onions from Walla Walla, Wash. "I think we've got the best."

Like most other growers in the region, McDilda or his cousin, Mike McKinley, climb into their pickup trucks every day to inspect their onion fields. McDilda has 120 acres this year and buys additional onions from other growers to ensure an adequate supply for his shipping business, which fills orders from as far away as California.

At $2,000 to $2,500 per acre, Vidalias are expensive to grow compared to other crops. Farmers pluck the sprouts from seed beds and set them out in the fields by hand. As the plants mature, growers have to spray often with chemicals to ward off insects, irrigate in dry weather and hire laborers to harvest the delicate onions by hand.

"You have to baby 'em, you just can't turn them loose and let them go," McKinley noted.

The onions also are susceptible to prolonged cold weather. A January freeze wiped out nearly half of the crop in 1985, but freeze damage this year is considered minor.

Rick Hartley, the agricultural extension agent in Toombs County, which is the heart of the Vidalia onion district, estimated this year's crop at about 6,000 acres.

"We've got the makings of a pretty good crop," he said. "We need to get through February. We're going to have some more cool weather, but we don't foresee any killing cold."

Technically, Vidalia onions are varieties known as the Yellow Hybrid Granex or the Granex 33. They are produced in Florida, Texas, and a number of other states, but growers attribute the Vidalia-area onions' milder taste to the south Georgia climate and low sulfur concentrations in the soil.

Ben Jack McDilda, right, and his cousin, Mike McKinley, of Lyons, Ga., pause to inspect a field of Vidalia onion sprouts. Growers of the mild, sweet-tasting onion are happy about a new law that limits the Vidalia onion growing region.

Attack cattle lice problems now

Lice cause the cattle industry annual losses in excess of $50 million. The parasites cause lowered resistance of animals, resulting in anemia, unthriftiness, reduced rates of growth, inefficient feed utilization, mortality and secondary diseases.

Lice are important insect parasites of many domestic animals. These wingless insects have three pairs of legs adapted to hold onto the host's hair and are often classified according to mouthparts and feeding behavior.

Sucking lice have elongated mouthparts that pierce the host animal's skin and draw a meal of blood.

Biting lice have broad, flat heads and chewing mouthparts and feed on skin debris. Hair shafts of the host may be clipped by the biting lice.

The life cycle of both types of lice is similar. Sexually mature adults attach eggs (nits) to the hair of the host animals. Young nymphal lice hatch one to three weeks later and molt one or more times before attaining adulthood. Lice that attack cattle and horses usually increase in numbers during the fall and reach a population peak in later winter or early spring. During late spring and summer, population declines to relatively few individuals that exist over summer in protective areas such as the ears and bellies of host animals. Lice cannot survive long at temperatures above 100 degrees. (An animal's summer skin surface temperatures may go above 125 degrees.)

Infection by sucking lice results in irritation and anemia in the animal.

Movement of lice on the skin of the host causes intense itching and animals rub or bite themselves to relieve irritation. Hair may be damaged and animals may become bruised and exhibit patches of bare skin and localized infection.

The cattle biting louse in Texas is not as important as some of the sucking lice. Usually, the cattle biting louse is slower to build up damaging populations. Under conditions of heavy infestation, the skin of the animals may be raw and bleeding from the constant biting, scratching, and rubbing to relieve itching and irritation caused by the lice. Lesions may resemble those produced by scab mites.

Because louse populations usually require treatment during winter months when animals have a heavy hair coat, properly working sprayers operating at approximately 300 PSI are necessary to thoroughly wet and penetrate the hair coat and reach the site of louse feeding.

Proper preparation of approved pesticide solutions is the key to success of any external parasite control. Thoroughly read and understand the pesticide label before attempting any use of the chemical. Some commonly used insecticides are Dursban 44, Dursban, Co-Ral, Lysoff, Spot On, Clovop, and Clodrin. Ivomec injectable is also labeled for cattle lice control.

Richard Minzenmayer is Midland County Extension Agent for Entomology.

Bill would let family farmers stay on part of foreclosed land

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm families could live on part of their land lost through foreclosure of a government loan under a proposal approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The proposal, approved Thursday by a 15-0 vote, would permit farmers to rent their house and an adjoining 10 acres for up to five years after the land was acquired by the government through foreclosure of a Farmers Home Administration or Small Business Administration loan.

Nick Allard, an aide to sponsor Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said the proposal was developed because of the "horrible depression" in the Farm Belt witnessed by the Democratic senator.

'Killer bee' devastation predicted for crops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The reputation of the Africanized honey bee is so bad that Agriculture Department experts say there could be severe crop losses if the "killer bees" enter the United States, possibly within three years.

As it looks now, the bees — hybrid descendants of fierce African queens accidentally loosed in Brazil in 1957 — are in southern Guatemala and could cross the Rio Grande into Texas from Mexico in 1988 or 1989, a team of Agriculture Department bee experts said Wednesday.

Richard Cowden, head of the bee program in the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, was asked at a news conference how the public will be able to tell when the Africanized bees arrive in the United States.

"You'll know it because there will be enough fanfare. I think, along with it" as the bees move north across Mexico.

Although Cowden said the odds favor the bees entering the country near Brownsville, Texas, he said some could interbreed with commercial bees and enter from Baja, California.

The Africanized bee is difficult for non-experts to distinguish from the regular European honey bees in the United States. But the Africanized bees didn't come by their fierce reputation without reason.

Individually, the sting of an Africanized bee is no more venomous than that of an ordinary honey bee, but USDA research has shown that Africanized bees inflict 10 times as many stings on a target than domestic bees.

Cowden illustrated the ferocity of the Africanized bees by noting sting test results. On comparative scale, the European bees found in the United States scored a 3, compared with 28 for Brazilian bees and 68 to 70 for Venezuelan bees.

And they have a sensitive defense mechanism that is easily triggered. They attack in greater numbers and pursue intruders greater distances and for longer periods of time than domestic bees.

Cowden was asked whether it might be prudent for local fire and police departments to set up special bee SWAT teams as some have done in the Panama Canal area.

"We certainly hope that isn't necessary," he said. "We just can't project what would happen, as far as public reaction is concerned."

Bee experts are concerned that the invasion of Africanized bees will disrupt the highly developed U.S. bee industry, which provides vital pollination services for many crops, in addition to honey.

Another USDA bee expert, Hachiro Shimanuki of the Agricultural Research Service, said he expected the first impact of Africanized bees would be on the pollination services offered by professional beekeepers.

If the "killer bee" reputation prevails, Shimanuki said, "the beekeeper would become sort of an endangered species" as it became more difficult to move bees around the country to pollinate crops — and to find farmers willing to allow bees onto their property because of the potential hazard.

According to USDA estimates, $19 billion worth of fruits, vegetables and field crops annually need honey bees for pollination. Many beekeepers hire out their hives to farmers just to provide crop pollination.

Department scientists also are seeking ways to "genetically manipulate" the Africanized bees when they do appear, perhaps diminishing some of their undesirable traits, Shimanuki said.

Some Africanized bees were found in California last year, perhaps coming in with some oil field equipment from South America. Quarantines and massive search efforts were carried out before the threat was curbed.

Others have been found from time to time in ship cargoes, but the real invasion is still expected in Texas and Arizona in 1988-1992, according to USDA officials.

Decision due on Conservation Reserve

Landowners in Midland County will need to make a decision soon on whether or not to participate in the new Conservation Reserve Program that is aimed at taking highly erodible cropland out of production.

Signup begins March 3 and runs through March 14 at the Midland ASCS office.

To be eligible, land must be classified as highly erodible (as determined by the Soil Conservation Service). The landowner must then submit a bid, noting how much he wants to receive from the government for taking the land out of production and putting it into permanent cover (trees and grass). This bid should be based on returns from expected crop production of the land. A worksheet to help landowners with this process is available at the county Extension office.

Annual payments will be limited to $50,000 per farmer. This is in addition to the $50,000 limit on annual commodity program payments.

The government will also bear half the cost of establishing permanent cover and will share in any cost involved in maintaining the land in its conserved state during the 10-year contract payment. Owners whose land is accepted into the program must have an approved conservation plan.

Entire farms can be placed in the program, but no more than 25 percent of the cropland in any one county will be accepted into the conservation reserve, unless determined otherwise by the Secretary of Agriculture. The secretary, also, can use his discretion on a number of other matters regarding the program, which is aimed at taking some 825,000 acres of Texas cropland out of production this year. Nationally, 5 million acres are targeted for the program in 1986. Over the next five years, about 10 percent of the nation's cropland — 45 million acres — will be retired through this new program, with 11.5 million acres targeted in Texas.

THE 1985 YEARBOOK of Agriculture, "U.S. Agriculture in a Global Economy," is off the press, and this latest edition focuses on international trade.

The year book examines relations between domestic farm production policies and international trade.

The 1985 yearbook is the 84th in a series authorized by Congress and launched by USDA in 1894. The 410-page book was written by 49 nongovernmental and USDA experts. The book features 119 photographs, 57 charts and 49 tables.

The yearbook is organized into five major themes: agriculture in a changing world; agriculture around the world; world trade in agricultural products; the policy environment; and looking ahead.

Copies of the 1985 Yearbook of Agriculture are available in limited quantities free of charge from members of Congress. Copies also may be purchased for $10 each from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20540; 1-202-783-3238.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

Egg production down from 2 percent from last year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's hens produced an estimated 5.86 billion eggs in January, down 2 percent from a year ago, says an Agriculture Department report.

As of Feb. 1, there were about 280 million hens in egg flocks, a slight reduction from a year earlier, the report said. Production averaged 67.3 eggs per 100 layers, up from 66.7 on Feb. 1, 1985.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unseasonably high temperatures and heavy rain and snow in parts of the West since Feb. 10 "may significantly increase seasonal streamflow forecasts," according to a new government report.

The departments of Agriculture and Commerce said Wednesday that the recent heavy rain caused some mountain snowpacks at lower elevations to melt prematurely and streams to overflow.

At the same time, heavy accumulations of snowfall occurred at some higher elevations, adding to the snowpack in those areas, Wilson Scaling, chief of USDA's Soil Conservation Service, said. This followed an unusually dry January in the region.

"Forecasts based on the most recent monthly analysis of snow and precipitation data were for ample supplies of water this year," Scaling said. "Most states had reported reservoir storage at normal levels or above on Feb. 1."

Snowpacks were "much below normal" on Feb. 1, prompting officials to predict moderate-to-severe water shortages for some users who depend on water directly from streams, he said. These shortages are expected to occur in central Arizona, portions of Montana, and on tributaries in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains in Colorado and New Mexico.

Other areas where snowpacks were below normal were the entire Upper Missouri Basin, the portion of the Columbia Basin in northern Idaho, the western portions of California and Oregon and most of Alaska.

Remote island residents guard privacy

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DECATUR ISLAND, Wash. — Katy Lamb has had the same teacher for nine years from kindergarten through eighth grade — her mother.

"I won't know how to act next year when I go to high school on Lopez Island," mused Katy, 13.

"Just imagine, I will not be sitting in the same seat all day. I will be going to different classrooms. I will have several teachers, not just my Mom."

Katy is one of seven pupils in the public elementary school on this four-mile-long, three-mile-wide, lush, green wooded island, one of 172 San Juan Islands in Washington's northwest corner.

For 11 years Karen Lamb, 40, has taught on Decatur Island, population 43. Two of her pupils are her children, Katy, and Reed, 7, a second-grader.

Four pupils are her brother and sister-in-law's children, Bill Jones, 6, a first-grader; Jessica Jones, 7, a third-grader; Kres Jones, 11, a sixth-grader; and Jodee Jones, 13, an eighth-grader.

The only pupil in the school not related to the teacher is Mike Crosson, 14, an eighth-grader, who commutes by boat from nearby Center Island, population 20, where his father is a fisherman.

It was the first week of school and a crisis occurred. The switch on the water pump broke. Students not only carried books to class, but buckets of water as well — for flushing the toilet.

THE PUMP switch was ordered from Seattle over the school's mobile phone but would not arrive for a couple of days. Living in isolation can be difficult at times.

No ferry boats call at Decatur Island. The only way to the outside world is by private boat or small plane.

"There's something special about living on a remote island," said the teacher. "The privacy. We still have the old-fashioned friendships, everyone depending upon one another. My husband and I love it."

Her great-grandfather, John P. Reed, an Irish immigrant, was the first non-Indian resident of Decatur Island in the 1860s when he moved here and married Karen Lamb's great-grandmother, Tacee, a Tlingit Indian.

There has been a one-room school on the island since the 1880s. During her 11 years of teaching at the school, Lamb has had as many as 10 pupils and as few as three.

When she graduated in 1959 she was the only eighth-grader. There were only three other pupils in the school that year. Her husband, George, built the present school house in 1982.

"We have had some colorful teachers at this obscure little island," Lamb recalled. "In the 1890s the one-room schoolteacher shot and killed another islander. The schoolteacher was the only person ever hanged in San Juan County."

Lamb is an appropriate name in Decatur. Four hundred sheep run wild on the island, progeny of sheep once raised by the schoolteacher's grandfather.

When Lamb was first married, she and her husband caught 55 head of sheep and traded the animals for a half dozen Black Angus cattle owned by a man on neighboring Blakely Island.

WHEN ISLANDERS get a craving for lamb, they don't go to a butcher shop. They run out and catch one.

But a sheep named Michael, owned by islanders Jack and Donna Westrick, is safe. Michael's mother died when Michael was a little lamb. The Westricks bottle-fed the lamb, now the only pet sheep on Decatur.

Everyone on Waldron is an escapist.

There is no electricity on Waldron Island. No telephones. No stores. No paved roads. No television. The people on Waldron want it that way.

"Everybody on the island came here to get away from people," explained Drum, a university biology professor before coming to the island 10 years ago. "I came here to get away from my students."

Drum grows 60 different kinds of herbs on his 20 acres. He sells his dried herbs at $10 a pound through a mail-order business. His 4-year-old son, Bochay, lives with him. A 7-year-old son lives with his ex-wife who left the island six years ago.

"It is easy to dream isolation but not easy to live isolation," Drum said. "Many think living on a remote island far away from the hectic pace is an idyllic existence. Few can make it past three months. My wife lasted six years, then left."

He said there are some people on the island he has not seen for months. "I don't know whether they are dead or alive. They don't want to be seen."

TEN YEARS ago a reporter visited Waldron. No one would speak to her. She wrote a story and described the islanders as "80 hostile hermits."

There were 80 residents at the time. "We don't want people to know about Waldron," a 24-year-old islander who asked not to be identified said. She added: "We're fully populated. There isn't room for anyone else."

Winnie Adams, 39, who lives on the island nine months of the year and teaches yoga elsewhere for three months, echoed Drum's sentiments.

"Very few people can handle this sort of lifestyle. If you like it, it's bliss. If you don't you suffocate."

Zeo Priszner, 88, buzzes around Waldron's one-lane dirt roads on a three-wheel motorcycle looking like a World War I pilot in goggles, red-knit wool hat and blazing yellow jacket. He has a heavy white beard and mustache. He lives in a plywood-fiberglass geodesic dome he built 12 years ago.

All homes on the densely forested, mountainous island were hand-crafted by islanders, a few by original homesteaders who first settled Waldron more than a century ago.

"Zeo is our island radical," explained Stella Fliske, 84, who lives with her brother, Phillip Lovering, 90, an engineer who designed several New York bridges and viaducts.

Fliske said Priszner tries to convert islanders to communism. "Everybody is very polite and listens. Zeo is a lot of fun. But he hasn't converted anyone yet. Every now and then he shows his slides from a visit to the Soviet Union. He's very entertaining."

Lovering and his sister live in a house they built high on a hill overlooking Waldron Dock on Cowliwz Bay. Every morning Lovering raises the American flag in his front yard and every evening he lowers it, a custom he has maintained since childhood, he said.

NOTHING OTHER than postage stamps are for sale on the island, no fuel for boats. Nothing. The islanders guard their privacy with passion. They do not want strangers visiting Waldron.

"If you write a story about Waldron, please explain there is no way of getting here and nothing for you to do once here," said Fred Richardson, 39, who rows five miles once a month from Waldron to Orcas Island to pick up his food and supplies.

Priszner and several others on Waldron are pensioners. Some people moved to the San Juans to find their Shangri-la — like Sue and Ken Shaw, who own and operate the 110-year-old Richardson General Store on Richardson Bay at the south end of Lopez Island.

The San Juan Islands in the northwest corner of the state of Washington are home to people who like their peace and quiet. Karen Lamb (top photo), at the top of the stairs, poses with her seven students at the Decatur Island School. Ms. Lamb has taught at the school for 11 years and she has only one student who is not related to her. Zeo Priszner (bottom photo), 88, rides around Waldron Island on his three-wheeler trying to convert the island's 59 other residents to Communism. Behind him is the Waldron Island post office.

Doctor believes children must like their teacher

Associated Press

World famous pediatrician Dr. Benjamin Spock believes your child's teacher must pass three tests to receive top grades — and the most important one is whether your child likes him or her.

"When children like a teacher it means they feel the teacher loves them and is trying to understand their individual problems."

Spock said children can't learn if they are afraid of their teacher or of failure.

"The second sign of a good teacher," he said, "is that he or she spends most of the time spotting individuals who are stuck and helping them get unstuck rather than lecturing to the whole class."

Spock said that includes motivating youngsters, giving extra-challenging assignments to extra-bright children and less difficult work to slower ones so they don't become discouraged.

The third mark of a good teacher, Spock wrote, "is the ability to encourage initiative, responsibility and creativity."

"These qualities must be cultivated in all children if they are to be ready for adult jobs that are better than or bottom-of-the-ladder."

Parents can get some idea about whether their child's teacher fits this profile from their youngster, but Spock advised a school visit — for half a day.

Be on the alert for complaints from your child about a teacher he or she finds frightening or who doesn't seem to understand.

Spock suggested listening sympathetically, without making judgments.

If an offer to visit the classroom does not tip the teacher off that there is a problem, it might be a good idea to make an appointment for a conference — not to complain but to ask how the child is doing.

If the child remains tense and unhappy, parents can approach the principal for help.

If an offer to visit the classroom does not tip the teacher off that there is a problem, it might be a good idea to make an appointment for a conference — not to complain but to ask how the child is doing.

If the child remains tense and unhappy, parents can approach the principal for help.

Parents can get some idea about whether their child's teacher fits this profile from their youngster, but Spock advised a school visit — for half a day.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter's dream untrue

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Eighteen years ago I gave up my infant daughter for adoption. I was young and unmarried. Four days before I found out I was pregnant, my boyfriend told me that I was just "practice" and he was moving on to the big league, so I never told him.

Well, two years ago my daughter contacted me. We met, and she is beautiful inside and out.

She asked to meet her father, but I said, "No." She accepted my decision.

Her father is not the honorable person she had built him up in her mind to be. He's an alcoholic, a gambler and has been in trouble with the law. His life was — and is — a shambles.

My daughter is now begging me to tell her who her father is. She wants to meet him, and I must tell her something sooner or later.

I don't want to shatter her dreams. When I looked him up a year ago to tell him that he had a daughter, I couldn't do it. (He thought I had come to see his elderly mother.) You see, I have never stopped loving him. I need some advice.

Please help me — TORN

DEAR TORN: Children need to be protected from cruel truths, but now that your daughter is a grown woman, this information should not be kept from her.

Tell her. And also tell her father that he fathered your child.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was unable to attend a baby shower for a friend I'll call Shelley. My neighbor, "Donna," said she was invited, and would be only too glad to take my shower gift along with hers. I thought that was very nice of her. Imagine my surprise on receiving a note from Shelley saying, "Thank you for the lovely baby gift from you and Donna."

Thinking there must have been a mix-up in the cards, I called Shelley to straighten it out and learned that with my gift was a card with my name and Donna's on it!

I then called Donna and asked the obvious question: "Why?" She replied, "I didn't have time to buy a gift, and I didn't want to come empty-handed, so I just added my name to your card."

Needless to say, I was upset. Should I ask Donna to reimburse me for half the cost of my gift, or just forget the whole thing?

Donna is better off financially than I am, but she has a reputation for being cheap. — STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Tell Donna she should either buy a gift and send it to Shelley, or reimburse you for her half of your gift.

DEAR ABBY: Hearing aids are so small and inconspicuous these days, why doesn't some smart inventor come up with a filter to wear in the nose so people won't be bothered with pollutants in the air? — RUN-

NY NOSE IN SYRACUSE

DEAR RUNNY: Maybe somebody will.

DEAR ABBY: Please make my day, my week, my year, and print my response to "Savannah" who wrote: "Women are constantly blowing off steam about their 'insatiable' sexual appetites; no man can satisfy them."

This, of course, is a myth. Women run out of gas at an early age; their limitations are responsible for the oldest profession. One of women's principal traits is whining.

Well, I am a 46-year-old insatiable female who runs on regular, unleaded and premium. I have a hearty appetite and possess no limitations that are responsible for the world's oldest profession.

And, honey, for your information, most women don't whine — they hum — when an experienced driver is at the wheel. — STEAMING HOT IN SEATTLE

Doctor believes bringing up baby starts before birth

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Every morning and every night during the last month of Eileen Danielson's pregnancy, her husband would lay his cheek against her swollen belly and have a heart-to-heart chat with their unborn child.

AP Laserphoto

One day he said, 'Hi, Baby. This is Daddy,' and the baby kicked right back.

As time went on, it became clear that when Daddy Danielson talked, Baby Danielson responded.

In the delivery room last October, Robert Danielson spoke to his son face-to-face for the first time.

'He said, 'Hi, Baby. This is Daddy.' And immediately, the baby stopped crying,' Mrs. Danielson said.

'As soon as he heard Bob's voice, he tried to lift his head and turn to look at him. It was amazing.'

Now 13 months, red-haired, blue-eyed Bobby Danielson has had an amazing first year.

At four months, he could say, 'Momma' and 'Da da.' At seven months, he began walking. Now he says words like 'juice' and 'vacuum' and amuses himself with picture books for 15 and 20 minutes at a time.

And he already has received his first degree: 'Baby Superior' from Dr. F. Rene Van de Carr's Prenatal University, where more than 700 expectant parents have learned the simple techniques the Danielsons used to give their unborn child a head start on communication.

THE PROGRAM was born in 1979 when one of Van de Carr's patients told him that she and her husband had been playing games with their baby, patting her stomach and encouraging the child to kick in a certain spot.

'She'd move her hand, and the baby would move its foot,' Van de Carr said. 'They'd be chasing each other around the abdomen, so to speak.'

Child development specialists he

Dr. F. Rene Van de Carr has been operating the "Parental University" in Hayward since 1979. Here he and Kimberly Morgan demonstrate on method of "making contact" with baby before its birth.

consulted insisted such efforts were a waste of time, but Van de Carr's own knowledge of fetal development, his theories about prenatal psychology and the experiences of his patients convinced him otherwise.

'The baby can hear the intestines of the mother, the mother's heart, her breathing movements, and many, many sounds that come in from the outside,' Van de Carr said.

'But until the baby learns that some sounds are more important than others, the baby has no way of discerning what has meaning and what doesn't.'

Channeling the baby's perceptions begins at five months with the "Kick Game," a way of getting the child's attention twice a day for a few minutes each time. When baby kicks, the parent pats that spot, then waits for baby to kick again.

'After you don't do anything for a minute or two, the baby kicks again,' Van de Carr said. 'You pat again, then pause.'

'The baby waits for a little while, then kicks again. If you pat someplace else, the baby may actually move its foot to kick where you patted.'

After two months of the Kick Game, the baby's response pattern is established, and it's time to add what Van de Carr calls his "primary word list," six basic words connected with distinct physical sensations: pat, rub, squeeze, shake, stroke and tap.

It's also time to begin talking to the baby, reading to it and playing some music — the same song each time, preferably something soothing.

IN HIS office in Hayward, about 20 miles southeast of San Francisco, Van de Carr teaches 18-year-old Kimberly Morgan how to tap her baby's head gently and stroke it from top to bottom, accompanying each sensation with the appropriate word.

The doctor gives Morgan a megaphone fashioned from a piece of paper and directs her to say, 'Hi, Baby. This is Mommy,' to her stomach. She complies, and giggles.

'When I first told (the baby's father) what I was doing, he just laughed and said, 'That's so funny, that's such a crock,'" she recalled. 'But I said, 'Listen, listen, it makes sense.''

In one study involving 150 mothers, those who faithfully followed the Prenatal University program reported that their children had a significantly higher incidence of pre-speech, early speech and use of compound words, Van de Carr said.

'We've had mothers who have done it with one child and not the other. You ask them the difference in the children, and they'll tell you that the (Prenatal University) baby is very quick, very adaptive, listens very closely and gets things the first time,' Van de Carr said.

'The other child will not be that way.'

Jennifer is making sentences at 15 months, an age when her older brother Douglas, now 5, was barely talking, said their mother, Teri Flock.

'It's made her smarter and more aware,' Flock said. 'She's a lot friendlier, and she's not afraid to try things. He was more hesitant about going for it, but she'll go right after it.'

Familiarizing unborn children with rudimentary communication helps ease the trauma of birth, Van de Carr believes.

The babies tend to cry less at delivery and seem to be calmer afterward.

IN ADDITION, the father takes an active role in the prenatal program, and it helps relieve the tedium of waiting.

'When I'd get bored or frustrated, wondering when it was going to end, I'd talk to the baby,' Mrs. Danielson said.

'It was a lot of fun, and we figured that even if nothing came of it, at least it helped maintain our sanity through the pregnancy.'

That element of fun, humorously reinforced by the presentation to each graduate of a Prenatal University degree, bib and T-shirt bearing the school logo — a baby in a mortar board — helps the parents adjust to the child's arrival, Van de Carr believes.

'The child is already a success, has already achieved, is already a winner,' he said.

'We're trying to get that concept across — that the parents' expectations have already been met. That they can just relax and enjoy their baby.'

AT WIT'S END

By ERMA BOMBECK

Dress codes return

Does anyone still remember what a dress code was?

I didn't think so. As recent as the late '50s you could not appear in certain places unless you were dressed according to their rules. Some of these places required jackets, ties, dresses, and there were even signs that read, "WOMEN WEARING PANTS WILL NOT BE ADMITTED." Then there came a plague of informality that was to last 30 years. We saw running shoes at weddings, halter dresses in church, jeans at the opera, hot pants on airplanes and obscene T-shirts in schools. Freedom of fashion had never been so decadent.

I think it's coming to an end. Recently, a couple was forced from boarding a plane because they were wearing jogging suits. A teen-ager was sent home from school for wearing shorts. And a government office is requiring that women clerks wear certain color of blouses on certain days of the week to "make the office more professional."

The fall from conformity was a gradual sort of thing. First, the ties came off, hats and gloves became obsolete, pantyhose did away with the girdles, then slacks canceled out the need for pantyhose, jackets became "unstructured," bras became expendable, and wrinkled clothes became a way of life. You travel light in the fast lane.

Having rules is going to take a bit of getting used to. I've sorta adjusted to my son wearing pajama tops to a movie and my husband buying new jogging shoes to wear on vacation.

The poor slob barely know what to get dressed up for.

They're not alone. We've got a group of elderly women who have a closet-full of polyester slack suits. It's not going to be easy to get their knees together again. We've got a generation of kids who are welded into jeans and may have to have them surgically removed. And don't forget Sonny Crockett from "Miami Vice" who thinks you have to have a permit to carry a necktie.

I call it the revenge of the baby boomers.

My theory is they have never forgiven us for all those boiled pacifiers, starched bibs and bleached diapers. For making them wear "Sunday clothes" that scratched and rustled. Those snowsuits that forced them to grow kidneys the size of basketballs. The hard shoes that never bent or cracked. The hats that made their heads sweat and the plastic clip-on ties that made them look cute.

The pendulum is on its way back. Every day the women in business suits carrying attache cases become more visible along with the young men wearing vests and wet leather shoes. In another 10 years there will be no more cut-off shorts being worn under graduation gowns, no more weddings on surfboards, and no more signs in supermarkets, "NO BARE FEET ALLOWED."

And to think, this is the same generation we used to tell, "Go wash your face!" and they'd reply, "Where are we going?"

Maternal mortality rate declines for women over 35

CHICAGO (AP) — Improved medical care and better education are likely reasons why the pregnancy-related death rate for women age 35 or older has been cut nearly in half over the past several years, researchers say.

'Although older women will probably continue to be at higher risk of maternal death, recent trends ... should be reassuring to younger women who are considering postponement of pregnancy and to women aged 35 or older who are contemplating pregnancy,' the researchers said in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Studies show that older women having babies in recent years are generally better off economically than younger women, Dr. James W. Buehler, who headed the study at the Centers for Disease Control, said in a telephone interview Thursday.

'In general, people of lower education and income have higher mortality rates,' he said.

'In addition, advances in medical care probably have contributed to the decline,' said CDC researchers.

Pregnancy-related deaths among women age 35 and over were almost 50 percent lower in 1982 than from 1974 through 1978, the study said.

'That gap narrowed to approximately three-to-one in the 1982 figures,' Buehler said.

In explaining the gap, researchers said serious complications from induced abortion increase with advancing age and that older women have higher rates of Caesarean delivery.

Risk of death increases with Caesarean delivery, Buehler said.

'Among women aged 35 years or older, the leading cause of maternal death was obstetric hemorrhage (bleeding caused by the pregnancy), followed by embolism (artery blockage) and hypertensive conditions (high blood pressure),' said the researchers.

Researchers develop toddler education kit

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — One baby's eyes follow a bright ball as it moves. Another slides a flat, red disk into a round hole. Another drops a round yellow ball into a box. Child's play?

Yes, it is child's play, but the games also help babies, even newborns, learn, say two researchers who have developed a package of materials for day-care centers to teach youngsters under 2.

'We are just moving into group care for children under 2,' said Isabelle Lewis, co-author of the "Partners for Learning" package. 'There are really not that many places and there are not that many materials.'

Designed by Dr. Joseph Sparling and Ms. Lewis at the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center, the kit includes many toys that seem familiar, but that have been redesigned for younger children.

'We felt the toys on the market were not developmentally that appropriate for the youngest group of children. And certainly some of them are not well thought out as far as research tells us what the child should be doing,' Ms. Lewis said.

'So many people think, 'Well, I'm going to get a shape box for the younger children, so I'll get a shape box that has fewer holes than the one for 3-year-olds.' But it just doesn't work that way,' she said. 'In designing these things, we have to keep in mind that we're talking about the very youngest children.'

In addition to the toys, books, posters and games designed to help in the development of infants and toddlers, there are training guides, study books and evaluation materials for day-care employees.

The training guides help day-care employees learn how to use the materials, but also how to encourage or "prompt" the children to use the toys and games, and how to support them with more and more specific terms of praise.

'There are lots of ways, hugging and kissing and clapping and then later, as they get better, saying more and more words of praise or support, like 'You really jumped high' instead of just 'Good girl.' There's nothing wrong with saying 'Good girl,' but it doesn't tell her what she did that made you happy,' Ms. Lewis explained.

There's even a newsletter to send home to parents to let them know what their children are learning in school.

The researchers had plenty of opportunity to test their materials, since the Frank Porter Graham Center has its own day-care center. They plan two more "Partners" packages to extend the educational curriculum to age 6.

Every item in the kit can be used in more than one way, including an apron with huge pockets. The pockets can help with a "peek-a-boo" game for infants, and can carry different items for a busy day-care employee working with several youngsters at once.

'Everything has an activity card that has one activity, and many of them, like the puzzle, have a series of activity cards telling you exactly how to use them,' Ms. Lewis said.

Opposition mayor pillories Socialists on marble pillars

BY MARILYN AUGUST

PARIS (AP) — Deep into the French election campaign, the Socialist government is facing an unexpected challenge over 250 black and white striped marble columns. The City of Paris, whose mayor is opposition leader Jacques Chirac, calls the $1 million art project currently being erected in the courtyard of the centuries-old Palais Royal "a complete disaster."

The pillars sprout up to various heights throughout the Palais courtyard, which is behind the Comedie

Francaise in the heart of Right Bank Paris. The pillar sculpture was commissioned from French artist Daniel Buren, and was scheduled to be inaugurated today, just two weeks before the March 16 elections. City Hall complained the city was "not notified as it should have been about the project, because the government knew we would have turned it down."

City officials are usually informed of major renovations or modifications of classified historical monuments. Last year, Chirac approved

Mitterrand's plan to place a tall glass pyramid in the courtyard of the Louvre museum. However, with elections on everyone's mind, the battle at the Palais Royal has taken a decidedly political turn. The city filed suit against the Culture Ministry claiming violation of administrative procedure. It asked a court to cancel the project and order Culture Minister Jack Lang to return the courtyard to its original state — parking for official cars. The court, responding to a request from the Society for the Protection of French Landscape, ordered suspension of work on the sculpture. The group, backed by petitions from residents in the neighborhood, had complained that work would cause aesthetic damage to the Palais Royal site. Lang plans to appeal the decision. Until last week when the court announced its decision, machines and workers filled the square courtyard at the entrance to the Palais Royal gardens, just under Lang's office windows. Preparatory work has taken a year but media attention began only in early February when the first pillars appeared. "The project has been public knowledge for more than a year, and the city didn't bat an eye until now. It's clearly a political maneuver, and it isn't fooling anyone," said Claude Roux, a spokeswoman at the Department of Historical Monuments. "The government is in no way obliged to get approval from the city in cases like this," she said. Culture is a factor in French election campaigns, and presidents present themselves as defenders of the national heritage and proponents of French culture. Former President Georges Pompidou wanted to be seen as a poet. Valery Giscard d'Estaing appeared on a popular book show before elections to talk about his favorite author, Guy de Maupassant. And the incumbent president, Francois Mitterrand, prides himself on being a literary stylist. Buren's project has been opposed from the start. When Lang first presented it to the Department of Historical Monuments' advisory committee, whose members he had personally selected, they rejected it

Some actors bark their way to stardom

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — He has one blue eye and one brown eye, one straight ear and one that flops down. He weighs 42 pounds and is disarmingly shy. He is Mike, the 7-year-old Scottish border collie who plays a neurotic, overprivileged dog named Matisse in "Down and Out in Beverly Hills." Critics say he steals the movie from Bette Midler, Nick Nolte and Richard Dreyfuss. As the movie dog of the '80s, he follows a tradition that began in the early days of cinema when pooches starred in the Mack Sennett silent comedy classics and became as popular as Buster Keaton and Harold Lloyd. A canine also barked his way to stardom in the "Our Gang" series. Pete, with his trademark ring around the left eye, was a stalwart member of the kid cast that later became "The Little Rascals" on television. Rin Tin Tin, a German army dog found in a World War I trench by an American soldier, became the leading dog star of the silent period. Jack Warner often remarked that the German shepherd's film saved Warner Bros from bankruptcy. A descendant starred on television in "The Adventures of Rin Tin Tin" from 1954-59. An intelligent collie became an MGM star with the 1942 "Lassie Come Home," starring Elizabeth Taylor. Lassie, dubbed by one reviewer "Greer Garson in furs," appeared in several more films before moving to television in 1964. A seventh generation Lassie may star this year in a new weekly series for a Canadian cable company. Like its predecessors, this Lassie is a laddie. Explaining why male dogs were used for a female part, trainer Robert Weatherwax said, "In those days, movies could take six months to shoot, and females didn't retain their coats." Since the first picture required Lassie to have puppies, the dog's role couldn't be switched to a male, he said. Weatherwax has succeeded his father, Rudd, who died a year ago, as Lassie's trainer. He also handles O.J., a collie-sheep dog who is a regular on TV's "Who's the Boss" and who appeared in "Back to the Future." There's also Corky, a mixed terrier who played Nick Nolte's mutt in "Down and Out in Beverly Hills." Having trained movie dogs for 24 years, Weatherwax says the work has changed. "As the state of the film art improves — better cameras, lighting, etc. — my work gets harder. Directors are using more master (wide, establishing) shots, which means more distance between me and the dog. My father and I used to be able to talk to the dogs, now it's all silent cues." Producer-director Bill Beaudine Jr., who worked on the Lassie series for 12 years, says directing dogs can be easy, sometimes too easy. "If a dog is well-trained he usually knows what to do by the second take. But sometimes he knows too well, and he responds ahead of his cue," he said. Unlike child actors, dogs have no restriction on their working hours. "That can be a problem: they get pooped," Beaudine said. "Most dogs have an easy life, plenty of time to sleep. But a movie dog sometimes has to respond to commands 10-12 hours a day, and that can produce a lot of stress. With Lassie, I tried to schedule his important scenes first thing in the morning." Rowe said he always gets Mike to the set early so he can become acquainted with it. "He needs time to adjust to the environment, then he can perform," Rowe said. "He has feelings, and he can be affected to what is going on around him. But he's geared to me, so even if people are yelling, I remain calm." Touchstone Films, Disney's adult releasing arm, recognized a new star when they saw one. The company devoted a two-page newspaper ad to Mike and sent the dog and Rowe to New York on a publicity whirl that included interviews, a news conference at the Ziegfeld Theater and a party at the Hard Rock Cafe. Symbolizing his new status, Mike was accompanied on the trip to New York by a reporter from People magazine. What's more, the dog flew first class. Rowe, whose other big client is Jed, a quarter-wolf and three-quarter malamute who starred in Disney's "The Journey of Natty Gann," complained that despite their popularity with audiences, dogs aren't always welcomed with open arms on movie sets. "The whole crew develops a certain tenseness when a dog arrives on the set," he said. "They start speculating, 'Will we get the shot?' and you hear things like 'Nail the dog down!'"

ENTERTAINMENT

Disney Productions buys tale of beached tanker

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Remember the Venezuelan oil tanker that crashed through a retaining wall and landed in Palm Beach socialite Mollie Wilmet's Olympic-sized swimming pool? After the storm, she invited the crew in for Beluga caviar. The tanker was stuck on the Florida beach for a month last year. Now, after lengthy negotiations with agent Swiftly Lazar and New York lawyer Roy Cohn, producer David Permut bought the rights

That however, has not ended the matter, according to Permut. There's still the matter of the title. "I want to call it 'Washed Ashore' and Disney wants to call it 'Palm Beach.' So maybe we'll call it 'Washed Ashore in Palm Beach.'

McQueen's first wife tells of his beatings, drug abuse

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The late actor Steve McQueen once told his wife: "I'm gonna die young, so I gotta take a big piece out of life." And so he did.

McQueen lived 50 tempestuous years, filled with teen-age rebellion, studio battles and fast cars. They also included wife beating and drug addiction, according to Neile McQueen Toffel's new book, "My Husband, My Friend" (Atheneum, $17.95).

It is a startling story. But Mrs. Toffel, who was married to McQueen for 15½ years, insists it is told with affection.

After her husband died of cancer in 1980, she declined publishers' offers to write her story because she thought it was too painful to tell so soon. "But then I became infuriated with other biographies of Steve," she said in an interview. "I thought it was time someone told the story in a way that wasn't exploitative and sensational. I got started when the children started asking questions about their father."

The children had known about the tenseness between their parents, but never knew the reasons. They were shocked when their mother finally told them.

"They are adults now — Terry is 26, and Chad is 25 — and I felt they should know what really happened," Mrs. Toffel said. "As kids they were never exposed to the troubles that Steve and I had. Steve had been an abused child, and often that results in an abusive parent. But even in his drug-abused state, he always stopped short of harming the children."

Abandoned by his father, McQueen was raised by an often-married mother who left him with relatives. He became part of a street gang in Los Angeles, and his delinquency prompted his mother to send him to a home for troubled boys.

His rebellion continued in adulthood. As a star, he made outrageous demands from studios and sometimes was unable to film because of drinking or narcotics. He refused the co-starring role in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" — the part went to Robert Redford — because he insisted on top billing over Paul Newman.

He also was an avid and reckless auto racer, once cracking up a car in Europe. The accident was hushed up.

Steve McQueen and Neile Adams were married in 1956. She was a Broadway dancer who had been on the cover of Life magazine and he was struggling to succeed in theater and television. Both had neglected childhoods, and they seemed deeply in love.

However, while he was away filming "Never Love a Stranger" in 1957, he met an actress named Lita Milan. Mrs. Toffel writes: "Steve told me after the picture that he had had a fling with her. She would be the first in a long line of 'flings' that would plague us — me — throughout our married life."

McQueen was a target for his leading ladies, including the late Natalie Wood when they made "Love With a Proper Stranger" in 1964.

"Had Natalie Wood known me better, she might have thought twice before going after my husband in such a blatant way," writes Mrs. Toffel, who in her early 50s maintains a dancer's figure.

She got her revenge at the Paris premiere of the film. She stopped Miss Wood from riding in the same car as McQueen, and arranged for the McQueens to arrive at the theater five minutes before the actress so they could get all the media attention.

Mrs. Toffel discovered McQueen's drug problem early in the marriage. When they bought their first Palm

Just when you think you've found the right guy, someone even worse comes along.

WHY SO MANY WHEELBASES?

Q. Why are there so many wheelbases? Is it better to have the length of the car closer to the wheelbase length?
-Norma D. Westfield, N.J.

INTERCOOLER OR COMPUTER CHIP?

A. Well Norma, Lincoln said a man's legs ought to be long enough to reach the ground and that's about the way it is with wheelbases. They should be long enough or short enough to do the job intended. Generally, a longer wheelbase provides a smoother ride and a shorter one makes a car more maneuverable. If you're not worried about aerodynamics, trunk space and such, then you'll get a lot better ride with the wheels closer to the corner.

There's no formula for wheelbases. Give or take a few inches, a wheelbase comes with the concept of the car. For example, a luxury limo has to have one long enough to allow for the leg room, head room trunk space, jump seat and the rest that goes with that kind of car. But, a space and fuel-efficient economy car with a 140" wheelbase can't compete in the small-car market.

After a concept commits you to wheelbase range, the execution reduces your leeway even more. For example, a front-wheel-drive car with a transverse-mounted engine tends to work best with the majority of the engine weight over the front wheels.

Once those kinds of "givens" are handled, a stylist can move the wheel opening a little bit this way or that for better eye appeal. So what you get are small variations within some general ranges. At least now you know why you didn't get a quick answer when you asked all those other people you mentioned in your letter. And whoever told you that the rear end of front-wheel-drive cars tend to come around on slushy roads had that wrong. Actually, it's hard to get the rear end of a front-wheel-drive car to come around.

Q. Which provides more boost for a turbocharged engine, an intercooler or a bigger computer chip?
-Francis T. Hull, Quebec, Canada

A. An intercooler doesn't provide boost. The computer controlling the engine's functions does that. You can increase the boost by changing the computer chip. However, adding an intercooler will enable you to increase the boost even more because it cools the fuel air mixture going into the combustion chamber. A cooler charge takes up less space than a hotter one so you can pack more fuel in and that means power every time the cylinders fire. We get 10 percent more horsepower out of the GLH by using an intercooler.

Q. Will it hurt the computer on my '84 Chevrolet pickup to add electrical devices like a tachometer or if I used a timing light?
-Henry P., San Francisco CA

A. Yes, you can add a tachometer without hurting the computer and ordinarily, a timing light will not hurt it. You should find a place clearly marked on the distributor cap to attach the tachometer.
