

Gins Operating Around the Clock As Cotton Harvesting Nears Peak

Haskell's three gin plants began operating around the clock this week to handle the inflow of cotton, as near-perfect weather of the past week saw gathering of the 1961 crop moving toward its peak.

A check with gin plants Tuesday night showed total ginnings for the season at 6,186 bales, compared with 4,875 bales ginned at noon Wednesday of last week.

Clear, dry weather prevailed during the past week has caused cotton to mature rapidly, and many fields are in excellent condition for machine harvesting.

While many farmers plan to begin machine harvesting or "stripping" cotton during the coming week, other farmers are endeavoring to secure additional workers to harvest the crop.

The three Haskell gins each contracted crews of several hundred braceros at the beginning of the harvest. This week, the gins found it necessary to request additional workers. As a result, each of the gins has received several more crews of braceros this week. The new-arrived workers have been assigned and more could be used if they were here now, one ginner told The Free Press Tuesday night.

Lions Hear Vernon Stewart, Wichita Falls

The present sales tax was one of the most confused tax bills ever to come before the legislature," State Representative Vernon Stewart, of Wichita Falls, Texas, told members of the Haskell Lions Club at the Tuesday noon-day luncheon meeting.

"With dissatisfaction and confusion, there is a strong possibility of getting the sales tax changed to a straight one-percent across the board in the next few years," Stewart said.

Rep. Stewart pointed out to the group what the sales tax covers and does not cover, and stated he believed of all merchants, the grocers were hardest hit with worries over the present set-up.

Stewart very emphatically said that he and Carl Wheatley voted against the present sales tax.

At intervals during his talk, Lions pumped questions to Rep. Stewart concerning the sales tax and although it is still confusing, he did an excellent job of trying to explain the program.

Lion John Crawford was in charge of the program, and guest Rep. Carl Wheatley introduced the speaker.

John Baum was introduced as a new member and Dr. Glenn Markham as a prospective member.

The Nine-Teens, local talented singing group, will present the program next Tuesday noon.

Vice-President Al Hinds presided over the meeting in the absence of the president, Dr. J. F. Cadenhead.

United Fund Finance Drive Nears Goal

Friday night's football game was a little too close for comfort, especially since it was our first conference game.

One thing about a score like that, however. It discourages waging on the games, and should entirely eliminate asking or giving points in making football bets.

The win over Hamlin was No. 7 for the Indians this season, leaving the Tribe in the elite group of AA teams still undefeated in the state this season.

The fact is not mentioned in an attitude of boasting, but more in a spirit of thanksgiving that our long football "drouth" has definitely been broken.

The Indians are again a power to be reckoned with in District 6-AA, and win or lose in the remaining games this season coaches and players alike on the Indian squad can look with pride on their 1961 record.

Following action of the Interscholastic League last week in re-shuffling districts, Dist. 6-AA now will be one of the strongest districts in the state.

As constituted beginning next year, the district will include Haskell, Stamford, Hamlin, Anson, Winters, Ballinger and Coleman. The latter three are new members added to the district, while Spur was transferred to Dist. 4-AA.

Allen Rieves has nicknamed the new seven-member district the "Junior Southwest Conference." He says that any team capable of winning the district title is well along on the road to the state championship.

Many persons picture a shoplifter as a shabbily dressed hungry-looking character who steals to keep body and soul together. In most cases, the exact opposite is true.

An elderly, neatly-dressed woman who parked her late model Buick in front of the Modern Way Food Store one day last week had none of the appearance of a shoplifter, by standards of the general public.

But inside the store a few minutes later, she had skillfully pilfered two cartons of cigarettes and a pound of butter, unseen by anyone except store-owner Morrell Dick.

After the woman made a few purchases she left the store, only to be stopped by Mr. Dick as she stepped out on the sidewalk. Officers recovered the stolen merchandise and filed charges against the woman. Investigating further, officers learned she was with a carnival at Rochester. In addition to the late model Buick she was driving at the time, she also owns a 1961 Cadillac, officers said.

Dick says he has had lots of shoplifters "hit" his store, but this is the first time he's had one in the two-car class to call on him.

look on Tom's face, the old man added in a comforting voice: "But I don't think you folks need worry too much. Those dang'd boll weevils couldn't live through a sand-storm and freezing weather such as you had out there the Thanksgivin' I vis'd you a few years ago." Shaking his head, he continued, "No, sir, Tom, the boll weevil hasn't been hatched that could live on banded wire and survive that kind of weather. Fact is, I can't understand why any sensible person wants to live in a country where the weather is so dang'd outlandish," he remarked as he gave his nephew an appraising glance.

Tom readily recalled the blustery cold spell his uncle referred to. It was on a Thanksgivin' and barmy spring-like weather had prevailed for a week or longer.

Thanksgivin' morning brought more shirt-sleeve weather, and by noon it was unusually warm. The Rochester Steers were playing a championship contest at home, and fans were disappointed at the lack of "football" weather.

But it didn't last. Shortly after noon the wind freshened and the mercury started dropping. Then the sand began moving, whipped by a stiff wind. The almost - blinding sandstorm continued for about an hour, then let up slightly while the temperature continued slipping until it was below freezing.

Tom, an ardent backer of the Steers football team, had convinced his uncle that they had to see the title game at Rochester.

Bundled up against the biting cold, they saw the game, keeping partly warm by running up and down the sidelines and at intervals huddling at one of the numerous small fires kindled by chilled fans.

"That was my uncle's first introduction to a West Texas freezing norther, and evidently he'll never forget it," Tom concluded.

During the early days of our participation in World War II one of the flying areas used by cadets training at the Arledge Flying Field at Stamford was the ranch country in east and southeast Haskell County.

The area now covered by Lake Stamford was included in the Rike Ranch owned by John Rike of this city, and he spent most of his time on the ranch seeing after his cattle.

He had frequently noticed the training planes overhead, but had never paid any particular attention since they were at a fairly high altitude.

One day as he was riding out a pasture on the ranch, moving a herd of cattle to an adjoining pasture, he noticed one of the planes at a lower-than-usual level off to one side, the young cadet plainly visible in the cockpit.

Feeling a warm glow toward the youth, whom he pictured as having volunteered to defend his country, John reached up, rot his hat and waved at the youthful pilot with a friendly gesture.

That turned out to be one of the worst mistakes he ever made.

Noticing the recognition from the rancher, the pilot answered in the only way he knew. Climbing to gain altitude, the cadet divd his plane to almost tree-top level, zooming upward at a point directly over the rancher.

John did the only thing he could as his frightened horse bucked and veered to escape the diving plane. He "grabbed leather" and held on for dear life. The hat he had waved so gaily a moment before sailed off into space when his horse made its first jump, while the herd of cattle he had been driving scattered like a covey of quail in all directions.

After something like a quarter of a mile of bucking and running, John managed to quiet his quivering mount and bring him to a halt.

Riding back to retrieve his hat, John realized it would be useless to try and re-group his cattle and postponed the chore until the following day.

In the meantime the youthful pilot, nursing a kindly feeling toward the rancher-friend who had waved him recognition, returned field.

There he sat for weeks at a time, watching his cattle, where his was the training what was com- for it. He'd get onto his head- hold onto his head- fore the plane.

Several planes stop- and John "friend's" cla- and moved base.

Public Opinion Supports President

Kenneth Crawford writes, in a recent issue of Newsweek: "Granted that American public opinion is mercurial, all available evidence indicates that it is solidly behind President Kennedy in his handling of the crisis and that it will remain so as long as he stands firm." He is criticized more for doing too little than for doing too much to counter Soviet pressures. Judging from opinion polls, editorial comment and informal soundings the "Better Dead than Red" stickers appearing on automobile bumpers, while they may over-simplify the attitude, nevertheless reflect something of the prevailing national mood. People are fed up with Khrushchev's hypocrisy and bluster. And this isn't because they lack understanding of the consequences of atomic war."

Writing Editorials and Driving Buses

Asheville (N. C.) Citizen: There is no other job that offers the compensations that writing editorials does unless, possibly, it is that of a bus driver.

On Monday you write a piece opposing sin, and that pleases the preachers. The sinners fuss a little, but not for publication. Tuesday you need, because of peculiar conscience, to take a preacher to task for advocating bigotry. The clergy condemns you, citing chapter and verse.

Do you encourage the Republicans? Your Democratic friends accuse you of heresy. Or predict in advance an election outcome? Your Republican friends desert you in droves. You rant at Jimmy Hoffa and his nearsighted kind, you get invited to a Chamber of Commerce luncheon. But rail at the doctrinaire dogma of the American Association of Manufacturers, you eat alone at the hot-dog stand on the corner.

There is, of course, a solution for all of this: perhaps several solutions. You could be careful to say nothing, though that, for sensitive men, is a delicate art. You could embrace a single position, aimed at pleasing a dominating class, and be assured at least, of luncheon companions — Or you could drive a bus. Either way, you meet such interesting people.

Who's Boss?

A short time ago the city council of a Michigan town of 31,000 population turned down a request of an oil company to construct two service stations. The reason given was that the city already has sufficient service stations to meet the need.

Here is a unique precedent which, if applied down the line, could produce some remarkable results. Entirely aside from the dubious legality of the council's decision, if municipal officials are to decide how many service stations a community should have, they must also be entitled to decide on the number of retail stores, insurance agencies, newspapers, doctors and so on and ad infinitum.

The point is simply this: Should bureaucrats determine the extent of the goods and services available — or should business people and their customers? Putting it this way, who's boss — public servants or the public?

Too many people take religious faith for granted — like the soothing background music that you never miss until it is gone. They forget that faith, like all living things, needs nourishment. Only you can provide it by making God a part of your life. Religion in American Life suggests you attend worship regularly with your whole family.

An acorn from an oak tree will in turn produce another oak tree for "mighty oaks from little acorns grow." A man who worships regularly plants seeds that build character and deepen faith. The faith needed for our times just does not happen when worship is neglected. Strong men need deep foundations. Worship together this week.

of the year were $245,460. Texas savings bonds sales for the first nine months of 1961 totaled $119,964,483, of which $11,692,808 were purchased during September. Texas has achieved 72.7 per cent of its goal.

"During this 20th anniversary year of the savings bonds program, and in light of the current international situation, we feel that it is important that Texas achieve its 1961 savings bonds goal. We are confident that if all Texans will purchase an extra bond during the remainder of 1961, our sales goal will be met," Chairman Crawford said.

Jerry D. Mills With Navy Unit In Antarctica

CHRISTCHURCH, N. Zealand (FHTNC)—Taking part in Operation Deep Freeze 62, America's scientific expedition to Antarctica, as a member of Air Development Squadron Six, is Jerry D. Mills, aviation machinist's mate third class, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mills of 703 1/2 N. Avenue "E", Haskell, Texas.

The squadron, which normally operates from the Naval Air Station, Quonset Point, R. I., deployed to Christchurch, New Zealand, in mid-September and has begun airlifting 400,000 tons of supplies to the Naval Air Facility, McMurdo Sound, Antarctica. Flying four-engine Lockheed "Hercules" turbo-prop transports, the squadron is scheduled to make about 100 round trip flights over the 2300 mile course from New Zealand to Antarctica. The unit's activities, which will last through February, also will include a photo mapping program using Lockheed "Nep-tune" patrol aircraft and Super Constellations.

Man accomplishes his best work under an annual average temperature of 62 to 68 degrees, if the climate is not too monotonous and there is some change between seasons.

Clubs Can Get Current Data on Social Security

October, November and December are the months it is easiest for clubs and organizations to book a film and/or speaker from the Abilene social security office, according to R. R. Tuley Jr., district manager.

"Although we try to fill all requests, at any time of the year, it is always easier for us to do so in the last three months of the year because of the seasonal decline in claims and other workload items," Tuley said.

Any civic club, fraternal organization, study group, employee or employer association, that would like to learn firsthand of the changes made in the Social Security Act by the 1960 and 1961 Amendments, should write Tuley at Box 518, Abilene, Texas, or phone him at OR 4-5282 to arrange matters. Either Tuley, Assistant Manager Ralph Fisher, Claims Supervisor Mary Paulette, and Field Representatives Don Austin, Howard Weatherly, Glenn McNatt and Fay Ford, depending on other commitments, can and will meet with a club for a talk or film showing and question-and-answer sessions.

Tuley says his office is still finding people who have lost money because of failure to keep up with recent changes in the law that could have been of earlier benefit.

Tech Historian, Wife, Visit Here Before Research Tour of Africa

Dr. and Mrs. Van Mitchell Smith Jr., of Lubbock have been visiting in Haskell for the past month, prior to going to Africa for study and research.

Dr. Smith, associate professor of history at Texas Tech, has been granted leave of absence from the Tech faculty to study in England and Africa.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith have been in Haskell as Mrs. Smith recuperated from a broken neck received in a car wreck outside Lebanon, Tenn., in July. The Smiths were traveling to the United Nations to do research study in preparation for their tour of study in Africa.

Mrs. Smith had a vertebrae re-section in a Wichita Falls hospital before being brought to the Haskell County Hospital Sept. 20. She and Dr. Smith have been staying with her cousin, Dr. J. F. Cadenhead and family.

A large map of Africa in the hall of the Cadenhead home has interesting 'lines of travel' sketched across it. An air of anticipation filled conversation during the Smiths' stay, because in spite of near tragedy, parts of an historian's dreams seem about to be realized. From childhood, books have Dr. Smith's first love. With time and maturity, this love has been concentrated toward history and more especially Afro-Asian history.

Coming up the "boot-strap" way, Dr. Smith received his B. A. degree from the University of Texas in 1939; M. A. in 1940. In those lean years of 5-cent coffee and cardboard shoe soles, Dr. Smith, even then, dreamed of the day he might study the "Dark Continent" firsthand.

After a period as a civilian instructor with both the Navy and Army in 1942-44, he returned to the University of Texas to receive his Ph.D. in 1949.

To the educational field, Dr. Smith has already contributed numerous articles and miscellaneous publications, and is a contributor to the latest edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Mrs. Smith too, has an interesting background. She has an M. A. degree in music and music education. During the second World War she worked as a cryptographer for the FBI, served for a period in the intelligence corps of the WAC, and worked in mental therapy with music in the American Red Cross. Since she and Dr. Smith married in late 1948, she has been secretary and "Girl Friday" through many of his research and study projects.

The Smiths left Haskell last Friday for Wichita Falls and Henrietta. They will be flying to New York and Africa by way of Paris on Oct. 28.

According to an article by W. R. Tatum of the Tech Information Department which appeared in a Lubbock newspaper, Dr. Smith's research tour will begin when he goes to Dakar, Senegal, to begin his research in Africa.

To the average American, whose ideas about Africa vary from vague recollections of "Tarzan and the Apes" novels to great battles of North Africa during World War II, the sudden splash of headlines about civil war in the Congo last summer caused a renewed interest in the continent.

Dr. Smith points out that the history of modern Africa began in the 1880s when European nations divided the vast continent into colonial protectorates. During this period, much of the prosperity Europe enjoyed was undergirded by African resources and markets. Trading of colonial lands helped ease tensions between nations.

It is with the idea of studying on-the-scene the evolving late 20th Century history of Africa that Dr. Smith will make his self-financed trip to that continent.

His first stop in Africa will be at the University of Dakar and the French Institute for Black Africa there. After a trip up the Niger River to Timbuctu, he will be in Ghana for a month at the University College of Ghana for interviews with Ghana's government leaders and historians.

He also hopes to interview central and provincial government officials in Nigeria, and then return by way of France to the United States.

Mrs. Smith, who will accompany her husband on the visit to Africa, says few people in America have a true conception of the African woman. "Too many of us think of the women in funny little skirts with all their children hanging onto them."

"True, there is the traditional woman in the back country, but there are many African women who are well educated, well groomed and gracious hostesses," she relates. "I know one African woman who speaks five languages."

"My husband and I are going to try to do our part to bring a better understanding of the two races. The countries of Africa need help and it would be beneficial to the United States and them for us to recognize their potentialities," she said.

One of her main objects is to get a picture of the educated African woman before the average American woman. Although African women may have different customs, they are very much the same as women in the United States, Mrs. Smith believes.

They are interested in American clothes, care of children and health, methods of home-making and other such topics which also interest American housewives.

"The American woman can play an important role in our foreign policy if they will," Mrs. Smith declares. "If they know more about the educated African women, they will be in a better position to beneficially influence our African policy."

"In the next 10 years the story of Africa will be told the way it ends depends on all of us having a truer picture of the people there."

Baby-Sitter May Need Coaching On Home Safety

The baby sitter, unless selected and coached with great care, can be a real danger to the well-being of children, according to F. C. Hipp, Lone Star Gas Company manager.

Lone Star and The Free Press are co-sponsors of the 1961 Home Safety Program in Haskell.

The following rules of procedure should be observed, Mr. Hipp said.

1. Be sure that the sitter is in good health.

2. Before the parents leave the house, they should see that the child is acquainted with the baby-sitter.

3. Give the sitter instruction regarding her duties. Include information on feeding, stories to be read, play routine, bathing and toilet procedures, garments for sleeping, and medication.

4. Give the sitter written instruction on emergency procedures. These instructions should include the address and telephone number at which parents can be reached; the name, address and telephone number of the physician to be called, as well as the number of the doctor's exchange; the name, address and telephone number of the neighbor to be summoned if immediate help is needed; and the telephone numbers of the fire and police departments.

5. Acquaint the baby-sitter with features of the home.

Coach her on precautions that should be taken to avoid cuts, burns, and falls. Point out the safe play areas and the danger spots within the house. Show her how to turn on and off the range and where to find light switches. Warn her of dangerous habits the child may have, such as tendency to go too close to the portable fan or heater or to play with electric cords and sockets, and of the possible risk the child may incur by playing with pets.

6. The sitter should know when the parents will return home. She should understand that no one is to be allowed to enter the house in their absence, except persons she is allowed to summon in an emergency. If a friend is to share a portion of the evening with the sitter, the friend should arrive with her and be introduced to the parents. Private calls should be discouraged in order to allow parents to call home if they feel it necessary.

Modern astronomers believe that stars may be of widely different ages. Some are subject to catastrophic explosions that produce novae and supernovae.

TELLING AMERICA ABOUT THE BUSINESS AND INDUSTRIAL ADVANTAGES OF THE...

"Center of the Southwest"

We call our service area the CENTER OF THE SOUTHWEST, because that is a literal description of it.

In a two-gun campaign, our industrial development program capitalizes on this fact.

We tell expanding industry by mail and in our national advertising that the fast-growing Southwestern market can best be served from the heart of the region.

In addition, our area development representatives tell the same story in personal contacts with business executives in large industrial centers.

West Texas Utilities Company believes in the business and industrial advantages of the CENTER OF THE SOUTHWEST.

And, we are telling America about them.

Is It True?

Man. "Created in the image of God," is a free will agent. He may cultivate the brotherhood of man and live supremely happy or he may deny his obligation as his "brother's keeper," and completely isolate himself.

Here is the most exciting new toy of the

The ENCO Energy Rocket
Only $2.95* with coupon from your neighbor in a HUMBLE

This Humble exclusive is a fascinating toy. So safe and easy to use, a small fry of six can run it. So much fun, even Dads will monopolize it.

Its principal parts are of Escon,® Humble's tough new plastic. It's battery powered, easy to assemble, (and the car is securely held together by screws). Simply start it, place on track and after a turn or two, throw the switch. The car zips down the side-track into a plastic bumper and wh-o-o-sh! The rocket zooms toward the ceiling (but doesn't hit it).

Ask for a coupon at the Humble sign in your neighborhood today. Mail with $2.95* (cash, money order or check) to address on coupon.

*plus State tax where applicable

Without coupon—You can buy the Enco Rocket without a coupon for $5.95.* Money order or check with name and address. Rocket, Humble Oil & Refining Company, Box 1244, Houston 1, Texas.
