WASHINGTON (AP) - During a decade in Washington, the Bank of Credit and Commerce International assembled a powerful team to represent its interests with the nation's lawmakers and regulators.

The squadron of high-powered lawyers included a venerable former defense secretary, an exfederal prosecutor and two presidential campaign officials, one a Democrat and the other a Republican.

"Money in this instance was spread around so lavishly and so extravagantly, and it went on for so long," said Charles Lewis, ex.ecutive director of the Center for Public Integrity, an ethics research

While it was impossible to determine how much BCCI paid its various Washington representatives, sources have said the company's most visible attorneys — Clark Clifford and Robert Altman - have received millions from the bank since 1978.

Founded by Pakistanis, as a Third World bank, BCCI had $20 billion in assets and operated in Tamura of Cerritos, Calif., found in some 70 countries — including her garage. (It was engraved "Lt. the United States - before it was Cmdr. John McKamey. On The Shut down in July by regulators in several nations. The bank has been accused of drug-money laundering, arms trafficking and supporting terrorists.

> BCCI's biggest legal effort in the United States was in connection with a federal indictment and 1990 plea agreement in which the bank admitted to drug-money laundering charges in Tampa, Fla.

> In the Persian Gulf, Britain, the United States and South America, BCCI officials cultivated relationships with figures, such as Jimmy > Carter, former Atlanta mayor and United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young and former British Prime Minister James Callaghan.

> In addition to the money BCCI paid its attorne ys and public relations consultarits, some prominent political figures also benefited, either directly or indirectly, from the bank's hargesse.

> There was nothing illegal about the payments - which included an $8 million donation by BCCI to a charity set up by Carter after he left the White House. But some critics say the payments constituted an influence-buying campaign that led government officials to drag their feet on pursuing criminal activity at BCCI, a contention that investigators have denied. Some of the lawyers who helped BCCI are well known. Probably the most famous is Clifford, the eminent former defense secretary and adviser to Democratic presidents who has been linked to BCCI for nearly a decade. Until his abrupt resignation this summer, Clifford was chairman of First American Bankshares Inc., a big bank holding company the government says was secretly acquired by BCCI.

SHS Tigers upend Central 'Cats, 74-66

By PHIL RIDDLE SDN Sports Editor

Coach Bud Birks and his Snyder Tigers set their record at 1-1 after a weekend of basketball by knocking off two-time defending District 4-5A champion San Angelo Central Saturday, 74-66.

"I thought we played pretty well," said Snyder head coach Bud Birks.

"I was really proud of our ef-"Everybody that played got after it. It's a good victory.

'I thought we did a little better job in our zone defense against San Angelo (than in the Friday season opener against Andrews). We made them take the shots we wanted them to take. They had to shoot the ball from outside, especially at the end of the game.

"We were patient offensively, as well, and we worked the ball inside to our big people."

Study: paroles, probation climbed with inmate increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of convicted criminals on parole increased 16.3 percent last year and those placed on probation went up 5.9 percent to new record totals, according to a Justice De-

The growth in the number of convicted criminals paroled from prison and those placed on probation parallels the growth in the nation's prison population in the last decade, the department said.

At the end of 1990, 2.6 million adults were on probation and 531,407 were on parole, said the survey released Sunday by the Bureau of Justice Statistics. The overall total of 3.2 million represented a 7.5 percent increase from the previous year, the department said.

Since 1980, prison and jail populations have grown by 128 percent, while probation and parole counts have increased by 139 percent," said Steven D. Dillingham, the bureau's director.

The survey did not explain the 16.3 percent increase in parolees, but University of Chicago criminologist Norvall Morris said it reflects efforts by states to reduce prison overcrowding.

Texas led U.S. in parolees, probationers

HOUSTON (AP) - The number of convicted criminals on parole or probation hit a record high in 1990 and Texas led the nation in both categories, according to a U.S. Justice Department study. At the end of 1990, 2.6 million adults were on probation and 531,407 were on parole, the survey released Sunday by the Bureau of Justice Statistics said. The overall total of 3.2 million represented a 7.5 percent increase from the previous year, the department said. Texas accounted for more than 109,000 parolees and more than

308,000 probationers during 1990 — more than any other state in both categories. "Somehow I don't find anything surprising in these numbers," said Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. "This just confirms what everyone has been seeing. It's been our experience in Harris County," Holmes said: The number of parolees nationwide increased 16.3 percent last year, and those placed on probation went up 5.9 percent. The growth in the number of convicted criminals paroled from prison and those placed on probation parallels the growth in the nation's prison population in the last decade, the department said. While the survey did not explain the 16.3 percent increase in parolees, criminologists said it reflects efforts by states to reduce prison overcrowding. Texas' rate of recidivism - ex-convicts returning to prison because of new criminal convictions — has risen sharply. Holmes said it hit 67 percent in 1987, second only to California among the states.

Jogger finds newborn in plastic bag

ROWLETT, Texas (AP) — A jogger has found a newborn infant girl wrapped in a plastic bag, authorities said.

Officers said Cliff Bannister, 44, of Rowlett, found the baby early Sunday after hearing a baby cry as he jogged. The baby was in an area of dense brush near a country road.

Authorities said the infant was less than 24 hours old.

"At first I thought it was a cat," Bannister said, adding that he ran about 10 more yards, but the sound persisted. "I stopped, and I knew it wasn't a cat, it was a baby."

He said he crawled into the brush and found a garbage bag, partially hidden by bushes.

"I tore the bottom open, hoping I'd find a cat," Bannister said. But he saw the baby's feet. The child was unclothed and still about 2 inches of her umbilical cord was attached.

He said he ran for help at a nearby house. "I was running as fast as I could without falling," he said.

The baby was taken to LakePointe Medical Center where nursing administrator Jackie Willits said the infant has improved.

Besides an expanded federal death penalty, Bush has sought to sharply restrict the ability of state prisoners to file habeas corpus petitions in federal court to appeal their convictions. He also sought to give police wider latitude to seize evidence.

The negotiators chose a tough but less-restrictive habeas corpus provision that was passed last month by the House rather than the Senate measure supported by the administration.

Negotiators also opted for the Senate's narrower exception to the crime package, a $151 billion so-called exclusionary rule, which highway program, more bailout bars the use of illegally obtained money for failed banks and sav- evidence. Parents' settlement exceeds $4 million in malpractice suit

DALLAS (AP) - The parents of 14-month-old girl who died two days after undergoing routine Officers also worked a minor surgery on a facial birthmark have accepted a $4.71 million settlement in their malpractice lawsuit.

> Richard and Renee Ryder of Allen sued various doctors and companies after their daughter, Melissa, was mistakenly poisoned by pure nitrous oxide. She died June 23, 1990.

> Her surgery was the first involving general anesthesia in a new office owned by Medical City Dallas Ltd. During surgery, doctors anesthetized Melissa with a mixture of nitrous oxide and oxygen.

But while she recovered, she was given pure nitrous oxide instead of oxygen because the pipes supplying the two gases had been crossed.

The lines were never checked before Melissa's operation, and doctors didn't realize what was happening until it was too late, the parents charged.

As part of the settlement announced Friday, the office building must change its procedures regarding the installation of anesthesia equipment.

"It was totally preventable," Mrs. Ryder said. "There were so many people who didn't do their jobs.

The Ryders sued the dermatologist, anesthesiologist, the principal physician and Medical City Dallas Ltd. They also sued Porter Instrument Co., the manufacturer of the gas lines, and Arthur & White Sales Inc., the company that sold and installed them.

Les Weisbrod, the couple's attorney, said the Ryders wanted to make the settlement public because they want to prevent such incidents.

In its mildest form, COPD causes few if any symptoms: slight intolerance to exercise and some breathlessness. However, as the affliction worsens - as it always does in cigarette smokers and people in air-polluted environments — the symptoms become more pronounced: overexpanded chest, difficulty breathing at rest, weakness and cough.
