

County taxes...

Rollback passes by 252-vote margin

By a 252-vote margin Saturday, Scurry County residents elected to roll back county ad valorem taxes from 39.80 cents to 34.75 cents.

The outcome ended over three months of debate on the subject, which grew even more controversial in the midst of a county operational audit. Results of the audit, which came just five days prior to the election, indicated areas in which county operations might be made more cost-effective.

County Judge Bobby Goodwin, who had earlier criticized the rollback effort and the audit, released a statement following the election indicating county government will respond positively.

"The democratic process once again has worked, and the voters have spoken," said Goodwin. "Even before the election results were known, the commissioners court had demonstrated a commitment to efficient, effective and responsive county government."

"The past few weeks have been hard on the citizens of Snyder and Scurry County. I believe it is incumbent on the leaders of this community to pull together any factions to work toward the betterment of Snyder and Scurry County," he continued.

"There will always be difference about methods, but I believe that our goal should be to do what is in the best interest of the county's citizens. As chief executive officer of the county, I will strive to provide the budgetary leadership and the atmosphere in the commissioners court for both responsive and responsible county government.

"I believe all of us on commissioners court view ourselves as not only elected representatives, but also as your public servants. We pledge to work with and for the people," he concluded.

Pat Falls, treasurer of the pro-rollback group, Citizens for Fiscal Restraint, gave a brief statement when contacted this morning, saying, "We appreciate the support that the people of Scurry County showed for the restraint."

Asked if he thinks the election will have a positive effect, he said, "It should. That's what we started out to do."

"It's over, and now we all need to get together and go forward," Falls said. "I'm glad it's over."

Q—I've already paid my county taxes and am not interested in a refund. How do I let the county know I'd rather them keep it?

A—By law, the county has to mail you a refund if you've already paid taxes based on the 39.80-cent rate. However, you can endorse the refund check back to the county if you wish.

In Brief

No SS okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Democratic plan to cut the Social Security payroll tax poses a problem because it would increase the federal deficit, says House Speaker Thomas S. Foley.

Foley, D-Wash., said he probably would oppose the plan by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., if he had to make an immediate decision on it. The Bush administration opposes the proposal.

"I wouldn't be ready to say that I was in favor of it today," Foley, D-Wash., said Sunday, appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press." "If I had to make a decision today to do it or not do it, I'd probably say don't do it."

5 hotel fires

DALLAS (AP) — Someone set five fires Sunday in the Fairmont Hotel, forcing the evacuation of guests, and causing injuries to one person and $105,000 damage to the building and contents, fire officials say.

"We had five different fires in the building. It is an arson. We don't have a suspect," Fire Capt. W. A. Richardson said. He said arson is a felony.

Richardson said the largest fire was in an elevator on the sixth floor of one tower of the 25-year-old downtown hotel. The other fires were small and didn't cause much damage, he said.

Lt. P.L. Rozell said thirteen fire companies responded to the three-alarm fire. The hotel has 25 floors.

Tanker spill

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Coast Guard officials have decided to let nature clean up the estimated 57,600 gallons of gasoline that gushed into Alaska's island-studded Inside Passage from a grounded tanker.

The Canadian-owned tanker Frank H. Brown struck Burnt Island Reef on Saturday night. The captain, who was not identified, blamed the grounding on "a judgment error." Coast Guard spokesman Ed Moreth said.

The agency said it took blood and urine samples from crew members to test for drug or alcohol use.

The 400-foot ship was refloated at high tide Sunday and continued under its own power about 15 miles up a narrow channel to Scow Bay, just south of Petersburg. There, divers found a 2-foot hole in one of its tanks.

Election returns canvassed; county investment data noted

Scurry County Commissioners today canvassed election returns and learned that — in contrast to a recommendation from a county operational audit — the county is already receiving the maximum amount possible on its investments.

West Texas State Bank officers Martin Brooks and Derwin Thompson attended the 10 a.m. meeting to discuss the county's depository contract. The county is required by law to accept depository bids every two years.

Rita Staton, county treasurer, said Scurry County has used WTSB for the 12 years she has worked in the treasurer's office.

After hearing an outside audit report of Scurry County, given by Coopers and Lybrand last Monday, Staton said she was concerned since a primary function of her office is to invest county funds where they will earn the greatest interest. The audit report stated that the county could earn more interest with certificates of deposit than with the money market and NOW accounts.

Staton approached Brooks and Thompson, and, after examining several investment possibilities, it was determined that Scurry County investments already earn the maximum amount possible.

The officers assured commissioners that the money market accounts draw the same interest as certificates of deposit (CDs), the 13-week T-Bill rate. Staton also said the bank has always worked "very well" with the county and given excellent benefits to the county, including unlimited check-writing on the money market accounts.

The depository contract with WTSB includes no regular service charges or fees for services such as stop-payments, charges per check written or safe deposit boxes.

Also, with the money market accounts, the county has the privilege of depositing or withdrawing money at any time, it was noted. With a CD, the money is "locked in" for a fixed amount of time. If money is withdrawn from a CD before the maturity date, a penalty is applied and remaining interest is lost.

Brooks said that Coopers and Lybrand, when determining that Scurry County investments could reap more interest with certificates of deposit, "either didn't look at the contract or didn't understand it."

After the facts were presented, commissioners expressed their appreciation to the bankers for helping to clear up the matter.

Staton also said that currently, the county has about $1 million less than in other years, due to the fact that many citizens were waiting to pay taxes until after

New tax bills expected to be mailed in March

New tax statements, reflecting the rollback of county taxes to 34.75 cents per $100 valuation, are expected to be sent out in late March, according to County Tax Assessor Rona Sikes.

She said today that refund checks to those who have paid their taxes on statements based on the 39.80-cent rate prior to Saturday's rollback election, will be mailed about March 19 or 20.

"Programming is what will take the most time," she said, noting that the county will bring in an outside programmer to perform the computer programming involved. "We'll get both (statements and refunds) out as fast as we can."

According to Section 2607 of the Property Tax Code, refunds must be mailed out within 60 days following the election.

Because of the new tax rate, citizens will also have a new deadline to pay their county taxes before penalties are imposed. That deadline will be the same length of time from when the first statements were originally sent out — which was

Oct. 3 — until the date the new bills are sent out.

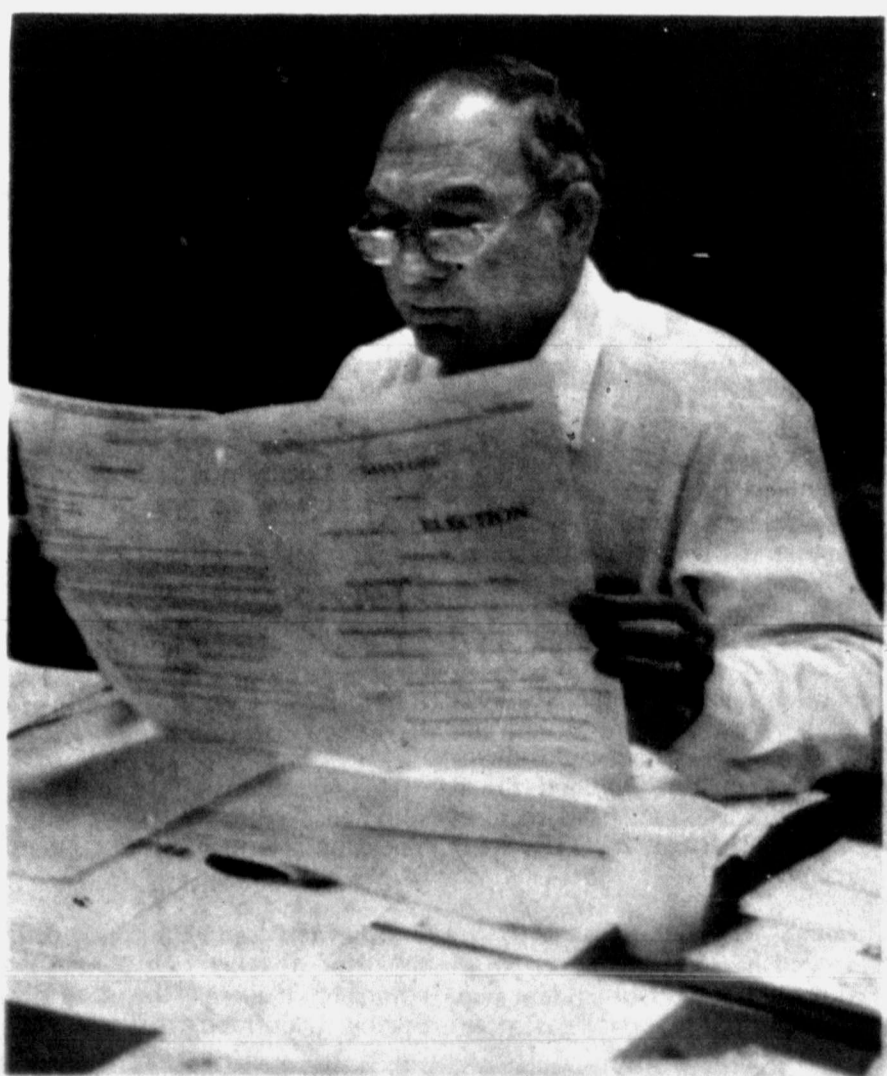

Providing the tax assessor's office mails statements by late March, it would be late August before any penalties would be due.

Deadline Friday for officer class

The Adult Education Office of Western Texas College has received 50 completed applications for its fifth correctional officer training class which begins in March.

Friday is the deadline to turn in completed applications.

The 120-hour course begins March 3 and is certified by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice for security officers for all prison units throughout Texas. The course concludes May 3 with graduation scheduled for (see CLASS, page 9)

Republic threatens secession if Soviet troops don't pull out

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Azerbaijanis today marched through Baku and buried scores of people killed when Soviet troops put down a nationalist uprising, witnesses said. The republic's legislature threatened to consider secession if Moscow did not withdraw its troops.

A general strike took effect in the Azerbaijani capital to protest the assault and demand an end to the Soviet occupation.

The official Tass news agency said 83 people, including 14 soldiers and members of their families, were killed Saturday in an assault by Soviet troops in the capital, Baku, or in skirmishes the previous day.

The troops were brought in to try to contain ethnic violence that flared Jan. 13 with anti-Armenian riots in Baku, a oil-producing center of 1.7 million people on the Caspian Sea, and spread throughout Azerbaijan and Armenia.

Tass reported 12 new deaths today when Armenian militants opened fire on an Azerbaijani village on the border between the two Soviet republics in the Volchy Vorota area. Internal security troops prevented further bloodshed, Tass said.

That brought the toll to 167 dead and more than 500 wounded since Jan. 13 in the worst ethnic unrest since Mikhail S. Gorbachev became Communist Party chief in 1985. Gorbachev, whose fostering of greater freedoms led to the surging nationalist unrest, also faces conflicts in the Baltics, Moldavia, Georgia and in parts of Soviet Central Asia.

Defense topping list of priorities...

Senators start new session with energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — While their national agendas reflect far different goals, the top state priorities in 1990 for Texas' two U.S. senators are much the same — defense, energy, drugs and the super collider.

When Congress reconvenes Tuesday for the year, Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm say they'll be pushing for more money for the super collider, fighting for tax incentives for the oil and gas industry, and looking for ways to cushion the state's military establishment from a slowdown in defense spending.

Both also support more spending to fight illegal drugs along the Texas-Mexico border and to create more federal judgeships in the region. They'll be looking, too, for ways to protect Texas hospitals from potentially devastating reductions in Medicare spending and to curb illegal immigration along the border.

Much of their job in the year ahead will be protecting the state's share of the federal spending pie — including such high-dollar projects as Sematech, a Pentagon-industry semiconductor research consortium in Austin, the $5.9 billion super collider for Ellis County, and the space station, which is being built in part in Houston.

Both expect challenges to those projects, especially if the super collider's pricetag rises to $7 billion, which is what scientists say it would now take to build the particle accelerator as large and as powerful as originally envisioned.

President Bush is expected to ask Congress this week for about $395 million for the collider, up from the $225 million appropriated last year to begin construction at the Waxahachie site.

The Energy Department will also announce, possibly this week, whether it agrees with a panel of leading physicists that the collider should be built as planned, despite the increase in cost.

The higher pricetag, however, could give opponents the ammunition they've been looking for to kill the project. Some say the collider will rob worthy scientific projects of funding as more money is spent each year to build the world's biggest scientific instrument.

"It's going to be tough this year," Bentsen, a Democrat, said of the fight over collider spending. "You can bet it's going to be tough."

Bentsen is also wary of challenges from the administration and Congress to Sematech and the space station, as well as a host of Pentagon projects with important links to Texas — the V-22 Osprey aircraft, the B-2 stealth bomber and the rail-based MX missile.

"The whole defense effort across the board will be re-evaluated with what's happened as far as the Russian challenge," Bentsen said. "Obviously, some cuts have to be made and should be made and Texas projects will have the same kind of scrutiny."

Texas fares better than all but California and Virginia when it comes to military procurement, according to a Census Bureau study of 1988 federal spending.

Overall, Texas received $49.5 billion in federal money — for programs ranging from farm subsidies to welfare payments — in 1988. Of that, $9 billion was for military contracts, the Census Bureau said.

Gramm, a Republican, recently met with the secretaries of the armed services to discuss Texas' role in the future of the nation's defense as it shifts priorities in response to the changes in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

"As we beat swords into plowshares, some of those swords are swords in Texas," Gramm said.

But by planning now years ahead, Gramm said he believes Texas can continue to "preserve our leadership position in providing for the nation's national security."

"If we do a good job, we will be affected by some defense cuts, but we'll be less affected than most states that have a similar degree of involvement," Gramm said.

That's because the state's defense contractors, he said, are involved in the high-tech weapons of the future, while its posts and bases have already grown in importance by taking on the missions of several others outside the state that will be closed under a national military realignment.

Nationally, Gramm will be looking for ways to turn the "peace dividend" into lower taxes while Bentsen will be pushing hard for tax deductions on individual retirement accounts, which he believes would boost savings and result in lower interest rates.

Gramm said the country could be saving $40 billion to $50 billion by the mid-1990s in lower military spending.

"I believe that we have to invest the peace dividend and the only institution that I trust to make the investment in is the American family," said Gramm.

Tom Landry...

Ex-coach becomes motel chain's voice

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry said it took awhile to convince him to lend his talents to promote a motel chain on TV.

"They spent about three months twisting my arm before I decided to do that," said Landry of his TV commercials promoting Quality Inn.

In the commercial, he sings, "Mama, don't let your babies grow up to be — Redskins." Then he smiles deviously, and asked the viewers if they thought he was going to say Cowboys.

The singing voice is his, he says, but not the guitar twanging. He only faked that.

"About the only place I sing is in church," Landry told the Dallas Times Herald. "And my wife said she's glad I get a lot of help there."

Landry, who recently said he's no longer interested in politics or a return to coaching, said the TV commercial's success won't send him packing for Nashville.

"I don't think Willie Nelson should ever feel threatened by my singing," he said.

Perot likes film but not shots at GM

DALLAS (AP) — Despite publicized run-ins with General Motors Corp. management after the giant automaker bought his Electronic Data Systems, Dallas billionaire Ross Perot said he did not revel in a new movie's stinging criticism of GM and its chairman, Roger Smith.

"I get no sense of comfort in foreseeing what is happening to GM," Perot told the Dallas Times Herald after seeing "Roger & Me," which documents the impact of GM layoffs on Flint, Mich.

"The film was hard on Roger. He's really a bright and creative guy," Perot said.

But Perot said the movie is a must-see film because it vividly shows what could happen to U.S. business if companies do not change their approach to competition from the Far East.

"When you watch 'Roger & Me' and you're seeing American companies deteriorate, remember that you're looking at the nuking of our tax base," Perot said.

Needlepointer Seeks Happy Home for Her Labor of Love

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1990 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, I made a beautiful needlepoint picture for my niece's Christmas gift. It took a long time to make, and I knew she'd love it. As I was getting ready to mail it, my husband said it would make a lovely housewarming gift for his sister, who had just bought a condo.

I doubted that she would appreciate it because the picture was an old-fashioned country scene, and my sister-in-law furnished her condo in "modern." Nevertheless, I gave the picture to my sister-in-law and bought a last-minute Christmas gift for my niece.

Well, my sister-in-law must have it stuck away in some storeroom because she never hung it anywhere in her home.

I am very hurt. Do I dare ask her for it back? Or should I make another picture for my niece and forget about the one I gave my sister-in-law?

NOT EXACTLY IN STITCHES

DEAR NOT EXACTLY: Take a leap of faith and good-humoredly tell your sister-in-law that since she isn't using the picture you gave her, you'd like to exchange it for something more contemporary, in keeping with her condo. Also, tell her that the "country scene" would be an ideal gift for your niece's home.

It's possible that your sister-in-law has been feeling a little guilty for not hanging your picture, and she may appreciate getting rid of it — unless, of course, she already has.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your answer to "Ashamed" — the hot-tempered mother of five who lost her temper and then regretted it. You said: "There is not a mother alive who has not done or said something in anger; words can cut as sharply as a knife."

I am a pediatrician, and also a mother of three children. I appreciate your pointing out the universality of anger, and especially stating that words can hurt as much as physical abuse. Whenever I hear a mother say to her child, "You are bad!" no matter how busy I am, I always take the time to explain, "Your child trusts you and believes you — so never tell him that he is bad, or clumsy, or anything that will make him feel inferior. Tell him that he is good, but he sometimes may do something bad."

May I add a suggestion to your list of things a parent may do as an alternative to hitting a child? Say a little prayer. If you believe as I do that every child is a child of God, you will know that God cares about you and will help you parent your child. He knows your stresses and can help you handle your feelings of anger so that they do not erupt in violent words or acts.

PUC counsel seeking delay to discuss Bell settlement

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission's general counsel asked today for a two-week delay in Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s rate case so a possible settlement can be discussed.

Deputy General Counsel Martin Wilson signed the motion for continuance, which said his office and the telephone company have agreed "on the framework for a settlement that would be acceptable."

Other parties had not had a chance to look at the proposed agreement.

PUC Administrative Law Judge K.K. Trostle began taking public testimony in the case, in which consumer advocates have said they will fight to reduce Southwestern Bell's rates by hundreds of millions of dollars.

The telephone company is hoping to win PUC approval of its own plan — dubbed "Texas First" — to freeze rates for five years, upgrade service and win some regulatory flexibility from the commission.

In the case, the PUC staff is recommending a $392 million annual decrease in revenues for Southwestern Bell, saying the company is earning more than authorized in its last rate case. Southwestern Bell disagrees.

The proposed reduction is the largest ever recommended by the commission's staff for any telephone or electric company, according to agency General Counsel Bob Rima.

But it's not the biggest proposed reduction for Southwestern Bell in this rate case, which some have predicted will last six months or longer.

The state-paid lawyer for residential and small commercial electric customers has called for a $595.5 million decrease, and a coalition of cities served by the company has proposed a $702 million annual rate reduction.

The telephone company says even a $400 million rate reduction would require the elimination of 3,900 jobs and cancellation of $300 million in construction projects.

3 jobs in choral music keeps man very busy

DALLAS (AP) — The chorus director of the Dallas Symphony said he originally wanted to be a pianist, but the lure of vocal harmony was too great.

And now it keeps Ronald Shirey running. He also is director of choral students and activities for Texas Christian University and serves as choirmaster for the University Christian Church in Fort Worth.

"Pianists are more like research scientists, working out their individual problems," said Shirey, when asked what sets them apart from those with choral preferences.

Shirey said he prefers a cooperative effort such as choral music, with "everybody working together to produce music greater than anyone in the group could do individually."

New Boy Scout handbook signals changing times

DALLAS (AP) — The new Boy Scout handbook still tells Scouts to "be prepared" and how to use a compass, build campfires and tie knots. But it also aims to help boys cope with life in the '90s.
 The handbook, the first in nine years, features a 23-page insert on the dangers of child abuse and drugs, a new environmentally gentle approach to camping, new rules to keep younger Scouts interested, new merit badges such as cinematography and color photos in place of the old illustrations.
 The changes are part of a decade-long drive to modernize the 80-year-old organization and boost its membership, which sagged from 4.8 million in 1972 to 3.1 million in 1979 but has since rebounded to 4.3 million.

The new 10th edition of the Boy Scouts Handbook, as the book is officially known, is due to be in stores late this month or early next month.

Houston...

City officials plan to count all residents under freeway

HOUSTON (AP) — Central Houston census workers will crawl through freeway underpasses, probe local parks and hang out at abandoned buildings to get an accurate count of the homeless population in nation's fourth-largest city.

Sandra Ellison, director of the Central Houston Census Bureau said "S Night" — Street and Shelter Night — is scheduled for the overnight hours between March 20 and March 21.

"If a street person is walking around and seems to have relatively intact faculties, they will be interviewed," Ms. Ellison said.

"But census workers will not be allowed to disturb anyone who seems disoriented or wake anyone who is sleeping," Ms. Ellison said. "In those cases, they must estimate the most basic information."

Census takers are not only trying to get an accurate count on the nation's homeless, but also attempting to determine such demographics as their sex, age and ethnic background.

A recent study revealed there are about 10,000 homeless people in Houston each night, including about 1,500 children. But those figures do not include another 120,000 adults and 30,000 children classified as "marginally homeless," or those temporarily doubling up with friends and relatives.

On S Night, some census takers will work the streets, while others will hit the shelters. Working with the Houston Police Department and homeless advocates here, Ms. Ellison's crew has spent months pinpointing shelters, hotels, motels, underpasses, parks, benches, and even abandoned buildings.

"There are pockets throughout the city where apartments have shut down but where people have continued to live," said City of Houston Planner Peg Purser. "But if the Census Bureau identifies them as vacant, we could be missing a lot of people."

For the city, which relies on federal dollars to provide services for the poor, officials cannot afford to miss counting those who need such services.

According to the detailed plan, S Night workers will visit shelters and emergency lodgings from 6 p.m. to midnight March 20, while they will cover the streets from 2 a.m. to 4 a.m.

Then from 4 to 6:30 a.m., workers will go to abandoned and boarded-up buildings and wait until someone comes out. Whoever comes out first will be asked how many people are inside and whatever other basic information they can offer. If whoever comes out first cannot answer the questions, the census workers will wait for the next occupant to leave.

"We have to balance the safety of the census takers with the mission of counting people," a Census Bureau report says. "Census takers will not enter abandoned buildings, climb onto rooftops or check trash dumpsters."

Outcry over immigration ads prompts cancellation of spots

HOUSTON (AP) — Six radio stations selected to preview anti-immigration ads for a national conservative group have cancelled the spots after an uproar from minority groups who said the ads were discriminatory.

"It's a blow for democratic ideals in Houston," said Dan Stein, executive director of the Washington-based Federation for American Immigration Reform. "We're going to work to get the ads back on."

The series of three radio commercials that began airing Wednesday linked immigrants to such problems as homelessness, drug smuggling and traffic congestion.

Outraged minority groups, including the League of United Latin American Citizens and Catholic, Jewish and Chinese groups, said the ads were racially divisive. They threatened to boycott the stations and their sponsors.

"In human history, it is not unusual for some to look for a scapegoat when problems cannot be adequately solved," said the Most Rev. Enrique San Pedro, auxiliary bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Galveston-Houston. "Homelessness, drugs and other social ills are due to our failure to confront their root causes, which is not immigration."

In the ads, actors complain about the millions of immigrants pouring into the country each year, and warn that problems opponent holding a singleton diamond, he should win the first trick with dummy's spade king. Now when he plays ace and a diamond, he is well placed to win in his hand whatever major suit is returned, ruff a diamond with the club nine, return to his hand with the remaining major-suit ace and ruff one more diamond with the ace of clubs. Since his original club holding is still intact, he can now force out the king of clubs and make the remaining tricks. As is so often the case, a trick was lost by careless play at trick one.

Tracing it to trick one

By James Jacoby

In rubber bridge, there is little difference between making 10 tricks and making 11. But in duplicate, a declarer would not want to make four clubs, if other three-club declarers are making five. Today's declarer played sloppily, making only 10 tricks.

Declarer won the ace of spades, and played ace and a small diamond. East won the king and returned a heart. South won the ace, then ruffed a diamond with the nine of clubs. Next came the spade king and a spade ruff. Another diamond was ruffed with the club ace. That made declarer's last diamond a winner, provided trumps could be picked up. So declarer played a club to his queen. West won the king but then played the heart king. Declarer had to ruff, and West now had a long trump. South could cash his remaining high clubs, but West took the last trick by ruffing South's diamond nine.

Declarer can conserve his transportation by ducking the first diamond, but if he does not care to risk either

Leaves alma mater...

Hatfield accepts Clemson job

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Ken Hatfield is an Arkansas native who played for the Razorbacks and helped them claim the 1964 national championship. Six years ago, he became head coach at his alma mater. Hatfield ended that seemingly perfect match Sunday when he was named the head coach at Clemson — a program as troubled as Arkansas' is clean in a scandal-ridden Southwest Conference.

McEnroe's tantrum nets Open default

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — John McEnroe's cursing, racket-smashing tantrum in the Australian Open wasn't his worst, but it cost him a shot at $200,000 and put into question his future in tennis.

Yet all it took for McEnroe to revert to his old ways was a tough match against Pernfors, the Swedish-born two-time NCAA champion at Georgia.

McEnroe won the first set easily, but as Pernfors picked up his game in the second set, McEnroe became increasingly agitated. After netting a short drop shot, he smashed the ball on the ground as if it were an annoying bug.

McEnroe, the first player thrown out of this Grand Slam event in its 85-year history, plans to continue his comeback but still has to prove he can play tough matches without losing his temper.

He smacked another ball after a missed forehand and nearly hit a ballboy. He asked for new balls before serving the 10th game, complaining the old ones were dead, but was broken for the set — his third straight break — on Pernfors backhand volley of a shallow lob.

During an hourlong news conference Sunday, when he was formally introduced as the Tigers' new coach, Hatfield said he was not concerned about the NCAA investigation, the threatened boycott or the fans who continue to support former Coach Danny Ford.

He flew home to Malibu, Calif., today, brushing silently past reporters with his wife, actress Tatum O'Neal, and their two sons.

McEnroe slammed a ball in the air after a miss in the first game of the third set and almost hit Pernfors in the back, then stalled between shots by pacing angrily behind the baseline. Pernfors, bothered by the tactics, was broken.

Hatfield said he and his wife, Sandy, felt it was their destiny to come to Clemson — although he did not make his first trip to the school until Sunday afternoon.

The $6,500 fine he was slapped with was minor, though it cut a big chunk out of the $14,000 he won for reaching the fourth round.

McEnroe took a 2-1 lead after an exchange of breaks, but on the changeover he stood in front of a lineswoman he thought made a bad call.

"I think more than anything else, each person in your time has to decide what's important to you," Hatfield said. "Sandy and I both felt right now this was the right thing to do to be part of the continued success of Clemson's fine tradition and heritage. "We felt led here," Hatfield said. "We understand it's a very difficult situation in time. But I promise you that things will work out."

Had he gone on to win the match Sunday against Mikael Pernfors after leading 6-1, 4-6, 7-5, 2-4, McEnroe would have won at least $24,000 for reaching the quarterfinals.

Bouncing a ball on his racket and glaring at her in intimidating fashion, McEnroe was hit with a code violation for unsportsmanlike conduct by umpire Gerry Armstrong.

Hatfield comes to a program under the cloud of an NCAA probe and a revolt by Clemson players and some fans, who were upset over Ford's resignation. Ford, 41, quit Thursday — less than two weeks after the NCAA told Clemson it had uncovered 14 alleged rule violations.

More important, McEnroe's default cost him a real chance at his first Grand Slam title since he won Wimbledon and the U.S. Open in 1984.

He seemed to be in control of the match and himself again, but suddenly became distracted by a crying baby while serving the sixth game, with Pernfors ahead 3-2.

One day after Ford resigned, his players called on the university to bring him back or hire one of his assistants to replace him or they would boycott the 1990 season. The threatened boycott was called off after the players were told Sunday morning that Hatfield would be their new coach.

McEnroe would have met Yannick Noah in the quarters, and probably defending champion Ivan Lendl in the semis, but might have beaten anyone the way he was playing. The winner gets $200,000, the runner-up $100,000.

Armstrong asked the parents to take the baby out of the stadium.

McEnroe's exit dominated talk at the Australian Open on Monday, overshadowing unseeded David Wheaton's 7-6 (7-5), 6-4, 6-3 victory over fellow American Aaron Krickstein, the fifth seed, who was playing with a groin injury.

Armstrong called a code violation for racket abuse, and McEnroe responded by swearing at him and asked for Ken Farrar, the Grand Slam chief of supervisors.

No. 3 Stefan Edberg, who joined Wheaton in the quarterfinals by beating fellow Swede Jonas Svensson, said McEnroe "only has himself to blame" for getting thrown out. McEnroe let himself get rattled by missed shots, close calls and a baby's cries, and after his default he admitted, "I don't really have anyone to blame but myself." Only two days before, after winning his third match and playing his best tennis in years, McEnroe talked about how important it is for him to keep his temper under control.

Westerners, Dusters home against T-birds

Though both games featuring the Western Texas College basketball teams last Thursday were similar in their physical nature, they had very different results.

was led by Brownfield talent Sheryl Swoopes.

Odessa College in the early going.

The Lady Dusters, now 13-6 and 1-3 fell to the South Plains College women, 69-44, in spite of a good defensive effort by the WTC women.

The 6-0 wing-post led all scorers Thursday with 29 points, only slightly above her per-game average of 26.1 which ranks eighth in the entire nation in scoring.

Elsewhere in the WJCAC, Odessa is at South Plains, Midland is at Clarendon and Frank Phillips' mens' club is at New Mexico Military Institute.

Western Texas was led by Tracey Rome off the bench.

The Dusters and Lady T-birds will go at it at 6 p.m. tonight followed at 8 p.m. by the men's battle.

The freshman wing player from La Grange High School scored 12 points in the loss.

The games will be played in the Scurry County Coliseum.

Rome will try to duplicate her effort against New Mexico Junior College tonight in a Western Junior College Athletic Conference contest.

Members of Little Dribblers basketball teams will get into tonight's games free if they wear their uniform tops.

At least three of the Dusters will be at less than 100 percent for tonight's WJCAC contest.

Christmas freeze may have killed scores of dolphins

MATAGORDA, Texas (AP) — An expert says the Christmas freeze may be responsible for killing at least 24 bottlenose dolphins who were found floating or washed ashore in Matagorda Bay over the weekend.

The kill is the worst on the Texas coast in a decade, officials said.

Volunteers Sunday helped pull the carcasses from Matagorda Bay about halfway between Galveston and Corpus Christi on the Gulf Coast, using airboats to bring both adults and calves ashore.

Experts from the Texas Marine Mammal Stranding Network planned to examine the carcasses today to determine what killed the animals, said Mike Carvan at the organization's office in Galveston.

Tests could take months, however, and the exact cause of death may never be known, officials said.

Game Warden Arthur Lawrence said the large kill led investigators to believe the freeze that killed thousands of fish along the Texas coast may be to blame for the dolphin kill as well. The cold may have caused illness that weakened the animals, and ice apparently made it hard for some to surface and breathe, he said.

"There was a considerable amount of ice out here," Lawrence said of three-day record-breaking freeze that plunged temperatures below zero, ruined most of south Texas' citrus crop and brought a rare snow to Houston just before Christmas.

"In fact, several acres of this bay was covered with ice, a slushy-type of ice material — and apparently it made it hard for these dolphins to breathe," Lawrence said. "Some of them probably became disoriented and stunned as a result of this cold and icy weather and they can suffocate and suffer pneumonia just like a human."

Officials said 24 carcasses had been spotted along a six-mile stretch of shore, and most had been hauled ashore by Sunday night.

"It's never happened before," said H.F. Fuselier, a seasoned Matagorda fisherman, as he watched Coast Guard members hoist a 7-foot male dolphin's carcass into the bed of a pickup.

"It ain't fair. It ain't right," Rose Folmar, a bartender at Allen's Landing in Matagorda who was helping monitor the recovery effort, said some volunteers doubted the freeze theory because it's been so long since the cold snap.

"That's what's puzzling," Ms. Folmar said. "If the freeze was about a month ago, why are the dead dolphins showing up now? We won't really know until the biologists tell us after the autopsies."

David Belcik, a Matagorda boat captain, agreed.

"In my time on the Gulf coast, and about 19 years of experience, this is the first time this has ever happened that I know of in Matagorda or any of the bays," he said. "I believe this happened after the freeze."

A helicopter pilot spotted floating dolphin carcasses in Matagorda Bay late Saturday, Lawrence said. After an early morning search of the area Sunday, wildlife officials were unable to find any of the dolphins alive.

"I came out to check if the animals were in stress and found they were already partially decomposed," Lawrence said.

"We figure right off they were killed in the freeze," Lawrence said. "We think they've just now floated up."

It was the largest discovery of dead dolphins on the Texas coast in at least a decade, said Carvan of the mammal network.

A pilot who flew over the area at the time of the freeze reported spotting a trail of holes apparently left by dolphins as they tried to break through and breathe on their way to deeper water, Lawrence said.

Game wardens worked during the freeze to break up ice in the marshy areas around the bay.

Longtime area residents said changes in access from the bay to the open Gulf of Mexico and persistent low tides late last year may have helped seal the dolphins' fate. One traditional pass to the Gulf has closed, and low tides make a new one at Caney Creek largely inaccessible, said Tommy Riley, a Matagorda bait camp owner.

Dolphins could take a longer route to the Gulf through the manmade Intracoastal Waterway, but the cold may have prevented their taking another escape route, observers said.

Others suggested that toxic pollutants from coastal industries might have contributed to the kill.

Searchers also found thousands of dead mullet — tough fish that normally remain in the bay during cold weather while prized redfish and speckled trout instinctively head for deep water.

Military women did their job in Panama

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — The TV reporter in high heels asked the young woman in black combat boots, "Did you really get shot at?"

"Yes, I got shot at," answered Army 1st Lt. Colleen M. Watson, her playful grin framed by a camouflage helmet and olive green chin strap.

"And, yes, they were real bullets."

Then she laughed, this veteran of the Panama invasion, this military police platoon leader with the new Army Commendation medal for meritorious service pinned to her fatigue shirt.

"A lot of people have asked me that."

Americans did double-takes at the news reports in the days following the U.S. invasion of Panama. There were photos of a female marksman who killed a Panamanian Defense Force fighter from 215 yards, newsprint about females who hit the dirt, dodged bullets, fired M-16s and did what women in the U.S. military have never done.

In the largest American combat operation since Vietnam, women performed a highly visible and perilous duty. Their role in the invasion is reviving the debate about women and war.

In the past decade, women have joined the military in record numbers. Today, one of every 10 members of America's military is female — 224,000 of the 2.1 million active duty officers and enlisted personnel in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

Many of these new recruits wear combat fatigues, leap alongside men into muddy foxholes, refuel fighter planes in midair and repair ship engines. Yet, for much of the public at-large, the vision of female military personnel remains frozen in time.

Considering that as recently as the 1970s, field exercises for women consisted of a night in a pup tent, no wonder the prevailing public idea of women in the military is more WAC, more WAVE, than GI Joan.

In Panama, 25-year-old Ms. Watson, who stands 5-foot-4 — (add an inch with her helmet on) — led an MP platoon in securing checkpoints and key installations on the outskirts of Panama City. Their role was to clear the way for the infantry, but a gunbattle erupted pinning Ms. Watson's detachment in the middle.

"The soldier (from Fort Hood) who got killed was from my machine-gunner," Ms. Watson said. "He was real close (to me). We got caught in the cross-fire and bullets were flying everywhere."

Private 1st Class Scott L. Roth was posthumously awarded the Purple Heart medal.

At a recent welcoming ceremony at the Central Texas Army post, eight other soldiers from the 401st Headquarters also were presented medals by Lt. Gen. Richard Graves, III Corps and Fort Hood commander.

"An army must have the will to win," the general said, "and you have exhibited a will to excel in tough conditions." He told the troops that they are "in a word, winners."

Among the citations Graves presented was the Army Commendation for meritorious service to Ms. Watson, one of 12 women from the post sent to Panama.

Ms. Watson, of Bennington, Vt., was credited with leadership in capturing several Panamanian Defense Force soldiers, but said her platoon deserved the credit. "They really came through for me."

Ms. Watson joined the Army four years ago upon graduating from college with a degree in zoology. She had originally planned to become a doctor, but changed her mind while in school, where she joined the ROTC.

Finding herself in combat was something she said she never expected — "not on that scale anyway." In the hours leading up to the gunbattle as she realized her precarious position, she said, "my immediate reaction was shock. I said, 'Wow!' I was pretty excited about it!"

The Department of Defense historically has prohibited women from serving in combat units or commanding combat troops, but women are allowed in the military police.

"Our job," she explained, "is to make sure the forces get to the front line safely. At times, that makes us vulnerable targets to the enemy, and that's what happened in our case. We were caught in the middle. But I didn't think about being a woman out there. Whether you're a male or a female, you're out there with a job to do. That job doesn't change based on gender."

Ms. Watson said she couldn't give an absolute "yes" or "no" to the question of women being allowed to serve in all combat situations. But, she said, "as far as the military police corps, for our mission, it didn't hinder it in any way."

Three women served in her platoon.

"There is always going to be somebody who says 'No, they don't belong here,'" Ms. Watson said.

Shuttle, satellite readied by NASA for ride to Florida

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia and the 11-ton satellite it plucked from space are slated to leave Thursday for Kennedy Space Center in Florida, a NASA spokeswoman said.

Ground crews were preparing the shuttle Sunday for its voyage atop a jetliner, and taking special efforts to protect its cargo from possible contamination. A refueling stop is scheduled in San Antonio.

"The work is proceeding very well. The orbiter appears to be very healthy, as does LDEF (the satellite)," said spokeswoman Patricia Phillips. "We are looking forward to bringing it home at the end of the week."

Columbia and five astronauts landed at this Mojave Desert military base at 3:35 a.m. CST Saturday, ending a record-length shuttle flight of 10 days and 21 hours.

During the mission, the astronauts deployed a Navy communications satellite, then used the shuttle's robot arm to retrieve the 30-foot-long Long Duration Exposure Facility, which soon would have fallen into Earth's atmosphere and burned if it had not been rescued.

About a third of the LDEF's 57 experiments will help researchers learn what materials can withstand long periods in space and thus might be suitable for building U.S. space station Freedom, which NASA hopes to operate in the mid-1990s.

The satellite will not be removed from Columbia's cargo bay until after the shuttle returns to Florida on Friday night, riding piggyback atop a modified Boeing 747.

To protect LDEF from contamination, ground crews started pumping cool, conditioned air and nitrogen into the cargo bay even before Columbia was towed off the concrete runway Saturday morning, Phillips said.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration and contractor employees worked on Columbia on Sunday while it sat inside the large steel girder structure called the mate-demate device, where it will be mounted atop the jet later in the week.

"Overall, the vehicle is in excellent condition. Any damage is minimal," Phillips said.

She said the number of "dings" found on the orbiter's heat-shield tiles was below average and remained the same as counted Saturday: 85 dings smaller than one inch, eight larger ones and one tile requiring replacement.

Phillips said NASA hopes the piggyback jet ride will start early Thursday, with a refueling stop at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base near Tucson, Ariz., before stopping for the night at Kelly Air Force Base near San Antonio. On Friday, the shuttle will refuel at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida's panhandle before finally arriving at Kennedy Space Center, she said.

A Meeting of Importance to ...

FARMERS

On Withholding Income Tax From Workers' Checks

Effective January 1, 1990 you will have to start withholding income out of your employees' pay checks. This means that you will have to get IRS Form W-4 completed and signed by all employees, and then deduct the income tax based on dependants claimed and the salary paid.

There will be a meeting conducted by Jerry Vestal, CPA, at the TU Electric Reddy Room on January 29, 1990 at 7:00 p.m., to explain the form W-4 and how to use the withholding tax tables. All farmers are welcome.

In rebuilding E. German government...

Modrow will include pro-democracy groups

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Communist Premier Hans Modrow bowed to pressure from opposition groups and agreed today to rebuild the East German government to include pro-democracy groups.

Modrow's concession came one day after the Communist Party's No. 2 leader quit and called for the party's dissolution.

The resignation followed an emergency meeting of the embattled party leadership, which made other moves to placate the populace by expelling ousted leader Egon Krenz and 13 other former Politburo members.

The leadership, which replaced Communist hard-liners last year during a peaceful popular revolt, has been trying to appear an opposition movement that is upset with the pace of promised reforms.

Modrow and opposition leaders also showed rare agreement in denouncing a report today by the mass-circulation West German newspaper Bild, which claimed army and secret police agents were jointly planning a coup.

Ibrahim Boehme of the influential opposition Social Democratic Party told politicians a coalition with Communists and other established parties was possible "if all parties and groups are prepared to enter the government on an emergency basis, without weeks-long negotiations."

He made the comment at a session of weekly talks on reform between the government and opposition groups.

East Germany's first free elections are to be held on May 6, but broad differences between the Communist-dominated government and opposition groups have delayed economic reform measures and hindered the transition to democracy.

Modrow today proposed that the fractious political forces meet Wednesday to consider a new Cabinet.

"It is my intention to give a new quality to our cooperation," Modrow told representatives of more than a dozen fledgling parties and reform movements during today's talks between the government and the opposition. "Our expectation of your constructive advice underscores this intention."

"I appeal to the representatives of the new parties at the round table ... to enter the government as Cabinet members in order to form a broad coalition," Modrow said.

With his offer, Modrow has made clear that the Communists are willing to give up some of the ministerial posts they control to allow groups such as New Forum, the Social Democrats and other unofficial parties to gain a role in government.

Communists now dominate the 27-member Cabinet led by Modrow, with 16 ministerial posts compared with four for the officially approved Liberal Democrats, three for the Christian Democrats and two each for the National Democrats and the farmers' party.

Opposition groups have indicated they would take part in running the government only if they are offered ministerial posts.

The Communists' attempt to keep their party from collapsing were compounded by Sunday's announcement that their No. 2 official, Wolfgang Berghofer, had abandoned the party with an "urgent demand" for the party's dissolution.

Berghofer, 46, the party's deputy chairman since December and a leading popular reformer, resigned along with 39 other prominent party members from Dresden, of which he is mayor.

The moves were expected to trigger mass defections from the party. Its membership in the country of 16.3 million people has plunged to 1.2 million from nearly 2.3 million in 1987.

Price tag stalls quadriplegic girl's trip to Oregon

AUSTIN (AP) — A quadriplegic girl's long-awaited journey from a hospital room here to the home of an adoptive family in Oregon is being threatened by the $45,000 cost of the move and other expenses.

The Portland, Ore., family that wants to adopt Patty cannot afford $15,300 for the ventilator and other medical equipment needed to keep her alive, or $20,000 for a van with a wheelchair lift to take her to the doctor and to school.

Diane and Ken Stacy, who have two children with disabilities and three children with normal abilities, also do not have the $9,600 to charter an air ambulance that officials say is the safest way to move Patty to Portland.

There are no city, county or state funds specifically designated for such a purpose, said Stephanie Crowell, a pediatric social worker at Brackenridge Hospital.

For Patty, who has lived at the hospital for most of her 6½ years, the money "means the difference between getting a family and not," Ms. Crowell said. "That's what this is about."

Patty, a ward of the state, was left paralyzed and dependent upon a ventilator after contracting an inflammation of her spinal cord when she was 6 months old.

Her hospital bill is more than $2 million. Every day, more than $1,500 is added to the tab, which totals about $600,000 a year.

The city has always paid the bill with no contribution from the Texas Department of Human Services or Travis County, officials said. Now, the City of Austin believes it is time for the county or state to contribute to Patty's care, said Sandra Bockelman, a city attorney.

At a Friday court hearing to discuss Patty's move, lawyers for the city, county and state all said their budgets have no money for it. However, State District Judge Jeanne Meurer ordered the Department of Human Services to have Patty in her new home by Feb. 15.

"The entities can determine who is to pay for it," she said. "It is the court's opinion, from the standpoint of equity, that this case is going to be a strain on the taxpayers of this nation."

After the hearing, DHS Commissioner Ron Lindsey said, "We're going to do everything we can to try to make it work" by the deadline.

Travis County Judge Bill Aleshire said county commissioners will vote today on a proposal to use $9,600 in county foster-care money to pay for Patty's air ambulance ride.

Officials also have set up a new trust fund to collect donations of cash, medical equipment or transportation for Patty. A trust fund set up several years ago for her contains $36,310, but advocates say she needs to take that "nest egg" to Oregon to pay for unexpected medical expenses and other emergencies.

The Stacys learned of Patty after the Ladies' Home Journal reprinted a story about her that was published in the Austin American-Statesman in 1987.

Oregon officials have concluded a study of the home life of the Stacys, and have told Texas officials the results are positive, the newspaper reported Saturday.

Official notification is pending.

Diane Stacy, 31, is a licensed practical nurse who raises her children full time. Ken Stacy, 30, earns $27,000 a year teaching high school and has a master's degree in special education.

Their medical insurance policy will cover Patty.

"We're looking at raising a family of eight on a teacher's salary," Diane Stacy said. "We're making a commitment to take care of Patty for the rest of her life."

Willoughby of the Bethesda-based National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, has emphasized that children in her trial were not being denied AZT. In fact, however, few are receiving it.

Of the 347 children in the trial, 113 are seriously ill, and 26 of them are getting AZT. Five of the remaining patients also are getting AZT. The children are being treated at more than two dozen centers across the country, Willoughby said.

"There is a legitimate difference of opinion about the status of this study," Willoughby said in a telephone interview. She said she would like to see more data on the trials of AZT in

AIDS children experiment questioned

NEW YORK (AP) — A leading government AIDS researcher has questioned an experiment in which more than 300 young victims are not getting the drug AZT, despite the government's conclusion that it is safe and effective in children.

"I questioned that many, many months ago," Dr. Anthony Fauci said in an interview Sunday. Half of the children are getting an experimental drug called intravenous immunoglobulin, or IVIG, and half are getting only a placebo, lacking any beneficial ingredients.

Fauci also has set up a trial to test intravenous immunoglobulin, but in his trial the children receiving IVIG and those receiving a placebo also are receiving the anti-AIDS drug AZT.

"I made sure in our own institute that a trial was done which included an AZT arm," said Fauci, who was in New York to address the New York-Italy Medical Symposium.

"I don't feel comfortable with a placebo-controlled trial at this stage," Fauci said. In October, Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan acted to make AZT widely available to children, saying there was enough preliminary evidence the drug was effective and safe.

The director of the experiment he questioned, Dr. Anne children before she was convinced of its effectiveness.

Several researchers interviewed by The Associated Press were critical of Willoughby's study, agreeing with Fauci that children should be given AZT. The most vocal of them was Dr. Philip Pizzo, chief of the pediatric branch at the National Cancer Institute.

Willoughby said he has more experience than anyone else on the use of AZT in children.

"The issue of immunoglobulin alone might have been timely three or four years ago," Pizzo has said. "But in 1989, not having AZT ... means that the potential benefit of the drug, particularly to children's nervous systems; is being lost."

Pizzo's studies have shown that AZT can stop or even reverse damage to the brain and central nervous system in children. As a result, some children who had lost the ability to speak or walk have recovered those abilities, Pizzo has reported.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is caused by a virus that damages the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to infections and cancer.

Dr. Keith Krasinski, a pediatrician at New York University Medical Center and a participant in Willoughby's experiment, disagrees with Pizzo.

"It would be premature to say that AZT is the standard of therapy," Krasinski has said.

Willoughby said the study's data safety and monitoring board, an independent group that could halt the trial if it were considered unethical, has repeatedly approved its continuation.

3 injured in accident

Two women and an 8-year-old girl were injured in a 1:53 p.m. Sunday traffic accident at 25th St. and College Ave. that police listed as a major accident.

Officers said a 1980 Pontiac driven by 18-year-old Karen Slade of Midland was southbound on College and a 1986 Ford driven by Marlene Beck, 43, of Rt. 3 was going west on 25th when the vehicles collided.

Beck and a passenger in the Slade car, 8-year-old Krystal Britt of Midland, were taken by Snyder EMS Ambulance Service to Cogdell Memorial Hospital, where they were treated and released, the little girl with pain in her right shoulder and Beck with a bruised left temple.

A passenger in the Beck car, 61-year-old Thelma Gholson of Aspermont, was held for 23-hour observation after complaining of pain in her neck and left shoulder, and she was listed in good condition at the hospital today.

Both cars were heavily damaged and had to be towed from the scene.

Fuel stolen

Sheriff's deputies are investigating the theft of $150 in diesel fuel from a tank belonging to Tommy Echols of Rt. 2.

Echols told officers at 9:45 a.m. Saturday that the fuel was missing from a tank on his property on the old Echols farm off the Dunn-Ira road.

T.C. Nunn of Rt. 1 told deputies Sunday that someone had vandalized his mailbox, causing about $50 in damages.

Class

May 8.

Approximately 130 applications have been given out by the Adult Education Office. Of those, some 66 percent were for non-Snyder residents, according to the office.

Following a review of the applications, testing will be held Feb. 13. Successful applicants will be notified on Feb. 28 and registration will be held March 1.

Cost of the course is $225.

Documents required from applicants include a driver's license, social security card, a copy of a diploma or transcript documenting the highest level of education completed and a birth certificate. The birth certificate must be one issued by a state, county or municipal authority.

Applicants must be at least 18 years old, meet weight standards and pass a pre-employment test. A background check is also taken.

The class is scheduled to begin March 3 at the college and conclude May 3 with graduation planned for May 8.

Five arrested over weekend

Police arrested five men Friday and Saturday, one a 20-year-old man who was taken into custody on a felony probation violation warrant and for several traffic violations.

Joe J. Vera of 408 33nd St. was arrested in the 100 Block of Browning Ave. on the probation warrant and for evading arrest and not having a driver's license or liability insurance.

Vera has been on three years' probation in connection with a Dec. 15, 1987, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle offense.

A 30-year-old man was arrested for DWI and driving with his license suspended at 9:32 p.m. Sunday in the 2000 Block of College Ave., and a 32-year-old man was arrested on the same charges at 12:17 p.m. Saturday in the 2700 Block of Ave. F.

Officers responded to a reported fight outside the Sonic Drive In at 4100 College and took a 17-year-old boy into custody for public intoxication and disorderly conduct at 10:22 p.m. Saturday.

Another young Snyder man then came to the police station and filed a misdemeanor assault complaint against the suspect.

A 26-year-old man was arrested for PI at 11:56 p.m. Sunday in the 1000 Block of 25th St.

cent of the county's 9,080 registered voters cast ballots. Of those, some 1,860, or approximately 54 percent, voted for the rollback and 1,608, or 46 percent, voted against it.

Just three of 15 voting boxes noted counts which were against the rollback, including Box 20, or the absentee vote. Of the 1,063 voters who chose that method of balloting, 597 were against the rollback and 466 were in favor.

The other two boxes in which a majority voted against the rollback were Boxes 18 and 19. Box 18, voting at the National Guard Armory, had 147 against and 136 for. Box 19, voting nearby at Towle Park Barn, had 162 against and 157 for.

The rollback election was forced last fall when a group of citizens presented petitions protesting the 39.80-cent per $100 in valuation tax rate set by Commissioners Court, up from 29.66 the previous year. The petitions contained 1,304 names certified by the county clerk's office.

It has been estimated that the rollback of near 5-cents would amount to about $440,000 from the county's budget.

In a meeting last Friday morning, Judge Goodwin said some of the recommendations noted in the county operational audit have already been implemented, others will be implemented and still others would be reviewed further.

The operational audit was ordered in mid-October by District Judge Gene Dulaney and a preliminary report by Coopers and Lybrand of Lubbock, a national accounting firm, was completed in November. The firm then conducted a more extensive audit, the results of which were revealed in a Monday evening public meeting prior to Saturday's election.

Judge Dulaney and representatives from the accounting firm said there was no significance as to the timing of the release of the audit and the rollback election.

the rollback election.

After canvassing returns from Saturday's ad valorem tax rollback election, Scurry County Commissioners determined that the preliminary count was accurate.

Some 3,468 voters turned out for the Saturday election which determined that ad valorem taxes will be rolled

Dr. Gott Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR READERS: It's time for a little new year follow-up. Complete and incomplete proteins: I wrote that this differentiation between proteins is probably not significant for vegetarians. I was called to task by some dieticians and nutritionists who pointed out that animal protein, which, of course, is excluded from a vegetarian's diet, contains all the essential amino acids — the building-blocks of protein — and is, therefore, complete.

Some vegetables and grains are incomplete; that is, they don't contain all the essential amino acids. Hence, a highly restrictive vegetarian diet could result in protein deficiency. This is true. However, I stand by my original meaning that, for practical purposes, a well-balanced vegetarian diet — containing grains and legumes, as well as vegetables — con-

Officials ponder new stadium

DALLAS (AP) — Developing the Farmer's Market area near downtown under a proposal being considered could cost the city $20 million — and that's not including the price tag for a possible baseball stadium, officials say.

The plan's success depends largely on the cooperation of developers and the Texas Rangers.

George W. Bush, managing general partner of the Rangers, said the team is awaiting a marketing survey to determine the best place to play.

"We have not begun discussions (with cities) and won't until we get a better knowledge base," Bush said.

Arlington Mayor Richard Greene has submitted plans for a new $102.5 million stadium to be built next to the existing stadium in Arlington. But Bush says the mayor's plan wouldn't affect the team's decision.

"They understand were going to do what is best for our fans," he said.

The first phase in the Farmer's Market development plan would include street improvements at an estimated cost of $10 million.

tains all the necessary protein for healthy adults.

The dissolving pill: I wrote that people do not have to put calcium-supplement pills in vinegar to see if they dissolve before deciding whether a given brand will be absorbed by the human body. A reader pointed out that Consumer Reports, a reputable publication, had suggested this test because some calcium pills were passing through the intestine unchanged. I have no problem with the Consumer Reports' approach, but I recommended TUMS, an antacid that also acts as a chewable calcium supplement; therefore, the test is unnecessary for this product.

Calcium in TUMS: I indicated that each TUMS tablet contains 500 milligrams of calcium. Several readers believed this figure to be incorrect because this 500 milligrams of calcium carbonate translates into 200 milligrams of elemental calcium; thus, each TUMS supplies about 20 percent of the adult Recommended Daily Allowance of calcium (about 1,000 milligrams).

Post-menopausal women require more to prevent osteoporosis. This does not change my original suggestion to such women: two "Os-Cal 250+D" tablets plus two TUMS a day, as a supplement to a regular diet.

Fluoride toothpaste: The use of fluoride toothpaste is, in my opinion, redundant for people who drink fluoridated water from municipal sources. In addition, excess fluoride in the body can cause spotted discoloration and pitting of tooth enamel. While the risks of using both fluoridated water and fluoridated toothpaste and/or rinse are extremely small, I see no compelling advantages in the practice.

Toxic shock: I reported that toxic-shock syndrome, a serious and sometimes fatal infection, is caused by a toxin secreted by staphylococcus bacteria. Since that column was published, researchers have identified another type of toxic-shock syndrome caused by toxins produced by streptococcal bacteria.

The signs and symptoms are the same as the staph variety: high fever, renal failure, difficulty breathing, shock and death. However, the strep toxin is less likely to cause the peeling rash characteristic of staph toxic shock. Although antibiotics are the treatment of choice, the mortality for toxic strep approaches 30 percent.

Activist to move from 'toxic' town

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — Rita Carlson, the homemaker-turned-activist whose "toxic tours" irked industrialists in this chemically-dependent economy, says she has decided to move her family to a healthier neighborhood.

Mrs. Carlson, who led the fight against hazardous chemicals and questioned environmental safety precautions, said she plans to move to Illinois later this year.

"I've been told I'm too blunt, but that's the only way I know how to do things," said Mrs. Carlson, 36, who has been at the forefront of controversy for three years after she began voicing her skepticism of chemical industrialists in this town of 40,000.

"I look at it the same way I take care of a problem in my house: Let's fix it," Mrs. Carlson said. "I've been saying from the beginning that (industry believes) human life is at the bottom of the barrel and the buck is at the top."

Although she believed a tumor in her sinus cavity and numerous kidney problems have been related to environmental toxins, Mrs. Carlson said she and her husband finally decided to leave her hometown when their sons — Jason, 16, and Morgan, 13 — began developing problems with their lymph glands.

The family plans to move to Michael Carlson's hometown of Galesburg, Ill., by July or as soon as they can sell their home of 16 years that is located in the shadow of the Amoco refinery.

"What I look forward to the most is waking up in the morning with my windows open and the curtains blowing in the breeze with no pollution," Mrs. Carlson said.

Hispanic...

Women warned about spouse abuse

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Hispanic culture teaches women to submit to their husbands' will, but that makes them easy targets for abuse, says a specialist on the subject.

While the problem is universal, it can be especially hard for Hispanic women, says Norma Martinez Adkins of the Women's Haven of Tarrant County.

"Often a Hispanic woman can't go back to her parents' home because she is told that 'you shouldn't have talked back to him,'" said Ms. Adkins, who is a community resource specialist at the women's shelter.

She directed a one-hour workshop on Saturday for the Hispanic Women's Network of Texas, a self-improvement and advocacy group.

Ms. Adkins gave a list of warning signs that could alert women that they are dating a potential abuser.

They included a person being very jealous; frequent phone calls to "check up" on the woman; a person being very suspicious; a person having a very short temper.

Ms. Adkins said domestic violence follows a cycle with an abuser winning a woman over with charm, then getting her to depend on him before the violent episodes begin. Afterward, the abuser says he's sorry and that it won't happen again.

"The cycle starts out real big, then it gets smaller, to the point that the abuse is happening every single day," Ms. Adkins said. "It's difficult for a person who planned 50,000-ton hazardous waste incinerator in Texas City.

Later she harshly criticized the way local leaders and the Marathon Petroleum Co. responded to the Oct. 30, 1987, spill of hydrofluoric acid that sent a toxic cloud over the city and more than 1,000 people to area hospitals.

In response, Mrs. Carlson and other citizens founded the Galveston County Environmental Division, which pressed for a health study on continuing problems from the Marathon spill.

She has protested, alerted media, played host to out-of-town inspectors, and given "toxic tours" of Texas City.

"Every community needs a Rita Carlson in it, someone who's on top of the environment," said state Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-La Criss, who sponsored a Legislative honor for her award.

hasn't walked in those shoes to understand."

Women's shelters try to intercede by offering women a safe place to stay and help them start establishing independence, Ms. Adkins said.

She said a battered woman will go to a shelter seven times before deciding to leave her husband for good, according to national statistics. The figures also show that only 1 to 2 percent of the abusive spouses who go to counseling change, she said.

Candidate who switched parties should return all funds collected, official says

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Tarrant County District Attorney says he is willing to return any money he raised as a Democrat last year before switching parties, but maintains his support is bipartisan and doubts his contributors will demand a refund.

Tim Curry received $31,700 in campaign donations during the six-month period ending Dec. 31, according to his latest contributions and expenditures report.

All but $3,200 of that was received before Curry announced

Oct. 28 that he was switching to the Republican Party, prompting county Democratic Party chairman Dennis Sheehan to ask that he give the money back. "He collected that money as a Democrat and he ought to return it," Sheehan said.

Curry said he's willing to return any of his contributors' money if they ask.

"A good bit of that money was Republican and always has been," said Curry, who has served 17 years and won re-election four times as a Democrat.

Labor...

Endorsement decision due

AUSTIN (AP) — Delegates representing the 215,000 men and women of Texas organized labor will gather in Austin this week with the goal of deciding on whom, if anybody, to support in the primary elections.

And questions of political debts and moral obligations will weigh heavily on the delegates as a possibly bitter battle brews between supporters of state Treasurer Ann Richards and Attorney General Jim Mattox over the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education's endorsement in the March 13 Democratic gubernatorial primary.

An endorsement throws the full backing of labor to a candidate, including financial contributions and campaign workers. The outcome could play a major role in the results of the primary, and it could determine whether labor is united for a fall campaign against the Republicans.

Jack Golden of the United Steelworkers of America in Houston said many union members respect Ms. Richards and like her stands on the issues. But he said he supports Mattox.

"I don't think we owe something to Jim Mattox. But Jim Mattox has a record we can look at and know his ideas and our ideas are very similar," Golden told the Houston Chronicle. "If a politician has supported labor in the past and he doesn't get labor's support, he might have reason to wonder why he should support labor in the future."

Unions like the Teamsters and the Steelworkers already have thrown their support to Mattox. But AFL-CIO President Joe Gunn said many others — such as the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Communications Workers of America — are split over whether to support Mattox or Richards in the primary, with a few holding out for former Gov. Mark White.

White did not get the COPE primary election endorsement in 1982, the year he won the governor's office. White had labor's support in the 1982 general election, but labor gave him only lukewarm support in 1986 when he lost.
