

School finance law may be upheld for initial year at least

AP) — A state judge said at a trial challenging the state's new education reform package today he probably will allow it to take effect for the coming school year.

State District Judge Scott McCown said that even if he ultimately decides the new law is unconstitutional, it might be disruptive for school districts to immediately halt its implementation.

"Courts just aren't designed to move that fast, and we don't want a school year in chaos," McCown said.

McCown said he hoped to make a decision on whether the new law is constitutional by Sept. 1. He said the trial probably will take two weeks.

Attorneys for poor school districts and the state gave opening statements today in the battle over ways to divvy up tax money for public schools.

The school districts are challenging the education reform package lawmakers approved last month in response to a unanimous Texas Supreme Court order for change.

The package adds $528 million to state school funding for the 1990-91 school year. The money is being raised through tax increases including a quarter-cent sales tax boost.

The plan is meant to even out funding differences between rich and poor school districts over several years.

Poor school districts say it doesn't go far enough in changing the $13.5 billion-a-year finance system, which relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

The 68 poor schools contend the Legislature's new plan is unconstitutional (see FINANCE, page 8)

Commissioners ok voting box judges for one-year term

Scurry County commissioners court this morning unanimously approved election box judges beginning Aug. 1 for a one-year term.

Selection of voting box judges and alternate judges was the only item on the court agenda, but County Judge Bobby Goodwin reminded the court of a public hearing set for 5:15 p.m. Thursday in the Scurry County Courthouse.

Purpose of the public hearing is to receive citizens' comment concerning a proposed application for a $250,000 grant from the Texas Community Development Program.

Upgrading of the Hermleigh water system has been identified as the priority project for use of the funds. A public hearing held in Hermleigh last week was attended by about 50 Hermleigh residents.

Prison board meets Tuesday

Four sites for new state prisons will be selected Tuesday in an Austin meeting of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. in the Senate Chambers.

Three West Texas communities — including Lamesa — remain on the short list of eight towns. A delegation from Snyder will attend the meeting and will speak on behalf of the Dawson County application.

Also still on the list for three 1,000-bed and one 2,250-bed units are Pampa and Trans-Pecos which includes a joint effort of Monahans, Fort Stockton and Pecos.

Other finalists include Angelina County (Lufkin), Bell County (Killeen), Hondo, Jasper and Polk County (Livingston).

Big Spring, Stamford and Eastland were eliminated last week.

WTC board to discuss bids; ok hiring assistant professor

Western Texas College trustees will consider bids on two vehicles and a coolant recovery system, and are expected to approve the hiring of an agriculture instructor during a 5:45 p.m. board meeting today.

The board had been scheduled to hold a public hearing on the 1990-91 budget this evening, but that has been postponed.

The only other items on the agenda include establishing an English proficiency program for the faculty as required by the state, a report on the apparent deterioration of a portion of the heating and cooling system and minutes of past information and the June financial report.

Trustees are expected to approve a recommendation to hire David Kattes as an assistant professor of agriculture. Kattes, who holds a master's degree from Texas A&M, would be involved in the college's agriculture program and landscape program, and would begin his duties with the fall semester.

The board will consider a bid of $4,850 for a coolant recovery and recycling system. Trustees were informed in an earlier meeting that the system will result in substantial savings to the college.

Other bids before trustees include (see COLLEGE, page 8)

Summit convenes...

Western leaders eye economic shifts

HOUSTON (AP) — Leaders of the world's richest nations gathered today for discussions on how to bolster the fast-changing economies of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. Diplomatic sources said the summit nations hoped to dispatch a team of experts to assess Soviet needs.

"Welcome to the travelers," President Bush enthused as meetings began in his adopted hometown. The leaders opened their talks divided over how to provide financial help to Mikhail Gorbachev. Sources, on condition of anonymity, said the assessment team would identify priority projects for western assistance.

The United States opposes direct aid to Moscow — for now, at least — but Bush has decided to offer the Soviets technical assistance in distributing food more evenly throughout the country, officials said.

Soviet aid questions were a highly charged and undecided issue as the three-day summit began. The leaders were weighing whether to authorize individual countries to go their own way in providing assistance to Gorbachev. Decisions were likely to come Wednesday in a final communiqué.

From Moscow came a fresh plea for financial assistance. Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told reporters at the Communist Party Congress, "I feel it would be advantageous for us and the West." He said Moscow was looking to the west for "credit, technical cooperation, personnel training, joint ventures and joint projects."

Before calling the summit into session on the campus of Rice University, Bush arranged to meet separately with two leaders who are pushing a $15-billion aid package for Moscow: Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany and President Francois Mitterrand of France.

Q—How many fires were related to fireworks last week?

A—According to Fire Chief Terry Don McDowell, only eight or 10 were connected to fireworks. McDowell also noted that the number of calls were down considerably this holiday.

In Brief

Summit poll

HOUSTON (AP) — Americans' views of the Soviet Union and leader Mikhail Gorbachev are positive, but they strongly oppose providing them with financial assistance, according to a newspaper poll published today.

Walter Nash Abbott, 21, was being held in the Harris County Jail on $90,000 bond Monday after his arrest for allegedly setting a trash container on fire, authorities said.

Polygraphs

UNIVERSITY PARK, Texas (AP) — Police officers in this affluent Dallas community have been ordered to undergo polygraph tests after news reports revealed an internal investigation is under way, several officers said.

At least six University Park employees have undergone tests to determine who contacted reporters about the investigation concerning narcotics officers, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Several officers said they were warned they would be fired or reprimanded if they refused to be tested.

Over S&L crisis...

Some unlucky legislators are caught up in political sniping

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic Rep. James McClure Clarke is being cast by the Republican Party as one of "the worst violators of the public trust" in the savings and loan crisis.

Why? The North Carolina lawmaker voted last year to let the industry continue investing in junk bonds. So did 113 other House members, none of whom were criticized for that on the GOP hit list.

Clarke is one of the politicians caught in the crossfire as Democrats develop the theme they hope to ride to the White House in 1992, and Republicans respond with fusillades of their own.

The result is a spotlight on a handful of House members facing the voters this fall. And some of them aren't too happy about the escalating party rhetoric.

"Making a political football of it is not going to solve the problem," said Rep. Charles Pashayan, R-Calif. His Democratic challenger consulted with party strategists in Washington and came out swinging on S&Ls.

"Frankly, from my standpoint, there is enough blame to go around to everybody," said Rep. Doug Barnard of Georgia, one of the Democrats on the GOP list.

Both parties acknowledge a few members of Congress are vulnerable on S&Ls. But the Democrats aren't about to soft-pedal a promising national strategy and the Republicans can't take the assault lying down.

"To me this is apples and oranges," said Democratic Party Chairman Ronald Brown. "On the one hand, you have accusations against individuals. On the other, you have the question of whose policies allowed this mess to happen. And there is no doubt in my mind that this happened because of Republican economic policies."

The Democrats, though taking a broad-brush approach, are not ignoring individual Republicans with S&L problems. Pashayan is one example.

The Fresno congressman took $26,000 in contributions from former S&L operator Charles Keating and his friends, then tried to block restrictions on risky thrift investments. Pashayan said his actions were not influenced by the contribution, but he returned the money.

The national GOP strategy has been to defend President Bush's handling of the $300 billion-plus bailout and, when provoked, point fingers at Congress and individual Democrats.

The Republican National Committee hastily compiled its list of 10 alleged "violators of the public trust" after learning that Brown was launching an S&L offensive at a June 29-30 meeting of state party chairmen.

Among those named were the four Democrats among the Keating Five — senators under investigation for accepting hundreds of thousands of dollars from Keating and his S&L associates, then allegedly lobbying regulators to keep his failing S&L open. None of the five is up for re-election this year.

The GOP case against Barnard and Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., both Keating beneficiaries and heads of subcommittees dealing with S&Ls, is that they protected the industry while the crisis was developing. Both deny it.

Rep. Steve Neal, D-N.C., made the list for sponsoring a 1987 amendment that Republicans claimed was too nice to S&Ls. He disputes the interpretation and says he's targeted because his re-election races are always tough.

"They're going to try this stuff to confuse the issue and pass the buck, but ultimately they cannot do it, because it was their main philosophy," said Neal, another banking subcommittee caarman. Neal's Republican opponent didn't raise the S&L issue until the GOP list appeared. But Neal says the Democrats should stay on the offensive — even if he gets hit by a stray shot.

Clarke, who is not involved with banking policy, appeared to be on the S&L list because he won his last race by just 1,529 votes.

"We were automatically destined for the Republican hit list and always have been. So they fished around for this S&L-related thing," said Terry Garren, Clarke's administrative assistant.

Prisoner captured after holding seven hostages

BRAZORIA, Texas (AP) — A Texas prison inmate was back behind bars Sunday after escaping and taking seven people hostage, officials said.

Alonzo Campbell, who scurried over a fence from the Clemens Unit on July 4, was recaptured at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at a Brazoria home where he held a family of six and a sheriff's deputy hostage for nearly an hour, said David Nunnelee, spokesman for the Texas prison system.

Campbell emerged from woods near the Clemens Unit early Saturday morning, about 4 1/2 miles from the prison on County Road 400, Nunnelee said.

Campbell allegedly burglarized a barn, taking a shotgun, a rifle and some food items, then hid in some bushes around the house, Nunnelee said.

The resident called police and prison officials about the burglary.

In the meantime, other relatives arrived at the home and as they entered, Campbell allegedly busted through the door with the two rifles drawn, Nunnelee said.

nelee said.

When Brazoria County Deputy Sheriff Ronnie Eaton arrived to investigate the burglary, residents "under some duress" told him through the door that they had not reported a burglary, Nunnelee said. But when Eaton asked to use the phone to call his department, he, too, was taken hostage.

"Campbell instructed one of the relatives to take the officer's service revolver and they were all ordered to lay on the floor," Nunnelee said.

Clemens Unit Warden David Moya then arrived with officers and search dogs.

"As the warden walked up to the residence, the inmate recognized him and he gave it up," Nunnelee said.

Campbell, who had been serving a 45-year sentence for aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon in Harris County in 1986, has been charged with attempted capital murder, burglary of a habitation, aggravated kidnapping and felony escape, Nunnelee said.

Get the facts about osteoporosis

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 72-year-old female with compression fractures of the spine due to osteoporosis. My orthopedic physician tells me neither calcium nor hormones will do me any good, yet I recently read about a study at the Texas Southwestern Medical Center, where the combination of oral fluoride and calcium caused bone densities to increase as much as 6 percent a year, and compression fractures were almost totally prevented. Are these drugs available on the market, and what's your opinion of the study?

DEAR READER: To a degree, the treatment of osteoporosis is currently in a state of some confusion. Certain facts are clear: The loss of bone calcium begins in middle age and accelerates in elderly men and women; menopause worsens this calcium loss; by the time fractures appear, the optimal period for treatment has passed; young people whose bones are strong and well-calcified have fewer problems with osteoporosis as they age; and poorly understood genetic factors play an important role in determining the degree of osteoporosis.

In addition, regular exercise, adequate calcium intake (1,500 to 2,000 milligrams of dietary calcium daily) and estrogen play an important role in preventing bone-calcium loss. Aside from major fractures of the hip, the most common manifestation of osteoporosis in elderly people are crush fractures of the spinal bones. Thus, patients with compression fractures of the spine (and other consequences of osteoporosis) are usually treated with exercise programs, calcium/vitamin D supplements and hormones, to relieve pain and help prevent progression.

In severe cases, calcitonin (Calcimar, a synthetic hormone derived from salmon) appears to inhibit bone loss. This prescription drug is administered in daily injections. It reduces pain and stimulates bone formation, but it causes nausea and skin rashes.

The initial enthusiasm for fluoride as osteoporotic patients. However, more recent reports have cast doubt on the effectiveness of this treatment, and many specialists no longer advocate its use.

Therefore, in answer to your question about the use of fluoride/calcium combinations, the final word is not yet in.

I suggest you seek a consultation with an endocrinologist, a doctor who specializes in diseases of gland and bone metabolism. This specialist will examine you and obtain tests, such as a bone density, to assess the degree of bone calcification. Then, armed with information about your specific case, the doctor will advise you whether calcium, fluoride, hormone and/or calcitonin treatment would be appropriate.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Osteoporosis." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Navy Ship-to-Shore Romance Launches Couple's Marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1990 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: As my wedding day approaches, it occurs to me that I never did thank you, because if it hadn't been for Operation Dear Abby IV, I never would have met Michael.

I had sent Christmas cards with a cheery note to each of the addresses you published in 1988. Michael, who was aboard the USS Nimitz, deployed in the Indian Ocean, received my card, and he wrote to thank me. There was something special about his "thank you," so I, in turn, responded. We exchanged pictures, and a friendship blossomed.

After several months of corresponding, Michael returned to San Diego and called me — in Michigan. After several more phone calls, the bond between us became stronger. Last July, Michael came to visit me — and he stayed for 10 days. Just before he left, he proposed to me.

Our wedding day is fast approaching. (It's July 14, and the one-year anniversary of the day we met.)

Again, I want to express my deepest gratitude to you and your Operation Dear Abby campaign, which has brought so much fun and joy to the men and women who are far from home serving their country. I'm looking forward to signing my name, "Mrs. Michael Rowcliffe." However, for now, sign me ...

LINDA CHRISTENSEN

DEAR LINDA: Your letter made my day. My heartfelt congratulations to you and Michael. May you have many happy, healthy years together.

***

DEAR ABBY: To the man who hesitated to make a blind date over the phone: I've made several; two were memorable.

I managed a marine electronics service organization. The telephone operator of one large company had a cute "little girl" voice. I finally asked her for a lunch date.

We were both surprised. She was a 4-foot-11 Japanese girl — age 25. Me, a 40-year-old, 6-foot-2 Scandinavian. Seated at lunch, our height difference was not very noticeable. We had a delightful conversation about our origins and the shipping business. It made our subsequent phone conversations more personal.

Then, I was a cost supervisor on a Titan missile silo wiring project at Vandenberg Air Force Base. We did business with a steel company in Los Angeles, 200 miles away. My company was slow in paying its bills.

I was entranced by the young woman who called us regularly to prod us for payment. One time, I bet her a dinner that "the check was in the mail." She accepted the bet — with a disbelieving snort. Well, she won, so I made the four-hour drive to take her to dinner on a Saturday night.

When she opened the door, I was faced with a stunning 5-foot-10, red-haired beauty, wearing a turquoise dress that amply displayed her superb figure. Over dinner, I found her to be a charming woman with a great sense of humor. When I took her home, she shook hands good night. I didn't want to jeopardize my chances for another date.

On the second date, I kissed her and she melted in my arms, but said, "Don't rush me." On our third date, when I kissed her good night, she whispered, "You don't have to leave." That was the beginning of a two-year romance that ended in marriage. We were married for 19 wonderful years — then I lost her to cancer a few years ago.

So, to the man who hesitated to make a blind date over the phone — don't hesitate, fellow. You never know! Sign me ...

Wants to move

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hockey superstar Wayne Gretzky may be one of the fastest men on ice, but apparently he gets stuck in traffic like everybody else, so he's looking to move closer to work.

Gretzky has put his Encino-area estate on the market for $3.25 million and is looking for a place closer to the Great Western Forum, which is a dozen miles away in Inglewood.

"He wants to move closer to where he practices," said Asher Dann, who has the listing on Gretzky's home.

The arena is home to Gretzky's Los Angeles Kings. "The Great One" has lived in the house since joining the team two years ago.

The home was built in 1939 and once was owned by Oscar-winning actress Teresa Wright. The 7,000-square-foot main house has six bedrooms and five bathrooms.

Confederate museum relocates to Waco

WACO, Texas (AP) — The Texas Confederate Museum is moving to Waco after being asked to vacate its 100-year location in Austin by state officials.

The decision to move the museum came last fall after the state asked members of the Texas Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy to move out of the 132-year-old General Land Office on the Capitol grounds. Workers are restoring the land office building the next two years.

The Confederate Museum is a collection of artifacts such as books, letters and original battle flags valued at more than $2 million.

The museum's new home is slightly smaller. Volunteers will work with part of the collection of Confederate memorabilia in two rooms, a library and an office. UDC members will rotate exhibits, keeping many artifacts in storage while others are displayed.

"I cried on the way from Austin this morning while following the moving van," Edith Williams, president of the 3,800-member UDC, said Saturday.

"I cried because the museum was in Austin for over 100 years," she said, "and it was sad to see it move. But it feels good, too, because here we'll have the proper facilities, like climate control."

The museum will open Saturday in new facilities at the Helen Marie Taylor Museum Complex.

The grand reopening weekend program includes a Confederate re-enactment camp, a dinner and a golf tournament. The museum will open for a preview on Sunday.

Pete Simmon, secretary-treasurer of the Taylor Museum board, said the Confederate Museum is a welcome addition to the larger museum, depicting a part of Waco's past.

Ms. Williams said Waco's atmosphere adds to the museum, saying it seemed "more Southern" than other Texas cities UDC members considered.

New bride is slain

DALLAS (AP) — A woman was shot to death when she answered the door at the apartment she shared with her husband of two days, authorities said.

Carolyn Douglas, 39, was found outside the apartment Friday afternoon, police said. A friend said she went to the door and was shot. The friend found her clutching her throat and suffering from a gunshot wound. She died an hour later at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas.

Marie Douglas, 53, of suburban DeSoto, was being held Sunday in the Lew Sterrett Justice Center in Dallas in lieu of $50,000 bail.

Officers said Carolyn Douglas married Jack Douglas on July 4 in New Orleans. Jack Douglas and Marie Douglas were divorced last winter, friends said.

Dallas homicide detective Scott Hamilton said it took three hours, a police tactical squad and several canisters of tear gas to force Marie Douglas to surrender after she was found at her home in DeSoto Friday night.

Hamilton said the slaying was "just a jealousy deal."

Irving man fatally shot

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A 39-year-old Irving man was fatally shot after he tried to foil a robbery attempt.

Police said Leonard Hernandez Garcia was standing in the parking lot of his apartment complex with four male relatives when the group was approached by two men about midnight Saturday.

The men, armed with a handgun and a shotgun, demanded money from Garcia and his relatives, said Irving police detective Doug Shelley.

When the men didn't immediately comply, the man with the handgun fired a shot into the air. The other man then took more than $200 from Garcia's nephew.

Garcia then lunged for the man with the handgun and started struggling with him.

Police said the man armed with a shotgun then ran up to Garcia and fired at close range, hitting him in the chest.

None of Garcia's relatives were injured.

Both armed men then fled on foot, firing several shots back toward the group to discourage pursuit.

"It's just another example of a senseless death," Shelley said.

"He had a family, and now they don't have him anymore."

Garcia was working as a painter in Dallas while his wife and family stayed in Mexico.

Police had no suspects in the slaying.

New York City Mayor James J. "Gentleman Jimmy" Walker resigned in 1932, following charges of graft and corruption in his administration.

Make the defense airtight

By James Jacoby

A declarer plans ahead to get the required number of tricks for his contract. A defender also must plan ahead, although his object is to get tricks to set the contract.

Today's East was guilty of a common bridge crime — he didn't think ahead, and thus played too fast. He won the ace of diamonds and led one back for West to ruff. West then returned a low heart. South now had a choice of plays. He could play low, hoping that West held the king of hearts. Or he could rise with dummy's heart ace, come to his hand with the ace of clubs, and then hope that West held the spade king.

Declarer guessed wrong by playing West for the spade king. When declarer took the losing trump finesse, East led back a heart, and the king was the setting trick.

This time East did not have to pay for his bad defense. After the opening lead, East can see that the diamond ruff can wait. What is important is that the defenders develop a positional trick in a side-suit. West will need either the club ace or the heart king. The club ace can wait if West holds that card, but if he has the king of hearts, the suit must be attacked immediately. So East should play back the jack of hearts. East can later give West a diamond ruff, but the play of a heart at trick two is crucial to setting the contract with airtight defense.

Local TKD pupils place in nationals

FT. WORTH — Jennifer Kime and Jessica Brooks, both of Snyder, became the fifth and sixth members of the West Texas team to claim a medal during competition at the 10th U.S. National Junior Olympic Taekwondo Championships held at Tarrant County Convention Center here.

Kime earned a gold medal Saturday for her first place performance in free-sparring as a middle weight green belt in the 13-16 age division and Brooks took third as a red belt welter weight.

They join teammates Shane West, Debra Radican, Debbie Foster and Greg McAnaw as medal winners from the 14-man team consisting of students of West Texas TKD Academy in Snyder.

West took third place in fighting in his 6-12 year-old bantam weight black belt section while Radican earned a third place bronze medal among 6-12 year-old green belt bantam weights and McAnaw, a red belt bantam weight in the same age class, took third, also.

Foster nabbed a silver medal in competition with other 6-12 year-old fly weights with green belts.

West, Radican, McAnaw and Foster all earned their medals during Thursday fights.

"We did very well," said team instructor Greg Gafford.

"All the kids did as well as they could."

"It was one of the best tournaments I've ever been involved with," he concluded.

Germany claims World Cup

ROME (AP) — Franz Beckenbauer took West Germany from the depths of depression to the soccer summit. He's leaving the game at the top, and with a warning.

"We are the champions now," Beckenbauer said Sunday night after leading West Germany to its third World Cup title with a 1-0 victory over defending champion Argentina. "You can presume that we will have a broader choice of players. I think a (united) German team will be unbeatable. I'm sorry, folks."

Beckenbauer and his team have nothing to be sorry for — they were the best in the field. After two straight runner-up finishes, the Germans emphatically put their mark on a tournament beset by overly conservative tactics and too much fouling.

That's how Argentina played in the final, in which Pedro Monzon and Gustavo Dezotti became the first players to be ejected from a World Cup final. The Argentines had one shot on net, they hardly ever ventured forward and their worst foul gave the Germans a penalty kick with six minutes to go.

Andreas Brehme took it after Rudi Voeller was brought down in the penalty area by Roberto Sensini. He put it in, sparking minor celebrations.

The big festivities came a few moments later as West Germany became the third country with three world soccer championships. Brazil and Italy also have done it.

"We knew we were the best," said Beckenbauer, the first man to captain and coach a World Cup winner; he led the Germans to the 1974 championship as a player.

Beckenbauer says he now is retired from coaching.

"There is nothing more you could win," said the man who took charge of the German program in 1974 after the team was eliminated in the first round of the European championships.

This World Cup was a showcase for the Germans' speed, savvy and power. Only in the semifinal against England, which went to a penalty kick shootout, did they falter.

Against Argentina, they set the tone at the beginning and never stopped. The goal was well-earned, although the Argentines screamed long and loud about it — on the field and off.

"Our players ran hard, but then came this man (the referee) who ruined everything for us," captain Diego Maradona said of referee Edgardo Codesal of Mexico. "This man was scared that we would get to penalties (in a shootout)."

"He wanted to make the Italian people happy," after Argentina eliminated Italy in the semifinals. "The black hand of this man expelled (Pedro) Monzon for a normal action and later he called a penalty against us from his imagination."

What the Argentines did at the final whistle was almost beyond imagination.

The players surrounded Codesal at the center of the field and angrily disputed the penalty against Sensini.

Argentina coach Carlos Bilardo rushed onto the field and had to pull his players away from the referee, one by one.

"I don't express opinions on refs, I don't choose them, FIFA chooses them," said Bilardo, who also is retiring. "Argentina in no way asks for any refs and I don't comment on them."

It was the Germans who made the most profound statement in the most foul-plagued World Cup ever. A total of 170 yellow cards and 16 red cards were handed out.

Snyder golfers David Sharrock and John Medicott fired an eagle in Sunday's one-hole playoff to claim a one-stroke win in Championship Flight play over the team of Wade Hatter and Lance Jones in Snyder Country Club's annual Golfer's Memorial Partnership.

The weekend tournament attracted a field of 60 teams according to club pro Rick Mammolite with over a third of the entries being from out of town.

"What more could you ask for," said Mammolite. "A full field and a playoff to decide the championship."

"This is great!" Medicott and Sharrock fired a 69 in Saturday's low-ball format and improved to 61 in Sunday's scramble.

Hatter and Jones, who wound up in second place took twin 65s to get their 130 tally at the end of regulation play.

Randy Crockett and Byron Harris carded a 68 in the first round and trimmed down to a 63 on Sunday for third place in the flight.

Other winners included the Jack Womack-J.R. # Wadkins sets mark for PGA event title

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins won the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic by showing he can shoot a record low score — and handle a potential round-wrecking double-bogey.

Wadkins shot a 3-under-par 68 in Sunday's final round to finish four trips around the Kingsmill Golf Club course in 266, 18 under par and five shots better than runner-up Larry Mize.

Wadkins' total was one shot better than the tournament record set by Ronnie Black in 1984 and matched by Mark McCumber in 1987.

But his final round included a double-bogey 6 on the eighth hole that opened the door for an impressive list of challengers.

"I felt it was important for me to come back and at least par nine and birdie 10," Wadkins said, "because it would let the other guys in front of me know I wasn't going to go completely south."

Wadkins made good on his plans to par the 452-yard ninth, a difficult birdie hole, and he sank a 12-foot birdie putt on the par-4 10th to push his lead back up to three strokes.

No one got closer the rest of the way on the 6,790-yard layout, giving Wadkins career victory No. 19 and a first-place check for $180,000.

The victory was Wadkins' first since the Colonial in May 1988.

Wadkins started the day three shots ahead of Curtis Strange, a fellow Virginia native who was paired with him in the final two-hole.

Wadkins' closing 68 followed earlier rounds of 65, 66 and 67.

Becker's furious comeback thwarted by Stefan Edberg

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Stefan Edberg seems almost an afterthought at Wimbledon. He lacks the macho appeal of Boris Becker or the paths of an obsessed Ivan Lendl. He isn't controversial or confrontational. His desire resides within, not to be flouted before the Centre Court crowd.

All he does is win. "I think I'm quite a calm person," he said after defeating Becker in Sunday's final to claim his second men's title in three years. "I play my best tennis when I keep straight and don't get too irritated."

The forgotten man of tennis even stymied a British tabloid reporter digging for a sexy angle on the newly crowned champion. Asked if he would marry his longtime girlfriend, Edberg replied, "Perhaps, perhaps not."

Edberg's 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 3-6, 6-4 triumph over Becker came one day after Martina Navratilova defeated Zina Garrison in the women's final for a record ninth Wimbledon singles title.

Edberg rolled calmly through the tournament, knocking off opponents while attention was focused on Becker and Lendl.

When the 24-year-old Swede defeated Lendl in straight sets in the semifinals, the spotlight was on Lendl's misery at failing again to win the tournament — not on Edberg's joy.

Edberg's victory Sunday, which he celebrated by slamming a ball high into the stands and tossing two shirts into the crowd, moved him past Becker into the No. 2 ranking worldwide and edged him closer to top-ranked Lendl.

"I know this number one spot is within reach now and that's something to look forward to," he said after winning Sunday's battle of serve-and-volley experts.

Becker, a three-time Wimbledon winner whose only previous loss in 22 trips to Centre Court was in the 1988 final to Edberg, said the Swede's consistency makes him a winner.

"He is a player who tries all the time. He never really lets himself down and that's what makes him so difficult to play," Becker said.

Edberg kept Becker off balance throughout the opening two sets by mixing crisp volleys, delicate lobs and sharp passing shots. The West German powered his way back into the match in the third and fourth sets.

On a court becoming slick enough almost to entice Olympic ice skating champion Katarina Witt from the stands, where the East German sports hero sat in the Becker guest box, the players held serve until the ninth game of the final set.

Edberg then finished off a service break with a feather-like lob and served out the match for his fourth Grand Slam title.

Louisiana lawmakers fashion new anti-abortion legislation

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — After failing to override the governor's veto of a stronger anti-abortion bill, the Legislature passed a measure that would ban most abortions and punish doctors who perform them with up to 10 years at hard labor.

The law, which includes exceptions demanded by Gov. Buddy Roemer, still would be the strictest state abortion law in the nation.

"This is the children's hour. Let's vote for the 15,000 unborn children who are murdered in this state every year, for the 200,000 murdered in the nation. The nation is watching us," said Sen. John Saunders, mastermind of the revised legislation.

The bill approved Sunday night bans all abortions except those to end pregnancies that endanger a woman's life and those caused by rape or incest.

The measure is intended to challenge Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision recognizing the right to an abortion.

Roemer had vetoed the Legislature's original bill Friday because it made no exceptions for victims of rape or incest. He said he would not comment on the new bill until he had a chance to read it.

The bill was created by amending a flag-burning measure the Senate had refused to consider, then eliminating the flag-burning provisions, which would have reduced the penalty for beating up a flag burner to a $25 fine. The offense currently is punishable by six months in jail and a $500 fine.

The maneuver, completed 30 hours before the legislative session ends at midnight tonight, enabled the Senate to circumvent the usual process of referring new legislation to a committee.

"I would have preferred a stronger bill, but we don't have the votes for an override," Saunders told his colleagues.

The Senate vote on the bill was 32-7. Less than an hour later, the House approved the measure 83-22.

The House had voted late last week to override the governor's veto of the earlier bill. The Senate on Saturday voted 23-16 to override, three votes short of the needed two-thirds majority.

Both abortion-rights activists and staunch abortion foes criticized the new bill.

"We've just seen the Legislature go from the most restrictive abortion bill in the nation to the most absurd," said Planned Parenthood spokeswoman Terri Bartlett. "The only thing that surpasses it is the mockery of the legislative process. Only in Louisiana could you have a flag-burning bill become an abortion bill."

Rep. Woody Jenkins, the original bill's author, voted against the new version because "the unborn is a human being from the moment of conception and we ought not make exceptions to the principle." The bill carries a penalty of one to 10 years in prison and $10,000 to $100,000 in fines for doctors who perform abortions. It would not penalize women who get abortions.

In the House, Rep. C.R. Jones urged colleagues to reject the bill, pleading with them to resist the intense lobbying by fundamentalist Christian groups and Roman Catholics.

"I'm concerned that religious groups have taken over in Louisiana, the South, maybe this nation," Jones said. Pennsylvania has the strictest state abortion law, but it is less restrictive than the Louisiana bill.

The Pennsylvania measure, approved in November, bans abortions based on the fetus' sex and bans abortions after the 24th week of pregnancy except to save the life of the mother or prevent "substantial and irreversible harm."

A doctor convicted under the sex-selection ban or the 24-week provision could be punished with up to seven years in prison and a $15,000 fine.

Portions of the law have been put on hold by a state appeals court.

An even stricter abortion bill was passed in the U.S. territory of Guam. But it has been blocked for now by court challenges.

That law prohibits any abortion except to save the life of the pregnant woman and makes it a felony to perform an abortion and a misdemeanor to have one.

Probe continues into blast at plant

CHANNELVIEW, Texas (AP) — About 150 employees were to return today to the ARCO Chemical Co. plant where 17 workers died last week in an explosion and fire.

"We'll just bring some administrators in. Other employees will be out until a judgment is made about the safety at the plant and we will continue to pay their salaries and try to keep them informed about what's happening in the plant," said Gerald Davis, ARCO Chemical spokesman.

The plant will be brought back into operation in phases that could span several months, Davis said.

Company officials and representatives from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration toured the crumbled remains of a block-long area of the 564-acre chemical plant on Sunday.

Seventeen workers from ARCO and contractors Austin Industrial Inc. and Waste Processors Industries Inc. were killed Thursday night when a wastewater tank exploded in a fireball. Investigators have been unable to determine the cause of the blast.

Company officials have released the name of the last unidentified victim as Ernest Duffy, 27, an ARCO employee from Crosby.

In addition ARCO confirmed that four other victims had been identified as: Alfred J. Martinez, 31, of Deer Park; Roy Shipp, 40, of Crosby; Steven Mendel, 20, of Channelview; and Kenneth Land, 39, of Anahuac. All four worked for Austin Industrial Inc.

A Houston attorney said he planned to file a wrongful death lawsuit today on behalf of a relative who was killed in the blast.

"A week before this thing happened, he was thinking about quitting that place," attorney James Stafford said of ARCO employee John Blackstock. "He had gone to his supervisor and told him that he thought that treatment area was unsafe. He said if they didn't correct it he would quit."

Blackstock, 25, a senior operator, was killed while working at the plant.

Sandra Lucas Davis became the first survivor to file a wrongful death lawsuit against ARCO Chemical on Friday in connection with the death of her husband, Gregory Scott Davis, 27.

The widow of a millwright killed Thursday said her husband called her a half hour before the plant blew up, saying workers restarting equipment there were afraid it might explode.

Lori Davis, no relation to Sandra Davis, said her husband, Michael Davis, said they were afraid to restart a compressor that they had fixed.

"They thought it might blow," Lori Davis said.

Michael Davis, 24, had been working with Austin Industrial Western Texas College currently does not have any non-English speaking faculty members.

College officials have postponed the public hearing on the budget until final figures are received from the Scurry County Appraisal District office.

The public hearing date has now been rescheduled for the Aug. 13 board meeting. A special meeting has been set for Aug. 20 to adopt the tax rate.

Trustees last month approved the current fund budget for 1990-91 in the amount of $6,065,851, and okayed a tax rate of .1841 cents per $100 in valuation. Estimated tax revenue at .1841 cents is $1.9 million.

The budget includes a three percent cost of living raise and a one percent merit raise for faculty and staff.

Trustees also approved two other budgets for 1990-91 — the student housing system fund budget of $625,272, and the student services fee fund of $42,012.

2 Live Crew perform in Austin without incident

DALLAS (AP) — The controversial rap group 2 Live Crew took the stage for two uneventful shows in Austin Sunday night, the day after their failure to perform sparked a fan riot in Dallas.

There were no such problems in Austin Sunday, though protesters picketed the club where the group was performing.

During the first of two Austin shows Sunday, band leader Luther Campbell asked the sparse, mostly-male crowd to deliver an obscene message to the protesters after the show.

Band members also drove by the club in a van and mooned the protesters.

The band's problems in Dallas began when the appearance was canceled after a dispute with the show's promoters.

The canceled show triggered a brawl by fans that injured two newspaper photographers and a reporter. No arrests were reported.

The rappers, whose album "As Nasty As They Wanna Be" has been ruled obscene by a Florida judge and banned in San Antonio, refused to play Saturday night at the Longhorn Ballroom after a promoter refused to pay them in advance.

Finance

Clements and other state leaders have said they believe the system will pass muster with the court.

"I don't have any way to know what the trial court and ultimately the Supreme Court will rule," said state Education Commissioner Bill Kirby. "But I'm confident that the state made a good-faith effort and made a major commitment."

The state aims to have 95 percent of Texas students in an equalized system by 1995.

"We think that the system is significantly changed," Kirby said.

Assistant Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon said the law provides a way to keep track of increasing education costs so the gap between rich and poor school districts won't widen in future years. The gap increased after past education reform efforts.

3 debuts 'steal' collectors interest

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Nolan Ryan memorabilia, Herschel Walker autographs and unopened 1952 baseball wax packs were hot items at the 11th National Sports Collectors convention.

But the talk of the show was three debuts: Skybox, a new, computer-generated basketball card; Powertrader, which offers collectors a monthly personalized cataloging of their cards; and Action Packed football cards, lacquered and embossed and selling for $2.49 per gold-foil six-pack.

About 530 exhibitors set up shop, displaying cards, stamps, programs, old uniforms, figurines, pennants, souvenirs and other sports items.

Some investors and collectors spent their money on older items. BP Sports Investments had unopened 1952 baseball wax packs. Some sold for $2,500 per pack.

The convention, which ended Sunday, attracted more than 30,000 visitors, said Wanda Marcus of Arlington SportsCards, the show's host.

"The talk of the show is Action Packed," said Prakash Wadhvani, a collector from Bombay, India, who bought 12 boxes from a dealer for $600. "There hasn't ever been anything like them. They stand out. I'm buying them up for investment, and I think a whole lot of others will, too."

Gleck Williams of Collector Systems Inc., which markets the Powertrader, said he had gotten hundreds of inquiries about the Action Packed set.

"They all want to know if it'll be listed next year," Williams said. "I said, 'Heck, yes!' It's the hottest thing here. It's a great card."

Mel Ehrenreich, vice president of Hi-Pro Marketing, which owns Action Packed, said, "Historically the sports trading card market has been flooded with countless look-alike products, players in static poses with photos reproduced on simple pieces of cardboard."

Each Action Packed card, about three times the thickness of other sports cards, features four levels of embossing, giving the cards a unique dimensional look

Hooligans attack

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Celebrations of West Germany's World Cup victory turned deadly today as hooligans attacked police and foreigners, smashed windows and looted stores in both German states.

Police said four people were killed and more than 100 were injured during melees and brawls across the two nations.

Hundreds of thousands of Germans poured into the streets in scores of cities to savor the emotional victory Sunday night, but roving bands of rowdies and neo-Nazi skinheads are blamed for using the celebrations for their violent rampages.

The violence lasted into this morning and widespread vandalism and looting was reported in numerous cities.

In the West German city of Hamburg, about 400 hooligans clashed with police with rocks and bottles. Fifty-four police officers were injured and 88 people were arrested, according to police.

Windows of more than 20 stores were smashed, one bar was destroyed and several police and private autos were damaged by the mob, police said.

Weekend in Snyder quiet

A quiet weekend — with only one arrest and no traffic accidents — was experienced by law enforcement officials in Snyder.

The lone arrest occurred at 11:29 p.m. Saturday in the 1900 Block of 25th St. where a 22-year-old man was arrested and jailed for driving while intoxicated.

At 12:08 p.m. Saturday, Sid Franklin reported that tapes had been stolen from his pickup while parked at Allsup's on College Ave. The theft occurred between 8 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Saturday.

At 10:30 p.m. Saturday, city officers were called to Snyder Lanes where juveniles would not leave when asked.

At 10:54 p.m. Saturday, a subject came to the police department to report an assault, but declined to file charges. At 11:45 p.m., officers responded to a reported fight outside the Smith Recreation Center, but the subjects had already left the area.

A case of criminal mischief was reported at 7:39 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Oaks Motel on 25th St. A soft drink machine had been overturned.

At 5:21 p.m. Sunday, Mike Harrison, manager of the Towle Park pool, reported to police that someone had broken into the office at the pool.

At 10:37 p.m. Sunday, a woman reported that she had been assaulted by her husband, but she refused to file charges.

Studies: familiar aromas stimulate memory

NEW YORK (AP) — The power of an odor to stimulate memory, familiar to anybody who has suddenly thought of a long-lost lover after getting a whiff of perfume or cologne, has proved itself in a research laboratory.

College students who smelled chocolate during a word exercise and again the next day when asked to remember their answers did better than others denied the memory-evoking aroma.

Such an odor-based memory strategy could help students studying for multiple exams or airline pilots training for emergencies, said researcher Frank Schab.

His work provides the first firm scientific evidence that odors can help bring back memories, said Brian Lyman of the Monell Chemical Senses Center in Philadelphia.

Schab, who did the experiments while at Yale University, now does psychological research at the General Motors Research Labs in Warren, Mich. He presents his results in this month's issue of the Journal of Experimental Psychology: Learning, Memory and Cognition.

"People seem to believe from their own experiences that odors are special, in the sense that they can recall very vividly events from 20, 30 years ago," Schab said. Lyman said that unlike sights or sounds, odors are processed through the brain's limbic system, which is involved in emotions. That might help odors bring back memories with emotional overtones, he said.

In one experiment, 72 Yale undergraduates were presented with a list of 40 common adjectives and told to write down the opposite of each word. They were not told that the next day they would be asked to recall as many of the words they had written as they could.

Each student was exposed to a chocolate smell either during the word exercise only, during the later recall test only, on both occasions, or on neither. All students were told to imagine the smell of chocolate on both occasions.

Those who were exposed to the smell of chocolate during the word exercise and again in the recall test recalled an average of 21 percent of the words they had written. That was significantly better than the best average from the other groups, 17 percent.

A follow-up experiment showed that the same odor must be present upon learning and testing to get a memory benefit. No gender differences appeared in the effect.

Schab also found that chocolate and mothball odors worked equally well, suggesting that the pleasantness of a smell does not affect its power to stimulate memory.

Such research has many potential applications, Schab said. Students studying for exams in several subjects simultaneously might benefit from using a different odor for each topic, he said.

And using a particular odor when training pilots to handle an emergency, and again when that emergency occurs, might "bring back a lot of information about how to do things, what to do next, what to look for," Schab suggested.

The experimental results fit a hypothesis, widely accepted by psychologists, that some details about the environment in which a person learns something are stored in the brain along with the learned material. Such details can then be used to help retrieve the material, the hypothesis says.

For example, research shows students do better in exams if they take them in the same rooms in which they learned the material, Lyman said.

Schab said he is now investigating whether odors work better than other potential memory cues, such as music, sounds or the rooms in which the learning occurred.

Animal rights activist competing for '90 title

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Miss Oregon pageant contestant Lisa Verch says if she wins, don't drape her in mink.

Rival beauty queens boast hobbies like collecting photos of Elvis or porcelain dolls, hugging Dad, gourmet cooking and horseback riding.

On her fact sheet, Verch, 22, said her hobby is "promoting the ethical treatment of animals."

Her uncompromising animal rights activism puts her at odds with a pageant sponsor, Schumacher Furs, which has awarded Miss Oregon winners a mink jacket for 28 years.

"I'm committed so much to animal rights that I would do anything rational and legal to support the cause," said Verch, a member of Students for the Ethical Treatment of Animals at the University of Oregon.

That stance does not go over well with Bill Schumacher, a longtime sponsor of the pageant to be held Thursday through Saturday in Seaside.

"If one of them decides to turn down the mink coat," he said, "I've got a packet of information that can show them how the synthetics they're using in their tap shoes, evening gowns and swimsuits are also hurting the environment."

Miss Oregon officials said Verch's views will not be held against her.

"We plan on letting the contestants say what they want to say," pageant president Mike Maki said. "As for our sponsor, we'll cross that bridge when, and if, we get to it."

By her own admission, Miss Lane County 1990 is an unlikely beauty queen, calling herself a "sweat shirts and jeans kind of gal" who rarely wears makeup and is a vegetarian.

Verch said she considers the $6,000 in scholarships that go to the pageant winner a good way to finance a master's degree in journalism.

Another incentive is the publicity that she could bring to animal rights issues if she won the state contest and prevailed at the Miss America pageant in September. Each Miss America promotes a cause during her reign.

Her moral stand was praised by game show host and former Miss USA and Miss Universe pageant emcee Bob Barker, who in 1987 quit in protest because officials refused to halt fur coat giveaways.

"She'll be admired by thousands for her convictions and is a marvelous example of where America's young people today are heading in their views," said Barker, a champion of animal rights.

Leonard Horn, executive director of the Miss America Pageant, said the organization would not put any restrictions on the topic the winner chose for her platform.

Verch, who works as an intern at radio station KEZI in Eugene, will perform a piano medley of Bartok and Bach.

She said if she's crowned Miss Oregon, she'll use the position to lobby her cause in the state capital while serving as the state's official hostess, a position designated by the Legislature 20 years ago.

But don't expect her to show up in a fur coat.

"It goes against my personal values and beliefs in things that I support every day of my life," she said.

Dad dunks 2-year-old; death penalty sought

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — A man accused of dunking his 2-year-old stepson headfirst into a toilet goes on trial on murder charges this week in a case that raised questions about social workers' failure to protect the toddler.

Prosecutors will seek the death penalty for Thomas Coe, who told police he was punishing Bradley McGee for soiling his diaper. The boy's death brought unprecedented charges against four social workers, one of whom was convicted of child abuse.

"If nothing else, all this has made caseworkers be more careful to realize they're making life-or-death decisions here," said Pam Kirkland, the boy's foster mother before he was returned to Coe and the mother who abandoned him. "With every child, they have to stop and ask — 'Could this be the next Bradley McGee?'"

Coe, 23, goes on trial Tuesday in Fort Myers. Defense attorneys have acknowledged the dunking but say Coe did not intend to kill the boy, so it wasn't murder.

"We just want to make sure that if he's convicted, he gets convicted for the crime he committed," said attorney Robert Norgard.

The case grew beyond domestic violence as Bradley's road from abandonment to foster care and ultimately back into the hands of his troubled parents made him a symbol of failings in the state's social services system.

The boy was under the supervision of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services from the time he was 4 months old, after his mother abandoned him at a shopping mall with a pretzel vendor.

He died of head injuries July 28, 1989, two months after a judge followed an HRS recommendation and ordered the child returned to his stepfather and mother, Sheryl McGee Coe.

The death prompted the Legislature last fall to allocate $39 million for more child protection workers. Legislators also changed the law to make child safety, not family reunification, the social services agency's top priority.

According to Coe's statements to investigators, the dunking came during potty training when Bradley dirtied his diaper.

After Mrs. Coe took Bradley out in the yard and hosed him down, Coe took him into the bathroom, grabbed the boy by the ankles and dunked him in the toilet bowl.

"Plunger style," a detective wrote. When Bradley refused to stop screaming, he was put under a cold shower, then led down the hall to the living room.

Coe said he and his wife then hit the staggering Bradley in the head with pillows until he suddenly stiffened, collapsed and curled into a fetal position. Efforts to revive him failed.

Both parents were charged with first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse. Mrs. Coe, 21, pleaded no contest earlier this year to second-degree murder and is serving a 30-year prison term.

Coe is described by relatives as a brooding, angry young man in constant pain from a congenitally crippled hip and hereditary kidney disease.

In statements to prosecutors, Mrs. Coe said the toilet-dunking was the culmination of a pattern of abuse by her husband against Bradley. She claims he urinated on the child, put cayenne pepper on his genitals and dunked him in the toilet at least once before.

Defense attorneys argue Coe dunked the child to discipline him, not to harm him.

Within weeks of Bradley's death, charges were filed against four state social workers. Three were cleared before Bradley's main caseworker, Margaret Barber, 62, was convicted last month of child abuse and placed on three months' probation.

Ms. Barber had recommended that the boy be returned to his parents without showing the court a psychological report that described the Coes as explosive, inflexible and unable to care for children.

"I still lay awake at night and wonder how it could have happened — how it all could possibly have been prevented," said Ms. Kirkland, who cared for Bradley for 14 months. "There's no way I can put it out of my mind."

Texas author has taken front row seat to life

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Perched on a bicycle seat, Norman Ford has had a front-row seat for some of life's most profound lessons. He has seen humanity at its most intriguing, has seen some of nature's most spectacular beauty and has witnessed the steady decline of the world environment.

Ford says he would like nothing more than a "reunited planet" focused on saving the environment in his lifetime.

"I'm not very patriotic," said Ford, who holds dual citizenship in the United States and England. He says national borders may be preventing people from working together to solve serious world problems.

Ford has an expanded concept of duties for the armed forces freed by improving East-West relations.

"What we really need an Army for is to go to East Africa and prevent people from destroying the elephants, or to go to Brazil and stop people from burning down the rain forests. It would be cheaper to pay the workers there for not burning down any more trees" than it will be to pay for the consequences of environmental destruction, he says.

As the author of more than three dozen books, many dealing with quality of life, Ford speaks knowledgeably about what he considers a deteriorating quality of life. His statements are sprinkled with facts obtained during research for his books as well as his own personal memories of a quiet yet memorable childhood in the British Isles.

Ford grew up in Wales, in the coastal town of Tywyn, where his father was an auditor for the railroad. "It was a complete paradise," Ford recalled, "with mountains on one side of the village, salt marshes leading to the sea on the other, sand dunes, a beach a quarter-mile wide and estuaries filled with bird life." Nearby were salmon rivers, he recalled. "My parents and I had a better quality of life then than I do now, he added, "even though we had no cars, no appliances, no modern conveniences. We also had no crime, no litigation and no divorce," he remarked.

Ford said the idyllic setting provided a growing youngster with many opportunities for adventure. "Today, kids can't go anywhere because their mobility has been destroyed by the automobile. It isn't safe anymore for a kid to be out exploring the world on a bicycle," he said, recalling his own youth when, as a teen-ager, he rode 25 miles a day in the area surrounding his home town.

The mild climate of the British Isles played a major role in fostering Ford's lifelong love of the outdoors. Wales' northern latitude provided long summer twilights, with outdoor activities possible until 11 p.m. In winter, when darkness fell at 4:30 p.m., Ford and his parents took long walks on the beach, he recalled, because even though it was dark they felt totally safe.

Following six years of service in the Royal Navy during World War II, Ford married an American and moved to the United States in 1947.

He drew on his knowledge of ships and sailing and wrote "The Ship Passenger's Guide" soon thereafter. The book led to a job offer from a magazine publisher, and he became editor of "Ships and the Sea" magazine.

Meanwhile, he was hard at work on a second book, "Where to Retire on a Small Income," scheduled for publication in January 1961. Then, a piece of luck. The United States government increased Social Security benefits to senior citizens at that time, and his book became an instant hit. He quit his magazine job and turned to book writing full time.

Now, with 44 books behind him, Ford is putting the finishing touches on number 45 and is beginning to research number 46. All have been written on travel, health and retirement topics.

With titles like "Formula for a Long Life," "Sleep Well, Live Well" and "Good Health Without Drugs," the books echo his personal philosophy of life. Information for the books is obtained from data, studies and other research released by both public and private firms.

He writes six hours a day, seven days a week, from January through Labor Day. His initial drafts are written in long hand; then he moves to a manual typewriter and prepares a second draft. After penciling in corrections, cutting and pasting, he prepares a third draft on an electronic typewriter.

Ford adheres to a strict daily schedule, with morning reserved for exercise, afternoons and early evenings for work, and late evenings for yoga and reading. He eats four meals a day and is a strict vegetarian.

This schedule is abandoned in the fall, when he goes wherever his heart leads him. Despite the satisfaction he gets out of being a writer, he says the high points of his life have been his adventures.

One such experience was a solitary 28-day, 2,400-mile bicycle trip from Istanbul, Turkey to London in 1967. The trip took him across Greece, up the coast of Yugoslavia, across northern Italy, across Switzerland and to the French coast, where he took a car ferry across the English Channel and continued the trip to London. Total cost: $150.

Despite the fact that he has mastered no foreign languages, Ford managed to have all his needs met on the journey. "I guess you could say I speak basic French and basic Spanish," he explained. "My technique for getting by in the other countries is to find an English-speaking person soon after I enter the country, and get them to tell me how to say 'I want' and 'Where is' in that country's language. After that, I start learning nouns. With this information, you can find everything you need."

Slides taken during his bicycle tours of Europe with the Bicycle Adventure Club reveal sights the average motoring tourist misses. "And you never have to worry about a parking place," he added, reflecting on the advantages of sightseeing on a bicycle.

Another pleasant adventure

Woman says mom begged for death

DALLAS (AP) — A 20-year-old woman told police she killed her ill mother with a borrowed rifle because the ailing woman had begged for weeks to be killed.

Kimberly Ball first told investigators that her mother had been slain by an intruder early Saturday. But police said Ms. Ball changed her story after extensive questioning about the death of her mother, Karen Ramzi, 46.

Ms. Ball was being held at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center on a charge of murder Sunday night. Bond was $50,000.

The body of Ms. Ramzi was found on a downstairs couch with a bullet wound to the head, authorities said.

Ms. Ramzi, who was divorced, was overweight and suffered from muscular dystrophy, police said. She wore leg braces and had to sleep on the couch because she could no longer climb the stairs, said homicide detective Bill Carmack.

"The daughter said that she was asleep when she heard a bang and the door squeak," Carmack said.

"We took her to the station and after an hour or so of questioning, she finally admitted that she got a rifle she borrowed from a friend and went downstairs and shot her," Carmack said.

was a week-long trip to the island of Corsica which turned into a longer stay because of the natural beauty of the island, Ford said. In addition, his bicycle has taken him to New Zealand, India, the Himalayas of Nepal and numerous areas of North America. He is especially fond of the American West and recently escorted a tour through an area near Boulder, Colo.

One of his recent adventures took place closer to home but paid off handsomely: at a Volksmarch in nearby Fredericksburg he met wife Shirley, whom he married two and a half years ago. She shared his outlook on life, and her love of gardening insures there will be fresh vegetables for the 10-12 varieties Ford attempts to eat on a daily basis.

Shirley Ford says the most important thing a writer's spouse must learn is "to get out and do things on your own," because a writer's life is filled with many solitary hours of researching and writing. She volunteers for Meals on Wheels, the Friends of the Library and her church.

The 69-year-old Ford has maintained basically the same lifestyle for 40 years, and the magical "retirement age" of 65 or 70 has no meaning for him, he insists. "I've found that people who do satisfying, meaningful work usually continue to work," he reflected, "whereas a lot of people with stressful jobs retire as early as possible."

Cowboys ride 'em high for Bush, world leaders

HOUSTON (AP) — President Bush hosted a Texas-style party featuring a rodeo, country and western tunes and 3½ tons of barbecue before world leaders settled down to business in the economic summit that begins today.

The Sunday welcome at the Astrodome complex attracted leaders Brian Mulroney of Canada, Margaret Thatcher of Great Britain, Toshiki Kaifu of Japan and Jacques Delors, president of the European Commission.

Kaifu came stomping into the barbecue, waving his cowboy hat and wearing a silver-and-gold belt buckle big enough to serve up a sirloin.

Mulroney also wore a cowboy hat and custom-made cowboy boots.

Thousands of press members covering the three-day summit also were in attendance at the evening performance held in the Astroarena.

"It's just magnificent. It's a shame to be in Texas and not try it," Igor Borisenko, a reporter for the Soviet news agency Tass, said of the shindig.

Cowboys and cowgirls with the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association pleased the crowd with their bronco and bull riding and barrel racing, while children wrestled with calves during the calf scramble. The dignitaries watched the performance from behind a bulletproof glass.

Before the rodeo, the leaders tramped through sawdust-covered artificial turf to a horseshoe pit and took a turn at Bush's favorite pastime while cattle roamed in the background. The president out-pitched his guests, landing two ringers.

Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl sent their regrets, opting instead to attend the World Cup soccer championship in Rome.

French President Francois Mitterrand also declined. All will arrive today in time for the summit's official opening.

State to join others in investigation of escrow overcharges

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Consumers in seven states, including Texas, are being asked to check their escrow accounts as state officials prepare to crack down on illegal escrow overcharges by mortgage lenders.

The attorneys general in the seven states believe that "several billion dollars of consumers' money is being illegally held," said Craig Jordan, director of Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox' mortgage bank project.

Jordan told the San Antonio Express-News that homeowners are routinely overcharged for escrow accounts held by mortgage lenders to pay property taxes and insurance.

The first civil lawsuits are expected soon, Jordan said.

"No one apparently knows the banks are doing this," Jordan said.

Mortgage lenders and banks routinely put an amount into a monthly payment that goes into escrow to pay property taxes, casualty insurance and in some cases life insurance.

Two-thirds of home mortgages violate federal laws by keeping the escrow amounts in excess of the legal limits, state legal officers say.

The interest-free money is then available to the lenders for profit.

Jordan claims lenders routinely ignore mortgage contracts with even stricter limits than provided by the federal Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act, the federal law that prohibits requiring mortgage holders to maintain more than two months taxes and insurance in escrow. Some mortgage contracts provide for less.

"The mortgage lending industry has systematically violated federal law for more than a decade by extracting excessive escrow payments from the majority of mortgage-paying homeowners and presently holds several billion dollars of homeowners' money unlawfully," the attorney general said.

Jordan said the Department of Housing and Urban Development had acknowledged receiving the analysis of escrow overcharges "and that's all."

Soviet rockets may be used to send up satellites from U.S.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Bush administration has agreed to let Soviet rockets be used for launching commercial U.S. satellites, officials confirmed Sunday.

Launches would be undertaken by a private Australian real estate company, the Cape York Space Agency, from a base in northern Australia operated by a U.S. firm, according to a report in Sunday editions of The New York Times.

Confirming that account, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said on the ABC television program, "This Week With David Brinkley," that "the president's made a decision that an initial launch can go forward."

On another Sunday interview program, President Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said, "This doesn't have anything to do with the U.S. space program," which has recently seen a $1.5 billion orbiting telescope crippled by a mirror ground to the wrong formula and National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers unable to fix a hydrogen fuel leak in its space shuttles.

The Soviet rocket program is "just another one" of several commercial launching ventures operated by China, France and U.S. companies, Scowcroft told interviewers on the CNN program, "Newsmaker Sunday."

Baker and Scowcroft were interviewed in Houston where Bush and other leaders of the world's top seven industrial powers are holding their annual economic summit.

The Bush administration already has permitted the launch of an American communications satellite from a Chinese rocket.

According to the report in The Times, the National Space Council, chaired by Vice President Quayle, approved a set of recommendations under which a division of United Technologies Corp. would be granted an export license to operate a launch base at Cape York, Australia for the Australian company.

Soviet Zenit rockets could be launched by 1995, with engineers supplied by the Soviet space agency Glavkosmos, the newspaper said.

Aloe vera crops bounce back

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Although aloe vera fields wilted by last winter's freeze in the Rio Grande Valley have rebounded, some say the crop is losing popularity with growers.

The aloe vera crop recovered rapidly, unlike hard-hit citrus groves that will take years to recover.

Despite the fact that the Valley generates 95 percent of the aloe vera produced in the United States, some growers say they may decrease their aloe vera acreage.

"It's becoming a crop of less importance to the Valley each year," said R.C. Benson of Benson's Aloe Farms.

Benson said he thinks aloe vera is losing popularity among Valley farmers because of freezes and increased aloe vera growth in other areas.

Forever Aloe has replanted half of its 600 acres, and plans to replant the rest, Reeves said.
