

Slaying suspects found dead in L.A.

AUSTIN (AP) — Two men wanted in the slaying of an 18-year-old University of Texas student killed themselves Friday by jumping from the 12th floor of a Los Angeles-area hotel as police tried to enter the room. Their deaths marked the end of a search for the killer of Tiffani Ann Bruce, but the circumstances of the case spawned dozens of rumors, police said.

The dead men, Matthew Michael Novatny, 22, and Jason Smith, 19, were roommates and "did everything together to the very end," Austin Senior Sgt. Mike Lummus told a news conference.

Novatny had been charged with killing Ms. Bruce, whose body was found Oct. 21 in the bathroom of her home in the Hyde Park neighborhood, north of the UT campus.

Ms. Bruce was shot twice in the head and once in the chest at close range with a handgun, police said. Travis County Medical Examiner Dr. Robert Bayardo said she was probably killed Oct. 18 or Oct. 19.

Novatny and Smith disappeared after the killing in a stolen 1988 Chevrolet Suburban that was found at Houston Intercontinental Airport, police said.

Police said they were investigating the Austin crime scene to see if Smith had also been involved in the murder. Police said they lifted a palm print of Novatny's from a dried bloodstain near Ms. Bruce. His prints were on file from a 1989 arrest for possession of cocaine, police said.

"Obviously this is a very bizarre case. It's a very strange case," said Terrence Keel, a Travis County assistant district attorney.

"This may have been someone infatuated with her and went back and killed her," Keel said.

Keel and police said Novatny may have met Ms. Bruce while canvassing the neighborhood door-to-door for Clean Water Action, a grassroots environmental organization.

"He (Novatny) became attracted to her ... he may have gone back to her in an attempt to pursue some type of relationship or maybe just to confront her and attempted to attack her and she was killed," Keel said.

Rumors abounded as to the two roommates. "I've had phone calls from 35 reporters, and each is telling me something different," Lummus said.

Police did confirm that knife marks were found throughout the rent house in which Novatny and Smith lived, and that several days prior to the killing, the two friends went on a spending spree, purchasing knives, guns, clothes and a video recorder, Lummus said.

Lummus said the purchases indicated they anticipated having to flee. "They were smart enough to know that if they bought this stuff on the run we could follow a paper trail," he said.

Police would disclose little concerning evidence found at Ms. Bruce's home or at the house where Novatny and Smith lived.

Lummus said Novatny was intelligent, and had lived in Austin for several years after moving from Ohio.

Both Novatny and Smith had registered for the fall semester at UT-Austin but withdrew.

Police were alerted about 5 a.m., CST, to their whereabouts when Novatny called a female acquaintance in Austin.

DON'T BE MISLED ABOUT OUR COUNTY GOVERNMENT!

The REAL Facts About The Check Records of Scurry County

- ALL checks are registered in the County Auditor's and the County Treasurer's Offices by law.
- ALL the checks and records are permanent and available to the public.
- The County Clerk keeps official minutes of the Commissioner's Court meetings and has on file by state mandate the County Treasurer's official Monthly Claims Report (which includes EVERY check given by Scurry County). This report is signed by the County Judge, County Treasurer and recorded by the County Clerk.
- In the case of the motorgrader for Precinct #2...

- A check was issued to pay off the motorgrader to SAVE $7,000.00 in interest to the taxpayers.
- I did not have enough budgeted money in my equipment line item to make the total payoff.
- Two of the other precincts had budgeted money not spent in their 1989 budgets.
- They authorized an interfund transfer from their budgets to mine so that the savings to the taxpayers could be made.
- A check was issued offline so as to stop the interest immediately. Commissioner's Court would not be held again for a week (which would have meant an additional amount of interest).

The $54,331.24 check was and is reflected in these places:

- The state mandated official COUNTY AUDITOR'S ANNUAL REPORT
- The official END OF THE MONTH REPORT for December, 1989
- The official COUNTY TREASURER'S CLAIMS REPORT, Vol. 18, Minutes of Accounts Audited, Approved & Allowed in County Clerk's Office
- The GENERAL LEDGER FOR SCURRY COUNTY in the County Auditor's office
- *Information Guide of County Government, Section 55.25-114.061

The $59,000.00 referred to in Precinct 2's budget was not all deficit - $45,000.00 was interfund transfers. This does not cost any extra tax dollars: $14,000.00 was money that was amended from the 1988 budget for road construction to the 1989 budget for road construction, since the actual work could not be done until 1989.

Ex-employees claim 60-day closing notice was not given

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The president of a now defunct company being sued for violating a plant closing law said he was not required to give employees 60 days notice that their jobs would be terminated.

A group of former employees of Caldwell-Hamby Inc., a Plainview manufacturing firm, claim in a federal lawsuit that they were not provided 60 days notice that the farm implement plant was closing.

Hamby and is also named as a defendant in the lawsuit. Mumgaard said the lawsuit is only the second he is aware of in Texas stemming from the plant-closing law. The first, he said, was over a plant closing in Garland.

The federal plant closing law requires that plants with more than 100 employees must notify employees 60 days in advance of a plant closing.

"Caldwell-Hamby had fewer than 100 employees," said Don Hornung, the firm's president. "We don't feel like we should be covered under the act."

Fallen honeydew, plant sap that has passed through the body of aphids or related insects after needed nutrients are absorbed, was the "manna" of the Old Testament and a human delicacy in some places.

The lawsuit was filed Thursday on behalf of former Caldwell-Hamby employees by Texas Rural Legal Aid of Plainview and a Dallas lawyer.

Hornung said the company had fewer than 50 employees when it closed. He said he had not yet received a copy of the lawsuit, but added, "I knew it was coming. It's no surprise."

The Caldwell-Hamby closing also does not fall under the scope of the plant closing law, Hornung said.

Rooney says he's pulled back commentary since suspension

DALLAS (AP) — CBS News humorist Andy Rooney said Friday he has tempered his commentary since being suspended from "60 Minutes," in one case shelving plans to criticize a gift to the United Negro College Fund because he didn't want to be branded a racist.

"I have pulled back some. (The suspension) was a chilling experience," Rooney said at a meeting of the Associated Press Managing Editors in Dallas.

Rooney also criticized network television news operations.

Rooney, whose humorous essays have closed "60 Minutes" programs for 12 years, was suspended for three weeks without pay in February because of statements attributed to him in a magazine for gays. Rooney denied he made the comments.

Scientists get first glimpse of photos

The experience, however, caused Rooney to decide against criticizing a $50 million gift to the UNCF. The March donation by publishing tycoon Walter Annenberg is the largest ever for black colleges.

The photos were shown during a four-day meeting of the Geological Society of America that ended Thursday.

"But no one was prepared for things being so crisp," Head said in an interview with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram after appearing on a panel.

But Rooney said he still believes it is inconsistent to support all-black or all-female institutions, while criticizing their all-white, or all-male counterparts.

Experts knew from earlier U.S. and Soviet missions to Venus that erosion would not be as great as that on Earth, said James W. Head III, a Brown University

"Water is the key," he said. "Venus is not water-damaged like Earth is."

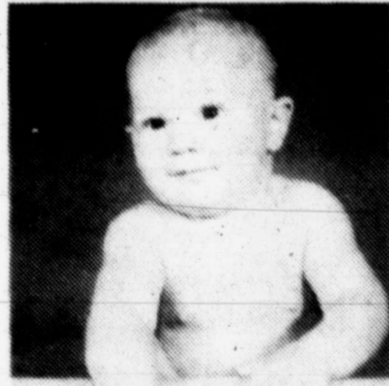

Rooney said he had decided not to air the critique on the advice of "60 Minutes" correspondent Ed Bradley, who is black, and others including executives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

This must be stopped!

John Pennington says. "When the liberal courts put our families and other innocent people at risk, it's time to fight back. Here's my three point plan to stop early release and really get tough on crime."

- 1. Close the prison doors and keep them closed. 2. Put prisoners in unused military facilities. 3. Make prison terms mandatory for drug crooks.

I will co-sponsor the legislation proposed by Republican Representative John Culberson which will nullify the court ordered 95% population cap in our prisons by raising the limit to the federal prison's 120% plus capacity cap. This will slam the prison doors and keep them closed.

I support Senator Buster Brown's plan to use abandoned military bases as Parole Release Centers to house criminals overflowing from our state prisons. This will relieve the pressure on our state prisons and county jails and keep dangerous criminals off our streets.

I support Clayton Williams' boot camp plan for first time offenders, his death penalty legislation for child killers and drug kingpins who kill our children with drugs, and Senator Phil Gramm's call for mandatory sentences for any drug pusher who sells drugs to our children.

Hello, I'm ROY IDOM, Candidate for Commissioner of Precinct 2. Governments have a tendency to become more and more inefficient over periods of time...especially when times have been good and money has been plentiful.

My goal is to increase efficiency in our county government with sound business methods...so we can continue to enjoy the services and programs that are important for all the residents of Scurry County.

Some of my goals will be to:

- 1. Implement a Purchase Order System...not a department...that will not require additional personnel. 2. To strengthen financial control by having a Check Registry that lists every check the county writes. 3. Have documentation in our road and bridge department for fuel and oil usage. 4. I would like to do a thorough study on unitizing our county equipment and to share with the taxpayers what the study reveals. 5. Not amend the budget at the END of the Fiscal year JUST to make all the budgeted amounts come out equal to actual expenditures. Our 1989 budget reflects over 300 budget changes in General Fund alone.

Klan leaders call Helms' opponent crooked politician

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A national Ku Klux Klan leader said Friday that Democratic Senate candidate Harvey Gantt was "another crooked black politician" whose victory over Jesse Helms would help boost the group's membership.

Imperial Wizard J.W. Farrands told The Associated Press

in a telephone interview that Gantt should be elected "so they can see what a black politician can do."

Farrands heads the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, one of numerous Klan groups.

"If they elect him, they'll find out we've got another crooked black politician," Farrands said. "He'll tax everybody equally as long as they're working people and give all their money to the poor and downtrodden."

"God help the state of North Carolina," he said. "That's what they need."

Gantt did not return numerous telephone calls the AP made Friday to his Charlotte campaign office. Campaign officials would not comment on Farrands' statements. The election is Tuesday.

Helms, the incumbent conservative Republican, was en route to a rally late Friday and could not immediately be reached for comment.

Gantt, who was the first black mayor of Charlotte, has accused Helms of trying to make race an issue in the campaign.

Fortune hunting through the stars

CHICAGO (AP) — For these economists, the picture always is bright — out of this world, you might say. That's because when it comes to business, astro-economists turn to the stars.

They look at the rise of the moon, gravitational forces of Venus and Jupiter, and Earth's tidal flows and weather patterns to forecast the future of economic trends ranging from unemployment to gold prices.

Spacey? Not to these high rollers, er, astro-economists.

This weekend about 150 of them are in Chicago for the Third Annual World Conference on Astro-Economics.

Say what? "When most people hear about astro-economics, they go, 'What?'" Robert Hand, creator of a computer program overlaying star charts with stock market fluctuations, said Friday.

"I think that there is a great deal of incredulity," he said, "but the proof is in the pudding in that people who use it make money."

Among the lecture topics at the conference, for which each attendee paid $170: "Geocosmic and Rhythmic Cycles in Today's Precious Metals Markets,"

"Astrological Technical Analysis," and "Hot Stocks for the Coming Year."

Pre-Halloween arrests increase

DETROIT (AP) — Despite the city's best efforts, three days of Devil's Night vandalism produced more arson fires and arrests than a year ago, Mayor Coleman Young said Friday.

There were 281 fires, up from 223 last year, Young told reporters.

Devil's Night, the night before Halloween, traditionally has been a time for mischief. During the early 1980s, pranksters in Detroit switched from soaping windows and toppling trash cans to setting fires.

Young said the city had made progress despite the increase in fires.

He pointed to the mobilization of 35,000 residents from 3,000 community organizations to report suspicious activity. Volunteers patrolled the city with flashlights and fire extinguishers.

Although bonds are generally considered one of the simplest ways to invest, there are still several key terms you should understand before turning over your money.

Basically, a bond is an IOU that promises to return your deposit at a specific time and pay you regular interest until then. Of course, there is a lot more to know if you expect to be happy with your bond purchase. Here are some terms that are your key to making a wise bond purchase.

The BID is the highest price a buyer will pay for a specific bond at a specific time. The ASK is the lowest price a seller will accept. The SPREAD is the difference between them. The BID-ASK is the quote given to you by a broker. You generally add his commission to that.

A CALL is the issuer's option to redeem your bond prior to maturity. Because the call deprives investors of future interest payments, the issuer generally pays a 2 percent to 3 percent premium over the face value of the bond when a bond is called.

The COUPON is the interest payment you receive. A $10,000 bond with a 9 percent coupon, for example, would pay $900 in interest annually.

The INDENTURE is the contract outlining the provisions of the bond issue.

LIQUIDITY is the ability to sell a bond in the market prior to its maturity.

The FACE VALUE, or PAR VALUE, of a bond is the amount the bond will return to the holder at maturity. The face value of most corporate bonds is $1,000; tax-exempt municipal bonds, $5,000.

The SINKING FUND is money accumulated on a regular basis in a separate custodial account that is used to redeem the bond issue. Often the INDENTURE requires a sinking fund to assure investors greater security.

ZERO COUPON bonds are sold at deep discounts from their face value. They pay no regular interest but rather appreciate each year until maturity. At that time the entire face value of the bond is refunded.

Money invested in bonds is generally serious money put away to earn safe, reliable income. There is no reason this cannot be accomplished unless one blindly ventures into a situation without adequate knowledge. These terms will not only help explain your investment but also provide enough knowledge to enable you to ask pertinent questions about bonds before you invest.

Unless you satisfy yourself as to risk, income and holding time, you haven't given bond investing enough study.

Voting investigation sought

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Battling Democrats and Republicans here agree on at least one thing with the election only days away: They want a federal civil rights investigation of Gregg County voting.

However, the two factions disagree on who first requested federal intervention.

Ron Brown, national Democratic chairman, asked U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh Thursday to conduct civil rights investigations in Gregg County and in North Carolina.

Gregg County Republican Chairman Bill Osborn said the Republicans not only had already requested the probe, but had received confirmation Tuesday that the Justice Department would investigate, the Longview News-Journal reported.

At issue is voting in Commissioner Precinct 4, where Democrat James Johnson and Republican Paul Jeter and independent June Knighten are running for an open seat on the commissioners court.

While Republicans allege voter fraud in absentee mail balloting, Democrats contend the GOP has intimidated voters with a newspaper advertisement warning against voter fraud.

Democrats also claim Republicans have violated civil rights of black voters by sending anonymous post cards to those who requested mail ballots and suggesting they throw the ballots in the trash and vote in person.

Jackson asked to help mediate

NEW YORK (AP) — The leader of the Daily News' striking unions asked the Rev. Jesse Jackson on Friday to act as a mediator. Jackson said he would help in any way he could.

Labor lawyer Theodore Kheel later amended the request by Allied Printing Trades Council President George McDonald by saying Jackson could potentially mediate on one issue common to all nine striking unions: the right of strikers to return to their jobs.

"We're very bullish on his becoming involved in this one issue," said Kheel, an adviser to the unions.

Jackson said he would be willing "to offer my services in whatever way would be effective."

News spokeswoman Lisa Robinson had no immediate comment on Jackson's offer to mediate or on the content of his meeting earlier Friday with News publisher James Hoge. Jackson said Hoge had indicated a willingness to negotiate.

Killer bees on everyone's mind at beekeepers confab

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Africanized honey bees were the unavoidable dominant theme Friday at the Texas Beekeepers Association's annual convention.

The first known swarm of killer bees to reach the United States was discovered in South Texas last month.

Beekeepers said they had resigned themselves to the fact that more bees will infest at least the southern tip of Texas. Many beekeepers attended the convention to learn how to live with the ill-tempered Africanized bees, said Glenn Mace, president of the association.

"It's not a scare so much any more," said Mace, who operates a pollination service from Edinburg. "It's going to happen. They want to know what to do about it."

He said about 160 of the association's 350 members attended the convention Friday.

"We had one individual from the Tyler area (of northeast Texas)," Mace said. "He came down specifically with instructions from his local association to get all the information he can" on Africanized bees.

Much of their focus is public relations, to avoid strict ordinances and regulations that would harm the commercial beekeeping industry, Mace said.

Commercial beekeepers are needed to assist the public when the Africanized bees arrive, Mace said. Driving all of the more docile European bees out of an area would create a void that Africanized bees would fill, he said, because there would be no competition for food.

U.S. and Mexican officials in the past three years placed hundreds of traps baited with a sex lure to track the bees, which have been moving slowly north since 1957, when they escaped from a breeding experiment in Brazil.

Killer bees earned their nickname because of their habit of attacking intruders in swarms and chasing their prey for long distances.

No new swarms of Africanized bees have been found in Texas since the swarm of about 3,000 bees showed up in a U.S. Department of Agriculture trap Oct. 15 near the border city of Hidalgo.

A quarantine that banned movement of bees out of a two-mile radius of that trapping site was lifted Friday. USDA officials lifted the quarantine after scouring the area for wild and managed bees and found none that were Africanized.

The southernmost eight counties of Texas, however, remain under quarantine.

Officials say they do not expect to find any more swarms before next spring. Bees stop expanding their range through swarming after the weather gets cold.

House Speaker Gib Lewis reverses himself on tax bill

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis, who denied Thursday that a law firm had paid any of his company's delinquent property tax bill, has reversed himself and is promising reimbursement.

Lewis on Friday said he will reimburse the law firm for all taxes, penalties and interest that Heard Goggan Blair & Williams paid for his company.

Lewis also acknowledged that he has made trips to Mexico with partners of Heard Goggan Blair & Williams — in direct contradiction with the speaker's statement, issued Thursday, that he never said he had traveled with the attorneys to Mexico.

In a copyright story Thursday, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported that Heard Goggan paid more than half of a 1987 delinquent tax bill owed by 801 W.

Vickery Inc., a company in which Lewis owns 50 percent. The story also detailed Lewis' relationship with Heard Goggan, including vacations Lewis took with the law firm's partners.

In a statement released through his aides Friday, Lewis said he never intended that the law firm would pay any of the late property taxes for his Shooter's Palace gun range. The payments arose over "confusion" in the amount owed by the company, according to the statement.

Lewis told the Star-Telegram on Friday that he had not read the entire newspaper article before issuing statements Thursday contending that the article was "filled with inaccuracies and false assumptions."

Woman acquitted on charge of using restroom for men

HOUSTON (AP) — All Denise Wells wanted to do was go to the bathroom.

She ended up in court, on television and in newspapers across the country.

But Friday, Ms. Wells was acquitted of illegally using the men's restroom at a country-western concert July 7.

A jury deliberated for 23 minutes before acquitting Ms.

Wells on a misdemeanor charge of using a restroom intended for members of the opposite sex in a manner calculated to cause a disturbance. The trial lasted two days.

Ms. Wells, a 33-year-old legal secretary, was ticketed and forced to leave the concert that she had paid $125 to attend. She later refused to pay the fine and requested a trial.

Ms. Wells' case has attracted national media attention and she has appeared on several talk shows.

She and her sister and lawyer, Valerie Wells Davenport, laughed and hugged when the verdict was read.

"I'm relieved. I'm elated," Ms. Wells said. "The jurors told me, 'You had us all the way.'"

Ms. Wells faced a maximum $200 fine if she had been convicted.

Some of the jurors said later that they had asked if they could comment on the validity of the law in their verdict, but Municipal Court Judge Francelia refused.

"It was important we all understand that there are cases where the ordinance could have been broken, but there was no proof or evidence that she entered in a manner calculated to cause a disturbance," jury forewoman Frieda Felton said.

Ms. Wells testified Friday she felt she had no other choice when she used the men's room at the concert by country superstar George Strait because the line was so long for the women's room.

"I felt I was in a situation where I had to be in a restroom. I took the only option I felt was available," she said.

She said she covered her eyes and apologized to the men already in the restroom when she entered.

An off-duty police officer working as a security guard ticketed her after receiving two complaints about women being in the men's room. She then had to leave the concert.

"I was devastated. I felt I was being harassed for doing something I felt I had no choice but to do. I entered the men's room to go to the bathroom and that's all," she testified.

Ms. Davenport said the state failed to prove she had no permission to enter the men's room and that she entered with the intent to "raise a ruckus."

Five buildings up for auction in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Investors thinking about picking up a few apartments will need at least $35,000 to bid in an upcoming public auction of about $52 million worth of property.

The bidding begins here Monday when five Houston-area apartment buildings are put on the auction block, said JBS & Associates Inc. in Chicago, the real estate consulting and auction firm conducting the sale.

The Federal Deposit and Insurance Corp. is auctioning off 14 properties, a total of 1,163 apartment units, in Texas, Oklahoma and Florida. JBS officials said it is largest such auction ever held.

Besides the Houston auction, there will be sales in Austin, Dallas, Tulsa, Okla., and Orlando, Fla. The last auction is scheduled Nov. 12.

"The whole turnaround in the Texas market is really attracting a lot of interest in these properties," said Mike Becker, assistant vice president at JBS.

Becker said Friday that the sale is so large basically because auctions are becoming a more viable way of selling real estate.

Records show that driver eluded prosecution earlier

DALLAS (AP) — A 23-year-old woman, whose wrong-way driving led to the deaths of four men and herself this week, apparently had eluded prosecution on two-felony charges because of a bureaucratic blunder.

County records show Sharon Ann Leonard of Mesquite was set free from federal prison late last year rather than returned to a Dallas County jail to face charges that she stole a credit card and sold amphetamines.

Even if she hadn't been returned to the jail, county officials say they should have been informed last December that Ms. Leonard had been freed from federal prison, where she served a three-year sentence for mail theft.

If they had been told of the release, Ms. Leonard would have been arrested on the credit card and drug charges in Dallas County.

prosecutors told The Dallas Morning News. If convicted, she could have been sentenced to life in prison.

Instead of being turned over to Dallas County authorities, however, she was released to her mother in Mesquite. Officials in the Dallas County district attorney's office say they were unaware she had been freed.

"I didn't even know she was released," said Assistant District Attorney Mark Nancarrow, the prosecutor assigned to Ms. Leonard's case. He said he learned of Ms. Leonard's freedom after the fatal accident.

The accident occurred just after 3 a.m. Thursday when Ms. Leonard — apparently traveling more than 80 mph against oncoming traffic on Dallas' LBJ Freeway — slammed her 1989 Ford Probe head-on into a 1976 Pontiac carrying five men. Police are investigating whether Ms. Leonard was drunk at the time.

Four of the men were killed, and the fifth was seriously injured. Ms. Leonard died instantly.

Questions were raised Friday about whether Ms. Leonard should have been in custody.

Ivana Trump plans to file for divorce

NEW YORK (AP) — The long-anticipated Trump divorce became more than just gossip Friday. Ivana's lawyer said she's making the move against developer Donald.

"Through her attorneys, Ivana Trump announced Saturday that with deep regret she is filing for divorce," lawyer Michael Kennedy said in a one-sentence statement.

Kennedy's secretary said he would not speak to reporters. It wasn't clear when the papers would be filed.

The couple separated in February amid a flurry of publicity over Trump's relationship with model-actress Marla Maples.

"Mrs. Trump and I have discussed our situation and have mutually agreed that it would be appropriate for her to file for divorce," Trump said in a statement.

The Trumps married 13 years ago and have three children.

"It comes as no surprise that this is happening," said Trump's lawyer, Jay Goldberg.

He said Mrs. Trump decided to file for divorce after realizing that a previous lawsuit she filed challenging a financial agreement with her husband was "a frivolous maneuver."

Lawsuit points finger at global warming

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Inside the Interior Department, they refer to it as "the cow pie case." And frankly, they think it stinks.

But if the agency loses a case that a federal judge has ordered to trial, it soon may have to determine whether flatulent sheep, cattle and buffalo are contributing to global warming.

The Washington-based Foundation on Economic Trends filed a lawsuit last year accusing the federal Agriculture, Interior and Energy departments of failing to measure how much flatulent livestock are contributing to global warming by pumping methane gas into the atmosphere.

"It is basically known as the cow pie case," said the Interior Department's top lawyer, Tom Sansonetti.

Sansonetti is taking the fragrant fracas seriously, especially after losing an early round in court. He has assigned a lawyer to the case full-time.

"We filed a motion to dismiss ... and we lost. It's going to go to full trial on this issue," he told the Wyoming Stock Growers Association and Wyoming Wool Growers Association on Friday.

"I couldn't believe it."

The foundation alleges that flatulent livestock could be producing up to 15 percent of atmospheric methane, believed by some scientists to be a contributing factor to global warming.

Scientists believe global warming, also known as the greenhouse effect, occurs when the layer of carbon dioxide and other gases accumulating above the Earth prevents the atmosphere from cooling. Scientists say it can lead to potentially catastrophic climate changes.

War is hell. Just ask any veteran. They'll tell you. But in spite of, or maybe because of that, men who face a common enemy in combat develop a bond which remains strong long after Armistice has been signed and discharged soldiers have returned home to begin their lives again.

This weekend, veterans of Company G, otherwise known as Matney's Raiders, have gathered at various sites in Snyder for their 17th annual reunion. Activities began Thursday night and concluding activities were planned for Saturday at Western Texas College. Snyder Mayor Troy Williamson was to offer the official welcome and greeting Saturday morning.

Company G veterans who stood toe to toe against Hitler's German army put aside their personal lives once a year in order to share memories, relive experiences, exchange personal current events and celebrate surviving the last world war to date.

Three local veterans — Bob Swint, K.O. Pitner and Don Adams — who all served in Company G during World War II, recently shared their feelings about the reunion and combat with the Snyder Daily News.

Pitner joined Company G when it was reorganized in Snyder but was later transferred to Company B. He was a captain. He first joined the National Guard in 1930.

Soldiers had to rely on instinct to survive, Pitner said, explaining that as soon as they heard a cannon they had to duck and make sure their helmets stayed on. He returned to the U.S. in July of 1945 before the end of the war due to severe injuries suffered in Oberhoppen, France when he was hit with over 100 fragments from an artillery shell. He spent 18 months in the hospital. Armistice was signed before he was able to return to duty.

Pitner remained in the National Guard, because "times were hard," and was again called to serve his country during the Korean War.

He has been able to attend all the Company G reunions in Snyder for the past 17 years.

Adams was a Tech Sergeant. He had joined the National Guard for a year, but that stretched to 54 months after the war started. He too was wounded when someone stepped on an anti-personnel mine on Mount Longo in Italy. Five soldiers were hurt, including Adams, but no one died.

He was later reclassified with the 70th General Hospital and since he had enough points under the Army's Point System he was able to fly home in June of 1945.

Adams attended all the reunions except for 1975 when he was injured in an automobile accident.

Swint, who was a first sergeant, didn't get wounded in combat but he acquired a severe case of yellow jaundice from staying in fox holes.

Swint earned a furlough home and just as he was getting ready to return to combat, Armistice was signed. He was offered a commission to stay in the service, but Swint declined. He had had enough and he wanted to go home.

Swint missed the Battle of the Bulge while he was on furlough. Later he learned that his replacement had been captured.

His original tour of duty was supposed to be for 18 months, but after Pearl Harbor was bombed, he said he stayed in the service for 3½ years in all. Swint has also made all the reunions.

This trio of Company G vets all agreed that they wouldn't trade their war memories and experiences for anything, but they also don't want to fight in another war either.

Local veterans of Company G started the first local reunion in Snyder 17 years ago. A Company G veteran who lived in one of the Northern states had visited in Snyder and when he spoke about the reunions that had been held, that prompted local vets to arrange something similar in Snyder.

Each year, the reunion has grown and usually a new face or two turns up after learning about the yearly event. One very special reunion occurred about 10 years ago when fellow Company G veteran Fred Rios of San Antonio — whom everyone had thought was killed in action — showed up alive and well. For many long years they said they never knew that not only had Rios survived the war but he had also pursued a military career after it ended.

The three veterans said that they always looked forward to getting together with their war buddies.

Adams explained it this way. "Veterans of a war have a closeness and an attachment to each other. The camaraderie is special and each reunion usually brings someone who has not attended before."

Before the first reunion was held in Snyder, some 35 years had passed before some veterans had seen each other. Swint, who loves the family-type atmosphere of the reunions, said "even if we had been out-of-touch with someone we always recognized the smile and when we all get together and visit we remember more and more all the time."

Pitner said he always looks forward to each reunion because he "likes to see all the people."

Some 100 men from the Snyder area joined Company G when it was reorganized during World War II. About 13 veterans of the company still live in Snyder.

Other local Company G vets besides Adams, Swint and Pitner include Harry Chapman, Hugh Fargason, Lynn Fenton, Lester Hanback, Lonnie Johnson, Clarence T. Merritt, Dawson Moreland, Kenneth Panter, John C. Portis, and Lowell Prince.

Swint, Adams and Pitner each have war tales to tell. And each has numerous medals awarded during their war service. In order to survive, they all said they had to block out what was happening to their buddies and concentrate on their objective. When soldiers fell in the field, they each said they had to "just walk over them" because that was the only way to keep their sanity and still get the job done.

But that was never easy for the men to do. Swint remembers an incident when he was supposed to pick out an area for them to "dig into" but he couldn't decide which was the best place because all of the rocks in that particular area bore marks of having been shelled.

He said he was too agitated at first to decide, so right in the middle of the war frenzy, he sat down and made himself a quick cup of coffee out of his K rations. After that he made his decision and they ended up staying about two to three weeks in that area.

The three veterans said it was not unusual for them to stay in their foxholes for weeks at a time. Bathing was out of the question as was any type of food other than C or K rations.

C rations were basically a meal in a can. Basic meals included meat, beans, hash or stew. The K rations were more of a luxury item. Food stuffs such as eggs, bacon and coffee were packaged in a square box which could be heated in order to make coffee. The boxes contained three meals.

THE BATTERED WOMAN'S SURVIVAL GUIDE: BREAKING THE CYCLE, by Jan Berliner Statman.

This simple straightforward book presents a realistic look at the options available to battered women. There are chapters on protection by the legal system, by police departments and through community resources. True-life case histories illustrate the battering syndrome. A profile of the battering personality helps women recognize potential danger before getting into an abusive relationship. Not only for victims of abuse, this is also intended for people who suspect abuse is taking place but don't know what to do about it.

FAMILY FOCUS

STRENGTHENING TEXAS FAMILIES

THE GIFT OF COMMON SENSE

No matter how hard you look as the holiday season approaches, there's one gift you won't find in the stores. That's the gift of common sense. This is a time of year when thinking and spending may be tempted by the thought that the more that is done or bought, the better off the family will be. Common sense takes a back seat.

What values about money and its management are conveyed to children in the zeal to out-do and out-spend, especially during the holiday season? One value that is conveyed is that of materialism, that quantity gift-giving is valued over simplicity. Another value that may be unconsciously conveyed is that it's okay to overspend and blow the budget when it's for Christmas. Would we approve of overspending and buying sprees at other, less symbolic times of the year?

Do we use the holiday shopping experience to teach children the consumer skills they will need as adults? Are they learning to compare the quality and price of merchandise, to read labels, to know warranty and gift exchange provisions? Are they learning how to distinguish good buys from bad ones? As adults, do we use good shopping habits? Whatever we do, good or bad, we are transmitting our values to children about what matters about our money management and what doesn't.

Are children growing up thinking that bill-paying headaches and a lot of belt-tightening are normal January activities for all families if they see it in their own families? Or do they see a holiday season based on reasonable spending limits that won't strap the family budget during the rest of the year?

To a large extent, adults model the future money behavior of children by the way they manage the family money today. Holiday time is a good time to make a conscious effort to model positive money management actions.

emergency rations such as hard chocolate candy, orange slice candy and orange marmalade. They said they ate so much orange marmalade, they grew sick of it and don't eat it to this day.

Basically, the soldiers lived off their rations, but occasionally they were able to get food from civilians in whatever country they were fighting in. Swint remembers getting jam in France, while Italy yielded goat cheese, bread and wine.

Adams said on the front line they always relied on rations, but as they pulled back from the main combat area, they got better food to eat.

Once, in France, they said they came across some "destroyed villages." The people stayed in hiding at first, but when they realized they were American soldiers rather than Germans they came out of hiding.

Adams recalled a time when the monotony of living in foxholes got to him and he decided to take a bath in a nearby lake. In wartime you do what you have to do to get by, to survive and to stay sane.

They also marveled though that in spite of the weather, especially severe winters, they remained healthy. Prior to being shipped overseas, they said they had trained in both hot and cold climates in order to prepare for combat in Europe.

Swint, Pitner and Adams all remembered hearing "Axie Sallie" broadcasts as she tried to undermine the Allied Forces.

Swint said they dismissed her broadcasts as "propaganda." She and "Tokyo Rose" had the same purpose in mind which was to rattle the Allied Forces into making a mistake.

When Swint, Pitner and Adams joined the National Guard they got paid $1 per week for attending a weekly meeting. Each summer they also attended camp for two weeks. Yearly pay averaged $12 to $14 which was a lot of money in those years.

During the war, they were all proud to have earned a combat infantry badge, because it also meant a pay increase of $10 each month.

Swint, Pitner and Adams also earned good conduct medals and other medals.

After the war, Swint said he ended up writing to a lot of people who wanted to know what had happened to their loved ones.

When Swint returned home after the war, he worked at an appliance store in Abilene. Later he and his wife, Maurine, became farmers, which is what they have done for the past 39 years.

Adams first worked in the oilfields in McCamey and later operated a service station. He owned and operated a laundromat for seven years, was the local tax assessor/collector for 12 years and today operates Adams Used Car. Also, when Pitner was called in to serve in the Korean War, he sold the bakery he then operated to Adams.

In later years, Pitner returned to Snyder where he was the city secretary before retiring after 19 years.

In addition to getting together for the yearly reunion, Company G veterans also exchange cards, notes, pictures and phone calls.

The reunion is a treat for the wives of the veterans because they like to get together and visit as well. In fact, a few years ago some of the wives tried to form their own auxiliary, but that idea didn't go over too well as they all discovered that they preferred to meet with the men during the regular reunion.

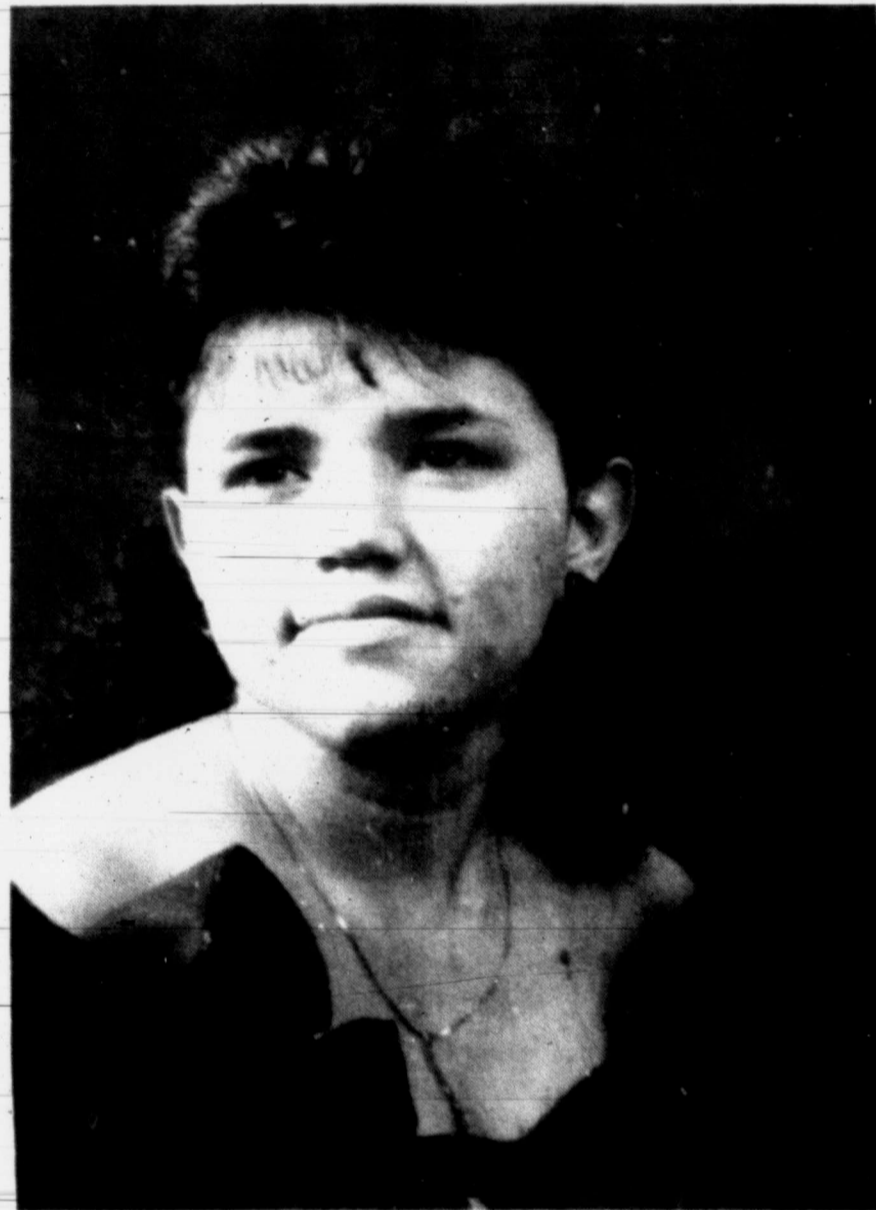

A 1940 National Guard book lists these facts about Company G, which was reorganized in Snyder on April 18, 1924. It required about two years for the organization to become an effective fighting machine. When Company G held its first inspection in 1927, it was awarded the highest rating in the 142nd Infantry.

Company G was mobilized in Snyder in 1940 but the men had to train in Brownwood because facilities weren't yet available.

During World War II, the 36th Division, of which Company G was a part of saw action in Italy, Southern France, central Europe and Germany. Division members were awarded 15 Congressional Medals of Honor, 2,354 Silver Stars, 80 Distinguished Service Crosses, 5,407 Bronze Stars, 88 Air Medals and 12 Unit Citations.

Heroes presented with Carnegie awards

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A Massachusetts gravel plant foreman who saved a co-worker from grinding machinery and two Canadian women who confronted a knife-wielding intruder after he slashed their elderly neighbor were among 18 people recognized by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.
 Also honored was Don W. Rocap, 67, of Lubbock, Texas, who saved two men from a burning car after a crash in Lubbock on Oct. 10, 1989.
 The annual awards honor people who risked their lives in efforts to save others. Three of those named Thursday died in their attempts.
 The commission founded by Pittsburgh industrialist Andrew Carnegie in 1904 has recognized 7,495 Americans and Canadians over the years. More than $18.8 million has been awarded. Winners, or their survivors, get $2,500.
 Twenty-four-year-old Michael Radwicz of Hinsdale, Mass., said he had little time to think when co-worker Scott Pierce became entangled in a gravel sorter he was repairing on Oct. 18, 1989.

 "He was leaning in to see how it was working," Radwicz said. "I could see him getting wrapped up in the shaft, getting dragged up."
 "I grabbed for him and yanked him out. He fell back on the deck and I could see his arm was almost off," he said.
 Pierce's left arm and Radwicz's left thumb were nearly severed and had to be reattached.
 Also honored were Grace Nolan, 50, of Whitby, Ontario, and Irene Beaton, 67, of Lindsay, Ontario, who challenged a man who broke into the home of a neighbor, Dorothy Blackhall, 72, and slashed her face.
 Mrs. Blackhall survived and the attacker was placed in a mental institution, Mrs. Nolan said.
 Kenneth L. Yant, Jr., 33, of Plainfield, Ind., was among those who died as a result of their heroic acts. Yant died Aug. 26, 1989 while trying to rescue an 11-year-old boy from drowning in Martinsville, Ind.

 Another award winner who died was John E. Dedon, 42, of Jackson, La., who died trying to save an 8-year-old boy from drowning Aug. 6, 1989. The third was David A. Guillen, 32, who fatally shot Dec. 1, 1989 when he intervened on behalf of a 13-year-old boy being robbed of his bike in Bell, Calif.
 In 1975, the House joined the Senate in voting to restore the American citizenship of Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee, more than a century after his death.

Human life expectancy may be limited to the age of 85

WASHINGTON (AP) — An average life span of 85 years is the best that humans can hope for, even if medical science defeats all of the major killer diseases, researchers said in a study published Friday.
 University of Chicago researcher S. Jay Olshansky said the upper limit of human life expectancy is set because uncontrollable effects of aging set in, causing a slow decline that slides irreversibly into death.
 In a study published Friday in the journal Science, Olshansky and two co-authors wrote that even if cures were found for most of the fatal diseases, "the natural degeneration of the body puts a cap of about 85 years on the average age of death."
 The conclusion differs from many other studies and some experts on human aging disagree strongly.
 "If we keep making progress as we have made in the past, then a baby born today can expect to live 100 years," said James Vaupel of the University of Minnesota.

 Olshansky said most of the major advances in life expectancy have already been achieved through improvements in public health, nutrition, immunization and advanced medical care. The average life span in the United States went from 47 years in 1900 to 75 years today.
 Death rates for the young and those under age 50 are now so low that even if all dying in that age group were eliminated, the life expectancy at birth would increase by only 3.5 years, said Olshansky. The major killers — heart disease, cancer, stroke and diabetes — usually strike after the age of 50.
 "Once you go beyond the age of 85, people die from multiple organ failure. Old age, basically.

And there is no cure for that," Olshansky said.
 Vaupel said he believes the Olshansky study is too pessimistic.
 Some women in some populations already are approaching life expectancies of 85, Vaupel said. In Okinawa, the average life span of women now is 83, and the life expectancy of women in some Mormon groups is almost 85 now, he said. This was accomplished without major medical intervention, he said.
 Olshansky said about 2 million Americans are over age 85, most of whom require close attendance and care.
 Olshansky's co-authors were Bruce A. Carnes of the Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois and Christine Cassel of the University of Chicago.

UPPER COLORADO SOIL AND WATER CONSERVATION DISTRICT 1990 ANNUAL REPORT

Report Sponsored by the Directors of the Upper Colorado SWCD

Cindy Lickey, left, of West Elementary and Pat Murphy of Borden County received Conservation Teacher awards at the District's Annual Awards Banquet in April.

BORDEN COUNTY

SCURRY COUNTY

Regular monthly meetings are held on the third Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at the Shack Restaurant in Snyder, Texas, Phone 573-6317.

The Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District is a legal sub-division of the State of Texas, governed by five elected directors. Our self-governed district has a working agreement with the Soil Conservation Service to provide technical assistance for planning, application, and management of conservation practices.

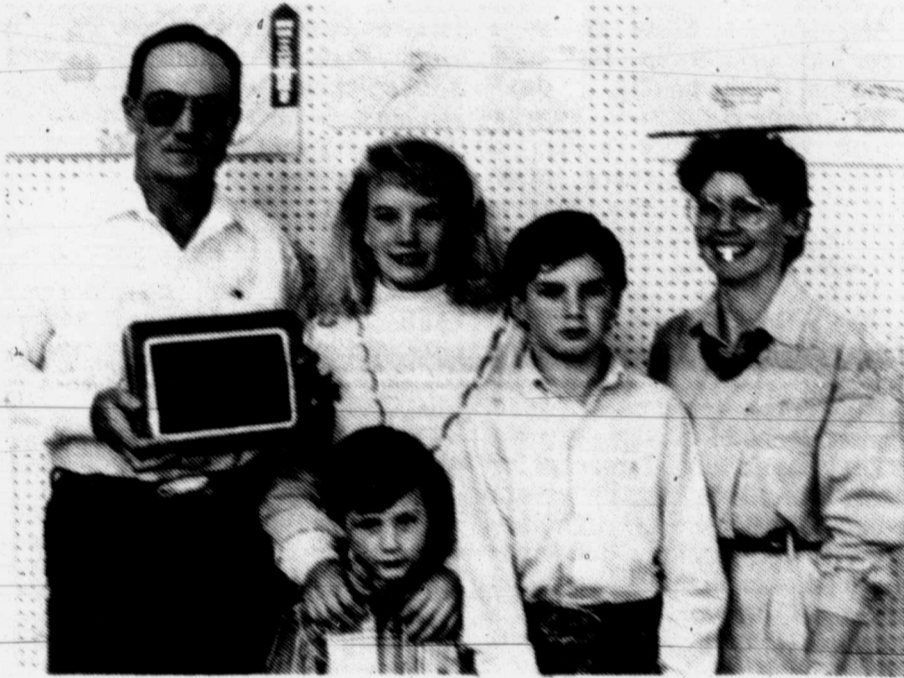

The Upper Colorado Soil and Water Conservation District wishes everyone a happy and prosperous year in 1991. Our sincere thanks go out to each person, business, organization, and unit of government who helped us in our effort to make the district a more satisfying place in which to live and work. A special thanks to the Snyder Field Office staff of the Soil Conservation Service for providing the technical assistance necessary for us to carry out our objectives. District Conservationist Terry Hefner, Range Conservationist Mike Squires, and SCS Technician Mark McDaniel have helped make our accomplishments in conservation possible.

Oil companies are adopting greener pastures

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the nation's giant oil companies suddenly are proclaiming steps to conserve energy and protect the Earth, in what almost seems a battle over which one can be the biggest environmentalist. Within a 24-hour span this week, four of the majors announced media efforts with an environmental spin. The greener stance comes as the industry is disputing charges of price-gouging and profiteering from the Persian Gulf crisis, but it remained unclear if the timing was coincidental or intentional. As the conservation campaigns got under way, Chevron Corp. issued a "Report on the Environment" that said it's trying to protect elephants and rhinos in Sumatra. Texaco Inc. kicked off a conservation drive called "Let's Put Our Energy into Saving It," which will include a barrage of print and broadcast advertising that urges consumers to use less fuel in cars and homes. Exxon Corp. announced it was distributing two types of cleaner fuel "to help improve air quality." Amoco Corp., saying "it's time to think green," unveiled a $2 billion package of energy initiatives that range from cleaner fuel to low-fume gasoline pumps. Some environmentalists found themselves at a loss for comment when asked Thursday about the oil companies' new stance. Some expressed cautious optimism and others questioned the timing of the media blitz. "I applaud the little things they do, but they're still a long way from being green," said Michael Francis of The Wilderness Society. "They want to keep this nation addicted to oil for one reason: Their profits." The oil companies disputed contentions they were trying to polish their image amid the current oil shock, although Texaco acknowledged that would be a welcome side effect. As the companies put forth their environmental messages, they even acted like they were trying to outdo each other in a competition over who could be the greenest. Chevron's claimed "a reputation as one of the petroleum industry's most environmentally responsible companies." Exxon, which became an environmentalist hate-object after the Valdez oil spill in Alaska, called itself "the leading producer of gasolines reformulated to reduce pollution" with cleaner fuels available in more than 50 markets. Amoco spokesman Neil Geary responded: "Exxon's talking about making changes in two grades, in the Washington, Baltimore and Richmond markets, meets the Clean Air Act standards for 1992." Amoco's environmental battle plan was unveiled Thursday in a Washington news conference at a model full-service gas station equipped with "new and more effective Amoco-designed gasoline pump recovery nozzles."

More than 1.5 million people displaced by Mid East crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1.5 million people have been displaced by the Persian Gulf crisis, World Bank officials and other sources say. And hundreds of thousands of workers from the Third World remain in Iraq and Kuwait. The numbers dwarf the approximately 1,000 hostages from the United States, 1,400 from Britain and 3,000 from the Soviet Union. Hundreds of thousands of others are returning to their distant homelands, some as far away as the Philippines and South Korea, said officials at the World Bank, which coordinates aid at its Washington headquarters for the hardest-hit countries. The foreigners were lured to the Middle East by the better wages that Iraq and Kuwait could pay because of income from oil. The largest and most recent group forced from their homes are citizens of Yemen who have been living in Saudi Arabia, some of them for decades. The Saudi government is retaliating against Yemen because of Yemeni sympathy for President Saddam Hussein of Iraq. About 2 million of the 12 million people in Saudi Arabia were Yemenis. Arntraud Hartmann, who works on the problem at the World Bank, told a meeting on refugees this week that the number of displaced Yemenis was about 500,000. The World Bank is the biggest source of aid to the Third World, lending more than $20 billion last year. Its staff is speeding up loans to the countries badly hit by the gulf crisis and is expected to report in the next few weeks to its 154 member governments. Peter Riddleberger, a bank spokesman, said many countries have been doubly hurt: they have lost the hard cash that their citizens used to send home from Iraq and Kuwait, and they now have to spend their own money and whatever help they can get on finding homes and jobs for them. In addition, countries that import oil must pay the high prices brought on by the crisis. Some have also lost valuable trade because of the United Nations sanctions against Iraq. Egypt is one of the hardest-hit countries. Ms. Hartmann estimated that 380,000 Egyptians have fled Iraq and Kuwait, with perhaps as many more to come. When the crisis began, there were up to 1.3 Egyptians in Iraq. An additional 200,000 to 300,000 Egyptians worked in Kuwait and had an estimated $8 billion deposited in Kuwaiti banks, officials said. Egyptians working in Iraq and Kuwait sent home more than $1.65 billion a year in hard currency, much valued in their country's cash-starved economy. Jordan, Iraq's neighbor, has been hardest hit of all. A country of only 3 million people, it must try to absorb about 220,000 returning citizens. Many are professionals and skilled workers for whom there are no jobs in sight, Ms. Hartmann said.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: While making a delivery for the volunteer organization Meals on Wheels, I found myself at the door of an elderly, partially disabled woman. After identifying myself by shouting to her, she shouted back, saying she had to go find the key to the door. After entering her home, she told me that she had a dead-bolt lock on the inside of the door that could be opened only with a key. This startled me, because I noticed that all the doors and windows were secured with iron bars. I tried to explain as diplomatically as possible that this might be a dangerous situation in case she had to get out quickly in the event of fire, or for some other reason. This same condition existed in another home I visited, also inhabited by an elderly, disabled person. Abby, wouldn't it be a good idea for these people to wear the key on a chain or string around their necks? PAUL E. MORRILL, TULSA

DEAR PAUL: An excellent idea. The key could remain out of sight, worn inside the clothing. It's not uncommon for keys to be misplaced — the resident could easily forget where he or she placed it for safekeeping.

DEAR ABBY: Recently, I took a trip from Mississippi to Denver, which took me through Kansas. Needing gas, I pulled into a self-service station and proceeded to fill my tank. I noticed a young college girl filling a car tire with air. She continued and continued and continued and I finally asked her if she had a tire gauge, which she didn't. I told her that it looked like she was inflating the tire to the extreme and most tires require only about 32 pounds, and it needed to be checked. She came out with a gauge and we measured the tire, which had 45 pounds of pressure at that point. She would have kept going if I hadn't cautioned her. Abby, please, please caution your readers, especially those who are novices around cars, that radial tires do look soft. They are supposed to. I once saw the aftermath of a tire blowout as a result of overinflation, and it was deadly. Always have a tire gauge, or have someone who works at the filling station tend to the air. If a tire blows, not only does the rubber shatter, but the steel rims also act like grenade fragments and will maim for life, if there is any life left. Thanks, Abby. CAUTIOUS IN OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS.

DEAR CAUTIOUS: A word to the wise... Those who are unsure about how much air they should have in their tires should take the time to read the owner's manual that comes with the car. Each automaker has its own

Turmoil in Gulf takes toll on U.S. economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The turmoil in the Persian Gulf, which has taken its toll on the U.S. economy by sending oil prices skyward, now threatens to worsen the nation's unemployment problems, analysts say.

The fallout from Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait has left American businesses skittish about adding employees, according to private economists.

"There's a buttoning up of the overcoats going on," said Robert Dederick, chief economist at the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago.

Iraq's continued occupation of Kuwait and the threat of war "does not make one anxiously go out and hire people," Dederick said.

Analysts will get their first comprehensive look at the nation's economic activity for October with Friday's release of the Labor Department's unemployment figures for last month.

In advance of the report, many analysts predicted the jobless rate inched up from 5.7 percent to 5.8 percent in October, or possibly even up to 5.9 percent.

If the unemployment rate did climb last month, it would mark the fourth straight monthly increase. The nation has not suffered four consecutive jumps in the jobless rate since 1982.

Although government data indicates the U.S. economy grew at a slow annual rate of 1.8 percent in the third quarter of 1990, many analysts contend the nation slipped into a recession at the tail end of the July-September period or the start of the current fourth quarter.

The recent rise in unemployment — before the jobless rate began going up in July it had been holding steady for months at 5.3 percent — just offers more evidence of a downturn, analysts said.

"What's happening is the economy is rolling into a mild recession," Dederick said.

A jobless rate of 5.8 percent would mark a three-year high, the largest level since it reached that level in November 1987.

Many analysts expected the Labor Department's report to probably show that the nation's industries lost about 75,000 jobs in October, a far cry from the 200,000 new jobs the economy was adding each month last year.

The nation's manufacturing continued to spread to the service sector, which has been in a slump for months, was expected to continue its slide in October. Economic weakness probably continued to spread to the service sector as well, analysts said.

Faulty inspection blamed for '89 crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Airlines is disputing U.S. safety investigators' finding that it should have detected the tiny flaw in a critical engine part that disintegrated, causing the 1989 Iowa crash that killed 112 people.

The National Transportation Safety Board said Thursday the probable cause of the crash of United Flight 232 at Sioux City, Iowa, was "human factors limitations" in United's inspection and quality control procedures. The board issued the finding without dissent.

Embargo forces lifestyle change

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqis feeling the squeeze from the U.N. embargo are changing their eating habits, lifestyle and even rediscovering herbal medicine.

Three months after Iraq invaded Kuwait and the United Nations retaliated with the trade cutoff, Baghdad is beginning to feel its isolation. The pains, although minor, are adding up.

"You want to know if the embargo is effective. Yes it is effective," Information Minister Latif Jassim, told reporters. "You know we want to build our country but we cannot buy. We cannot sell anymore."

Faulty traffic lights in Baghdad can't be repaired because of a lack of spare parts. Many taxis and cars have broken windshields that can't be replaced.

TV announcers tell Iraqis not to waste food or overeat.

The lines at bread stores and government-run shops selling rationed food are becoming longer every day.

Restaurants are closing. At those that remain open, food portions have been reduced; a chicken leg now is served as two portions.

Merchants said prices have risen five to six times since the embargo, and the government has listed 12 lifesaving antibiotics that can be obtained only in state-run hospitals.

Country Life Continued From 8B

But we are on our way.

It's clear that Pozner feels the mistakes of his country had to be made in order for the Russian people to break a centuries-old mindset of Czarist rule. They had to reach a point to where they could understand the meaning of freedom, and to yearn for it. He goes on to say that it could take an entire generation before the change can be complete, comparing the Russian people to the Israelites, wandering the wilderness for 40 years: "Moses... had to wait... for a new generation of people who had never experienced slavery to be born. Only then could he bring them to the Promised Land."

It's time we learned to welcome mistakes and failures for what they are: opportunities for learning and growth, not excuses for giving up or reasons for shame. In fact, I think we ought to throw out the word "failure" from our vocabulary. Just get rid of it. Make up some new word that means "renewal."

Maybe Dr. Seuss could think of one:

"But on you will go though the weather be foul
On you will go though your enemies prowl.
On you will go though the Hakken-Kraks howl.
Onward up many a frightening creek, though your arms may get sore and your sneakers may leak...
And will you succeed?
Yes! You will indeed!
(98 and 3/4 percent guaranteed.)"

Board members said that because none of hundreds of similar tests conducted over many years on similar parts had ever found a defect, laxity on the part of inspectors was to be expected.

Reporting on a year-long investigation, the safety board said United's inspectors missed a fatigue crack in a critical area of a titanium fan disk in the tail engine of the DC-10 aircraft.

The plane, en route from Denver to Chicago, crashed 40 minutes after metal from its exploding tail engine shredded the hydraulic system used to control flight operations.

United officials who attended the hearing said blame should have been placed on General Electric Aircraft Engines, which manufactured the part at its Evendale, Ohio, plant in 1971.

They said there is no evidence that a half-inch crack in the bore area of the fan disk could have been detected when the part was last inspected in April 1988.

"GE gave us a bum part," said Bob Doll, United's vice president for engineering and quality assurance.

Stephen M. Wolf, the airline's chairman and president, said in a statement: "United, which has complied fully with this investigation, vigorously disputes the NTSB's... finding as it pertains to our maintenance procedures.

"United's rigorous maintenance procedures were in full compliance with all federal regulations and all mandated manufacturer's requirements," Wolf said.

The safety board concluded that a flaw in the fan disk, which later caused a half-inch long crack in a vital area of the engine part, was formed during manufacture of the titanium, ingot from which the disk was forged.

If you're tired of higher taxes, losing local control of our schools and losing the war on crime and drugs, elect a State Representative who is prepared to solve the problems and be our strong, clear voice in Austin:

John Pennington

Senator Phil Gramm is for John Pennington:

"I'm for John for a lot of reasons. I've known John for many years, but just let me tick some of them off. Number one, he's not a lawyer, he's a businessman. He's saved up his money and went into business for himself. For five years, through tough economic times, he's paid the rent and met the payroll and that's exactly the kind of experience we need in Austin, Texas.

"I'm for John because he didn't sit around and complain about the problem. He got involved in juvenile justice here in his home county and two other counties and as a private citizen, he's gotten out and worked with young people that are involved in the juvenile system and in our state in 1990 that means drugs.

"He knows what drugs do to our young people; and I know that he is going to work with me everyday in every way to help rid our state of illegal drugs and that's very important to me and I know it is important to you."

—Senator Phil Gramm

Clayton Williams is for John Pennington:

"I have concrete plans to fight drugs, rebuild the quality of our schools, create jobs, and reduce the high cost of government. But I can't do it alone. I need good men and women in the legislature to help me. Men like John Pennington.

"I encourage you to send John to represent you in Austin, and together we will fight to make Texas great again."

—Clayton Williams

John Pennington will vote the West Texas Way!

What can one man do to stop the rising tide of problems in our state government? It took only one man at a time to create the problems and they can be undone the same way. Every additional Republican like John Pennington that we elect to the Legislature is another rock in the dam holding back a flood of government spending, prisons with revolving doors and ever-higher taxes.

The Pennington Family: John and Jeanette with Andrew, Sarah and Allen.
