investigation of oil spill

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) reports that the captain of a tanker responsible for a 100square-mile oil spill had drinking problems, and crews struggled against the slick that was moving "like it's on a superhighway.

President Bush said at the White House that the federal government would consider taking over the cleanup after top officials travel to Alaska today "to take a hard look at where this disaster stands.'

"We look at all areas in an investigation and that's an area of concern,' National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Bill Woody said of reports that Exxon Valdez Capt. Joseph Hazelwood had a drunken driving conviction as recently as September.

Hazelwood likely will be required to testify at NTSB hearings that begin April 4 in Anchorage, Woody said.

Hazelwood, 42, was not on the bridge when the vessel left shipping lanes on Friday to avoid ice, rammed a charted reef and ran aground in Prince William Sound, said Exxon Shipping Co. officials. The third mate, who did not have proper certification, was in charge, company President Frank Iarossi said.

Investigators said the results of drug and alcohol tests on crew members will be made public perhaps in two or three days.

Hazelwood pleaded guilty in after an accident near his home in Huntington, N.Y., The New York Times reported today. He was convicted of drunken driving last September in New Hampshire and his license was revoked, the paper said. His driver's license had been suspended on two other occasions during the past five years, the Time said.

Telephone calls to his home Monday were not answered.

Attempts on Monday to clean up the nation's worst oil spill were set back by 70-mph gusts Authorities today investigated that swept the slick more than 30 miles toward the southwest, and forced crews to retreat.

> The cleanup "is not proceeding well — believe me, that is an understatement," Iarossi said.

Fewer than 135,000 gallons of oil have been recovered from the 10.1 million-gallon spill.

Officer class has interest

More than 60 application forms were handed out Monday, the first day these were available, for the third offering of the TDC correctional officer training class offered through Western Texas College.

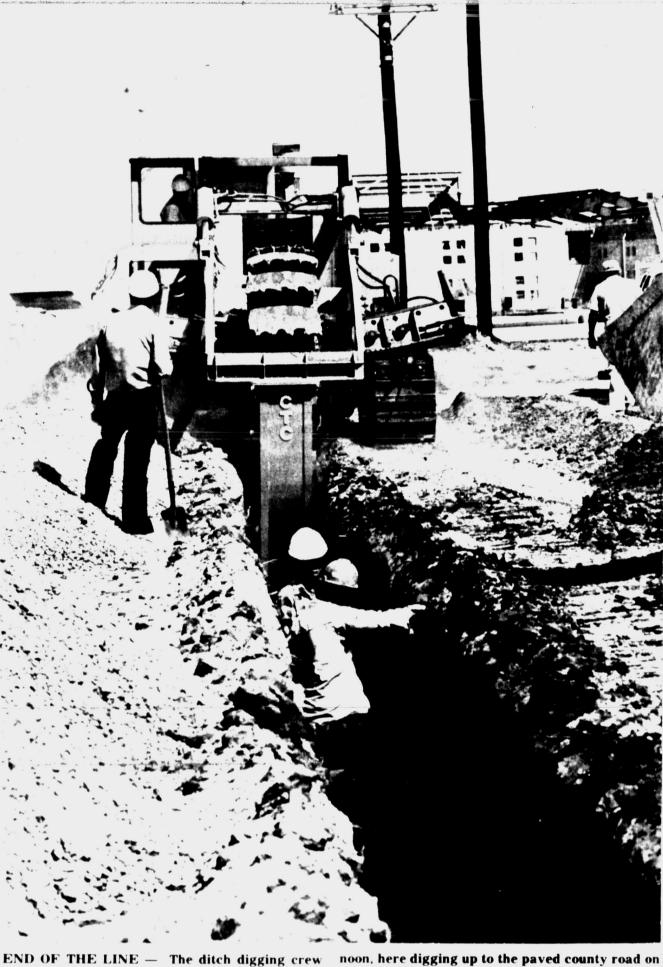

This class is the first which will be completed in conjunction with the actual opening of the Daniel Unit now under construction northeast of the city. A class number of around 40 is sought.

Wanda Falls, assistant director for WTC's Continuing Education Department, said that nine class applicants were waiting at her office when it reopened Monday after the week-long spring break.

That began the rush on class application forms which lasted through the day. "It's all we did," she noted.

Because of the approaching opening date for the 1,000-bed prison, the signup period for the third TDC guard class has been shortened. The class signup will continue through April 7 with the first day of class set May 4.

Classes will meet Tuesday and Thursday nights with some sessions on Friday and Saturday. The tuition fee for the class is LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A Southwest Airlines executive is the likely choice for Texas Tech University president, and the school's board of regents has scheduled a meeting this week to make the selection, university officials said.

J. Fred Bucy, chairman of the board, said he will recommend Robert W. Lawless, Southwest Airlines chief operating officer, be appointed as president for Texas Tech and for Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

"The Texas Tech Board of Regents has interviewed a number of outstanding candidates for the presidency at Texas Tech and I feel that the Board is now ready to come to a decision, Bucy said in a statement Monday

Pay boost

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee says a 7.1 percent pay increase for public higher education faculty will help retain top quality instructors and researchers.

"We have recommitted this state to two more years to have a forward looking approach to higher education," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan. The Finance panel approved Monday without dissent a proposed $400 million increase in higher education that includes a 7.1 percent pay increase for faculty members for each of the next two fiscal years.

The funding level was not as much as higher education officials wanted, but is enough to keep "the momentum going," Caperton said.

Faculty members at public senior colleges received an average 6.7 percent increase in the 1987-88 budget year, according to Randy Wallace, director of financial planning for the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

You can keep yelling and screaming and shaking the bars for only so long. I don't have much hair left because I pulled it all out."

Adams, a shy, softspoken man trol. with a dry wit, has declared his innocence since he was convicted in 1977 of killing a Dallas police officer. But it was not until 1988 that his case became a public issue, when filmmaker Errol Morris produced a documentary called "The Thin Blue Line."

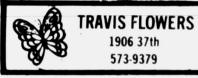

The film questioned the truth of testimony that led a jury to convict Adams, then 28.

He was released from prison last Tuesday after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the conviction. As Adams was arriving home last Thursday to a throng of wellwishers, prosecutors in Texas announced they would not seek to retry him

Since then, Adams has been trying to sandwich a reunion with family, friends and the life he once knew between interviews with reporters.

The rocket will be launched at White Sands by Space Services Inc. of Washington, D.C., the company that launched-the private Conestoga I spacecraft from Matagorda Island, Texas, in September 1982.

The Conestoga I, which was fitted with a 490-pound dummy payload that splashed down in the Gulf of Mexico, was the first privately financed space shot in the United States. Since then, the federal government has instituted licensing procedures for private space launches, and Consort I is the first one to get the green light.

"This launch you can probably trace to the Challenger disaster, because these experiments were hoped to be carried aboard the Challenger or future shuttles,' said Walter Pennino, an investor and spokesman for SSI.

The Conestoga I launch proved private industry could launch spacecraft, and also showed the federal government was unprepared for the new industry.

"There was no single agency we or anyone else could go to and ask if we could do this," Pennino said, adding SSI had to consult with the Federal Aviation Administration, Federal Communications Commission, Defense Department and the sheriff's department, among other agencies.

"On our own initiative, we went

Development of Space. Each university-affiliated consortium receives an annual $1 million grant from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for five to seven years, said Ana Villamil, spokeswoman for NASA's 41/2year-old Office of Commercial Programs.

'Each (consortium) is supposed to be self-sufficient after the end of that period," she said.

The decision to drive to a close slam should be based on first- and secondround controls. Here, although North had only 13 high-card points, he had controls in every suit. Bidding two his slam contract.

clubs (Stayman) turned up a 5-4 spade fit. North's fifth spade plus the singleton club brought North's hand up to 16 or 17 support points. So North asked for aces and bid the slam. Now declarer had to make it.

Because of his partner's lead-directing double, West led the club four. South won the ace, played A-K of spades, ruffed a club and then played out the hearts. East did not bother to rutt in on the fourth heart, but declarer still threw him in with a third round of spades. Declarer's plan, not bad, was to force East to lead away from his diamond holding. If the diamond honors were split, declarer would now pick up the suit without a loser. East did lead a diamond, but West held both honors, so the slam met defeat.

South should do better. When East shows up with three spades and three hearts, declarer should assume the likelihood of long clubs held by East for his lead-directing double. Further, if the lead by West was fourth-best, that four-spot could only be from four or five clubs, strong evidence of club length in the East hand. Do you see the right play? South should cash the ace and king of diamonds, then throw East on lead with the trump queen. Left with nothing but clubs, East will have to give declarer a sluff and a ruff and

Sinking Ferry will be major task for Seton Hall Pirates

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) -Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo has almost 25 videotapes of Duke's basketball team in action. That means only that Carlesimo gets more looks at the different problems the Blue Devils will in the NCAA tournament semifinal game at Seattle.

"Duke can throw different combinations at you," Carlesimo said during an informal meeting with reporters Monday. "They can put in a small, quick, athletic team or they can bulk up with a bigger lineup. Their parts are very interchangeable.

Carlesimo said he still hasn't decided how the Pirates, making their first Final Four, will handle

Bill who? Michigan fans forget Frieder

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) Less than a month ago, Bill Frieder was hardly a man whose name drew the instant disdain of University of Michigan students.

But now that interim coach Steve Fisher have taken the Wolverines to the NCAA tournament's Final Four for the first time since 1976, some are asking, "Who's Bill?"

Michigan students just back from their team's victory in the Mideast Regional at Lexington, Ky., said the Wolverines' success under Fisher virtually erased any doubts they had when the team was left without Frieder, who quit to take over the vacant coaching job at Arizona State.

"I think there's kind of surprise on campus because they failed so many times in the past," said Lance Lankford, 19, a sophomore from Trenton. "It's a great feeling to have them come through when you least expect it.'

Mike Krakovsky, 19, of Staten Island, N.Y., said Frieder isn't popular on campus these days.

"Everyone is pretty much saying, who's Bill? after ne cut the team and everything," Krakovsky said.

Frieder announced March 15 he had taken the Arizona State job. Athletic director Bo Schembechler rejected Frieder's offer to coach Michigan through the tournament and turned the team over to Fisher, Frieder's assistant.

Greg Joyce, 20, a sophomore from Houghton, said Fisher has done a good job under pressure and should get the job as Frieder's replacement.

"I don't know if it was the coaching or not ... but something has clicked," Joyce said. "They are playing better than before. It seems Frieder's leaving has helped."

Fisher has been too busy to worry about Frieder's departure and the effects it may have had on the team.

The interim coach, who began his career at Rich East High School in Park Forest, Ill., has been in demand since the Wolverines blew out Virginia 102-65 Saturday to earn the trip to Seattle.

The calls started coming in after Michigan's 92-87 victory Thursday over North Carolina and intensified after the win over Virginia.

Getting to the Final Four is something Frieder failed to achieve in nine seasons at Michigan. Fisher wishes he could keep talking about the victories over North Carolina, which stopped Michigan in the third round of the tournament in the two previous years, Virginia, South Alabama and Xavier. But he said the team has to concentrate on beating Big Ten runnerup Illinois, 31-4, on Saturday at Seattle. Illinois beat Michigan, 28-7, in the two regular season meetings, most recently by 16 points at Ann Arbor on the last weekend of the regular season.

"We will have our hands full, there's no question about that," Fisher said. "However, we do feel we are every bit as good as Illinois. We haven't proved it the two times we played them.

"But we have good players who ... believe they can beat anybody in the country. And by the way they have been playing the last two games, I think they have reason to believe that.

Duke's Danny Ferry "I think there will be a lot of

The case could affect education policies statewide.

"The main issue in this case is not football," Royce West, an attorney representing Edwards told Davis during Monday's proceeding. "It's local control over state control of school districts and grading policies.

"The (state education) commissioner should not impose his will on local school districts and on elected officials," West said.

Davis' ruling could change local grading policies if they are shown to undermine reforms achieved under the no-pass noplay rule governing extracurricular activities.

"It becomes no-pass noproblem," said assistant attorney general Kevin O'Hanlon, if a grade can be changed by the school district to allow a student to compete in sports.

DISD has argued that Kirby has no legal authority to interfere with the decision on Edwards or in any local grading, which is the asked Davis to refer to evidence it submitted during a December

The controversy started in November before the state football playoffs, when an anonymous tipster urged the TEA to examine the grades of Carter senior running back Gary Edwards, who received a failing grade in algebra for the first sixweeks of the fall 1988 semester.

Under the state's no-pass no play rules, students who receive a failing grade cannot participate in extracurricular activities until the following grading period.

School district officials said Edwards' teacher had erred in grading and that Edwards was eligible. But Kirby ruled in a December hearing that Edwards failed the course.

As a result, Carter was disqualified from the playoffs. But the school district obtained a temporary injunction allowing the team to compete and eventually win the state's Class 5A championship.

If Davis rules in favor of the TEA this time, Carter's title will be invalidated, said Don Hicks, DISD attorney.

Hicks said he doubted the district would appeal if it lost.

Former Texas reporter plays himself in film

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — It took three auditions before former KMID-TV reporter Rodey Wunsch convinced Hollywood that he could portray himself in the movie "Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure.'

In October 1987, Jessica fell into an abandoned well in Midland and was trapped for 581/2 hours. Wunsel, 25, stayed on the accident scene for 45 hours, often broadcasting live.

Intense news media coverage turned then-18-month-old Jessica into a household name and now a movie event.

The film will air May 21 on ABC. The Midland area ABC affiliate is KMID-TV Channel 2, Wunsch's former employer.

In a telephone interview from the rescue." his North Hollywood, Calif., home, Wunsch said the rescue drama will be accurate.

"The producers are really making an effort to produce a factual drama," he said. "I think West Texans will be pleased."

When the Odessa native moved to Hollywood six months ago, he noted his interest in the movie. project to producer John Kander. Kander contacted Wunsch a few months later and said the studio had written him into the script.

"I was really excited about it," Wunsch said. "Out of four weeks of shooting, I am on for three weeks. I feel confident. Basically what I say in the movie is what I

Although most filming is being done in Hollywood, the production company will be in Midland April 11-12. The crew will shoot buildings and landscapes to give movie viewers a feel for Midland. Wunsch isn't sure if this role could lead to others.

"I den't know, maybe it will. But being involved with a movie has been a lifelong dream of mine. It's a kick."

The timing for such a movie is right, Wunsch said.

"The story is such a triumph in Wunsch said. "They ask a lot of the human spirit. It counters what we usually see day-to-day.

Defense attorney David Kenner had asked for an eight-year sentence.

"That would be a joke," snapped the judge. "Here is someone who has corrupted the financial system. Here is someone who has lied and cheated. That sentence would be a slap on the wrist."

Gary Williams, 37, died at 9:31 a.m. Monday while undergoing surgery at Brooke Army Medical Center. He was the third area officer shot in the line of duty and the second to die from his wounds.

The two-year department veteran was shot once in the lower abdomen below his bulletproof vest and once in the left side of the neck, apparently with his own .357-caliber Magnum revolver, police spokesman Sgt. Paul Buske said.

Moments before he was attacked early Monday, Williams was able to punch into a remote computer the vehicle's license plate number and had in his possession the driver's license of one of the suspects, said homicide Lt. Albert Ortiz, who is heading the investigation into the shooting.

"It was an accident that changed the world as people knew it,' said organizer Gene Stilp, a Harrisburg attorney.

Seven others stood by him. In the distance, the two 350-foot high concrete cooling towers of the still-active Unit 1 silently puffed white steam.

"It was not the last nuclear accident. ... We're out here to remind people of that," Stilp said.

The vigil ended about two hours later.

About 150 people marched outside the plant Monday. Residents near the plant said they are still angry about the accident and that they bear physical and emotional scars today.

The accident began March 28, 1979, when a series of human and mechanical errors allowed the plant's 150-ton radioactive core to lose cooling water. Half the core melted and 20 tons of molten material raced to the bottom of the reactor before it was held in check by a remaining pool of water. Radioactive gas was released into the atmosphere over several days.

Ms. Lee scoffed at how the federal and state governments responded to the accident and their followup health studies that found no evidence of accidentrelated illnesses.

"They're lying," she said. "Why is it such a big, dark secret? ... It must be covered up for national security. With those kinds of friends, I don't need any enemies.'

Snyder-Scurry Health Unit staffers indicate a case of measles has been reported for a Borden County school student.

MIDDLETOWN Pa (AP) A "The so-called accident at TMI subsidiary that operates the plant now, said extra people had been assigned to the main gate this morning. The demonstration was peaceful.

Asked about the anniversary, Tombs said, "We're inclined to take the opportunity to note the lessons from the Unit 2 accident and remind ourselves of the importance of remembering those lessons.

Officials of General Public Utilities Corp., the plant owner, have said in the past few weeks that the company has made great strides since the accident and learned from the mistakes that were made.

Since 1985, when TMI Unit 1 returned to operation, they said the company has shown it has the integrity and capability to safely run a nuclear power plant.

The plant owner still faces about 2,000 damage claims.

Deborah Baker of Middletown, who won a $1 million settlement from the plant owners' insurance company, said her own research has convinced her the accident caused her son to be born nine months after the accident with Down's Syndrome.

"If I can touch one person today with my message, then I feel I have accomplished my goal," she said. "For us, the accident will always be in our memories.'

Ernest Sternglass, a professor of radiation physics at the University of Pittsburgh and a critic of government health studies, said radiation from the accident boosted infant mortality in Pennsylvania, New York and Maryland and caused thousands of other deaths by lowering people's immunity.

He said government officials manipulated mortality data to hide the damage.

'We're very proud to be part of the team that is doing that (launching Magellan)," Atlantis com-mander Dave Walker said Monday as he and his four crew members held a news conference to discuss the flight.

"I believe that we are looking at a rejuvination, if you will, of the planetary space program, that is very important, that has been in the doldrums for a while due to budgetary concerns and, of course recently, to a lack of launches," Walker said.

Shuttle missions were grounded for nearly three years in the wake of the Challenger explosion, which killed its seven astronauts Jan. 28, 1986.

Walker said interplanetary missions are important to the space program, and he also noted that the upcoming Atlantis flight is a "logical marriage between the manned and unmanned space programs.'

Magellan will be the nation's first planetary launch in 12 years and the first from the shuttle, noted astronaut Ronald Grabe, who will pilot Atlantis. The shutday mission April 28.

Magellan is to reach its destination on Aug. 10, 1990, swooping into orbit around Venus to begin a 243-day period during which it is to map the entire surface of the planet with a highresolution radar system.

By mapping the surface of Venus, scientists hope to learn more about that planet as well as the Earth.

"Venus is our closest neighbor in terms of space, mass and size," Thagard said. "Planetary science is very important to learning how the Earth evolved and what is going on here. Venus is another data point. We worry about the greenhouse effect here on Earth. Magellan could tell us if there are any parallels between Earth and Venus.'

The Hyde Park neighborhood was born before the turn of the century. Then, the neighborhood and church were growing up together, as allies.

By the 1960s, however, Hyde Park was on a skid. Homes were deteriorating, and the growing University of Texas to the south brought in renters. Character was replaced by characters such as hippies. Familes moved to the suburbs, but returned on Sundays for church.

In the 1970s, there was a renewed interest in Hyde Park's unique homes. People began moving back to the central city, renovating and showing off the properties with annual spring home tours. Hyde Park Baptist Church, under the leadership of the Rev. Ralph Smith, began to

Smith said, "Frankly, we feel like a lot of it is anti-church sentiment. I have prayed so often. It's gotten to the point of not knowing modifications. Under the new plan, the company's secured and unsecured debt is reduced from $670 million to $220 million. It would become effective in about a month. Repayment of remaining debt will depend on the company's cash flow. Approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Massie Tillman for the Northern District of Texas, Fort Worth division, the plan was amended to give Western's general unsecured creditors, including trade creditors, an increased cash payment.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -The Western Co. of North America has moved closer to emerging from bankruptcy following a federal judge's approval of the company's reorganization plan with some contract drilling businesses.'

That payment is 30 percent of each claim, plus interest on that amount from Feb. 1, 1989 to the date the plan becomes effective.

'Confirmation and consummation of the plan is the last step in Western's financial restructuring, which began nearly three years ago," said Sheldon R. Erikson, chairman and chief executive officer.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What's the best type of exercise for people who have rheumatoid arthritis? The options for me are a motorized treadmill, exercise bike, rowing machine or crosscountry machine. I'm not going to learn how to swim at my age.

DEAR READER: Almost any exercise is appropriate for patients with rheulmatoid arthritis, providing the exercise is not excessively painful.

Walking and rowing are excellent. A treadmill or exercise bike may be a bit too vigorous for most patients, but this is an individual decision.

A cross-country machine is a real workout; this may appeal to certain younger patients with mild disease.

The purpose of any exercise for arthritic patients is to maintain joint suppleness and mobility. Knitting and piano-playing are good for hands, simple calisthenics and gardening aid shoulders and the upper body; walking, golf, swimming and boating (canoeing and rowing) are good general activities. Swimming is particularly beneficial because it requires the use of many joints and muscle groups at a time when the patient is partially supported by the water; hence, fewer problems with weight-bearing joints.

In your case, swimming may not be an option. But you could certainly get in the shallow end of the pool (or in shallow water in lakes or at the sea) and paddle around, trying to move as much of you as possible. Depending on the season, you might try additional activities, such as skating, crosscountry skiing, bicycling, hiking, badminton or tennis. And don't forget

DEAR DR. GOTT: My children get pinworms about every two months. I'm concerned about them taking Vermox on such a regular basis. We never had this problem before we got our dog. What can we do to stop this

DEAR READER: Pinworms are a common parasite in certain parts of the country, especially temperate areas that do not experience heavy frosts to kill the eggs.

Infestation occurs when the pinworm eggs are transferred by fingers from dirt, toys, clothes and bedding to the mouth. Airborne eggs can be inhaled and swallowed. The parasites reach maturity within about a month in the lower intestinal tract. Adult females then migrate to the anus where they deposit their eggs, which can survive as long as three weeks outside

GOTT, M.D.

Breaking the cycle can be a real Vermox and other anti-parasite medicines will kill adult worms, but the five to seven days after therapy and, as I mentioned, can survive for an extended period in the environment.

Complete eradication of pinworms in a household requires that all members of the family be given anti-parasite medicine; the family must then move out of the house for three weeks until all the eggs have died.

Another course of drug therapy is given to all members at the end of the second week

Pinworm infestation is not a health hazard, but the symptoms of anal itching are troublesome; and most people feel uncomfortable about harboring uninvited guests in their intestinal tracts.

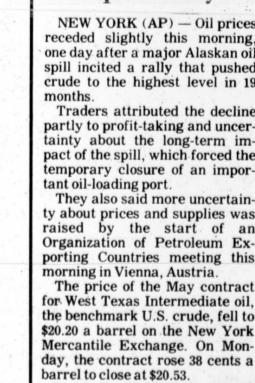

In your case, the dog's fur may be providing a temporary haven for pinworm eggs which are repeatedly swallowed by the children, thus perpetuating the cycle.

Ask you doctor to advise you about the family situation and request a consultation with a veterinarian to deal with the dog's role. You and your family should not take repeated courses of Vermox; the manufacturer recommends a maximum of two
