To protect its contents, every glass container must be perfect. All are carefully examined prior to packing to insure that they come up to established quality standards.

BOTTLES - BY THE BILLION!

Glass containers are essential in modern life. From the time your milk is delivered, in the morning, to the moment you choose your favorite cheese spread for that midnight snack, you set in motion the wheels that keep some 90 U. S. glass container plants busy at all times. Shipments of new glass containers now total some 20 billion a yearor about 118 for every man, woman and child in the country. And this figure does not take into account the billions of containers that are re-used (the average milk bottle, for example, makes 31 trips) Literally thousands of different consumer products are packed in the 20 billion new containers produced onnually, according to the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute.

Glass containers made in today's modern plants are better than ever before and provide a versatile and indispensable form of packing for oods, beverages, drugs, cosmetics, and chemicals.
