Finest Tobacco Comes From Plants In Izmir

By Shorty Shelburne

IZMIR, TURKEY — Ever since I can remember I recall reading the familiar phrase on the side of cigarette packs, "a blend of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos." The word over, Turkey and tobacco have been synonymous for ages—and it is no different now.

I recently toured a Turkish tobacco plant to get a better understanding of the phrase and it was one of the most interesting places I have ever visited. Now, for the first time I know why Turkish tobacco is considered the finest in the world and why the growing and marketing of tobacco is the leading business in this country. I also learned that a lot of things happen to tobacco before it becomes cigarettes in the corner drug store.

I toured the plant as a guest of Mehmet Rakim Uluskan, general manager of four of Izmir's largest tobacco plants. The particular plant we toured processes an average of about 65,000 pounds of tobacco a day and employs more than 3,000 persons.

The tobacco arrives at the plant mostly by horse-drawn wagons and is in tightly pressed bales weighing about 120 pounds each. The tobacco is stored according to grade. Some of it is put aside for further curing if it is not considered ready for processing.

Once the tobacco starts down the processing line, a long and tedious process is followed before it comes out of the plant ready for export or movement to a local cigarette manufacturing plant.

The initial step in processing is

READY FOR EXPORT—Processing completed, this tobacco has been pressed into a bale weighing 132 pounds, and is ready for export when the burlap cover is sewed around it. Note the collapsible container in which the bales are pressed. The bale was made ready in an Izmir, Turkey, tobacco plant.

FUTURE CIGARETTES—These strong backed Turkish laborers unload a horse-drawn wagon load of bales of tobacco upon its arrival at an Izmir, Turkey, processing plant. Door opens into special warehouse where bales are stored until ready for processing.

I Give You Texas

By BOYCE HOUSE

"There is no substitute for experience."

It is true that someone can tell us something or we can read it—but that's not the same as actually experiencing the thing ourselves.

Before a man can be a speaker worth listening to or before he can actually have something to express as a writer, he must have lived.

There are great pipelines that run from the oil fields of Texas to the great seaports of the East, hundreds of miles away; and one of those lines has to be completely full—with I don't know how many hundreds of thousands of barrels worth millions of dollars—before just one single barrel can be delivered at the other end. And so our minds must be filled with observations and happenings, mainly our own, and these must be "aged in the wood"—mellowed by reflection and their significance etched by time—then we may have a story to relate, a message to convey, a truth to tell, that others will want to hear.

Can you remember when feather boas were the fashion—and when every lady carried in her purse a bottle of smelling salts?

And a traveling salesman could be identified by the quill toothpick he wore attached to his gold watch-chain?

Those were the days when cafes sold meal tickets, $5.50 worth for $5. Since the standard price of a meal was 50 cents, you got one free out of 11.

In those days there were "book agents." To get past the secretary, a book agent carried no visible paraphernalia and not until he had gained admittance and reached into an inner pocket and pulled out a device which unfolded to show the appearance of the 14-volume, Morocco-bound set of Bulwer Lytton's complete works did the prospect realize the mission of his caller. By that time, it was too late. He succumbed to the eloquence of the visitor, who now produced an order blank and drew forth a fountain pen which he thrust into the weak grasp of his victim who signed on the dotted line, binding himself to pay the trifling sum of $2.11 a month for a mere 50 months. And culture had gained another triumph.

This Week In Washington

With CLINTON DAVIDSON
Cocktail Diplomacy

It is time we in America face some hard, unpleasant facts, and that we make up our minds what we are going to do about them.

Communism and the communist totalitarian form of government have been accepted, by or imposed upon, almost half of the people of the world. Our Free World is growing smaller almost day by day.

Democracy is in trouble, serious trouble, in many parts of the world. In no time in recorded history has there been so much world-wide unrest, turmoil and conflict during a time of "peace."

Christianity faces a challenge such as it has not known since persecution by the Romans almost twenty centuries ago. Communists deny and ridicule the teachings of Christ as vehemently as did the Romans.

If democracy is crushed, then Christianity will surely die. There is no freedom of religion under a communist dictator, nor does communism recognize any of the other basic freedoms of a democracy.

Spread Of Marxism
Half a century ago Karl Marx, author of the communist "bible," developed a program for world conquest from which his successors have never deviated. It was, and is, a diabolical plan of deceit, dissension and subjugation to discredit, then destroy democracy and individual freedom.

Communist dictators don't want a military war for the simple reason they believe they can conquer the world without firing a shot. But, neither do they want peace, as we understand it, in the world. There is no sincerity in their talk of "peaceful co-existence."

Russia and Red China will start a shooting war only if and when they become convinced that communism cannot conquer the world by other means. Let us hope, then, that we are not goaded into a "hot" war out of despair of winning the "cold" war.

For The Minds Of Men
World War III is a struggle between communism and democracy for the minds of men. It is an ideological battle waged with words in a propaganda war in which we have, so far, been almost entirely on the defensive.

Events of the past few months have brought into frightfully clear focus the deterioration of United States and Free World prestige in many areas of the world. We need to re-examine very closely many of the programs which make up the bulk of our basic foreign policy.

We have largely followed the program of cocktail and dollar diplomacy to win the support of governments. We have, in short, attempted to buy friends with military assistance and generous economic aid.

The communists, on the other hand, have been disturbingly successful in over-throwing many of those governments by infiltration into student and labor groups. They live with and work with people while many of our diplomats give lavish cocktail parties to entertain government officials.

The record in Turkey, South Korea, Cuba, Japan and, more recently, the Congo should convince us that it is time to re-evaluate and revise our foreign policies and programs. The survival of democracy depends on intelligent planning, hard work and sacrifices. Are we equal to the task? Or have we grown too soft, self-satisfied and complacent?
