Among those from this county attending the FARM BUREAU CONVENTION held in Dallas last week were: A. G. DONELSON, FLOYD MARTIN and MR. and MRS. OWEN KELLY. The BUREAU concluded a successful annual meeting and the report was that membership was at an all-time high.

The annual BLOCKER family reunion will be held in Andrews Thanksgiving Day. This event is one of the outstanding reunions of the area. One of the city's leading citizens, JOHN BLOCKER, and head of the clan will be unable to attend. He has recently been hospitalized and is now home but not able to make the trip to Andrews. His sons and daughters and other descendants will have him on their minds throughout the day. His friends are delighted that he is out of hospital and back home from Big Spring.

Thanksgiving should be a time to truly give thanks for the blessings received during the year. It is fortunate for the ones in the community who have enjoyed a good year from the standpoint of success and health. But there are those whose families have been torn and touched by the live, hot, shooting war this nation is now engaged in. There are those who have been hurt and confused by some of the recently enacted edicts of the Great Society and they have little to be thankful for. But, just as the Pilgrims did when this nation was in its infancy, we have many of the things to be thankful for handed down from the Old Frontier.

COACH BILL MILAM reported this week that BUDDY SHANKS and PHILIP PAYNE had been nominated to the All-district 5-A football team. These two men are juniors and it is fine that two such outstanding players and boys made the important squad. We will carry the names of the entire team in the next edition.

Many of you will have your sons and daughters and their families with you for Thanksgiving. Won't you please telephone the local newspaper your guest list. It is a nice compliment for your friends and loved ones names to appear in the paper. Don't wait to be called—telephone us early. Anytime right after Thanksgiving will be appreciated.

Editor's Editorial

This editorial concerns every man, woman, and child living in Martin County and in many other counties in Texas and in many other states in the union.

The Stanton Reporter has been printing the local news for more than fifty years. During those several years we have, of course, had a few complaints—now and then—about subscribers failing to get their copies of the paper. During the nearly eleven years the present editor has been serving the people of this area we have had only a handful of circulation complaints up until a few weeks ago. Our subscribers are mostly the same—their addresses are mostly the same—and our service in the office is just about the same. So we are at an extreme loss to understand why more complaints have been made in the past four weeks concerning non-delivery of the OLE RELIABLE than during the entire ten years or more we have been editing the newspaper in Martin County. Starting this week, the editor, in addition to other duties, is going to inaugurate the audit system of circulation, and personally supervise it for as long as is necessary. This simply means that every paper is going to be properly addressed and put in the mail. What happens after that is not going to be the fault of the newspaper. After all, we can only get the news, print the paper, properly address it, and turn the job over to the postoffice. We can pay the fee, follow the postal regulations help in anyway we can, but once we release those papers to the U. S. Mail we cannot deliver them. No one should expect us to.

Abilene Cotton Classing Station Sets Daily Record

Sample receipts at the Cotton Classing Office in Abilene steadily gained last week and the Friday receipts, about 6,500 samples, were the heaviest for the season. Eleven classers processed 28,000 samples for the week ending November 19, 1965, which brought the season total to 143,000. Eight micronaire operators were able to keep current with incoming cotton. About 7,000 miked, but unclassified, samples were on hand Friday night.

Receipts from Glasscock, Howard, Martin, and Midland Counties totaled 4,500. The quality of the cotton dropped slightly. Last week 38 percent of the samples was classed white, 57 percent light spotted, and 4 percent was spotted. Less than one percent was reduced in grade because of bark.

The percent of 29/32 and 15/16 cotton increased from 54 percent for the week ending November 12, to 74 per-

Joe Burnam Passes Away In Big Spring

Joe C. Burnam, 66, retired Texas and Pacific Railway Co. employee, died Tuesday, November 16, at 12:30 a.m. in his home at 413 Ryan Street in Big Spring. He had spent three weeks in the hospital and had returned to his home only a few minutes when he suffered a severe heart attack. Rehearing In Stanton Case Denied Daniel Odell McDonald, 29-year-old soldier who was given 99 years in prison for raping and killing his 82-year-old grandmother in Stanton June 12, 1964, was denied a rehearing of his case before the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals last week.

The court in October had upheld the ruling of a Martin County jury which found him guilty Feb. 1 in Stanton.

Denial of a rehearing means the court will not consider any further motions from McDonald's court-appointed attorney George Thomas of Big Spring.

McDonald was found guilty of murdering his 82-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Delzee McDonald, June 12, 1964. He has been in the Martin County jail since the slaying.

Mrs. Afton Roper, president of the Grady Parents Teachers Association, at the meeting held Tuesday night, November 16, announced that the current year's project, a public address system, had been donated by Joe Mabee.

Mabee is a prominent Martin County rancher, who has shown his interest in the school in many ways. He is the current chairman of the J. E. and Lottie Mabe Foundation, serves on the board of the Panhandle - Plains Museum at Canyon, and in the Martin County chapter of the Republican Party. He is interested in the 4-H programs, and has given generously of his time and efforts to helping the boys and girls of our community and county.

Bob Johnson, Martin County Agent, has volunteered his services in supervising the installation of the project.

It was decided to purchase a plaque or some other suitable token of our appreciation, to be presented to Mr. Mabee.

The program for the evening was presented by the students of the third and fourth grades. The songs, readings, plays, and skits, were in the traditional Thanksgiving theme, and were enjoyed by the audience of about 100 friends, parents, and students. The program was under the direction of Mrs. J. M. Payne and Mrs. Claude Miller.

Reports on the Halloween Carnival revealed that about $555.00 was netted from the annual event.

Time for future meetings was changed to 4:00 p.m. to avoid conflict with other school activities.

Refreshments were served following the business session.

 Helfin, Ala., News: "The prevailing concept of post-war United States foreign policy has been that we must do everything we can to free backward peoples from their colonial control. . . . Many of the world's peoples are not ready for immediate freedom. Immediate freedom makes them a threat to world stability and peace; it does not bring about higher living standards automatically and that it is not, therefore, morally defensible."

Martin County Philosopher Not Sure Taking Politics Out Of Will Solve Problem

(Editor's note: The Martin County Philosopher on his grass farm on Mustang Draw is happy to find the farm problem back in the news, his letter this week indicates.)

Dear editor:

According to a copy of a northern journal which my dog who is getting kind of old caught blowing across a field, I think he thought it was a rabbit but your figure he'd have notice it tasted different, after he'd gone a few pages at least, anyway, according to it, after I convinced him it had no food value and had a chance to get at it myself, some U. S. Senators got together and said the answer to the farm problem is to take politics out of farming.

"Take politics out of farming and let the law of supply and demand work and the problem will end," the group said.

I have thought this over and while it's comforting to have the farm problem back in the news, alongside Viet Nam, Red China, metropolitan blackouts, etc., still I'm not sure I know what the Senators mean.

who are politicians and practically no politicians who are farmers, and I believe you could take the one out of the other, or vice versa, and have about what you started with.

While it's true there have been farmers who gave up farming and went into politics, the politicians who gave up politics and went into farming, both involuntarily, it's hard to tell who gained and who lost.

Of course, the Senators may be right and if you take politics out of farming the problem will end, but as far as I'm concerned it won't end till you take the work out of it.

The politics I can handle sitting down.
 On the other hand, you take politics out of farming and discover it works, and some smart alec will come along suggesting you take it out of government too. We better leave well - enough alone.

Yours faithfully,
 J. A.

A lot of taxpayers don't like to keep records. They are willing to take the standard deduction and pay more tax to get out of the record keeping chore. You can cost yourself a lot more by failing to keep a record of your deductible contributions, taxes, medical and miscellaneous expenses. A careful record of deductible items is a pretty good idea, even if you don't itemize your deductions every year. Good records help you manage your personal affairs better.

FARM REVIEW AND FORECAST

A concentrated insecticidal attack has been used this fall as a new approach for reducing diapausing boll weevils in the High Plains Boll Weevil Control Program.

The new approach, used in this second year's effort to keep the weevil from firmly establishing itself on about 2 million acres of High Plains cotton, was based on findings of Dr. Perry Adkisson and W. L. Sterling of the Texas A&M University Entomology Department.

Their research indicated that a two-phase program could be nine times more effective than last year's single-phase system. Phase 1 was aimed at the last reproductive generation of weevils with three applications of insecticide (undiluted technical malathion) made at five-day intervals beginning Sept. 7.

This phase was designed to kill newly emerging adult females before they could mate and lay eggs that could produce potentially overwintering adults. Diapause is a dormant period which allows weevils to survive the winter.

Phase 2 consists of insecticide applications at 10 to 14-day intervals which starts at completion of Phase I and continues until frost. The purpose is to kill any adult weevils that might have emerged from eggs laid before Sept. 7 and to kill any adults that may have survived the September applications.

If the program succeeds, Adkisson said, 90 percent of adults of the last reproductive generation should have been killed in Phase 1, and there should have been a corresponding 90 percent decrease in egg output. This means that for each 100 diapausing weevils that would have developed under no control, only 10 will develop.

Insects which destroy destructive pests are commonly known as beneficial insects, and may become even more important in Texas cotton fields, say entomologists at Texas A&M University. R. L. Ridgway, A&M based entomologist with the Entomology Research Division of the USDant period which allows weevils to survive the winter.

A's Agricultural Research Service, says "evidence continues to mount to support the importance of beneficial insects and spiders in regulating bollworm and tobacco budworm populations."

Ridgway said laboratory work during the past two years has studied ten different beneficial insects. With a constant supply of the cotton pest eggs and larvae to feed upon, the various predators could destroy from 5 to 100 pests per day. He emphasizes, however, that laboratory conditions were unlike field conditions where the predators have to spend time searching over the plants for their prey.

In a field - cage test, however, using 6 x 6 x 36 foot cages and no insecticides, the insect predators gave a remarkable 99 percent control of offspring of 12 pair of tobacco budworm moths.

During the past season's field studies, in two different locations, the phenomenon of increasing numbers of pests were apparent as the number of predators were decreased.

Some of the beneficial insects studied were the flower bug, damsel bug, bigeyed bug, assassin bug and the green lacewings, plus Lady beetles, red cross beetles and spiders. Ridgway says spiders may have a more important role as a beneficial insect in cotton fields than has been previously noted.

The study of beneficial insects has been done in connection with other research on systemic insecticides. Systemic insecticides, he said, are designed to work from the inside of the cotton plant and be effective on plant-feeding insects. Many of the systemics are selective and will kill only certain insects.

In a five-year test, 34 beef cows kept in drylot have performed just as well as 34 similar cows on native pasture. This information has been released by Paul T. Marion, superintendent of Texas A&M University's Rolling Plains Livestock Research Station, Spur, where the drylot beef cow research is being done.

Marion said that through the test in May 1959—each the fifth calf crop—both group has performed equally weaned is the same for both groups—a respectable 88 percent. Weaning weights for the drylot calves averaged 15 pounds heavier, but net returns were higher for the pasture cattle because of a lower maintenance cost. Calves in drylot were creep fed to compensate for the grass consumed by the calves on pasture.

Marion said more and more cattlemen across the state are moving to a drylot or modified drylot operation, and here's why:

1. Increasing land costs limit the extent to which a cattleman who depends completely on pasture can expand. Drylot means many cows on fewer acres.

2. The increased popularity of artificial insemination and controlled estrus of beef cattle goes hand-in-hand with drylot beef production, since the cattle are already well.

The percentage of calves confined and easy to get to.

3. Drylot calves can come back into the feedlot without the stress usually noticeable in pasture calves.

The annual meeting of the County Home Demonstration Agents' Association of Texas will be Dec. 2-4 in Corpus Christi.

Highlights of the program, according to Mrs. Madeline Kennedy of Kingsville, association president, will be addresses by leaders from the national agents' association and other home economics authorities, a talk by the state president of the County Agricultural Agents Association, and presentation of special awards to five county home demonstration agents.

Approximately 125 agents from all parts of Texas are expected to participate in the professional meeting at the Robert Driscoll Hotel.

Library Hours: Monday 1-8 p.m.; Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, 1-5 p.m.; Saturday 10 a.m. - 3 p.m.

The library will be closed for Thanksgiving Day. Those who have books due on that date will have until Saturday to return them. Yes, the library will be open Saturday for the regular hours, so that those needing to do extra work may have time to do so.

A number of friends of Hila (Stormy) Weathers have given money to purchase books in her memory. Surely this is a fitting way to perpetuate her memory in Stanton. When she was preparing to retire, she went through her personal books and gave a large number to the library, some that were greatly needed. The money that has been given is being held until all who desire to do so may have the opportunity to give. The books that will be purchased will be of reference nature to be of the greatest benefit to the largest number of people. Some may have books that they would like to give in her memory also, all books will be marked with a memorial plate for that purpose.

New books are arriving weekly now and with the help of some wonderful volunteers, are being processed and put on the shelves much quicker

245 American soldiers died in Viet Nam last week. Approximately ten per cent of them were Texans. Many among the 245 were from the southern states. The men of this region have always been found in the forefront of any fight for freedom. It is too bad that the politicians have turned their hatred on the Old South to the extent that the leadership is now preparing legislation to strip the country of the jury system of trial. That will be the day of legal destruction of our way of life. Any member of Congress voting for that jury legislation in the early months of the next session will be soundly defeated at the ballot boxes in the elections later next year. This past Congress got a lot of practice of jumping through the hoop when the boss commanded. The next session is going to be different. Some of the solons have learned since coming back home for a while that the people are fed up with whats been going on in many avenues of legislation in Washington.

YOUR country editor is going to be privileged to enjoy a mighty splendid repast this Thanksgiving due to the thoughtfulness of friends. A 25-lb. smoked turkey arrived Tuesday from Longview. CHARLEY ECKERT pounded us with some pecans grown in his yard. He ordinarily keeps the pecans in the family, with six children, some grandchildren and other relatives around, but he always remembers us. MAC McKAY ordered a sweet potato pie for us from the fine kitchen of the CURRIES. MRS. FLORA MORRIS baked us a large box of old-fashioned tea cakes—our favorite. Then this kindly lady who does so much for so many in our community called to say she was preparing some dressing for our Thanksgiving table. MARIE and ARTHUR WILSON brought over some delicious jelly. NANCY POWELL put together some fine relish and brought us a jar. A fine fruit cake from Corsicana arrived from Dallas, and I am going to buy some good cigars down at STANTON WALGREEN. Oh yes, MRS. ERNEST PRICE just sent her husband over with some pound cake. So how are you going to keep a country editor from enjoying the day. All I can humbly say is that I am thankful for such friends. The late JIM KELLY used to tell me that there was nothing else on earth as satisfying as running a country newspaper. I agree. Happy Thanksgiving everybody!

FOR those who like to have a weather report written here weekly we submit the fact that Tuesday, Nov. 23 was the hottest day of the late fall season. As a matter-of-fact, the day's temperature was a record breaker. In some sections of West Texas the mercury climbed to 90 degrees. Here in Stanton on one gauge the needle stopped at 85 degrees. There is no moisture in sight until after the first of December, if then.

YUCELL WINSLOW OF TEXAS ELECTRIC had his crew of workers in Stanton recently to prepare for the Christmas lights. This is an annual ritual for WINSLOW, a former Stanton resident and employee of TESCO here. The young fellows accompanying YUCELL to Martin County are among the finest and we appreciate their assistance toward aiding our community pride every year.

THE fund drive for GIRL SCOUTS will start in Stanton on November 30 with a "Kick-off" breakfast at Motel Belvue. We have a story in this issue and GEORGE COSTLOW is spear-heading the annual fund seeking campaign for a very worthy cause. We suggest our community meet its responsibility to the GIRL SCOUTS during the campaign by contributing as much as possible. GLORIA ZEREGA, director of special services of the WEST TEXAS COUNCIL will be present at the breakfast to help conduct the drive.

Panhandle Bucks Weigh 127 Lb. Average

Panhandle whitetails outweigh their southern cousins by a substantial margin, according to weight figures collected during the last few years by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. Comparative weights of 3½ year old field-dressed bucks from various Texas areas are: Llano Basin, 70 lbs.; Edwards Plateau, 84 lbs.; Rio Grande Plains, 103 lbs.; and Texas Panhandle, 127 lbs. Unfortunately, noted the

This week wound up the second year of the biggest and most concentrated attack ever made on cotton's number one pest, the boll weevil.

The assault is the High Plains Boll Weevil Control Program in which Plains Cotton Growers has played a leading role from the beginning. It is designed to stop boll weevils from eating their way into the two million acres of cotton on the High Plains.

Spraying in this year's weevil war ceased on Wednesday of this week in anticipation of the first fall freeze which will prevent any remaining weevils from reaching the physiological stage necessary to winter survival.

Sixteen ounces of undiluted technical malathion was used this fall to battle weevils in a control zone some 260,000 acres. Almost all of this area was sprayed six times and part of it received the seventh application for an aggregate total acreage of just over 1.5 million.

The program is being financed by local and state funds matched dollar-for-dollar by Federal money. Local funds come from cotton producers in the 23-county High Plains area at the rate of 40 cents per bale, collected as a part of compress receiving charges. Cotton leaders in the area have termed this producer contribution as "the best money ever spent by farmers."

This seems to be especially true in view of a recent report from W. L. Owen, entomologist with the South Plains Research and Extension Center. Owens reported that without the control program weevils might well have overrun thousands of acres of previously uninfested cotton this year.

Entomologists estimated that the 1964 control program cut the number of overwintering weevils on the Plains by about 90 percent.

But recent research findings of Dr. Perry Adkisson and W. L. Sterling, both of Texas A&M University's Entomology Department, indicated that even better results could be obtained in 1965.

Their research, supported by Plains Cotton Growers, indicated that a two-phase spray program could be nine times more effective than last year's single-phase system. Last year applications were scheduled at 10-14 day intervals throughout the spray period from mid-September to frost.

This year the two-phase system has been used.

Phase-one was aimed at the last reproductive generation of weevils with three applications of insecticide made at five-day intervals beginning September 7.

This phase was designed to kill newly emerging adult females before they could mate and lay eggs that could produce potentially overwintering adults.

"The basis for these quickly repeated applications of insecticides was to have an egg-free period during September when environmental conditions are likely to cause the weevils to diapause," Adkisson said.

Diapause is the physiological condition in which weevils survive the winter, he explained.

Phase-two in the program consists of insecticide applications at 10 to 14 day intervals. These started at completion of phase-one and continued until this week. Their purpose was to kill any adult weevils that might have emerged from eggs laid before September 7 and to kill any adults that may have survived the September applications.

The theory behind this double-barreled attack is that 90 percent of the adults of the last reproductive generation will be killed in phase-one with a corresponding 90 percent

$8,000 Con Game Told By Colorado City Victim

Loy Edward Barrington, 57, of Colorado City told police he was conned out of $8,000 by two men.

Barrington said he first was allowed to win $8,000 in paper profits in a card game but the loser insisted he would not pay until Barrington could prove he had $8,000.

Barrington produced the money by cashing a check at a local bank. A second man agreed to take the money put up by both parties, place it in an envelope and mail it to Barrington's Colorado City address.

Barrington gave his money to the "neutral" party but got suspicious after the envelope was placed in a mail box and called police.

Police, with the help of postal officials, recovered the envelope and found it stuffed with cash.

Any erroneous reflection upon the character, standing or reputation of any person, which may occur in the columns of THE STANTON REPORTER, will be gladly corrected upon being called to the attention of the editor.

Bible Comment—

There Is No Place In Religion For Hate

A plausible philosophy of life has said, "Be good and you will be happy."

But if happiness consists in being free from danger and immune from pain, the sufferings of good men have revealed how false is that easy adage.

A deep mystery of life is that the innocent have suffered with the guilty. It is the mystery of the Cross and the suffering and sacrifice of Christ himself.

The hostility that Jesus aroused in His prejudiced, fellow townsmen as He began His ministry in Nazareth continued on the part of many throughout His ministry.

Strange to say, it was the finest things that He did that aroused the most violent opposition.

Religion ought to make men humane, kind, considerate, another. But, unfortunately, it has often made them bitter and full of hatred.

It was not unnatural that ready and eager to help one the claims of Jesus should be questioned by some, as they had been by His own brothers. But why should His pronouncement of the forgiveness of sins have aroused such hatred?

If he had no power to forgive sins, the sins would not be forgiven. To question His authority was one thing — to hate Him was another.

The opposition of certain Scribes and Pharisees and official religious authorities had some justification. They were the official representatives of religion. As Jesus himself said, they "sat in Moses' seat."

The mistake that they made was in ignoring the actual words and deeds, in being blind to the authority of goodness, and in hating one whom the people heard gladly.

Are we wiser than those of old? Is religion our response to the goodness of God, or is it dominated by prejudice and bigotry?
