State official says work comp needs new role for trial

By BOB CAMPBELL
SDN Staff Writer
State Rep. David Counts of Knox City said here Thursday that a complete overhaul of the state's workman's compensation system is needed and looked toward the upcoming special session to change how jury trials fit into the current plan.
He said he expects a compromise in workman's compensation reform legislation to make jury trials a last resort instead of the first.

Counts offered his comments during a tour of the district prior to the beginning of the special session Tuesday in Austin.
"This system we have is totally out of control," he said, citing the radically increasing insurance rates of recent years. "We want to junk the whole system."

"Trial de novo is not the issue," he said, referring to the controversial "new trial" provisions of current workman's comp laws.
Counts said the House proposes to require several tiers of alternatives, including mediation and arbitration under a new state board that would replace the Industrial Accident Board, to be used before a case could be brought into a state district court for a jury trial.

The first-term Democrat joked that legislators might have to "have turkey and dressing brought over" on Thanksgiving if they do not pass a reform bill because Gov. Bill Clements has vowed to keep calling 30-day special sessions if they do not.
The first bill passed by the 150-member House this year, House

Q. — I've always thought the capital of China was Peking. Now I read it's Beijing. What gives?
A. — It's the same city, but Beijing is considered a better spelling to approximate how the name sounds in Chinese. The change was implemented by the Chinese communists, who instituted a new method of spelling phonetically in China.

In Brief

Dolphin death

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A dolphin born at Sea-Arama Marineworld less than a month ago has died, the second such death at the popular tourist attraction in as many months.
The dolphin calf born May 18 was found near death Tuesday morning by a park employee, said Sea-Arama spokeswoman Christy Benson. The dolphin, kept in a tank with its mother, Beta, was lethargic and having difficulty breathing.
Dolphin trainers called the park's veterinarian, who prescribed an injection of antibiotics. But the animal died before a second injection could be given, Ms. Benson said.

Sharp rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose a sharp 0.6 percent in May, pushed up by strong increases in food and gasoline costs, the government said today.

The rise in the Consumer Price Index, the government's primary gauge of inflation at the retail level, followed an even stronger 0.7 percent April increase that was the largest jump in more than two years, the Labor Department reported.

Lose lawsuit

HOUSTON (AP) — A Kingwood couple who have drawn thousands to their faith-healing crusades around the world say they aren't worried about the $300,000 a South Carolina jury ruled they must pay a woman who was injured at one of their services.

"The burden is on God. That's all," said Frances Hunter, 73, from her City of Light headquarters near Houston. "John and I are not worried about the money."

A Greenville, S.C., federal jury reached the decision Wednesday. The judge has yet to decide whether to assess punitive damages in the case, brought by Evelyn E. Kuykendall, 67, of Marsville, N.C.

Historic school funded

Groups interested in preserving Scurry County history have received a $7,500 gift from a Snyder couple to complete the Dermott School renovation project underway on the coliseum grounds.

This week, Roy and Geleska Baze presented Exxon Corp. stock certificates to Historic Scurry County Inc. president Bernhard Bartels and Scurry County Historical Commission president Billy Bob McMullan.

The donation fulfills an agreement to provide the remainder of a $10,000 amount estimated to complete the work. The historical commission has raised $2,500 in matching funds.

The next phase in the renovation is to re-do the building's kitchen area.

The building was moved from Dermott to near the historic Cornelius-Dodson House on the county coliseum grounds last year, with the two buildings for-

2 school bills are signed

AUSTIN (AP) — Bills to begin increasing state financial aid to poor school districts and to combat dropout problems by denying dropouts a driver's license were signed into law today by Gov. Bill Clements.

The two were among five education bills signed that will help improve public schools statewide.

"Enhancing our public schools is at the heart of the educational excellence program for Texas that I proposed in January and that the Legislature approved," Clements said.

Heading the list of measures he signed today was the plan to pump $450 million in extra state aid to help equalize funding among school districts and provide a pay raise for teachers.

Property poor school districts have sued the state, saying the current finance system discriminates against them.

TEAMS scores compared to state's

Snyder betters state averages in 10 of 14 categories

This past school year, Snyder ISD students in affected grades scored higher than their peers statewide in 10 out of 14 educational categories on the TEAMS tests.

In addition, local students made the second highest average scores ever recorded here—bested only by last year's scoring—on the state-mandated TEAMS.

The test is designed to identify Texas school district's "strengths and weaknesses" in educational areas.

Across Texas, the state tested math, reading and writing skills at five grade levels, the third, fifth, seventh, ninth and eleventh grade.

Snyder ISD TEAMS results were below the state average in three instances, the writing score at the third grade level; the math score at the seventh grade level; and the reading score at the ninth grade level.

In a fourth category, writing skills at the seventh grade level, Snyder and statewide scores were the same.

By grade level, the following results were reported:

—Third grade: Snyder students betted the state averages in two out of three categories. The percentage of Snyder students showing "mastery" on the state's math test equaled 93 percent and on the reading test, 87 percent. State scores in these two areas were 92 and 86 percent respectively. In the area of writing, however, Snyder students scored an average of 78 percent mastery compared to the state average of 79 percent.

—Fifth grade: Snyder students achieved higher average scores—to include from 4 to 6 percentage points higher—in all three levels. The local percentage of mastery, with the state's shown in parenthesis, were math, 93 percent (89 percent); reading, 90 percent (85 percent); and writing, 92 percent (84 percent).

—Seventh grade: Local students scored higher than the state in reading, equaled the state in writing and fell below state averages in math. In reading, the local percentage of mastery was 87 percent compared to 86 percent statewide. Both percentages were 79 percent in writing; and Snyder scored an 87 percent mastery in math compared to the state's 91 percent.

—Ninth grade: While local students scored better than statewide averages in math and writing, reading skills were 8 percentage points below the state average. The level of mastery in reading here was 78 percent compared to the state's 86 percent. Local math mastery was 86 percent compared to 83 percent for the state and local writing mastery was 74 percent compared to the state's 69 percent.

Eleventh grade: This grade level was tested in two categories, math and language, and Snyder students scored above the state in both. For math, the local percentage of mastery was 78 percent compared to 77 percent for the state; and for language, the local score was 92 percent compared to 90 percent at the state level.

Also for comparison, school officials added the local level of mastery for all TEAMS scores. This included results from first grade testing, a grade level not compared statewide.

In math, Snyder students in the affected grade levels showed that 89 percent could master the state test. The level was bettered locally only by last year's scores, when students showed a 91 percent mastery in math.

City to investigate its participation in business loan plan

The city council Thursday night scheduled a June 29 informational public hearing on the city's possible participation in the Texas Capital Fund, which offers loans to start new businesses.

After a 1½-hour discussion, the council reached a consensus that the Texas Department of Commerce-administered fund might provide a "tool" to create new jobs here. The vote was unanimous to invite a department representative to conduct the hearing.

The fund has been used by numerous West Texas cities since it was established several years ago, with loan rates escalating from 3 to 5.5 to the current level of about 10 percent.

City Manager John Gayle said Sweetwater has used it in the opening of a trailer company and Plainview has made use of it to set up a tortilla plant, a Wal-Mart distribution center and two other businesses.

The program requires the sponsoring governmental entity to be monetarily liable for the jobs each business proposes to create. For example, if a $100,000 loan were supposed to make 10 new jobs and there were only eight during the two-year contract period, the city would have to pay the $20,000 shortfall.

There would be no such liability after two years, except in terms of the city's having the usual legal recourses to recover the outstanding loan amount.

Mayor Troy Williamson said his only reservation was in the prospect of helping a new retail business to obtain funding and thereby have an advantage over local competitors.

Councilman Paul Zeck argued, however, that the program "would be an excellent thing to have in our quiver" and that the maximum amount of business development should be encouraged.

The program offers a minimum loan of $50,000 and a maximum of $500,000.

Council members noted that the West Central Texas Council of Governments in Abilene and the South Plains Association of Governments in Lubbock have been administering some of the grants.

Councilman Ralph Williamson moved to have the public hearing, and Zeck seconded. The meeting was also attended by council members Mike Thornton, Joe Coronado, Vernest Tippens

Teen tells of gun-toting kid drug dealers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The teen-ager sat gingerly at the witness table and spoke so softly that the congressmen had trouble hearing her. But there was nothing gentle or innocent in the tale she told of children carrying guns to carry out the drug trade.

"You can get guns on the street just about as easily as you can get candy," Detra J. of the District of Columbia, whose last name was not revealed, told the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families on Thursday.

"Everyone knows how to get a gun if they want one. The guns range from .22s to 9 millimeters to Uzis."

Generally, she said, the youngsters get their guns from the drug traffickers for whom they work.

"If they hustle for a person — he's a runner or a hit man — he's getting a gun to carry out the orders the man has given him," said Detra, 18.

The hearing on children and guns occurred one day after Florida Gov. Bob Martinez asked state lawmakers for a law that would punish people who leave firearms within reach of children.

Pediatrician Katherine K. Christoffel of Chicago representing the American Academy of Pediatrics, painted a grim picture for the panel:

"Ten American children ages 18 and under are killed every day in handgun suicides, homicides and accidents," she said. "Three or four times as many are wounded. One of every 25 admissions to American pediatric trauma centers is due to gunshot wounds. In 1987, gun injuries were the fourth-leading cause of unintentional-injury death for children ages 14 and under. For inner-city black adolescent boys and young men, firearm injuries are the leading cause of death."

But Gary Kleck, an associate professor of criminology at Florida State University, said accidental shootings of innocent bystanders "are extremely rare," that the involvement of guns in youth suicide has fallen since 1979, and that fatal gun accidents involving youths, as well as for all people, have been declining for 20 years.

Drug-related killings have given Washington the nation's highest per capita murder rate. So far this year, 202 murders have been committed in the District, compared to 133 at this time last year. Most have been drug-related, police say.

DR. GOTT

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Our brother has been diagnosed as having chorea. Can you tell us about this?

DEAR READER: Chorea is a disorder characterized by brief, purposeless movements of the facial muscles and the extremities. There are several types. Huntington's chorea is an inherited neurological affliction that begins in middle age and is associated with inexorable mental deterioration. It is untreatable but the personality changes, dementia and progressive incoordination can be helped by tranquilizing drugs.

Senile chorea is also hereditary and affects elderly patients; however, it does not produce the devastating mental changes of Huntington's disease. The mouth and tongue are primarily affected; this chorea can be treated with dopamine-blocking agents, such as chlorpromazine.

Sydenham's chorea follows streptococcal infections, particularly rheumatic fever, in children. It is usually not permanent.

Chorea gravidarum is an unusual condition affecting pregnant women, who usually have a history of rheumatic fever, that begins early in pregnancy and disappears spontaneously after delivery. The cause is not known. Women taking oral contraceptives will occasionally exhibit chorea.

Chorea can also be caused by certain drugs (such as phenothiazines and anti-emetics), hyperthyroidism and lupus. To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Lupus: The Great Imitator." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it harmful to apply deodorant/antiperspirant to areas other than underarms, such as between and under the breasts?

DEAR READER: You may safely apply these products to other body areas. However, remember that people are sometimes quite allergic to the compounds in deodorants, as well as to the aluminum salts in antiperspirants. So, before you apply the substances to other areas, make sure that they do not produce a rash in the usual locations.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 36-year-old son has been deaf since birth and is an emotional time bomb. He takes Hal-dol 5 milligrams two or three times a day. This has been going on for 11 years, and the professionals have given up on him. They just continue to re-fill his prescriptions. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER: I do not know the cause of your son's unusual combination of symptoms. Deaf people do not suffer from emotional disturbances with any more frequency than patients who can hear. From your description, I'd say that your son has an unrelated emotional disorder that is made especially difficult to treat because he is deaf. This unique situation certainly requires the skills of highly skilled professionals, specialists who are familiar with treating emotional disturbances in handicapped patients. I suggest you obtain further advice by calling the psychiatry department in a teaching hospital in your state. Also, you may be able to get help by contacting the Deafness Research Foundation at 9 E. 38th St., New York, NY 10016.

Business still on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States still can do business with Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping despite his military crackdown and the massacre of hundreds — perhaps thousands — of people, a senior Bush administration official says.

The U.S. position as outlined Thursday by the senior administration official went far beyond public pronouncements from the White House or State Department.

President Bush has been reluctant to affix blame for China's bloodshed but has said it would be "extraordinarily difficult" for the United States to have normal relations with officials responsible for the massacre of students and workers participating in pro-democracy protests.

However, the administration official, a top policy maker in Bush's inner circle, said U.S. ties with China involve "a very important relationship with a very important country."

Teen Dreams of Retouching Reality With Family Photo

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been divorced from my first husband for five years, and am now happily married to another man.

My problem is my niece (by marriage to my first husband) — I will call her Melanie. She is 17 years old and still keeps in touch with me. Melanie has been calling me with a rather strange request. She wants me to arrange a "family portrait" to include me and my ex-husband, who is her mother's brother. In that picture she wants her own mother and father, who are now divorced and both living with other mates, and herself!

Melanie has been begging me to round up these people and arrange for a studio portrait. When I asked her what her mother (my ex-sister-in-law) thought about this idea, she said, "She said she would be rather uncomfortable with the idea, but she would do it if you would."

Abby, I am not comfortable with this idea, but I hate to hurt Melanie's feelings. How would you handle this?

EX-FAMILY MEMBER

DEAR EX-FAMILY MEMBER: I would tell Melanie that the "family" she would like to re-create for a family portrait no longer exists, so it is very unrealistic to take a "family portrait" now.

Let her down as gently as possible. The poor girl is still hurting, and has not yet accepted that the "family" she once had is no longer a family.

DEAR ABBY: These days, with so much pressure on us to "optimize" our time, it is very frustrating to have to lose so much time in public jockeying for a place, or your turn in line. So, when someone jumps in ahead of you, when you've been waiting for a very long time, you fume — not wanting to create a scene.

What, if anything, should be said if a salesperson overlooks you waiting, and turns to a newcomer on the scene? Is it better to let it go, or

what? FUMING IN ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR FUMING: I would not get into an argument with a stranger who deliberately moved in ahead of me in line; neither would I fume about it. (If the line were a long one, you can be sure that someone else would remind the "squeezier-inner" where the end of the line was.)

If a salesperson "overlooked" me to wait on a newcomer, I would politely remind that salesperson that I was "next." (Nice guys who are too nice finish last.)

DEAR ABBY: In regards to the fathers who are divorced, pay child support, but are dissatisfied with the amount of child support that actually goes toward the child's needs: If the fathers are as concerned as they claim to be, they should seek custody of their children, and make sure their children receive the care and attention they deserve.

I am a happily married man (thank God) and our marriage is strong, but my parents were divorced. My father paid child support, but I was raised by my mother, who was a very bitter and unhappy woman.

The real tragedy of their divorce is that I grew up seeing my father through my mother's eyes. I never really knew my father until I was 18 or 19 years old.

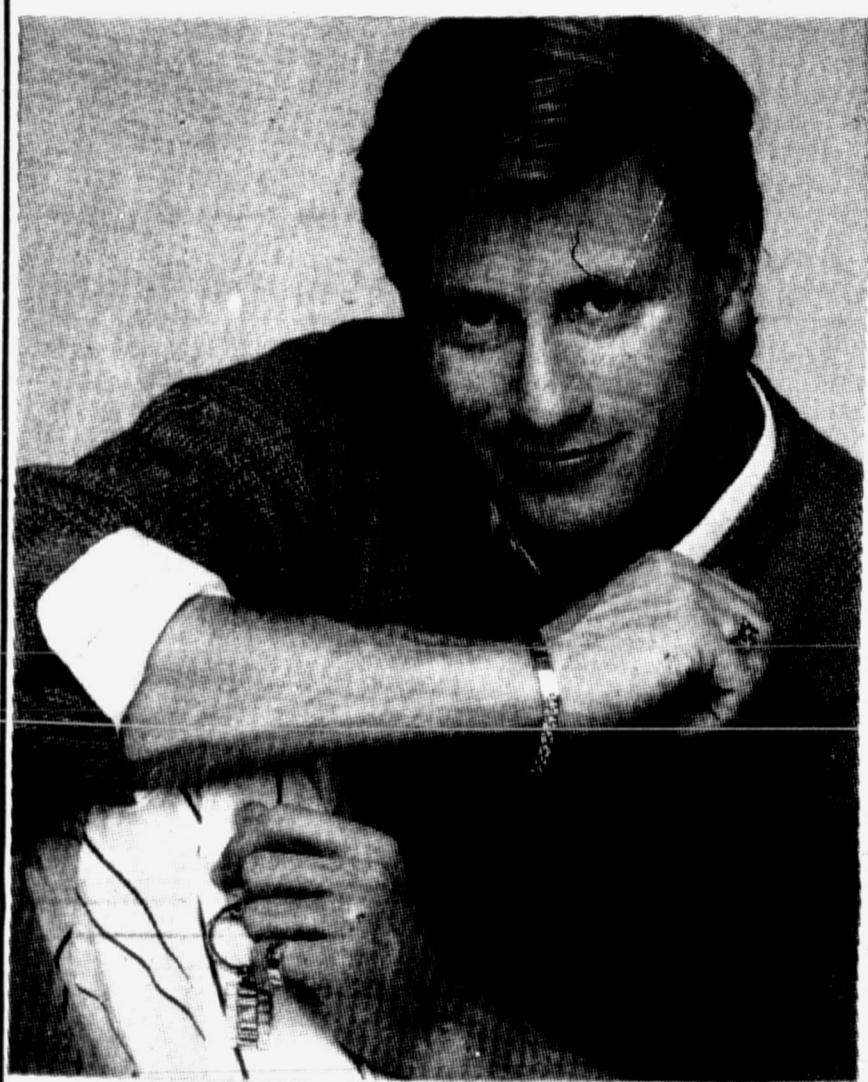

I know it wasn't his fault, but in retrospect, I would have settled for a little more of his time and a lot less money.

Children who grow up with two parents who really care about each other don't know how lucky they are.

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP) — A teen-ager charged in the firebombing death of a baby has become a focus of disputes about racial justice, the death penalty for juveniles and whether Washington is imposing its legal standards on Alabama.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals is expected to decide soon whether Alabama can extradite the black 17-year-old, known in court documents only as O.M. because of his juvenile status.

Prosecutors deny race has anything to do with the matter, and the baby's relatives and an NAACP official agree.

"It doesn't make any difference to me what color somebody is, black, white or polka dot," said District Attorney Jimmy Hedgespeth. "What a lot of folks are not saying is that the victim of this crime was black. There is no place on my docket for white or black. It doesn't matter to me."

O.M. was charged with murder and arson in the death of 14-month-old Tamel Jackson. The baby died in a kitchen blaze on the night of May 12, 1988, after a plastic jug of gasoline was tossed into his apartment at a housing project where a relative had been involved in a fight.

The teen-ager's grandmother testified at a court hearing in Washington that the white authorities in Etowah County, a mostly rural area that includes the steel city of Gadsden, have a longstanding vendetta against her family. The youth's father and uncle died in police custody, she said.

Washington police captured the boy in December only after his grandmother, Alyce Guice Thomas, was jailed for 82 days last summer by an Etowah County judge for failing to produce the teen-ager in court. She said he disappeared the night of the fire, after police released him to her custody. The jailing set off small civil rights demonstrations in Gadsden.

The District of Columbia Council passed legislation May 30 intended to block the teen-ager's return to Gadsden for 90 days. Council members said extradition would violate the district's ban on the death penalty, because if O.M. is convicted in Alabama, he could face execution in the electric chair.

The U.S. Supreme Court has heard arguments but not yet ruled on a challenge to the death penalty for those who were crimes.

Baptists' viewpoint different

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Skeptical Southern Baptists and Las Vegas sized each other up this week as the town some have dubbed Sin City played unlikely host to the passionate opponents of gambling and drinking.

Stan Pritchett, a delegate to the Southern Baptist Convention, and cabbie Don Capaldi termed the three-day event a draw — with eyes opening on both sides of what has been called the meeting of the high rollers and the Holy Rollers.

The gathering for the nation's largest Protestant denomination ended Thursday.

"They're nice, decent people; they even gave me a Bible," said Capaldi as hundreds of Baptists passed out Bibles and imparted their faith to tourists and residents. "I don't think they can do much about our image, or our thinking."

Down the neon-bathed thoroughfare known as the Strip, Pritchett approached tourists who hurried between casinos Wednesday to beat the 100-degree-plus heat.

"The people have been generally very friendly," said Pritchett of Pensacola, Fla. "We thought people would look at us like a calf looks at a new gate. Generally the people have been very friendly. The atmosphere here is like almost any place, except for the gambling."

Ted Wakeman, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Fallon, 380 miles to the northwest, said he takes exception to the image rap.

"I get a little upset with the people who came here from back East and are bad-mouthing Nevada," Wakeman said.

Buses will run to pick up the students and to return them to their area school. Keith Gentry, transportation supervisor, has contacted parents of the pre-kindergarten, kindergarten and first grade classes. Fourth grade students living outside the Central district will be responsible for getting their child/children to school by 10 a.m. and a bus will take them back to their area school after the 11:45 a.m. dismissal.

Someone had blundered

By James Jacoby

An unusual action gained South a good tournament result in today's deal, but we still disapprove. It will be apparent that the result was not due so much to the bid as to poor defense on the part of East. South overcalled East's one-club bid with one heart and was raised by North. If North had the same hand with one more trump, play for game would be sound, so clearly South was justified in making a game try of three diamonds. Probably North should now bid game, but he merely returned to three hearts and South passed.

If East won the king of clubs and continued the suit, declarer would probably discard a diamond on the third club. Even so, East need only hold up taking the heart ace until the third round of the suit, and he could then play clubs again, with the satisfactory result of either taking a club trick or turning his last little heart into a winner. Instead, East won the first club and switched to his singleton diamond. Declarer won the ace in dummy and played a heart back to his king. He led a spade to dummy's ace and played another heart. East ducked again, and South won the queen. Realizing the danger of a 4-2 trump split, declarer now abandoned the trump suit and played out his good diamonds. East was able to make tricks with the A-7 of hearts and A-K of clubs, but no more. Taking nine tricks was worth 140 to North-South, a fine score since most other players were in diamonds, making either 110 or 130.

Teen tells of gun-toting kid drug dealers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The teen-ager sat gingerly at the witness table and spoke so softly that the congressmen had trouble hearing her. But there was nothing gentle or innocent in the tale she told of children carrying guns to carry out the drug trade.

"You can get guns on the street just about as easily as you can get candy," Detra J. of the District of Columbia, whose last name was not revealed, told the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families on Thursday.

"Everyone knows how to get a gun if they want one. The guns range from .22s to 9 millimeters to Uzis."

Generally, she said, the youngsters get their guns from the drug traffickers for whom they work.

"If they hustle for a person — he's a runner or a hit man — he's getting a gun to carry out the orders the man has given him," said Detra, 18.

The hearing on children and guns occurred one day after Florida Gov. Bob Martinez asked state lawmakers for a law that would punish people who leave firearms within reach of children.

Pediatrician Katherine K. Christoffel of Chicago, representing the American Academy of Pediatrics, painted a grim picture for the panel:

"Ten American children ages 18 and under are killed every day in handgun suicides, homicides and accidents," she said. "Three or four times as many are wounded. One of every 25 admissions to American pediatric trauma centers is due to gunshot wounds. In 1987, gun injuries were the fourth-leading cause of unintentional-injury death for children ages 14 and under. For inner-city black adolescent boys and young men, firearm injuries are the leading cause of death."

But Gary Kleck, an associate professor of criminology at Florida State University, said accidental shootings of innocent bystanders "are extremely rare, that the involvement of guns in youth suicide has fallen since 1979, and that fatal gun accidents involving youths, as well as for all people, have been declining for 20 years.

Drug-related killings have given Washington the nation's highest per capita murder rate. So far this year, 202 murders have been committed in the District, compared to 150 at this time last year. Most have been drug-related, police say.

DR. GOTT PETER GOTT, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Our brother has been diagnosed as having chorea. Can you tell us about this?

DEAR READER: Choreia is a disorder characterized by brief, purposeless movements of the facial muscles and the extremities. There are several types. Huntington's chorea is an inherited neurological affliction that begins in middle age and is associated with inexorable mental deterioration. It is untreatable but the personality changes, dementia and progressive incoordination can be helped by tranquilizing drugs.

Senile chorea is also hereditary and affects elderly patients; however, it does not produce the devastating mental changes of Huntington's disease. The mouth and tongue are primarily affected; this chorea can be treated with dopamine-blocking agents, such as chlorpromazine.

Sydenham's chorea follows streptococcal infections, particularly rheumatic fever, in children. It is usually not permanent.

Chorea gravidarum is an unusual condition affecting pregnant women, who usually have a history of rheumatic fever, that begins early in pregnancy and disappears spontaneously after delivery. The cause is not known. Women taking oral contraceptives will occasionally exhibit chorea.

Chorea can also be caused by certain drugs (such as phenothiazines and anti-emetics), hyperthyroidism and lupus. To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Lupus: The Great Imitator." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it harmful to apply deodorant/antiperspirant to areas other than underarms, such as between and under the breasts?

DEAR READER: You may safely apply these products to other body areas. However, remember that people are sometimes quite allergic to the compounds in deodorants, as well as to the aluminum salts in antiperspirants. So, before you apply the substances to other areas, make sure that they do not produce a rash in the usual locations.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 36-year-old son has been deaf since birth and is an emotional time bomb. He takes Hal-dol 5 milligrams two or three times a day. This has been going on for 11 years, and the professionals have given up on him. They just continue to re-fill his prescriptions. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER: I do not know the cause of your son's unusual combination of symptoms. Deaf people do not suffer from emotional disturbances with any more frequency than patients who can hear. From your description, I'd say that your son has an unrelated emotional disorder that is made especially difficult to treat because he is deaf. This unique situation certainly requires the skills of highly skilled professionals, specialists who are familiar with treating emotional disturbances in handicapped patients. I suggest you obtain further advice by calling the psychiatry department in a teaching hospital in your state. Also, you may be able to get help by contacting the Deafness Research Foundation at 9 E. 38th St., New York, NY 10016.

Business still on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States still can do business with Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping despite his military crackdown and the massacre of hundreds — perhaps thousands — of people, a senior Bush administration official says.

The U.S. position as outlined Thursday by the senior administration official went far beyond public pronouncements from the White House or State Department.

President Bush has been reluctant to affix blame for China's bloodshed but has said it would be "extraordinarily difficult" for the United States to have normal relations with officials responsible for the massacre of students and workers participating in pro-democracy protests.

However, the administration official, a top policy maker in Bush's inner circle, said U.S. ties with China involve "a very important relationship with a very important country."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have been divorced from my first husband for five years, and am now happily married to another man.

My problem is my niece (by marriage to my first husband) — I will call her Melanie. She is 17 years old and still keeps in touch with me. Melanie has been calling me with a rather strange request. She wants me to arrange a "family portrait" to include me and my ex-husband, who is her mother's brother. In that picture she wants her own mother and father, who are now divorced and both living with other mates, and herself!

Melanie has been begging me to round up these people and arrange for a studio portrait. When I asked her what her mother (my ex-sister-in-law) thought about this idea, she said, "She said she would be rather uncomfortable with the idea, but she would do it if you would."

Abby, I am not comfortable with this idea, but I hate to hurt Melanie's feelings. How would you handle this?

EX-FAMILY MEMBER

DEAR EX-FAMILY MEMBER: I would tell Melanie that the "family" she would like to re-create for a family portrait no longer exists, so it is very unrealistic to take a "family portrait" now.

Let her down as gently as possible. The poor girl is still hurting, and has not yet accepted that the "family" she once had is no longer a family.

DEAR ABBY: These days, with so much pressure on us to "optimize" our time, it is very frustrating to have to lose so much time in public jockeying for a place, or your turn in line. So, when someone jumps in ahead of you, when you've been waiting for a very long time, you fume — not wanting to create a scene.

What, if anything, should be said if a salesperson overlooks you waiting, and turns to a newcomer on the scene? Is it better to let it go, or

what? FUMING IN ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR FUMING: I would not get into an argument with a stranger who deliberately moved in ahead of me in line; neither would I fume about it. (If the line were a long one, you can be sure that someone else would remind the "squeezed-in" where the end of the line was.)

If a salesperson "overlooked" me to wait on a newcomer, I would politely remind that salesperson that I was "next." (Nice guys who are too nice finish last.)

DEAR ABBY: In regards to the fathers who are divorced, pay child support, but are dissatisfied with the amount of child support that actually goes toward the child's needs: If the fathers are as concerned as they claim to be, they should seek custody of their children, and make sure their children receive the care and attention they deserve.

I am a happily married man (thank God) and our marriage is strong, but my parents were divorced. My father paid child support, but I was raised by my mother, who was a very bitter and unhappy woman.

The real tragedy of their divorce is that I grew up seeing my father through my mother's eyes. I never really knew my father until I was 18 or 19 years old.

I know it wasn't his fault, but in retrospect, I would have settled for a little more of his time and a lot less money.

Children who grow up with two parents who really care about each other don't know how lucky they are.

Magazine is new

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new magazine devoted to the pros and cons of biodegradable diapers and other ways of dealing with debris promises to do more than just talk trash.

If you say, "What garbage!" you're not a likely reader of Garbage.

The publishers of this new magazine say the "throwaway society" has gone beyond the concern of the counterculture to become a mainstream issue.

"I think we all feel vaguely uneasy and vaguely guilty when you bring the groceries home and realize that 60 percent of what you've bought is packaging," said editor-publisher Patricia Poore.

Baptists' viewpoint different

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Skeptical Southern Baptists and Las Vegas sized each other up this week as the town some have dubbed Sin City played unlikely host to the passionate opponents of gambling and drinking.
Stan Pritchett, a delegate to the Southern Baptist Convention, and cabbie Don Capaldi termed the three-day event a draw — with eyes opening on both sides of what has been called the meeting of the high rollers and the Holy Rollers.

The gathering for the nation's largest Protestant denomination ended Thursday.

"They're nice, decent people; they even gave me a Bible," said Capaldi as hundreds of Baptists passed out Bibles and imparted their faith to tourists and residents. "I don't think they can do much about our image, or our thinking."

Down the neon-bathed thoroughfare known as the Strip, Pritchett approached tourists who hurried between casinos Wednesday to beat the 100-degree-plus heat.

"The people have been generally very friendly," said Pritchett of Pensacola, Fla. "We thought people would look at us like a calf looks at a new gate. Generally the people have been very friendly. The atmosphere here is like almost any place, except for the gambling."

Ted Wakeman, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Fallon, 380 miles to the northwest, said he takes exception to the image rap.

"I get a little upset with the people who came here from back East and are bad-mouthing Nevada," Wakeman said.

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP) — A teen-ager charged in the firebombing death of a baby has become a focus of disputes about racial justice, the death penalty for juveniles and whether Washington is imposing its legal standards on Alabama.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals is expected to decide soon whether Alabama can extradite the black 17-year-old, known in court documents only as O.M. because of his juvenile status.

Prosecutors deny race has anything to do with the matter, and the baby's relatives and an NAACP official agree.

"It doesn't make any difference to me what color somebody is, black, white or polka dot," said District Attorney Jimmy Hedgespeth. "What a lot of folks are not saying is that the victim of this crime was black. There is no place on my docket for white or black. It doesn't matter to me."

O.M. was charged with murder and arson in the death of 14-month-old Tamel Jackson. The baby died in a kitchen blaze on the night of May 12, 1988, after a plastic jug of gasoline was tossed into his apartment at a housing project where a relative had been involved in a fight.

The teen-ager's grandmother testified at a court hearing in Washington that the white authorities in Etowah County, a mostly rural area that includes the steel city of Gadsden, have a longstanding vendetta against her family. The youth's father and uncle died in police custody, she said.

Washington police captured the boy in December only after his grandmother, Alyce Guice Thomas, was jailed for 82 days last summer by an Etowah County judge for failing to produce the teen-ager in court. She said he disappeared the night of the fire, after police released him to her custody. The jailing set off small civil rights demonstrations in Gadsden.

The District of Columbia Council passed legislation May 30 intended to block the teen-ager's return to Gadsden for 90 days. Council members said extradition would violate the district's ban on the death penalty, because if O.M. is convicted in Alabama, he could face execution in the electric chair.

The U.S. Supreme Court has heard arguments but not yet ruled on a challenge to the death penalty for those who were crimes.

McLanahan scores 77 to take over top spot in bareback at CNFR

BOZEMAN, Mont. - Denny McLanahan has had to take the bad with the good at the College National Finals Rodeo, but the good has bordered on outstanding.

Though he bucked off in the bull riding for the second time in a week Thursday, the sophomore from Canadian, Texas scored a crowd-pleasing 77 in the bareback to take over first place in the second-go and the average of that event. He also picked up 15 points for WTC after his first-go score of 72 tied for fourth in the round.

Western, which got 90 points earlier this week from Ray Brown in the calf roping, now has 105.

The only other WTC student to compete Thursday was Brown, whose 9.2 clocking in the steer wrestling wasn't good enough to get in back to the finals of that event.

Scheduled out tonight are Clyde Himes in the steer wrestling and Kenny Taton in the saddle bronc. If both cowboys can have good outings, Western Texas would be in good shape for Saturday's finals, said Coach Bob Doty.

"If Kenny can score 66-67 he'll have a pretty good shot at making it back," said Doty, meaning that Taton could expect to finish in the top 10 in the average and thus qualify for Saturday's short-go. Taton was seventh in the first-go with a 71.

Himes timed in at 6-seconds flat with his first steer earlier this week and "he needs to be 5 (five seconds) to be in pretty good shape. Another 6 would be close because 10th place is 12.1 right now," noted the coach.

"If we can get Clyde or Kenny back (to the short-go) we'll be in pretty good shape. Of course, you hope that both of them can make it back," Doty said.

It would appear that they would join McLanahan in the bareback. Brown in the calf roping and Jim Blain Kenney and Bryan Davis in the team roping in the finals. Also expected to make the short-go is WTC student Russell Merchant, who is currently second in the average of the steer wrestling with a time of 10.6.

Merchant, however, is not a designated team member and any points he accumulates cannot go towards the team total.

Brown is holding down fifth in the average of the calf roping with a total time of 23.4. Kenney and Davis are eighth in the average of the team roping with a 16.9 on two.

"We're in the hunt," said Doty.

"We just need to get the guys there Saturday night and then do well Saturday. Odessa looks real strong. They'll have Ty Murray back in three events and Shawn McMullan back in one and that's like having four guys in the finals. Also, they have Chad Ramirez who is fifth in the steer wrestling and Shawn and Tom Brandon of Tarleton are third in the team roping.

"So they'll have a lot of guys back. They definitely have a pretty good lead on everybody. But you never know what's going to happen in the finals," Doty noted.

Facial blemish leads to freedom for suspect

HOUSTON (AP) - A small blemish on his face has kept Robert Lynn Witner from getting a major blemish on his record.

Witner, 43, was arrested three months ago and charged with two aggravated robberies of a Houston convenience store. Because he was unable to post $40,000 bond, he spent 90 days in jail.

District Court Judge Frank Price Thursday dismissed the charges against Witner and he went free because he had a small, reddish mole on his lower right cheek and the man wanted for the robberies did not.

Witner said the mole he has nicked with his razor for so many years was enough to keep him out of prison, but it couldn't keep him out of jail.

"It's a sickening feeling. You tell these people, 'I'm not the person you want.' And they look at you and think you're guilty," Witner said. "It's a nightmare, really."

Defense lawyer Joseph Licata was finally able to convince authorities that the man shown in the surveillance camera had no mole and that resulted in freedom for Witner.

Witner said the mistake cost him his job, 90 days of his life and 60 pounds.

"It's been like a day in the Twilight Zone, where you wake up one day facing 99 years in prison twice over for a crime you didn't commit," he said.

"Psychologically, it unbalances

you."

The CitGo convenience store was robbed in November and December 1988 by a man who was captured on the camera. The robberies were shown on a local television program and someone called Harris County Detective Tom Keen and said that the man was Witner.

Keen told the Houston Chronicle that he obtained a police photo of Witner that was taken in 1987 when he was arrested for driving while intoxicated in neighboring Montgomery County and showed the picture to the two clerks who had been robbed.

Both positively identified Witner, Keen said.

Witner said he couldn't believe it when an officer who stopped him for a routine traffic violation in March told him he was under arrest for aggravated robbery.

"I came unglued," he said, but his claims of innocence got him nowhere. "The officer told me he hears that all the time."

Witner said he lost his job when he went to jail because his employer, an asbestos abatement company, wouldn't accept a collect telephone call when he tried to call and explain his situation.

He came down with bronchitis in the jail and his weight dropped from 165 pounds to less than 100 pounds, he said.

Witner said he was certain that it would take only a few days for authorities to discover the mistaken identity.

"I thought seriously that all they had to do was take a look at me and take a look at the (robber's) pictures."

Bush's order: no pleas for pistol-packing bad guys

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush summoned the entire cadre of U.S. attorneys to the White House today to hear new marching orders: no plea bargaining with violent, gun-wielding offenders.

Or, as the president put his message to criminals bluntly in a speech Thursday, "Pack a gun and we'll pack you away."

All 93 U.S. attorneys were invited to today's meeting with Bush. Also on the president's agenda was a lunch with the heads of all federal law enforcement agencies.

Bush on Thursday sent Congress the legislative draft of the $1.2 billion anti-crime package which he outlined a month ago.

But to dramatize his commitment to fighting drugs and violent crime, Bush journeyed to the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in steamy Glynn, Ga., to sign the transmittal document.

Most of the money - $1 billion - would go to expand federal prison capacity, but Bush also is intent on hiring 1,600 new prosecutors to work under the U.S. attorneys, and 825 new federal agents.

The U.S. Treasury-run center in Georgia trains police and investigators from every federal law enforcement agency except the FBI and the Drug Enforcement Agency.

"In a country where criminals threaten to erode the very liberties we hold so dear, you are domestic freedom fighters in the war on crime," Bush told trainees and several thousand others gathered on a 90-degree day for the event.

Bush said he has instructed Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, who accompanied him to Georgia, "to advise America's federal prosecutors to end plea bargaining for violent federal firearms offenses."

"Our message to the common criminal is this: Pack a gun and we'll pack you away," he said. He exhorted Congress to enact his plan to double the mandatory penalty for use of semi-automatic weapons in drug or violent crimes to 10 years.

But earlier, Bush advised a graduating Border Patrol officer, David Rivera, to remember that criminal suspects "should be treated with respect and given his rights or her rights, even though the evidence looks overwhelming."

S&L bill receives okay from House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration is hailing the House version of savings and loan bailout legislation as a major victory for taxpayers after the resounding defeat of an attempt to weaken President Bush's key reform proposal.

Shortly before 11 p.m. Thursday, the House capped a 13-hour session by voting 320-97 to solve the worst financial crisis since the Depression with the most expensive government bailout in history. It will cost, according to the congressional General Accounting Office, $285 billion over 30 years — $157 billion of that from taxpayers.

The legislation also includes a series of what Bush has labeled "never again" provisions. In what the president identified as the heart of his proposal, it requires S&L owners to risk more of their own money in a capital cushion between S&L losses and the government deposit insurance fund.

"The American taxpayers won a major victory today when the House of Representatives voted for strong, tangible capital requirements for the nation's savings and loans," Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady said in a statement.

"We applaud the House leadership for moving this bill rapidly through the House," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The House action paves the way for a conference early next month with the Senate, which passed its S&L bill in April, and for final enactment before Congress goes on vacation in August.

The sharpest conflict between the two chambers will likely be on their funding plans. The Senate would allow Bush to keep some S&L spending out of the budget deficit through a plan to sell bonds through a new quasi-private agency. But the Democratic-dominated House would swell the deficit by $44 billion, increasing pressure on the administration to agree to a tax increase, in a bid to cut long-term interest costs.

On capital, the House would require S&L owners to risk $3 in "real money" capital for every $100 in lending, while the Senate standard is $1.50.

Despite heavy industry lobbying, the House, on a 326-94 vote, rejected an amendment offered by Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., which would have given 241 S&Ls a chance, through an administrative appeal, to win exemption from new capital requirements.

Hyde was arguing on behalf of institutions currently benefiting from an accounting break known as "supervisory good will." Regulators granted the $19.7 billion break to institutions, many of them in Illinois, that took ailing institutions off the government's hands in the early 1980s. Supervisory good will allows many of them to operate without risking any of their owners' money.

Both House and Senate versions of the S&L bill reorganize the bureaucracy to give the administration greater control over S&L regulators. And, they provide more money — the House, $75 million, and the Senate, $50 million — to detect and prosecute fraud in financial institutions.

Governor signs 2 school bills

with the poor districts, an appeals court upheld the state system. The issue is pending before the Texas Supreme Court.

A second bill is designed to combat the state's dropout problem by denying those under 18 a driver's license if they aren't in school, said Mark Sanders, a spokesman for Clements.

The governor called the dropout rate "alarming" and said it was one of the toughest problems facing Texas officials.

A recent study by the Texas Education agency found that more than 87,000 students in grades seven through 12 left school last year.

"This simply is unacceptable," Clements said. "That's why I'm signing what I believe is one of the most novel approaches to attack this problem."

"The no-class, no-car law will send a clear signal to students thinking about leaving school: if you want a driver's license, you must go to class."

Another bill Clements signed calls for the state to issue $750 million in revenue bonds, using the proceeds for loans to school districts for construction and other capital improvements.

Counts forsee work comp fight

Bill 1, offered a comprehensive set of reforms, including the abolition of trial de novo, but the 31-member Senate in effect rejected that bill, passing its own legislation to provide a quicker recourse to a trial.

The House proposes to replace the three full-time members of the IAB with a six-member, part-time Texas Workers Compensation Board. The Senate seeks the creation of a similar six-member Texas Workers Compensation Commission, with equal representation for employers and wage-earners.

Counts said that in these last few days before the special session, constituents of representatives and senators should write letters, make telephone calls, send telegrams or otherwise make their positions known on the issue, which is the only one on the governor's "call" or agenda.

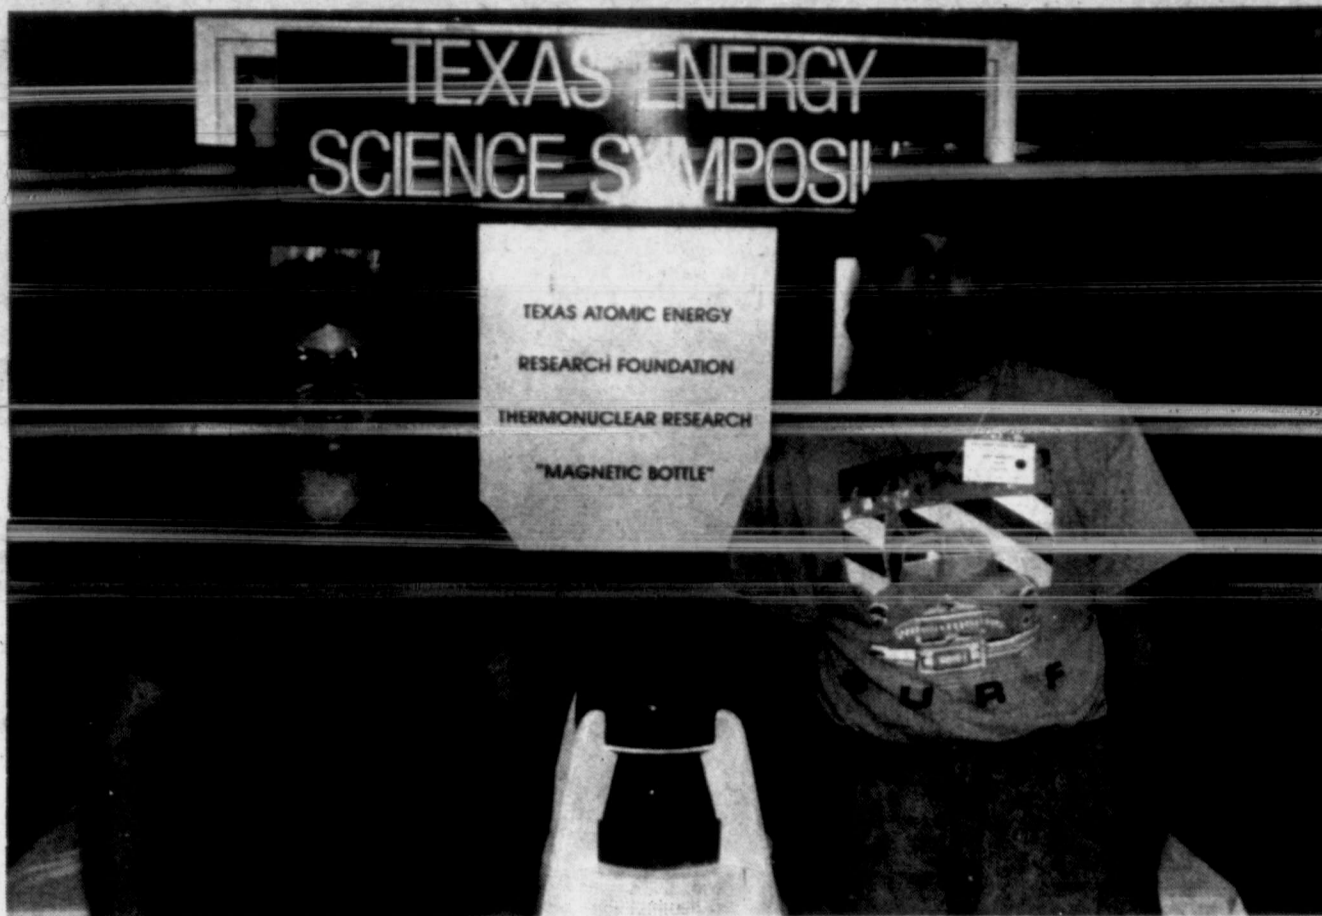

He said there may be enough sentiment in both houses to institute penalties, civil or possibly even criminal, for the procurement of fraudulent claims.

For reading, of all local students taking the TEAMS test, 87 percent showed mastery. Again, last year's scores were the only time this mark has been bettered here, when a 92 percent level was reached.

For writing skills, this year's scores were a match with last year's and reflect the highest level reached by Snyder ISD to date. For both years, 85 percent of the students showed mastery.

800 bills signed by governor

AUSTIN (AP) — After signing more than 800 bills into law, Gov. Bill Clements says he is still reviewing the $47.4 billion state budget and some bills that he might veto.

In a flurry of bill signing Thursday, Clements endorsed measures to build more prison cells, overhaul the criminal justice system and bring water and sewer services to substandard "colonias."

Working against a Sunday deadline to complete work from the 1989 Legislature's regular session, the governor said he hoped to complete quickly his review of the 1,081 bills left by lawmakers when they adjourned on May 29.

"I've got about 200 to go," he said late Thursday.

Under the Texas Constitution, Clements has until midnight Sunday to finish the job, although he said he expected to be wrapped up by tonight. "I will, I guarantee you," he told news reporters while adding a warning: "It might be pretty late."

The governor said he was particularly pleased with the criminal justice overhaul, which calls for 11,000 new prison beds along with new sentencing options that would place inmates in community facilities instead of state prisons.

"By our action, we are putting the justice back into the criminal justice system in Texas," he said.

Texas is under a federal court order to keep the state prison population under 95 percent of capacity. Counties have complained that state inmates awaiting transfer are backed up in county jails.

Lawmakers hope the plan, which should increase prison capacity from 39,000 to 61,000 beds by the early 1990s, will answer those problems.

The governor also signed bills changing laws on organized crime and the use of verbal statements as evidence in criminal investigations.

The oral confession bill allows police to record a suspect's statement either without telling him or after giving him one warning instead of continued warnings.

The measure on organized crime changes the definition from five people to three people carrying on illegal activity. It also increases penalties and adds fraud, bribery and drug offenses as punishable under the statute.

The colonias bill will allow proceeds from millions of dollars in state bonds to be used to provide sewer and water services to the substandard developments, many of which are located along the Texas-Mexico border.

Among other bills signed were measures to:

— Regulate businesses offering gifts and prizes to lure customers to their sales pitches.

— Allow licensing of "minibars" in hotel rooms.

— Make it a misdemeanor to sell cigarettes or tobacco products to anyone under age 18.

— Prohibit motorists from carrying children under age 12 in the beds of pickup trucks traveling more than 35 mph.

— Increase the power of cities and counties to regulate sexually oriented businesses, such as adult book stores, movie theaters and motels.

— Make it a felony for lawyers to solicit business in a hospital, funeral parlor, cemetery, or at the scene of an accident.

— Designate anabolic steroids and growth hormones as controlled substances, raising penalties for possession, and requiring schools to post a copy of the law in gymnasiums.

— Ban public school students from carrying telephone pagers except for those working for volunteer emergency organizations.

— Streamline government services with uniform financial reporting practices, and a statewide accounting and payroll system. "These initiatives will greatly improve our state's management ... and as a result save taxpayers money," Clements said.

— Establish a procedure for saluting the Texas flag.

— Increase penalties for hunting at night, or using electric shock devices to catch fish.

— Raise penalties for bootlegging recordings of concerts.

Fathers torn between career, family too

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fathers who take time off for the birth of a baby will become the majority in the coming decade, says a new study that finds dads joining moms in the struggle to cope with work and family responsibilities.

"Balancing work and family responsibilities is becoming a total work force issue, not just a women's issue," reports Sandra Burud of Burud & Associates in Pasadena, Calif., in the analysis "The 1990s Father: Balancing Work & Family Concerns."

"We tend to think working moms have a monopoly on guilt, but it's not true," added James Levine of Bank Street College of Education in New York.

While fathers continue to face traditional pressure to do well at work, they also want to spend more time with their children, reported Levine.

He and Burud were among several researchers included in the study compiled by the Bureau of National Affairs, an independent research group.

A DPS trooper said Gutierrez was turning right into a park when the mishap took place.

Household items listed as stolen

Upshaw is interim pastor

The Rev. T. O. Upshaw officially became the interim pastor of the First Baptist Church on Monday. Upshaw, a member of the congregation since December of 1986, had been serving as the minister of senior adults at the time of his new appointment. He will now combine the two posts.

Upshaw succeeds the Rev. Ken Branam who pastored the church for several years. He preached his last sermon this past Sunday. Branam leaves Snyder for Irving where he will assume new duties at the Plymouth Park Baptist Church.

Upshaw was ordained a minister in May of 1947 and he pastored three churches in Texas before being named the Director of Missions for the Double Mountain Baptist area. His office was located in Stamford.

As the director of missions, Upshaw oversaw the building of Baptist churches throughout the United States. In July, this group will build its 29th church in Toledo, Wash. Upshaw's involvement was profiled in a Scurry County Folks feature which ran in the Oct. 25, 1987 issue of the Snyder Daily News.

A native of Rotan, he attended both Hardin-Simmons University and the Southwestern Seminary in Ft. Worth.

He and his wife, Georgie, moved to Snyder in 1986 after he retired as the Director of Missions.

Both Dickerson and his wife are from Amarillo originally.
