WTC rodeo team wins 3rd place at College Nationals

From Local Wire Reports
BOZEMAN, Mont.—Ray Brown carried the banner for Western Texas College here Saturday, leading the Westerners to an impressive third place finish in the College National Finals Rodeo.

It was Western Texas' ninth straight appearance in the CNFR, and their best finish since 1986, when Coach Bob Doty's cowboys won the national title.

Here Saturday, Western finished with 450 points, behind a red-hot Odessa team with 1,410, and Montana State, which had 801. Brown unfortunately was Western's only cowboy who stayed on Saturday. Teammates Denny McLanahan and Kenney Taton failed to complete their rides in the bareback and saddle bronc events and Jim Blain Kenney and Bryan Davis took a no-time in the team roping.

"It was disappointing from the aspect that they wanted to do so well, but they gave their best effort," said Doty. "Denny had a real rank horse and he bucked off about a mile into the race. If he had stayed on, he probably would have finished first or second. Kenny's was a national finals horse and he just bucked off. Had everybody had a good short-round we might have been able to win second, but Odessa just put everything together. "We've had a good year. We didn't finish as strong as we would have liked, but when you look at the whole year in perspective, it was a good year," added Doty. Brown clocked a 10.7 Saturday to win second place in the short-go of the calf roping behind Odessa's Shawn McMullan. The sophomore from North Platte, See WESTERN, page 5

Cotton date to see 90 percent-plus planted in county

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

From 85 to 90 percent of this year's cotton is now planted, county officials estimate, but the 1989 crop still has a long list of hazards to overcome before a successful season can be achieved.

Farmers here and elsewhere are aiming at a completion date by Tuesday, since June 20 is the last day cotton may be accepted into the Federal Crop Insurance program.

This year as in years past, the Scurry County cotton crop is expected to comprise between 60,000 and 65,000 acres.

"We're really late almost all across the county," noted County Agent Marvin Ensor, who estimated as much as 55,000 acres might have seed in the ground following this past weekend's activity.

Ensor and ASCS Director Joe Hefner pointed to the widely varying conditions which farmers have faced this year.

Hefner noted the Fluvanna area to the north "was dry so long, then the rain and hail all came at one time." Many field "washouts" were noted there, he said.

Ensor echoed these comments. "In the western part of the county, we've got land still too dry to plant cotton, and southeast of Hermleigh, we've got cotton suffering from too much moisture."

Ensor noted that many farmers who "dry planted" in May in expectation of a rain were further frustrated when their seeds were washed away by downpours in early June.

Rainfall amounts have varied widely throughout the county, but the city's official rain tally for May was less than .50 of an inch. Since June 1, the city has received almost 3 inches of rain.

The Fluvanna area is likely the hardest hit by inclement weather, both agreed, to include damage from hail.

In general, however, the county now needs additional moisture and temperatures in the mid-90s, a formula which does not match the weather outlook for the Snyder area into Friday.

The local forecast has a prediction for high readings near 100 on Tuesday with all of West Texas expected to be extremely hot through Friday.

Area readings could reach between 102 and 105 for the period, National Weather Service forecasters say.

Clements completes work on bills

AUSTIN (AP) — When the dust cleared, Gov. Bill Clements finished work on measures passed during the regular legislative session by signing into law 1,263 bills — ranging from requiring that motorcycle riders wear helmets to a record state budget.

On Sunday, Clements ended the bill spree by vetoing a proposal that would have given debtors more protection on foreclosed property.

The legislation produced a major controversy between bankers and developers in the closing days of the session that ended

May 29. Real estate interests had sought to make it more difficult for lenders to recover their losses on delinquent loans.

Under current law, the price paid at the foreclosure auction establishes the "fair market value" for the property and the lender can demand payment from the debtor on the outstanding loan balance.

The Legislature passed a compromise plan that would have allowed the lender to foreclose, but the borrower would have had the right to go to court to receive a determination of the property's value and the amount of the outstanding loan balance. The difference in these two prices is called the deficiency.

Clements vetoed the bill saying it would have resulted in numerous lawsuits. "Such delays and further litigation are not in the best interest of the state," he said.

Also Sunday, Clements approved bills that will:

— Require conversion to natural gas or other alternative fuel in state fleets with more than 15 vehicles, school districts with more than 50 buses, and local transit authorities. The conversions will be phased in from 1991 to 1998.

— Encourage the Texas Air Control board to adopt rules encouraging the use of natural gas in vehicles and boilers.

— Give Texans greater access to government records about themselves, and prohibit governmental entities from charging high prices for providing copies of records.

On Sunday, the governor vetoed legislation that would have:

— Required sterilization of animals slated for adoption from animal shelters.

— Provided penalties for violating a human burial.

— Regulated sports agents dealing with football and basketball athletes.

Clements already had signed many of the major bills from the 71st Legislature, including the $47.4 billion state budget, prison reform, education funding, insurance regulations and rural health care.

Earlier, he also had signed into law a bill that will require motorcycle riders to wear helmets.

Of the 1,318 bills sent to Clements' desk he signed 1,263 and vetoed 55. In 1987, Clements signed 1,134 bills and vetoed 52.

Under the Texas Constitution, the governor has 20 days to act on legislation following the end of the regular session, which concluded May 29.

That deadline expired at midnight Sunday.

School to consider bids on depository

Snyder school board members will conduct a called meeting and workshop Tuesday during which, among other agenda items, trustees will consider bank depository bids for district funds for the next two years.

The session is to begin at noon at the school administration building. After handling eight items listed on the agenda, the board will conduct a workshop for the 1989-90 school budget.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, administrators will seek permission to receive bids for the re-roofing of East Elementary and the cafeteria area at Northeast Elementary.

These are items budgeted for next year and Superintendent Dalton Moseley said plans are to seek bids as soon as possible in order to complete the work prior to the start of school.

A presentation is slated also from representatives of the Snyder Soccer Association, who have a request related to the soccer playing fields located between the junior high and West Elementary.

A second request from chamber of commerce officials will be considered also. It involves the use of district school buses as part of activities planned here for the July 22 "open house" which will mark the completion of the Price Daniel Unit.

It is proposed to use 10 school district buses to "shuttle" individuals attending the event from the Scurry County Coliseum to the prison site.

Other agenda items include:

— Accept the resignation of an elementary school teacher.

— Consider a budget amendment for cafeteria equipment.

— Approve this year's Level II career ladder appointments.

— Consider applications for federal funds related to Chapter I, Chapter II and migrant application funds.

AA-linked group reports expansion

Scurry County commissioners Monday heard a report from the Alcoholics Anonymous-affiliated Snyder Park Club in which a spokesman said the club headquarters at the old Lincoln Park swimming pool building in Towle Park will likely be doubled in size during the coming year.

The spokesman said large increases in the groups that meet there have necessitated the expansion and that although all of the labor will be voluntary, the county might be asked for the donation of some materials.

County Judge Bobby Goodwin said he would have to return at a later date to make a formal proposal.

The spokesman said that if the expansion is approved, the building might become district headquarters for 13 AA groups.

He said that over the past year, the club's membership has increased in membership from three or four to 12 to 14, ALATEENS to about 10 members and ALANON to about 40 participants.

He said the Snyder Park Club has applied to the Texas Secretary of State's office for non-profit tax status and that a number of Snyder area citizens stand ready to contribute if it achieves that classification.

Other business included a discussion among court members about Pct. 3 Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr.'s proposal, rejected last week, to trade two roadgraders and two pickup trucks for a 1990 roadgrader.

Although the proposal was dispensed with last week and was not on the agenda, Gray presented estimates on the value of the various equipment and said the county would have received the equivalent of a discount of between $55,000 and $75,000 on the total cost bid transaction.

He noted that one local dealer See COUNTY, page 8

Police vehicle struck during chase

A 25-year-old Snyder man has been charged with aggravated assault on a police officer, DWI and evading arrest in connection with a reported 24-minute chase in which a police car was rear-ended and heavily damaged in the northeastern part of the city early Sunday.

Mike Martinez of 807 16th St. Monday had been released on a total of $12,000 in bonds, $10,000 for the assault charge, $1,000 and $1,000 each for the other two charges.

Police said the chase started after a parked 1965 Ford belonging to Christy Gutierrez of 1410 Seventh St. was hit and damaged by a passing car in the 2200 Block of Ave. I.

A city patrol car driven by officer Randy Leverich was stopped in the intersection of 16th St. and Ave. I in an attempt to stop the 1978 Mercury that officers had been pursuing "around and around" city blocks in northeastern Snyder, a department spokesman said.

Leverich tried to get the car out of the way when he saw that the other vehicle was apparently not going to stop, but the police car was hit from behind, the spokesman said.

Neither the officer nor the suspect was injured.

The chase continued as the suspect's vehicle ran through a yard in the 2200 Block of Ave. M and over two steel clothesline poles, and he was finally stopped and taken into custody at 16th and I, after which he was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for a medical checkup.

The spokesman said the chase began at 3:28 a.m. and finally ended at 3:52 a.m.

Arms talk

GENEVA (AP) — U.S.-Soviet talks on cutting long-range nuclear forces reopened today after a seven-month recess with few prospects of an early breakthrough in the 4-year-old negotiations.

Couple cut honeymoon short

LAKE JACKSON, Texas (AP) — Honeymoons are supposed to be romantic, but Janice and Kim Freeman both agree that their honeymoon to Beijing was anything but.

The new Mrs. Freeman described it as "interesting and very memorable," but for all the wrong reasons.

The Lake Jackson couple, who married May 20, couldn't have picked a worse time to visit China's capital. Intended to be a combination of business and pleasure, the trip turned into a desperate attempt to flee a violence-torn city.

"When we took off (from Beijing)," Freeman said, "It was as if somebody lifted a heavy burden off of us."

Their honeymoon was salvaged when they spent three days in Hong Kong before returning to the United States.

"It was gratifying to come back to a free country," Freeman said.

Freeman, 32, is an endodontist — a dentist who specializes in root canal therapy. He was a member of the People to People Citizens Ambassador Program's American Endodontic Delegation.

While the trip was meant to be a honeymoon, Freeman also was scheduled to lecture and share information about his work with his Chinese counterparts.

The Freemans arrived on June 3, the eve of the student massacre. For three days they saw the results of the government crackdown, drove past burning trucks and buses and saw the bodies of students killed by soldiers.

The Freemans knew it was not business as usual when they arrived in Beijing.

"We saw all kinds of military trucks, one after another leaving the airport," said Mrs. Freeman.

29, a psychotherapist. "It was strange, because at the time it was more of a friendly atmosphere."

They were scheduled to stay at the Beijing Hotel near Tiananmen Square, but were diverted at the last moment to the Cun Len Hotel, about one mile northeast of the square.

The following morning they were told that two hotel employees had been killed as the soldiers moved in on student protesters in the square.

They boarded a tour bus Sunday to go to the Great Wall and saw with their own eyes the remnants of a bloody massacre.

"Trucks were burning; the people were milling around. They looked dismayed," Freeman said. "The driver weaved his way around the area. We went right through some burning buses. We came so close we could feel the heat."

On Sunday night, the honeymoon took a few more strange turns.

The Freemans and their group went out to dinner and learned that martial law required that they stay off the streets after sundown.

As the tour bus returned to the hotel, it was met by about 40 soldiers with guns in position and ready for action.

"The driver made a U-turn and the guide told us to duck. That's when we thought it's time to go," Mrs. Freeman said.

Leaving Beijing, though, was not easy. The Freemans spent the following day in their hotel after being warned to stay off the streets.

On Tuesday, they tried to catch a flight out of the city, but their reservations had been sold, and the couple was stuck at the airport because it would have been too dangerous to return to the hotel.

They caught a flight Wednesday to Guangzhou (formerly Canton) and took a train to Hong Kong.

Mrs. Freeman said she was never afraid in Beijing.

"We were concerned that we couldn't get out in time," she said. "A couple of the group members were really nervous."

Reyes votes for contracts which benefit brother's firm

HOUSTON (AP) — A city councilman said he was unaware he voted in favor of city contracts that gave about $3.9 million in subcontracting to a company controlled by one of his brothers.

Terry Wilson, an assistant Harris County district attorney, said his office will investigate whether Councilman Ben Reyes' actions on the contracts violated conflict-of-interest or other laws. The Houston Post reported Sunday in a copyright story.

Reyes said he had not filed disclosure forms or abstained from voting in regard to Royal Supply Corp. because he did not make a connection between general contractors who received city contracts and Royal Supply, which worked as a subcontractor.

Reyes' brother, Tony G. Reyes, is president and an owner of Royal Supply.

The councilman said all he sees before attending a council meeting are the agendas and that Royal Supply never has been listed as a contractor or subcontractor.

He suggested that if conflict-of-interest issues are to be raised about subcontractors on city projects, those subcontractors should be listed on City Council agendas.

Asked about the district attorney's investigation, Reyes said, "I think that it's appropriate, and we look forward to working with them any way we can."

Most other City Council members contacted Sunday by the newspaper said Reyes should have avoided voting on the contracts if he knew his brother's firm would benefit from them. But some of Reyes' colleagues also said it can be difficult always to know when a relative's business might involve the city.

Councilman Jim Greenwood said he has siblings and parents with financial interests. He said that may, at times, "lurk beneath the surface of (council) agenda items."

City records show that Greenwood files detailed disclosure affidavits on council decisions that even tangentially involve one of his relatives.

"I think that we all are charged by the law with trying to do the best we can to find out what the (conflict) problems are, but at times it's not easy," said Greenwood.

Forgiveness sought before execution

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A multiple killer who murdered a transient because he "just got in my way" was executed today after saying he wanted to die and asking forgiveness from his victims' families.

William Paul Thompson, 52, was executed by injection and was pronounced dead at 2:11 a.m.

He gave no final statement, but talked with prison guards as he lay on a gurney in Nevada's former gas chamber, then stared at a ceiling fan as the injection was administered.

He spent the hours before his execution talking with a minister and with a fellow death-row inmate, prison officials said.

He was the third person put to death in Nevada and the 112th in the nation since executions resumed in 1977. Seven murderers have been executed this year.

In the only interview he granted, Thompson told The Associated Press on Saturday that he had recently found religion and was "paying back to society the only thing I have to offer it."

People Who Write Own Wills Leave Problems as a Legacy

By Abigail Van Buren

Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a practicing attorney who reads your column daily, as I find your responses to be down-to-earth and based on commonsense reasoning.

However, I think you did your readers a disservice when you instructed them on how to write their own wills. Unfortunately, some people who write their own wills without the advice of an attorney create serious and expensive problems for their survivors.

Recently an elderly friend of mine bragged to me about having written his own will. I finally convinced him to let me take a look at it.

In one paragraph, he left all of his personal property to a certain person. Then in the next paragraph, he proceeded to leave his coin collection to "Party A," his gun collection to "Party B," and all of his books to "Party C" — all of which items are personal property that he had disposed of in the previous paragraph.

You can imagine what the judge's decision would have been if that will had been filed for probate.

RAY MATTOX,
WINTER HAVEN, FLA.

DEAR MR. MATTOX: Read on for a similar letter from a Texas lawyer. Same song, second verse, only worse:

DEAR ABBY: Would you tell a reader with a broken arm how to set and cast it? If not, why did you instruct your readers on how to prepare their own wills?

I have been practicing law for only four years, and thus far I've come across the following:

1. A prominent Texas physician left handwritten notes all over town detailing how his affairs should be handled after his death. He had separated from his wife 13 years prior to his death, but since they were never legally divorced, she received one-half of his estate. In addition to this community property interest due to Texas law, his will left her one-half of his entire estate. If he had known that she was to receive one-half as her community interest, he would not have given her one-half of his half community interest — or a total of three-fourths of the entire estate!

2. Another client's mother died. Her handwritten will left everything to her husband — my client's father, who died nine months later, leaving everything to my client and his two sisters. The total estate and inheritance tax amounted to more than $100,000. The taxes could have been avoided entirely if either parent had consulted an estate-planning attorney.

3. Another individual, trying to avoid leaving anything to her only daughter (a drug addict), carefully specified each piece of property in her will and which heir was to receive it. However, after writing her will, she received a large inheritance from her father. Because the inheritance was not listed in her will, under the intestacy laws of the state of Texas, the inheritance passed to her only daughter — clearly not her intent!

These are only a few of the horror stories I have come across that could have been prevented if the people involved had consulted an attorney rather than writing their wills.

DANIEL PALMER,
WACO, TEXAS

DEAR ATTORNEYS PALMER AND MATTOX: Thank you for writing. I'll take my lumps. Instead of telling my readers how to write their own wills, I should have repeated the advice I have so frequently given: "In legal matters, hire a lawyer and pay him (or her) for what he knows." (Case dismissed.)

Consumers want chemical-free food

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently read an article about the chemical daminozide, or Alar, that is used in preserving apples and other fruit. This was very disturbing to me. I am an apple-a-day person and always encourage my friends to eat them. Eating apples year-round means buying shipped-in apples during out-of-season months. If I ask my grocer if his apples have been treated, how can I rely on his answer? I feel the information should be made available to consumers so we can decide if we want to buy treated products or not.

DEAR READER: I am sure that many readers are aware of the publicity surrounding the release of a report by the National Resources Defense Council, a private environmental group with offices in several cities. The report showed that young children, who customarily consume far more apple juice and fruit than do adults, are at greater risk of developing health problems from pesticide residues.

The Environmental Protection Agency has virtually ignored the impact of pesticides on children because the legal limits of these substances are regulated by the EPA using information based on adult males.

Alar (daminozide) is such a pesticide. Although apple growers recently agreed to stop spraying their products with the substance, independent laboratories have found unacceptably high levels of residue in supposedly Alar-free apple products and apple juice.

As a result of the NRDC study, concerned people have joined together in a group called Mothers and Others for Pesticide Limits. The group's objective is to ensure that pesticide-and-fungicide-free food is available to those consumers.

The problem is not simply Alar. About 60 known carcinogens (cancer-producing drugs) and about 250 untested chemicals are now being used to treat fruit and vegetables. This is unacceptable because, although adults may be able to detoxify pesticide-treated food, children are more susceptible to its harmful, long-term consequences.

Mothers and Others, a subsidiary of NRDC, urge the following solutions:

- Congress must require the EPA to revise its legal limits on pesticide exposure.

- Those pesticides that pose serious health risks should immediately be banned.

- The Food and Drug Administration must improve its methods for detecting pesticide residues.

- Consumers must insist that farmers switch to low- (or no) pesticide farming to reduce the presence of carcinogens in the country's food supply.

- To achieve these goals, Mothers and Others recommend that consumers:

- Insist on (certified) organically grown produce;

- Wash fruit and vegetables carefully to remove residues. (However, this is not always practical or successful, because many pesticides enter the product itself);

- Write to government and elected officials to press for reform.

Diggers unearth artifact

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A junior archaeology student on a downtown dig initially thought she had struck a chip of common pottery. But the find actually was a cannon ball believed fired by Santa Anna's troops on the defenders of the Alamo.

The bronze-coated grapeshot was uncovered recently by an archaeological team from University of Texas at San Antonio.

The ball, fired in clusters from cannons, was found about two feet down in the northwest corner of a dig across from the shrine of Texas liberty, where historians say a trench was dug to defend against Mexican troops.

"I thought it might be a piece of pottery because I could see the green," said Barbara Meisner, who found the ball.

"But as I cleaned it, I saw the roundness of it and I got pretty excited," she said, rolling the heavy sphere in her hand and pointing to a bright green spot.

The UTSA students began work June 8 and will continue the dig through July 7. Ms. Meisner found the grapeshot Thursday. Alamo defenders in 1836 dug a 6-foot-wide, 3-foot-deep ditch and banked the dirt from it facing Santa Anna's forces, said Joel Gunn, director of the archaeological field school.

They shored the ditch with cedar posts and mounted a cannon on the embankment to fire at the enemy, he said. In turn, Santa Anna is believed to have peppered them with the grapeshot.

Antarctica expedition needs funds

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Adventurer Will Steger's long-awaited expedition across Antarctica remains $600,000 shy of its $11 million budget.
 "It's the same old story," Steger said. "We don't have enough money to get off the ice."
 The journey carries a price tag that includes $7.8 million in cash expenditures and $3.2 million in donated goods and services. And its hefty cost has drawn criticism.
 "People ask how we can spend this kind of money in today's world," said Cathy deMoll, business manager of the expedition's St. Paul headquarters. "Well, George Bush's inaugural cost $30 million. And look at the money spent on weapons. ... We're not taking money out of the mouths of starving children. We're using corporate money in an altruistic way."
 Beginning Aug. 1, weather permitting, Steger and French physician Jean-Louis Etienne will lead a team of six men — including members from the Soviet Union, Great Britain, China and Japan — and 36 dogs across Antarctica.

Education advised

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indicted junk bond king Michael Milken had some investment advice for a business group: Educate yourself.
 "Opportunity in America begins with education," he told the audience during his weekend appearance. "We are no longer an industrial society. We are an information and services society."

LONDON (AP) — This is the summer of the Great Rottweiler Scare.

Rottweilers are very large, very ferocious dogs, and one might imagine from recent headlines that they have Britain under siege.

For a nation that cherishes its dog-loving image, it's an unsettling experience, and more than a simple dog-bites-man story.

For weighty political and social issues are at play.

The trouble began in April, when two Rottweilers savaged and killed an 11-year-old girl who was exercising them in Scotland.

Reports of Rottweiler attacks have since filled the newspapers. About 20 have been reported, and they come with precise details, down to the number of stitches required.

"It seems as if the Rottweiler dog ... is rapidly assuming the dimensions of the Hound of the Baskervilles," commented The Guardian newspaper.

Indeed, there are some similarities with Sherlock Holmes' ghostly canine legend.

Rottweilers are plenty scary. They weigh about 130 pounds and are built like armored personnel carriers. In Britain, their number has increased sevenfold to 180,000 over the past decade.

With headlines blaring about "devil dogs" biting babies in their cribs, the House of Commons sat into the early hours of Thursday debating the issue.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's own supporters rebelled, and nearly defeated her on a motion to introduce dog-licensing.

The conservative Thatcherites oppose licensing. Wedded to a doctrine of getting government off the people's backs, they abolished the mandatory license two years ago.

Now, they say Rottweilers or no Rottweilers, they won't bring it back.

"It would be very, very bureaucratic and very, very hard to enforce," says Environment Minister Virginia Bottomley.

Peter Jenkins, a liberal newspaper columnist, says that with this sort of laissez-faire attitude, "we'd still have wolves on Clapham Common," the park near his London home.

In a television debate, liberal lawmaker Paddy Ashdown reeled off statistics to back his demand for a licensing scheme: 500,000 stray dogs roaming the streets of Britain, 250,000 dog bites a year costing the public health system $26 million annually.

License fees, he said, would pay for more dog catchers and dog pounds.

The Rottweiler set is aggrieved. They have their own horror stories of Rottweilers being poisoned in vengeance attacks, of people being abused and threatened as they walk their Rottweilers. of plummeting prices for pups, and of owners wanting to get rid of their Rottweilers.

They blame the news media. "It appears a Rottweiler has only to sneeze and it is in the headlines," Marilyn Hayward of the British Rottweiler Association was quoted as telling The Sunday Times.

Nothing, it seems, is safe. The Today newspaper described how policemen — with pitchforks covered on a tractor in Orpington, south of London, while a Rottweiler ran riot among a farmer's prize pigs.

Letters to the press offer various advice. Margaret Jackson wrote in from Chipping Camden saying she found water pistols useful in fending off vicious dogs. The Rev. Roger Reed of Saffron Waldon said dog-owners, like drivers, should undergo a test before being allowed to have a Rottweiler.

Taking your best shot

By James Jacoby

South won the opening spade lead in his hand and led the 10 of clubs, letting it ride when West played low. East won the king and came back with the queen of hearts. South played low on that trick, but went up with the king when East continued with the heart 10. South had seen players lead the queen from A-Q-J-10 and was not about to be hoodwinked by clever play from East. But West now took the ace and returned a third heart, and declarer was down two before the smoke cleared.

Was there some clue that should have guided South to the winning play of holding up his king of hearts until the third round of the suit? (The suit would then block and declarer would make his nine tricks via the successful diamond finesse.)

The answer is that declarer will need the diamond king to be with East in order to make the contract in any event. So he must assume the favorable location of that card. After that, it is simply a matter of remembering the bidding to know that East cannot also hold the ace of hearts. East passed in third position, and he would surely have opened the bidding with A-Q-J of hearts, king of diamonds and king of clubs. And what if East does not hold the diamond king and in fact holds A-Q-J-10 of hearts? South may feel a little foolish going set an extra trick, but he can console himself with having taken the best play for the contract.

Poll...

Some fear schoolchildren can't think for themselves

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans believe standardized tests fail to measure how well pupils learn, and fear that schoolchildren are being taught facts without absorbing them, a poll has found.

To improve education, majorities in the Media General-Associated Press survey supported greater spending and taxes and increased competition among public schools. A sizable minority supported the notion of year-round classes.

School competition, through programs allowing parents to choose which public schools their children attend, is a cornerstone of President Bush's education policy. Bush has questioned whether greater spending is needed.

After a decade in which the back-to-basics movement swept the nation's schools, 52 percent in the poll said their local schools do an adequate job teaching basic facts and skills. But just 39 percent gave the schools good marks for teaching pupils how to think and reason.

Despite that mixed report, 53 percent rated their local public schools as good or excellent overall. Respondents with children in the schools rated them even more highly, with 61 percent favorable.

The national poll of 1,084 adults, conducted May 5-13 as the school year approached its end, found considerable enthusiasm for a variety of initiatives being tried or debated around the country. Among the findings:

—Two-thirds favored more spending on public schools, and nine in 10 of that group said they would accept higher taxes to pay for it. Even adults without children in school backed greater spending by nearly 2-1.

—Fifty-eight percent said parents should be able to choose which public schools their children attend. Proponents say that creates competition that forces schools to improve themselves; critics say it drains resources from the schools that need the most improvement.

—More than four in 10 favored year-round classes, with vacations scattered through the year in place of a long summer break.

Principal's firing will probably be appealed

DAISETTA, Texas (AP) — An official with the Texas State Teachers Association said his organization probably will appeal the dismissal of a high school principal, who was fired amid sexual harassment charges.

The school board action against Sanford Engelberg, principal at Hull-Daisetta High School, came early Saturday morning after a seven-hour hearing before school trustees.

"We feel that this hearing was a violation of due process against Mr. Engelberg," said Mark Nye, regional director of the Texas State Teachers Association, who with TSTA consultant Sam Blackman represented Engelberg at the hearing.

"There are some files missing we requested from his papers during the discovery process which we did not receive," Nye said.

Though they did not specify which files were missing, Nye and Blackman said the papers were crucial to their case and that they were conducting the hearing under protest. Superintendent Ed Zachary, when asked about Nye's protest, claimed no knowledge of missing files.

The hearing was scheduled after Zachary brought before the board allegations against Engelberg of sexual harassment of teachers and other female school employees and charges of misappropriation of funds.

Witnesses for the school district cited numerous incidents in which they contended Engelberg sexually harassed them and interfered with their job performance.

Deborah Taylor, a substitute teacher at the school, testified that Engelberg asked her in front of a student on May 12 in the school cafeteria whether she was wearing black panties for him.

"I had heard him say these things to other people," Ms. Taylor told the board. "I said to myself, 'Well, if they can ignore it, I can too.' But when he said it in front of a student, I just knew it was wrong."

Western Texas 3rd at College National Finals in Bozeman

Neb. was second in the average with a 34.1 on three head and finished fourth in the national standings with 540 points.

Brown, who plans to rodeo for WTC another season, was third in the average here in 1988, when Western was seventh overall.

Russell Merchant, who competes under the WTC banner but was not a designated team member, finished ninth in the short-go of the steer wrestling after being flagged for a broken barrier. He timed a 14.0-second run in the finals and finished ninth in the average with 24.6 on three head.

Merchant, a freshman from Madisonville who shared honors as championship steer wrestler in the Southwest Region this season, can look forward to being one of the top hands in collegiate rodeo next year.

He finished 17th in the nation with 335 points.
Ty Murray led Odessa College to the men's title here, grabbed the rodeo and national collegiate titles for saddle-bronc and bull riding, and took the all-around crowns for the rodeo.

Odessa and host Montana State were locked in a tight battle for the men's team title before Murray and roper Shawn McMullan helped their squad to 870 final-day points.

The Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo women's team wrapped up the CNFR title with a three-cowgirl effort that outlasted the one-woman challenge of Southwestern Oklahoma State's Shannon Lord.

Cal Poly scored 834 points to pull away in the team race, while defending women's CNFR champ Southwestern Oklahoma State finished second with 498 points. Walla Walla (Wash.) Community College was third.

Lord piled up all but 30 of her team's points in winning the rodeo all-around crown and the national and rodeo titles for breakaway roping. She also competed in team roping and goat-tying.

Cathy Dennis of Southern Arkansas won the national all-around women's title, edging out Julie Adair of Cal Poly and Lord. Now that Murray has tamed the college ranks, he'll take after the pros, as he announced Saturday that the CNFR was his last collegiate rodeo. He currently ranks fifth in the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association all-around standings.

RAY BROWN

McMullan, a roping specialist for Odessa, won the rodeo and national titles in calf roping with a run of 9.4 seconds in the final go-round and a three-head time of 27.8 seconds.

Although Merchant was the only freshman competing from Western Texas here, Doty said most of the team is planning to return next season, including Brown, McLanahan, Clyde Himes and Michael Gaffney. Doty has also signed Billy Brown, Ray's brother, for next season, and was preparing to head to the Texas high school finals in search of more talent.

Western picked up $2,550 in scholarship money from Budweiser, Hardee's and Coper Hagen-Skoal this season with $1,000 coming from the team's third place finish at the CNFR.

Astros 5, Padres 2

SAN DIEGO (AP) - The Padres had only one thing between them and a big, possibly game-breaking first inning. Unfortunately for San Diego, that obstacle was Astros pitcher Mike Scott.

Scott threw three straight strikeouts to strand two runners and get out of the inning after allowing a lone run en route to a 5-2 Astros victory Sunday.

Scott, 11-4, struck out seven and walked one in his seventh complete game of the season. The Padres had Scott in hot water almost instantly, scoring once and putting runners at second and third with no outs in the first inning. But Scott pitched out of the jam with consecutive strikeouts to Jack Clark, Marvell Wynne and Luis Salazar.

Craig Biggio nailed losing pitcher Walt Terrell, 4-9, with his fourth homer of the season. The blast in the seventh inning broke a 2-2 tie. Kevin Caminiti hit his fifth homer, a two-run shot, off reliever Mark Grant in the eighth.

Terrell lost his fourth straight game, allowing six hits and three runs.

The Astros scored two unearned runs in the first inning on RBI singles by Terry Puhl and Caminiti.

Autopsy finds no answers for Matuszak's death

LOS ANGELES (AP) - An autopsy found no explanation for the heart attack that killed former Oakland Raider John Matuszak, whose ferocious play on and off the football field epitomized the team's outlaw image.

Forensic pathologist Susan Selser ordered lab tests to try to find toxic substances Sunday after determining that the heart attack could not be explained by natural causes, said coroner's supervisor Claude Boucher.

Matuszak died suddenly Saturday night at age 38.

Sharon Farrell, a friend who spoke with Matuszak about an hour before he was taken to the hospital, said: "He was just kind of ranting and raving. He sounded like he'd had a couple of drinks, you know?"

"John had a problem with drugs, which was publicly known, it was written in the papers," said Lyle Alzado, a former Raiders defensive lineman who joined the team after Matuszak had retired and the team moved to Los Angeles.

The 6-foot-9, 280-pound defenseman played with the Raiders from 1976 to 1981. Nicknamed "The Tooz," his aggressive play and tough attitude typified the bad-boy spirit of the Raiders and helped earn the team Super Bowl victories in 1977 and 1981.

"I'm just overwhelmed, shocked," said Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner. "We really loved the guy; he was our friend."

As an actor, Matuszak generally played tough guys, with credits that included the movies "North Dallas Forty," "Caveman" and "Ice Pirates," and television shows "M-A-S-H," "Trapper John, M.D." and "The Fall Guy."

He starred in a short-lived 1985 TV series, "Hollywood Beat," playing a homosexual informant whose business was used by undercover cops.

Gearing up for Wimbledon

by The Associated Press

Wimbledon is still a week away but some of the biggest names in tennis - Ivan Lendl, John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors, Martina Navratilova - are in the news.

Lendl is the world's top-ranked player but had never won a grass-court tournament as a pro until Sunday, when he beat Christo Van Rensburg of South Africa 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 in Queen's Club at London.

At Edinburgh, Scotland, McEnroe, a three-time Wimbledon winner, edged Connors, a two-time Wimbledon champion, in a pair of tiebreakers and won the Scottish Grass Court Championships 7-6 (7-2), 7-6 (7-4).

And at Edgbaston, England, Navratilova won 12 consecutive points in the middle of the second set en route to a 7-6 (7-5), 6-3 victory over Zina Garrison in the final of a grass-court tournament.

Strange makes history book with second U.S. Open title

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - The gallery chanted, "Two, Curtis, Two," and it was almost too strange to believe.

On Sunday, Curtis Strange became the first golfer to win consecutive U.S. Opens since Ben Hogan in 1951. And, believe it or not, he sealed the victory with a birdie at the 16th, the first on his card in 36 holes.

"If there was a shot that won the Open, that did it," Strange said.

Strange hadn't made birdie since the 16th hole of Friday's second round. And, if that isn't bizarre enough, consider that in the space of 1 1/2 hours, Tom Kite, one of the game's best shot-makers, went from three ahead to one behind with a triple bogey and two bogeys.

"My play stunk," said Kite, winner of 12 career tournaments but never one of the majors. "It's been a very long day for me. ... It's a bitter pill to swallow."

Sometimes, truth is stranger than fiction. For the second straight year, Strange made that march up the 18th fairway, cheered by the huge gallery, arms raised in the air. And, for the second straight year, he embraced his wife, Sarah, then walked away with the U.S. Open trophy.

Strange, a 34-year-old winner of more than $4.8 million in 13 years on the PGA Tour, is the fourth golfer to win consecutive U.S. Opens.

Foster, WTC ink all-state golfer

Western Texas College golf coach Dave Foster has announced the signing of Jimmy Howe, a member of the 1989 Class 5A All-Oklahoma State team.

Howe, from Ponca City, Okla., lettered in golf for three years. He was chosen as his team's most improved player as a senior.

Strange finished the day with an even-par 70 after a meaningless bogey on the 18th, and he shot 2-under 278 for the tournament. He had 71 in the opening round and 73 on Saturday, starting the day at two under and three back of Kite and two behind Scott Simpson.

Kite lost his share of the lead on the 10th when he missed the green and two-putted from five feet, and matters got even worse when he shot double bogeys on Nos. 13 and 15.

He double bogeyed the 594-yard, par-5 15th when he skulled his second shot, a 4-wood, out of the rough, took five shots to get on the green and two-putted.

Rangers pop NY, 5-2

NEW YORK (AP) - It's not exactly in the 90 mph range, but Charlie Hough has the zip back on his knuckleball.

Hough, who has struggled most of the season due to a sore right shoulder, allowed four hits and one run in eight innings Sunday as the Texas Rangers beat the New York Yankees 5-2 to avert a four-game sweep.

Hough entered Sunday's game 0-2 against New York this season. In his previous two starts against New York, Hough had allowed nine runs, 10 hits and 11 walks in five innings.

But he had the Yankees swinging in the air this time, and they ended up with a lot of shallow fly balls and weakly hit grounders.

"He had good control of the knuckler today and it was moving," Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly said. "That's what makes it tough when he's right."

Hough is 5-6 and has earned run average is 5.00.

The Rangers had no problem finding the ball against Dave LaPoint, 6-6, in the first three innings.

LaPoint, who had beaten the Rangers in two previous starts this season, gave up a single to rookie Sammy Sosa to start the game and Scott Fletcher followed with a double. Rafael Palmeiro drove in one run with a groundout and Ruben Sierra added an RBI single, extending his hitting streak to 11 games.

In the third inning, Sierra hit a two-run single. He has 21 hits in his last 44 at-bats and leads the American League with a .336 average.

LaPoint has lost five of his last six decisions.

Hough did not allow a hit until Ken Phelps homered off the right-field foul pole with two outs in the fourth.

The Yankees threatened in the course."

Howe won the Ponca City Invitational and placed in the top 10 at seven other tournaments last season.

"We're looking forward to working with Jimmy," said Foster.

Greeks shun Papandreou

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The shape of Greece's next government was unclear today after voters rejected Premier Andreas Papandreou's scandal-plagued socialist administration but denied the conservative opposition a majority.

Official results from 17,205 of 20,081 voting precincts clearly indicated that Constantine Mitsotakis's center-right New Democracy party would not win the 151 seats in the 300-seat parliament needed to make him the next premier.

Government computer projections indicated that the party of Papandreou's longtime foe won 145 seats in Sunday's vote, meaning a governing coalition will have to be forged or new balloting held.

Papandreou hinted early today at the possibility of a leftist coalition.

His Panhellenic Socialist Movement, known as PASOK, won 124 seats on Sunday, the leftist Coalition of Left and Progress captured 29 and minor parties took the other two, according to the projections.

PASOK dominated the last national vote in 1985, and held 154 parliament seats to New Democracy's 111 going into Sunday's election.

The Interior Ministry said today that, with 78 percent of the ballots counted, New Democracy held 44.7 percent of the vote and PASOK 39 percent. The Coalition — an alliance of the Communist and Greek Left parties — had 12.4 percent and the rest was split among minor parties and independents.

Papandreou has governed Greece for eight years and swallowed a bitter pill today when he acknowledged he could not defeat Mitsotakis, who advocates closer U.S. ties and less economic controls than the premier.

Papandreou nevertheless thanked supporters for denying "an absolute majority to the forces of conservatism."

His government has been rocked by financial and arms scandals that led to the firings or resignations of eight Cabinet members. The 70-year-old Papandreou also was hurt by a divorce from his American-born wife, Margaret, and his affair with a former airline stewardess half his age.

Still, Mitsotakis' lack of a majority left Papandreou with a chance to salvage a third four-year term at the helm of Greece's often turbulent politics.

When there is no majority, the constitution requires the president to give the leading party three days to form a governing coalition.

Mitsotakis is expected to meet with President Christos Sartzetakis on Tuesday. If Mitsotakis fails to muster enough support, PASOK and then the Coalition must be given the chance.

Should all efforts fail, the president can form a caretaker government and call new elections. Papandreou remains premier until efforts to form a coalition are exhausted.

The premier refused to answer questions about a coalition today but hinted at the possibility by noting that leftist parties — PASOK and the Coalition — would have a majority.

Mitsotakis rejected the possibility of a coalition when he spoke to cheering supporters from the balcony of his Athens headquarters.

The Coalition had hoped to emerge as a third force in Greek politics and a power broker in any negotiations for a new government.

It has said it would cooperate with PASOK only if Papandreou resigns. Coalition President Harilaos Florakis reinforced that view when he called the election results "a disapproval of PASOK policy."

Papandreou came to power in 1981 promising to lead Greece out of NATO and the European Economic Community and to close U.S. military bases around the country. His maverick foreign policy created a new pride in a country accustomed to feeling like a poor cousin of the rich West.

However, he now supports membership in both NATO and the ECC and is negotiating a new base agreement with the Americans.

Leukemia victim dies before wish is fulfilled

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Courtney Dye made it to Florida, but the 6-year-old poster girl for leukemia died before she could realize her last wish of meeting Mickey Mouse at Walt Disney World.

Courtney and her parents flew to Orlando on Tuesday for a fantasy vacation by the Make-A-Wish Foundation that fulfills wishes for terminally ill children. One day after their arrival, however, Courtney was rushed to a hospital after developing a fever that soared to 104.

She died at the hospital early Saturday morning, without having made it to the amusement park and leaving the dream of a young lifetime unfulfilled.

"She's been an angel for six years, and this morning at 1:12 a.m. she got her wings," Thais Dye, the child's grandmother, told the San Antonio Light on Saturday.

"There's one thing I've learned from this experience," the grandmother said. "You don't take anything a child does for granted. You cherish every moment."

Courtney was the 1988 poster girl for the Southwest Texas Chapter of the Leukemia Society.

The golden-haired, blue-eyed girl also had been photographed with first lady Barbara Bush, interviewed on a local TV show and featured in a local newspaper article.

"She was probably the prettiest child you can imagine," said Waynette Welch, executive director of the local leukemia chapter. "She just looked like an angel."

Courtney had been diagnosed with leukemia when she was 18 months old and chemotherapy treatments had forced the cancer into remission for a while. But she had a relapse last year, and leukemia cells were present when her blood count was taken four weeks ago.

Courtney's father had asked his mother to begin arranging her funeral after doctors said she only had six to eight weeks to live last month.

Still, the family never gave up hope, according to the San Antonio paper.

Just before Courtney left for Disney World, the grandmother planted a dozen daisies — Courtney's favorite flower — for her granddaughter. She was going to give them to her when she returned from Florida.

Several hours after receiving word that her granddaughter had died, Mrs. Dye walked into the court yard and pecked at the plants.

Two of them had blooms. "Life does regenerate," she said, choking back tears. "Some things only God can do."

Technology is weapon in battle against bugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's that time of the year when the Agriculture Department's bug writers turn out reports about the creepy, crawly, hoppy things that chew on crops and livestock.

Some of the reports turned out by specialists in the department's Agricultural Research Service involve space-age technology, foreign entomological recruiting and even sex, one of the favorite weapons of pest managers.

And when a fierce insect predator attacks a lace bug ... well, the details aren't for small children.

Take the common grasshopper, a notorious villain with an appetite for almost anything in the plant world. Or nematodes, ticks, weevils and sundry other kinds of critters that make farmers, ranchers and home gardeners fret.

"Grasshoppers like to sit in the sun," says USDA research entomologist Raymond I. Carruthers. "If it's cold, a grasshopper can't develop quickly. It might not develop to adulthood at all during its growing season — from May into September."

Don't feel sorry for the hopper, though. Millions of them chew on pastures each year, destroying almost a fourth of the forage grasses in 17 of 22 Western states. And migrating grasshoppers also ravage potatoes, alfalfa and other crops.

The internal body heat of the sun-loving hoppers serves the insects another way, by protecting them against certain diseases. For example, Carruthers said one fungus — Entomophaga grylli — would show promise as a biological control if it could stand the heat.

Carruthers said the fungus can stand about 100 degrees Fahrenheit for six to eight hours before starting to die. Grasshoppers in laboratory tests have been shown to "actually cure themselves by basking in the light," he said.

But a type of E. grylli from Australia can stand greater heat exposure and may be introduced on Western rangeland as early as this summer, Carruthers said.

In parts of Texas and other rangeland areas of the West, snakeweed and other unwanted brush is a costly and persistent problem for livestock producers. Maybe two South American insects will help.

A weevil named Heilipodus ventralis and a moth called Carmenta haematica attack the roots of snakeweed, a plant that infests 143 million acres in western states.

Sometimes a natural ally shows up no farther away than a potted azalea at the USDA's main research center in Beltsville, Md. In this case, it was a natural enemy of lace bugs, the most serious enemies of azaleas.

Entomologist John W. Neal and colleagues discovered an insect predator — Stethoconus japonicus — in 1985 on a U.S.-grown potted azalea. Studies since have shown that a single female predator, which has a needle-like snout, can consume five or six lace bugs each day.

The slightly smaller male handles two or three.

"The lace bug doesn't have a chance," Neal said. "The predator sidles up, undetected, and gives its unsuspecting victim a lethal injection through its long, needle-like mouth. Holding onto the lace bug with front legs, the predator then withdraws all body fluids and tissue, leaving an externally intact but completely drained shell."

Burn specialists help Soviet victims

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Burn specialists from Brooke Army Medical Center are helping treat about 70 victims of a Soviet train disaster in the Ural Mountains.

The San Antonio specialists are working grueling 14-hour days in a mountain town stricken with grief over the fiery catastrophe that already has claimed 190 lives.

"We are cooperating with the Soviet surgeons in performing surgery on some of the patients," said Lt. Col. William Becker, chief surgeon of the 21-member BAMC team dispatched to the Soviet Union.

Becker told the San Antonio Light in an overseas telephone interview Friday night about 25 patients will undergo skin grafts for severe burns and disfigurement.

Two passenger trains passed near the Russian city of Ufa in the Ural Mountains June 4 and ignited liquefied natural gas from a nearby pipeline.

Becker said several patients were being treated for cuts and other "additional trauma."

He said the million residents of Ufa remain stunned over the catastrophe.

"The city and local state are in a period of mourning, and the effects are fairly obvious in the local community," said Becker. "Many cultural events have been canceled, and a memorial was erected at the disaster site itself."

Although the burn team has not attended any memorial services, Becker said he suspects several have taken place.

"Because of its northern location and the time of year, it is daylight for all but three or four hours," he said of Ufa. "It is a very busy, very industrial city."

Army officials said the team's primary function is teaching local physicians how to treat severely burned patients and prevent infection during follow-up examinations. About 30 percent of the team's time is spent giving direct medical care.

Brooke sent three surgeons, three registered nurses, a civilian microbiologist, a lab technician, six vocational nurses and three respiratory therapists on June 9 to Ufa, 1,000 miles east of Moscow. Four more specialists were sent June 13.

Becker said the Soviet and San Antonio experts have managed to communicate fairly well through interpreters.

Pat Gray offers expert collision repair

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III. What does this mean to you? "When your car is in a collision, it can mean a great deal," says Pat Gray, owner of Pat Gray Body Works, 700 N. Owens, Big Spring.

The Kansas Jack Magna Rack III is a revolutionary collision repairs system for unibody cars that literally reverses the collision action by pulling it out the way it went in, then squares and aligns each section of your car in relation to the rest of the car - the way it was meant to be.

"When your car is out of commission, you're just thinking about one thing - get it fixed. You want it fixed right - the first time - and you want it fixed quickly. That's why we invested in the Kansas Jack," says Gray.

With its advanced gauging and analysis system the machine aligns each vehicle as a single unit. This means each section is aligned in correct relationship to the rest of the vehicle in conformance with the manufacturer's original specifications.

Unibody cars are built with more precise dimensions, explains Gray, because they're designed to be light, durable and reliable and at the same time roomy. The body parts may be asymmetrical to pack in the most features possible. "There is little margin for error in unibody repairs," according to Gray who says the Kansas Jack can achieve repair results that are correct within one or two millimeters.

Pat Gray Body Works features an exclusive alignment machine for front-wheel and four-wheel drive vehicles. This machine applies a sensor on each of the four wheels so they can be adjusted individually, especially important for independent suspension systems. Computerized analysis is printed out on a screen.

Customers don't have to wait til they've had a collision to utilize the alignment machine, said Gray. If your car has a non-adjustable suspension and you notice excessive or uneven tire wear or "pulling" it would be a good idea to bring it in.

Castor and camber adjusting kits are now available for installation on Ford, Chevrolet and Dodge trucks, says Gray.

Pat Gray Body Works is the only body shop in the immediate area to feature the Blowtherm Ultra spraybooth oven for factory-perfect paint jobs on vehicles following body work.

"When you start shopping around for collision repair, alignment or refinishing service you have the right to demand the best," says Gray. "With our equipment, trained technicians and our commitment to quality, we believe we offer the best."

Prince William is changed child

NEW YORK (AP) — Prince William of Wales turns 7 on Wednesday and he is a changed child, says People magazine.

Wills, as his mother Princess Diana calls him, became known as the "Prince of Wails" because of his king-size temper tantrums, but he is shedding his willful image and turning into a little charmer with the knowledge he has a big future, the magazine reported this week.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

June 20, 1989

There are strong indications for financial growth in the year ahead, but there are also signs that show you might be wasteful or extravagant. Take advantage of the former and subdue the latter.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This may not be a good day for going on a shopping excursion. There's a chance you'll either come home empty handed or else buy something expensive for which you'll have no real need. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It might be difficult to see eye-to-eye today with someone you usually agree with. Don't let differences turn serious.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It could turn out to be a big mistake today if you attempt to use flattery in trying to get others to do your bidding. Be sure your compliments are sincere and deserved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A combination of small time wasters could seriously impair your productivity today if you're not careful. Devote your efforts to serious projects, not frivolous ones.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may attempt to please people today who do not really have your best interest at heart. If this is your primary objective, you could end up doing yourself a disservice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's best not to criticize the ideas or suggestions of others today unless you're able to offer something more constructive in return. Fault finding won't enhance your popularity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could end up getting a bum deal today if you are careless or indifferent regarding the way you do business. You might be asleep at the cash register, but the other guy won't be.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be cooperative with associates today even if you have to deal with a person who has not shown you this courtesy previously. Nothing will be gained by following a bad example.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You should be able to handle major problems in stride today, but petty, little frustrations could cause you to overreact. After you scale a mountain, don't trip over a molehill.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even though you'll be in a gregarious mood today, people who indulge in excessive small talk could bore you to tears. Seek out pals who have more depth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Strive to be original today instead of attempting to adapt the ideas of someone else to fit your requirements. What worked for them might not for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take time to think things out clearly today before making any mental assumptions. There's a possibility you may be viewing life through rose-colored glasses.

Defendant wants to plead guilty

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man indicted in a string of sexual mutilation slayings in North Texas apparently called a newspaper against his lawyer's advice to say he wants to plead guilty in hopes of dodging the death penalty.

Ricky Lee Green, 28, also disputed his wife's contentions that he forced her to participate in the stabbings of two of the victims, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported in a copyright story Sunday.

The newspaper reported a man identifying himself as Green, a prisoner at the Tarrant County Jail since his arrest April 27, made the remarks in a telephone interview.

He provided the Star-Telegram with details of the crimes withheld by police that could only be known by someone with personal knowledge of the killings, a law enforcement officer in the case told the newspaper.

Tim Green, Ricky Green's younger brother, contacted a reporter Friday night whom he had met outside a Wise County grand jury session and said his brother was on the other line and wanted to talk via a three-way calling system.

Ricky Green was indicted in Tarrant County on a capital murder charge in the December 1986 death of Steve Fefferman, 28, of Fort Worth and a murder charge in the April 1985 death of Jeffery Davis, 16.

Green and his wife, Sharon Green, were indicted in Wise County on capital murder charges in the 1985 deaths of Sandra Bailey, 27, of Fort Worth and Betty Jo Monroe, 28, of Amarillo.

"I really don't know what happened," Green said in the interview, when asked about a motive for the killings. "It all started in April of '85. I have no idea."

But he said he wants to plead guilty.

Some schools think peace sign is evil

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — Several area schools are banning peace signs made famous by anti-war protesters, flower children and campus radicals in the turbulent '60s because the symbol is being tied to devil worshiping.

Pasadena Independent School District officials said the recent drug- and cult-related slayings of University of Texas student Mark Kilroy and 14 others in Matamoros, Mexico, reinforced their already cynical view of the peace symbol.

"The dramatic conclusion of that tragedy made us sit up and take notice, but the awareness was already there," district spokesman Kirk Lewis said. "We'd pick up little signs, like students doodling things on desk tops while not listening in class or rumors of some students involved in cult practices."

"It's harder for those of us who lived in the '60s to be told that the peace symbol means something completely different. But experts are telling us that, and it became inappropriate for children to wear them."

He said a district policy banning the peace symbol and several other signs believed to reflect Satanism may be established this fall.

Under tightened dress codes, the peace symbol already is prohibited on at least six Pasadena campuses, he said.

Student Andrew Yuhr, 12, said his T-shirt with the symbol in question "just meant peace. If they ban peace symbols, they'll have to ban basic geometry because of all its lines and circles."

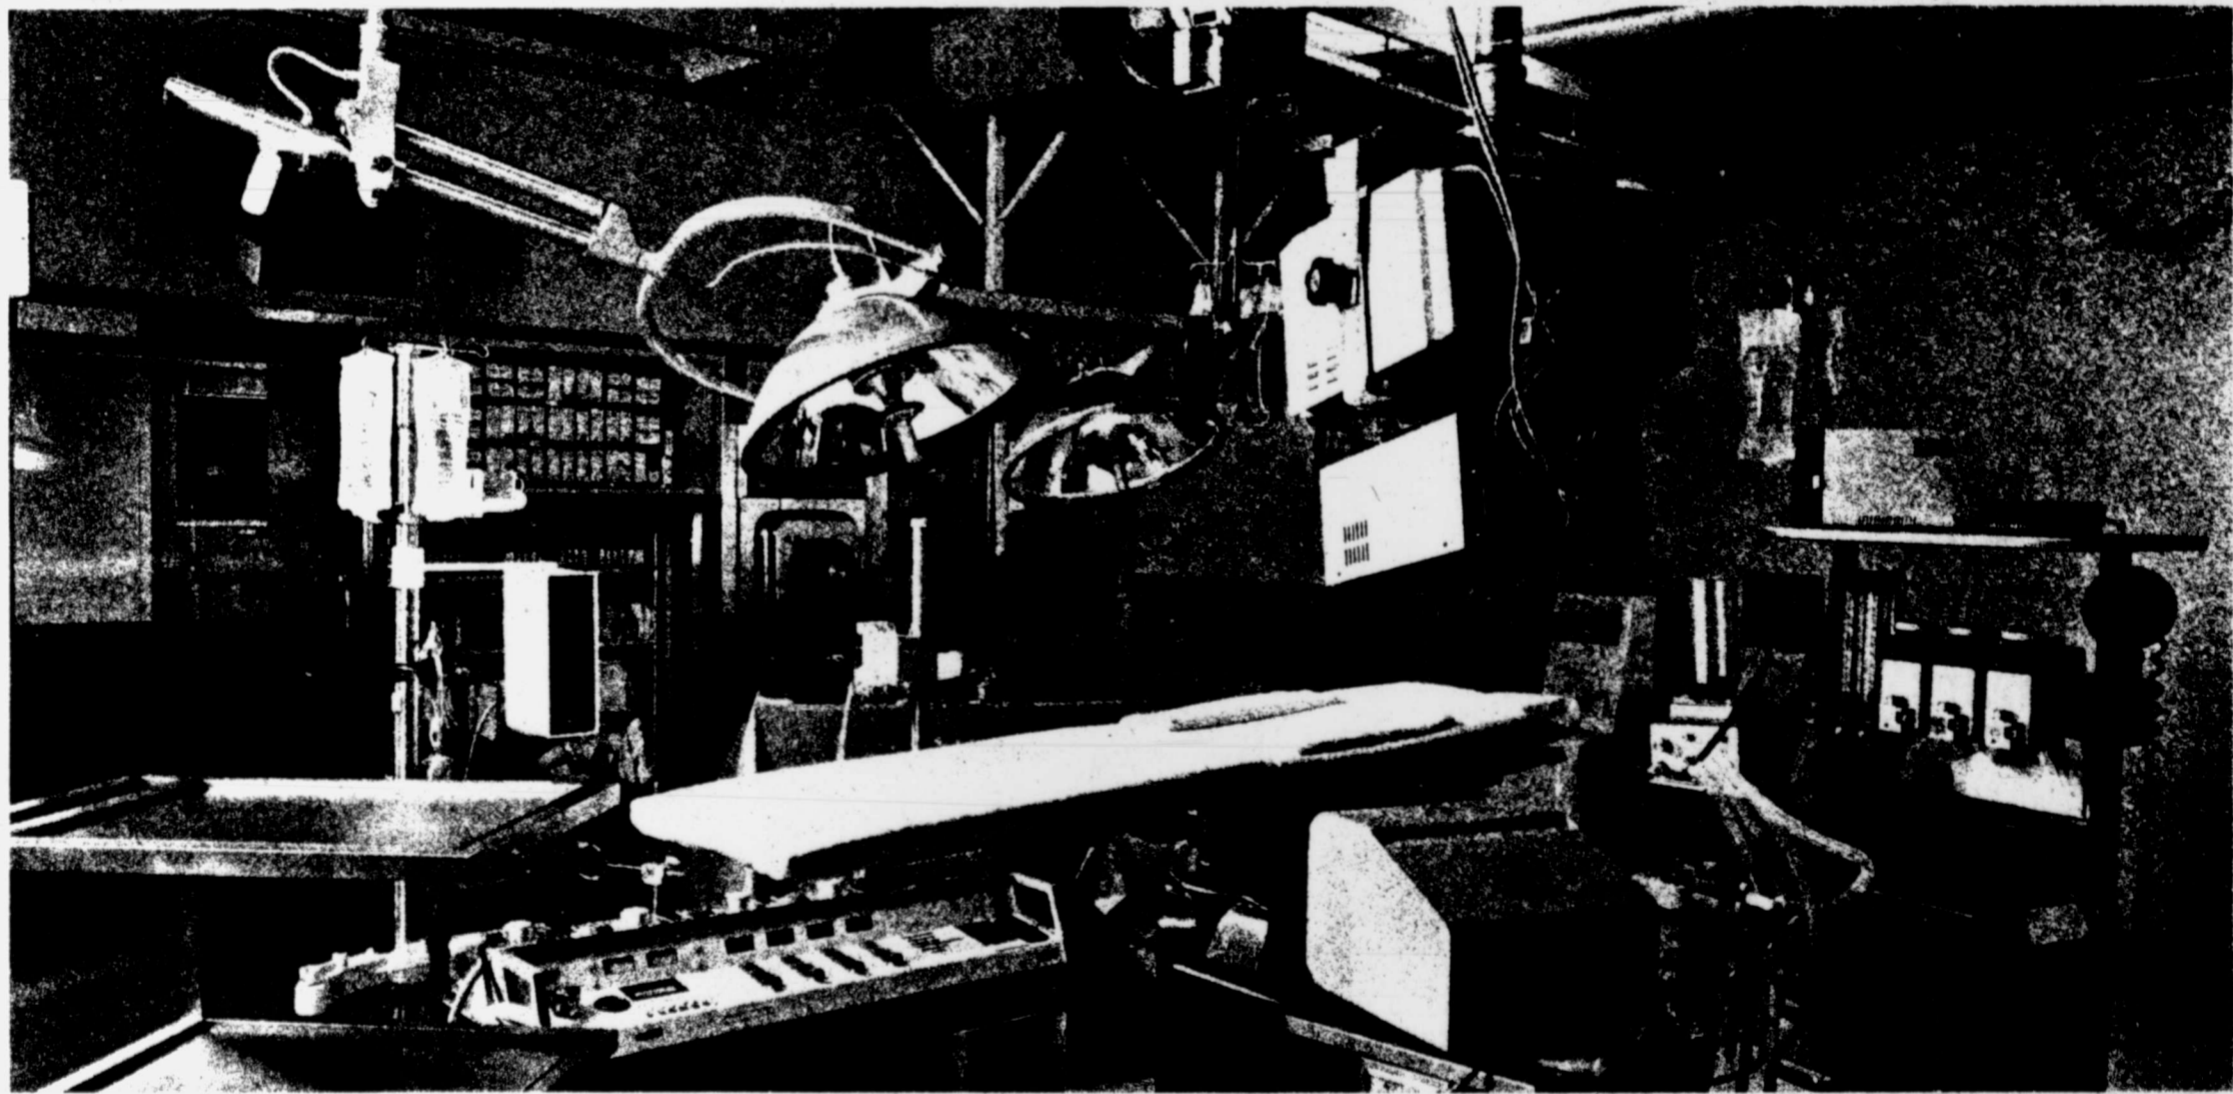

The peace symbol already is prohibited throughout Baytown's Goose Creek school district.

Spokesmen for Houston and Deer Park school districts said peace symbols are tolerated on their campuses.

The peace symbol's modern origins date to 1958 when American and British "Ban the Bomb" advocates met in Connecticut.

Police in Washington have made 10,000 drug arrests in two years, with no appreciable impact.

SOARING MEDICAL COSTS ARE RAISING CAR INSURANCE RATES.

Why do car insurance premiums go up? One big reason is the soaring cost of medical care for auto accident victims. In 10 years, the price of hospital medical services went up 160%. Semi-private rooms went up 143%.

There are now over 5 million injury-causing accidents a year. Medical care for those accident victims comes out of everyone's premiums.

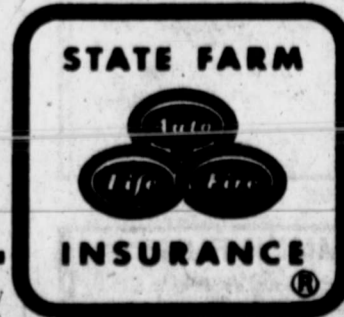

And as both the number of accidents and the cost of treating each victim go up, premiums get hit with a double increase.

At State Farm, we believe that ways must be found to keep these factors from forcing premiums to go up. Lower speed limits are one way to reduce deaths and lessen the number and severity of injuries. That's why we're still strongly behind the 55 mph speed limit. We also work with automakers and consumer groups to encourage the development of safety features. Our past work in this area helped lead to today's airbags and automatic safety belts.

State Farm is there, every day. Finding more ways to help protect our policyholders from the causes of rising premiums. So we can keep insurance affordable.
