Oppressive heat gripping Texas for another day

DALLAS (AP) — Oppressive heat that has gripped much of the state apparently will linger at least another day, with temperatures expected to soar past the 100-degree mark.

"It looks like toward (Wednesday) we'll be in a slight cooling with temperatures in the mid-90s," meteorologist Michael Mach of the National Weather Service in Fort Worth said Monday night.

But not before warm, dry southwesterly winds from Mexico help push temperatures over the 100 degrees again today, Mach said.

Laredo and Lajitas, with 110-degree readings, posted the state's warmest temperatures on Monday, but Childress (109), Wink and Midland (108), San Angelo (106) and Lubbock (105) weren't far behind. The heat wave stretched into South Texas with Alice reporting 103 and San Antonio 102.

Readings in the upper 90s were prevalent in the Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston metropolitan areas, and high humidities made the temperatures feel several degrees hotter.

An excessive heat index was forecast today for North Texas.

Mach said a "cold front" was expected to move into the state late tonight, bringing northerly winds with it and dropping temperatures across much of the state into the more bearable 90s by Wednesday.

"Let's just say it's a wind shift," Mach said, adding it was hardly appropriate to label the change a cold front. "We will have somewhat of a northerly wind on Wednesday. There could also be a little increased cloud cover."

Until then, officials recommended that people stay out of the heat and in front of air conditioners — provided they can meet the demand.

"They're calling in and saying 'Just get us cooling,'" Lynda Rogers of Four Seasons Service Co., an air condition repair business in Dallas, said Monday.

"I think it's mental. When people hear it's a hundred degrees, they're just panicky," Ms. Rogers said.

High temperatures led to a few cases of heat-related illness in the Dallas area.

Last month there were nine patients with heat illness at Parkland Memorial Hospital, said Sue Mundell, community relations assistant at the public hospital. On Monday there were four cases in which patients suffered from "elevated temperatures," she said.

Heat and extreme drought conditions in South Texas affected San Antonio livestock auctions Monday, contributing to the various types and number of cattle offered for sale there. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Monday's receipts were the largest one-day total there in nine months.

The bulk of receipts were steer and heifer calves, while 20 percent to 22 percent were slaughter cows and yearling feeder cattle comprised about 25 percent.

The heat that has permeated the state follows heavy flooding in some areas.

Split 4-3 voting...

City voting nixes Capital Fund plan

The City of Snyder's participation in the Texas Capital Fund was rejected Monday by a split 4-3 vote of the council.

The action came during a marathon session which lasted some six hours, adjourning at 12:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Meeting items included a discussion of future goals with City Manager John Gayle, conducted during a three-hour executive session, and a budget workshop.

It was the second six-hour meeting over the past seven days, with council members having worked exclusively on the budget last Thursday night.

Consideration of the Texas Capital Fund, a loan program administered by the Texas Department of Commerce to create new businesses or expand existing ones, came down to a split vote with Mayor Troy Williamson breaking the tie to reject the plan.

Councilman Joe Coronado had said he would "have a real hard time voting to help somebody go into competition with somebody we've already got who is struggling," and Councilman Mike Thornton said he was concerned about the project's guidelines and the city's possible liability.

In support of the plan, councilman Paul Zeck expanded on arguments he had made in previous meetings, that the council should not "throw a protectionist net around the city" but should use the fund to promote maximum business development.

Zeck and Councilmen Jack Greene Jr. and Ralph Williamson voted to inaugurate the program, and Coronado, Thornton and Councilwoman Vernest Tippens voted "no."

The mayor, having expressed the same reservation as Coronado, then said he "would have to vote my conscience" and cast the deciding "no" vote.

A representative of the Department of Commerce, Refugio Negrete, conducted a public hearing about the program in June.

Monday's meeting began with the appearance of Chamber of Commerce executive director Bill Moss and Herbie Figueredo to propose a three-year contract for the management of the six billboards that are jointly owned by the chamber and city.

With the advice of legal consultant Ernie B. Armstrong, the council voted to turn over management of the billboards to the chamber — a move recently suggested by Figueredo so that logos could be sold and the chamber could take a new approach to promoting business.

Following the executive session with Gayle — an annual practice called the city manager's "annual review" — the council discussed the joint resolution that the city has been asked to sign with the county commissioners court concerning the state's paving of the landfill road south of the prison.

Zeck asked Gayle to seek a similar resolution from the commissioners court on the city's proposed widening of 37th St. from College to Crockett Aves. and the group indicated that such a request will be made.

Discussion of the proposed $5.3 million municipal budget included the mayor's suggestion that sewer charges, like water and sanitation rates scheduled to increase by 20 percent, should be

Ninth CRP signup will retire acreage

Almost 17 percent of Scurry County cropland has now been entered into the U.S. Government's Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) as a ninth signup period began Monday.

The maximum amount of land which may be enrolled in CRP per county is 25 percent. In Scurry County, just over 18,000 acres may still be accepted, added to the 38,000-plus acres now signed up.

The nationwide program is authorized to accept acreage through 1990 only.

It is designed to remove eligible cropland out of farming for 10 years, requiring the landowners to grow grasses on it as a "vegetative cover."

Across the U.S., the CRP program has now removed more than 30 million acres out of active production, making it the "largest long-term cropland retirement program in U.S. history," according to officials with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

The local signup for CRP is taking place at the ASCS office located in the ag service center.

In exchange for removing the land from production, farmers may receive up to $50,000 per year based on a per acre rental rate and the number of acres entered into the CRP program.

One-half of the cost related to establishing a permanent grass cover is provided also.

Chamber hears latest on TDC events

Plans for a Friday evening barbecue and Saturday's open house at the Price Daniel Unit were profiled Monday for chamber directors.

Bill Moss, chamber manager, told directors that some 600 persons are expected to attend the barbecue at 6:30 p.m. Friday at Western Texas College. This event is not open to the public but is instead for TDC personnel, chamber, board of county development and business development committee members and their families.

Regarding Saturday's open house, Moss said he has already been told that a chartered bus from Odessa will be here.

Moss said that those interested in touring the facility may gather at the coliseum where some 10 school buses provided by Snyder ISD will be departing approximately every five or 10 minutes for the site. He said individuals may also drive their own vehicles but that the buses would cut back on potential traffic problems.

Some 17 committees are helping plan and coordinate all activities for this Friday and Saturday. Tours at the prison site will be conducted from 8:45 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Chamber of Commerce directors attending the July meeting on Monday were apprised of cur-

New manager joins local Furr's stores

Duane Mazingo helped open the new Furr's building and its 10,000-sq-ft store here five years ago, and he liked Snyder so much that he said he welcomed the chance to return as manager of them.

The 33-year-old native of Philadelphia earned a bachelor's degree in music education and played basketball for the University, where he was on the basketball, baseball and tennis teams.

He worked his way through college by working in grocery stores and joined Furr's 10 years ago, managing Store No. 70 in San Angelo for three years prior to

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Sympathy is what you give when you don't want to lend money."

Snyder's Bunk Casey, who has worn out more than one pair of jogging shoes, recently was making observations, among other things, about the evolution of footwear.

The sports and recreational industry, when it comes to shoes, has become high-tech. Even one of the TV commercials uses equations of physics to promote the various designs of sports shoes.

At a minimum there is a shoe for every sport, but in some areas there are many type shoes for the same sport but with design for the individual athlete. Most of the shoes have some appearance of what we used to call a tennis shoe or sneaker.

The major change has been in the price. Casey says he remember the day when parents who couldn't afford to buy shoes bought sneakers for their kids. Today, students whose parents can't afford to buy sneakers, wear shoes to school.

There are those who can remember "tight shoe day." Harold Denson said that was a day when you put on shoes and went to town. When he was growing up in the Dunn area, most of the kids wore shoes only when absolutely necessary.

G.A. Parks, who grew up in the Dermott and Fluvanna part of the county, has yet to be outdone for the best hard-rock story. When speaking of going bare-footed, Parks says he well remembers his first pair of shoes. His feet were so rugged that he wore the insides out first.

High-top tennis shoes were the rage in our school day, and no self-respecting boy would be caught dead in low-quarters.

The tennis shoe revolution may really be a lot of hype, but the real difference we see is about a hundred bucks.

In Brief

HUD probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A second former federal housing official is refusing to testify about his role in the scandal-riddled Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Hunter Cushing, a former deputy assistant HUD secretary, invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination Monday before a House subcommittee investigating HUD operations.

Meanwhile, subcommittee chairman Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., said Monday his panel is not considering granting immunity to anyone.

Lawyers for former HUD official Deborah Gore Dean have met with Lantos and the subcommittee staff, but no deal was reached that would prevent her testimony from being used against her in some possible prosecution.

Last month, Ms. Dean, who was executive assistant to former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr., also invoked constitutional protection in refusing to testify.

Trial opens

AUSTIN (AP) — Prosecutors trying to prove Eli Stutzman shot his roommate to death say they may bring up evidence from a trial that ended in Stutzman's conviction on charges of leaving his son in a Nebraska ditch.

Stutzman, 38, pleaded guilty in January 1988 in Nebraska to misdemeanor charges of abandoning a body and concealing the death of another person in connection with the death of his 9-year-old son, Danny. He was sentenced to 18 months in prison.

He is now accused of killing Glen Albert Pritchett, 24.

Pritchett's body was found with a gunshot wound to the head May 12, 1985, in southern Travis County. Stutzman shared a home with Pritchett in 1985 and was questioned then about the slaying, but not charged.

A jury was selected Monday in the murder trial before State District Judge Jon Wissler.

Scientists hope radar data can reveal victims' bones

LAKE CITY, Colo. (AP) — A team of scientists led by a lawyer wearing a skull-and-crossbones T-shirt is honing in on the graves of five gold prospectors who were slain and cannibalized 115 years ago.

The 13 scientists and anthropologists on Monday used radar-mapping equipment to pick up underground abnormalities that could turn out to be the remains of the five victims of Alferd Packer. The men died during a bitter winter in the San Juan Mountains.

Onlookers and hot, clear weather gave a festive atmosphere to the dig.

In addition to the skull and crossbones, the T-shirt worn by dig leader James Starrs bore the legend, "Gimme Five, The Alferd Packer Expedition July 1989."

The George Washington University law professor has nicknamed the site "the bone zone."

The scientists working with Starrs were to begin digging for the bones today based on the results of the radar mapping data.

"It's subtle, but after years of looking at this type of data, I feel confident that we are in the right place," said Stan Smith, an engineer who on Monday operated the radar equipment at the site 170 miles southwest of Denver.

The scientists working with Starrs are hoping to resolve lingering questions about how the five men died and whether Packer consumed their remains.

The gold-hunting party formed by Packer became snowbound on the 9,000-foot pass in 1874. Maintaining one of the members of the party killed the four others, Packer said he was forced to kill the fifth in self-defense. Packer also admitted to consuming the remains of the five to survive.

Packer eventually was convicted of manslaughter and was to serve 40 years in prison. He was paroled in 1901 and died April 24, 1907.

The scientists are searching near a grave marker that was erected to the victims in an area known as "Deadman's Gulch," between Cannibalism Plateau and Round Top Mountain, two miles south of Lake City.

The marker honors the five men "who were murdered on this spot early in the year 1874 while pioneering for mineral resources of the San Juan country."

The scientists were watched by residents and tourists who were kept behind barricades erected by the Hinsdale County Sheriff's Department.

Observers joked that the scientists probably would unearth the remains of such celebrities as Jimmy Hoffa, or Elvis Presley belt buckles. Many sat in lawn chairs, with coolers of refreshments by their sides.

Although Starrs is fairly certain the group will locate the bones, Walter Birky, curator of physical anthropology at the Arizona State Museum in Tucson who is on the dig, was less confident.

He said there is no guarantee any bones were "down there at all."

The dig differs from usual practices of archaeologists, who often are secretive about their research. Starrs, however, said his goal to raise $10,000 to fund the expedition has not been reached, leading him to encourage media coverage.

Furniture Provides a Leg Up To Man Floundering in Pool

DEAR ABBY: In all the summer-time warnings about the dangers of swimming pools, I have yet to read any mention of the older person, I wonder just how many elderly people know how to swim? And of those who can swim, how many can swim fully clothed?

A friend of mine returned home recently from a golf game to find two heavy coffee tables, two deck chairs and a chaise lounge in his swimming pool! His elderly parents, nearly prostrate, were resting — speechless — on the lawn.

His father, an alert and active 80-year-old, for whatever reason had toppled into the pool. His mother, a tiny 85-pound woman, who, like her husband, had never learned to swim, had frantically pushed into the pool all the nearby deck furniture and, crawling on one piece to another, her husband was able to huff and puff his way safely out of the water.

A swimming pool life hook (shaped like a shepherd's staff) is so easy to use, even a child can scoop up and pull an adult to safety. One should always be on hand.

Should a life hook be unavailable, pushing a "staircase" of furniture into a pool could be a life-saving maneuver.

JEANE BURKE, SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

DEAR JEANE: One's best chance for surviving is, of course, learning how to swim. Water safety classes are available through the American Red Cross as well as the local YMCA and YWCA. But thanks for the furniture-tossing idea.

DEAR ABBY: My grandmother is 86 years old and, bless her soul, she still drives, goes to church meetings, and meets her friends for bridge at least once a week.

Mom and Dad have asked her numerous times to come north to live with us, but she is too busy with her life in Bakersfield, thank you very much. She leads an active life and has many friends. She lives on a fixed income, as do most of her contemporaries. She has never in her life asked for a handout, and when she comes to stay with us, she works like a dog (we can't stop her).

This is the work ethic of her generation — a generation we should all respect and admire for their strength and perseverance, their courage through the Depression and two world wars!

We should take a lesson from the Chinese, who revere and honor their seniors for their superior wisdom and experience. I am 26 years old; my sophistication is but a drop of resin in the vast ocean of my grandmother's knowledge.

Please print this, Abby, as I feel it carries a social message we are too ready to ignore.

LISA ROSCOE, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR LISA: Well said. You'll get no argument from this quarter.

DEAR ABBY: You are always reminding people to write to their parents. I used to be bad about writing to my parents. I always thought that the longer I put off writing, the longer my letter should be, and the easier to put it off some more!

Then I started using postcards. They're a bargain at 15 cents, and they're meant to have short messages. The post office has some pretty designs, which I keep in my car. I dash one off in less than 10 minutes, just telling about the day's activities, and my parents love hearing from me often.

JIM OLSEN, PORTLAND

DEAR JIM: That's a great idea for people who hate to write letters but feel guilty if they don't keep in touch.

Consumers rank Texas lawmakers

AUSTIN (AP) — A coalition of consumer and public interest groups, in ranking members of the 1989 Legislature, lists only Democrats among its best lawmakers.

Ty Fain, of the Political Accountability Coalition which released the lists of "good" and "bad" lawmakers, said Monday they were compiled based on voting records and weren't intended to be partisan.

"We didn't mark it by Republicans. This is not a partisan thing. I don't think many of them made it," Fain said. "Although some Democrats did get an F."

Fain said the criteria were votes cast "supporting major issues affecting plain, ordinary people."

The coalition said it examined lawmakers' voting records in six areas — health and the elderly, consumer protection, the environment, crime and individual rights, education and the workplace.

Other groups taking part in the survey were the Texas Consumer Association, Texas Citizen Action, Clean Water Action and Public Citizen.

Fain said 43 House members and nine senators scored A's "in supporting major issues affecting plain, ordinary people."

"Unfortunately, the performance of those good members is offset by 48 bad members in the House and four in the Senate," he said.

All 10 lawmakers listed as the top-ranking senators and representatives were Democrats; eight of the 10 listed as the lowest-ranking were Republicans.

In the coalition's view, the five best senators were Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin; Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville; Hugh Farmer, D-Fort Worth; Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, and Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville.

The five best House members were Reps. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi; Al Granoff, D-Dallas; Lena Gurrero, D-Austin; A. Moreno, D-Edinburg, Steve Wolens, D-Dallas.

Listed as the five worst senators were Ken Armbrister, D-Victoria; Teel Bivens, R-Amarillo; J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson; Don Henderson, R-Houston, and Bill Sims, D-San Angelo.

Study: critical data lost

Air traffic computer cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional study of the nation's system for guiding aircraft says some air traffic controllers work without video screen information on altitude, speed and direction for up to 16 minutes.

However, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Agency said Monday safety had not been compromised, thanks to adequate backup systems.

"The long and short of it is that controllers are not working in the blind when these things occur," Dick Stafford said. "Backup systems provide them with information — not as good as the regular information — but we're not going to put more aircraft in the sky than can be safely handled at any given time."

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., on Monday released a draft of the study he had commissioned in March 1988 from the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

He also released a companion draft of a GAO report on efforts to reduce near collisions. It showed 231 of 326 such incidents involving commercial flights in 1988 were classified as serious.

But Stafford said incidents of near-midair collisions are actually declining.

He said the number of reports dropped by 33 percent in 1988 to their lowest level since 1985. Through the first five months of 1989, he said near-collision reports were down another 23 percent from the same period in 1988.

In its study on the facilities used by air traffic controllers, the GAO recommended Secretary Samuel Skinner direct the FAA to take action that would avert further interruptions of air traffic functions.

"Computer capacity shortfalls at terminal area facilities are widespread," the study said. "FAA did not recognize these capacity shortfalls until controllers began experiencing lost, flickering or delayed data on their displays."

The FAA plans to overhaul the existing traffic control systems with new equipment in the mid-to-late 1990s, but the report called for Skinner and the FAA administrator to study available alternatives for the next 10 years.

The GAO found between June 1988 and June 1989, computers at 27 of FAA's 63 larger airport radar control centers were overloaded.

The study said the problem could worsen with a requirement, in effect since July 1, that all planes flying within 30 miles of one large traffic control center be equipped with transponders that transmit altitude information. The requirement, which affects 44,000 additional aircraft, was designed to reduce near collisions.

The Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, which represents nearly 300,000 operators of small planes, want that requirement withdrawn.

"Adding additional workload to a system that is already severely overloaded will further jeopardize the safety of the flying public and general aviation in particular," said association spokeswoman Patricia Weil.

Lautenberg said it doesn't make sense "if an effort to improve safety at one level degrades it at another."

The FAA plans to award a contract by Sept. 30 to Unisys Corp. to acquire additional capacity for the air traffic computers, which have been obsolete for years, according to the study.

Topsy turvy pizza flips with flavor

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Upside-down pizza? No fooling, your family will flip over its great flavor. A package of hot roll mix makes enough crusts for eight pizzas, so freeze four for another time. To freeze them, place crusts on a baking sheet in the freezer for about 1 hour. Then stack with a square of wax paper between the crusts. Place in a moisture- and vaporproof bag and seal. To use frozen dough, thaw 1 hour in the refrigerator or 30 minutes at room temperature.

TOPSY-TURVY PIZZA

One 16-ounce package hot roll mix
2 tablespoons toasted wheat germ
1 cup chopped broccoli
One 8-ounce can pizza sauce
½ teaspoon Italian seasoning, crushed
½ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups chopped cooked turkey or chicken (8 ounces)
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese (4 ounces)
Milk

Prepare hot roll mix according to package directions for pizza dough, adding the wheat germ.

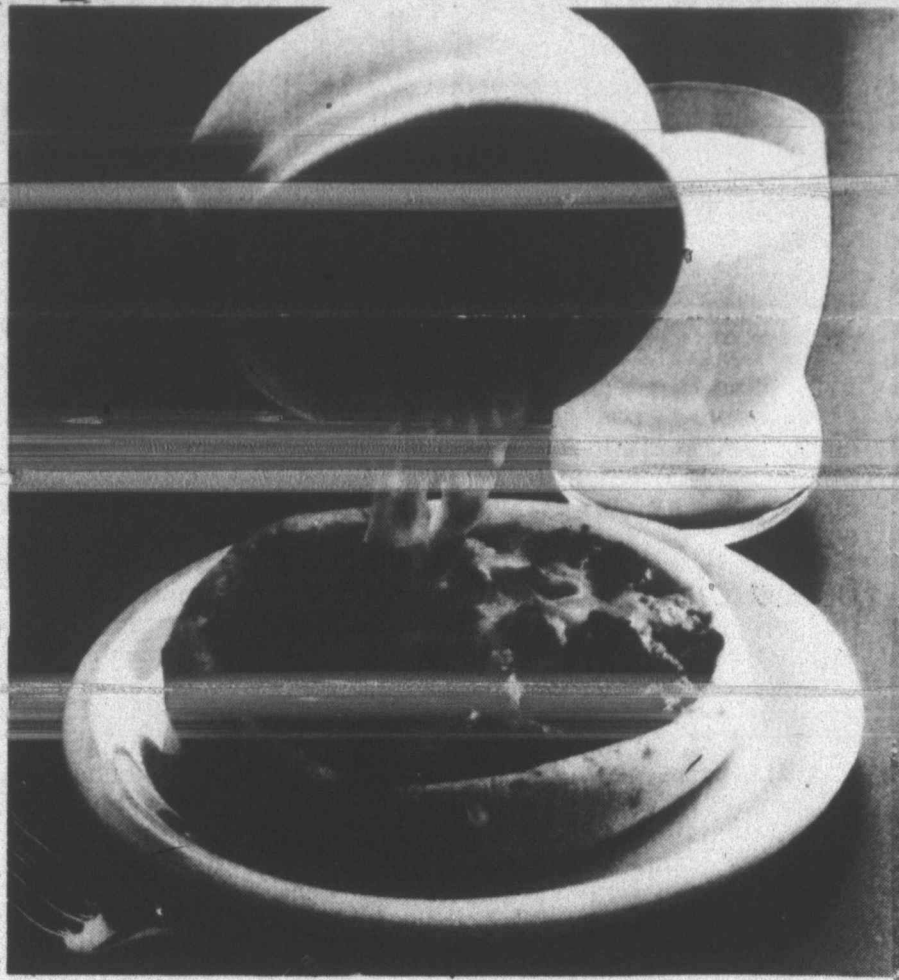

Let dough rest according to package directions.

Meanwhile, cook broccoli, covered, in a small amount of lightly salted water about 2 minutes or until just crisp-tender; drain. In a medium saucepan combine pizza sauce, Italian seasoning and pepper. Bring to boiling. Stir in turkey and vegetables.

Lightly grease insides and outer rims of four 10- to 12-ounce baking dishes. Sprinkle Parmesan cheese on bottoms of dishes. Divide mozzarella cheese evenly among dishes. Spoon turkey-vegetable mixture into dishes. Divide dough into 8 portions. On a lightly floured surface roll or pat out each portion to extend ¼ inch beyond edges of baking dishes. Place 1 portion on top of each dish. Brush with milk.

Place remaining 4 portions of dough on a baking sheet. Freeze 1 hour or until firm. Seal, label and freeze for later use. (To thaw, let dough stand at room temperature 30 minutes or in refrigerator for 1 hour.)

Bake pizzas in a 375-degree oven about 15 minutes or until dough is light brown. To serve, immediately loosen crusts and invert pizzas onto serving plates. If necessary, carefully spread filling to edges of crusts. Makes 4 servings.

INDIVIDUAL PIZZA — In this recipe for Topsy-Turvy Pizza, the filling cooks in the baking dish while the crust browns on top. After baking, the pizza is inverted onto the serving dish and the filling is poured inside. (Better Homes and Gardens Photo)

Nothing to gain and much to lose

By James Jacoby

North's transfer bid of two hearts promised five spades; then, when North jumped to game in no-trump, South wisely decided that it would be better to play four spades. Unfortunately South's bidding decision was far better than his playing decisions. Declarer ducked the opening lead of the king of clubs, preserving communications. West continued a club, declarer played dummy's ace and East ruffed. Now East returned a low diamond. Declarer put in the jack. West won the queen and returned a diamond to his partner's ace, and South was down one before he had even won a trick.

Certainly it is sometimes right to allow a defender to win the first trick when you hold the ace. But in this instance there was really nothing to be gained and, as we saw, much to lose. Declarer should win the ace of clubs right away and lead a club back. If West then leads a trump, declarer can win in dummy, ruff a club with the queen of spades, play A-K and ruff a heart, and then ruff dummy's last club with the king of spades. Now he has to lead away from his K-J of diamonds. Big deal! So he makes only four spades, just what he bid.

How bad was the mistake of letting West hold the king of clubs at trick one? It wasn't terrible, and South was certainly unlucky when East was able to ruff the second club. But it was a risk that he did not need to take.

Preacher helps in drought

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A lot of farmers are more concerned with their livestock during a prolonged drought than with their row crops.

Corn, tobacco and soybeans suffer just as much as the stock, but the cattle and hogs voice their discomfort when they are thirsty.

Just ask Joe Armistead, a Hopkinsville farmer.

"We had a choice," he says of last summer's drought. "My wife could do the washing or we could water the cattle."

Water sources that had never failed before went dry, and a lot still haven't recovered.

Faced with the dilemma, like others, Armistead turned his attention to underground water that was waiting to be tapped.

He called a "water witch," a person who can locate underground water using a wooden switch, a metal wand or some other device of his preference.

When the Rev. John Christian is asked about his ability to locate underground water, he doesn't try to explain it. He can't. It's just there, he says, and it appears to work.

Christian is a respected Baptist preacher who has been finding water for residents of this area for nearly a half century.

He has no problem equating his "witching" with his profession. He says God put the water there, and people, and their cattle, need it. He does what he can to find it for them.

Christian tells his clients there will be no charge if he doesn't find water, and, if he is successful, he charges just a drink of the water he helps locate.

In mid-June, Armistead discovered that a spring on his 103-acre farm wasn't providing enough water for the 62 head of cows and calves he was running. So, he contacted a well driller.

Only one question remained — where to start? Drilling in the wrong place would result in an expensive dry hole.

Christian came to the Armistead farm with some knowledge of where water had previously been found.

Christian says ground water is indicated when the wooden wands move up and down.

Millions owning video recorders

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly 60 million American homes have a videocassette recorder, according to Media Home Entertainment Inc. Of VCR owners, it says, 55 percent are between the ages of 25 and 49 years, 60 percent have college educations and 60 percent have annual family incomes over $35,000.

Mothering from behind bars brings 'guilt, loss, shame'

CHILLICOTHE, Mo. (AP) — Rose Whiting was chained to a hospital bed, a guard stationed outside her room, when her last child was born.

"Can you imagine giving birth under shackles?" asks Whiting, 38, who was in jail on a stealing charge when her daughter, now 12, was born. "Well, don't try to imagine it because you won't be able to. It's horrible, only horrible. There's guilt, loss and a lot of shame when you're a mother and a convict."

She is one of hundreds of women in Missouri serving time in the Chillicothe Correctional Center. The center, the only major prison for women in Missouri, houses about 420 inmates ranging in age from 17 to 65. Most are mothers.

Whiting, behind bars since 1986 on another stealing charge, has three children: two daughters, 16 and 12, who live with Whiting's mother in St. Louis, and a 22-year-old son who is in prison for robbery.

"They've all grown up confused," she says. "I mean, I've pretty much been in and out of jail since my last child was born."

Whiting says her daughters are ashamed of her imprisonment and don't tell friends where she is.

"The girls look forward to their mom coming home," Whiting's mother says. "It seems that every six months they'll get to thinking maybe she'll be home soon — especially the baby. It affects her a lot, and then her school work starts to suffer because all she can think about is her mother."

Whiting's oldest daughter says having a mother in prison has been hard on her but she still loves her.

"I have the same love for her now that I always did," she says. "She's my mother. I don't love her any less. I just miss her a lot."

Unlike Whiting, who says she thinks of her children constantly, another mother at the center says she pushes her six children out of her mind.

"I don't even keep pictures of my kids," says Becca Hughes. "I can't bear to see the difference between what they were then and what they are now. I just don't deal with it. That's how I deal with it."

Hughes was convicted of capital murder in 1985 for shooting her husband and is serving a life sentence. She won't be eligible for parole until 2035.

BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Your Birthday

July 19, 1989

In the year ahead there could be some interesting, favorable developments that will call attention to you where your career is concerned. The way you conduct yourself could ensure a raise, promotion or recognition in your field of endeavor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even though your intentions may be good, you could make those you love feel very uncomfortable today if you are overly protective or possessive. Lighten up. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't let in-laws or outsiders have a say in family disputes today, especially if there is a misunderstanding between you and your mate. Their input could be inflammable. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's best not to tackle complicated tasks today that you do not thoroughly understand going in. There's a possibility your contribution will make things worse, not better.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A social obligation you may have been avoiding owing to its expense might have to be dealt with today. If so, it's best you bite the bullet and handle it in a gracious manner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Outside demands might prevent you from doing what you plan to do today. Should this occur, you can lessen your frustrations by being tolerant and going along with events.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today's involvements must be thought through each step of the way or else you'll run the risk of creating complications for yourself that will be difficult to unravel.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be your own person today and don't be coerced into doing things with your friends that you really can't afford. If you yield to pressure, you won't enjoy yourself anyway.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Guard against tendencies today to see-saw over what your primary objectives should be. If you are indecisive, you'll also be ineffective.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Associates are likely to hold your abilities in higher regard today than you will yourself. It's time for you to start thinking "I can" instead of "I can't."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) People about whom you know little must be carefully dealt with today or else you might end up at some type of disadvantage. Be mindful of where you place your trust.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you're involved in some form of collective venture today, be certain in advance each party understands who is responsible for what. Efforts could be ineffectively duplicated without a game plan.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In a testy career situation today, don't let your emotions overrule your logic. Things aren't apt to work out too well when your feelings do your thinking.

Depositors can't sue bank owners

LEROY, Texas (AP) — Leroy Bank depositors who lost life savings when the institution went belly up suffered another setback when a state district judge ruled they cannot sue the bank's owners.

Retired Judge J.F. Clawson, assigned to the case in 19th State District Court, combined a long-pending lawsuit filed against the owners by the Leroy Bank Depositors Association with a recent petition filed by Texas Banking Commissioner Ken Littlefield on Monday.

The ruling dismayed many of the 376 depositors represented by the association, which claims the Texas Banking Department illegally closed the private bank.

"We left with the feeling that the banking commissioner does not have the best interest of the individual depositors and cannot present the best case to a jury," said C.A. Anderson, a Baptist minister who had his life savings in the bank. "This indeed is a disappointment. We worked on this the whole two years and it hasn't been easy."

Clawson's ruling gives the Texas Banking Department control over the liquidation and litigation of the Leroy Bank, which closed August 7, 1987. The Leroy Bank was a private, unincorporated bank located in Leroy, a small town about 15 miles northeast of Waco.

The bank's funds were uninsured. About 600 depositors held $5.5 million in deposits at the bank and stand to lose much or all of their money.

Littlefield filed a suit in May against the owners of the Leroy Bank for negligence, breach of fiduciary duties, breach of contract, conspiracy and fraud.

The suit duplicates a petition filed by Leroy Bank Depositors Association almost two years ago.

Editorials call for restrictions

AUSTIN (AP) — Following reports of lobbyist-paid dinners, outings, gifts and vacations for Texas legislators, plus $10,000 campaign contributions made on the Senate floor, newspaper editorials across the state called for reform.

"Fallout from two recent smelly incidents ... could — and should — lead to angry calls on the part of Texas citizens for a strictly enforced code of ethical conduct on the part of state officials," said the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

That newspaper and others referred to the case of East Texas chicken magnate Lonnie "Bo" Pilgrim, who offered $10,000 checks with the payee's name left blank to nine state senators after talking to them about his workers' compensation problems.

The newspapers also referred to reports that lobbyists spent $1.86 million during the five months of the 1989 Legislature's regular session, including lobbyist-paid trips for lawmakers to Mexico, Europe and Las Vegas.

"Do such trips influence legislators in any way? Of course they do," said the Beaumont Enterprise. "And the junkets and other freebies are so common in the Texas Legislature that voters can no longer be sure whose vote is being bought, consciously or unconsciously, by monied lobbyists. The state Legislature is a laughingstock in this regard," the Enterprise added.

The Longview Morning Journal, noting that legislators have been unable to pass a workers' compensation bill in seven months of trying, asked, "Just who's running the Legislature anyway?"

With business lobbyists on one side and trial lawyer-lobbyists on the other, negotiations were stalemated through the regular session and are in danger of falling apart before the Wednesday night end of the current 30-day special session.

"Perhaps it is too simple to suggest that the Legislature copy a workers' compensation system from one of the many states that have good working models," the Longview paper said. "But the longer this drags on, the more the public must wonder who is in control of the Legislature — our elected officials or the lobbyists." The Corpus Christi Caller-Times, noting that most gifts to legislators are legal providing they are reported to the secretary of state, said the time has come to change lobbying and campaign finance laws. "Almost anything is legal (now) under Texas' weak disclosure and campaign finance laws."

The Austin American-Statesman agreed.

"Texans have seen enough of this financial-political umbilical cord to know that it is only going to get worse. The revelations of the same problem in Congress, with much more restrictive rules, should trigger enough public concern to initiate the kinds of changes that are needed before the problems get bigger," the American-Statesman said.

Said the Waco Tribune Herald: "Texas needs a law that prevents people like Bo Pilgrim from attempting to buy up the Legislature. Pilgrim and his blank checks must be remembered when lawmakers meet again in regular session."

U.S. marshals join forces for raids

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dozen heavily armed officers abandoned their cars haphazardly on the street and raced across the housing project's muddy yard, their guns aimed at the doors, the windows.

Though trying to ignore the children setting off firecrackers next door in a belated Fourth of July celebration, they flinched occasionally as the explosions went off.

These guys were on edge. For two months, the members of the U.S. Marshals Service and local police had worked for the Street Terror Offender Program that nabbed 456 fugitives wanted on drug or drug-related homicide charges in the Washington-Baltimore area.

On this dreary July afternoon, they stormed into the southeast Washington home in search of a 40-year-old fugitive, James Alston. According to the officers, Alston failed to appear on a cocaine distribution charge and violated parole.

The officers had been briefed at their Navy Yard headquarters on the home's basic layout, but they had no idea whether anyone inside would be armed, waiting for them.

There was no resistance as the entry team barged into the home and discovered a young woman and her baby on the living room couch.

Upstairs, past the bathroom door hanging by one hinge to the rotting door frame, they found six men and a woman. Some already had injected heroin. Others were preparing to do so.

One man had a needle sticking into his ankle, and it pulled when he jerked his leg. Blood dripped down, soaking into his white canvas shoe.

One by one, the entry team sent the addicts down the stairs to fellow officers, ordering them to keep their hands on their heads. They were directed to keep their fingers entwined, palms outward, but the maneuver was beyond them.

Sullenly, quietly, the addicts walked downstairs. They provided their names and whatever identification they carried. At least one would turn out to be false.

Eventually a wiry man came down the stairs. He said his name was Bradley, but he matched a photo.

An officer confronted the man and asked if he was "Mr. Alston."

The man smiled slightly as he nodded his head, resigned to the inevitable.

Operation STOP, which targeted fugitives for eight weeks starting May 22, eventually arrested 25 people on drug-related homicide charges. The other 431, including Alston, had at least three previous felony drug arrests or convictions and were wanted on new charges.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What causes broken capillaries within someone's nose?

DEAR READER: The lining of the nostrils is made up of delicate tissue that is rich in the tiny blood vessels called capillaries. When a person experiences congestion of (or damage to) this lining, the thin-walled capillaries may leak or bleed, causing nosebleeds (epistaxis). Because of the low blood pressure in these vessels, the bleeding usually stops quickly, especially if the patient applies pressure to the nostrils, such as pinching them together. Nasal capillary breakage can result from vigorous nose-blowing; however, the most common cause is injury from picking the nose.

Occasionally, small arteries in the nasal lining can rupture, leading to profuse nosebleeds. Again, the best treatment is pinching the nostrils together, between thumb and forefinger, below the bony bridge of the nose. In severe epistaxis, which may not respond to this maneuver, medical intervention may be necessary. This consists of packing the nostril with gauze or using cautery to burn and coagulate the broken artery.

This might be a good opportunity to mention several ineffective but time-honored methods of controlling epistaxis. Putting ice on the forehead, tilting the head back, pressing on the upper lip or placing gauze under the upper lip are of no benefit. Most nosebleeds can be arrested by first blowing the nose (to clear out clots) and then pinching the nostrils together. Chronic nosebleeders can often be aided by using nose sprays, such as 1/4 percent Neo-Synephrine, which shrink the nasal lining, reduce congestion and prevent oozing. The sprays should not be used for more than three or four days because extended use will lead to further, unwanted congestion called "rebound."

Remember that high blood pressure can cause nosebleeds. Therefore, any adult with spontaneous epistaxis (nosebleeds without preceding injury) should have his or her blood pressure checked and, if necessary, treated.

Finally, deficiencies in blood coagulation can lead to nosebleeds. In such patients, the capillaries tend to be unusually susceptible to injury and once bleeding begins, it is often difficult to stop. To give you more information about blood coagulation, I am sending you a free copy of my new Health Report "Blood." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Ex-MADD official receives 60 years

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Disregarding a defense lawyer's plea for leniency, a jury has sentenced the former president of the San Antonio chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving to 60 years in prison in the murder of his former lover.

Jurors decided Monday that Bill Mixon, 47, should serve 60 years in prison and pay a fine of $10,000 for the June 15, 1988, shooting death of J'Anna Tebbs, 26.

It took the jury of six men and six women about a half-hour to find him guilty and about three hours to decide on punishment.

Mixon had been accused of shooting Ms. Tebbs to death in a restroom at KSMG radio station only one day before she was scheduled to leave on a trip to Las Vegas with a new boyfriend.

Mixon told jurors that he was driven by jealousy and hurt when he went to the radio station to talk to Ms. Tebbs.

Jurors rejected Mixon's claim that he was in an uncontrollable, passionate rage when he gunned down Ms. Tebbs.

Defense lawyer Jody Tullos had urged jurors to be lenient on Mixon by sentencing him to 10 years or less behind bars, making him eligible for probation.

Tullos argued that Mixon was guilty of manslaughter because he acted out of sudden passion.

"The betrayal of the one we love is the cruelest hurt of all," Tullos told jurors. "It is the one that bites deepest inside us. The woman he loved betrayed him."

Prosecutor Dan Maeso ridiculed the defense plea for leniency.

"To say that this is a case of voluntary manslaughter," Maeso said, "is to say that in San Antonio it rained every day for the past three weeks and it is flooding outside."

"Bill Mixon is asking for a second chance," Maeso said. "Where is the evidence he gave J'Anna a second chance, and she did nothing. She committed no crime. Tell the world you don't want the Bill Mixons of the world out there!"

Official seeks dismissal of jail lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — The state will work to alleviate jail crowding whether it wins or loses a lawsuit filed against it by counties seeking relief, said an assistant attorney general who wants the suit to be dismissed.

"The state is committed to working with the counties," said Assistant Attorney General Bob Ozer after a Monday hearing before State District Judge Joseph Hart.

Hart heard arguments on a motion by the state that the suit brought by 11 counties is moot because of new, sweeping criminal justice reforms. The counties want the state to take convicted felons from local jails.

"Whether or not we win this lawsuit or lose this lawsuit, we're going to work this problem through," Ozer said.

Ann Clarke Snell, representing 10 counties, said the suit is necessary because there are 12,000 prisoners in county jails awaiting transfer to the Texas Department of Corrections.

The prisoners remain in the county jails because the state is under court order to maintain specific population levels and accepting the sentenced felons would put the prisons over the limits.

The counties have argued that the state must accept such prisoners even if it means finding other ways to provide for their incarceration.

"We're talking about a very explosive and dangerous situation," Ms. Snell said. She said the counties that have joined the suit, which was filed by Nueces County, are Collin, Dallas, El Paso, Hidalgo, Hunt, Galveston, Lubbock, Tarrant, Travis and Victoria.

Ozer argued that criminal justice legislation approved this year invalidates the suit.

The legislation provides for creating an allocation formula for taking inmates sentenced to prison from the counties holding them, he said. It also removed the word "speedy" from a section about the state transporting prisoners to TDC, he said.

Chamber hears event update rent and long range plans which the chamber is now involved in.

Director Cindy Banta said that they were considering a retail flyer for 12 months rather than just a Christmas promotion. This eight page advertisement will be similar to a newsletter and will feature local merchants. It will be printed every month by the Snyder Daily News, but the method of distribution has not been finalized.

Directors were told that Donna Gray and Nelda Huddleston were co-chairwomen of Trades Day which is slated for Aug. 19.

Other future plans include hosting the annual breakfast for Snyder teachers just prior to school starting in September. Tentative date for the breakfast is either Aug. 29 or 30.

The 1990 July Fourth committee has already begun to plan next year's celebration and plans are also underway for White Buffalo Days.

Directors also agreed to appoint Bill Davies and R.C. Patton to serve another term on the Scurry County Area Foundation.

Plans are also being finalized for the AJRA finals to be held in Snyder in August.

Directors also agreed to invite the Gold Coat president to attend each chamber meeting in order to keep that organization apprised of all chamber activities. Since this would be a non-voting position, Moss explained that it would not be necessary for them to amend their by-laws.

Herbie Figueroa, chamber president, also asked members to be thinking about appointing a five member committee to nominate four new directors for the coming year.

Directors attending included Figueroa, Davies, Coronado, Fran Farmer, Joe Sentell, Eddie Williams, Gary Landes, M.L. Duke and Banta.

Not present were David Kattes, Harry Krenek and Billy Huddleston.

The council came to the conclusion, however, that revenues would be too hard to predict if such a change were made, and Williamson withdrew his proposal.

No changes have so far been made in the 204-page document, which proposes an 8 percent property tax increase and a 5 percent raise for city employees.

Tex, Roger considered for vacant football commissioner's position

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach says he's too committed to his business and former president Tex Schramm says he's too old to accept nominations to become the next NFL commissioner.

Both said Monday they would turn down such nominations.

The Los Angeles Times reported that Schramm, who headed the Cowboys for 29 years, and Staubach, a 1970s Dallas quarterback named to the Hall of Fame, will be nominated this week to the post being vacated by Pete Rozelle.

"I have a great deal of gratitude and respect for the NFL and it's an attractive thought to be considered for commissioner," Staubach said.

"However, at this time my life is consumed with building my real estate company on a national basis and I am committed to this goal. I like the challenge of the real estate business and I am enjoying it. I will have to say 'no' to the nomination for commissioner."

Schramm said, "I still feel that over the long haul my age (69) wouldn't make it practical to name me. It's also hard to put stock in rumors the principle has no knowledge of what's going on."

Schramm did say that if the NFL came to an impasse he might bail them out for a year or so.

"I've been in the NFL 39 years and it's been the better part of my life and if I could help I would, although presently I'm very interested in bringing professional football to the rest of the world," Schramm said. "However, nobody has talked to me."

Schramm heads the NFL's proposed international league, called the Worldwide League of American Football.

New Orleans Saints executive Jim Finks was nominated by the league's search committee to fill the post being vacated by Pete Rozelle, but Finks' appointment was blocked by a dissident minority of 11 team owners, a faction now numbering 12.

"I wish you wouldn't call us minority owners," said Mike Lynn, president of the Minnesota Vikings and one of the dozen. "It's the six-man (search committee) that's in the minority. They didn't give the 22 (other owners) any information."

Staubach appeals to several owners because of his success as a businessman, according to anonymous league sources cited by the newspaper.

Those backing Schramm favor a three-year appointment to provide stability during a long-term candidate search for a commissioner young enough to serve for 15 years or more, the newspaper's report said.

Class AA tournaments wind down in Abilene

ABILENE — As action wound down in the 1989 Class AA Championship Tournaments here this week it appeared as if Snyder would qualify two teams for the finals.

Snyder Division I squad and its Division II Black team were in line to participate in today's finals. The other Snyder teams - Divisions II Gold, III and IV - did not advance past the pool type first-round.

Below are results from Division IV.

Division IV
Brownwood 6, Snyder 5: Brownwood used nine hits, including five for extra bases, to defeat Snyder's Division IV team over the weekend. Shauna Jenkins rapped two singles for Snyder while Kellye Myers, Angie Burleson, Wendy Wadkins and Lisa Rodriguez added one single apiece.

Sweetwater 11, Snyder 2: Sandra Morin punched a double and Theresa Martin and Wadkins added one single each but it wasn't enough to get Snyder past a tough Sweetwater team. Sweetwater was led by Nikki Heath, who slammed two home runs and a single.

Incaviglia's grand slam homer lifts Texas past Red Sox, 12-6

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — If the Texas Rangers are to make a second-half run at the American League West title, they'll need a healthy contribution in the power department from Pete Incaviglia.

Incaviglia blasted a first-inning grand slam Monday night, his third homer in the last two games, to send the Rangers to a 12-6 rout of the Boston Red Sox.

Incaviglia, the subject of recent trade rumors, went 2-for-4 with a career-high five RBI as the Rangers opened a 13-game homestand, their longest in six years. With two outs and runners on second and third in the first, Red Sox starter and loser Wes Gardner, 2-5, was ordered to walk A.L. RBI co-leader Julio Franco and pitch to Incaviglia.

Incaviglia deposited Gardner's first pitch 401 feet over the right-center field wall, his third career grand slam and first for the Rangers this season.

"People will think twice about pitching around them (Franco and RBI co-leader Ruben Sierra)," Incaviglia said. "If I start swinging the bat well, it should mean better pitches for them and make everybody better."

Incaviglia was hitless in 12 previous lifetime at-bats against Gardner.

"He got a fastball down where he didn't want to, in my wheelhouse," Incaviglia said. "If he puts in there, I'm gonna hit it."

Said Gardner, "I take full responsibility for everything that happened tonight. If I don't give up two home runs, we win the ballgame. Incaviglia hit a homer off me and if you check the books, you'll see it was his first hit off me. I just threw him a bad pitch."

"We got trounced," said Red Sox manager Joe Morgan. "Every time they needed a line drive they got it. They certainly didn't waste any hits. Those guys in the middle of that lineup don't mess up too often, do they?"

The Texas bullpen, battered by the Cleveland Indians over the weekend for 12 hits and nine runs in 8 2-3 innings, shut out the Red Sox over the final five innings with Cecilio Guante, 5-4, getting credit for the victory.

Guante pitched four innings of one-hit ball before Drew Hall came on to pitch a perfect ninth.

"They (the Red Sox) were swinging the bats real good and he (Guante) stopped 'em cold," Valentine said. "We need to have that. Our guys are good enough to do it."

The fourth-place Rangers moved to within four games of the California Angels, who were swept in a doubleheader by the Toronto Blue Jays Monday night.

"Anytime you lose three out of four and don't lose ground, it's a big lift," said Ranger shortstop Jeff Kunkel, who hit a two-run homer in the fourth.

K of C lists golf winners

The annual Knight's of Columbus golf tournament was held last Sunday at the WTC golf course. The winning team of Robert Scott, Kenny Gambrell, Darin Clawson and Ron Baker carded a 60 to win a set of drivers.

Abe Gonzales, Manuel Avila, Ricky Williams and Jim Bloom tied with a pair of other teams with a 61 and hauled in the second prize of $40 per man.

A set of shag bags went to each man on the team of Glen Brunson, Tom Kerr, Al Russell and Robert Parker. The third place unit also scored a 61.

Alfred Castillo, Tony Haley, Glen Clarady and Mike Carter placed fourth with another 61 and carried a box of golf balls away as their prize.

Kevin Leahey and Robert Musgrove each won a new putter as winners in the "closest to the pin" competition. Leahey took the honors on hole number one and Musgrove on number six.

Tom Kerr hit the longest drive of the day and was awarded a persimmon driver for his efforts.

Rotan thumps C-City; battles Snyder tonight

The Little League All-Stars from Rotan will face the undefeated squad from Snyder tonight after defeating Colorado City Monday by a score of 10-3 in the semi-finals of the Area 2 Tournament.

Most of the damage came in the bottom half of the third inning as Rotan scored seven runs on just four hits including a homer by Brian Correon.

Ronnie Martinez slapped a pair of base hits to pace Rotan. Michael Montez and Mitchell Montez each walked three times.

Mitchell Montez went the distance and took the win for Rotan and Colorado City's Joseph Molina suffered the loss.

The Snyder-Rotan tilt will get under way tonight at 8 p.m. at Logan Field. Snyder shut out the Rotan unit, 4-0 in their previous meeting in the tourney. Should the locals win tonight they will be crowned Area 2 champs. If Rotan claims a victory, another game between the two will be played on Thursday.

The Area 2 champions will advance to tangle with the winners in the area 3 tournament.

WTC boosters meet July 24

The Western Texas College Booster Club's next meeting will be Monday, July 24 at 7 p.m. The meeting will feature a dutch treat dinner at the Golden Corral.
