L.M. Lyle developed the Edwards Heights Subdivision along with landowner W.P. Edwards. The new development was three blocks wide north to south and seven blocks east to west. Brick or similar material was required for homes being built.

Opening day, November 10, 1927, at 12 noon, the streets had been cleared and lots were tagged. Potential buyers interested in purchasing a lot, were instructed to take a red tag from a stake of desired property. There were 60 lots available with prices ranging from $350 up for lot size frontage measuring 50- to 90-foot widths. Full page advertisements were printed in the Big Spring Herald, reassuring residents this new subdivision would be the finest in Big Spring.

The streets were graded and had crushed rock surface applied. The investment company stated the streets would be paved from curb to curb very soon. Water, electricity, gas, and telephone would be available, however, "there would be no city dirt or noise!"

The first 60 lots sold quickly, and 100 new lots were added within the first See MUSEUM, Page 3

Chronic Pain In Pets Part 1: Causes, Symptoms, And Prevention

Special to the Herald

Pets can develop chronic pain for a variety of reasons, but because they cannot verbally tell us when they're hurting, overcoming the communication barrier can quickly become challenging for pet owners who want to alleviate any and all pain in their four-legged friends.

Dr. Daniel Eckman, a staff veterinarian at the Texas A&M School of Veterinary Medicine & Biomedical Sciences' Veterinary Medical Teaching Hospital, discusses some of the most common causes and symptoms of chronic pain in pets.

Firstly, it is important to distinguish chronic pain from acute pain.

"Acute pain, also known as adaptive pain, serves a purpose," Eckman said. "It tells us not to use or do something in the short-term. Acute pain usually goes away within minutes to days, weeks, or months."

On the other hand, chronic pain is generally believed to last three months or longer and stops acting in direct response to an illness or injury.

"Chronic pain serves no purpose and creates changes within the body and nervous system that can lead to further pain states or psychological changes," Eckman said.

A variety of medical conditions can lead to the development of chronic pain in pets.

"The most common cause of pain in pets is osteoarthritis, or degenerative joint disease," Eckman said. "Other

Surprise is key part of migrant travel from Florida, Texas

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — The chief executive of Martha's Vineyard Community Services was wrapping up work when she looked outside to see 48 strangers at her office with luggage, backpacks and red folders that included brochures for her organization.

The Venezuelan migrants who were flown to the wealthy Massachusetts island from San Antonio on Wednesday by Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis said they were told they were going to Boston.

DeSantis took from the playbook of a fellow Republican, Texas Gov. Greg Abbott, by surprising Democratic strongholds with large influxes of migrants and providing little or no information.

"They were told that they would have a job and they would have housing," said Elizabeth Folcarelli, who leads Martha's Vineyard Community Services and described the scramble for shelter as a "huge challenge."

Julio Henriquez, an attorney who met with several migrants, said they "had no idea of where they were going or where they were."

Two flights to Martha's Vineyard stopped in the Florida Panhandle, Henriquez said. While on board, migrants got brochures and maps of Massachusetts.

An unsigned letter told migrants to notify U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services of address changes, though U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement is actually responsible for tracking migrants, Henriquez said. "This is terrible advice," he said.

Many immigrants have appointments with ICE on Monday in San Antonio. Others were ordered to report to

Rick Heckler

Rick Heckler, 67, of Andrews, Texas, passed away Thursday, September 15, 2022, in Big Spring, Texas.

Family and friends will gather to celebrate his life at 10 a.m. on Monday, Sept. 19, at McNett Funeral Home Chapel in Andrews and officiated by Dr. Benton Johnson II, of Chicago. A Cemetery service will follow at 2 p.m. at the Trinity Memorial Park Cemetery Peace Chapel in Big Spring. Visitation will be held from 5 p.m. – 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 18, at McNett Funeral Home Chapel in Andrews. Arrangements are under the care of McNett Funeral Home.

Rick was born in Big Spring, Jan. 22, 1955, to Albert Melburne Heckler and Barbara Ann Earnest. He and Kenda Joye Heckler were married on May 26, 1972, and shared 45 wonderful years together until her passing in 2018. Rick and Kenda, and their two children, Sonya, and Alan, moved from Big Spring, to Andrews in 1987, where they had an amazing life as a family surrounded by friends and community.

Rick loved classic rock and the blues, hot rods, classic cars, Volkswagen's, and sports cars. He enjoyed collections and hobbies of coins, sports cards, music. Rick's favorite pastimes were traveling with family, attending rock and blues concerts, working on cars, competing in drag racing and open road racing, car shows and events, and spending time with his car enthusiast friends. He was known for his extensive knowledge of facts and history about his passions, and his mechanic and machine work abilities. In retirement he enjoyed sharing his mornings and afternoons with his buddies and fellow retired ExxonMobil friends at Cassidy's Sub Shop. He enjoyed eating at restaurants in Andrews to see community acquaintances and socialize. His highest values were family and friends. Though he was quiet in nature and a great listener, Rick loved to laugh, joke, engage in pranks, and surprise people with his wit.

Family was priority to Rick and his greatest joys were his children and five granddaughters: Maddie, Landry, Finley, Raylee, and Caitlyn. With a soft heart, Rick was compassionate to animals and would bring home orphaned animals from the oilfields, including dogs, rabbits, and a lamb. Having dogs and cats at home were important to Rick and he ensured they were spoiled by him as much as his children and granddaughters. He will be missed dearly by many.

He is preceded in death by his wife, Kenda Joye Heckler; his father, Albert Melburne Heckler; and his mother, Barbara Zumwalt; and his stepmother, Vada Heckler.

Rick is survived by his daughter, Sonya Heckler Cheyne, and husband, Justin, of Andrews, and his son, Alan Heckler and wife, Carie, of Highland Park; his stepfather, Clyde Zumwalt, and wife, Lynn, of Allyn, WA; his half-siblings, Kristi Sabo and husband, Gary, of Maple Valley, WA, Blake Zumwalt and wife, Barbara, of Auburn, WA, and Rod Zumwalt of Seattle, WA; step-siblings, Danny Clayton and wife, Reta, of Abilene, and Billy Clayton and wife, Vahlilia, of Dallas, and Ann Clayton Rogers and husband, Tony, of Monroe, NC; and granddaughter's, Madeline Heckler, Finley Heckler, and Caitlyn Heckler all of Highland Park, and Landry and Raylee Cheyne of Abilene, as well as cousins, nieces, nephews, great-nieces and great-nephews.

year of development. One of the first two homes completed on Mathews Avenue were for Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Ford at 606 Mathews, and Robert and Winifred Piner at 600 Mathews.

Albert Fisher purchased a lot and built a beautiful two-story home at 429 San Antonio. The street was renamed Hillside in 1931 after a city council meeting. Council members voted to "kill" the street name as there already was a San Antonio Street in Jones Valley. This seemed to be a pattern for Big Spring officials, naming streets and then renaming them later. Main Street was first named Clinton, Lancaster was named Jack. There were several streets north of the train tracks that had name changes from Pine Street and a Montezuma. A decision was made to extend the south side streets and placing the word "North" in front of them. The postal service must have been confused for several years.

As each new home sprung up in the Edwards Heights addition, the wives set out to have parties showing off their new abodes. Women's Clubs, Bridge Parties, and extravagant children birthday parties all made the newspaper.

By April 1930, Banker and Rancher T.S. Currie had purchased a lot on Hillside. Builders quickly began construction on a beautiful two-story show place for the family to call home.

The downtown city streets were becoming very busy by the 1920s. The Crawford Hotel, Douglass, and Settles were all being built, as well as the Petroleum Building. Oil had just been discovered and Howard County's economy was exceptional. The sound of hammers banging at all hours and the loud noise from the train yard would be irritating and there was probably some dirt hanging in the air along with engine soot. An exclusive and restricted new subdivision was inviting and welcoming.

The children of these families particularly loved the new subdivision. They were free to run and explore the many canyons and valleys in the area.

Dr. Roscoe Cowper built their family home at the edge of Edwards Heights at 902 Mountain Park. In 1942, the home was outside of city limits. His daughter Sally remembered how, often, a herd of horses would break through the Edwards' pasture fence and thunder through their yard. The "wilderness" gave her many challenges and adventures. Sally said, "I could dash from my front door to the top of the Scenic Mountain in a record five minutes."

She said they use to find colorful Indian beads up on the mountain that they would gather and keep. Sally added "I explored the canyons, from my back door one could see downtown Big Spring between lay ravines with partial caves that served as secret hiding places." "To add to our drama were the "Jones Valley Kids," who lived in town and would surely kill anyone who ventured too close to their territory through those canyons."

Albert and Edith Fisher made their home at 500 Runnels before they purchased their chosen lot in Edwards Heights. Albert died suddenly in 1939 and his widow sold the large home to Ted Groebl. Today, the home is beautifully cared for and loved by its present owners, the best kind of tribute.

The McCluskey's moved to Big Spring in 1922. They had three children Frank, Merle (Wasson) and Caroline Sue (Hogan)

Mr. McCleskey switched his career from banking to insurance sales. He passed away suddenly in 1944.

Hattie continued to live in the home where she had raised her children. Once they were grown she went to work as a realtor, joining partnerships with Ida Mae McDonald.

Hattie McCleskey was a petite and demure lady that enjoyed her work in the First United Methodist Church. This beautiful home still has the original charm and architectural features that it originally had when built in 1928. Mrs McClesky died in 1976 at the age of 94 and the home was sold. Today, it is back on the market.

causes of chronic pain could include neurologic disease or injury, dental disease, cancer pain, and untreated or improperly treated acute pain."

Because chronic pain can manifest differently in individual pets, there are a number of symptoms and behavioral changes that pet owners should watch out for.

"Signs of chronic pain might include lameness or limping, a decrease in activity levels, having trouble standing, a reluctance or inability to jump up on objects, a decreased appetite, overgrooming of an area, or being withdrawn from the family or other pets," Eckman said.

As a pet owner, it is important to act quickly if you notice a pet showing symptoms of pain and seek treatment from a veterinarian. Untreated pain can worsen and lead to additional health complications.

"Chronic pain is usually prevented by treating the underlying disease state that causes acute pain," Eckman said. "If pain is not recognized early enough, such as with a chronic arthritic dog, this can also lead to chronic pain that could have been prevented by treating it earlier."

In the next part of this series on chronic pain, Eckman will discuss some of the common treatment methods that veterinarians and owners can employ to keep the symptoms of chronic pain at bay.

immigration authorities in two weeks to three months in cities including Philadelphia and Washington.

U.S. officials told immigration attorneys that required check-ins would be postponed, Henriquez said. Homeland Security officials didn't immediately respond to a request for comment Friday.

In San Antonio, a Latina woman approached migrants at a city-run shelter and put them up at a nearby La Quinta Inn, where she visited daily with food and gift cards, Henriquez said. She promised jobs and three months of housing in Washington, New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

The woman, who introduced herself to migrants as Perla, promised jobs, housing and support for their immigration cases, said Oren Sellstrom of Lawyers for Civil Rights, which offered free consultations.

The city of San Antonio was unaware of the flights, said Maria Villagomez, deputy city manager.

Pedro Luis Torrelaba, 36, said he was promised work, food and housing. He thought he was going to New York.

"I am not a victim," he said Friday, expressing gratitude to residents of Martha's Vineyard for their hospitality. "I simply feel misled because they told a lie and it has come to nothing."

The migrants were being moved voluntarily Friday to a military base on nearby Cape Cod. Republican Gov. Charlie Baker said he would activate up to 125 National Guard members to assist the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency.

DeSantis said Friday that most migrants intended to come to Florida and that the trip to Martha's Vineyard was voluntary. He did not address the migrants' claims that they were told they were going elsewhere.

Florida's governor defended picking up migrants in Texas and vowed to continue transportation to immigrant-friendly "sanctuary" jurisdictions.

"Our view is that you've got to deal with it at the source, and if they're intending to come to Florida or many of them are intending to come to Florida, that's our best way to make sure they end up in a sanctuary," he said.

Texas has bused about 8,000 migrants to Washington since April, including more than 100 Thursday to Vice President Kamala Harris' home. It also has bused about 2,200 to New York and 300 to Chicago.

Arizona has bused more than 1,800 migrants to Washington since May, but has kept officials on the receiving end informed of the plans. The city of El Paso, Texas, has sent at least 1,135 migrants on 28 buses to New York since Aug. 23 and, like Arizona, shares passenger rosters and other information.

Last week, a 2-year-old who arrived in New York from Texas was hospitalized for dehydration and a pregnant woman on the same bus was in severe pain, according to advocates and city officials.

Volunteer groups often wait hours for buses arriving from Texas in a designated space of Manhattan's Port of Authority Bus Terminal. They rely on tipsters for help.

"It's a problem because we don't know when the buses are coming, how many buses are coming, if anyone on these buses has medical conditions that they will need help with, if they need a wheelchair," said Manuel Castro, commissioner of the New York City Mayor's Office of Immigrant Affairs. "We at least want to know that so that we can best help people as they arrive."

A contractor that Texas hired to bus migrants signed an agreement that prohibits them from talking to New York officials, Castro said.

Some fathers have arrived in New York while their spouses and children were sent to Washington, said Ilze Thielmann, a volunteer director with TLC NYC, a group working to reunite them.

Illinois Democratic Gov. J.B. Pritzker said his administration has reached out to Texas but gets no information. The first migrants arrived at Chicago's Union Station from Texas on Aug. 31.

Abbott's office dismissed complaints about lack of coordination and keeping cities guessing about the governor's next moves as he tries to stoke opposition to President Joe Biden's border policies.

"Instead of complaining about fulfilling their sanctuary city promises, these Democrat hypocrites should call on President Biden to do his job and secure the border — something the president continues failing to do," spokeswoman Renae Eze said Thursday.

Arizona has been working since May through the Regional Center for Border Health, which runs clinics for low-income patients in Yuma. Several days a week, a bus heads east from a clinic office in suburban Somerton.

Amanda Aguirre, the health care provider's CEO, said she told Republican Gov. Doug Ducey's staff that she wouldn't participate without close coordination. Arizona established information-sharing protocols from the start with Carecen, a nonprofit group that assists migrants in Washington, Aguirre said.

"I will never allow people just being dropped in the street because that's what I'm trying to prevent here in Yuma, being just dropped in the street," Aguirre said.

Some migrants seem unaffected by the chaos.

Cleiver Rodriguez of Venezuela said he appreciated the free ride from Texas to New York, where he came looking for work.

"I don't have any kind of opinion because at least they helped me get here," Rodriguez, 24,

Former All-Star catcher John Stearns dies at 71

DENVER (AP) — John Stearns, a four-time time All-Star catcher with the New York Mets, has died after a long battle with cancer. He was 71.

Stearns, who played football and baseball at the University of Colorado, died Thursday night in Denver, according to the Mets.

He passed away less than three weeks after attending an Old Timers' Day at Citi Field in New York that coincided with the Mets' 60th anniversary. He was noticeably thin in his Mets jersey on Aug. 27 and waved to the crowd when he was introduced on the field.

"No one played the game with more spirit or determination than John Stearns," Mets President Sandy Alderson said Friday in a statement. "He literally willed himself to attend Old Timers' Day last month so he could visit friends and old teammates. Despite his illness, he even managed to step into the batting cage to take a few swings. His nickname, 'Bad Dude' couldn't have been more appropriate."

Stearns was a complete catcher. He could hit, run and throw out baserunners, nailing almost 38% of those who attempted to steal.

Stearns was a late draft pick as a defensive back by the NFL's Buffalo Bills in 1973. The Philadelphia Phillies took him second overall that same year and he opted to play baseball.

With Bob Boone behind the plate for the Phillies, Stearns never really had a chance to play in Philadelphia after struggling early with his hitting. After appearing in one game for the Phillies in 1974, he was traded to the Mets as part of the multiplayer deal that sent relief pitcher Tug McGraw to Philadelphia.

Stearns played with the Mets from 1975-84 in a tenure that included frequent battles with injuries. He was named an All-Star in 1977, '79, '80 and 82. He had a career batting average of .260 in 810 games with 152 doubles, 10 triples and 46 home runs. He also stole 91 bases, including a team-high 25 in 1978.

A former safety and punter in college, Stearns was solid and feisty. Pirates star Dave Parker sustained a broken collarbone in one collision with Stearns in 1978 and future Mets star catcher Gary Carter got into a fight with him after another collision at home in '79.

One other incident Mets fans will remember is Stearns tackling one of two fans who ran on the field in 1980 and eluded authorities a little too long for his liking.

After retiring as a player, he served in a number of baseball jobs as a scout with Milwaukee, a bullpen coach for the Yankees, a minor league manager for Toronto and as a scout and coach for the Orioles.

He returned to the Mets as a coach in 2000 for two years under Bobby Valentine and later as a scout and minor league coach.

Stearns became an entertaining figure for a national audience when cameras and microphones memorably caught him shouting in the dugout, "The monster is out of the cage! The monster is out of the cage!" as Hall of Fame slugger Mike Piazza began breaking out of a hitting slump during the 2000 postseason.

"John was such a key part of our staff," Valentine said. "He had a unique way of lighting a fire under the guys. Every time we spoke by phone, he kept telling me he was going to beat this thing. That was John Stearns to a tee."

Stearns is survived by his son, Justin, brothers, Richard and William and his sister, Carla.

Federer, Serena retire; tennis moves on to Alcaraz, Swiatek

By HOWARD FENDRICH

AP Tennis Writer

The timing of it all hardly could be more symbolic: Within a span of two weeks, Serena Williams plays what is believed to be her last match at age 40, Roger Federer announces he'll be retiring at 41, Iga Swiatek wins her third Grand Slam title at 21, and Carlos Alcaraz gets his first at 19.

After so much handwringing in recent years about what would become of tennis once transcendent superstars such as Williams and Federer leave the game — he told the world Thursday he will exit after the Laver Cup next week; she made her plans public last month, then lost in the third round of the U.S. Open on Sept. 2 — the sport does seem to be in good hands as it prepares to move on.

"They helped mold tennis into what it is today. We will miss them," Nick Bollettieri, a Hall of Fame coach, said about Federer and Williams.

"Having these youngsters being No. 1," said Bollettieri, who worked with the Williams sisters, Andre Agassi, Jim Courier, Monica Seles and Maria Sharapova, among others, "is going to make a big difference for the tours."

First of all, let's not forget: Rafael Nadal and Novak Djokovic are still around — even if injuries, in Nadal's case, and vaccination status, in Djokovic's case, have limited their ability to compete at their best or always. They combined to win three of the year's four Grand Slam titles, boosting Nadal's total to 22, the most for a man, and Djokovic's to 21.

Williams has 23, and Federer 20, and both have dozens of other trophies, Olympic medals, hundreds of weeks at No. 1 in the rankings, and so on.

They are standard-bearers not merely because of such statistics.

Williams became a celebrity as much as a record-breaking athlete and someone who inspired plenty of kids to take up tennis. She paid tribute to Federer on her Instagram account, saying "Welcome to the retirement club."

Federer became a widely respected ambassador of the game, attracting fans and new players from around the globe, too.

Now some of those fresh faces are prepared to step into the space that will open up for new champions, new prime-time slots on TV, new sponsorship deals, new interest.

One never knows how things will go in sports, of course, or what might happen in terms of injuries, say, or other potential roadblocks to a long and distinguished career, but Swiatek and Alcaraz sure do appear to be set up for success.

From their athleticism and shot-making, to their on- and off-court demeanor, to the teams that surround them — both work with a sports psychologist, for example — they are preternaturally mature.

Swiatek, No. 1 since Ash Barty's retirement six months ago, is the first woman to win two Grand Slam titles in a single season since 2016.

Alcaraz, No. 1 since Monday, is the youngest man to occupy that spot since the computerized rankings began in 1973. He's also the first teenager to win the U.S. Open men's championship since Pete Sampras in 1990 and to win any men's major since Nadal at the 2005 French Open.

Both turned to Twitter to remark on Federer's impending departure.

Swiatek's message, in part: "I want to thank you for everything you've done and everything you are for our sport. It's been a privilege to witness your career."

Alcaraz's, in part: "Roger has been one of my idols and a source of inspiration! Thank you for everything you have done for our sport!"

Because of his age — born two months before Federer's first Grand Slam title and two years before Nadal's first — Alcaraz grew up admiring both of those giants of the game.

Similarly, Swiatek was 2 when Federer's initial Slam arrived, 4 when Nadal's did. She was yet to be born when Williams captured her first major trophy at the 1999 U.S. Open.

Swiatek and Alcaraz learned tennis, learned what it takes to be champions, learned what success beyond the lines looks like, during as golden an era as their sport ever enjoyed.

With those two at the forefront, and plenty of other talent around — Naomi Osaka and Coco Gauff, Frances Tiafoe and Jannik Sinner, Casper Ruud and Ons Jabeur and so on — tennis just might be able to survive. Thrive? Could be.

"Roger certainly had the era of Novak and Rafa, two of the most incredible athletes and tennis players ever. That's what people know today. But there were other rivals with Roger before him. And together, they understood, all of them, the importance of growing the game," said Tony Godsick, Federer's longtime agent. "Tennis is in such a good place. You look at this young kid, Alcaraz — he is coming. And there are other ones behind him. So tennis is in for a nice little pop here."

On Football: Can Black QBs pave way for Black coaches?

By ROB MAADDI

AP Pro Football Writer

When 11 Black quarterbacks started NFL games in Week 1, it was another indication those racial stereotypes have finally been overcome.

While there is a continued lack of diversity among general managers and coaches, four of the five largest contracts in the sport have been given to Black QBs — including Deshaun Watson's fully guaranteed $230 million deal from the Cleveland Browns. Patrick Mahomes, Russell Wilson and Kyler Murray received the other three. Lamar Jackson is in line to join that group next.

Black QBs — Cam Newton, Mahomes and Jackson — have won three of the last seven NFL MVP awards. Over the last 11 drafts, 11 of the 33 quarterbacks taken in the first round were Black.

But it's been a long, difficult journey since Fritz Pollard became the first Black QB to play in the NFL in 1923.

"There has been a traditional and historical underrepresentation of Black quarterbacks in the league because of various myths and falsehoods," NFL executive Troy Vincent told The Associated Press. "At the opening of this 2022 season, 11 Black quarterbacks are not only leading NFL clubs, but are demonstrating their ability to win. This leaves no doubt how this position has been normalized at both the collegiate and professional levels."

Despite the increase in Black quarterbacks and Black officials, who represent about 40% of the league's officiating crew, the growth in diversity isn't reflected on the sideline. There are only four Black head coaches in 2022: Pittsburgh's Mike Tomlin, Houston's Lovie Smith, Tampa Bay's Todd Bowles and Miami's Mike McDaniel, who is biracial.

It took nearly 100 years to go from Pollard breaking the QB race barrier to 11 starters, and it's unclear how long it will be for Black coaches to make that leap.

Those decisions fall on the owners. The league hires officials. Owners can have the say on general managers and coaches.

It took several decades to get to the new normal for QBs.

Along the way, Doug Williams became the first Black QB to win a Super Bowl following the 1987 season. Wilson and Mahomes joined him over the past nine years.

Michael Vick was the first Black QB selected No. 1 overall in the draft in 2001. Steve McNair became the first Black QB to win MVP in 2003.

All of those QBs and many others have dealt with many stereotypes. Some still do.

Jackson said a scout from the Los Angeles Chargers asked him to run routes at the NFL combine in 2018. He refused. The Baltimore Ravens selected him with the 32nd pick in the 2018 draft. He was MVP in his second season.

Donovan McNabb said college scouts asked him to play running back or wide receiver. He wouldn't switch positions. He was drafted No. 2 overall by the Philadelphia Eagles in 1999 and led the team to five NFC championship games in 11 seasons.

"Center, quarterback, wide receiver were the last positions to integrate in the National Football League," Vincent said. "Why? Because someone said that they were thinking positions and that Black QBs didn't have the aptitude, didn't have the football IQ."

While that unfair criticism isn't widely heard anymore, it hasn't been eradicated. It still seeps through when a critic says a Black quarterback can't read coverages or doesn't understand the playbook.

Coaches seem to have evolved beyond that stereotype. Teams just want to win and it doesn't matter who is under center, as evidenced by the contract the Browns gave Watson even though he faced accusations of sexual assault and harassment.

"It's the evolution of the game, and it's coaches who have realized that not only can these men win, they're dynamic and they can lead and they're winning at a high clip," Vincent said. "There's not a kid around the country that's a person of color that doesn't believe he can't be a quarterback because they're everywhere and they're winning championships."

Among the coaches who have relied on Black QBs is Andy Reid. From McNabb to Vick to Mahomes, Reid has had a Black QB start 272 of 406 games he has coached during his 24-year career with the Eagles and Chiefs.

"This is a great example that these men can lead," Vincent said about the number of Black QBs. "The barriers were a myth."

It's time for owners to embrace that Black GMs and coaches can also lead.

Opening lead — diamond queen.
This deal occurred in a pairs game played in Cannes, France, many years ago. The star of the hand was Gerard Desrousseau, who represented France in many international championships.
Desrousseau was West and led the queen of diamonds against South's seven spade contract. Declarer won with the ace and drew three rounds of trump, discarding a diamond from dummy.
South's normal course of play at this point was to try for a 3-3 heart division by cashing the K-A and ruffing a heart in his hand. So he played the king of hearts at trick five and the jack at trick six.

Had Desrousseau made the normal play of covering the jack with the queen in order to promote his ten, declarer would no doubt have continued by taking the ace and ruffing a heart in his hand to bring in the slam.
But instead of mechanically playing the queen on the jack, Desrousseau made the remarkable play of the ten, confident that declarer would not finesse the jack, and equally confident that declarer would not credit him with holding the Q-10-x.
Desrousseau's ruse succeeded admirably. Declarer put up the ace and returned the nine from dummy, assuredly discarding his diamond loser when East followed low. One can only imagine South's chagrin when Desrousseau produced the queen to set the contract.
Declarer can hardly be blamed for failing to diagnose the actual heart division. Almost anyone would cover the jack of hearts with the queen in the given circumstances. When West played the ten on the jack, there was certainly a strong presumption that he had started with 10-5 rather than Q-10-5.

Tomorrow: Percentages aren't always right.

Today in History: September 19, Unabomber manifesto in print
Today is Monday, Sept. 19, the 262nd day of 2022. There are 103 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 19, 1995, The New York Times and The Washington Post published the manifesto of Unabomber Ted Kaczynski (kah-ZIHN'-skee), which proved instrumental in identifying and capturing him.

On this date:
In 1796, President George Washington's farewell address was published. In it, America's first chief executive advised, "Observe good faith and justice toward all nations. Cultivate peace and harmony with all."

In 1881, the 20th president of the United States, James A. Garfield, died 2 1/2 months after being shot by Charles Guiteau; Chester Alan Arthur became president.

In 1955, President Juan Peron of Argentina was ousted after a revolt by the army and navy.

In 1957, the United States conducted its first contained underground nuclear test, code-named "Rainier," in the Nevada desert.

In 1970, the "Mary Tyler Moore" show debuted on CBS-TV.

In 1985, the Mexico City area was struck by a devastating earthquake that killed at least 9,500 people.

In 1986, federal health officials announced that the experimental drug AZT would be made available to thousands of AIDS patients.

In 1996, IBM announced it would extend health benefits to the partners of its gay employees.

In 2001, the Pentagon ordered dozens of advanced aircraft to the Persian Gulf region as the hour of military retaliation for deadly terrorist attacks on Sept. 11 drew closer.

In 2004, Hu Jintao (hoo jin-tow) became the undisputed leader of China with the departure of former President Jiang Zemin (jahng zuh-MEEN') from his top military post.

In 2008, struggling to stave off financial catastrophe, the Bush administration laid out a radical bailout plan calling for a takeover of a half-trillion dollars or more in worthless mortgages and other bad debt held by tottering institutions. Relieved investors sent stocks soaring on Wall Street and around the globe.

In 2020, President Donald Trump urged the Republican-run Senate to consider "without delay" his upcoming nomination to fill the Supreme Court vacancy created by the death of Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg just six weeks before the election.

Ten years ago: Members of Congress presented the Congressional Gold Medal to Myanmar democracy leader San Suu Kyi (ahng sahn soo chee) in a ceremony in the Capitol Rotunda. The Justice Department's internal watchdog found fault with the agency's handling of a gun-trafficking probe in Arizona that resulted in hundreds of weapons turning up at crime scenes in the U.S. and Mexico; the inspector general's report referred more than a dozen people for possible disciplinary action for their roles in Operation Fast and Furious.

Five years ago: In a speech to the U.N. General Assembly, President Donald Trump vowed to "totally destroy North Korea" if the U.S. were to be forced to defend itself or its allies against the North's nuclear weapons program. A 7.1 magnitude quake struck central Mexico, killing more than 360 people and causing more than three dozen buildings in Mexico City to completely collapse. Hurricane Maria barreled toward Puerto Rico after leaving widespread destruction on the small Caribbean island of Dominica. Former middleweight champion Jake LaMotta, who was portrayed by Robert De Niro in the film "Raging Bull," died at 95.

One year ago: U.S. authorities flew Haitians who'd been camped in a Texas border town back to their homeland, and tried to block others from crossing the border from Mexico. Members of Afghanistan's national girls soccer team, ages 14-16, who'd been trying to leave Afghanistan since the U.S. withdrawal weeks earlier, boarded a charter flight with their families to Portugal, where they'd been granted asylum. Streaming services pulled off three big victories at the Emmy Awards, as "The Crown" on Netflix won best drama series, "Ted Lasso" from Apple TV+ was named best comedy series and "The Queen's Gambit," also on Netflix, won best limited series.

Stars Sate Creative Appetites

A trine of good fortune and resourcefulness serves our creative appetites. Flights of imagination can seem frivolous but are no more so than a workout, meditation session or any pursuit of health and well-being. Consider the words of Ralph Waldo Emerson: "Imagination is not a talent of some people but is the health of everyone."

ARIES (March 21-April 19). A hypochondriac will read a list of symptoms and start to identify with a number of them. Then again, so will most people. It's human to be impressionable. You'll amp up the critical thinking to ward against easy influence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You may feel frustrated that you're not already where you wanted to be. Could you build some leeway into these requirements you made for yourself? Because it's not about where you are but what direction you're heading.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're better off moving quickly, especially through the landscape of your personal life. Don't allow yourself too much time for making decisions. If you let it drag on, your interest will die out before it's satisfied.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Negotiating well depends on how realistic you can be as you project yourself into the future. The less caught up you are with what you want out of the situation, the more you'll be able to see what the other person can really offer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). It is possible to busy oneself with a million tasks and still have a million left. For just a moment, slip into the sublime state in which there is nothing to do, and no one to be. When you come back, ask, what is necessary here?

VRIGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll be involved in the sort of busywork that never actually gets done, and therefore it will behoove you to impose artificial checkpoints in which you can stop, experience the satisfaction of working, reward yourself and rest.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Mutually pleasing arrangements absolutely depend on knowing the preferences of others. Though your intuition is on today, you'll still make the most effective bid when you begin with a discovery mission.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Prioritizing gets a little tricky today because many valued things will seem to need your attention at once. Take a breath; write it all down. You'll see a logical structure rise from the calm.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Asking for feedback is not the same as wanting validation. You've a strong enough sense of yourself that you can collect opinions without taking them personally or putting too much stock in what others think of you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Blame is toxic because it renders the blamer helpless. When the problem is someone else's fault, that person has the power to fix it. A person who claims responsibility also claims power.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Your body talks to you in its own way. If you ignore its nudge, the push will be forthcoming. Whether it's good nutrition, human touch or exercise you need most, focusing your care on the physical will lead to intellectual clarity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). It seems everyone is rushing to get in line, but you're no follower. It will benefit you to be more strategic. First, take the time to position yourself well. A firm footing and a posture of readiness will make all of the difference.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Sept. 19). You're strong, capable and driven toward a particular desire. Something you've struggled with will finally be resolved or integrated to the point where it becomes a strength of yours and a point of connection. Through your work you will find interesting friends, play fun games and launch exciting adventures. Cancer and Virgo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 1, 5, 33, 41 and 18.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Jimmy Fallon has traveled a cross section of Hollywood from "Saturday Night Live" to feature films to his award-winning late-night talk show. Fallon was born when the sun and Venus were both in the hardworking, ever-young earth sign of Virgo. Mercury, Mars, Uranus and Pluto were all in Libra, the sign of good relationships, harmony, diplomacy, art and collaboration.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
