GRASSROOT OPINION

MARIAN, ILL., Weekly Leader: "The great principal of democracy can be applied to the religious field — Respect for one's neighbors, whether or not he agrees with your strict beliefs, is an American principle too often abused."

SUNNY SLOPE ARIZONA, Journal: "The Russians — don't believe workingmen own automobiles. They would say it's a lie to see our High School boys and girls driving to school in their jalopies. Who has stopped them from getting what we have? Certainly not the United States. No—their leaders are to blame."

SPRINGHILL, LA., Press: "James A. Linen, publisher of Time magazine, speaking to the national radio audience from the Metropolitan Opera House on National Opera Day, said: 'Apparently one of the things we are going to keep with us in our new world is music. One of the most important things that's got to happen if the United States is to maintain its position of leadership in the world is for the rest of the world to give us credit for culture as well as bathtubs.'"

ALMA MICHIGAN, Record: "A wholly changed attitude toward the dollar is held by the Eisenhower administration compared with the attitude toward it since 1933. Now the dollar is beginning to assume some importance in its own right, instead of merely serving as a tool to accomplish some purpose of the government."

THE BARBITURATE DANGER

An article in Today's Health, a publication of the American Medical Association, warns against the excessive or improper use of barbiturates.

Written by Dr. Donald A. Dukelow, the article says that in 1951 more than 688,000 pounds of these drugs were produced — enough to put every man, woman and child in the nation to sleep for 20 days if administered in the usual dosage. It is estimated that more than half of the huge barbiturate production is distributed through illegitimate channels for non-medical purposes.

When used properly, under a physician's supervision, barbiturates are of great value and can prevent much suffering. But, as is true of most habit forming drugs, improper use can lead to destruction of the victim's personality, crime, and even death.

AFTER TWO DECADES

Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey has stated that the federal budget cannot be balanced in the next fiscal year, despite substantial cuts in appropriations. There will be a deficit and it probably will be necessary to again increase the legal debt limit.

As the Portland Oregonian said editorially, "It took two decades to get the government and the taxpayers into this mess." We can't get out of it overnight. In the meantime, the Administration must be encouraged in its efforts to reduce costs as rapidly as possible — and the people must have the character and the resolution to accept and applaud the fact that the Santa Claus era seems to be ending. That won't be easy. But it will infinitely easier than the national bankruptcy that would inevitably result from continued unbridled spending.

-YOUR FARM BUREAU-
 BY MARYE ECKELKAMP

Not long ago, I asked a farmer to join the Wichita County Farm Bureau. We talked about the purpose of the organization, the principles, and the need of a farm organization. You have read about these things in a column, and a lot of you know about the organization from hand having served on committees and as officers and directors.

This farmer was real interested until I told him that our membership dues was $10.00 a year. He immediately decided that he didn't want to belong because the dues were too high. I said that the first person that made this statement.

Since that time, I have thought about this many times. I can't keep from comparing the Farm Bureau with other organizations, such as labor and industry. We have a membership of 1,550,000 farmers that have the union dues and social security benefits were taken out. In the course of a year, you would have paid a total of $256 in union dues and would take approximately $1500 in annual pay.

The demand for coal is increasing each month as more industries and domestic users turn to cheaper fuels like natural gas and fuel oil. Coal is actually being priced off of the market. Many of the miners would gladly work more days with the assurance that they would be able to pay the grocery bill each week.

As a farmer, you are not forced to belong to any organization to farm your land. You can keep your independence. Yet you do have the opportunity of voluntarily joining an organization that respects that independence, whose officers take orders from the members rather than giving them, and is completely democratic in foundation.

As I said in the beginning, I can't keep from making this comparison. Actually, there is no comparison. I may be wrong but in my opinion, it is wrong in every sense of the word, for anyone to be forced to belong to an organization and have a membership card before he can work to support his family.

My opinion may not count for much, but after having seen Farm Bureau in action on the county, state, and national levels, the Dutch Eckelkamp family will be a member of the Wichita County Farm Bureau for many years to come. You see, we honestly believe in it.

P. S. I promised to give you the time and place of the Wheat producers meeting being held tomorrow, May 30 in Amarillo. The meeting starts at 9:30 a. m. in the Herring ballroom. It is worth the trip just to watch Jack Lynn in action. But what he has to say will make you doubly glad you went. I heard him in Abilene.

We are in favor of 'omph for all the ladies.

A lot of worry can be wasted on other people.

Burkburnett Mounted Square Dancers

One of the most colorful performances at the Boomtown Rodeo on June 2-5 will be that of the Burkburnett Mounted Square Dancers. Riding matched horses, the riders with their bright colored shirts make a beautiful sight to behold. The horses are paired, black and white paints, red and white paints, bays, grays, blacks palominos, sorrels and golden duns.

This nationally famous group was organized from the Burkburnett Riding Club. They have performed at the Burkburnett Boom Town Celebration Rodeo the past seven years, and at Fort Worth, Okla. City, San Francisco, Calif at the Cow Palace, Baton Rouge, La., Shreveport, La., Pine Bluff Ark, West Monroe, La., Burwell, Nebr. Sydney, Iowa, Garden City, Kansas, Phoenix and Tuscon, Ariz, Albuquerque and Roswell, New Mexico, Memphis, Tenn., Little Rock Ark., and many other cities.

Many rodeo producers and performers have proclaimed the Burkburnett riders the best they have ever seen. They go through all the intricate figures that dancers on a smooth floor execute. Only expert riders can qualify for this team. The action is fast and the horses are trained to an unbelievably high degree. They listen to the caller and go into the turns without prompting from the riders.

Dow Estes, who calls the dances, is referred to as the world's best caller. He calls a different dance at each performance.

Both riders and horses are kept on the alert to make each appearance one of perfect timing for the mounted dancers.

Rodeo Clowns' Top Roles Saving Contestants' Lives

stead of the dismounted rider, tossing Wes high into the air. His wavy black hair is prematurely streaked with gray.

His closest call came in Homestead, Fla., last year when Wes threw himself between a bull and a downed rider. The bull caught him in the stomach with a horn, threw him about 10 feet in the air and then hooked his leg with the other horn when he came down.

Wes fell to the arena and the bull fell on him and started to roll up his body, starting at the legs. Half way over, the bull scrambled to his feet as the other cowboys came to his rescue. Wes was in the hospital for several weeks as a result.

"He's a little modest," Lindsey put in. "The bull riders would not get in a chute unless there was a bull fighter in the arena to help them."

"There isn't a night that goes by but what a cowpoke will walk up to Wes and say thanks. Wes doesn't recognize most of them because he keeps his eye on the bull. You have to. You never know when a rider might have a broken arm or leg," the Vinita comic said.

"I've been in the rodeo clown business for 27 years and he's the best bull fighter I've seen. Wes's agility in the arena hasn't gone unnoticed. A prominent rancher in Mexico has asked him to come south of the border during the off-season (winter) and try his hand as a real torero."

"There's a lot of difference of course," Wes commented. You can make a lot of mistakes at a rodeo but you can only make one in the bull ring I'm going to try my luck anyway."

Although his equipment includes authentic capes and costumes made in Spain and Mexico, Wes corns up the act by wearing a derby with the flashy outfit or fighting with an umbrella.

A cowboy before he went into the Navy in 1942, Wes failed to do as well at riding broncs and bulls when he was discharged. He got into the bull fighting end of the business by accident—the same way Lindsey became a clown.

Wes was rodeoing at Del Mar, Calif., when the regular fighter was gored, Wes picked up the cape. The announcer asked him if he would take another engagement. In need of money, he readily agreed before he asked where the show was to be held.

It was the annual Sheriff's Posse rodeo in the Los Angeles coliseum and there was a record 110,000 people on hand to see him make his debut.

Since then he has grown in popularity until now he is probably the most sought-after attraction in the rodeo profession. He has numerous acts. A trained donkey—Pork Chop—and a little dog accompany him. When he works a rodeo by himself—with no clown—he does a double performance of entertaining the fans and fighting the bulls.

Lindsey started clowning quite by accident, too. He was riding everything they would put in the chutes until one day the regular clown was injured by the mule he used in the clown act. Lindsey took the mule and went into the arena, launching himself on a career as a clown.

He rose to national fame thru use of a trained white-face bull—and a midget bull at that. At the peak of his career he earned $20,000 a year. But the bull died 2 years ago and now he is training a sway-back horse to do the act.

Since he started as a clown he has worked every major rodeo on the North American continent. Although a native of Texas, he now has a 200-acre ranch near Vinita which he is stocking with cattle and quarter horses.

A 19 year old daughter is a student at Northeastern State College at Tahlequah.

He is one of the old timers left that worked the first Tulsa stampede 15 years ago. So far this season he has 18 rodeos booked. Wes has 21.

During their years on the road they have run into each other on several occasions. Following the success of the Tulsa show this year, they have decided to work as many shows together as possible, although selling themselves individually instead of as a team.

Lindsey's many acts also include a mule—Minnie Pearl. We give the fans a good show—not just a bunch of jokes that no one can hear or understand. When we go into the arena we have our stunts prepared and give the people their money's worth," Lindsey said.

A performance of the stampede is scheduled for 8 p. m.

Saturday. It will close after the final event at 2 p. m. Sunday.

News From The Congress

By FRANK IKARD

The President's signing the Tidelands Bill brought to an end the ten year struggle on the part of the States to have their historic boundaries recognized by the Federal Government. The bill that the President signed vests title in the States to all of the lands that lie within their historic boundaries. This means that in the case of Texas and the West Coast of Florida that the title of the States extends ten and one-half miles seaward from the low tide. In the other States, the boundary is three miles out. While this bill gives to the States all that they can rightfully claim as far as ownership is concerned, it did not touch upon the high controversial question of who shall exercise police power over the area that lies immediately beyond the States' boundary or on the so-called Continental Shelf. I feel that the States should have the right to regulate production on the Continental Shelf through the enforcement of their conservation laws such as proration orders issued by the Texas Railroad Commission and that they should have the right to exercise ordinary police power over that area such as making their criminal laws applicable; however many others feel that the Federal Government should control this area. If their viewpoint should prevail, it would mean that there would be a new federal bureau set up to control the production and to regulate and enforce any ordinary police laws or regulations that might be adopted by the Federal Government. It seems to me that it would be much more economical and much more efficient to let each state deal with this problem just as the States with large tracts of public lands within their boundaries now do.

This week Congress adopted a resolution that it would admit Ohio into the Union, which would take effect as of March 1, 1803. This may sound rather strange, but it's brought about by the fact that when Ohio first attempted to come into the Union in 1803, the Congress through an oversight, did not give final approval to the Constitution of the State as was required at that time. The result was that Ohio thought they were legally in the Union for years until this mistake was discovered.

The House passed the Agricultural Appropriation Bill, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and Department of Labor. There was an effort in the House to seriously cripple the Soil Conservation Program. This was defeated, however, in an extremely close vote of 201 to 196. It seems to me that we should all become more interested and more conscious of the importance of soil conservation for as I pointed out two weeks ago, as a Nation, we have probably wasted our lands more than any other people in history, and if we don't take immediate steps to institute the most effective programs of rebuilding it, in another generation, we may wake up and find that most of our good soil is gone.

This week, Mr. Joe Ward of Wichita Falls has been visiting in Washington.

Grade School News

We are very excited this week because we are making big plans for our picnics next week. We look forward each year for the last week in the school year when we have a very exciting time with our school mates. This is the one time during the school year that we really know that we will have a very exciting trip and many experiences that we will remember for a long time.

Oh we have a few tests this next week, but they are in the background from the excitement that is built around the plans of each room for the big outing. The tests that come at the end of school causes less excitement than any other.

We have enjoyed telling you about the many fine times that we have had this year and hope that you will let us come back to see you next year. Until then we wish for each of you a very happy vacation.

Burkburnett Art Club Meets With Mrs. Margaret McCabe

The Burkburnett Art Club closed this season with installation of leaders for the ensuing year, followed by an informal social hour.

The installation of officers included Mesdames Virginia Sheriff, president, Maude Bohner, vice president, Vivian Cannon, reporter, and Vlema Bohner secretary and treasurer.

During the brief period devoted to business plans were discussed for the annual side-walk Art show which will be held in the spring.

Due to the talent Burkburnett possesses the group expects to double its membership by the Fall meeting.

The room was decorated with spring flowers and the mirrors hanging depicting Happy Birthday, honoring Virginia Sheriff and Mary Jane Flack. During the social hour, it was learned that Virginia Sheriff was also celebrating her tenth wedding anniversary. Having nothing in Tin, as material gift, the group congratulated her by doing the Can-Can Dance.

Migration of Birds

By R. D. L.

When the birds that have nested in boxes prepared for them on our premises, and those that frequented the near by creek bottoms, the wooded bluffs along the Red River leave us in the fall, the question naturally comes to mind: Where do they go? This, however, is only one part of the question as we also wonder: Will the same ones return next spring to their future homes. What dangers will they face on their round trip-flight and while in the winter homes?

These and other questions on the migratory habits of most species of birds that visit us each spring, nest and raise their young, puzzle all who are interested in them, whether it be the farmer who profits by their timeless warfare against the insect pests of his crops, the city dweller who enjoys having an abundance of the feathered inhabitants about him, and goes to some expense to erect comfortable homes for them, or the hunter who wants a continuation from year to year, of the sport of wildfowling.

The migration of birds were probably among the first natural phenomena to attract the attention and intrigue the imagination of man. Recorded observation on the subject date back many years, and the flight of quail that saved the Israelites from starvation in their wandering in the wilderness of Sinai is now recognized as a vast movement of migratory quail between their breeding grounds and their winter home in Africa.

In this part of the country, the purple martin is the most common species to be seen in numbers and nesting in boxes prepared for them by bird lovers. They leave in the fall and return in the spring and one of the parent birds frequently returns and nests in the tree, bush or box that holds it nest in the previous season. They usually begin their fall migration early in July and in some parts of the country distinct southward movements can be detected from then until the beginning or middle of winter. While on their way north, purple martins have been known to arrive in Florida late in January, and among late arrivals, the northern movement may continue into the first week in June.

There is no single aspect of the entire subject of bird migration that challenges the admiration so much as the unerring certainty with which birds cover thousands of miles of land or water to come nest in exactly the same spot where they spent the previous summer or winter. The theory is sometime advanced that the older and more experienced birds lead the way showing the route to the younger companions.

The migration of birds as it is known today had its beginning in times so remote that its origins have been entirely obscured, and it can be interpreted now only in terms of present conditions. The mystery that formerly cloaked the periodic travel of birds, however, has been largely dispelled through the fairly complete information that is now available concerning the extent and times of seasonal journey's of most of the species.

It is said that early colonist found that some tribes of the eastern American Indians hung up gourds for purple martins. How old the practice is we have no means of knowing, but it has been continued by white men to this day in but slightly modified form throughout the Southwestern States. Long before the white man came to America the birds had established their seasonal lanes of migration throughout the Western Hemisphere. Much has been learned, but it must be left to future study to clear away many of the uncertainties that continue to make bird migration one of the most fascinating subjects in the science of Ornithology.

Questions, Answers About Burk's New Housing Project

Q—Just what is the purpose of housing projects such as the one now being constructed in Burk?

A—The low-rent public housing program has as its purpose enabling local communities to provide adequate housing for low-income families who otherwise would have to live in sub-standard housing. It is a local program, operated with Federal financial assistance.

This program was begun by the United States Housing Act of 1937 which authorized Federal aid to communities to house families in the lowest income group who cannot afford to pay enough to cause private enterprise to build an adequate supply of decent, safe and sanitary dwellings for their use. This program is not designed to compete with private enterprise landlords who furnish adequate housing to their tenants. It does compete, however, with landlords who furnish shacks, slums and other sub-standard housing at an exorbitant rental.

The construction of low-rent housing projects is authorized by the State Legislature. Local housing authorities such as the Burk Housing Authority, plan and build low rent housing projects which they finance with the assistance of loans from the Federal Government. When the projects are built the dwellings are rented to low-income families at rents scaled to what the individual family can pay, when the bonded indebtedness of the local authority has been retired over a period of years. Federal assistance then ceases.

In the average small town there is an oversupply of clubs and club officers.

Some people will not know what hit them if another depression comes along.

There is nothing sweeter than youth, nor anything as truthful.

607 B Main Street
Dallas, Texas
Questions and Answers

Q—I work on a farm that's owned and operated by my uncle. As a Korean veteran, would I be allowed to take institutional on-farm training under the Korean GI Bill?

A—Under your present arrangement, you would not be permitted to take the training. The law requires that you be assured of control of your farm—either by ownership, lease or some other arrangement—so that you'll be free to put into practice what you learn in school.

Q—I served in the WAC since Korea. I'm planning to go to school under the Korean GI Bill. Would I be permitted to claim my husband as a dependent, in order to get a higher monthly education and training allowance?

A—Under the law, you may claim your husband as a dependent only if he is actually dependent on you. You may not claim him if he is earning a livelihood.

Q—I served in the Commissioned Corps of the US Public Health Service. Would my service entitle me to the educational benefits of the Korean GI Bill?

A—You would be entitled to the benefits so long as you were a Public Health Service officer on active duty since Korea, under detail by proper authority, with any branch of the armed forces.

Q—I am an accountant. I've just been released from service after two years in the Army. Could I take a refresher course in accounting under the Korean GI Bill?

A—The Korean GI Bill prohibits veterans from taking courses leading to objectives for which they already are qualified. For that reason, you would not be permitted to take a refresher course in accounting.
