NUMBER 41

Just because a man pitches a good line is no sign he has a lot of bait.

More than 678,000 persons were injured in week end traffic accidents last year.

Methodist In Final Stage of Building Fund Drive

The Methodist Church was the scene, Monday Night, of a Kick-Off Dinner for the solicitation of funds for an Educational Building. Over one hundred people partook of a good covered dish dinner. Pupils of Miss Blanche Butler presented several numbers and the whole group was led in singing by Dr. Carl Morrison, accompanied by Mrs. George Yarbro. Dr. Earl Hoggard, Pastor of Floral Heights Methodist Church in Wichita Falls, brought an inspiring and challenging address. Dr. Hoggard was introduced by Paul Browning. Assignments were given to over seventy workers who will report at a dinner meeting tonight (Thursday). Another report dinner will be held next Monday night. Early reports on pledges indicate that the drive will be highly successful and all workers are being urged to attend the Victory Dinner on Thursday night of next week.

Revival Continues Thru Sunday At Assembly Of God

Thursday night service special message theme, Everybody a Plowman, will be an illustrated message with a plow and a whip like the one they used on Jesus.

Some of the message themes for this week are, Who is the Anti-Christians, And is he alive today, What will be the mark of the Beast, when will it be given, and Who will take the mark of the Beast.

In spite of bad weather the crowds have gathered to hear the old time Gospel preaching, music, singing and praying.

Improvement of Streets Revealed

During the past few weeks, a lot of street improvement work has been going on, especially in the West part of the City. Some of the streets, prior to the work, were so poorly drained that people could not leave their driveways for several hours after a big rain. Holly Street and parts of West College and Preston were the worst.

Approximately 3 to 4 miles of streets have been graded, drained and resurfaced. Caliche was used for the resurfacing, with a few blocks getting a coating of blacktop.

Where it was necessary to raise the streets in order to get drainage, property owners shared the cost of culverts into their driveways. The City did the work and furnished the culverts at the street intersections.

Other streets, some in the Eastern part of town, have been graded and drained. They will be surfaced as soon as time, money and other things are available. According to City Manager Ted McCasling, they realize that a lot of streets need attention, but they took the most critical situations first and will get to the others as they can. Patching on existing blacktop streets is a never ending job. After each rain new chug holes pop up all over town. They are kept filled as time and materials are available.

W. T. Holman, County Commissioner of Precinct No. 2, got out his heavy graders and did considerable work on the streets carrying School buses and rural mail.

4 New Water Wells Added to Supply

Four new water wells have been drilled on the Prescott farm the past two weeks. Tests show the new wells will produce an average of 35 gallons of water per minute, each. These wells will be put on permanent pumps and their supply will be in the city mains within the next 30 days, according to Ted McCasling, City Manager.

Tests are now being drilled on the Knauth farm, West of town for additional water. All the old producing wells are also being checked and tested, to determine what the total production may be expected for the summer months. It is probable that the daily available water now is in the neighborhood of 850,000 gallons.

Purification and pumping facilities at the pump station East of town are adequate to handle all the water the wells can produce.

Allen Wayne and Belinda Green spent the past two weeks with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Elliott of Deval, while their mother was convalescing from a recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson plan to finish this school term and then move to Electra, Tex., where the groom will be employed.

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

COATESVILLE, Pa., Record: "Under our federal-state concept of government, the Constitution gives to the states not only authority but the obligation to safeguard the right of every citizen to seek his best economic interests. The states cannot safeguard this right except by guaranteeing the right to work."

LAMBERTVILLE, N. J., Beacon: "Under a fancy scheme today the worker, who does not want to work can say 'the heck with it' and sit down and enjoy his unemployment compensation checks. Then too, all that talk about saving for the future the the bunk. We have social security that will take care of us when we are sixty-five. But, with all this there comes the realization that the producers are becoming less and less and the 'eaters' are growing in number. Where does this lead us? We think to the brink of full statism. Crazy, you say? Well, think about it. It may be later than you think."

ONTARIO-UPLAND, Calif., Report: "The blunt truth is that guaranteed annual employment will not work in a free economy because that freedom includes freedom of customers to buy where they choose. To have any bona fide value, a guaranteed annual wage would have to be linked to a guaranteed annual market."

ODESSA, Tex., American: "We favor human liberty, the right of a man to be independent and self-determining; controlling himself by his own moral, ethical and spiritual compulsions, and not by mass regimentation, however benignly it might be administered."

KEEPING OUR CARS RUNNING

At the beginning of the year, it was widely forecast that sales of passenger cars would total 5,500,000 in 1955. Now there is reason for believing that this was too modest a figure, that sales may be as much as a million units higher.

There are 58,000,000 cars in the country now. In 1956 qualified experts think, there will be more than 80,000,000.

That speaks well for the vigor and productive ability of the motor industry. It speaks equally well for the vigor and productive ability of another industry without whose work not a single car could operate, much less 80,000. That industry is oil, the producer of the incredible quantities of fuels and lubricants that keep our cars running.

To find oil is a very risky proposition, most wells turn out dry and worthless. On top of that, oil wells depreciate every gallon removed from any well brings nearer the day when it will be exhausted and must be replaced. And that is why oil producers are given the much-discussed much-misunderstood depletion allowance. This allowance which applies to production only and to no other phase of the oil industry, is 27 1/4 percent of the gross income of the property, with the qualification that it must be limited to an amount equal to 50 percent of the net income. And it is allowed not to give producers any favors, but to help compensate for inevitable depreciation of existing properties, and to encourage the costly search for new ones.

Without the depletion allowance, you might not be driving your car today!

EIGHT EVERY MINUTE

The period from April 30 to May 7 is to be celebrated as National Baby Week. We don't know just why this promotion and observation is necessary, since, without any Federal supports, at any percentage of parity, we are producing bumper crops of infants. Production for 1954, which figure has just been officially decided on, totalled 4,076,000 new citizens. This is an all-time high, exceeding last year's record-breaking births by 105,000.

But, while we don't suppose the National Baby Week festivities have much impact on parental intentions they do point out a fact of American business that is without parallel in this world, and without precedent in recorded history. That is the active concern of commerce, industry and agriculture over the pattering of tiny footsteps. Great industries that provide his lordship with clothing and toiletries, food and furniture vie with one another for a toothless smile. Truck and fruit farmers study and toil to produce that improved garden-sass that will admit them to the nobility of baby growers.

"It only takes one baby to change the pattern of life for a whole household," says Dan Gerber, of Fremont, Mich., pioneer in providing special foods for these special people. "And when they arrive at the rate of 11,167 a day, as they did last year, and all of them hungry, a lot of people have a lot more to do today than they did yesterday. It makes you wonder, when you think of how many of these baby-tending jobs business has taken over, how Grandma ever raised a family."

What ever happened anyway to the "race suicide" we were worrying about only a few years ago. As of National Baby Week, 1955, it looks as if babies were here to stay.

From where I sit... by Joe M. Red

Red Finds a "Sweet Solution"

Red Jackson found a slick way to get his cows to eat what's good for them. Seems they were passing up the tall green grass—full of minerals and vitamins—and eating the short grass, which is naturally sweeter.

Red solved the problem by spraying a solution of corn syrup over the grass that was going begging. The cows sure went at it. Red says it's lucky for him—and the cows—that every one of them has a "sweet tooth."

Next week, according to Red, he's going to have his cows clean up all the weedy grass and fences—after he sprays them more corn syrup, of course. From where I sit, some like Red, are always trying new tricks—and others stick to the old tried and true. Just a question of preference, guess. Like the way you prefer a cold glass of beer to "crop up" by thinking of the only choice.

LIBERTY

By R. D. Laney

I once knew a successful business man who had reached the age of retirement, and at this point passed on to his attorney the task of insulating himself against the post-mortem impact of the federal income tax collector. In due time his attorney prepared stacks of documents: a trust agreement, a will, various insurance policies and deeds of land and transfers of personal property.

After the man had signed all of the papers which had been prepared by his attorney, he sat back and said: "I certainly get a kick out of this. I'm an old man. I've got much more property than I ever thought I would have. I had some bad luck, too. Lost my wife a few years ago; lost my son in World War II; but I've still got a daughter and a lot of fine grand children. I wanted them to have this property but I never even had a will. I knew that unless I did something like this, the government would get most of it and the rest of it might go to the four winds.

His attorney said: "Now that you have taken care of their property, what are you going to do about the liberty of these

I don't know anything about liberty. I'm just a merchant, and I've made some money, and I'm going to leave that liberty business to the professors and politicians."

At this point his attorney said something to the man that I am going to tell you something you should remember. He said: "Tear up that will, throw away the insurance policies, forget the trust agreement, forget all the things we have done here today, because unless you leave your children liberty, you leave them nothing at all.

Ask the wealthy Jews in Germany what their property did for them, if you please, when they were facing up against the concentrated, unlimited power of government. Ask the kulaks, ask the hosts of ten million kulaks murdered by agents of government. Say: "Fellows, you had a lot of land, a lot of property over there in Russia. Didn't that property and land help you when you faced this concentrated, unlimited power of government?"

Ask the imprisoned or expelled or dead Chinese landlords and merchants what good their property did them when their government decided to own and operate the means of production for the good of all people. Is that the future you want to will to your children?

Wherever you look, at whatever page or period of history you ask the question, the answer comes back always the same. In time of tyranny, in time of concentrated, unlimited governmental power, your money is going to buy your children just one thing—a ticket to a concentration camp, a one way ticket to the point of no return.

Will you think of that the next time you pay your life insurance premium? The next time you put a codicil on your will for the children?" The man replied: "Oh, next grandchild, or stack away a few dollars for a rainy day, or set up a trust fund, stop and think a moment. When the power of the government is unlimited and centralized, the inevitable result is a one way ticket to the point of no return.

Think of it, please, when you gather those youngsters around you. What is your personal contribution to the fate of the next generation? Look into their faces and ask yourself this question: How much unlimited, centralized power is my government going to have when these children are as old as I am?

That will do it! Thereafter, you will do your own individual bit to preserve human liberty, which is to be found only in limited constitutional government which restricts division of power and unbreakable checks and balances. Then and there you will make a solemn resolution that your legacy, not of property, but of liberty to these children, is going to compare favorably to the big fortune of freedom which the Founding Fathers devised at such sacrifice and willed to you as a trust for your children and their children.

Ava Has Best Role Of Career

It's a tough matter to become recognized as a fine actress if you are a beautiful girl, but Ava Gardner may be well on the way to making it. In Joseph L. Mankiewicz' "The Barefoot Contessa," Technicolor film showing Sunday, Monday Tuesday at the Palace Theatre thru United Artists release, Ava has the dramatic role of her life, a gamut-runner from AAA toZZZ.

With her performance in "Mogambo," Ava began to break thru the crust of skepticism concerning her talent (there has never been even the slightest question about her beauty) and won an Academy nomination as Best Actress.

She hopes that her role as Maria D'Amata in "The Barefoot Contessa" will take her even further along the road to recognition as an actress.

It was purely on the strength of a portrait of her that she got her first screen contract. The picture fell into the hands of MGM talent scouts, who got in touch with her and arranged a screen test for her, a test in which she spoke no lines and did no acting; the test was simply a series of big dreamy closeups.

After she was signed, she was given extensive drama and diction lessons, and subsequently her first role, a very minor part in a picture called "We Were Dancing." Better parts followed until she got her first big break opposite Clark Gable in "The Hucksters."

Three out of four traffic accidents involve passenger cars.

Poisonous Plants May Kill Stock

Livestock raisers are warned to be on the alert for death-dealing poisonous range plants, especially after the late season freezes in March.

Buds, leaves and tender shoots of all trees in the oak family possess a toxic substance which may cause severe illness in cattle, sheep, goats and horses. These plants were made even more toxic by the cold weather in March, B. T. Haws, county agent says.

The poisonous condition of oak exists from the time the buds begin to swell until the new leaves turn dark green in color. Low growing oaks, low enough to be reached by livestock, cause most of the trouble. Cattle are most commonly affected.

Haws says livestock should be moved from any area where poisonous vegetation is until the danger period is over. Severe and prolonged damage by bitterweeds, especially toxic to sheep, red and rotation grazing and recommended controls for plants.

Loco and peavine are poisonous to livestock. Haws says animals should be allowed to graze pastures during these plants until sufficient growth of other plants can supply the forage needs of animals.

The common cocklebur seedling stage is very poisonous to hogs and to cattle in a degree.

The Lone Star Symbol Of Texas

There was a lonely little boy whose name was Sparkie. One day when Sparkie's parents were shinning brightly on the little boy shot stones at him with his slingshot and he ran out of the sky. A young star who had been told Sparkie the sad story that Sparkie was the dimmest light in all of God's kingdom. Sometime Sparkie forgot his name; he went swimming in the friendly rain clouds and he was so happy he didn't know where he was going. He was old Mr. Storm Cloud's son.

nose. Mr. Storm Cloud didn't like this at all so, with one breath of tremendous force, he sent Sparkie falling thru space. In the meantime, on earth, a granddaughter of an rancher in Texas, saw Sparkie falling thru space. She went to her grandpa and they ran to catch the little star. As for Sparkie, he was very frightened. Something told him he was going to disappear like his mother and father had many months ago. He closed his eyes. When he opened them, he found himself being stared at by Sandy and her grandfather. He tried to get up and run away but one of his points was broken. When Sandy saw this she immediately picked him up and took him to the cabin. There she put a splint on the broken point. Next she rubbed and polished him. This was new to him but he liked it. This was much better than standing out in the cold all night. It was warm and comfortable he felt as though Sandy was his own mother. At first Sparkie was a little timid, but when he got to know Sandy and her grandfather better, he loved everything about them and the crude little cabin in which they lived. Sandy and Sparkie had many happy days together.

Sometime later Sandy and her grandfather went into town to buy groceries. Mrs. Hamshire, the woman who ran the General store, overheard a conversation between Sandy and her grandfather about the little star. Mrs. Hamshire was an old busy-body anyway, so the minute the two in question left, she told everyone about the conversation she overheard concerning the little star.

Meanwhile in the Legislature a speech was being given by the governor. "And, I say, gentlemen we should have something to symbolize the state of Texas. If anyone has a suggestion — "He was interrupted by a knock at the door. A telegram had just arrived, giving all the information about the star. After reading the telegram and thinking a moment a smile broke out on the governor's face. "Of course," he said out loud, "we can use this star as a symbol of Texas. We'll call Texas the Lone Star State. Quick, bring the star here to Austin. Pay any price, but get it here."

When Sandy was presented with the governor's proposition, she was very hard to convince that Sparkie would be perfectly safe. Finally she gave permission to take the star to Austin. But, when they tried to take Sparkie away, he wouldn't budge. That is, he wouldn't budge unless Sandy was with him, and Sandy wouldn't go with out her grandfather. So finally all three went to live in Austin. Sparkie was put in the museum. Every day Sandy went to see Sparkie and to polish him, as she had done at the cabin. Be sure to go to Austin to see Sandy and her grandfather. Oh yes, be sure to see Sparkie the Lone Star. Carolyn Clement, Author

The urge to build cities is elemental. It is one of the oldest instincts of man, and it has persisted thru the ages. Chambers of Commerce are organized primarily to give expressions to that instinct. Wide and varied as their activities are, their first build the city by increasing its and foremost function is to build the city by increasing its population, wealth, and standard of living.

Although of European origin, the modern chamber of commerce is essentially an American institution. Its development and success in this country are solidly based on the fact that it fills an important place in our institutional structure. In a real sense, the chamber is an epitome of the free enterprise system. It incarnates the American idea of progress and growth. It provides the agency thru which men may voluntarily pool their energies to accomplish collectively those things for the general welfare that no individual can do alone. And it affords a means for the development and expression of business opinion.

Chambers of Commerce are basically local institutions. They embody, as no other agency, the urge for community progress. Their genius lies in organizing and directing the energies of those men in every community who believe that their city has a place in the sun and are determined to find that place. Chambers of commerce must necessarily have widely varied programs to serve the diversity of interests among their membership. But the prime purpose of the chamber is, and must always continue to be, the original objective of building the commerce and industry of the community.

To achieve that objective the chamber has two principal fields of activity:

1. Increasing the wealth and prosperity of the community by facilitating the growth of existing business and fostering new ones.
2. Employing the wealth thus created in establishing and improving the civic, educational and cultural facilities of the community in order to attract more business and industry.
