SHEPPARD-BURK SCHOOLS OPENED MONDAY, JAN. 4th

The new Elementary School, adjacent to the Capehart Housing Project has been opened for classroom instruction and all rooms filled. The twelve new rooms house only 75% of the pupils living in the Housing Project. The fourth and fifth grades are still attending school in temporary quarters on Sheppard Air Force Base.

Sheppard - Burk School To Expand

The Burkburnett School District has been notified by Sen ators Lyndon B. Johnson, Ralph Yarbrough and Congressman pard Air Force Base.

The new building was completed a month ahead of schedule and was accepted by the Burkburnett Board of Education during the Chair of Education during the Cha ing the Christmas holidays. The school furniture was moved to the new building immediately and made ready for classes Jan.

The building was designed by Architect James R. Killebrew of Wichita Falls, and carries some of the more recent trends in school construction. The over hanging roof eliminates shades and blinds. The hall walls are multicolored ceramic tile that

Ways Of Protecting Public In Strikes

The best way to prevent paralyzing industry-wide strikes would be to "decentralize" collective bargaining, Stanley C. Hope, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, asserts.

He told the Detroit Economic Club that this remedy would be "infinitely preferable" to giving the government a bigger hand in labor-management relations.

try that can shut down an entire American industry. Mr. Hope said. Through control of international unions, exempt from the anti trust laws, they have created monopolies over the labor sup- loudly to "full employment" are the ones doing the most to deply in most basic industries. They can tell an industry to "accept feat their own purpose. our terms or close down.

"We must not load the dice against labor unions in the exercise of their legitimate functions," Mr. Hope said. At the same time, he added, "we must come up with a solution which will protect the American people to accept one of two evils: a paralyzing strike or wage price inflation. We recommend collective bargaining between employers and representatives of their own employees, the NAM spokesman declared. In that way, the public interest cannot be vitally involved in any one strike or any one settlement. This might be the way out of a situation which has literally become intolerable.'

It's a way out which is consistent with individual freedom and infinitely preferable to having Washington, D. C. take over. Refering to the steel strike Mr. Hope said "it seems obvious to to me that the public's interest in a strike of this magnitude takes precedence over the interests of either management or unions.

Actually, when a monopolistic union in a basic industry lays its demands on the bargaining table, it's the consuming public which sits on the other side. I believe the public has at last begun to realize this. During the steel strike, there was almost no clamor among the people for management to meet the union demands and get the strike over with. In contrast to previous years, industry insistence on a mon-inflationary settlement appears to have been understood by the public, by the press and by government

A Bit Of Rusted Pipe

Out in a scarred patch of Southwest Texas prairie stands a bit of rusted pipe. A passer-by wouldn't give it a second glance. Yet it is an ironic monument to the colossal gambles men take in pursuit of oil annd gas.

The bit of pipe marks the site of the deepest hole in the world. The well below it was sunk almost five miles. The cost was $3 million and two years of time and toil. And what did the

The answer is nothing. Neither gas nor oil was struck. All the money, time and toil had been in vain.

This is the most spectacular dry hole in history, because of the magnitude of the operation. But there was nothing unusual about the failure. As Robert W. Stock explains in Petroleum Today, a dry hole is the rule, rather than the exception. Eight out of nine wells drilled in search of new oil and gas deposits don't pay off. Last year, 21,000 of these wells were abandoned, and the cost was $330 million in the United States alone.

Yet men take the long risks, and the reason they do is as simple as it is fundamental. They do it in the hope of making a big strike and earning a profit. Without that hope, no one would accept the gamble, and the nation would lose the new oil resources it so sorely needs. Thus, the bit of pipe symbolizes another thing, it mutely proves the need for incentives that lead men to take long chances, incentives such as the depletion allowance that helps to compensate for the fact that most wells are dry and that all wells ultimately wear out and must be replaced.

Why Coddle Commies?

It is just too bad about these American colleges and universities (12 of them at this writing and including Harvard and Yale) that have pulled away from Uncle Sam's new student loan program. It seems they are outraged over the requirement that a student borrowing Uncle's money must declare that he is not a

We might object to the loan program on the ground that this is none of Uncle's proper business and that in the land of the free and the home of the brave a young fellow, or girl, either, ought to have enough get-up and gumption to achieve an education without Government aid. But so long as we have it, the least we can do is to make sure this assistance goes to loyal young Americans and not to traitors.

Didn't these college people ever salute the flag when they went to school? "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the Republic for which it stands. Are those strange and fearsome words? Or do they think they are too corny for intellectuals? Or do they think the UN flag is prettier?

Not intentionally, of course. But whether a person intends to trip over his own feet doesn't ease his fall. Through constantly rising wage demands the unions are forcing the price of goods made by their members so high that they can't compete with foreign goods. American manufacturers must turn to automation to make their product more cheaply, or quit making the product.

Either way, employees are out of jobs. The government gets in its lick through taxes that drain off job-making capital, and through inflationary spending that destroys savings. There can be no jobs unless somebody saves enough money to buy the tools, plant and raw materials for employees to work with. Inflation means that more money must be saved to buy the needed equipment. High taxes leave less money to be saved. Thus the saving and investing process that creates jobs is severely crippled.

If our legislative and union leaders intend for "full employment" to be more than a political slogan, they had better take another look at their plans.

Night Circles Have Joint Meeting Tues.

The Alma Jackson circle and the Lois Hart circle met together Tuesday evening at the First Baptist church for their monthly missionary program. The meeting was opened by all singing Send the Light and was followed by prayer by Miss Bessie Mc-Knight. A short business meeting was conducted by Mrs. R. P. Thaxton.

The program was opened with devotional on God's Storehouse by Mrs. Myrtle Mabry. She closed the devotional thoughts with prayer for the giving of our tithes and offerings to the Lord. Others on the program were Mesdames A. B. Frields and R. P. Thaxton. A special prayer for our missionary work in Cuba by Mrs. Ralph Davis closed the
