The capricious thermometer at the First National Bank was repaired one cold day last winter, but has since registered 4 degrees above actual temperature. This was fine during cold weather. Now we would prefer 4 degrees wrong in the other direction.

Juanita's Flowers, a new business for Burkburnett, 311 Hayworth is the address. We wish the Willinghams every success with their flower shop. They will be having open house soon. Watch for it!

And another new business, Kelly's Donut Shop at 112 Ave. D, by Hardin Grade School. The wide variety of types and flavors of donuts makes selection delightfully difficult! Success to the Kelly's!

Since school has been out, some streets in Burk are running curb to curb with kids. Drive carefully.

Three Additional Water Wells Have Been Completed

City Manager Jess Whatley told the Star this week three new water wells have been completed on the recently acquired property of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Cooper.

Two of the wells are on a par of other producing wells. The third one is a little weak, but it is still taking gravel as the sand is jetted out and may come on up with the others.

The water system has not been taxed this year, due to frequent and plentiful rain, but the process of finding new sources of city water goes ahead for future use.

THE MINIMUM WAGE PROBLEM

In one of his recent newspaper columns, David Lawrence wrote of the dangers and problems that are apt to result from arbitrary increases in the federal minimum wage which is now set at $1.25 an hour.

For one thing, increases lead to demands for wage boosts by more highly-paid workers. In Mr. Lawrence's words, "... as one class of employees is given an increase, the class just above it feels it is entitled to something of the same kind. This is often referred to as 'bumping' the wage scales."

For another thing, upping the minimum may actually do the most damage to those it is designed to help. Of this, Mr. Lawrence says, "It can ... mean that those persons without skills who are not considered today to be worth more than $1.25 an hour would find it more difficult to get jobs because it might prove necessary for employers to hire better qualified persons at higher wages rather than to take chances with employees who are not really competent to do the work."

In sum, jacking up the minimum could set off a new wage-price spiral which would hit everyone in the country, and fall hardest on people of small means and lack of skills. And that, incidentally, would prevent the attainment of two avowed administration goals — increased employment, and the maintenance of a stable wage structure.

THE POVERTY PROBLEM

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States organized a Task Force on Economic Growth and Opportunity, consisting of more than 100 leaders in industry, business and finance, to make an independent, constructive examination of the poverty problem. Its first report has been issued and others will follow. The group fully recognizes that poverty is a very real issue in this country. It finds that its alleviation is a prime social and national goal. But it questions, and with every reason, if large-scale programs such as road construction and urban renewal can effectively combat poverty. And it recommends that priority be given to human resource development programs that "provide people with the help and opportunities to move out of poverty and become productive citizens."

This goes to the core of the problem. There are, of course, a number of totally dependent poor who for one reason or another—age, illness, disability—cannot help themselves. They must be given relief, and that is certainly a function of society. But, as the report emphasizes the poor who can be helped to help themselves can best be aided by such measures as education, training, rehabilitation and so on. In its words, simply to offer such people guaranteed incomes or similar welfare doles "is to write off their lives."

And, let it be remembered, the sound long-run solution to the poverty problem is to build our economy, thus creating more jobs, more wealth, more opportunity.

NOT GUILTY

U. S. News & World Report recently carried an extensive interview with Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor on a variety of matters affecting business. Some of the questions dealt with the balance of payments problem and possible solutions.

It is refreshing that the Secretary said that there is no plan for imposing a travel tax on Americans who go abroad, even though a program is in effect to encourage travel within this country. Then he was asked this question: "Does a person need to feel guilty about it, if he's planning to take a trip to Europe this summer?" Mr. Connor's answer: "Not at all. But if he decides he is going to take a trip, we have the additional suggestion that he use American-owned facilities to the extent possible, and that he keep down his purchases while abroad."

This is certainly a constructive and sensible position. The ever-increasing volume of travel between nations, which the jet age has made possible, is one of the instruments for promoting better international understanding. It brings us a little closer to a really peaceful world. To place roadblocks in the way of that would be to take a step backward.

Mr. Connor's suggestion that Americans going abroad use American facilities is also a sound one. Our international airlines, for instance, provide standards of service of the highest order, and at competitive rates. They have thoroughly earned our patronage.

WHERE RETAIL BUYING IS HEADED

With prosperity moving persistently into its fifth year, there is bound to be a lot of speculation as to how long business can maintain this upsurge. Tied in with this question and probably of the widest possible interest to the general public—is the length of time that retail buying can continue its climb to one new high after another.

Reflection Of Consumer Confidence

Thus far in the current upward cycle there have been no apparent signs of buyer resistance, no signals of hesitation at the retail level. Both light and durable consumer goods are turning over at an unprecedented pace and producers are still planning on output gains for an indefinite period. Hence, both consumer and producer psychology appear more optimistic than at any other time in the nation's peacetime economic history.

Vital to this attitude is the persistent advance in personal income of all types. Even the recent increases in taxes have failed to halt the upthrust in disposable personal income (after deduction of municipal, state and federal levies). On the basis of the 1957-59 average equalling 100, post-tax spendable funds rose from 130.6 during the first quarter of 1964 to 139.5 for the first quarter of this year. Personal savings showed a moderate gain for the same period, reflecting some lay-away thrift even with retail purchasing at the highest level ever.

Trend In Earnings Still Up

All of the major labor agreements of the past year have included only substantial fringe benefits—some of which mean delayed concessions—but also strong hikes in take home pay and salaries. Not only have immediate raises been provided, but usually multi-year pacts have guaranteed additional wage hikes for the following two or three individual years of the contract. Apprenticeship and post college starter pay rates are steadily pushing upward, particularly in many specialist lines that suffer from a sharp manpower shortage.

Large sums are pouring into family coffers from bank interest, rising stock dividends, and ever broadening government payments. There is also a growing number of families which have multiple incomes contributed by working wives, relatives, and older children. All such additional funds generate a stronger sense of security and raise the standard of living in a great many homes. Installment Buying Stimulated With such widespread prosperity, spurred on even more by the Administration's sizable outlays for The Great Society, people are not afraid to turn to installment credit for many articles too expensive for their immediate pocketbooks. With the 1957-59 average again equal to 100, it should be noted that installment purchases have soared from 149.1 in the first quarter of 1964 to 165.2 for the 1965 period. While such a climb smacks of overextension to more conservative observers, there is still the encouraging fact that installment repayments are holding at good heights.

For at least the remainder of this year and probably well into 1966, retail trade should continue to reach for new records. This is true for even the high-tag products like automobiles, kitchen appliances, furniture, color TV sets, and other semi-luxury and "status" items. Readers should realize that consumer purchasing is an economic factor slow to react seriously to depression or recession forces. So that, even if there should be a corrective setback in general business — stirred perhaps by foreign reverses and or uncertainty in the stock market—chances favor continued brisk consumer buying even during any early jitters in the business world.

In brief, retail buying thru

News From The County Agent!

Texas farmers and ranchmen were asked this spring to contribute additional funds to help finance the screwworm eradication program through July 1st. Their response, reported the Southwest Animal Health Foundation in late May, was overwhelming. Their contributions almost doubled the $300,000 requested.

Farmers and ranchmen in Wichita County participated in the fund drive and showed their appreciation for the outstanding results obtained under the program, said Dr. J. R. McKinney, chairman of the county screwworm eradication committee. County stockmen and sporsmen, he added, contributed $1,200 to the fund. Contributions were based upon 10 cents per animal unit.

The Wichita County Junior Vegetable Show will be held in the 4-H Barn on Saturday, June 26th. All vegetables are to be in by 9:00 a. m. The judging of the show will start at 9:30 a. m. Gordon R. Powell, Specialist in Fruits and Vegetables Marketing from A and M. University, will judge the show. The general public is invited to attend. The show is sponsored by the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce.

June is Dairy Month and a good time, says B. T. Haws, county agent, to take a look at how we stand. Texas ranks 10th in the nation in the number of milk cows on farms, 11th in the total pounds of milk produced but 38th in milk produced per cow. Also 9th in the production of ice cream, 24th in cheese production and 26th in butter production. Room for improvement, he says.

Analysis of available records indicate that summer freshening of cows generally have not produced as much milk as cows freshening during other seasons of the year, says county agent, B. T. Haws.

However, if a good summer feeding and management program is followed carefully, cows freshening during the summer will be given a much better opportunity to produce as well as their fall freshening herdmates.

High producing cows need considerable amounts of grain since they cannot consume enough green feed to maintain production at a high level. Haws says the "best feed buys" such as sorghum grain should be utilized since pasture and green chop are normally high in protein.

Pasture management is important. A reduction in forage from grazing will cause the cows to consume less feed and therefore, reduce production. The best pasture should be used for night grazing. Supplemental hay and or silage will help overcome the variability of available pasture or green chop feeds.

Some management practices are often taken for granted, says Haws. A good manager should provide plenty of fresh, cool water, provide shade—artificial if necessary—and provide fly control measures, following the recommended procedures.

A good feeding program should be followed year round. Challenge the fresh cows and feed the ones who have passed their lactation peak according to the amount they produce.

Feed and milk regularly. No matter how busy you are with other activities, remember that milk is your major source of income; therefore, the cows deserve the best possible care.

Coffee with Chicory Adds Zest

Is the next club meeting scheduled to be at your house? Or, perhaps the bazaar committee has to discuss final plans, or maybe the neighbors just get together on a warm afternoon for some informal chit-chat.

No matter the reason, next time the "girls" meet at your house, do something different. Instead of the inevitable hot coffee, serve a light, refreshing, coffee punch, made extra zesty by using coffee with chicory. As the sweet touch, try Chicory-Coffee Spice Cake as the punch's partner. The "dare to be different" refreshments will be a welcome change of pace, and even the most avid coffee lovers will rhapsodize over the subtle flavor of the cake and the coffee with chicory punch.

CHICORY-COFFEE SPICE CAKE

(Makes one 13 x 9 x 2-inch cake)

2 tablespoons instant coffee with chicory powder
 2 cups sifted confectioners sugar
 1/2 cup snipped raisins, optional
 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
 2 tablespoons hot water
 1 package (1 pound, 3 ounces) spice cake mix
 1 tablespoon light corn syrup

Mix 1 tablespoon coffee with chicory powder and raisins with dry cake mix; proceed to prepare cake according to package directions, using a 13 x 9 x 2-inch cake pan. Cool on cake rack. Mix together remaining coffee with chicory powder, sugar and cinnamon. Stir in water and syrup; frost cake. When frosting is set, cut in 24 rectangles. Serve with whipped cream, if desired.

COFFEE FIZZ PUNCH

(About 16 servings)

Coffee with chicory
 1 tablespoon anise seed
 1 three-inch stick cinnamon
 1/2 cup sugar
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 1 bottle (1 pint, 12 ounces) ginger ale

Brew coffee according to label directions to measure 1 quart strong coffee, adding anise and cinnamon to coffee with chicory. Stir sugar into hot coffee. Cool thoroughly. In punch bowl pour sweetened cold coffee, lemon juice and ginger ale over ice cubes. Garnish with lemon slices, if desired.

The Office Of John Tower

The senate did not accept our amendment to grant tax deductions for transport costs of those who travel to and from work. I am a co-sponsor of this proposal as a separate bill before the Senate, and I hope we can obtain action on it before this Congress ends. I believe this would be a tremendous help for our taxpayers, particularly now that the average worker must travel farther and farther to work.

The Senate did not accept an amendment that would have exempted farm vehicles from the 10 percent truck tax. And it did not accept an amendment that would have repealed the 10 percent tax on air travel. I voted for both these tax reductions, and I hope that in the future we will be successful in repealing them.

Under our bill, the 10 percent retail tax on jewelry and related articles, furs, cosmetics and other toilet articles, and luggage, handbags and other leather goods would be removed when the President signs the bill. The tax on automobiles would be reduced gradually to 1 percent. A portion of that one percent would be used to help clean up roadside automobile graveyards.

The bill now goes back to the House of Representatives for consideration of amendments enacted by the Senate. But I am confident it will become law in the very near future.

In other developments this week, I was happy to see the House Armed Services Committee report out a bill increasing the pay of our military personnel by about 10 percent. I have long supported adequate compensation for our military. It seems exceedingly strange to me that so little emphasis should be given to this subject, particularly now that we're coming to grips with International Communism's so-called "wars of Liberation." I should think that every bit as much attention should be paid this area of national concern as is paid to the war against poverty—a war, I might add, that has been going on since man decided that he wanted something better than he had.

I will support a meaningful military pay bill in the Senate. I am also pleased to note that Representative Olin Teague, a fellow Texan from Bryan, and chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, has announced that he has asked the Administration to prepare for hearings on benefits for our servicemen in Vietnam.

I am author of a bill in the Senate, S. 458, that would grant educational benefits to our fighting men in Vietnam, similar to the benefits provided for veterans of World War II and the Korean War. My bill has received widespread editorial support in Texas newspapers, I am happy to report, and with this kind of support I have high hopes the bill can be passed during this Congress. I certainly commend fellow Texan Teague for his comments on this vital subject in the House of Representatives.

Policyholder Questions Answered by the Institute of Life Insurance 277 Park Ave., N.Y., N.Y., 10017

Q. Our son, 15, has discussed life insurance a little in his social studies in school and he's at that age when exploration and adventure are high up in his thoughts. If you put these things together, you get a question like this: "Dad, if I decided to go to the moon, how would I get a life insurance policy? Would they insure me?"

A. Your son has a good lively curiosity, and maybe his class was talking about the early days in our country when there were travel restrictions written into policies for remote or dangerous parts of our land and many countries abroad.

As to his question, the life insurance companies have not taken any specific stand about their policyholders taking off for the moon and they have not written any "earth-only" clause into their policies. Actually, they have not been confronted with this problem to any significant degree yet, but they are following with interest the early space flights. The first astronauts do have some life insurance bought after their new assignment was announced. In addition, there is a special insurance arrangement under government (NASA) auspices.

Your boy's question is a good one; please let him know that the insurance companies are now standing by for the "countdown".

Q. I pay premiums on my $18,000 life insurance policies by the month and by the quarter-year, and am told that I could save money if I pay annually instead. Is this true?

A. Yes, you probably could save by putting all your policies on an annual premium basis. The saving might be $15 or more a year, even in your case to pay for a thousand dollars or more of additional insurance. Remember also that shifting to an annual premium basis does not mean that you would have to pay all your premium at once. If you could stagger payments on your policies at various times throughout the year you might use the annual premium without feeling too heavy a load at one time. You could see your agent about rearranging your premium payments.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

America in its early days depended on the "GOOD BOOK" for its guide in ethics, worship, and pursuit of freedom. These early gains are now in danger of falling and we need to turn all America once again to God and His word. America can be strong only when each individual looks to God for strength.
