Women Live Longer

The weaker sex, some of whom claim their lot a hard one, enjoy longer life spans than men—even discounting war, in which many men die.
 Insurance company statistics show women live many years longer than men on the average. The gap seems to be growing.
 Since there are already more women than men in most age brackets, and since they are living longer and longer (and thus already control most of the nation's wealth), it becomes obvious that a little more concern over men's health, in particular the stress of the American dollar rate on males, is in order.
 More relaxation and leisure, less fattening food and drink, and less tension and pressure, can add years to the lives of American men.

The Devalued Dollar

Whatever the temporary benefits achieved by the recent ten per cent devaluation of the dollar, and however necessary that devaluation, the people of the United States can find little consolation in the grim fact that their currency was forced to be reduced in value—in comparison to other currencies—for the second time in fifteen months.
 While it is true that U.S. exports will now sell cheaper abroad, and that exporting firms will thereby be benefitted, it's also true that every American will have to pay more for various imported goods from all over the world. And they will also pay more for everything each time they travel outside this country.
 In other words, while the balance of payments fight is helped by the devaluation and while that devaluation was probably necessary, Americans will pay more in many ways as a result. We are, in effect, paying now for the many years of balance of payments deficits, overseas spending, the war in Vietnam and vast foreign aid programs—for fiscal irresponsibility.
 Certainly this is not a record to be proud of, it is one which is now to cost every citizen more in everyday shopping and living. This unhappy reality should convince the majority of Americans to demand greater fiscal and spending responsibility from Congress in the future.

Motel Smoke

In the national capital one of the larger motel chains, Marriot, has decided to do something to properly accommodate non-smokers, who for decades have been forced to stay in rooms smelling of cigarette smoke.
 It has been announced certain floors are being thoroughly renovated, all draperies cleaned, bedding and smoke-smelling furniture changed or cleaned, ashtrays removed permanently, etc. These floors will be reserved for non-smokers.
 The Marriot decision is likely to be followed by similar policy changes at other motels. It is a further sign the nation is slowly coming to its senses concerning its dangerous and dirty tobacco addiction past.
 Further progress is needed on public travel conveyances, especially airliners, to protect non-smokers from foul air. Since the U.S. Public Health Service has now revealed that cigarette smoking is not only the cause of many killing diseases, but the killer of thousands of babies (because of cigarette smoking mothers), one wonders at the sight of so many continuing to puff away what could be their life—and welcomes Marriot's new policy.

On LSD

Recent research at the University of Illinois shows that use of the drug LSD seriously handicaps the body in its ability to recover from infection or disease. Doctors there found LSD prevents the body from producing antibodies which combat infections.
 One doctor says use of the drug shuts off completely the body's production of antibodies; thus those utilizing LSD render their bodies incapable of fighting off a number of diseases and infections, which could, in some cases, prove fatal.
 The discovery of this quality in LSD is important because some who have used the drug have claimed it to be harmless. That had been thought true up to now, to the extent that LSD was not thought to be physically harmful.
 But, of course, any drug

The POW's

The words of America's returning prisoners of war should be thought-provoking to all those revolutionaries and other assorted nuts who in recent years have been so loudly damning this country, its system, its institutions.
 Here are men who have been kept in cruel confinement for many years attesting to their solid faith in their country as truly the best to live in in all the world. Here are men who did not lose their faith, even when called upon to make an awful sacrifice for their country.
 Contrasted to the shrill voices of anger, hate and disruption, from youngsters and militants at home in recent years who refused to obey laws, jumped to juvenile conclusions because of faults or inequities in the American system, the voices of America's returning POW's are inspiring and reassuring—and put the draft dodgers and rabble-rousers to shame.
 No one has ever claimed the United States is a perfect country. But all it takes to bring most squawkers to their senses is a little time in some other country of the world, after which they can properly appreciate these United States of America.

which produces hallucinations, which take one out of the world of reality, is dangerous, in that it saps initiative, energy and industry—reducing the user to the pursuit of pleasure, sometimes irresponsibly so.
 To this danger, applicable both to LSD and marijuana, is now added the grim finding that LSD greatly weakens the body's resistance to infection and disease.

Heading Higher

When an aviator encounters a storm, he directs his plane through the clouds and goes higher. In that clear, rare atmosphere he is free from fear and difficulty.

Similarly, when we find ourselves surrounded by clouds of doubt, we need to direct our lives into a higher level where we may free ourselves of weaknesses and seek the will of God.

How can we attain these heights? Through the Church! It offers continuous opportunities for new growth, new life, new understanding. We need not wait for a more convenient time. We can enter into the life of the Church NOW.

WEEK
JAYTON

My wife and I were in Dallas the early part of the weekend. We drove down Thursday night in the snow, and drove back Saturday in 72 degree summer type weather.

There are thousands of acres of cotton in the area from Ralls to Stamford that are still in the field. The gins are certain to be ginning in April this year.

One good thing, the prices of cotton have been getting better, and farmers will get pretty good prices for cotton, even left in the field this late.

There are three topics of conversation these days. One--the weather. Two--the Nixon farm plan. Three--the Texas Tech Red Raiders. All seem to be unpredictable.

There is one thing I have always wondered about. Out in the country, between big towns, there are broad, wide open four lane roads. But when you get up close to the big cities, they funnel you down to two lanes. I never have figured this out, except its got to be poor planning on a state level.

From here to Fort Worth there is a lot of good road, but you get out of Jacksboro, heading into Fort Worth, and the two-lanes begin.

The best story I have heard in quite some time was told me the other day by a Lubbock man.

It seems this man had heard of the new process to quick freeze the human body--then leave it frozen for sometime, and thaw it out, and you are back normal again.

So the story goes, this Lubbock man had his body frozen, and was kept in cold storage for 30 years. Then in 2003 he was thawed out.

Things were different--a lot of tall buildings in downtown Lubbock--and no Texas Tech. Cars looked different, people looked different.

He was out in southwest Lubbock, and ran into an old white headed man, that he thought he recognized. So he approached him and said "Pardon me, I have been gone for 30 years, but I think I recognize you."

"Sure you know me" the man replied, "I am an engineer for the Highway Department. We hope to get Loop 289 finished this year."

KENT COUNTY STATE BANK MEMBER F.D.I.C.

LOANS AT LOW BANK RATES

As It Looks From Here

By Rep. Omar Burleson
Member of Congress, Texas

Washington, D. C. -- An age old problem faces democratic governments every where. It is the desire to inform their populations freely, while preserving from public disclosures legitimate secrets essential to national security in a nuclear-missile world.

Contradictions can never be completely eliminated. The British have been trying to resolve their dilemma in this regard for more than 60 years. Laws enacted in the early 1900's ban disclosure of information 'prejudicial to the safety or interest of the State' or possession of official documents by anyone who "has no right to retain it." They have found ridiculous and exasperating experiences with this provision in their law, such as, denying the press to mention the romances of King Edward VIII when the world knew about it.

Our own government has had limited success in attempts to bridge the gap between freedom of information and national security. The first amendment to the constitution prohibits any law abridging freedom of the press but in 1798 and in 1918 the Congress attempted to legislate against revealing what was officially deemed secret, calling it "sedition." There has always been a broad gray area between black and white in these efforts.

A new attempt is now under way in the Executive Branch seeking protective laws without withholding information which the public is entitled to have. An inter-agency committee, composed of the Department of Defense, Department of State, Department of Justice, the White House, the Atomic Energy Commission, the Central Intelligence Agency, and National Security Agencies, are seeking to agree on legal provisions. It is a very complex legal reform which is expected to be submitted to the Congress for consideration. No doubt it will be highly controversial and debate will be long.

From indications it appears that the legal minds will favor (1) less official information classified (2) insist on swifter declassification procedures (3) create an administrative setup to deal with violations.

Administrations, past and present, have been and are touchy about relations with the news media and are sensitive to accusations of curbing news flow. At the same time it is admitted that the habit of classifying official documents is too often abused. Bureaucrats afraid of making a mistake find it easier to stamp a document "classified," "secret," and "top secret," some of which are not more deserving of classification than would be a newspaper itself which may report the contents of such a document.

Only recently the Attorney General said that our laws are often taken advantage of by public officials to conceal mistakes.

It is necessary to define more precisely the areas of real security, but in accordance with the First Amendment which safeguards a free press.

Congress will have a difficult time in deciding what is properly determined "secret" in the interest of National security and what should be public information. In this time of bugging devices, tape recorders, instant copying machines, it is harder to insure against improper leakage of information but the first step is to make meaningful the term "classified."

Careful judgment must be finally exercised to lean neither towards excessive restrictions nor towards total license that could destroy freedom's capacity to defend itself.

NEW BILL OFFERED

A bill involving Predator Animal Control with the use of aircraft in Baylor, Foard, Wilbarger, Knox, Cottle, King, Dickens and Stonewall counties was introduced in the Texas Senate Wednesday morning by Vernon Senator, Jack Hightower. In addition, Senator Hightower introduced seven other bills involving bail denial, admissibility of evidence in receiving stolen property cases, and licensing and bonding as related to motor fuels.

The proposed predator law authorizes the park and wildlife department to issue permits for predator animal control by the use of aircraft in the eight named counties. The department will issue permits only when they find the action necessary to protect or to aid in the protection or administration of land, water, wildlife, livestock, domesticated animals, crops, or human life. Birds or fowl are not included as predators under the proposed law.

A joint resolution amending the State Constitution to permit the legislature to set the laws and rules governing the release or detention of prisoners awaiting trial or appeal was filed with two other bills in a comprehensive effort to lessen the number of crimes committed by criminals out on bond while awaiting appeal or trial. Senate bill 244 by Hightower increases and names the offenses for which bail can be denied. Also filed by Hightower was a proposed law to aid, by broadening admissibility of evidence, in prosecution of persons accused of receiving stolen property.

The three bills involving the licensing, bonding and the issuance of tax permits were filed by Hightower at the request of the Comptroller's office.

could not reasonably have been prevented. Nor are they liable, even though negligent, if the injury to the outside citizen was not reasonably foreseeable. Thus:

Another escaping prisoner, commandeering a passing automobile, caused the driver to suffer a fatal heart attack. But in this case the prisoner had a good record, with nothing to forewarn officials that he could be dangerous if he got loose.

Accordingly, when the victim's family filed suit for damages, the court turned them down.

What if an escapee steals a car and then, driving recklessly, knocks down an innocent pedestrian?

In such circumstances, courts have generally rejected the victim's claim for damages, even though prison officials were to blame for the escape. Reason: al-fore, the government is to blame for my being shot."

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Prisoner at Large!

Security was so lax at a state penitentiary that prisoners could get whiskey, drugs, and even guns without too much trouble. One night a hardened criminal stole a gun and made good his escape. He was recaptured within a few hours, but not until he had invaded a nearby home and shot a housewife in the leg. In due course, she demanded damages from the state. "They run that jail too carelessly," she charged in court. "Escapes are common. Furthermore, they knew that this particular criminal was dangerous. Therefore, the government is to blame for my being shot."

The court agreed, and the woman won a substantial verdict. Injuries inflicted by escaped prisoners are leading to a growing number of damage claims against either prison officials or the state itself. The law says penal institutions must be run with fair regard for the safety of those outside the walls. Nevertheless, the authorities are not to blame if the escapee

Farm Bureau And Food Price

Waco--(Spl)--The president of the Texas Farm Bureau said farmers are afraid that "misguided public concern" over food prices will lead to a price freeze on raw agricultural products.

J.T. (Red) Woodson made the comment in reference to a news report that retail food prices have made the greatest one-month increase in 20 to 25 years.

He warned that price controls would result in scarcities instead of benefiting the consumer.

"We cannot produce food unless we make a profit which will permit us to stay in business," the head of the 137,000-member general farm organization said. "Consumers must realize that prices farmers received over the past 20 years have gone up only about 12 percent while farm production costs have soared to ten times that."

The farm leader said that, despite publicity over food price increases, food is still a bargain.

"I know it's hard to believe, but right now food takes a smaller share of the family's take-home dollar than ever before in history-- only about 16 percent, as compared to 24 percent some 25 years ago."

Woodson said this bargain in food is a result of both rising consumer incomes and increased efficiency on the farm.

"We are geared to full production in agriculture," he said. "We believe that the public won't permit a price freeze to stroy the most efficient agriculture in the world."

He said that the Farm Bureau, which has more than two million members nationally, would continue its effort to place price controls on raw farm products.
