There is always a Power struggle between the President and the Congress. One of the greatest in the history of the nation is now going on between President Nixon and Congress, particularly the Senate. Senators charge Nixon with passing the Senate's right to make treaties, by making private agreement based. In point are his recent agreements with Peking, China, and with Russia. Also, Nixon and the Congress are at extreme odds over Nixon holding up, and refusing to spend money appropriated by the Congress. On a nation wide news program Monday night it was even suggested that Congress might consider impeachment procedures against Nixon, if he continued to refuse to implement laws passed by Congress. Also, in an all-out battle, Nixon refuses to let any of his aides go before Congressional committees to testify. It may end in a law suit, going before the Supreme Court. Nixon seems to want this. He seems to think with the recent makeup of the court, he could come out the victor. If you are a student of politics, you will watch with interest this play for power among the nation's politicians. In the Texas Legislature, it seems the lawmakers, more than half of them in their first term, are doing little more than filling time. Newsmen have asked for a shield bill to enable them to protect the identity of people who give them information. Such a bill has been introduced, but there are no hopes of any good law passing. In a confrontation over the weekend between newsmen told the legislature "Give us a shield law, or don't bother with it." The same has happened to the ethics bills that have been introduced. Rippling amendments have been added to such an extent that sponsors have turned around and voted against them. Many of the lawmakers want people back home to look they are for new laws to clean up the public image of the Legislature, but when they get right down to it, they don't want such laws, and will see, no way or another they are not passed. A lot of Texans agree with the new governor, that he would like to see the legislature do their thing, but without writing any new laws. This would be a miracle. Of course some pet projects would have to be trimmed. But Texas taxpayers could stand a session like this. These sentences were taken from actual letters asking for support from the Public Department.

I am forwarding my marriage certificate and six children. I had seven but one died which was baptized on a half sheet of paper. Mrs. Jones has not had any clothes for 4 years and been visited regularly by the clergy. I am glad to report that my husband who is missing is dead. I am forwarding my marriage certificate and my three children, one of which is a mistake as you can see. Unless I get my husbands money pretty soon, I will be forced to live an immortal life. You have changed my little boy to a girl. Will this make any differences? In accordance with your instructions I have given birth to twins in that enclosed envelope. I want my money as quick as I can get it. I have been in bed with the doctor for two weeks and he doesn't do me any good. If things don't improve, I will have to send for another doctor. In answer to your letter, I have given birth to a boy weighing ten pounds.

Learn to make next week. For these, they will need fabric or wallpaper for covering them. If you have anything to donate to this project call Nikki Phillips or Rondal Nauert. The boys will be selling tickets to the Scout-O-Rama in the near future. The local scouts get 1/3 of all the money collected, and the rest goes to the area office. Please support the Scouts and buy a ticket; they are tax deductible.

Visit Smiths Mr. and Mrs. Leo Meador of Hobbs, N. M. visited with Mr. and Mrs. Louis Smith over the past week end. Visit Parents Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Allen SoRelle of Springlake visited with Mr. and Mrs. Purvis SoRelle and Mr. and Mrs. John Cave this past week end. ### FACTS ABOUT THE NEED FOR VITAMIN E

Roberta E. Stanaland Contrary to advertisements, there's little foundation for claiming vitamin E a miracle cure-all, one authority said this week. "Although this nutrient is essential for good health, it isn't everything it's promoted as being," Karen Kreipke, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University, contended. Studies and clinical trials fail to link vitamin E with curing heart disease, cystic fibrosis, blood disorders, leg ulcers, diabetes and miscarriages, she emphasized. Actually, very little is known about the vitamin. It functions in the body as an antioxidant and helps red blood cells live as long as they should. "Small amounts of the vitamin are stored in various body organs, muscle and fat tissues. A fat-soluble vitamin, it requires presence of fat and bile salts for absorption. There's little chance that a person eating a well-balanced diet will lack vitamin E since most common food contain modest amounts," Miss Kreipke added. "Estimated adult daily requirement is 25-30 International Units—the average U. S. diet furnishes 2-6 I. U. daily. Best food sources are leafy vegetables, whole-grain food products and fats—especially vegetable oils," the specialist concluded. IN GRAHAM Oleta Moore visited in Graham over the week end.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Then and Now On July 25, 1904 a caravan of 15 motor cars left the palatial mansion of Cornelius Vanderbilt at 5th ave., New York, City. The cars were a one cylinder eight horse Oldsmobile, an 8 1/2 horse Cadillac and the others were a White Steamer, a Hanes Aperson, Franklin, Yale, Elmore, Peerless, Buck Mobile, Pope Toledo and a Pope Hartford. Four cars reached St. Louis without mishap. Hess led the procession. They left New York on Monday and arrived in Chicago on Friday, and laid over the until Monday for rest and repairs and then resumed the journey for St. Louis at least some of them did. While passing through Illinois, Hess who was in the lead, passes a farmer who was driving a pair of mules to a wagon. His 200 pound wife was by his side. The mules ran the wagon in a ditch and threw the lady on her head in the ditch, and Hess drove merrily on. Well, at that time they had a law in Idaho that read that any one approaching a town driving a horseless carriage must find a telephone and call the town marshal who would notify the people to look after their horses. Those old one or two-cylinder cars with out mufflers could be heard for half a mile and were a terror on the highway. I remember them well. Peace, health and prosperity to all. Adolphus Moreland

As It Looks From Here

By Rep. Omar Burleson
Member of Congress, Texas

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Opponents of the 1968 gun control law had a slogan saying, "Guns don't kill people -- people kill people."

The truth in that line is now pretty obvious. In spite of the law governing gun registration and transportation across State lines--in spite of sizeable Federal funds to upgrade local law enforcement--in spite of additional law enforcement officers in many places, crime is still rampant. It is true that some categories of major crimes have shown a decline in the last two reports. Crimes committed with firearms continue to be a major concern. This situation gives rise to arguments on both sides of the question on gun control. The more criminal acts committed with firearms, the more the anti-gun proponents claim the need for more control, even to the point of some wanting to deny every citizen the right to own a gun. The other side is that we have the requirement for registration of certain types of guns, which has shown no improvement in the rate of crime in which guns are used.

Each instance of heinous crime gives impetus to the gun controllers. Immediately after the vicious shooting of Senator Stennis of Mississippi, newspaper editorials appeared in many city papers advocating more gun laws and more legislation was introduced in the Congress for this purpose. In a robbery in Washington, D.C., this past week, the robbers shot five people and pistol whipped others for no cause other than to demonstrate their viciousness.

A simple fact is seemingly overlooked by those who think that firearms can simply be eliminated. This is that firearms can be home produced without any great ingenuity. The criminal is going to have possession of guns while law-abiding citizens would not be permitted to own one under some legislative proposals. The police recently warned people to lower their radio antenna when parking their automobiles on the street. This is because hoodlums can come by and with little effort, break off the antenna which can be used to fashion into a firearm. This is how easy it is to make a weapon and it will never be difficult for the criminal to find even easier ways to acquire a gun. Just as liquor was provided in prohibition and narcotics are provided today by organized crime, so would organized crime find guns for anyone who could pay the price while legitimate owners were denied the right of private possession.

The president sent a pretty rough anti-crime bill to the congress last week. Many of you probably heard his radio announcement. The recommendations emphasized deterrents to crime, including the restoration of the death penalty for certain Federal offenses. Probably no stronger language has been used on the subject than that contained in the message.

It is time we observe what is going on around us and go after the criminal and not the gun. All too often the law violator who has been apprehended in crimes of violence with firearms are returned to the streets, either under a light bond, probation, or parole after serving a brief time in prison. The number of repeaters is appalling. Those who contend that punishment of crime is not a deterrent indulge in strange reasoning. The individual who carries a gun during commission of a felony does so with absolute premeditation and with a willingness to use it to kill.

Crimes committed with guns in those states which have stringent gun regulations for some years are no different from those which have no laws. Advocates of gun licensing and the prohibition of private ownership of guns say that if one city, such as New York City, is ineffective it is because surrounding areas have no laws. Apply this same argument to London, England where the strictest regulations are known and we find the city is now facing a truly alarming increase in crimes committed with firearms. Ireland, a nation with years of strict gun controls, has managed to acquire enough weapons to carry on a civil war. There is no way firearms can be eliminated but the fear of severe punishment can eliminate at least some of the criminals who use them.

America is a land of bells!
Wedding bells, door bells, dinner bells, school bells, sleigh bells . . . all speak of a country where freedom from tyranny exists.

Chimes also keynote freedom of speech as commentators broadcast the news. Typewriter bells ring out freedom of the press. And church bells, whether they be the musical chimes from a cathedral's spire, or the ding dong from the steeple of a village chapel, typify freedom of religion.

Churches throughout the land are open to all. Inside their doors, we cast aside worry that shackles our hearts in this atomic age. We find strength and courage to face the unknown future. Our faith, hope and trust in God, who says, "Fear not; for I am with thee," is renewed and peace fills our anxious souls.

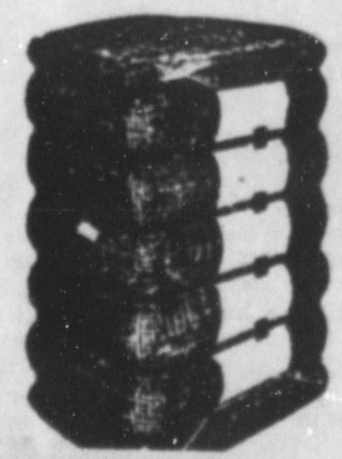

Let us accept the invitation of the bells to "Come and worship," and go to church regularly.

Much Ado

The recent wife-swapping arrangement of two Yankee baseball players made headlines because it's unusual, they're stars, it was kept secret for some time—and because one of the wives had second thoughts.

Chances of two couples successfully rearranging their lives by swapping wives are slim, if only because of the mathematics involved. More than half the marriages consummated today are said to be mismatches or unhappy matches—and more than one in three ends in divorce or annulment.

Trying to place one's mate with the mate of someone with whom one has fallen in love greatly compounds these odds. And though this is a private matter, about which too much has already been written, it can be said that the pitchers involved had a better chance to win twenty games than to pull this one off.

Medical Care

According to public opinion polls most Americans have come to the conclusion federal health insurance is desirable if not necessary to provide the standard of health care U.S. citizens wish to enjoy.

The shift in public sentiment has been steady over the past twenty years, brought on in part by high doctors' bills, high hospital bills, a shortage of doctors and ever-rising costs of private health insurance.

There's no longer a situation in which one major party favors federal participation and the other favors private insurance. Both Democrats and Republicans now agree a federal program is desired. In general, more Democrats favor a massive and expensive federal program which would care for citizens in more ways and more Republicans favor a proposal sponsored by the White House which would lean heavily on private insurance programs plus a new government program.

What is certain is that it is no longer permissible in the richest nation in the world that either the elderly or the poor be wiped out financially by sickness and disease. Nor is it permissible that any citizen not receive vitally needed dental or health care. Too many other democratic countries have been providing such services too many years for Americans to go without any longer.

The 93rd Congress should decide what program fits the nation best at this time, which program the nation can afford, and enact it. Every citizen who wishes to express his or her view should write his or her Congressman or Senators, or all three.

TV Commercials And Children

An organization called Action For Children's Television (of Newtonville, Massachusetts) has asked the Federal Trade Commission to ban all television advertising of edible products aimed at children.

Peggy Charren, of ACT, appeared before the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition, asking the committee to halt the constant stress in television commercials aimed at children on over-sugared foods.

Other critics have called for a tax on all such commercials, to pay for production of public interest commercials to counter the claims in cereal and candy commercials. But little progress has been made in this effort in recent years; Robert Choate, of the Council on Children, Media and Advertising, says he has failed in four years of effort to change television ads for foods.

As is the case with excessive television violence, complaints are almost constant and yet little is done to protect the public. The power of money, and profits, is all too great.

Trailer Houses

It's time all states enact legislation requiring trailer homes built not to travel but to be located permanently on lots meet building code requirements in their communities.

The trailer boom has been in progress now for two decades and one need not look hard or far to see trailer camps which threaten to become slum areas twenty years hence, or sooner, since some of the trailers are too flimsily constructed and most fail to meet home building standards for conventional houses.

Common sense dictates that if trailer homes, or two of them combined, are to be used primarily as conventional homes, they should come under the jurisdiction of normal building codes, not the state highway departments of the various states. Some states have moved in this direction but many have not and the longer the delay the greater the slum potential in the future.

NEWS REPORT FROM WASHINGTON

Chiles' Sunshine-Roth's Bid-Change In House-Lesser Change In Senate-

WASHINGTON, D.C.--One of the ironic stories of the past few months is the success of a freshman Senator in changing the rules of the House! To a lesser extent, his efforts were translated into changes in the rules of the Senate also.

Last August Senator Lawton Chiles (D-Fla) introduced legislation which would open all hearings, except super-sensitive defense discussions and similar sessions, to the public. He called his proposed legislation a sunshine bill; it would let sunshine into closed hearings, that is, the public.

On the House side Congressman Dante Fascell (D-Fla) picked up the ball and introduced similar legislation. Many others joined, and not long ago the House changed its rules, widely liberalizing its rules on closed committee sessions. Few committee sessions in the lower body, as a result, are to be closed.

But the Senate, slower to change, recently voted down the so-called Roth bill, which was, in effect, the Chiles bill. Roth is a Delaware Republican.

Had it not been for the fact that the Senate Rules

Committee voted to liberalize its policy on closed hearings--though not as much as Chiles proposed--just prior to the vote, it likely would have carried. Roth was actually trying to amend the Rules Committee's limited liberalization by substituting the Chiles idea; the vote was 47-38 against him.

Thus the freshman Senator, by focusing attention on the closed hearings issue, started action which eventually resulted in a major change in the rules of the lower body and a lesser change in the rules of the Senate.

There's plenty of unhappiness and dissatisfaction with Earl Butz, the Secretary of Agriculture, on Capitol Hill. While food prices soar, Butz goes on television and angrily complains farmers aren't getting the increase.

By dodging the issue in this pose as a defender of the farmer, Butz does nothing to help the farmer and consumer--which is what he should be concentrating on. In the opinion of many solons on both sides of the Hill.

The impression is growing rapidly that those who opposed Butz (the college professor who was said to be a friend of the big corporate farming interests and combines) during confirmation hearings were right.

Microwaves

The magazine Consumer Reports reported recently that all fifteen models of microwave ovens it had tested leaked radiation; the public was advised not to buy any of them by the magazine.

The publication said current radiation standards set by the Federal Bureau of Radiation Health are inadequate. It said the ovens could leak radiation through the glass window particularly and through the door, and can leak increasingly as they grow older.

Since danger from radiation is cumulative and may appear only after a period of exposure, readers should be forewarned of the Consumer Report warning.

START EARLY WITH SNAPDRAGONS

For a lovely display of snapdragons beginning in May, seed must be sown early indoors to get foot-high plants for transplanting to the garden after danger of frost.

For a magnificent display of snapdragons the most important rule is "start seed early." In most areas that means eight weeks ahead of the last frost date in order to have good-size plants to transfer into your garden by early May.

Snapdragon seed is tiny, and a packet will produce hundreds of plants. Sensational in the garden, they are even more beautiful indoors as a tapering cut flower for graceful flower arrangements.

In recent years, hybridizing has produced some spectacular new varieties. Tallest of all are the Rockets. They are vigorous and produce long spikes up to 3 ft. tall with as many as 100 flowers and buds on a single stem.

Even newer forms of snapdragons are the Butterfly and Bellflower varieties. These have flared wide-open throats instead of the tight-lipped flowers more common among snapdragons. They look especially lovely in flower arrangements.

Finally, there are dwarf bedding snapdragons. These are fine for creating a low-growing "carpet of color" in a garden landscape.

By R. B. (Mac) McALLISTER Member the Texas Legislature

Whispers: A $50 million dollar industry in Texas told state officials this week that they will leave the state if vocational-technical training facilities aren't available within 60 days to train personnel for this industry. It's a hurry-up piece of legislation to get these facilities and I'll be pushing it even though at this point I'm not at liberty to tell the House the name of the company or the nature of the industry--it's that much of a risk as to whether they're going to go or stay.

The governor and I don't agree on the need/non need for new taxes this year. I say we do and he says we don't. If the state is going to continue to grow and keep its pace with the other states, obviously we're going to have new taxes--if nothing else just to make up for the cutbacks in federal funds. Here's what I think: A jet fuel tax, just 5¢ on every gallon, might be the opportunity to find a source of revenue to aid the municipal airports in their tremendous operating expenses. A bill to this effect was passed by the House in the 62nd session but didn't get through the Senate.

I read you loud and clear. Extra educational incentive pay for policemen and firemen was the subject of a petition I received from several hundred policemen and firemen in Lubbock. My House Bill 1091, if passed, will give a town's governing body means to provide for classification of all firemen and policemen, with extra bonus pay to take college level courses. Working hours and the minimum pay scale for these two professions at the present time aren't anything to get too excited about. I'm hoping that the educational pay incentive will encourage more people to seek a career in these two professions and help those already in the profession to advance in their chosen field.

Rarely does anyone take the trouble to thank anyone for anything.

RIGHTS 'N WRONGS Son's fiancee is introduced

By RIV TOBIN Copley News Service

Dear Mrs. Tobin: I am making plans for a tea to introduce my son's fiancee to other women in the community. I have asked her mother to receive with the two of us. What order should we use for the receiving line? -- Elsie

Dear Elsie: You should head the line with your future daughter-in-law on your left, followed by her mother. In this way you can introduce the young woman to all the guests and she in turn will introduce them to her mother.

Dear Mrs. Tobin: Is it proper to wear any color other than black to a funeral? I had in mind a navy blue or dark chocolate brown as permissible. I have seen women in dark green, gray or deep maroon and wondered what is correct. -- Mrs. C. B. H.

Dear Mrs. C. B. H.: Today's etiquette deems the style more important than the color. During the heat of summer a white linen dress with sleeves (even cap) would be more appropriate than a backless black crepe. Many women do not have a black dress in their wardrobe and it certainly isn't necessary to buy one for the occasion.

Dear Mrs. Tobin: I have often seen questions in your column from non-Jewish readers asking if it is proper to send holiday greetings to their Jewish friends. Your answer has always been in the affirmative, so I would assume that it would be equally proper for me, a Jew, to send Easter greetings to my Gentile friends. Am I right? -- Esther K.

Dear Esther: Yes, but your message should not carry a religious theme. Select that herald the coming spring.

Dear Mrs. Tobin: What do you think of Hot Pants? -- B.

Dear Mr. B.: I think pants are a great look, younger than 20-year-olds have slim, slim hips and it's going to take me a while to get used to seeing in elegant restaurants, dinners and receptions, but didn't believe television here to stay.

MAN AND MEDICINE

More knowledge of dying needed

By IRWIN J. POLK, M. D.
Copley News Service

It's time to talk about dying. For a generation or more, the stress in this country has been on youth, looking young, dressing young, acting young. The youth cult has been a best seller in all spheres.

Medical science has aided this situation by lowering the death rate for infants and children, thereby enabling more babies than ever before to grow to adult life. The last 20 years have seen a population explosion which has increased the number of people in the country, at the same time lowering the average age of the population.

But there are indications now that the birthrate is slowing, that the birthrate must slow if mankind is to survive happily. With a decrease in the birthrate, the average age of the population will go up again. The problems of aging and dying will be ever more important.

There are lots of old people around now, although the kids don't seem to see them. Every tenth citizen of the United States now is 65 or older. There are 20 million people in this group, slightly more than half of them women.

Right now there is one person over 65 for every four people in the working age group of 20 to 65. This means that every group of four workers is providing the support for one person past retirement age. There is indeed a large group of people around over 65.

During the next 12 months, nearly two million Americans

Manipulated News

If there's a serious danger to the free press, it probably lies more in the threat from growing chain ownership and manipulated news than from the courts and the federal government. It's true federal authorities have attempted to curb claims of absolute freedom by the press, but this has been more of a power and policy war between the Nixon Administration and the Washington Post and New York Times, plus a leftist group of television newsmen in New York, than anything else.

Attempts to compel newsmen to testify may have been carried too far in some instances but newsmen cannot really enjoy absolute exemption from testifying in all cases. There are too many of them and all are not infallible, or even law-abiding Americans.

What disturbs some more than this overblown issue is the way certain newspapers, and television networks, slant the news. Newspapers such as the Washington Post and New York Times and others less powerful can do it by playing up statements, charges and testimony they want disseminated and playing down the other side. Those who say things the editors like might find themselves pictured on page one. And it's all perfectly legal.

During the Vietnam war, which certain newspapers opposed, peaceniks, draft-dodgers, deserters and others of similar vein were given prominent and sympathetic treatment in much of the press, and on television.

Television documentaries and news programs can so effectively select witnesses and statements to be stressed that almost any impression can be produced. And too many newspapers today, and too many television programs, are slanted by these processes.

This the public has detected and is the reason so many support President Nixon, and why curbs on the absolute freedom of reporters are currently evolving. The fault lies at least in part with those doing the slanting, thus demeaning the reputation for fairness of the media.

DRAFT VIOLATIONS

With the draft halted for the first time since 1947, something under 6,000 young men are under indictment for draft law violations according to the Selective Service. These figures do not include about 32,000 men listed as deserters.

OIL & PRICE CONTROL

The Nixon Administration has reimposed mandatory price controls on the country's 23 largest oil companies, covering crude oil, gasoline, heating oil, and other refinery products, but not natural gas.

What has become of the idea that everyone should be temperate in everything?

will die. Throughout the world, between 50 and 60 million will die next year. Considering the numbers of people who die each year, very little is known about death.

We know all about the diseases which cause death, but very little about the proper management of the death process itself. Death has psychological, social and even financial aspects which need careful study, for it is one of the two experiences in existence which everyone shares.

What about death, then? Where does it occur? About two-thirds of the deaths in the United States occur in institutions such as hospitals, nursing homes and the like.

This fact suggests several possibilities. At first glance it would seem that people have died because they were sent to an institution which was supposed to help them and failed.

A second possibility also exists, however: that people have been admitted to various institutions with diseases which could not be helped by medical techniques in any event, and succumbed in an institution rather than at home.

Since the cost of hospital care is staggeringly high and rising, one of the important questions to be answered is: Which patient should go to the hospital to die and which one would do better if left at home?

This in turn opens other questions. Who is to manage the patient at home if he remains there until his death? Or, for that matter, who manages the dying patient in the hospital: the nurses, the doctors, the clergy, friends, relatives, or all of these? How does one prepare a patient for death? Whose job is it if it can be done at all?

Rights of Unwed Father

Does an unwed father have any right to the custody of his child?

As a rule, in case of dispute, the law gives preference to the mother. Two arguments are generally cited in her favor:

- 1) that mother's love is a more powerful emotional tie than father's love; and
- 2) that the mother's kinship to the child is more certain than the father's.

But suppose the mother is out of the picture—perhaps uninterested in the child, perhaps unfit, perhaps dead. Then, may the unwed father insist on custody if he so chooses?

The question arises in conflicts with the mother's relatives or with a community agency. The tendency in recent years—perhaps reflecting greater attention to the role of the unwed father—has been for the courts to rule in his favor.

For example: In a custody fight between an unwed father and the maternal grandmother, the court awarded the child to the father. The court felt that, other things being equal, the closer relationship should make the difference.

Of course, the father himself may be disqualified by his own failings. In another case, an unwed father filed suit to gain custody of his two young daughters. They had been entrusted by their mother to her aunt.

However, the court decided that the children were better off where they were, with the aunt. The court pointed to evidence that, on several occasions, the father had been guilty of "cruelty and depravity"—hence, was not likely to provide a proper home for the girls.

As one judge put it: "The polar star for determining the custody of children is what serves the best interests of the children."
