Chronicle Sets Hike In Rate

In the 13 years the Jayton Chronicle has been under the present ownership and management, there has been no increase in the subscription rate, even though the price of everything that goes into the printing and mailing of the paper has greatly advanced. So, at this time it becomes necessary to raise subscription prices of the paper. Beginning July 1 this year, the rates will be changed. Price of mail subscription will be $4.00 in Kent and surrounding counties, and $5.00 per year, outside of this area.

This gives our subscribers more than a month to get in on the present rates, if they desire.

The Chronicle office is now open every afternoon Monday through Friday from 1 to 5 p.m. for those who would like to come in and renew. Or you can mail it in, either way.

Keep this in mind, the rates go up effective July 1. Thanks.

Cotton Problems Are Explained

An essential and united industry was pictured here Saturday in a presentation explaining the National Cotton Council's role in the U.S. cotton industry at a meeting of Farmer's Coop at Jayton.

Gary Setliff, field representative, said, "Cotton has its share of problems today, but the cotton industry also has a lot of plus factors. It is facing up to its problems in a strong, positive way. Its seven segments stand more united today than ever through the Cotton Council and there's good spirit on the team."

He said the Council is working to convince Americans how essential cotton is to the well-being of the whole country. A nationwide effort is aimed at generating a better understanding of cotton's important contributions in providing jobs, earning dollars in world trade, and curbing inflation.

Another example of cotton's benefits to the U.S. is its role in energy conservation. He said "Cotton requires in its production only a fifth as much energy per pound as synthetic fibers, which are products of petrochemicals."

Mr. Setliff said if cotton should be replaced by man-made fibers, the additional energy required by the replacement fibers would be enough to supply all the energy needs of a city of more than a million population. The story of cotton's contributions to the nation is based on facts developed by the Council's economic and market research service.

He also outlined the new Maid of Cotton program, which has been re-directed by the Council from fashion promotion to representing the cotton industry. He said the Maid of Cotton is just one part of the industry effort and told how the current Maid, Debra Ploch of Dallas, has visited President Nixon, Congressional leaders, and others to create good will for cotton.

Included in Miss Ploch's tour this year are visits to major civic organizations in such cities as Boston, Detroit, St. Louis, and Seattle, "where her goal is to make new friends for cotton among top leaders of business and industry."

The council also was a leader in forming the National Agricultural Institute, which is an association of all segments of agriculture. Through the Institute, farmers present the facts of farming to consumers about food prices and other public concerns.

And the Council also is the central organization the entire cotton industry depends on in Washington for legislative, administrative, and regulatory actions that affect cotton incomes and markets, Mr. Setliff added.

Senior Citizen Month Is Set

May is Senior Citizen month and special emphasis has been placed on their diet.

As a person grows older, his nutritional needs change, one authority pointed out.

"The senior citizen requires nutrients and food energy just like a younger person — but in different amounts," Karen Kreipke, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University, explained.

"When selecting foods during May — Senior Citizens Month — and throughout the year, the Daily Food Guide is beneficial. Choose foods from each of its four basic food groups — milk, fruits and vegetables, meat, and bread-cereal — for a balanced diet."

Senior citizens need two or more cups of milk daily — either as fluid milk or a combination of milk group foods — all kinds of milk, cheese and ice cream.

"An older person needs fewer calories in his diet. Knowing this, many could utilize skim, lowfat and buttermilk — which provide calcium to keep bones strong, yet are low in calories.

"Other calorie-wise choices include cottage cheese — lower in calories than either cheddar or cream cheeses — and ice milk, which has fewer calories but more calcium than ice cream.

"The fruit and vegetable group offers considerable variety for diets. Of four servings daily, utilize one which provides vitamin C and another which supplies vitamin A. The recommended serving is 1/2 cup or a usual portion.

"Cantaloupe, grapefruit, oranges, strawberries, watermelon, asparagus tips, broccoli, greens, potatoes cooked in their jackets and tomatoes are good sources of vitamin C.

"Vitamin A-rich foods include dark green or deep yellow fruits and vegetables — apricots, broccoli, cantaloupe, carrots, pumpkin, greens and sweet potatoes."

"As for meat group foods, senior citizens need two or more servings each day to provide protein for body repair. Meat, poultry, fish, eggs, dry pea or beans, nuts and peanut butter fill this requirement.

"One serving consists of two or three ounces of lean cooked meat, fish or poultry. Or, two eggs, one cup cooked dry beans or four tablespoons peanut butter.

"Less expensive meat cuts are just as nutritious as expensive ones," the specialist emphasized. "Either have such meats ground or cook in liquid to make them tender."

The final group consists of bread and cereals.

"Bread-cereal foods include all whole grain, enriched or restored breads, cooked and ready-to-eat cereal, cornmeal, grits, macaronies, noodles and rice.

"Count one slice of bread, one ounce ready-to-eat cereal, or one-half to three-fourths cup other cereal as one serving.

"For a low cost, nutritious, one-dish meal, combine a small amount of meat with cereal or pasta, plus vegetables.

"Overall, food adds to the joy of living. While working to promote good health and normal weight. A feeling of well-being helps a person meet each day rested, alert and ready for its challenges," the specialist concluded.

COLLEGE STATION —

That next steak you eat may be "rarer" than you think.

"Regardless of the way you like your steak cooked, you're getting a 'rare' commodity," emphasizes Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Why is steak, or all beef for that matter, so rare?

"It's a simple matter of time," points out the Texas A&M University specialist. "It takes about two-and-a-half years to produce a steak."

Uvacek explains it this way. A cow produces only one calf in 12 months. The calf is weaned at six months of age and turned to pasture for another four to six months. Then it goes to a feedlot for six months to be fattened on a high grain ration. Finally, at about 1,000 pounds of weight, the animal is sold to a packer for slaughter.

Well, at least that's a thousand pounds of beef, you say?

"Not by a long shot," Uvacek hastens to point out. "A lot of weight from the animal is lost in slaughtering and processing. A 1,000-pound animal produces only about 48 pounds of sirloin steaks."

A 1,000-pound steer that grades "choice" will produce about 600 pounds of carcass. Take away the fat, bone and waste and only about 444 pounds of edible beef remains.

The specialist is concerned that consumers today are not aware of the time and costs involved in beef production. "Increased production has made beef available to more consumers now than ever before. Back when only the wealthy could afford expensive cuts of beef, there was little concern over prices."

Memo's From Mac

By R. B. (Mac) McALLISTER
Member the Texas Legislature

TODAY'S THOUGHT:
The love of justice should be more than the fear of suffering injustice---
R. B. McAllister.

Doggie doctors and moo moo medicine men... The cattle and beef industry in West and North Texas has grown and with that growth has come problems. The animals need looking at from time to time and it's been recommended that Canyon, Texas be the site of a large animal diagnostic laboratory. I support his in the hope that it would be the beginning of the movement to give Texas a strong vet school. I want the House to set up an interim Study Committee to get the panoramic view of the whole situation. It looks like there are a lot of vets interested in the pet population, but not too many vet school grads are getting into cows. Take that and chew on it.

Let's hear it for cotton! Texas Tech got the 100 thou for their cotton research effort. West Texas can be truly grateful for the presence of Rep. Renal Rosson on the Conference Committee on Appropriations. He and Chairman Neil Caldwell made an excellent presentation for Texas Tech in securing the Committee approval of requested money. Final approval of the Appropriations Bill should take place in both Houses next week.

It's put to bed. House Bill 946 passed. The public school funding bill passed resoundingly Wednesday, May 17 after weeks of hassle and bustle. It's now pending before the Senate. My own feeling is that the chances of HB 946 passing both Houses and being signed by the Governor are slim. But then again, if it does pass, it can give Texas the most qualitative and economical educational system in America.

Profile: Rep. R a y Hutchinson. He's Republican from Dallas, first-termer and a fighter. He's already been made Chairman of the standing Subcommittee on Urban Affairs and that's fine with him since his main interest is the study of government control in the hands of the local folks.. in Dallas and elsewhere. He'll be stumping for a mass transit system in Dallas ( a bill for this is due a House vote next week) and says he's happy about his amendment giving city / county residents the right to vote on collective bargaining issues involving policemen and firemen. Look for him to very visible next year at the Constitutional Convention.

Regionalism resolution. Introduced today was a resolution calling for all West Texas institutions of higher learning to combine themselves under a regional concept. That includes, Texas Tech, Midwestern University, Angelo State University and Sul Ross. UT has already taken this step successfully and South Texas is considering. I like the idea and hope the rest of West Texas does too.

It wasn't told to me, I only heard it. . . Sid the spectator at the back of the Committee room "They tell me that McAllister is pretty smart, but he sure don't look it! Think he's from Amarillo." I sorta hope he was in error on at least two of the three observations.

"I'm never going to open another book again," sighed Pete as he collapsed in my chair following his high school commencement.

But three months later, Pete had changed tune and was ready for college.

Since then, he's had other graduations—college, from medical school. Each time Pete discovered that it isn't all over when you graduate. Something is just beginning.

Some people want to "graduate" from at a certain age or time. They're just like Pete was when he left high school. They think they've outgrown the Church.

How empty Pete's life would be now had he stopped at that first graduation. How empty your life would be without the Church.

Maybe it isn't all over for you! The doors are always open.

Little Cigars

Congressman Torbert Macdonald (D-Mass) believes small cigar commercials on television are contrary to the law banning cigarette advertising. Manufacturers of such commercials are legal because the little cigars are wrapped in brown paper, and are thus cigars. Macdonald thinks they are no like cigarettes than cars and that manufacturers are taking advantage of the loophole in the law against cigarette advertising to push the little cigars on television. They are, of course, as harmful as cigarettes if inhaled. Macdonald proposes further congressional action to ban such advertising; since small cigars are as bad for one's health as cigarettes if inhaled, and since so many inhale them, Macdonald's proposal is in the public interest—especially so in view of the obvious appeal to youth by small cigar advertising.

The good neighbor policy should be practiced by more people, as well as countries.

Upped Check

Martin bought a secondhand motorcycle from a friendly stranger, giving him a check for "eight hundred dollars." But when he got the check back from the bank at the end of the month, it had been upped to "thirty eight hundred dollars."

Martin decided that the bank had no right to take the extra $3,000 out of his account.

"It's not my fault the fellow was crooked," he argued in a court hearing. "Let the bank try to collect the difference from him."

But the bank pointed out that Martin had made three careless mistakes in writing the check:

1) he had failed to fill in the payee's name;

2) he had failed to fill in the numbers after the dollar sign; and

3) he had left more than an inch of open space in front of the word "eight"--plenty of room for inserting the word "thirty."

The court concluded that Martin, by his negligence, had invited the tampering--hence, would have to bear the loss himself.

Of course, as a general rule, a bank has no right to pay any more money out of your account than you have authorized. The bank, after all, has the best opportunity to detect fraud by examining a check before cashing it.

But the law will usually shift the loss to you if, by your carelessness, you have made the check easy to alter.

For example:

A man whose signature had been forged on a check had to absorb the loss himself because he neglected, for almost six months, to let the bank know what had happened.

A court said that by his procrastination, he had deprived the bank of a fair chance to track down the villain.
