Guy Arney Gets Outstanding Honor

Guy Arney has been chosen Outstanding Secondary Educator of America for 1973. Nominated by his principal earlier this year, he was selected for this honor on the basis of his professional and civic achievements.

Outstanding Secondary Educators of America is an annual awards program honoring distinguished men and women for their exceptional services, achievements and leadership in the field of secondary education.

These educators are now eligible to receive the Outstanding Secondary Educator of the Year Award Trophy. Five $500.00 unrestricted grants will be awarded to the schools represented by America's five Outstanding Secondary Educators. Distinguished judges, along with the Board of Advisors, will select the five individual secondary teachers to be honored. In this way, the program thanks the teacher and the school for their contributions to the continuing excellence of American education.

In announcing the award winners to the administrators, Dr. V. Gilbert Beers, Director of the Outstanding Secondary Educators of America program stated:

"The men and women chosen for this high honor have explored new paths, developed new insights and effectively communicated their knowledge to their students and colleagues. They are exceptional teachers."

Guidelines for selection include an educator's talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, civic service, and professional recognition.

As It Looks From Here

By Rep. Omar Burleson
Member of Congress, Texas

Washington, D. C. -- There is now some pretty good evidence that students in our schools are not hopeless slob, probably up to no good, and that trusting the fate of the Nation to their witless hands will be a final disastrous downfall.

A new world-wide study shows that American school students are right up there with the best of them. In spite of the fact classrooms are kept open for at least twelve years to all wanting to attend, elsewhere in the world they would have been shunted out at an early age.

The Director of the International Association for the Evaluation of Achievements, Dr. Torsten Husen of the University of Stockholm, has warned that the study might be a sort of "Intellectual Olympics" but nevertheless there is more than a grain of satisfaction in the study.

It embraced nineteen nations and revealed what has been noted before--that home atmosphere is more important than anything else in producing scholastic excellence. The report also referred, as very great influence. School efficiency does make a difference, according to the findings, in the quality of public school education. This is in contradiction to the conclusions reached by Harvard's Christopher Jencks who maintains that schools make little or no difference in, for instance, social inequality.

One might think then that these pruned "elitist" would swamp the American pupil in the later reaches of their scholastic training but it doesn't work out that way, according to the study. In the final overall comparison of the top groups' ability, the United States student out-classed all the restrictive systems' students. The United States' schools still had on our rolls some 14 per cent of what is called "lower class" starters who could still go on to better things because they hung in there and kept trying. This compares to only 1 per cent from such beginnings still in German schools.

It can be assumed that just about anything can be improved but in the process some things have been ruined. There are deficiencies, of course, in our secondary educational system and, while this study referred to may not be all gospel, it shows by comparison that our teachers, our school facilities, and the end product--the student--in fact the entire system deserves commendation.

THIS WEEK IN JAYTON

Quite often recently we read where the present scandal in the federal executive department, is compared to the Teapot Dome scandal. Very few people today know the details of the Dome scandal.

I did know that it happened in the Harding Administration, but did not know the details, Well, Henry J. Taylor in his syndicated column in the Lubbock Avalanche Journal Tuesday morning outlines the details of the Teapot Dome Scandal. If you are interested in national politics, and you didn't read it, go back and do so.

Taylor pointed out there was monkey business going on in the staff of the president, but it was the president that was working trying to get it out in the light, and after Harding's death Coolidge continued to work on it, and several, who at one time were thought to be innocent were convicted and sent to prison.

The point they are trying to prove in the Watergate, as much as anything else, is that the president is dragging his feet on getting to the truth, or, even worse, worked actively in the million dollar cover up of the Watergate.

A lot of people are tired of the Watergate investigation. I have been enjoying it, but admit it gets repetitious at times, with the same questions being asked over, and over again. Of course, they do have something in mind by this type of questioning.

You learn a lot about the public officials by the questions they are asking. Senator Ervin is a bible quoting humorist.

Perhaps the most impressive of all the Senators is Senator Baker, a Republican from Tennessee. He is smooth and thorough in his questioning. And is pressing a hard line for honesty in Government. Some informed observers think he is building a road, to ride upon, to get into the 1976 presidential race, which could well be true.

As more and more information comes out, which becomes very embarrassing for the committee to reelect the president, there will be more and more pressure put on to stop the hearings.

But of all things, pressure is a thing that U. S. page 3, please

Tommy Parker Gets Clark Foundation Scholarship

Gerry Thomas Parker, 1973 graduate of Jayton High School, has been selected to receive a $750 Clark Foundation Scholarship by the Texas Interscholastic League Foundation.

The Clark Foundation provided funds for 58 of the $750 grants to be awarded to outstanding 1973 Texas high school graduates. TILF administers the scholarship program.

Parker earned eligibility for the scholarship by participating in University Interscholastic League contests in Science, Number Sense and Spelling.

He competed in Science from 1970 through 1970, winning through to regional level in 1972 and 1973. In Number Sense he won through to regional in 1972 and to State Meet in 1973. He competed in Spelling for two years.

Salutatorian of his graduating class, Parker was a member of National Honor Society, Student Council and Library Club. He was senior class treasurer, Future Homemakers of America Beau and a class favorite.

He lettered in football for four years, making the

All-District team in 1972. He earned four letters in basketball and three in track.

"We are proud to have Gerry Parker as a Clark scholar," said R. J. Kidd, TILF secretary. "His wonderful record in school, both in his grades and in his extra curricular activities, prove that he has the talent, energy and determination to succeed in whatever field he may choose."

He plans to study general business at North Texas State University.

Farm Bureau To Dedicate New State Office Building In Waco

Secretary of Agriculture Earl Buttz will be in Waco on June 13 to help the Texas Farm Bureau celebrate the opening of its new $2.7 million building, according to an announcement by TFB President J. T. (Red) Woodson.

Buttz will speak at a barbecue dinner that evening climaxing dedication day activities. Other notables who will participate earlier that day in dedication ceremonies include Congressman W. R. (Bob) Poage of Waco, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee; Governor Dolph Briscoe; and Commissioner of Agriculture John C. White.

Governor Briscoe has signed a proclamation designating the week of June 10 as "Farm Bureau Week" in Texas.

Several major events are to take place during the week which will be highlighted by the dedication services and barbecue dinner June 13.

The dedication ceremony will get under way at 1:30 that day in front of the new building at 7420 Fish Pond Road. Governor Briscoe will deliver the dedication address, and he will be introduced by Commissioner White. Congressman Poage will welcome the assemblage to Central Texas.

The ceremony will also include the planting of a symbolic pecan tree, using soil from counties all over Texas, and the burial of a time capsule containing historic items.

Open House for Farm Bureau members and the general public to tour the building will be from 2:15 until 6 p.m. The barbecue dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the Waco Convention Center.

In his proclamation setting aside the special week, Governor Briscoe noted that the Texas Farm Bureau is the largest general farm organization in the state and said that for many years it has wielded "a strong influence in state affairs." He called the building "a monument to the efforts of countless dedicated members throughout the state to achieve effective representation for their industry and a better life for all Texans"

He added that the building "beautifully symbolizes the spirited growth and development of this organization and its place in the future of our state."

Several thousand Farm Bureau members and guests from throughout Texas are expected to be on hand for the dedication ceremony and dinner.

Other highlights of the week will include a conference of county Farm Bureau presidents on the afternoon of June 12 and morning of June 13, a banquet for Farm Bureau agents on the evening of June 12, and a meeting of Safemark servicing agents (Safemark is the brand name for tires and batteries distributed by Farm Bureau) on Thursday, June 14.

Better Learn the Lingo

If words like set-aside, allotments, production payments, and planting intentions sound like Greek to you, then maybe it's time you learned the language.

Think they only apply to farmers and not to you? Guess again. They have a direct bearing on the amount of food and fiber the nation's farmers produce each year and the price you pay for it.

The recent furor over rising food prices has dramatized—as perhaps nothing else could—the importance of a national farm program that gives our food and fiber producers the profit incentive to provide us with an ample supply. In the case of meat, we suddenly came to a point where demand exceeded supply and higher prices were the inevitable result.

Beef slaughtered for the market in January of this year, for example, was 8 percent higher than January of last year, but the demand for that beef was even higher.

Well, you might ask, isn't the farmer getting higher prices because of this increased demand?

An affirmative answer to that question has to be followed by a significant "but." Yes, the present high demand for farm products has driven farm prices up and economists say this should mean a substantial boost in cash receipts down on the farm this year. But, the irony of the situation is that this increase in farm prices is being accompanied by an even sharper rise in farm production expenses. As a result, the net income farmers derive from food and fiber production this year is not expected to be as high as it was last year.

Too bad, you say, but what does this have to do with me?

More than you think. Three-fourths of our food and fiber production is coming from less than 600,000 farmers who sell more than $20,000 worth of farm products a year. These farmers not only operate on extremely thin profit margins and have to gamble on weather and other risky elements, but many of them also carry a heavy debt load because of the great amount of capital required for today's modern farm efficiency.

Consequently, when inflation cuts into the farmer's net return—as it's doing now—it seriously threatens his very economic survival.

Last year, the number of farms in this country dropped by one percent and this year a further drop of 1.4 percent is indicated.

Perhaps this sounds like a small percentage, but think back to that "less than 600,000 farms" again.

Even if a small percentage of our highly efficient farmers are forced out of business or forced to cut back their farming investments, food and fiber supplies will drop and you the consumer will be faced with higher costs than ever.

That's why each of us—whether we live in a sprawling metropolis or a small rural community—has a vital interest in a thriving, prosperous agriculture.

Farm Land Use Declining By Million Acres A Year

Land used for food and fiber production in the U.S. is decreasing at a net rate of a million acres a year, but experts say it's no cause for alarm.

It's just another indicator of how much the American farmer is increasing his production efficiency.

From 1950 to 1970, land uses for crops decreased by more than 10 per cent while production per acre went up 50 per cent. During this same period, the nation's population climbed by one-third.

Agricultural economists say the big increase in food and fiber production stems from more efficient farm organization, improved machinery, increased use of fertilizers and pesticides, additives to livestock rations, improved crop and livestock species, more irrigation, and regional shifts in production.

Cotton farmers alone have freed almost 10 million acres of marginal cropland by doubling their production efficiency since World War II, notes the National Cotton Council.

If cotton yields had remained at the same level as they were 30 years ago, nearly twice as much land would be required to meet today's needs.

"This means that new cotton production technology has made a gift of almost 10 million acres of marginal cotton land to the U.S. for diversion to pastures, forests, or recreational uses," says Dr. John E. Hutchinson, Texas Agricultural Extension Service director. "And cotton is only one crop. This kind of yield increase is going on across nearly the whole spectrum of farm commodities."

A recently completed land and water study by the USDA's Economic Research Service indicates there'll be no bind for agricultural land by the year 2000 despite expected population increases.

Total U.S. population is projected to be 307.8 million by 2000. That's 50 per cent over 1970's census and more than double 1950's.

Based on this assumption, domestic use of farm products is expected to rise 55 per cent, allowing for both the population increase and a small gain in per capita food consumption.

Farm Labor Force Down; Hourly Wage Rate Up

The nation's farm labor force shrank by nearly 20,000 workers during the past year.

A recent survey showed a total of 3,481,900 farm workers in the United States. Of this number, 2,738,300 were farm operators or unpaid family workers and the others were hired workers.

Wage rates for hired workers were $2.13 an hour in January, as compared to $1.96 a year earlier.

Tired business men might try resting.

ANTIWAR VOTE
The House has rejected additional spending authority for U.S. bombing in Cambodia in its first antiwar vote of the Indochina war.

The vote was to deny President Nixon's request for authority to transfer $430 million from other defense accounts for the war and other spending.

Once the over-the-phone goings get wound up they do a lot of running down.

Simple Yet Elegant Parfaits

Parfait comes from the French word meaning perfect. With American parfaits, the sky's the limit on combinations—as well as eye-appeal. With Semi-Sweet Chocolate Morsels, an easy sauce to have as a layer with vanilla flavored pudding topped with fresh sliced strawberries. The easy-to-make chocolate sauce is excellent with ice cream or fresh fruit. Here is a recipe as developed in the Nestlé Test Kitchens.

Easy Chocolate Sauce

1/2 teaspoon salt
6-oz. pkg. (1 cup) Nestlé's Semi-Sweet Chocolate Morsels
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/2 cup water

In a small saucepan combine sweetened condensed milk, butter and salt. Bring to a boil; boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Add morsels and vanilla extract; stir until morsels melt and mixture is smooth. Gradually stir in water. Pour into parfait or dessert glasses alternate ice cream, pudding or fruit with the chocolate sauce to form layers. Makes 2 cups.

Peach Cream Freeze

1 1/2-cup can (1 1/4 cups) sweetened condensed milk
1 8 3/4-ounce can crushed pineapple, drained
1 22-ounce can peach pie filling
1 1/4 cup lemon juice
1 1/4 teaspoon almond

Vanilla Ice Milk

2 cups sugar
1/4 cup corn starch
1/4 tsp. salt
2 quarts skim milk
3 beaten eggs
1 Tbsp unflavored gelatin
1 1/4 Tbsp. vanilla
coarse salt

In the top of double boiler, combine sugar, corn starch and salt; blend in half of the milk gradually; cook over hot water for 12-15 minutes stirring occasionally until thick. Stir a little of the hot corn starch mixture into eggs and blend eggs into hot mixture. Cook over hot water stirring occasionally for 4-5 minutes or until thick and creamy. Dissolve gelatin in one cup milk and stir into hot mixture and chill the roughly. Blend in vanilla and remaining milk; pour into a gallon ice cream freezer and fill two-thirds full; freeze in ice cream freezer packed with mixture of one part ice cream salt and 6 parts crushed ice. Remove dasher and repack ice cream freezer with mixture of one part salt and two parts ice. Yield: 4 1/2 quarts.

To make fruit ice milk: add 2 cups crushed or pureed sweetened fruit into ice milk. Add fruit after gelatin has chilled the roughly.

THIS WEEK

Senators seem to enjoy.

One good thing, the three major networks take day about in giving the proceedings, so not very many programs are pre-empted by the hearings.

Some people think this thing will hurt the American way of life. I differ. "The right to know" is the great principle that will keep America free, and will keep the politicians in line-- not all the time, but it will catch them off, and bring them back enough times, that it is extremely worthwhile-- in my estimation.

The Texas Legislature closed up shop at Austin and went home beating their chests about all the good legislation they past. Pride of the members of both houses, are the several pieces of reform legislation passed. Somehow, I am not really impressed with it yet. The disclosure law demands that all elected officials file a detailed account of donors to their expenses, yet Governor Briscoe, Lt. Governor Hobby, and many other members of the Texas official family, at the last accounting, had not complied with the terms of the law. Great going. The public should be impressed.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Rogues' Gallery

Arrested on a charge of gambling, Greg was tried and found not guilty. Later he learned that the police were including his photograph in a public "rogues' gallery," open to inspection by victims of crime.

Greg hastened back into court, this time as a plaintiff. He demanded that the police remove his picture from the gallery, even though they might still consider him a suspicious character.

And the court ordered the police to do just that. Citing Greg's right of privacy, the court said:

"A visitor (to the gallery) might conclude that all the pictures were of criminals. This is not a pleasant thought for one conscious of his innocence."

Most courts agree, frowning on undue publicity given to a person who has been cleared of a criminal charge. Nonetheless, privacy like all legal rights—has its limits.

Another complaint was filed by a man who had been acquitted of receiving stolen property. He wanted the police to remove his photograph and fingerprints from their private files.

But this time, the court said no. The court said keeping good records is a key to effective police work, adding:

"An accurate identification system may be an assistance not only in finding the guilty criminal but in clearing an innocent suspect."

A different aspect of the problem arose in a homicide case, when the defendant objected to evidence that some years earlier he had been convicted of manslaughter. He said he had already paid his debt to society, and was therefore entitled—under the privacy doctrine—to keep his past a closed book.

But the court ruled that his past could be reopened, because a second offense is more serious than a first offense.

"One who has been convicted of crime (forfeits) whatever right of privacy he may have possessed," said the court, "to the extent that the protection of society requires such forfeiture."

HONEYMOON

The wedding bells rang, the bride was radiant, the groom's mother cried just a little, and the maid of honor caught the bouquet. It was a perfect wedding, and the honeymoon has been ideal.

Tomorrow, this young couple will be going home to begin a new way of life. In it, reality will be combined with romance. There will be the blending of two temperaments under a single roof. There will be all the frustrations of daily living, and the pain as well as the pleasure that comes with just being alive.

How will they adjust? That depends on the basics that were taught to them years ago, in their own homes—and in church.

FACTS FOR YOUR CONSUMER FRIENDS

In the hue and cry over food prices, facts are forgotten. Reproduce these for your friends. See page 90 for editorial comment.

Nowhere Else Is Food So Reasonable.

The other day a plumber came to our house to fix a leaky pipe. He worked an hour and, on leaving, presented a bill for $26, which included $12.50 for himself, $6.50 for his helper (who wasn't needed), and $7 for parts.

As he left, we wondered how much beef would have to sell for if farm labor cost $12.50 an hour. Few would argue that plumbing requires any more intelligence, skill, and training than farming. Yet these are the people—the people responsible for the services of daily life—who are wailing so loudly about the cost of food and whose wives are participating in the beef boycott.

Between 1961 and 1973, food prices increased about 30%. Meanwhile, the cost of home maintenance and repairs increased 73%; auto repairs and maintenance 45%; physicians' fees 54%; public transportation 63%; and hospital room charges 163%.

If there is one thing that has contributed to higher food prices over the years, it is the marked increase in labor costs all up and down the line from farm to consumer.

As pointed out by the Ohio Farm Bureau: "The very people who have had tremendous increases in wages over the past 20 years are now trying to ruin the food increases of the past few months."

Of every $4 spent for food at the retail level, about $3 is added after the product leaves the farm. So if consumers join campaigns (lettuce and grape boycotts) designed to add to the cost of food production and unions keep demanding huge wage increases, they should be willing to pay for these labor-induced costs in the marketplace.

Both boycotts of beef and price ceilings on red meats are unfair and discriminatory. Farmers and feedlots are at the end of the line, and are certain to be victimized by any price rollback. However, one good thing about the boycott is that it is not likely to last long. Those who can afford beef will soon have it back on their tables. Moreover, neither ceilings nor boycotts will solve the problem. As H. Emmet Reynolds, president of Georgia Farm Bureau, concludes: "Farmers are in the process of increasing red meat, but if the door to opportunity is shut in their faces they will have no alternative but to reduce production."

Food prices have indeed taken a big jump in recent months. But even so, wage increases over the years have far outstripped the boost in food costs. Despite the increased variety and "maid service" added to foods in recent years, an hour of factory labor buys more food than ever before.

Compare what an average industrial worker's hour of labor would buy in 1972 with what it bought in 1947-49:

	1947-49 (Hourly Wage $1.30)	1972 (Hourly Wage $2.25)
Bread (loaves)	9.6	9.3
Milk (quarts)	6.5	11.0
Eggs (dozen)	1.8	7.2
Pork cuts (pounds)	2.2	3.5
Choice beef (pounds)	1.9	2.7
Tomatoes (cans)	6.2	10.5

Nowhere else in the world is food produced more skillfully and reasonably than in the United States. When it comes to beef prices, we can thank our lucky stars that we live in the United States. In mid-March, USDA reported sirloin costing $1.59 in Washington, compared with $2.45 in Brussels, with T-bone $3.57 per pound in Tokyo.

Why are we telling you all this? You already know it. But apparently a lot of people don't. Our hope is that you will drive home these points to all people. Let's repeat them over and over again until our city friends understand the importance of agriculture and how fortunate they are to live in a country where agriculture is so strong and progressive. For truly, nowhere in the world except in the United States do so few farmers produce so much quality food and fiber to feed and clothe so many people at such reasonable prices.
