A Picture Of Contrasts . . . Give A Little, Give A Lot . . . Keep In Touch . . . A Final Reminder.

John C. White, Commissioner

Texas agriculture at this season of the year is a picture of contrasts. While harvesting of some crops continues at a rapid pace, planting of crops is active in other parts of the

All in all, it shows the bigness of this state's agricultural production capacity, and the variety of crops grown.

In northern sections of Texas, for example, wheat seeding is continuing. About two-thirds of that crop has been seeded thus far. Earlier stands have made good growth and grazing is available.

Meanwhile, in deep South Texas, citrus harvest is underway, and indications now point to one of the best quality grapefruit crops on record.

Harvesting of major crops continues as well. Sorghum harvest is nearing the finishing stages as is corn. Peanut harvesting is around the two-thirds completion mark, while cotton is about half through.

Although there were some disappointments, farmers generally were satisfied with sorghum yields. The corn per acre yield set a new high for Texas with an estimated 105

ALTHOUGH THIS IS STILL OCTOBER, it's time to think about the giving of gifts this coming Holiday season. A sure-fire gift is food, produced here in Texas. So is fiber -cotton, wool or mohair.

A gift of food is always a welcome gift; nothing could be more practical. The same is true for wool, mohair or cotton garments.

Texas is the nation's leader in many categories of food production; it also is a leader in production of mohair,

IF YOU DEPEND ON NATURAL GAS or propane in your agricultural operations, now is the time to check with your supplier to make sure supplies will be available.

Curtailments in natural gas supplies and availability of propane are among question marks for agricultural producers. The best solution to this problem now is to be sure to keep in touch with your supplier and let him know your requirements.

HERE IS ONE MORE REMINDER about the screwworm situation in the state. It continues to be important that livestock producers check their livestock regularly, delay surgery on livestock as long as possible, treat wounds on livestock with approved screwworm-control remedies, and submit samples of suspected screwworms to the livestock laboratory at Mission.

Authorities at the lab need to know the exact whereabouts of the pest so they can make plans for control the rest of this season and on into 1976.

You can get the vials needed to mail in the screwworm samples by contacting your county agent. Cooperation with the program will insure the success of eradication measures now being used throughout the state.

Since the end of World War I (during which it was not fully appreciated or exploited), the tank has been the backbone of mobile land warfare. In World War II armored tank columns dominated the battlefield, and to a lesser extent in Korea and Vietnam tanks were predominant in land operations.

But in the 1973 Israeli-Arab war, launched by the Arabs to recover their occupied territory, Arab infantry used new Russian-made tank-destroying weapons. They claimed to have destroyed hundreds of tanks in a few days. The increase in the accuracy and destructive power of these weapons has been so rapid of late some feel the era of tank domination is ending.

Could that mean Russian production of 8,000 good tanks a year, compared to U.S. production of 500, is not asominous as the comparison sounds? If the new school of thought about hand-held anti-tank weapons proves well founded, then it may not be necessary for the United States to match Russian tank strength unit

This, of course, is a supposition, so dangerous in military planning, and presupposes that the United States will have a vast quantity of effective anti-tank weapons for the infantry. This is not the situation in the U.S. Army today, nor does the U.S. Air Force have the tankdestroying capacity (other than nuclear weapons) it must have to protect U.S. infantryman.

The new tank theory is fascinating, perhaps promising-since the U.S. is hopelessly behind in numbers, and probably quality, of tanks. What Pentagon planners do in the next two or three years, therefore, could possibly decide the fate of U.S. forces in future land operations; thus U.S. ground armor planning today might be at a historical turning point.

Farmers In Search Of Conservation of Fuel

Change is inevitable in the farmer's search ways to conserve fuel and maintain yields in the way petroleum shortages and higher prices, the national eader of the Soil Conservation Service, says. "Some farming systems will increase rapidly others will be virtually abandoned," R. M. Davis, Conservation Service Administrator, said in October issue of Soil Conservation magazine. Minimum tillage, including no-till, is emerging the most promising fuel savers for farmers. "practice," said Davis, "has especially high potential feed grains, cereals, soybeans, and cotton-the or most in demand on the world market.'

In Texas, a switch from conventional tillage minimum tillage saves an average of about 5 gallon tractor fuel per acre per year. Since some 456,000 at were farmed with minimum tillage last year, amounted to a sving of some 2.3 million galle tractor fuel.

USDA predicts that by the year 2000, minim tillage could account for annual fuel savings of million gallons in machinery operations. Another energy saver is better managem said, "USDA and private groups are researching to save even more. And USDA is researching energy energy resources, such as solar energy for ing crops and livestock wastes."

Davis appealed to soil and water conserva district officials to stay abreast of continuing research on new energy-saving practices and of all the poss benefits and drawbacks involved.

'By keeping informed of current developm agriculture, SCS and district people can help farme use fuel more efficiently without cutting agriculture. productions," Davis concluded.

The Emperor's Visit

Now that Emperor Hirohito is home again after his first look at America, the significance of that visit is worthy of comment.

In recent years full accounts of the Japanese surrender in August, 1945, have shown the Emperor to have been the strongest influence among Japanese leaders working for peace at that time. Only reverence for their Emperor, considered a deity, restrained many Japanese soldiers and leaders from forceful opposition to surrender-before their homeland had been invaded.

The Emperor saw the light. He also has gradually lessened the unique and unrealistic awe in which he has been traditionally viewed by the Japanese people. In short, he has been an historical influence in Japan to westernize the nation and some of its ways, and in favor of friendship for America.

In that light the American people welcomed him, and will remember him-not as the ruler of a nation which attacked this country suddenly in December of 1941.

Worthless mesquite brush uses about three times as much water as do native grasses, according to Joe McAdams, Range Conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service. Each year in Midland County, many acres of brush is controlled by rootplowing, grubbing or by poisoning. Eighty to ninety percent of this control is done by aerial spraying. The best control obtained from spraying takes place forty to ninety days after the mesquite foliage first appears. The trees need to be growing vigorously when

PESTEROAT TODAY and FOREVER

Most of us are afraid of the unknown. We have our qualms and doubts about a new job, moving to a strange city, beginning a marriage, or simply facing the uncertainties of tomorrow. We do not know what lies ahead, and we worry about being able to cope with it. In this ever-changing world, we instinctively yearn for that which does not change.

Whatever tomorrow frings, we can have the peaceful conviction that the love of God for His children is trustworthy and constitutions.

Discover an abiding seasonty. Worship this Sunday.

We are living in a computerized world. And that is fine--except computers are programmed by people

We have a computerized typesetting system here in our shop, and when it operates right, it is a joy to behold. Sometimes it fails to function properly, and when we check it out, usually the malfunction is because we failed to program it properly.

Recently we ordered some supplies from the company that made the gadget, with headquarters in a suburb of Boston.

When the bill for the supplies came in, they had charged us double for them.

The matter was taken up with the Computer company's bookkeeper. And do you know what the answer, or excuse was? Right—the computer goofed.

Have you noticed how the cotton is opening up? Very likely the gins will soon be running, and the cotton crop will be ginned fairly early.

The grain sorghum crop, and the sunflower crop are all about harvested. The sunflowers made good this year. But a day or two ago I was talking with two farmers, and they ventured the idea that there would not be as many sunflowers planted next year as there were this year. They didn't say why, but you can guess—it has to do with the pricing situation, or to the hazards of production-or both.

On Nov. 4th Texans will go to the polls to vote on a new Constitution, that cost several millions to be Many members of the Legislature are pushing for the adoption of the new Constitution by the voters. However, Governor Briscoe, as well as former Governor Preston Smith are opposed to it.

One of the chief objections to the new Constitution is the plan calling for annual sessions of the legislature. The main objection to this is it will raise the cost of operating the Legislature, and will also raise the cost of operating the Texas government. These are valid objections.

I have often wondered just how much it really does cost to operate the legislature.

From time to time, we read about people fussing about the fact members of the National Congress recently raising their own salaries. It now amounts to something over $50,000.00 per member. But, really their personal salaries amount to only a drop in the bucket, to use an old cliche.

Do you have any idea as to how much it costs to operate the federal Congress? I mean the whole thing—everything connected with its operation? Well hold onto your chair and I will give it to you. The cost of content in the Congress of the cost of the c operating the Congress amounts to over one million dollars per member--yes that's right. And the cost is

I read these figures recently in a national magazine. In 1965, the figures show, it cost less than $300,000.00 per member. Can you imagine the cost going up that rapidly? Inflation has hit them too.

I have not met Texas Tech's new Coach Steve Sloan. But what I have seen of him on local television, he is a very personable and likeable young man. The "kid Coach' as he is called, because he is the youngest head coach in the Southwest Conference, is really getting initiated into the Southwest conference. But most people are with him, and know when he gets his feet on the ground, he will change things.

Hiding Religion

Only ten or fifteen years ago candidates for public office customarily listed their religious affiliation; press summaries and biographies regularly reported this as information the public was entitled to, and interested in.

Since the 1960 presidential campaign, however, when a major effort was made by many to convince the nation one's religious affiliation meant nothing, and that it was un-American to even consider it, a strong tendency has overtaken the press and television, and some politicians, to remain mum on religious persuasion.

This is not desirable because one's religion could be-though not necessarily-a legitimate consideration in an election. John Kennedy was elected President because the majority of Americans felt he would not give his first allegiance to a foreign church ruler, that he believed in separation of church and state and would uphold the Constitution. Kennedy did that. He opposed federal monies for Catholic schools-because he felt that a violation of the Constitution-when his church was actively agitating for such funds.

Had Kennedy been a Catholic who put the Pope's view first, as Catholics are taught to do, many Americans who voted for him would not have done so in 1960 -and rightly so. Thus religion can be a very real consideration in U.S. elections. The Kennedy campaign slogan was, in effect and rightly so, that he should not be refused the White House as a Catholic because he was an American first.

In a 1974 senatorial election in Florida the winning candidate was Jewish-Richard Stone. His opponent didn't seek to exploit this but an outcry was raised near the end of the campaign that someone was mentioning Stone's religion—as if this were undemocratic or bigotry.

With the United States so heavily involved in the Israeli-Arab confrontation, and Israeli leaders regularly calling on the world's Jews to put Israel's interests first, this too could be a legitimate consideration. The majority of voters in Florida felt Stone would put American interests first and elected him. But that doesn't mean it was un-American to think about his religion. It was entirely proper.

There are, of course, denominations under the Protestant heading, which teach what some consider to be unusual practices, allegiances and beliefs. The voter has a right to know whether a Protestant candidate for public office will strictly follow church teaching on such Religion, then, is not something to hide-as many are now doing in America. It is a legitimate interest of the electorate, and anyone who seriously studies history, and takes into consideration what religious influence has meant in politics, wars, social legislation, etc., will agree.

George Wallace, Alabama Governor, in London:

"I regret the fact that Great Britain today is not the great power she was. If she were, I could sleep a lot better at night.
