County Tax Increase

Hale County residents probably will be faced with a "substantial" tax increase in 1972, according to discussions by County Commissioners during a regular session at the Courthouse Monday,

The court asked Tax Assessor-Collector Bill Hollars to study present valuations and provide them with information to figure out a new tax rate to gradually bring the county back into the black.

For several years the county has run out of operating money before the end of each fiscal year and operated on borrowed money until taxes begin coming in again.

The deficit ran about $250,000 last year, and court members to conform exactly to state law. said it looked like the amount would increase more each year without a tax raise.

Getting the closest look from Commissioners during the tax discussion was farm land in the county At present, the highest actual value assigned to farm land is $120 an acre, with the present 22.2 per cent tax valuation then applied to that figure to come up with a top taxable rate of $26.64 an acre.

Probable Change Court members agreed that land would need to be brought more nearly in line with city property, while an overall increase in city property and farm improvements of about 10 per cent probably would be needed to raise extra funds. Hale County Judge Henry Heck suggested that a new rate be set so that present operating expenses could be met and the deficit gradually built up over several years could be paid off. In other activity at the meeting, the court approved a work and holiday policy for county employes, and discussed redistricting and problems connected with redistricting chang-

The work guidelines are similar to those presently used by most county administrators, but the court decided to put a formal policy into effect.

The guidelines provide for two weeks paid vacation a year, or one week after a person has worked six months. Commissioners said that vacation time could not be accumulated, and that vacations could not be split.

On sick leave, the group decided that employes could receive six days leave each year day was allowed for New Year's. Memorial Day, July 4 and Labor Day, while two days were given for Thanksgiving, and Christmas was left optional, not to exceed three days.

Discussing redistricting, the group said setting up justice of law the peace precincts to conform with new redistricting lines was one of the major problems, but Judge Heck said a final decision of the justice posts should be made at the next regular drawn so that no one will be appointed to fill the post, but the justice precinct will be created merely to fulfill the letter of the FAMILY REUNION
