FARM POLICY REMOVES BOOM, LEAVES BUST

HOUSTON-----"Policies designed to take the boom and bust out of agriculture have only removed the boom, leaving farmers to contend with the bust," said an economist in marketing and policy with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service here today (Nov. 9).

"My greatest fear in the '77 Food and Agriculture Act is that the combination of income supports, reserves and set-asides could lead us back into the same policy dilemma that existed in the 1960's," noted Dr. Ronald Knutson at the annual Houston Agribusiness Conference. He said the biggest factor leading to this conclusion is the 30 to 35 million ton grain reserve which will tend to hold prices near loan levels.

"The biggest advantage of the '77 Act is that it is designed to keep the U. S. competitive in the world market," added the economist.

Knutson pointed out that the greatest challenge facing the agricultural establishment in the future may not be that of getting higher target prices but of maintaining what they currently have.

"Estimates of the cost of the '77 farm bill run from $4.4 to $10 billion. With a federal budget of $450 billion, this means only 1 or 2 percent is being spent on policies to insure an adequate supply of food. Is that too much? If I had confidence government could solve the problem, I would argue that we should be spending more," said Knutson.

He pointed out that target prices in the new farm bill are based on the national average cost of production. If market prices remain at or below target prices during most of the four-year life of the bill, farmers with an above average cost of production will do out of business.

"It is possible that the middle and small size family whose survival we are most concerned about will be the first to go," noted Knutson. "Thus the question, what kind of a farm production system will emerge? Many suspect an acceleration of the trend toward bigness!"

News & Comment by Buford Davenport

NEC---For the 12th year, Monday, Dec. 19, Mrs. Orson F. (Gladys) Rea has been hostess at an early morning coffee on the Monday before Christmas. Ironically, it all started with a broken leg. Mrs. Rea suffered a broken leg in 1965. An active lady, Gladys missed visiting with friends during the time she had to stay home, so she decided to have a "working girls' coffee", having them early in the morning before they went to their jobs. Husband, Orson, feeling badly out-numbered at these events, they began inviting men, too. Orson has a Christmas Day birthday next Sunday. He will be 85. He and I worked together on The Review for several years. He started "moonlighting" on The Review job the last two months in 1957, before he retired from Tucco Jan. 1, 1958. Orson worked with us on The Review in one capacity or the other until we sold the newspaper in 1974. Actually, his last work for The Review was in January of 1975.

Most motorists get downright nostalgic when they think about the good old days when they could count on 20 miles to the gallon.

"Do you mean to sit there and tell me," demanded Jane of her roommate, "That you have gotten yourself engaged to six different men all at the same time?" "Yes," answered Elsie complacently.

"And right after Christmas, I'm going to pick the one I'll marry."

SOUTH PLAINS HOMEMAKER SERVICE OFFERED

The South Plains Homemaker Service is a program designed to meet your community needs. Through this program, mature, dependable homemakers are employed and trained to provide in-home care services to elderly and disabled persons.

Many older individuals desire to remain in their own homes, and with such homemaker services as menu planning, and meal preparation, escort to the doctor or beauty shop, personal care and grooming assistance, help with laundry and light house-keeping, and even visitation and companionship, an alternative to nursing home or institutional care is made available. The services are provided at a nominal fee, according to a client's monthly income and ability to pay.

The homemakers who provide services are local residents, trained and supervised in performing the in-home care duties. They participate in a paraprofessional training program covering a variety of topics on aging, including physiology and psychology of aging, personal care, Red Cross first aid, nutrition related to elderly needs, consumer education, safety in the home, and sources of assistance for disabled and older persons. This enables the homemaker to expand educational and employment opportunities, and provide a beneficial service in their own community.

Anyone interested in receiving a homemaker service aide or desiring information about employment in your community, please contact: Mrs. Alice Pace at 298-2805, Abernathy or Carmen Rodriguez at 667-3678, Petersburg. The Lubbock South Plains Homemaker Service Office may be contacted at 763-4641.

ALWAYS BE FAITHFUL

Whoever is faithful in small matters will be faithful in large ones; whoever is dishonest in small matters will be dishonest in large ones. If, then, you have not been faithful in handling worldly wealth, how can you be trusted with true wealth? And if you have not been faithful in what belongs to someone else, who will give you what belongs to you?

No servant can be the slave of two masters: he will hate one and love the other; he will be loyal to one and despise the other. You cannot serve both God and money. Luke 16:10-13
