It seems to me that there is a narrow band of lucid fatigue, and opportunity, in the late evening/twilight hours, maybe sixty to ninety minutes long, when the sun is set but its light not fully vanquished, before night sets in full-bore and its associated changes and happenings occur. This lucid fatigue is where you are tired and you have the awareness of that reality, compared to those times where you may be so tired that you are numb to the feeling of fatigue, or it has been so long since you had been in any other condition that you forgot what normal energy and acuity felt like. Lucid fatigue allows for the possibility of fruitful thought, and if not fruitful, perhaps meaningful, and if neither, well, I'd settle for comprehensible.

The opportunity that this window of time affords is the chance to have those

OLD TIMES NOT FORGOTTEN

By Roland Miles

Raise your hand . . .

By the time I'd finished first grade and started the second, I had become a "recessaholic". Nothing at school could possibly be compared to recess. The big problem was all that time we had to spend in the classroom. Out on the playground, I wasn't the least bit shy. When we were choosing upsides for some game, I made every effort to be noticed, just to increase my chances of being chosen. Oh, but what a different story it was when we got to class. Most of that recess, enthusiasm faded away quickly. All of a sudden, I didn't want to be chosen for anything. Just in the interest of accuracy, about half of the boys in my class seemed to feel the same way that I did. Teachers being like they are, would always walk around in front of the class and ask questions.

You'd think they would naturally choose a kid that was jumping up and down with her hand up (usually girls). Not so! Her favorite targets were those of us with that blank look on her face, usually boys. I've told this before, but can't help telling it just one more time... one day, the teacher was up front in one of her question and answer sessions. As she looked upon our blank faces, her eyes settled on Pete. She looked at him for a couple of seconds, then asked him, "Pete, do you have a question?" His reply was the most honest words I've ever heard. "No, ma'am, I don't know enough to ask a question." Most of us had our own ways to avoid being asked to answer questions. At the first of the year, she let us choose where we wanted to sit. In that case, preferably right behind some large, smart boy, who like to give the answer. Hopefully he would choose to sit near the back of the room. If all that worked out, I had slither down in my desk until I was nearly invisible. What I hadn't realized, was that most women teachers have "x-ray eyes". She is still spot me, then make me stand up beside my desk and try to give the answer. After two or three weeks, she would start shuffling us around in the room. Kids like me usually wound up at the front of the room. Once you're up close to her, there's no place to hide. The only thing left to do is never make eye contact with her. If I thought she was going to look at me. I tilt my head down to avoid eye contact. After a few weeks, I could see that some of the other boys were doing the same thing. It became kind of fun watching heads drop, as she looked out over our class. Try as we might, none of the stuff worked on Mrs. Farmer she was way too smart for our shenanigans!

Did you know?

thoughts that help put a bow on the day — a review of what happened, what you might be grateful for, what remains to be done tomorrow. Also wrapped up in the aspect of opportunity is the brief chance to have some time to relax or decompress in a way that is enjoyable, or satisfying. Similar to the phenomenon where one may be so tired they don't realize they are tired, one might be in such a poor state concerning decompression that any attempts to relax miss the mark and have little effect other than frustrating the would-be relaxer, and wasting his or her time. The concept of opportunity described here is reliant on the lucidity mentioned earlier.

Or such I have been noticing for the past couple of months. I don't know how the delayed onset of twilight that the summer months bring will affect the accuracy of these thoughts. They may not be all that accurate in any case, but I can't imagine that as the window of opportunity closes, they increase in clarity or validity. It seems that I didn't say what I intended to say, but night has fallen and for me, for now, the window has closed.

Property Owners Can Protest Property Appraisal Values

Property owners who disagree with the Wheeler Central Appraisal District's appraisal of their property for local taxes or for any other action that adversely affects them may protest their property value to the appraisal district's Appraisal Review Board (ARB).

Notices will be mailed out on May 2, 2023 to property owners whose value has increased by $500.00 or more. A property owner must file a written notice of protest before June 2, 2023. The ARB will begin hearing taxpayer protests on June 20, 2023.

After the ARB completes its hearings and approves final property tax appraisals, taxing units will use these appraisals to set property tax rates.

The ARB is a group of citizens who live in the appraisal district. In counties with 120,000 or more population, the local district administrative judge appoints ARB members.

Otherwise, the appraisal district's board of directors appoints them. Property owners may protest any of the following issues to the ARB:

- the appraised or market value of the property;
- unequal appraisal of the owner's property;
- inclusion of the property on the appraisal records;
- denial of a partial exemption, such as a homestead exemption;
- denial of special appraisal, such as agricultural or timber productivity appraisal;
- determination that agricultural or timberland has had a change of use and is subject to a rollback tax;
- identification of the taxing unit or taxing units in which the property is located;
- determination that the taxpayer is the owner of the property; or
- any other action of the appraisal district office or ARB that adversely affects the owner.

The ARB schedules a hearing and sends the protesting property owner written notice of the date, time and place of the hearing. The law contains specific timelines and procedures for both the property owner and the ARB throughout the appraisal protest process. These are detailed in the Comptroller's publication, Property Taxpayer Remedies.

Copies are available from Wheeler Central Appraisal District at 402 S. Main or on our website www.wheelercad.org. The publication is also available on the Comptroller's Property Tax Assistance Division's website at comptroller.texas.gov/taxes/property-tax/.

PROVIDE YOUR INPUT – HELP CLOSE THE DIGITAL DIVIDE

Nearly 2.8 million Texas households lack access to high-speed internet. There is a critical need to connect Texans with reliable broadband access, as well as the affordable devices and digital skills necessary to use the internet.

The Texas Broadband Development Office (BDO) is developing the Texas Digital Opportunity Plan, which will serve as a roadmap for achieving reliable and affordable broadband, device access, digital skills training and cybersecurity awareness to expand digital opportunities for all Texans.

A major step in this process is to identify the digital opportunity barriers faced by Texas households, such as lack of infrastructure, digital literacy, affordable service or access to devices. To better understand these barriers, BDO has developed the Texas Digital Opportunity Public Survey to collect information about what Texans are experiencing with broadband internet accessibility, affordability and adoption. The survey, which includes an optional speed test, is available in English, Spanish, Chinese and Vietnamese. Widespread input will ensure the state develops a comprehensive and inclusive plan that effectively addresses the digital opportunity needs of all Texans.

Help close the digital divide for Texans by completing the Texas Digital Opportunity Public Survey. A Salute To My Dentists

by Rix Quinn

Every morning when my mirror smiles back, I am grateful to two dentists who have helped me for decades.

They must be darn good, because thanks to regular visits I've retained excellent cuspids, bicuspid, plus a host of workable molars.

I am not the best patient. I nearly always brush my teeth at least once a day, and sometimes use toothpaste.

But I am an excellent flosser. I know this, because the hygienist complimented me the last visit when she dug junk food from my molars.

Over the years, dentists have worked miracles on two upper front incisors. I call these my "smile teeth." Those are the first things people see when I greet them with a semi-sincere grin.

Problem is, in high school I was in a car wreck. Back then, there were no shoulder seat belts, so my front teeth slammed into the dashboard.

This left me with half an incisor...very noticeable when sipping a milkshake. But my amazing dentist quickly made me a crown, so I looked presentable enough to pose for senior pictures.

That crown held up for over 35 years, but it came off a few years ago when I bit into a sturdy dinner roll. My dentist got me scheduled late that day, and crafted a new crown that looks terrific.

Since then, I have taken much better care of my mouth. I bought a new toothbrush, and I have spent more time polishing my ivories.

And – some mornings after brushing -- I'm so impressed I think that if I was single...I would ask myself for a date.

grass is getting green. It's time to plant flowers. My mom picked out beautiful flowers. My dad and I planted them at the city house and at the ranch.

I am glad that my dad gets to have chemo in OKC this week. Going to Houston is fun, but we have been too many times this year. He will go back to MDA for tests in a few weeks.

My dad said to tell you that he is very happy that my mom bought a new vacuum cleaner that picks up dog hair and doesn't get it tangled on the roller. Now he can do a better job cleaning the floors! LOL! He also said that I should have named my dog "Hairiette" instead of "Sissy."

It is almost Seth's birthday! I can't believe he will be fifteen! Happy Birthday! That's it!
