To Reduce Fatigue
by Alice L. Kemp

Want to reduce fatigue when tackling household projects?

Here are some things you can do to relieve fatigue, says Mrs. Wanda Barkley Meyer, home management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Take a deep breath, sit up straight, open a window, wear ear plugs, or take a cold shower.

Researchers in the Texas Department of Public Safety find that one of the most common causes of fatigue is the failure to breathe enough, which in turn is sometimes caused by slouching in a chair -- thus crowding the lungs and restricting the normal intake of air.

If you sit in a stuffy room, even deep breaths may not give you as much oxygen as you would get from normal breaths in a well ventilated room.

Noise is another fatigue producer. An experiment described in the American Journal of Psychology showed that it takes 60 percent more energy to work under noisy conditions than it does under normal conditions.

University of Cincinnati research shows that if you work at a job that involves physical exertion, it's best to use your rest period to relax as completely as possible. However, if you have a desk job, you'll probably be better off doing some mild physical activity during your rest break.

Dental Information

This is the fifth in a series of questions and answers on dental health published by the Rotan Advance in Cooperation with the Seventeenth District Dental Society, Texas Dental Association, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week February 3 through 9.

Why does my dentist insist on making x-rays of my teeth regularly?

X-ray pictures reveal to the dentist many defects of the teeth and surrounding tissues -- such as small cavities, decay developing under fillings and bone loss in periodontal disease -- which he cannot see when making a visual examination. The dentist needs to have the information about the hidden parts of the teeth and the soft tissues and bones of the mouth in order to detect and treat many oral conditions. Only x-ray can reveal this information.

Also dental x-ray examinations at regular intervals provide the dentist with history of a patient's mouth, enabling him to watch for changes in teeth, bones or soft tissues that may be nearly indications of disease or other difficulty. Then the necessary treatment can be given at once, before the condition becomes serious.

Your own dentist is the best judge of how often x-rays should be taken of your teeth, since this depends on the conditions in your mouth.

What is meant by erosion of the teeth?

Erosion is a decalcification (dissolving) of the enamel of the teeth. It occurs most frequently at the gum line.

There is considerable evidence that suggests erosion is a result of the action of acids. Drinking lemon juice or other highly acid beverages frequently can result in erosion. Once the acid etches the tooth surface, toothbrushing easily removes the softened tissue.

As preventive measures dentists usually recommend limiting the amount of strongly acid foods and beverages consumed, proper toothbrushing and regular dental check-ups. In some cases, it may be necessary for the dentist to restore the eroded area with a filling or a crown.

What is meant by abrasion of teeth?

Abrasion is a wearing away of the teeth primarily as the result of mechanical action.

Pipe smokers' teeth often are abraded in the area where the stem of the pipe is held. Carpenters, shoemakers and upholsterers frequently hold nails between their teeth. This habit can cause notches in the cutting edges of the teeth. Holding pins or bobby pins between the teeth can cause similar damage.

There also is some evidence that improper brushing of the teeth may cause abrasion, usually of the outer surfaces, near the gum line.

To prevent abrasion, one need only identify and avoid the habits that may lead to this problem.

Sue Curry of TSU is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Curry and Mrs. Bobby Rushing and Donna of Odessa spent the weekend here with them.

'As It Looks From Here'

Omor Burleson, M. C.
17th District, Texas

Washington, D. C. -- In many works of Ralph Waldo Emerson is reflected his concern with people, as opposed to a concern with simply material things.

If Mr. Emerson were writing in the present day, we might wonder what he would have to say about present conditions. Certainly he would have many more people to be concerned about.

The Population Reference Bureau, a private research institution, has just released a report based on 1961 studies. The foreword of the report says, "It is essential today that people everywhere come to understand the effects of population change on the well being of individuals, their families, their nations and the world."

According to the report, the population of the world is now 3,115,000,000 people. During the last two years, human beings have increased by 50 million people. This means that another nation the size of England could be created if there was a place to put it.

Population increase itself may not be of the greatest importance, but where the increase is taking place adds immensely to the problem.

Approximately 57 per cent of the world's people are in Asia. Europe and the Soviet Union together have 21 per cent. North and South-Central America have another 14 per cent, almost equally. Since 1956, Latin America has been the fastest growing major region in the world. The remaining 8 per cent of the world's people live in Africa.

According to the report, in all human history the world's population has never grown so fast as today. Although some backward countries have no central system for registration of births and deaths, and some have never taken a census, fairly accurate figures indicate the growth rate is now 1.8 per cent a year. It is estimated that about a third of the world's total population has been added since World War II. Should today's growth trend continue unchanged, and there is seemingly no reason to expect it to be otherwise, the number of people on earth will double to over 6 billion in only 40 years.

These statistics show that Great Britain is growing by only 0.5 per cent a year, while Brazil is growing at an astounding 3.4 per cent annually. At this rate, Brazil's population will double in 21 years.

India and Pakistan are each growing at the rate of 1.9 per cent, while Japan's growth is 1 per cent.

Significantly the increase in population is occurring in those countries less industrialized and undeveloped. As is the case all over the world, but to a greater percentage in these countries, the death rate has declined while the birth rate has increased. Doubtless the assistance of the United States to these backward nations has materially contributed to this situation. Even in our own Country life expectancy has been considerably increased by reason scientific advances in medicine and human care.

In the case of most Latin American countries, economic advances now being made fail to keep pace with the population increase. Africa is an awakening giant, Communist China, India and other South Asian countries have an exploding population which rapidly absorbs economic gains.

Scientific develops have shrunk our world rapidly in recent years and will continue to do so until all people will literally live in proximity to one another. Future generations will face tremendous problems in relation to population. It is not merely a matter of number but more importantly, the kind of neighbors they will have.

Someone recently wrote - Not Emerson or General de Gaulle, but somebody -- "Only a bright light can cast a deep shadow." As a corollary to this is that it requires light and enlightenment to dissipate shadows.

Root Rot Costing Texas Farmers

Cotton root rot cost Texas Farmers over $45,000,000 last year. This estimate is based on a recent report by the Cotton Disease Council, showing the crop was reduced 5.7%. The December cotton report indicates 4,680,000 bales were produced in 1962. It is estimated that a bale of lint and seed returned the grower around $170 per bale.

The cotton root rot fungus invades the roots of the plant by breaking down the outer cells. It penetrates the root where it destroys the vascular tissues and kills the plant within a short period. The disease is most severe during seasons of high soil temperature and high soil moisture.

Why was the Loss From Cotton Root Rot So Great? Too few are taking all the necessary steps to prevent the disease from ravaging their fields. Doing the job right and timely is most important. Many have failed to get good control because: (1) they plowed when the soil was too moist or the sky was cloudy; (2) they left the residue on top of the ground instead of covering it completely as should be done and (3) they bedded without first breaking the land deep.

What Must Be Done To Reduce Root Rot Losses?

1. Grow grain sorghum, small grain or other high residue-producing fibrous rooted crops ahead of cotton in a rotation. This allows growers an opportunity to turn under the residue during the summer when the soil is dry.

2. Plow residues under deep 6-12" when the soil is dry and the sun is shining. The root rot fungus is easily killed when dry soil is exposed to the sun's rays. To be most effective all of the residue must be completely buried with a breaking plow.

3. Apply adequate amounts of plant food, plant high quality seed during best planting period, and prevent insect damage.

If ALL these practices are put into EFFECTIVE USE, losses are usually reduced to 5% or less on fields where root rot causes the greatest damage.

Cotton Production Committee

How To Stop Horses From Cribbing

The dramatic increase in pleasure horse numbers is reflected in the growing number of queries horse specialists are getting on horse management questions. Dr. W. S. Teter, Manager of Horse Research for the Ralston Purina Company, says that one frequent question asked by horse owners concerns cribbing, or manger chewing. Ezell-Key Feed & Seed Co. is Rotan Purina Dealer.

Dr. Teter says that cribbing is a nervous habit of horses. It may be due to a lack of activity more than to any desire for additional feed or nutrients.

One solution is to slow down the horse's rate of eating. This may be done by using a trough about three feet long, then spreading the feed out the full length of the trough. Some horse owners try putting smooth rocks or rock salt in the feed box, or feeding the horse's ration in three meals, once in the morning, once at noon and once in the evening. This will make the horse spend more time at the manger, giving him less time to indulge nervous habits.

Another solution, Dr. Teter suggests, is to make the wooden surfaces of the stall so unpalatable the horse will not chew it. This may be done by spraying the wood with insect oil or similar substances.

Horses that are ridden frequently do not seem to crib as much as those who spend much time idling in the stall.

Cribbing is not an abnormality, but merely a nervous habit, Dr. Teter emphasizes. It happens "even in the best of families," he says. Frequently, thoroughbred farms in Kentucky have to rebuild major portions of their wooden fences each year.

Mrs. Shirley Ann Jones returned home Sunday evening from Waskon Texas where she visited her husband Willie Earl Jones. He is a math teacher at Cary M. Abner high school. Shirley graduated from Texas College at Tyler January 18, 1963 and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Jones of Rotan. She was born and reared in Rotan and is now doing sub-work at Birdie Stephenson Elementary School. The family thanks those who helped keep her in college. Her major is business administration. Once again, thanks to everyone.

Why 2% money?

Why should the Midwest Electric Cooperative, Inc. borrow money at 2 percent interest? It's a fair question and it has a fair answer. When Midwest was first organized, the founders of this electric system made a covenant with the federal government to provide area coverage... instead of serving only where it was convenient or profitable. That is why Midwest averages only 2.0 members per mile of line.

Yet in spite of this handicap, the member owned Midwest Electric Cooperative, Inc. offers a dependable... efficient... economical electric service while paying back principal and interest on its loans.

It took ingenuity and industry on the part of your rural neighbors to do the job even with 2 percent money but it has been a smashing success. Low cost loans and the integrity of the Midwest members share in this great accomplishment.

About Your HEALTH

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health.

HENRY A. HOLLE, M.D.
Commissioner of Health

The supersonic speed of modern life is costing us one of the most vital ingredients of good health -- sleep.

Twenty years ago people got plenty of sleep and were better off for it, because sufficient sleep is unreplaceable if denied. People knew about fission in those days, but it was the hook and line variety, rather than nuclear. Things have changed.

Say you stay up for 20 hours a day. If you follow this routine for a week or so at a time, first thing you'll notice is your hands jumping from nervousness. A dull ache will begin gnawing at the base of your skull. You'll be picky and indifferent toward food.

You'll be quarrelsome -- projecting casual remarks all out of proportion. It will sound like an insult when someone says hello. You might think a good night's sleep will fix you up. Maybe it will -- on the surface. The nervousness might leave you and the headache might disappear. It could be that a single night of sleep will give you the sweet disposition that was formerly sour grapes.

But it's all on the surface. During the stretch of sleeplessness your heart may have been strained, your blood pressure increased, your digestion upset.

Sleep gives the human body a chance to recover from the fatigue of one trying day before the assault of the next. And it has to be natural to be beneficial. That's why sleeping potions are undesirable as a steady diet.

A few hints may help you get a better night's sleep. Do your heavy thinking before supper. Make it a rule that after the evening meal your brain gets a rest. Subdue the lights around the house. Lights keep you alert, besides being tough on the power bill.

Get lots of fresh air. Sitting quietly on the porch might encourage the relaxation so necessary for dropping off into sound sleep. So might a short drive -- if you avoid main travelled roads. Reading light fiction is also relaxing, but stay away from the gory private eye stuff.

Develop a bedtime ritual, the more sedate the better, to condition your mind for bed. And when you do retire, deliberately try to blank out those random thoughts that steal into your mind.

Here is a reminder to all cotton producers. If you do not plan to plant the cotton acreage allotted to your farm in 1963, you can release this acreage to the ASCS committee for reapportionment and still preserve the allotment history of your farm. Cotton acres are a valuable part of your farm's inherent value and you should protect your title to them.

In this program the State is divided into two zones, by a line extending from the Gulf of Mexico and passing through College Station, Austin and Del Rio. South of this line, requests and releases must be made to the ASCS office in your county by February 4. North of this line, requests and releases must be in by March 4.

Participating in this program will insure the utilization of 1963 acreage allotments and also make it possible to preserve your allotment history. Your County ASS Office can give details on this program.

An appropriation of funds by the Texas Legislature will not relieve the crisis which has developed in the exhaustion of producer funds in the Southwest Screwworm Eradication Program. Private sources will still have to raise the remaining $1,000,000 of a $3,000,000 livestock producer goal within the next few months, it was pointed out by C. G. Scruggs, president of the Southwest Animal Health Research Foundation.

A meeting of all Foundation county chairmen is scheduled in Austin for January 28 at which time the possibility of collecting the money from producers will be discussed.

Scruggs expressed the Foundation's appreciation to John Connally and the Texas Legislature for recognition of the emergency facing the livestock owners of Texas. State funds which might become available would insure the successful completion of the three-year program, provided producers come up with their share, Scruggs said.

Governor Connally recently urged that immediate hearings be held so that action can be taken to prevent the termination of the project that seeks the eradication of the pest that costs the Southwestern livestock industry an estimated $100 million annually. A Legislative Study Group has had the problem under consideration since early January 1962.

The future of the program remains in jeopardy because the federal appropriation bill specifies that money will be available only as long as 50 percent of the program's needed funds are provided from non-federal sources. The $2,000,000 already contributed by Southwestern farmers and ranchmen will have been spent before March 31.

Rice oil, a by-product of the rice industry, has been found to increase milk yields when added to the ration of dairy animals. The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station has reported that tests conducted at the Tyler substation showed an increase of .9 (nine-tenths) pound more milk per cow per day from cows receiving the ration containing 1 percent rice oil. On the average, $1.00 spent for rice oil returned $3.50 through increased milk yield.

OUR TAXES JOIN YOURS HERE

Bright scholars like these guarantee a great future for America. This is why America's Rural Electric systems, mostly cooperatives, gladly share the cost of our schools through state and local taxes.

Some rural electrics are the biggest single taxpayer in their counties. And all systems pay the same taxes as other businesses except federal income tax. They don't pay this tax because they earn no profit... have no income to tax.

Rural electrics don't make a profit because they distribute power only to their owners, and always at cost. If they have money left over after paying their bills--operating costs, taxes, depreciation, and principal and interest on their Rural Electrification Administration loan--they return it to consumer-owners in the form of patronage refunds at the end of the year.

Paying our share of taxes is one of many ways that we and almost 1,000 other rural electrics, now serving 20 million rural people, help build a stronger America.
